Cass City, Mich. Dear Editor and Friends: I have just been appointed—by myself-as special war correspondent for the Cass City Chronicle. Now perhaps some of my friends do not know there is any war to write about. Well, there is-this war is beween the Blues and the Blacks.

The Blues are our own United States colors and consist of the visting fleet and all its personnel.

The Blacks are the Wicked Wang Paus who have captured this Pacific fortress and are now in possession of Honolulu and the Hawaiian Islands. The war is declared and is to be, for time, the nearest to the real thing that is known. Certainly all is in readiness among the Blacks. Yesterday I watched long lines of troops march thru our city streets. They were fully outfitted with camp equipment and war munitions and ready for a scrap at a moment's notice. They were marching out into the open to set up tents, field kitchens and live as they would under circumstances of a war which might be taken less seriously than is this one. For weeks the preparation has been going on gradually and the anticipation of the visit of the fleet has been discussed with interest but last week war was declared and then everyone settled down to the grim business that means life or death and so often death.

While the troops trudged thru the streets, aeroplanes overhead roared out their challenge to any foe, and we little ones looking on swelled out our chests with pride at the demonstration of power and secretly exulted as to what we would do to the Blues if Turn to page 8.

* Mary Succeeds on Main Street By LAURA MILLER ©, 1923, by Laura Mille THE PLACE OF THE GOOD TRADE

Have you ever heard a girl cry: "Oh, I can't be myself in this horrid little town! I'd stay here if there were any way for a girl to develop her own individuality"?

"It's the individuality that one can develop in such a place as this," says Carolyn Requarth, "that makes up the most interesting thing about being and working here-individuality that the average girl cannot possibly create in a big city." She owns an interesting shop, which some 50,000 people visit annually. The business association of her county recently picked her as representative of good salesmanship. And when it comes to cold figures, she can point to a business that has quadrupled since she took it over. It's pure coincidence, of course, that the Indians named Ottawa, where she set up shop, "The Place of the Good Trade." Two things-one subjective and one objective, as the psychologists say-started her off right. She undertook a "musical census" and found out that she had that secret of approaching people which makes a salesman a success. Then her manager took an interest in developing her ability. He practically forced her to go to selling musical accessories because he knew it was a thing she was fitted for. She thought there was "no future in it." But she persevered.

Two years of training followed, partly in smaller shops where responsibility rested on her own shoulders. By this time, she says she had determined to win in this field. She discovered that a business in her own name meant more money and more enjoyment. Her chance came to take over a victrola shop in Ottawa, which now keeps five assistants busy.

"I do not advise any girl to go to a large city unless she is a specialist," Miss Requarth says. "If she tries the island, one finds the white flowerbusiness in the city she should have ing cystus, bright yellow ginestra, sufficient training to make her efficient rosemary, a mass of blue when in in every way."

James Oliver Curwood's greatest story. This feature follows the book so closely that you will think the book a novelization of the picture.

IS IT AN ANIMAL STORY?

James Oliver Curwood never wrote a story in which an animal dwarfed the men and women who peopled it. Curwood is no nature faker. Baree was a real dog. Curwood knew him as he knew Kazan, Baree's father. No, it is not an animal story, but a story in which a wonderful wolf-dog looms large, for he twice saves the life of his mistress.

THESE troublesome parasites, also L called pin worms or seat worms, or awl worms on account of the awl-shaped caudal extremity, occur occasionally in adults and frequently in young children. They are small, round, and white, occasionally in clumps or bunches, and found in the large intestine or the lower part of the small intestine. By preference they choose the lower end of the large intestine or rectum for their residence. They are occasionally found in the the mouth, probably reaching it with the vomited contents of the stomach. They are lively and active and frequently crawl from the rectum to the adjacent skin, sometimes appearing upon a child's clothing. The female lays many eggs which must be swallowed by man or animal; they do not develop outside the body. Within two weeks after the eggs reach the intestine they become full grown worms, not easily destroyed, and migrate toward the rectum.

The mature females then lay their eggs, which may be passed out of the body or remain and become a new colony of worms, this process continuing indefinitely unless they are expelled and exterminated.

The eggs are taken into the body with food or water or by means of in-

Running-in-oil and Timken Bearings

This new STAR, with either Timken Tapered Roller Bearings or "NO-OIL-EM" Bearings, running-in-oil, has great efficiency as a pumping power in 8 to 10 mile winds.

As you know, any mill will pump water in high winds, but the windmill that will provide water in the lighter breezes is the one you want.

The Star can do this because it has a scientifically designed wheel. The fans have just the right curvature and are properly spaced.

Bearings running in oil, with a flood of oil for crosshead, guides and pitmans, reduce friction to the minimum. The better features of the old Star, two gears, two pinions and two pitmans, are retained. This gives a direct center lift to pump rod and equalizes the load on working parts of the mill. Star is pivoted on ball-bearing turn table.

IS IT ROMANCE OR ADVENTURE?

It is both. Romance of the most compelling kind in which a beautiful girl, a brave man, and a wonderful dog battle for happiness. Adventure in the heart of the snow covered Canadian wilderness with brute men and brute beasts.

This picture now playing Detroit's larger theaters. A special production at popular prices. Children 10c. Adults 35c.

SUNDAY AND MONDAY, JUNE 7 AND 8. RICHARD BARTHELMESS IN

"The Fighting Blade"

See Barthelmess in one of his best pictures. If you like pictures of merit, be sure to see this one. It is full of thrills and excitement of the days when the sword was one of man's best friends. When the sword squared all disputes. See how this young noble fought for the love and honor of the girl he was to marry.

The comedy, "Three Cheers" is a scream. Children 10c; Adults 30c.

fected hands. There is no difficulty in detecting either the worms or the eggs, the everpresent symptom being intense itching which is very sleep-disturbing. Other symptoms are irritability, and fretfulness, burning pain, restlessness, disturbance of the functions of the bowels and bladder, loss of appetite and anemia.

It is not unusual for sensitive children who suffer with thread worms to have convulsions or St. Vitus dance. No uncooked or partly cooked food should be allowed; the child's nails should be kept short; and the fingers must be frequently moistened with an infusion of quassia. Castor oil. senna or epsom salts may be given at night, but not in ex-cessive doses. Every morning, or every other morning, for two or three weeks, if necessary, an enema should be given through a rubber tube or catheter, which has been carefully introduced four or five inches into the bowel. A pint of warm water, or soap and water, or boric acid solution, may first be used to cleanse the rectum, this being followed by half a pint of 1 to 10,-000 solution of bichloride of mercury. Another excellent enema is an infusion of quassia, two ounces of quassia chips being boiled in a pint of water. Other enemas frequently used are solutions of carbolic acid; turpentine; vinegar; sulphur, etc., but those which have been mentioned will usually be found efficient if employed carefully and insistently. (© by George Matthew Adams.) A LINE O' CHEER

All Veterans' Bureau hospitals are being equipped with radio outfits, according to information received re-cently by rehabilitation officers of the American Legion from Director Frank T. Hines of the bureau. The Legion has been urging this step for some time.

In 47 hospitals operated by the bureau radio has been installed or the equipment will be completed shortly. Experiments already made prove that the radio is a highly valuable adjunct to hospital equipment. It is without doubt the most adaptable and popular of recreational facilities now provided for the disabled. The therapeutic qualities are considered to be as valuable as the recreational qualities. One important feature of this form of entertainment is that a patient may listen in or not as he himself feels inclined.

Rev. Father Bellamy Is to Succeed Doctor Clark There is a story behind the appointment of Rev. Father Bellamy as state chaplain of the New York department of the American Legion, to succeed Dr. J. A. Clark of Oneonta, who resigned because of ill health.

Father Bellamy, through his activities, was one of those in line for election as chaplain at the state convention last year. His election was looked for by many, but he had a different idea. He worked actively for the selection of Doctor Clark and nominated him for the office. Religious lines were forgotten-a Catholic stepped aside and worked for the appointment of a Protestant. It was this ing a successor to Doctor Clark, they said.

Cleaning Materials Are Most Needed in Spring

Even for housecleaning on a small scale several kinds of cleaning materials are needed to put things in shipshape. Farmers' Bulletin 1180 of the United States Department of Agriculture describes them all in detail, but the following are the most important:

Neutral soap, that is, one with no free alkali, and plenty of hot water are the most useful of all dirt chasers. or detergents. In this connection it is more evenly and safely than soap in cake. It especially pays to use up small pieces of soap in this way. Tuesday.

A stronger detergent such as ammonia, borax, or sal-soda (washing soda), is generally needed for loosening the dirt that soap and water will Oxford. not remove. These alkalis, however, are likely to be injurious to colors and finishes and must be applied with caution.

A scourer, or abrasive, is also indispensable in housecleaning. For rubbing up silver, nickel, and other soft polished metals, fine whiting (paris visit at the home of Mr. G's aunt, Mrs.

MR. AND MRS. SPARROW lived in a comfortable nest behind a blind on a house and they had never thought about living in a tree until one day Mrs. Sparrow, who never missed seeing anything that went on with her sharp black eyes, spied Mrs. Robin on her nest in the midst of the green leafy tree.

The wind was swaying the leaves and branches gently and as Mrs. Sparrow looked she thought how nice i

So when Mr. and Mrs. Robin had raised their family Mrs. Sparrow be- back and forth over her neck. gan to bustle about and talk of moving, but her husband told her she had better wait until spring.

"We are all nice and comfortable behind this blind," he said. "Why not bring up my children in this tree. She stay here, and if you still care to live would be certain to climb up here in a tree in the spring we can move and-" then.

"Why, how you talk," said Mrs. Sparrow. "Of course, I shall want to away from that tree to her old home live in a tree. It is much more genteel than living behind an old blind. Some one may close it any minute and let your nest tumble.

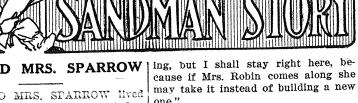

"I shall keep my wits about me, for if we don't watch out those robins will come flying back early and take that tree again for their home."

So early in the spring while Mr. Sparrow still shivered with the cold every time he flew from behind the blind, Mrs. Sparrow insisted that they move into the robins' nest.

"I would just like to see that pair get me out of this," she said as she nestled down into the nest, but I must say it will need quite a bit of repair-one.' Mrs. Sparrow was right. In a few days Mr. and Mrs. Robin flew up and went straight to the tree where they had lived the summer before and there on their old nest sat Mrs. Sparrow, her black eyes snapping defiance at them. "You fly right up there, Robin, and tell them that nest belongs to us. We built it last year," said Mrs. Robin, as she and her husband sat on a lower limb of the tree.

"No need to come up here," chirped Mrs. Sparrow. "You can't expect to have a home kept vacant for you, gallivanting all about the country as you do. "We live in this part of the country all the year and why shouldn't we have first choice, I should like to know; so you can fly right along and find another place, for I am going to stay right here. Possession is nine points of the law, you know, and I have possession."

Just then Mrs. Robin whispered something to her husband and he replied: "You are right," and off they flew without another word to Mrs. Sparrow.

"Now I wonder what she told him," said Mrs. Sparrow, leaning out of the nest and looking around. "Something

Mrs. Sparrow did not finish what she was saying. She flew straight and when her husband came to take one more look at the nest he liked so well he found his wife sitting there blinking at him.

THE CUCKOO

IN ENGLAND, in fact in all northern Europe, numerous superstitions cluster around the cuckoo, where the bird is "a fortune teller, a weather prophet, a magical creature that can change into a hawk, an immortal and omniscient being." In this country, so far as the writer has been able to discover, there is only one superstition regarding the cuckoo. In some sections of the country-in Maine for instance-it is thought to be a warning of death in the family to hear a cuckoo sing near the house. Mrs. Bergen, in a note to a memoir of the American Folk-Lore society, thus accounts for the wealth of superstition regarding the cuckoo in Europe and the scantiness of it here: "The note of the American cuckoo is less peculiar and therefore it does not seem to have attracted much popular attention. Many intelligent people are unacquainted either with the appearance or the notes of the two specimens common in the Northern states." To which might be added that if it were not for the cuckoo-clock the great majority of us In this country would be entirely ignorant of the call of the cuckoo. The cuckoo has had a reputation for magical qualities from the days of the Romans, and probably from before that time. As to the American superstition that the call of the bird near a house foretells death the same superstition exists in Europe and can easily be traced to the reputation the cuckoo has of destroying the eggs in the nests of other birds before taking that nest for his own purposes. It is an -omen of death to the hatching eggs when a bird hears the cuckoo near his nest-his house. And so man, for this reason, came to associate the cry of the cuckoo near his dwelling with the same idea; an idea gliding naturally into a fixed and enduring superstition. And that all the more readily because of the general mystic reputation of the cuckoo

Instead of shouldering a cane and showing the younger gener- ation how battles are won, the old sol- dier of tomorrow will need a modern- ly equipped laboratory and a sexton. Massed soldiers can no longer win battles by marching bravely forward in the face of fire, as they did in the enemy by sheer force of numbers. A modern machine gun will shoot twelve times per second and no num- ber of men could face and win in a fire so deadly, considering also that it has a range of from three to five miles. Different tactics than those of Rich- ard The Lion Hearted, will win the battles of the future, as is demon- strated by the "Battle of Honolulu" and its inglorious capture.
