Delightful Program of W. S. C. Tuesday

The first meeting of the Woman's Study Club for the year 1926-27 was held at the home of Mrs. A. J. Knapp Tuesday evening. The club was hostess to the teachers of the public schools on this occasion. The house was beautifully decorated with autumn flowers. The early part of the evening was spent in presenting the teachers and welcoming them to the community. The regular business session of the club followed the reception. The lecture course committee announced the first number on the course for Nov. 18.

A delightful program of music was enjoyed after the business was concluded. The Misses Virginia Day and Harriett Tindale sang a duet, and were accompanied by Miss Pauline Sandham at the piano. They responded to an encore, as did all the other participants. Miss Margaret Jondro rendered a piano solo.

Mrs. C. Chamberlain, first vice president of the Detroit City Federation of Women's Clubs, was present and gave a short address on "The Three C's—Control, Criticism and Co-operation." Her address was short yet it contained much good for those who heard her. Mrs. H. F. Prescott, ex-president of the Detroit Federation, who was scheduled to give the address before the club, was unable to be present on account of the serious illness of her husband, and Mrs. Chamberlain consented to come to Cass City in her place. Mrs. Chamberlain is a forceful speaker. In closing she paid a glowing tribute to Mrs. A. J. Knapp, the first vice-president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. W. A. Wellemeier and Mrs. D. C. Atkins of Vassar, the latter being district chairman of the music department, were present and sang the duet, "Love Is a Garden." They were accompanied by Miss Lura DeWitt. They responded with an encore, "Moonlight Nights." Next Miss Gwendolyn Wilson, who has been heard several times by Cass City audiences, played two numbers on the piano.

Mrs. Hancock, second vice president of the Detroit City Federation of Women's Clubs, was then called upon and told her audience about the activities of her club in the city of Detroit.

Short talks were also given by Mrs. Wurm of Sebawaing, Mrs. Atkins of Vassar and Mrs. E. Pinney. Mrs. S. G. Benkelman announced the program for the local club for the ensuing year. The subject of study is "American Literature and the American Home."

The president announced that the next meeting of the club will be at the home of Mrs. Wm. Schwieger on Tuesday, October 5.

A social hour followed, during which a dainty two-course lunch was served by the Misses Margaret Jondro, Harriett Tindale, Pauline Sandham and Virginia Day.

The members of the committee in charge of the opening meeting were congratulated on the success which crowned their efforts. The committee consisted of Mrs. J. B. Cootes, Mrs. N. Gillies and Mrs. Hattie Boyes.

The club is looking forward to a year of unsurpassed pleasure in the program which has been outlined by the program committee. Among the prominent speakers during the year are: Mrs. A. J. Knapp, first vice president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs; Willard Nash of Saginaw; Frederick Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for the Prevention of War.

The sunflower stands on display in front of the office and if you think you have one as large or better, let's see it.

Next year's beef club will be composed of six members. Two will have Aberdeen Angus calves, two Herefords and two Shorthorns. This is a good opportunity for young folks to get in on a feeding project. Steers can be purchased at nearly beef prices, Mr. Campbell says.

GRAND CHAMPION HOLSTEIN CLUB CALF

This is a picture of Lawndale Vale 3rd, grand champion Holstein club calf at the Michigan State Fair of 1926 and its owner, Clarence Merchant of Cass City, son of Wm. Merchant.

This calf goes to the National Dairy Show at Detroit on Oct. 6 where it will be shown in the individual class with champions from other states. It will also be exhibited as one of five Holsteins which will represent Michigan in club work and in the seven Holsteins from Tuscola county in the county class.

NEW SCHOOL BLDG. PROGRESSING NICELY

Contractor Expects to Have it Enclosed by Christmas Time.

Building operations are progressing nicely on the new school building at Cass City. Mr. St. Johns, the contractor, was here Tuesday morning and says he expects to have the roof on and building enclosed by Christmas time unless hampered too much by unfavorable weather. Frequent rains have greatly delayed the work thus far at Cass City, Mr. St. Johns said.

The large boiler used as a heating unit was lowered into the pit Monday and Tuesday by Amasa Anthes and crew. The stripped boiler weighed about 10 tons and was handled without mishap. Martin Anthes, who worked at moving buildings and heavy equipment in this community for many years, assisted in the work. He was stationed at the capstan and his 72 years rested lightly on his shoulders as he gently lowered the huge bulk of steel to its place in the basement.

Chronicle Liners Bring Quick Results

"Please take out the liner advertising pullets," said S. Brokenshire as he stepped into the Chronicle office Saturday night. "I ordered the liner inserted twice and thought we might possibly continue it if results were not forthcoming. It seems that Mrs. Brokenshire could have sold 500, there were so many inquiries from the advertisement which appeared the first time in yesterday's paper."

Amos Gingrich was equally well satisfied with the results he secured from a liner. He paid for one to appear two weeks advertising 50 pullets. One insertion sold the birds. "Think I could have sold 200 as easily if I had had that many for sale," Mr. Gingrich stated.

Sticking Pretty Close to His Job

If you think that people do too much traveling about the state and nation and fail to attend to their work in these days of easy transit by automobile, listen to this!

A Huron county man of middle age dropped into a Cass City store a few days ago and told the merchant that he had been to Detroit and had never seen a street car until he visited the state metropolis last week. "And there were a lot of them down there," he confided to his groceryman.

Stray Pig Brought Vision of Prizes Lost

Members of the Boys' and Girls' Pig Club had visions of the prize money won at the Saginaw Fair fading away when they got the word that a choice Berkshire pig in their herd had jumped from the rack as the club's exhibit was being brought home from the fair and was lost in the vicinity of Reese. It took a diligent search to find the animal, but it was finally located and club members are happy again.

THUMB DISTRICT NEWS PARAGRAPHS

Items Gleaned from Newspaper Exchanges and Other Sources.

Ubyly—At midnight on Sept. 13, fire was discovered in the J. P. McEachin blacksmith shop by parties passing through Ubyly. The interior of the building was badly demolished and a large quantity of tools were destroyed. It is thought that a spark from some welding which was being done in the afternoon had started the fire. It is a severe loss to Mr. McEachin as there was no insurance.

Elkton—Huron county boys' and girls' live stock clubs won $650 in prizes on 18 head of beef cattle and five junior spotted Poland pigs exhibited at the State Fair.

Imlay City—Since the establishment of the star mail routes out of this place, it has been found to be necessary for the local postoffice to keep one man busy dispatching mail. A total of 19 postoffices are served direct from the Imlay City office, and there are 11 outgoing mails and 15 incoming ones. It is expected that a city delivery of mail will be established soon because of the growth of the town.

Bad Axe—The Huron Co. Fair made a profit of $3,500 this year. The receipts were $13,000 and the expenses $9,500.

Lapeer—A trailer, built by the Lapeer Trailer Corporation at its factory in Lapeer, is probably the largest trailer ever constructed. It weighs about 10 tons and is capable of turning on page 8.

D. HEALY CLARK HEADS DELEGATION

Tuscola Co. Republicans Elect 11 Delegates to Attend State Convention.

Delegates representing the several townships of Tuscola county assembled at the court house Tuesday, Sept. 21, to elect delegates to attend the Republican state convention at Detroit on Sept. 28.

The county convention was called to order at 11:00 a. m. by Clarence R. Myers, county chairman, who appointed D. Healy Clark as temporary chairman of the convention. Mr. Clark appointed Guy G. Hill as temporary secretary and the following committees:

Permanent organization and order of business—E. C. Robertson, L. C. Purdy, Jas. McAlpine, Carl W. A. Schultz and Guy N. Ormes.

Committee on resolutions—H. P. Orr, M. L. Steele, D. R. Evans, Winnifred Walker and Walter Hunt.

Committee on credentials—Wm. Kelley, Wm. Higgins, S. S. Wood, Asa Streeter and Arnold McComb.

Committee to nominate delegates to state convention—T. M. Atkins, O. G. Johnson, L. R. Stewart, W. H. Cook and Robt. Reavey.

The convention then adjourned until one o'clock when committees made their reports.

The committee on permanent organization recommended that the temporary organization be made permanent and suggested the order of business. The committee on credentials reported that every township was represented, but as a few delegations were not complete, the recommendation was made that each township delegation be authorized its full strength. The reports of both committees were adopted.

L. R. Stewart submitted the report of the committee to nominate delegates to the state convention. The following were named:

W. H. Cook, Akron. T. W. Atkins, Vassar. O. G. Johnson, Fremont. Robt. P. Reavey, Almer. Martin B. Linch, Dayton.

Fred Laux, Denmark. Lillian Ricker, Elkland. B. H. Cornell, Fairgrove. D. Healy Clark, Indianfields.

Wm. Avery, Millington. Winnifred Walker, Columbia.

The report of the committee was adopted and it was voted that if any of the delegates chosen to attend the state convention were unable to attend that the delegation present be empowered to fill such vacancy. D. Healy Clark was elected chairman of the delegation.

The following report of the committee on resolutions was adopted: "We, the Republicans of Tuscola county in convention assembled, being a part of the dominant party of this State and Nation, and conscious of the obligation imposed upon that party to foster and perpetuate the principles of Constitutional Government, do here and now pledge to our honored standard bearer in the State, the Honorable Fred W. Green, our undivided and loyal support, not only as a candidate on the Republican ticket for the office of governor, but also as the incumbent of that office to which we are all confident he will be elected in November."

"We admire and applaud his unselfish fight in the late primary campaign to bring back to this State respect for the Constitution, independence and effectual operation of the legislature and a day-light administration of State affairs."

"We ask each and every Republican to go to the polls in November and to urge their neighbors to do likewise, so that there will be no question in the minds of anyone as to the will of the people, when the election is over, and to our confidence in the ability of our party to purge itself of insidious germ of autocracy with which it seems to have been inoculated for the past few years."

"In the coming State convention to which we are here today to elect delegates, we sincerely trust that those delegates representing us will use all honorable means to aid and support our candidate for governor in the selection of candidates for the several State offices who will work in unison and accord with the principles enunciated by him in the recent primary campaign. We commend to their special consideration the administrations of the Honorable Oramel B. Fuller, auditor general, and Frank D. McKay, state treasurer, who, because of their independent thought and action in the performance of their several duties have been at times unjustly held up as obstructionists rather than the honest, conscientious officials that they have proven to be.

"And lastly, we indorse without reservation the principles set forth in the platform of our candidate for governor and we pledge our unequalled support to the Republican nominees for office from governor down through to coroner and surveyor—State, District and County—to the end that Republicanism may continue its service to the country for another two years."

TUSCOLA TOUR TO DAIRY SHOW

Tuscola Co. Will Have Nine Herds of Calves at National Exposition.

The National Dairy Exposition which will be held at the Detroit fairgrounds October 6th to 13th is arousing a great deal of interest among the dairymen of Tuscola county. A meeting will be held this week to make plans for the furtherance of the attendance at the exposition. Co. Agr'l Agent John W. Sims has already arranged to have a two day tour from Tuscola county. The probability is that this tour will be held on the 7th and 8th as the activities on those days will probably be of most interest to people from this county.

The people of Michigan are very fortunate in having the dairy exposition at Detroit this year as this is the last time it will be held outside of Chicago. What the National Livestock Show at Chicago is to the general livestock industry the National Dairy Show is to the dairy industry. It is a wonderful exposition and since Tuscola county is becoming more and more a dairying county many are very much interested in attending.

Besides the showing of dairy cattle there will be a health food show, under the direction of Dr. E. B. McCullum, a farm women's school held in co-operation with the American Farm Bureau Federation and a modern home appliance show, and a boys' and girls' club show.

Tuscola county will have nine herd of calves shown by the boys from this county. Leaders of the dairy industry from all over the world will be present at this exposition. Further information can be secured from the county agr'l agent.

Rev. Butzbach Died in California

News has reached Cass City of the death of Rev. A. H. Butzbach in California on Sept. 10. The immediate cause of his death was an operation to which he was compelled to submit.

Rev. Butzbach was pastor of the Evangelical church at Cass City for about three years. Previous to coming here as pastor, Mr. Butzbach had served the church at Owosso, following 11 years' service in China. Mrs. Butzbach had been in missionary work nine years during that time. During Mr. Butzbach's first period as a missionary, he established a missionary post at Shenchow, Hunan, China. Strenuous work of erecting the necessary buildings at the Shenchow station so undermined Mr. Butzbach's health that in time he was compelled to give up his work in China and return to the United States. When his health improved somewhat, he accepted the pastorate at Owosso and later at Cass City.

Because their experience and preparation in missionary work particularly fitted them for the task of bringing Christian enlightenment and education to darkened China and because there was a scarcity of experienced missionaries in the foreign field, Mr. and Mrs. Butzbach decided to return to the China field and they left here in October, 1920, and sailed from Seattle on Dec. 10, to enter again the work which requires the spirit of unselfishness and sacrifice.

They had been in China but a few years when Mr. Butzbach's health was again undermined and they were compelled to return to this country. They have spent the past two years in California and Mr. Butzbach served as pastor at San Bernardino, Calif., during the past year.

REV. CARGO AGAIN PASTOR AT CASS CITY

Appointments of Pastors in Thumb District by M. E. Conference.

The Michigan conference of the Methodist Episcopal church held at the Metropolitan M. E. church at Detroit came to a close Monday afternoon after a week's session. The appointments show few changes in the ministerial personnel of the large metropolitan churches, but more than half of the ministers from other charges have been transferred to new fields, it is reported.

The congregations at Cass City and Bethel consider themselves fortunate in having their pastor, Rev. I. W. Cargo, returned for another year. Mr. Cargo's activities here have been community-wide and because of that his influence has been manifested in a larger circle than his immediate church. His return is greeted with favor by as large a circle outside the church as in its congregation. Mr. Cargo does his work without ostentation, but it is all the more efficient.

Appointments in the Thumb district include the following: Applegate, C. W. Hubbard; Argyle, Wm. Firth; Avoca, Jack Williams; Bad Axe, Marshall W. Hoyt; Bay Port and Hayes, Joseph Didden; Brown City, G. W. Gilroy; Capac, T. S. Bottrell; Carsonville, D. L. Jones; Caseville, Jas. H. James; Clifford, W. Paul Nicholas, Crosswell, H. H. Mallinson; Decker, J. A. Sherlock; Decerville, W. L. Jones; Deford, C. W. Scott; Elkton, Harry Brewer; Harbor Beach, Waldron Geach; Imlay City, H. E. Davis; Jeddco, C. E. McKelvey; Kingston, Edward Hocking; Lexington, Harry Salmon; Marlette, C. M. Merrill; Melvin, Sara McDonald; Minden City, H. C. Elford; North Branch, Geo. Hill; Owensale, J. J. Pearson; Peck, R. S. Griswold; Port Austin, Ben Slaters; Port Hope, H. N. Hichens; Sandusky, H. A. Manahan; Unionville, W. W. Lowe; Yale, J. S. Priestley.

Akron—J. W. Greenwood; Caro, J. T. M. Stephens; Fairgrove, John P. Pumphrey; Reese and Watrousville, A. E. Balgooyan; Vassar, H. E. Duttweiler; Lapeer, J. D. Young; Mayville, U. G. Ostrander; Millington, Aaron B. Sutcliffe; Tuscola, W. C. Hemboldt.

Thumb Potato Show Nov. 9, 10 and 11

The second annual Thumb of Michigan Potato Show will be held at Mayville on Nov. 9th, 10th and 11th. The success of last year's show and the interest taken by a great majority of the growers of the Thumb district has been such as to warrant the continuance of the Thumb show. The State Department of Agriculture and the Michigan State College are co-operating to their fullest extent in putting on this show. The object of this event is to promote more economical production of potatoes, to work for better grading and to improve and standardize seed. Trucking of potatoes to the surrounding cities, Detroit, Pontiac, Flint, Saginaw and Bay City has made the Thumb district one of the leading potato producing areas in the state.

Counties included in the show are Sanilac, Huron, Tuscola, Bay, Saginaw, Genesee, Lapeer and St. Clair. All officers serve without pay and for this year are as follows: Ed. Cartwright, Pres.; Leo Blackburn, vice pres., and Ernest Haas, secretary, all of Mayville.

Profitable Meet of Greenleaf Club

The Greenleaf Farmers' club held their monthly meeting at the Albert Vogel home Tuesday evening. Everyone present enjoyed the health talk given by Dr. I. D. McCoy. He gave a brief history of medicine and methods used to keep in health since 600 B. C. and explained the value of toxins and vaccines in keeping in check contagious disease epidemics. He pointed out the need of a county health nurse in regard to child welfare. Mrs. McCoy's piano solo, "The Chase," was greatly appreciated.

Rev. Cornell of Ubyly gave one of his interesting chalk talks and Mrs. Cornell a very jolly reading. A pot luck supper was served.

Too Many Clothes
By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THERE was a good deal of discussion last winter as to the amount of clothing our young women were wearing. It may be still going on for all I know, for in these days there are no "heavies" and the amount worn varies little with the seasons, and these matters attract attention. Eight pieces is said to be the number now, including shoes, stockings, and shoe strings. It isn't enough.

As to the men, they are no better than the young women, though it seems to me they go too far in the opposite direction and, if they can afford the cost, sweater under too much clothing.

It begins early with the man. Bob, aged nine, sits perspiring in his lumber jacket with the thermometer in the house at seventy-five.

"Why don't you take it off?" his mother asks, noting his flushed cheeks and his discomfort.

"All the fellows wear 'em," he replies, and that settles it. He prefers style to comfort.

Last winter all the real fellows—in college at least—who could borrow the price, or cajole grandmother into coming across with a Christmas present, or by some other stratagem means accomplish their purposes, had raccoon coats. Now a fur coat is for cold weather—for North Dakota when the blizzard is raging, for the companions of Amundsen when he is hunting polar bears hiding behind the North pole, not for a climate where the thermometer climbs up to sixty or seventy in January.

The fur coat, like a girl's lace handkerchief, is worn largely for show. It costs a lot of money, it will go out of style one of these cold days, so it must be paraded daily while the showing is good. The ordinary fellow with the fur coat has sunk all his substance in this one garment, so he has laid up no other sort for the rainy day or for the day when the sun shines and the soft breeze blows from the south. Consequently he drags himself about hot, uncomfortable, lethargic. He never walks rapidly lest he become heated up. He never skips along gayly; you never see him running. He has too many clothes. Perhaps, if the fur coat becomes a habit, he will ultimately, like his sister, leave off his flannels, discard his vest, and take to silken undergarments and bare knees and chifon hose so that he may be comfortable in his fur coat even in May and October.

As it is now, too many clothes weigh on him, make him a sort of intellectual freight train, a sort of scholastic mankin. We know when he comes into the office, nine times out of ten, that he has been late to class or missed connections entirely because of oversleeping, that at any rate he didn't get off his mark with the rest of the bunch.

St. Paul, in speaking of the man who has the best chance of winning the marathon, says something about "laying aside every weight." The boy with the fur coat has little chance of winning the race; he has too many clothes.

KEEPING WELL

GLAUCOMA
DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

GLAUCOMA is a strange disease of the eye in which the eyeball becomes hard, almost stonelike and in which there is either sudden or gradual loss of sight.

Although it has been known since the time of Hippocrates, little is known about its cause.

It is more common among women than men. It is a disease of middle age, rarely attacking anyone before forty. It is twice as common between sixty and seventy as it is between forty and fifty. While no race is immune, it is said to be common among Jews, Brazilians and Egyptians. It is more common among Englishmen than Scotchmen and seems to be more prevalent among dark eyed persons than among those with blue or grey eyes.

There are two forms of this condition, the acute and the chronic. In the acute, there is sudden failure of sight, with a desire to use stronger glasses, sometimes temporary loss of sight lasting for many minutes, foggy vision, when everything seems hazy, or when the patient sees colored rings around every light. These sight symptoms may be accompanied by headache and insomnia. The attack may last for over two weeks and then disappear, to return again in a few weeks.

These mild symptoms may lead to a severe attack with violent headache and partial or complete blindness, which passes off, leaving the sight impaired.

The chronic form is slower in developing and, strange to say, is almost entirely free from pain or discomfort. The eyeball becomes harder and the sight falls gradually and almost imperceptibly.

Many conditions have been suspected of causing glaucoma such as worry, heart disease and influenza. In the good old days of our great-grandfathers, when gout was one of the commonest and most fashionable diseases, glaucoma was called the "gouty eye" because it was so frequently found in men and women of from fifty to seventy who had eaten and drunk to excess all their lives. Overtaxing the eyes, especially with fine close work, is said to favor it.

It practically never occurs in persons who are otherwise in good health. It probably is caused by some form of poison in the system, either one from a center of infection or one absorbed from the intestines.

If you avoid infection and overeating you will be pretty safe from glaucoma.

Sun's Pathway Differs

The naval observatory says the more rapid rising and setting of the sun at the equator is not due to the greater circumference of the earth at that point, but to the fact that at the equator the sun rises and sets in a path perpendicular to the horizon, while in all other latitudes this path is inclined from the perpendicular.

CHAPTER VI

Longing.

Cathewe broke into a run toward the rear of the house. He saw a man dash from the kitchen and make for the back fence. There was no way of cutting him off, but there was a chance of putting a hand on him before he could scale the high board fence.

Cathewe touched the man's coat tail, but futilely. "Mother?" he called, thundering through the kitchen into the dining room. "Mother?"

"Yes, sonny! I'm all right," came from his study. "I fired only to frighten him. He was rifling your safe. Was there anything of value there?"

"Only odds and ends of manuscripts and my dramatic contracts. This is Mansfield. That money in the bank is bothering him. He begins to feel that he must find out. But I must go to New York tomorrow night, even if I'm followed."

"There goes the bell!" exclaimed Mrs. Cathewe.

"Probably the patrolman."

It was. Cathewe offered him a cup of coffee, and the three of them sat around the kitchen table, discussing the affair.

Then Mrs. Cathewe described the man minutely.

"I'd let the matter drop," the patrolman said suddenly.

"Clary, which are you for?" Cathewe demanded.

"What do you mean?"

"Are you for Mansfield or for Bannister?"

"Bannister, Mr. Cathewe. But for all that, my job is my bread and butter. You know the department as well as I do. You're up against a real war. You'll never get anything on Mansfield that'll hold water in court."

Cathewe let the matter drop, and the policeman left.

At precisely this moment the telephone rang in Mansfield's library. Mansfield laid aside his book.

"Hello!"

"This Mr. Mansfield?"

"Yes."

"There wasn't anything."

Mansfield hung up the receiver, but he did not reach for the book he had been reading. Instead, he stared into space.

He was thinking and thinking hard. The truth is, he was trying to fight his way through the gossamer net Betty had thrown about him. He sensed with panic that the fiber which had made him a power in the land was softening.

Again, his imagination took another turn. He seemed to be walking in a valley of echoes. "Give Betty what she wants." "Give me what I want." "Give Cathewe what he wants." "Give."

The thought of Cathewe, however, always had the effect of a tonic upon a man at low ebb. To crush this meddling whippersnapper, break him and scatter him like dust.

The sum of all these psychological incursions and cogitations was this: Mansfield was giving Betty what she wanted, giving it to her because he loved her and because another phrase of Maddox's was of recurrent quality.

"If you deceive her, and she finds it out, you will lose her."

But the truth must be kept from her. She must never know that her father was not the demigod she painted him. Of such is the miracle of love.

As for Betty, she felt herself confronted by a singular fact. She was being covertly snubbed; Nancy was snubbing her, the doctor was snubbing her, and others, too. Possessing a healthy pride, Betty dropped the idea of finding out what she craved to know. But she could not dismiss that remarkable pair from her thoughts.

Again and again there came an almost irresistible longing to drive into that quiet street, stop at that door and ask for music.

It is supposable that one of the main reasons for the continuance of this odd situation was that Betty was lonely. Her hours were frequently crowded with action; still she was lonely for the companionships such as she had known in France.

Mansfield still kept three or four saddle horses, and frequently now they rode into the country in the early morning. He would never forget one brilliant, frosty morning. They had dismounted at the top of the hill where she had met Cathewe. The brown earth and the rusty bogosage and the flashing blue water of the lake evoked in her desire to sing.

When the last glorious note died away, Mansfield asked in an uncertain voice: "What was that?"

"The Swallow."

"What made you want to sing like that?"

"All this"—with a gesture. "To see grandly is to feel grandly! I love to be up high, to see far horizons. I am wild, daddy; they never tamed me."

Immediately an odd thing happened to her mentally. Out of the sunshine and the frosty mists came a clear picture. She saw that beautiful mother, her white hair and her serene face touched magically by candlelight; she heard divine music. She became aware with the craving to hear it again. A most bizarre resolve laid hold of her. Everything in her—breeding, teaching tradition—demanded that she dismiss this resolve. Nancy nor her father wanted Betty Mansfield to know that mother and son. The doctor would not have evaded her query without a good reason. And yet, they belonged to that class of intellectuals from which she herself had received her training.

"Mother, this is Miss Mansfield," he had said; but he had not added: "My name is so-and-so."

In her world, persons who preferred to remain unknown acted thus for significant reasons; they did not care to know you or be known. But against this was their charming hospitality. Had they been everyday Bannisters, she would have passed on and forgotten. The unwritten law of her kind forbade Betty to cross that threshold again. And she was going to cross it that very afternoon.

She knew that the name of the editor of the Herald was Brandon Cathewe, but beyond that, nothing. "I am ready," she said to her father suddenly.

She gathered up the reins and swung herself into the saddle. Mansfield followed to the door of the house with the white clapboards. This haste was an urgency of fear, for that if she hesitated or looked back, she would not dare go on with the mad adventure. She rang the bell and waited.

The instant the maid recognized Betty, she drew the door full-wide. One did not forget Betty overnight. "I veel announce Mams'le . . ."

Began the maid in broken English. Betty entered the living-room and sat down on the lounge. Her heart wasn't quite right; it refused to behave. In fact, it was thumping in a most disloyal fashion.

Footsteps on the stairs. Betty stood up just as the subject of many diverse cogitations entered the room. The hostess came forward with both hands outstretched, with a frankly amused smile on her lips.

"I know," she began at once. "You have come back for some music." "I feel so ashamed! I don't know, but I believe you have hypnotized me. I wasn't invited to come again."

"Indeed you were," replied the musician.

"I was"—delighted.

"Certainly," answered Mrs. Cathewe, going to the piano. She struck the opening bars of Mendelssohn's "Capriccio." She possessed that marvelous faculty of playing without apparently watching the keys. What a beautiful child it was! Poor sonny!

With that remarkable insight to character which was his, he had read this girl aright the first time. She was desirable.

After playing several more selections, Mrs. Cathewe left the seat and knelt before the music case, a piece of beautiful Florentine marquetry. Presently she held up a sheet of music so that Betty could see the title. It was one of Wolf-Ferrari's exquisite songs.

"Do you know that?"

"Why . . . why, yes!"

"Will you sing it for me?"

"I'll try to, if you'll play the accompaniment."

Her voice was naturally a little husky and uncertain at first, but after the third attempt she found herself calm and confident; and her sweet high soprano filled the room.

When she had finished, Mrs. Cathewe performed one of those acts which artistic souls alone have the courage to perform. She caught the girl in her arms and embraced her, and Betty was pleased, thrilled and astonished.

By now it was time to go, so Betty gracefully took her leave. Then she ran down the steps to the gate, which she sent behind her with a click. Mrs. Cathewe remained in the doorway until Betty reached the corner; then she closed the door, walked thoughtfully toward the study and entered it.

"You did not give the name, mother?" Cathewe said suddenly.

"She did not ask for it. I am very sorry for her, too. When she finds out who you are, there will be doubts. When the hour comes she will put her father on one side of the scales and you and me on the other."

"I'll see it through!"

"Is he so bad?"

"The man who opened my safe did so at the orders of Mansfield. From your description and the patrolman's frank dismay, I at once had my suspicions. I confirmed them. Now, this man's power is not based upon anything but habit, remarkable as that statement may seem. He could be overthrown by a turn of the hand. And the reason this hand is never turned is a human reason: Human beings find it easier to be inefficient than to be efficient. A king will hang on to his crown no matter how bloody his feet may be. So it is with the American political boss."

"He owns property all over town, but only the fine buildings are recorded in his name. And I'm going to knock the crown from his head . . . and give up the girl I love. There's the bell."

It was Nancy. "Mother Cathewe, I've come to take you for a ride," she exclaimed.

"And Mother Cathewe will be delighted to go. I'll run up and change."

"I have a confession to make, Brandon," said Nancy suddenly. "A few days ago I came in to take your mother out, and while she was upstairs dressing I saw your study door open."

"You found out I was George Cottar?"

"Yes; I feel dreadful about it."

"Nonsense! It doesn't matter, or it won't matter, once I'm through this Mansfield fight. But I didn't miss anything."

"I took a rejected sheet out of the waste basket and carried it off."

"By the way, Nancy, have you got that sheet of manuscript with you?" he asked.

She gave it to him. He went into the study and returned shortly. Across the face of the manuscript he had written: "From George Cottar to Nancy Maddox, his friend."

"Thanks. What beautiful script you write!"

"That's because I'm fussy. When I cross out a word, I generally throw the sheet away. A scandalous waste of paper, but I can't help it. Here's that mother o' mine."

When she returned home, Nancy ran straight to her room, turned on the light, and got out that precious page of manuscript. "From George Cottar to Nancy Maddox, his friend." Having possessed a guilty conscience regarding the theft of the sheet, she had not dared scrutinize it heretofore. She had been ashamed to take it out of the drawer. But now she had a right. So she read the page through, and presently was struck by the curious method by which Cathewe concluded his sentences. A little cross, resembling an x. Now, what did that stir in her mind? A cross, resembling the little x. But the riddle remained unsolved.

That night a new phase of the drama unfolded. Cathewe was at his desk as usual, reading some proofs. The real estate reporter—truthfully, the cub, for the markets and real estate were his regular assignments, these jobs being the bill of fare of all cubs on provincial newspapers—came in rather breathlessly.

"Mr. Cathewe, I've stumbled on the rip-bainest yarn you ever heard tell on."

"What's happened?" asked Cathewe cordially. He did not hold to the tradition that to make a reporter out of a cub one had to scare him to death first.

"Well, I came to you because it concerns Mansfield."

"Ah!"

"Know those tenements and shacks down by his mills?"

"Yes. Supposed to be owned by Colvin, but in reality owned by Mr. Mansfield. Go on."

"And those unsavory apartments on Melville street?"

Cathewe nodded. "Also owned by Mansfield."

"Well, the sale of them was recorded with the clerk this afternoon."

"Who purchased them?"

"Miss Mansfield!"

CHAPTER VII

The Doctor Speaks.

Cathewe rocked in his swivel chair for a moment.

"Mr. White," he said frankly, "I don't want this repeated to a soul. This is a personal affair between Mansfield and his daughter."

"But the whole town will hear of it, selling property to his daughter through a dummy," protested the cub.

"No. It's a good story, but we can't use it. And with a pleasant nod he dismissed the disappointed cub."

Cathewe laid his pipe on his desk and crossed over to the window, from which he stared at the November stars. He wondered how Mansfield had failed to see how the town would interpret this equivocal sale of property. The ironmonger was disliked so heartily that folks would be only too happy to attribute the worst to him, that of mauling his daughter of her personal fortune.

He began to feel sorry for Mansfield, for he saw what Mansfield was soon to lose. With a crystal soul like Betty's, love must have its foundation upon respect. Tear this away, and the whole edifice must topple.

At three o'clock that morning he stole up the path to the Maddox front door and pushed a letter through the slot. And the doctor read this remarkable letter while at the breakfast table:

"I honestly feel sorry for him. You go up to him and urge him to confess about this real estate transaction. Impress upon him that the town will interpret the deal as a desire on his part to absorb his daughter's fortune. Keep me out of it, of course. I could use this weapon with profound effect—if I were a first-rate scoundrel. Go to him as soon as you can."

Three days later Maddox showed Mansfield the letter, and said:

"There is a chance, if you tell her; there is none, if you don't. Murder will out. You've called this young chap a scoundrel. He is an honest man."

"What Are You Going to Do About Cathewe?" Pursued Maddox.

"John," the magnate answered, "the money Betty paid for that property goes back into it two-fold. On the day the last shingle goes on I intend to return to her her check. I simply couldn't tell her part of my income for years has been from those—those places."

"Well, what are you going to do about Cathewe?" pursued Maddox.

"Break him!" Mansfield brought his fist down upon his desk. "Break him! I am iron there. I'll tell you why. And he recounted the episode on board the giant Cunarder in 1912.

As he listened to this almost incredible tale the doctor's heart went down, down. The boy loved Betty, had come here to win her and his anger against Mansfield's malefactions had switched him onto another trail. Nancy! Out of all these curious actions and reactions hers would be the broken heart.

He put Cathewe's letter away and got up. "Dunleigh, you're going home to lose your fight. You're going to lose your daughter, too. Tell her, man; tell her why you played such a farce as this real estate deal. Tell her the truth. Tell her that for years you've lived for and by yourself, a monument to selfishness. Tell her you took rents from the plague districts because you'd lost the perspectives of morality. That you never cared who rented the flats and apartments so long as the rents were forthcoming. Tell her you've taken money from honest men, through legal trickery. Tell her that you had forgotten her mother. Lord! Lord! Don't you know that women always forgive if you tell them; that they never forgive if the story comes to them from a third person? You've got the idea that you must cringe. Tell her with your chin up. If you've got to lose her, lose her like a sportsman," and the indignant Maddox rushed out of the study and out of the house.

Mansfield, with a rather childish burst of fury against the tides of fate that were closing in upon him, stalked to the study door and locked it. How many times did he stride from the fireplace to the far wall and back? A hundred times two, three hundred times.

Until this hour he had looked upon the real-estate deal with a kind of dry humor. When the hour came he would refund Betty's outlay. Wasn't that enough?

He dropped into his club at five and decided to dine there. He was still in a towering rage, and he did not care to face the girl's clear eyes until he had himself in hand. But he brought home some new books and a box of candy, which he placed before her door.

As Maddox entered his house he was greeted by a question from Nancy.

"Did you order that awning?"

"Awning?"

"Heavens, he's forgotten! Don't you know what day this is?"

"Thursday."

"What date?"

He looked at his calendar and then his jaw dropped. Her birthday, and he had forgotten all about it! He jumped up, kissed her, and stormed back to the office where he had left his hat and coat. He rushed out and down to the chariot and went clattering off. He did not stop until he reached the shop of Bannister's fashionable jeweler. He was a rare visitor, but they knew him well.

"Daniels," he began, a little out of breath, "this is my daughter Nancy's birthday. I want a trinket that'll make her forget everything, even the day she was born," he added humorously.

"That falls in nicely," replied the jeweler. "We had something in the window the other day that attracted her."

"I see," said Maddox, preparing himself for the worst. "Pearls. Well, let me see it." So far as he was concerned, pearls and pearls looked exactly alike. He would have to trust Daniels absolutely. "How much?" he asked, after a glance at the string.

"Twenty-five hundred."

"Wrap it up—and charge. A thousand December first and the balance January first."

"Six months, if you like. We folks make you wait often enough."

From her bedroom window Nancy saw her father's return; but she did not run down to greet him. She was wondering what would happen when Brand and Betty Mansfield saw each other across the table at dinner that evening.

Cathewe returned from New York that morning. He was not aware that a man, very much interested in his affairs, followed him out of the car and to the taxicab stand. He sent a cold, level glance into the middle of Cathewe's back. At the taxicab stand he selected a cab for himself and directed the chauffeur to proceed at once to Dunleigh Mansfield's on Polygon hill. There will be no more of him. He comes into the story and goes out of it, comet-wise. But an astronomer will tell you that the aftermath of comets is devastation, annihilation, and obliteration. How many times, though, has this old top stood wincing for the blow, to escape by a hair—the hair of the comet's tail?

Cathewe had an appointment at the office. The appointee was not a willing one; he was bowing to force. When he arrived his air was nonchalant, except for the restless and continuous shifting of the strong cigar from one corner of his mouth to the other.

"Well, here I am," he said impudently.

"Sit down, Shafer. Now, exactly, why did you, a member of the city's detective force, enter my home like a burglar and break into my safe?"

"Because we had information that you might be some kind of a crook," was the ready answer.

"You lie, Shafer, I'm going to give you a month to find a new job out of town. Oh, I shouldn't have sent for you if I hadn't something on you, as you would say."

"Nothing doing," answered the detective.

"I'm not going to say any more. The interview is over. Good morning. Thirty days. . . or five years."

"What's that?"

"Five years. The evidence I have against you may be computed in so much prison time. Good morning."

The blood boiled up in the detective's face; but the cold blue eyes looking up into his made him reconsider the impulse to start something of a purely physical nature. He left. Cathewe swung his chair around to his desk just as the telephone rang.

It was Nancy, who wanted to make sure that he would attend her birthday dinner.

A pause. "Sure I'll be there," he answered.

"Brand, how came you to make those curious little periods in your manuscripts?"

"Periods. Oh, I see. You mean the cross. That is the habit of newspaper writers. It is to indicate to the compositor that the sentence ends there."

"Ah! I was just curious. Now I understand. At seven, then, Mr. Cottar!"

She left the phone and saw Betty, who had just come in, standing in the hall.

"I received a letter this morning," said Betty, slowly.

"A letter?"

"Don't you remember?"

"You mean a letter from that shadow man you told me about in Washington?"

"Yes. . . I. . . I had to sit down when I saw that envelope. My knees wouldn't hold me up."

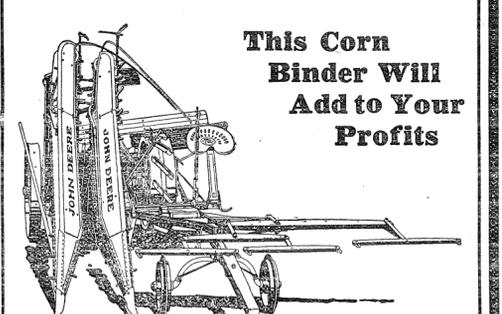

"Was it postmarked New York?"

"Yes. It isn't fair. The whole thing hasn't been fair. I had never injured anyone. I wasn't a flirt. The letter, Nancy, was goodby."

"You'll get over it, dear?" said Nancy, hating herself. A word or two, and the riddle would be solved. Generous beyond ordinary, she stifled the impulse to take that page of manuscript from her bosom and spread it out for Betty to see. Once, indeed, her hand did steal up; but stonily she forced it down. What was the use in telling Betty? said Spectious Argument. "Wasn't there the width of the poles between Betty Mansfield and this shadow man? Hadn't he himself made it impossible?"

Poet Has Right Idea of Loyalty to Town

The Literary Digest reprints this from the Herald (Tippecanoe City, Ohio) as a sentiment typical of the period. The Digest says it thinks it knows what Mr. Mencken will say of it, so offers something, the editor says:

"MY TOWN CAN'T BE TOO GOOD FOR ME."

BY "WIB" CHAFFEE
(For nearly three years the Chaffee jingles have appeared in the advertising of The Big Green Barn garage and they have been a source of enjoyment to all. His present contribution, published below, cannot be classed as a jingle, however. In our opinion, it is not only his masterpiece, but a bit of verse that is outstanding in current poetry.)

My Town can't be too good for me,
Nor I too big or good for it;
Though small in size My Town may be,
I'd have it big in "Push" and "Grit."

My Town must meet emergencies
With dauntless courage, vim and
'Pep';
Though progress is not bought with ease,
My Town must not get "out of step."

My Town must tackle every task—
Go forward always—ne'er back down.
'Neath foreign suns though I may bask,
I'd think with pride of this, My Town.

My Town, of course, is good enough,
No matter how my fortunes swell,
Nor yet how fortune may rebuff,
My Town's defamers I would quell.
—And yet, down deep within my heart
I know My Town improved could be;
To help improve I'll do my part—
My Town can't be too good for me!

Several Reasons Why

One Should Own Home

There are many reasons why people should own their own homes.

The purchase of a home is the most important investment you will make, and, probably, the largest purchase you will ever make, if you are in ordinary circumstances. It is the one which will have the most influence on your well-being, comfort and happiness.

To own your own home gives one a feeling of deep personal pride and satisfaction, besides reflecting the personal preference and taste of the owner. Your home becomes the center of your most cherished memories and associations, the center of your life's interest. Therefore, it means more than money can buy.

Home ownership is a symbol of security and success. A home of your own is insurance against fear and worry in old age. Insurance statistics show that those who have provided for the "evening of life" live longer than those who have no thought of "the tomorrow."

Keep Roof Painted

The timber framework by which the roofing or covering materials are supported should be coated with paint before the outer covering is laid on. Valleys, gutters and downspouts should be painted as soon as they are put in position. There is a tendency today to rely upon galvanized metal. Under the most advantageous conditions the life of galvanizing is fifteen years and its term of usefulness may be considerably shortened under adverse circumstances. For instance, galvanizing, if exposed to the erosive elements of ocean air, will not serve as a protection for more than three or four years. Whereas, under the same conditions, gutters and spouts will last from ten to twelve years if regularly painted, or made of zinc or copper.

Architecture Improves

The dwellings of any people are the surest indication of their strength. Our highest civic ideals spring from sources which have their origins in happy, thriving communities. Since the enlightened community offers the best field for the merchandising of lumber, the interest of the lumber industry in improving small house architecture in America might result from no motive other than the seeking for commercial gain. The motive, however, lies deeper than this. They realize that beautiful homes are an inspiration to better living.

Thrifty Illinois City

Of all the cities that dot the state of Illinois, Moline, perhaps, is unequalled in one evidence of the thrift of its inhabitants. Eighty-four per cent of the homes in that city are owned by their occupants. That is more than an indication of industry and thrift; it is proof that the people of Moline believe in their city. Home-owning solidifies a community. In this respect Moline should be as solid as rock.—Chicago Journal.

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

BY JOSEPH KAYE

At 21—David Sarnoff, head of the Radio Corporation of America, was a ship inspector.

WHEN I WAS twenty-one the position I occupied was that of ship radio inspector with the Marconi Wireless Telegraph company. During my spare time I also acted as instructor at the Marconi Wireless Institute. "As to my ambitions at that time, they were none other than to make good in the work I was engaged in, knowing that the degree in which I succeeded would be directly responsible for my promotion to the next step; in short, I wanted to get ahead in the field of radio.—David Sarnoff."

TODAY—David Sarnoff is the vice president and general manager of the Radio Corporation of America, the greatest factor in the field of radio in America, if not in the world.

Sarnoff's life is a true inspiration and lesson as to what one of the most humble beginnings can achieve in this country. He came to the United States from Russia when a youth and immediately began selling newspapers on the East side of New York in order to help support the family. By the time he was thirteen he saw that more money was needed than he could earn by his street peddling, so by dint of the most arduous efforts, he managed to borrow a little money from friends and opened a news stand on a street corner.

This business paid more and in time he was able to leave it in charge of some members of his family, while he earned additional money by taking a job as a telegraph messenger boy. In spite of the fact that he now had to look after two jobs, he yet found time to study telegraphy at night and his studies were so successful that, as Mr. Sarnoff states above, by the time he was twenty-one he was already an inspector and instructor of the Marconi company.

When, several years ago, radio suddenly shot out into its present magical development and the Radio corporation was organized the officials chose David Sarnoff to manage it, as being the man who knew more about practical radio and was more fitted to direct it than anyone else of his time. How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"KILLING THE GOOSE—"

WHEN a person is led through greed to overreach himself and destroy the very source of benefit to himself he is said to have "killed the goose that laid the golden egg." The saying is popularly used in everyday speech, very frequently with reference to a man who, having a successful business wants even more than the income it yields and draws from it so much that he destroys it and finds himself ruined.

The saying comes to us from one of the tales known as "Aesop's Fables" called "The Goose With the Golden Eggs." Traced back through the centuries this tale is said to have been taken from an identical one in the Indian "Jatakas."

As the story goes, a farmer going to the nest of his goose found there a large, glittering, yellow egg. About to throw it away, he felt of its weight and discovered that the egg was gold. To his delight, the goose presented him each morning with such a golden egg, the sale of which soon made him rich. Under the influence of greed and avarice, however, he thought to get all the eggs at once without waiting from morning to morning, so he killed the goose and opened it, to find—nothing! (Copyright.)

Feed Fat Chow

To milk fatten broilers, spring chickens, roasters and fowl, feed them from seven to fourteen days (according to size). Each quart of Purina Chicken Fat Chow should be mixed with approximately one and one-third quarts of water so the mixture will be of a creamy, batter-like consistency. This results in an appetizing, highly digestible mixture which is readily eaten by the chickens and which produces milk-fed chickens of best quality. Fat Chow does not require the addition of buttermilk—add only water.

Too Much "Acid?"

Excess Uric Acid Gives Rise to Many Unpleasant Troubles.

AUTHORITIES agree that an excess of uric acid is primarily due to faulty kidney action. Retention of this toxic material often makes its presence felt by sore, painful joints, a tired, languid feeling and, sometimes, toxic backache and headache. That the kidneys are not functioning right is often shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions. Thousands assist their kidneys at such times by the use of Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic. Doan's are recommended by many local people. Ask your neighbor!

A Smile in Every Mile

By O. Lawrence Hawthorne

Life is such a pleasant journey, after all! There are joyful moments all along the way, when the melody of friendship's happy call bids us contemplate the beauties of the day.

It may be that storms will gather, but we know that the sun has never failed to shine again; and I like to feel that everywhere we go we can make life brighter for our fellow men.

There's a smile in every mile for everyone! There's a cheerful dawn behind the darkest night; if we find a friendly way to share our fun, each new day will bring its measures of delight.

Cass City Schools

The question for debate this year is "Resolved: That the United States government should own the coal mines." We have promising debating material for this year and hope, through hard work, to make it a successful season.

The annual roast of the Junior class was held at "Lovers' Lane" on Friday evening, Sept. 17, with about 30 present. The winners were roasted on a grate over a charcoal fire, eliminating the danger of burning the winners, also making them more delicious. Besides winners and buns, lemonade was served. The entertainment committee furnished exciting games which were played with great enjoyment by all. About nine-thirty, everyone departed for home declaring they had spent a most enjoyable evening and all are looking forward to the last high school roast to be held next year.

In ninth grade English, the variety of types of short stories furnishes us a broad knowledge to use as a basis for our judgment of other stories.

"The Specter Bridegroom" by Irving and "The Elephant Remembers" by Edson Marshall give us opportunity to compare a story written a hundred years ago with one written just the other day.

A mind rich in the beauties of literature is a growing mind. The eleventh grade English students are learning appreciation of early English poetry. Though clothed in the dialect of the Middle Ages, the delightful humor and skilled character portrayal of the great English poet, Chaucer, are evident to each member of the class. The English ten students are using a new composition text, "Theme Building" by Ward, which promises to be both effective and interesting.

The high school chorus has one hundred and twenty-one members. They have been writing the words for pep songs to be sung during games. Testing for monotonous and monotone singing has taken much of the music periods.

The upper grades have been making landscape drawings and paintings in the art classes. In the lower grades, the children are making action figures. The high school football team goes to Saginaw Saturday to play Arthur Hill high school. The local team always has been able to hold the Arthur Hill men to a low score, and they promise a good game this week. The game is called at one-thirty o'clock.

The class in second year French is still struggling with the use of the subjunctive. This is the most difficult part of the French language. Very often the French people themselves are not sure whether the subjunctive or the indicative mood should be used.

Now that the sleepless nights of the upper-classmen have ended, and tranquility has once more replaced anxiety we feel safe in stating that the freshmen class roast was a success. Co-operation seems to be the basis of all successful enterprises and especially was this true in our history making episode. Without the co-operation of each classmate, each driver of a machine, the kindness of business men, the counsel of teachers, and others concerned, we could not have hoped to succeed. We feel happy in our accomplishment and rightfully so, for when you consider that a class of about seventy members plan a roast, leave the city at 3:30 in the morning in about twelve machines, go to a point 3 1/2 miles distant from the city, and accomplish their desire, with the lack of but four of their members, and not molested by any one individual who did not belong to the class, we feel that it was indeed a success. This was the outcome of the annual freshmen roast held at D. C. Elliott's farm last Wednesday morning at 3:45. Thanks to all concerned, your obedient friends, The Freshmen.

Junior High.

The eighth grade arithmetic class has completed an apparatus, whereby a cardboard isosceles right-triangle permits them to measure the height of an object without touching the object itself. This is indeed a convenient apparatus that may well be kept in any household.

The seventh grade in its study of "The Spread of Disease Germs," wrote several very interesting and helpful stories on "The Daily Life of a Fly."

Fifth Grade—We had a spell down on Friday night and Maxine Palmateer succeeded in spelling us all down. Our room is bright with bouquets of asters, gladiolas, pansies and nasturtiums. We are enjoying the new books of history stories which we are using for supplementary readers. Latitude and longitude are the subjects that we are most interested in for geography at present. Donald Kosanek and Ruth Schenk have returned to school.

Fourth Grade—This week we are learning just what use maps are to us. The "A" class is memorizing Alice Carey's poem, "That Calif." "Robin Hood" is our new book for the morning reading.

Third Grade—At our spell-down last Friday, Helen Doerr spelled all of us down. George Wolverton is the new boy in our room.

Second Grade—The children in the second grade are enjoying the story of Pinocchio, which is being read during the story hour. In numbers, we are learning the addition combinations, and we are doing simple addition problems. Much interest is aroused through relay races. In our language class we are going to dramatize the story of "The Three Bears."

First Grade—This week the boys and girls have been fascinated by animal stories. Their chief pets, cats and dogs, seem to prove the most interesting.

Kindergarten—We have learned several songs to illustrate the activities of mother at this time of the year.

The girls have washed their doll clothes, hung them up to dry on Marjory Croft's clothesbars and have made some doll dresses.

From eight o'clock until 8:45, there is a dreadful noise arising from the hammers of our little boy carpenters. They are putting shingles on the playhouse. This playhouse is sure to be rain proof because if the shingles do not keep out the water, the nails will. It resembles a tin roof in luster.

We now have thirty-three enrolled in kindergarten.

Tales of the Thumb Tersely Told

Concluded from page one. of carrying 50 tons. It was specially designed by the company for a Toledo, O., contractor who will use it mainly for transporting heavy construction machinery.

Brown City—The two-story business block owned by L. H. Howse and located on Main street in the heart of the business section of the city, was practically destroyed by fire early Thursday morning. The loss on the building is estimated at $6,000, only partially covered by insurance.

Welch & Beckett's grocery and meat market stock and fixtures on the first floor were ruined. Their loss was covered by insurance.

Kingston—Bids were received Wednesday at the office of the resident engineer of the state highway department at Port Huron for the construction of a mile of pavement on M-46, through the village of Kingston. The state pays for the 20-ft. strip through the center of the street and a special election will be held on Oct. 16 to determine if taxpayers wish to widen the pavement to 52 feet.

Caro—J. Campbell of Bay City submitted the lowest bids for the construction of 3.957 miles of concrete pavement on M-81 from Caro to Wahjamega. Mr. Campbell's bids were $88,778.75 and $89,051.81. Two bids were required, one covering concrete pipe for culverts and the other tile culvert.

Argyle—Leonard Cole, 16, was seriously hurt in an automobile accident Sunday at Hunt's Corners when the car he was driving collided with one driven by a Detroit man. Cole received a deep gash in his neck which nearly severed a large vein and was also badly crushed. He was taken to the hospital at Sandusky. Mark Patterson, 14, riding with Cole, received a broken collar bone and bruises.

Peck—John C. Sweet, of Port Huron, manager of the Michelex Elevator and Warehouse Co., was in Peck Saturday and closed an option for the purchase of the property of the Peck Elevator Co., owned by George Middleton of Peck, and D. E. Middleton, of Yale. The transfer of the property including elevator, hay sheds, etc., will be made as soon as inventory can be completed and the business details worked out. The new company operates a string of elevators in the Thumb district and makes a specialty on the handling of beans.

HOWE ABOUT—

By ED HOWE
(Copyright by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)
I know a man and his wife who have a fourteen-year-old daughter they call "Babe," although they are properly trying to get out of the habit, and call her by her real name, which is Frances.

They worry a good deal about Frances, although she is one of the nicest girls in town. The other day the father said to her:

"Frances, what do you want us to do? Do you want your parents to let you go your own way, and take no interest in your welfare? Do you want us to give up advising you? We are older, and have had more experience. Do you object to our taking an interest in you, and trying to direct your course? Do you want us to accept your judgment in everything, and make no suggestions about anything?"

Frances' mother was present, and rather proud of her husband, he had put the case so forcibly, so gently; so effectively, she hoped.

But the mother was floored when Frances answered her father's question, as follows:

"Well, yes."
In every family where there is a fourteen or fifteen-year-old girl there is a similar controversy. Is Frances right, or are the parents? And can anything be done to settle it? Frances is nice; her parents are nice. But here is a misunderstanding that results in much unhappiness. Since time began, parents have presumed to advise fourteen-year-old daughters. Have parents always been wrong, or have they been right? Parents, particularly American parents, have made a great many concessions. Have they made too many, or not enough?

I seem to be seeking advice. I am not; my mind is already made up. And, being elderly, you know what my opinion is.

The father should not have asked Frances that question; he should have known what her opinion was, at fourteen.

An old form of expression used by cartoonists is "The Circle." An accused man is represented as pointing to a man ahead of him, and saying: "He did it." The second man points to a third, and says: "He did it." . . . And so on until the circle is completed. . . . I occasionally admit that I did it, and you should.

In most things written about America and American things, you will find this: "Within a year," or "Within five years." . . . This is the manner in which we exaggerate. We are not content with telling the modest truth about ourselves, but hasten to tell what we intend to do.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Oldest Colleges
Only one American institution of higher education was established as early as the Seventeenth century, Harvard being chartered in 1636. Yale is the next oldest, 1701, followed by Washington (Chestertown, Md.), 1723, University of Pennsylvania, 1740, and Princeton, 1746. The state universities are comparatively young.

POULTRY

FATTEN BROILERS FOR MARKETING

For the most part, farmers and poultry raisers who keep Leghorn chickens pay most attention to the production of eggs. They think of eggs as the chief end of poultry keeping. My experience has been that by paying a little more attention to the fattening and marketing of Leghorns, the income from this source can be considerably increased, says a writer in the Successful Farming. Especially is this true when marketing broilers.

Leghorn broilers fatten easily when confined and force fed for about two weeks. They will consume about two pounds of feed during this time and should show a gain in weight of one-half to three-fourths of a pound. There are two methods which I have employed in fattening broilers. These are pen and crate fattening. The simplest and most logical method for farm conditions I have found is pen fattening.

Following this method, the birds are confined in small pens when about one and one-half pounds in weight and are fed the following mash: 25 pounds cornmeal, 15 pounds middlings, 8 pounds meat scraps, and one-half-pound salt. This is fed as a wet mash by adding sour milk, buttermilk, or skim milk. The birds are fed this mash three times a day and are permitted to eat for half an hour at a time, when the uneaten portion is removed. It is important that the intervals between the feedings should be as nearly equal as possible.

The object of feeding this wet mash is to get the birds to eat large amounts of food so they will make maximum gains in the shortest time.

Corn meal and milk in any form should be the foundation of any good fattening mash. It should also be remembered that when milk is used in fattening fowls, not a too large amount of meat scraps should be used.

One reason for the wide spread in prices paid for Leghorn broilers and those of the heavier breeds is because the Leghorn, being more active, will not take on flesh as readily as the heavier breeds when on free range.

Roosters Can Be Sold Now, Says J. H. McAdams

Now that the incubation period is over there is no further need for roosters in the flock and all but one or two of the best male birds can be sold, advises J. H. McAdams, extension poultryman at the Kansas State Agricultural college. Every flock owner knows, according to McAdams, that the male bird is unnecessary so far as the production of market eggs is concerned. Male birds now represent just so many extra mouths to feed, he says.

The hitch to selling male birds comes largely from the price consideration, according to McAdams, who says that when these birds were purchased last fall or early winter they were valued from $2 up to possibly $10 each. Today with old roosters commanding 16 cents a pound an exceptionally high price prevails, but as soon as the old roosters start moving to market the price will drop probably to about 10 cents a pound.

"Even though old roosters were such a drug on the market that he could not sell them at all, no farmer could afford to keep them in his flock," McAdams warns. "To live, a rooster must eat and the feed bill on each individual one will be at least 10 cents a month, making a total cost of at least 80 cents to hold the old birds over until February."

Poultry Hints

The results of chickens eating carrion or spoiled feed are lambecker or indigestion.

Egg eating is a vicious habit and the best method to combat it is the slaughter of the offending birds.

Convenience for both hens and caretaker should be considered—convenience means cleanliness and cleanliness means health.

A laying hen is about the only example of a going concern that can sit still and yet produce dividends.

The first quality that makes for success and profit in the poultry flock is vigor, vitality or constitution. Choose your own name for this quality.

A chicken that is liberally fed does not, as a rule, exercise enough to run off flesh but only enough to keep in good general health and to have a good appetite.

Eggs will remain fertile up to ten days after the male has been removed from the breeding pen.

Given a chance, poultry will return good profits on the investment. Cleanliness is one of the best guarantees of success.

Poultry diseases spread principally in four ways: By the birds eating dead diseased birds, by contaminated air, through drinking water, and through the droppings of diseased birds.

All good New Yorkers love a fire—but they love a parade better. This was demonstrated when police called to hold in check a dense crowd gathered to view a small basement fire suddenly had their problem solved by a band and 120 brilliantly uniformed Cossacks, who crossed Fifth avenue a block away. The crowd, with a single impulse, deserted the firemen to follow the parade.

Fire in Kaniksu National Forest

Charred ruins are all that remain in the wake of the forest fires that for the last month have been sweeping the Kaniksu National forest in northern Idaho. More than 75,000 acres have been covered by the fire. Valuable stands of white pine and cedar, and reproduction stands that have reached a growth of 50 to 80 years have been razed. The conflagration, started probably by a careless camper, sweeps through the forest at the rate of 15 miles an hour.
