TWO GREAT EXTREMES FOUND IN BRAZIL

Concluded from first page.

fruit of course is the cheapest thing, except apples, as those all come from North America. When you go to market they spot you right away as Americans and try to sell you apples. Even stand right in your way with a handful and say, "Muito boa, senhor, America Norte" ("Very good Senhor, North American.") You ask them, how much? and they probably will say 1 milreis each at which you throw up your hands and say "Muito caro, Muito caro" meaning "very high, very high", and start off and very often they will come after you with a lower price.

You asked about cost of living. Of course, the whole thing rests on whether your money is American gold or Brazilian money. American money goes a long ways here so a tourist who has American money is in luck. You can stay at the best hotels, meals included, for $3.00 a day, and there are some hotels right up to date in every respect. Listen to this and tell me if you think we are living in a jungle. Last Wednesday, I had to go to Sao Bernardo to our publishing house. Arrived in Sao Paulo at 12:30, took a car over to the big terminal station and our suburban train rolled up to our platform and we were off. We went through the railway yards, past the factory districts and were surprised to see the large number of founderies, factories, etc., arrived at Sao Bernardo in 40 minutes, transacted our business and got an express back to the city. It was an up-to-date train, carried diner, chair car, pullman, and first and second class day coaches. Boy came through the train selling the evening edition of the city paper and one might almost think he was on the Michigan Central Wolverine! Does that sound very wild and heathenish?

However, to understand Brazil you must remember that there are two great extremes of living here, highest civilization on one hand and wildest jungle life on the other. You can take a train from that big railway station and in two or three hours be right out in the wilds, and then by leaving the railway and going for a few hours on horseback you can get into wild tribes of Indians, and still further on come to vast areas yet unexplored by white men. So you see our variety of life. In Sao Paulo you see new imported autos roll up to the curb and aristocratic ladies step out with their footmen opening the door for them and then you see them go into an exclusive shop along one of the avenues, but you go two blocks off this street and you'll see scores of women carrying such heavy loads on their heads. It is nothing to see an old bent woman staggering along with one of those loads on her head. So there are the two extremes—extreme luxury and extreme poverty. Well, you would be interested in Sao Paulo. It is a bustling city and has the world record for rapid increase. It is the third largest city in South America, Buenos Aires is first, Rio de Janeiro second.

Feb. 25—A chilly, drizzly morning. Have to go to the city on some business. One of the things I am especially anxious to have Dad see are the wholesale houses. I was surprised Friday when Taylor took me to some where we do business. Big hustling houses with wide awake fellows and to all appearances doing a good business. There are immense dry-goods wholesale houses as well as groceries, but not the groceries we get at home. Here are some prices—a 2-lb. can syrup $1.00, peas 60c, $1 for 1/2 lb. can salmon, but they do a big business from the English and American colony. You never see a loaf of graham or whole wheat bread in Brazil and back in the interior a few miles you don't even find bread of any kind.

The calves which were imported by the school from Washington have been very sick. In fact, it was only a miracle that they lived. Somehow they did not know that all imported cattle must be vaccinated before they set foot on South American soil. There's a bug that bites them and poisons their whole system. They got an expert veterinary out from the government school and guess he is pulling them through. Had to vaccinate them and give them strong coffee for days. We all had to sacrifice on our daily portion of milk, too, and give them.

Rents are high in the city, but there's never any worry down here about fuel for the winter; never have to buy your winter clothing. It's an open kind of life all the year round. People never have to close their doors or windows from one year's end to another, and not even when it rains, generally, for the rains almost always come straight and do not blow in. Of course we are up at a little altitude so it gets cool here quite often. All nights are cool and in June, July and August some pretty sharp frosts come sometimes. The first of last week we had some sweltering days, and a terrific electrical storm. Some sight the lightning on the distant mountains.

Miss Paterson was out in the flower garden yesterday. Saw a snake at her feet coiled, and called a boy to kill it. He didn't want to very badly as he recognized it as one of the most poisonous of Brazil's many species. But he did so. The snake fought back.

March 1—March has started in with rain. This month corresponds to Sept. in the states. Last Thursday I went to Santos, our nearest ocean port, to see about our lost trunk which was not transferred with our other baggage when we arrived. That was Dec. 13 and from that time on I've kept the mails hot with letters to the Lomport & Holt Company at Buenos Aires, Montevideo, Santos, Rio, Pernambuco, Trinidad, Barbados and New York. Finally came a letter that it had been found. So Thursday we went down and got it out. The trip to Santos was certainly an eye opener to me on efficiency of Brazilian railroads. It was 8:15 when we left and the platforms were crowded with suburbanites bound for the down town business places, well dressed men and nearly all reading their morning papers, for all the world like the early crowds in Chicago waiting for the I. C. trains. I could easily have believed myself back in the U. S., but the trains are nothing like ours. The coaches are different and the locomotives are quite gay with their numerous brass trimmings. Forty miles from Sao Paulo we came to Alto de Serra, the peak of the mountain, down which we had to go to get to Santos. Here we stopped for 10 minutes while they broke up our train into three sections of three cars each. They sent these sections down separately. There are five stages to this descent and each section has its own power plant which operates the cable attached to the three cars. At each station a new cable is attached and in this way no strain is put on each separate stage. Then, too, a small engine is attached to the cars which acts as a brake in case anything should happen. Now this isn't nearly as bad as you are probably imagining. The grade is very gradual and the cars are allowed to go only so fast. Here's the thing I was most interested in. When they start one section of cars down they at the same minute start three cars up so they meet half way. This is done all the way down, thus counterbalancing each other.

I can't begin to describe the beauty of that trip and the magnificent view you get as the tracks for some distance run on a shelf of the mountain and from your car window you can see straight down a dizzying drop. I think I counted 15 tunnels. At the bottom of the mountain they assembled our train, and we finished the remaining 25 miles in good time arriving at Santos at 10:45. Well, when we stepped off I just gasped to see the difference in temperature. The heat was terrific. We went at once to the Lamport & Holt office and they were kind enough to send one of their office force, a young Brazilian, with me to the customs. He spoke a little English and we talked as best we could on the way over. He wants to go to New York. Said, "New York is bestest city in world, is not?" I told him I thought it was, but added that there were nice cities in Brazil, but he shook his head, and said, "New York greatest." So when I left him I offered him one of my few remaining American dollar bills as a tip. He was very strenuous in declining it. He said "I not want money from you. I am pleased to serve you." With a little more urging he took it and said "He would keep it as a remembrance of you." It was so terribly hot we were glad to get the 2:20 express back. To be correct I should say we got the 14:20 express for down here they do not begin after 12 o'clock with 1, 2, 3, but go right on with 13 o'clock 14, 15, etc. You can imagine my relief when we began to climb and I could take in deep breaths of the cool mountain air. This is the place to live in Brazil. Rock ballasted road bed and as smooth as most American railroads. You'll take this same trip when you come as it is the only artery to the ocean from this part of Brazil. Just think of the coffee supply of the world has to pass over this railroad.

I must stop right now. Love from CLAYTON.

Your Conversation "LIBRETTO" The small paper-bound volume which contains the text and words of an opera or extended musical composition is known as the "libretto." This word is a diminutive of the Latin word "liber" which means book. Familiarity with the "libretto" usually adds to the enjoyment of the opera. The pronunciation is "li-bret-to," with the accent on the second syllable.

Contracts have virtually all been signed by raspberry growers of the Onekama and River road regions to let the Onekama farm bureau local market their crop, which will be by far the largest in the history of the county, according to present indications, and will exceed 50,000 crates. The local growers expect to avert the disaster which would otherwise occur if they should dump their tremendous crop into the Milwaukee and Chicago markets as in past years without any regard for the amount the market is able to handle.

The new assessed valuation of Lenawee county was placed at $73,010,766 by the board of supervisors. An increase of only $128,110 is represented over the taxation paid last December. The value of farm property was decreased from a year ago by $457,220, while village and city property was increased $292,695 and the value of personal property, $292,647. Farm values, in comparison with the tax levy of a year ago, have a downward tendency, while village and city property shows a slight increase.

The sale of $3,000,000 worth of highway bonds for work in the fiscal year has been authorized by the state administrative board. Bids will be received July 8. The state administrative board has authorized Governor Groesbeck and Highway Commissioner Rogers to investigate a proposal that the Michigan avenue road, M-17, between Ann Arbor and Detroit, be made a double highway from Dearborn west to the Telegraph road. The route is now a double highway from Detroit to Dearborn.

The state conservation commission has adopted a resolution prohibiting of state owned motion pictures of the Kirtland Warbler and Nathan Leopold until after the trial of the Chicago youth. John Baird, director of conservation, announced sometime ago, that he would ask the commission to take such action. The resolution suggested that after the trial the portion showing Leopold be cut out.

Construction work has been started on a new concrete bridge to span the Clinton river, on the road which connects Mt. Clemens and Pontiac. A 100-foot river channel 90 feet wide will be dredged at this point at a cost of $2,000 to permit the construction of the new bridge and removal of a dangerous curve in the road. The project, which is being financed by the state, will cost $100,000.

A strange insect which has been working havoc among cherry trees of the Freesoil vicinity has been identified by Prof. R. H. Pettit, entomologist of M. A. C., as the cherry leaf beetle. According to the professor this insect has been troublesome in northern Michigan for years but is just making its appearance this far south.

L. T. Hands, state insurance commissioner, recently cited the Associated Employers' Reciprocal Insurance company of Chicago, to appear to show cause why its state license should not be revoked. It is alleged that the company misrepresented its financial condition when it secured permission to do business in Michigan.

Although the adjusted compensation applications have been received by the Service Central bureau and the Wayne County Council branch of the American Legion, only applications can be accepted at this juncture by these organizations, from disabled ex-service men or dependents of the deceased, it has been announced.

Albert McMahon, the 17-year-old youth who confessed to setting fire to several barns in Riley Township, has been placed on probation by Judge Harvey Tappan of Port Huron. The youth in his confession said he fired the barns for the excitement of seeing them burn. In one fire several head of valuable cattle were killed.

The administrative board voted $3,000 for improvements of the Yanks' convalescent camp, at Union Lake, in Oakland county. Sheriff George Walters of Detroit, representing the camp authorities in urging state aid.

By a vote of 12 to 6, the Monroe county board of supervisors have decided to retain the services of a county school nurse the coming year.

The board of supervisors by a vote of 20 to 16 reduced the assessment of all farm property in Calhoun county 10 per cent from the assessment of last year.

Clayton Thomas, prominent retired farmer of Owosso, had a narrow escape from death when a small coupe he was driving was hit by an interurban car, six miles south of Owosso. The car was demolished but Thomas escaped with a broken collar bone.

Some years ago, when there was a good deal of talk of "uplift" for the rural communities, a city man was visiting an up-the-state farmer. With a broad smile the city man asked: "How do you desire to be uplifted?" "Well," said the farmer with a smile equally broad, "you city folks might start in by growing a better class of city boarders!" From The Farm Journal, September, 1922

Men's Elastic Bands Shipping returns from Hongkong last year showed that $50,000 worth of men's elastic bands were delivered in the colony.

Mercerized Wool Under high temperature and at high tension wool can, it is said, be successfully mercerized. The yarn is immersed for about five minutes in sulphide of soda at a high temperature. Shrinking is prevented by a mechanical apparatus that holds the yarn at high tension. The tension is then relaxed and the yarn is boiled in a weak acid solution.

Origin of Sodas It is not definitely recorded just who first suggested ice cream sodas in their present form. Snow-cooled beverages were known to the Jews, ancient Greeks and Romans. It is recorded that in Rome a certain Quintus Maximus Gurgus, nicknamed the Glutton, wrote a recipe for a similar preparation in one of his books.

Yes, a woman should have three husbands in this life. After practice on the two perhaps she could enjoy life and not hear the song, "The coffee is not strong enough. The cakes they lack the brown. The biscuits need more bake. If my mother was on top of soil, I would a Johnny cake."

'Tis well for us all to note the article to Dr. McCoy in last Chronicle. We notice a new medical name for the black smallpox, hemorrhagic or black smallpox. We recall what was said 70 years ago among the old country people. They termed it smallpox or death smallpox, which meant a black case, which was considered very fatal at that time. They could not control it then, and it baffles them yet.

Amuel Frutchey was a caller in Deford past week. Mr. Frutchey lived in Deford in his palmy days, knew them all and hasn't forgotten a single one.

Elisha Allen, who lives a mile south of Kingston village, called on us Friday. He now visits a few days at Fred Ball's east of here. Elisha is in a feeble condition. His heart is weak for a man of 73 years.

Farmers report crops coming rapidly.

On 26th Mrs. Lloyd Osburn and her four children, all small, and her mother, Mrs. J. D. Funk, were enroute for Cass City and when on center line near Tedford's, known as old John Vance farm, went into the ditch with their car. The vehicle rolled over twice. Nobody seriously hurt. Had hen fruit on board, without being insured. This was a loss and considerable damage to car. But that six would roll over twice, four of them little duds, and none stifled is a miracle.

Our flags are at half mast, and we will tell you for why. We were promised two elevating shows for last week. Our males had brushed their soft clothes and our females had banged their bobbed locks till they looked their sweetest. Our first entertainment was billed for Tuesday night, but behold on Monday our health officer, Sir Samuel, was ordered by the 'Powers that be': "Let no portable shows enter into the gates of your city." Since which we have wopt and refuse to be comforted.

Straw plenty in our market at present.

The political movements of the present calls for retrospection. We can look back to the early 50's and we remember well since 1856, when every man in the north states was for or against slavery. Neighbors quarreled bitterly. Horace Greely, greatest of journalists of his time, declared, "We must train the rising generations to despise the institution of slavery." The work was done. A Mr. Brace of our neighborhood was able to own the book, "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He gathered in the boys of the neighborhood till 15 or 20 youths from 8 years and upward were seated on the floor of a log house while he read of the cruelty practiced on the black people. We drank in the contents of the book literally 'till every slave holder was a monster in our sight. We went and carried the message home to our parents, 'till their minds were poisoned against the traffic in slaves. Some old hardened fellows said slavery was a divine institution and we should allow every state where the majority of voters requested it to become a slave state, but such men were called, "Copperheads." In 1856, the Republican party was born at Jackson, Mich., and John C. Fremont was nominated as the Free Soil candidate. Defeated, but in 1860, Abraham Lincoln became the successful standard bearer of the Republican or Free Soil party which meant "No extension of slavery." In all this a bitterness was growing for the south saw their pet institution, slavery, was doomed, and Lincoln declared, "No nation can live, half free and half slave." Hence came the secession of eleven slave holding states. Now to show how political feeling ran in Michigan. When Lincoln was nominated all free soilers organized into an army named "Wide awakes." They trained in military style with lamps suspended on long poles. Lamp so adjusted as to keep right side up at all times. Met two nights every week. The officers of the Oakland county "Wideawakes" were men who had seen service in the Mexican war and soon all had a military bearing. And now we come to gist of our article. As a boy we went to the village of Rochester where the Wideawakes were to walk at close of a mass meeting of the county. Rochester was then one main street about three-fourths of a mile in length with four places where strong drink was sold. The free soilers and the "Copperheads" were present in force. The "Wideawakes" formed at south end of main street to march eight deep the length of the town. At the north end of the village one Doc Lamerson kept tavern, headquarters for "Copperheads." Two desperate men by the name of Biggler told their chums to string along the side walks and see the fun. The Bigglers, desperate and expert horsemen, with a 1/2 rope trained across the street and firmly bound to the saddle they mounted their horses at curb on each side. Dressed in Sioux costume and giving Sioux whoops, horses at full speed, they met the "Wideawakes" unawares about midway of the town north and south. Lamp and men went down as fast as the rope reached the unsuspecting victim. They ran the horses length of the street, cut the rope and escaped before the populace realized the criminal prank. Nobody was seriously hurt. Tempers cooled, and it passed as an episode when politics were at fever heat.

$123 for a Complete Milker

THE wonderful portable Page Milker—nothing to install—comes complete and ready to use—just move it in, and start milking. Mr. Dairyman, here is a milker that does the work and does it right—and that you can try out without first putting a lot of trappings in your barn. The simple milker—so simple—that's why it can be sold at such astounding rock bottom prices. And because the Page is simple, it is better and more practical for the farmer. Your choice of models: hand operated, gas engine, or electric. Think of it, only $123.00 for the hand operated milker!

Phone or Write for Demonstration

I am using the Page Milker on my own herd. I know what it has done to relieve me of the drudgery of milking. Come and see it work on my cows. See what it can do for you. Just call me by phone or drop me a post card and we'll arrange for a demonstration—without obligation to you.

Fine View of Old South Church

Several hundred men stood in the heat of a July afternoon idly watching the work of excavating the cellar for the great office building which is to stand on the site of the old Province house on Washington street in Boston. They crowded around the board fence, two and three deep, looking down into the hole where steam drills bored, cranes swung slowly, great shovels cut into the soil, and men carted dirt. Not one was seen to turn about to look up at the Old South Meeting house, which stood diagonally across the street, revealed for the first time in many years from a distance far enough removed to do justice to its Wren-like spire and its fine proportions.

The first meeting house on this site was built in 1639, in the garden of the John Winthrop mansion, which then belonged to Mary Norton. It was a little church of cedar wood, but here Benjamin Franklin, who was born just across the road, was baptized in 1706. Here also Margaret Brewster appeared in "sackcloth and ashes" during service to give the congregation solemn warning because of the persecution of the Quakers. That was in 1677. About twenty years later Judge Sewell stood up in his pew while his confession for his part in the witchcraft delusion of 1692 was read.

Historic Meeting House of Provincial and Revolutionary Days.

The present brick building was dedicated in 1730 and in the course of the next century saw many stirring town meetings which were too large for Faneuil hall. In March, 1770, such an overflow meeting waited here while Samuel Adams sent back and forth negotiating with Hutchinson until he yielded and withdrew his regiments from the city. On November 27, 1773, a gathering of 5,000 citizens resolved that the tea on which King George bade them pay a tax, should not be landed. On December 16 of the same year 7,000 citizens waited here by candlelight for the return of a courier who had been dispatched to Milton to ask Hutchinson for redress. When he brought word that there would be none, a war whoop was raised outside the church and a group of patriots, disguised as Indians, rushed down to Griffin's wharf where the ships were lying and pitched the tea overboard. Another dramatic scene occurred in 1775 when Joseph Warren entered the pulpit from a window above to deliver his now famous oration on the Boston massacre. The aisles and the very steps of the pulpit were crowded with red-coated officers and men.

The Election Sermon.

Until 1872 the church was the scene of the picturesque ceremony started in 1712, the annual election sermon, at which the newly elected governor and all the provincial or state dignitaries appeared in the pride and pomp of office to give thanks for their election and to dedicate themselves to the work which lay before them.

A church with such a history as this would be more truly appreciated if it were almost anywhere except just where it is, for in this part of Boston it has two rivals which have been preserved to carry on the very traditions for which it stands. Faneuil hall, honored throughout the United States and not unknown in Europe, is today the fitting meeting place of idealists and reformers. And King's chapel, also only a few blocks away, is now just as when the beribboned and belaced officers of the British army and their Tory hosts attended service there, a dignified and beautiful place of worship. Obviously the Old South cannot compete with the "Cradle of Liberty" as a meeting place for young America, nor can it serve in its first capacity without many changes and a continuous sacrifice on the part of the congregation in going far downtown on Sunday mornings. So it has come about that today the Old South church is for the average Bostonian only a historic and cherished exterior
