LEGISLATURE NOW AT RECESS WHILE MEMBERS JUNKET

Legislative Committees Are Visiting Institutions to Study Needs.

INCOME TAX IS PROPOSED;
WAR ON LOBBYISTS

Michigan's Senators and Representatives are scattered to the four corners of the state today. The capitol is almost depleted of lawmakers, as the Legislature has recessed from January 20 until February 2 to allow the many legislative committees to visit the various state institutions to secure first-hand information regarding their condition and financial needs.

In the face of already high taxes and budget requests for the next two years totalling $78,702,025 as compared with $60,446,138 for the past two years, the legislators realize that they must pare these requests considerably. They are now acquainting themselves with the various governmental institutions and activities so that they can pass judgment intelligently when voting away the public funds.

At the end of the first three weeks of the session, 54 bills and several resolutions had been introduced and were pending before committees. During this present recess many of the members are putting the finishing touches on a whole flock of proposals which will probably be dumped into the legislative hopper on Feb. 2.

A constitutional amendment to empower the legislature to draw up a new system of taxation for the state, including a state income tax, has been introduced in the House by Rep. Wilber B. Snow of Comstock. The proposed amendment would authorize the legislature to "classify real estate, personal property and income for the purpose of taxation."

Not as radical or fundamental in character, but having a much better chance of passage is the bill being fathered by Rep. Douglas Black of Twinning which would postpone the last day for paying general property taxes without penalty from January 10 to February 10. This measure passed the House two years ago, but died in the Senate committee.

As a means of coping with the chicken theft situation, Rep. Luther E. Hall of Ionia has introduced a bill to require every poultry buyer to obtain and record on blanks to be furnished by the Secretary of State, detailed information regarding each lot of poultry purchased. This information would include: date of purchase, name of seller, his or her residence, color, color of hair, eyes, height, weight, business occupation, kind of poultry purchased, the number thereof, whether such poultry was raised by such seller or purchased of others, and if purchased from others, then the name of the person from whom so purchased and the date thereof. If the poultry were delivered in a motor vehicle, the purchaser would also have to record the auto license number. This bill will undoubtedly arouse a great deal of support, as chicken stealing is reported to be on the increase in many parts of the state.

Governor Green has sent the legislature a special message in which he called their attention to the activities of John L. Lovett, general manager and lobbyist for the Michigan Manufacturers' Association. After calling attention to Mr. Lovett by name, the governor declared, "When any man is a lobbyist, no matter what position he has held or is holding he should automatically be barred from the floor. You are entitled to have your deliberations unhampered by the presence of lobbyists. If your rules are not adequate, permit me to respectfully suggest that they be made to cover this point."

Rep. Burton G. Cameron of Charlotte promptly introduced a resolution that the speaker and two representatives constitute a committee to examine and pass upon all lobbyists. However, nothing definite has been done in this regard.

The Detroit newspapers were thrown into an uproar when Sen. Peter B. Lennon, who lives near Flint, introduced a resolution to provide for a special committee of four representatives and three senators to investigate conditions in Detroit pertaining to crime, vice, the courts and the police department. The Detroit members did not take kindly to this resolution and Rep. Archie M. Reid of Detroit promptly introduced a resolution using almost the same language but providing for a legislative investigation of the crime situation in Flint, instead of Detroit.

The first public hearing by the 1927 legislature was held Jan. 19 before the Rules and Resolutions committee of the House. It related to the Barnes-Hecker mine cave-in which occurred Nov. 3 and resulted in the death of 52 miners. Rep. John Holland of Bessemer is sponsoring a resolution asking the state to make inquiry into the cause of the disaster and to prevent the mine owners from sealing the shaft before removing 42 bodies still in the mine.

While there are no new developments in connection with the proposed fifth normal, another unborn state institution is much in the lime-light. This is the proposed new tuberculosis sanatorium for which $500,000 were appropriated by the 1925 legislature. The legislative committee which had been empowered to select the site reported in favor of space on state property adjacent to the University of Michigan Hospital at Ann Arbor. While Governor Green was holding a conference with University and public health officials regarding this matter, Sen. Seymour H. Person of Lansing introduced a bill to repeal the law passed two years ago, providing for this institution and making the half million dollar appropriation.

Many of the new bills thus far introduced are highly technical in nature and are of interest to but few people. One would repeal the law passed two years ago prohibiting the killing of black deer, while another measure would forbid chiropodists from amputating a foot or toe. Another proposal which will get more newspaper publicity than votes, is Rep. Chas. Culver's bill to allow the trial judge to add to any sentence for murder, attempted murder or assault, ten to twenty strokes of the lash on the bare back, well laid on at the end of each six months imprisonment, the total not to exceed 300 strokes.

PIONEER SETTLER FOUND DEAD IN BED

Geo. A. Karr Came to Elkland Township Sixty Years Ago.

The family of George A. Karr were greatly shocked to find him dead in bed at his home on Houghton St. on Tuesday morning, Jan. 25. He had been ill with a cold a few days, but was not considered seriously ill and his sudden demise came most unexpectedly.

George A. Karr was born on Dec. 13, 1847, in the Township of Whitbay, Ont. At the age of 17, he moved with his parents to New York State where they resided two years. Feeling there were better opportunities in a new country, the Karr family came to Michigan in 1866 and settled in Elkland township, Tuscola county. Here Mr. Karr spent his remaining days with the exception of two years when he was engaged in lumbering at Evart, Mich.

Geo. Karr was united in marriage with Miss Minnie Karr in March, 1881. With his companion, he experienced the hardships of pioneer life with bravery, hewing out a comfortable home in the midst of forest surroundings. His friends speak of him as a fine neighbor and as a man worthy of trust and who exemplified by his life the teachings of the golden rule. He was a prominent member of the Bethel M. E. church for 35 years. Mr. and Mrs. Karr moved from their farm to Cass City about a year ago because of Mr. Karr's failing health.

Besides his widow, he leaves two children, Lloyd and Ruth Karr, both of Cass City, one brother, Henry Karr of Cass City, two sisters, the Misses Adeline and Edna Karr, both of Bakersfield, California, and two grandchildren. One daughter preceded her father in death.

Funeral services will be held this (Friday) afternoon at two o'clock at the M. E. church at Cass City, conducted by the pastor, Rev. I. W. Cargo. Interment will be made in Elkland cemetery.

C. H. Chesnut Named Court Commissioner

The appointment of C. H. Chesnut, junior member of the law firm of Spears and Chesnut of Vassar to the position of circuit court commissioner of Tuscola county has been announced from Lansing by Gov. Fred W. Green.

The appointment fills the vacancy made by the resignation of W. J. Spears who was elected to the position in November.

Mr. Chesnut, who is a graduate of the Detroit College of Law of the class of 1912 and who has since been practicing law in Saginaw, recently moved to Vassar and became associated with W. J. Spears with offices in the Michigan Savings Bank Building.

He was elected in November to the position of circuit court commissioner for Saginaw county and the vacancy there caused by his coming to Vassar has been filled by the appointment of Stanley R. Ostler.—Vassar Pioneer.

The state distributed $1,981,573.43 recently as the final payment of the appropriation of $6,000,000 for this purpose.

Shares of counties in this district follows: Huron, $12,715.19; Sanilac, $12,084.84; Lapeer, $11,497.77; Tuscola, $14,686.48; and St. Clair, $28,598.56.

ORGANIZED ELEVEN CHURCHES IN THUMB

Rev. Fr. Krebs, Pioneer Priest, Ministered to Scattered Catholics in Three Counties.

Rev. Fr. C. B. Krebs, formerly a priest at St. Agatha's church at Gagetown, died at the home of his niece, Miss Elizabeth Keller, at 3159 Second Boulevard, Detroit, on Friday. Mr. Krebs would be 76 years old in July and had been confined to his bed since January 5, when he was taken ill after reading mass at St. Mary's hospital, Detroit.

Fr. Krebs was born in Westphalia, Germany, in 1852, and came to America when a young man and was ordained a priest June 7, 1879. His first work was done in Gagetown, from which headquarters he ministered to the scattered Catholics in three counties. After many years in Gagetown, he left to continue his work of founding parishes in Port Huron and several other places, returning to Gagetown in 1894 and remaining until 1900.

Eleven churches are numbered among those Rev. Krebs organized and founded, or aided in that work. Among them are Imlay City, Reese, North Branch, Clifford, Bad Axe, Uby, Caseville, Sheridan, Port Huron, Pigeon and Gagetown. Fr. Krebs has been retired for two years.

Besides his niece, he has two sisters, Mrs. Keller of Covington, Ky., and Miss Gertrude Krebs of Westphalia, Germany, and a brother, Herman, also of Germany.

Funeral services were held at Gagetown Wednesday morning and the large church of St. Agatha's was filled by the friends of the pioneer clergyman. Twelve priests participated in the services.

WORLD WAR VETERAN ANSWERS SUMMONS

Clarence R. Kolb Died in Detroit after Three Months' Illness.

The funeral of Clarence R. Kolb, a World War veteran, was held at the Evangelical church on Monday afternoon. The service was conducted by Rev. C. F. Smith, pastor of the church, and was largely attended. Members of the Adams-Seeger Post, American Legion, attended in a body and served as pall bearers. The Legion, in honoring the memory of their departed comrade, were donors to his family of the beautiful flag which covered the casket.

Clarence R. Kolb was born Nov. 1, 1892, in Olive township, Clinton Co., Michigan. At the age of nine, he came to Cass City with his parents, where he made his home.

During the World War, he served for 18 months with the 338th Infantry of the 85th Division, U. S. Army, eight months of which were spent overseas.

On Sept. 12, 1923, he was united in marriage with Miss Lilah McConnell. After marriage they made their home in Royal Oak Twp. To them was born a son, Robert.

He became ill last October. Since that time he has been at the home of his sister, Mrs. W. A. Markin of Detroit, where he passed away Jan. 21, 1927.

He leaves to mourn their loss his wife, son, father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Kolb, five sisters, Mrs. Leon Ormes of St. Johns, Mich., Miss Iva Kolb of Detroit, Mich., Mrs. Chas. Kleinschmidt of Omaha, Neb., Mrs. F. H. Bruggemann of Philadelphia, Penn., Mrs. W. A. Markin of Detroit, and one brother, Harold Kolb at home. Two sisters preceded him in death.

The Joseph Bros. garment factory at Brown City is closed. Abe Joseph, manager, unable to continue the business under existing conditions, relinquished possession of the factory to the trustees of the Brown City Chamber of Commerce, which organization holds a chattel mortgage on the machinery and equipment.

Carroll Clark of Caro has again been chosen pianist for the Men's Glee Club of Alma College. At present the club is preparing a concert for its annual spring tour. Clark is also a member of the debating team and Zeta Sigma Literary Society.

Bert R. Walker, Sanilac county, drain commissioner was elected to head the State Association of Drain Commissioners at the annual meeting of the association in Muskegon last week.

A contract was made with Archie Phillips, sheriff, whereby Mr. Phillips, in lieu of fees, is to be paid an annual salary of $3,000; $1,200 for automobile livery, and $2,000 to pay for all services of all deputy sheriffs, special deputies and turnkey excepted. In lieu of locking in and locking out fees, the sheriff agrees to accept $20 per week for turnkey services. The county agrees to pay all legal and necessary expenses incurred by the sheriff in the transaction of official business outside of the county, and to pay for the services and expenses of all special deputies who may be appointed, on recommendation of the circuit judge and prosecuting attorney, for the protection of lives and property in the county. Also that the county will pay the sheriff 25 cents for each meal served to prisoners in the jail.—Lapeer Press.

A reward of $10.00 is offered by the Civic Department of the Woman's Club of Unionville to any person furnishing definite information leading to the arrest and conviction of the guilty person or persons, who removed the bulbs from the community tree in that village.

At the farm home of Henry Bolzman at Sebewaing may be seen two white owls that came down from the arctic and were shot by Mr. Bolzman's son, Mendlo. Several weeks ago Mendlo shot the first and had it mounted. Last week one evening while he was attending the chores the second swooped down on the Bolzman chicken flock and attempted to make off with a hen. Mendlo succeeded in frightening the big bird away momentarily and while it was circling to make another try for a fowl, he got his gun and winged the owl as he made the second swoop. Taking the injured bird into the house, the owl immediately began calling to the mounted specimen in a manner that seemed to bespeak the fact that it was his mate. Mendlo has had the second bird mounted. The wing spread of both birds is about 60 inches.—Blade.

Fur From Japan

An authority says that Japanese mink comes from Japan. It is a dyed fur, and naturally will not wear as well as fur that has not been dyed. In many cases, however, people who have had coats made from a good grade of this fur have been well satisfied with its wearing qualities. Before being dyed it is a pale yellowish color.

Jolt for Meat Eaters

Experiments on vegetarians and meat eaters made in the University of Brussels are said to have shown that in endurance the eaters of vegetables surpassed the eaters of meat by from 50 to 200 per cent.

GHOST STORIES
RECALL PIONEER

Trails Blazed by Solomon Jones Serve Modern Motor Tourists.

Hendersonville, N. C.—When a group of children returning from a party in this picturesque mountain town late one night recently, told a story of seeing a towering man, with long, flowing hair, beating through the brush in the vicinity of Mount Hebron, following a great razor-backed sow, whose tail he held in his left hand, while with his right hand he swung an ax from side to side, parents were not unduly alarmed.

To the parents of one of the children, natives of the Hendersonville section of the Blue Ridge country, "the ghost with the ax," recalled the story of Solomon Jones, interjection of the returned youthful celebrators revealed that the story of the mountain patriarch and the sow had been one of several related at the party during the evening, and that the "apparition" was the development of juvenile imagination.

While there are few people superstitious enough to believe that Solomon Jones' ghost haunts Mount Hebron, every old-timer in the section will agree that the spirit of the rugged mountaineer, who lived to near the century mark, is everywhere manifest in the great modern hard-surfaced highways radiating through the mountains in every direction. For Solomon Jones possesses the distinction of being the first American scenic road builder whose pursuit was so recognized. Tradition holds that his razor-backed sow, Sue, was his chief engineer.

His Winding Roads.

To those who like to romance of the past, Solomon Jones is referred to as the "trail blazer." His trails of yesterday are a state's great highways of today, and the slashing of his hatchet reverberates today through mountain gaps in the pounding of road-making machinery.

Whether it is true that when about to build a road, Solomon Jones gripped his razor-backed sow, Sue, by the tail and followed her over the mountains, hacking a trail as he went, will always be a matter of dispute before mountain firesides, but noted surveyors and civil engineers who have visited Henderson county have marveled at the fact that old Solomon's roads followed the lowest grades and found the natural gaps through the mountains, which accounts for their continuous winding—sometimes almost like a spiral stairway in their regularity.

Although Solomon Jones blazed trails as far back as the days shortly following the War of 1812 while he was still in his teens, it was about fifty years ago that he completed his first scenic road. This is the road to the lofty summit of Mount Hebron—to the tomb of the old mountaineer. It was the most popular drive taken by residents of Hendersonville and visitors in the days of horse-drawn vehicles. Automobiles even today make the summit over this road, but most of the motorists, excepting those aspiring toward hazards, prefer to stay on the wider hard-surfaced highways, the outgrowth of Solomon's idea. Among the many other roads built by Solomon Jones was Jones' Gap, named for him, which leads to Caesar's Head in the Carolinas. This was constructed long before the Civil war and for more than sixty years was used by Jones and his heirs as a toll road.

Father of Twelve Children.

The road-maker was well termed the "grand old man of the mountains." He was, indeed, a patriarch. Standing six feet two inches tall and weighing 200 pounds and gifted with keen intellect, he was a man who commanded the respect of all who knew him. The father of twelve children, ten sons and two daughters, he was credited with adopting and bringing up seven other orphan children left to his care. He was ninety-seven years of age when death claimed him.

Solomon Jones, because of his large family, which he wished see well educated, turned naturally to schools. He was one of the pioneers in educational work, stumping western North Carolina in an effort to get the present public school system established. He thus early recognized the fact that if the mountain farmer was to improve his condition, it would be through the combination of good schools and roads.

Porcupine and Magpie

Ruin Wyoming Crops

Cheyenne, Wyo.—The porcupine and the magpie have been playing havoc in Wyoming.

The winter food of porcupines is largely the bark and cambium layers of trees. The trees often are girdled and Albert M. Day, state leader of rodent control, says dead trees are evidence of the damage in all the forests. On a ranch in Campbell county the porcupines have damaged the timber and killed nearly all of the native wild fruits. Poison is placed in their dens.

The magpie not only robs the nests of other birds and kills young chickens and turkeys, but pecks holes in the hides of cattle and sheep. Approximately 1,500 pounds of poisoned ground beef has been used this year in getting rid of the bird.

A few Eggs cost a lot—
A lot of Eggs cost little

IT doesn't cost those who are feeding their hens Purina Poultry Chows one single penny more to get eggs. It actually costs less! That's because it costs a lot to get a few eggs. Poor layers eat almost as much feed as heavy layers. The only kind of feed that really costs little is the feed that makes lots of extra eggs.

Give your hens Purina Poultry Chows, for you will be taking no chances. An egg record card, which we will furnish you free, will aid you to check up that Purina Chows make a lot more eggs at less cost.

Folkert's Basement Store

During the last month we have been doing a great deal of remodeling. We have redecorated our entire store, put in some new fixtures, and have done a regular house cleaning. Among the things that we have done is fixing up our basement for a store. This basement was always used for a store room before, but the idea came to us that what Cass City needed was a real store featuring popular priced merchandise and we are going to do our best, and in this basement you will find Dishes, Glassware, Enamelware, Aluminumware, Tinware, Kitchen Hardware, Shelf Hardware and Dry Goods. Our prices will be the lowest in this territory.

Seven reasons why we can sell the same goods for less money

1. We sell for cash.
2. We have no delivery.
3. Doing a large business, we can buy in quantity and get lower prices
4. Paying cash for our goods we get better discounts.
5. Three stores in one—with one overhead.
6. We own our building; have no rents to pay.
7. Once in a while I am able to buy out another store, and when I do, I buy them at about half price. A short time ago, I bought a stock at Ypsilanti at half price, and this merchandise now goes on sale at 40 to 60 cents on the dollar. So do not be surprised when you see $1.00 articles marked at 40c or 49c, because we bought them accordingly.

We do not insult you, by claiming that every price is less than you can get elsewhere, but we do claim that, taking our lines from one end to the other, is enough lower than "market" so that any general bill of goods, you will average an important saving.

Test our claim.

CLERK MARRIED 85,000 COUPLES

Berlin-Mackay and Salm-Rogers Among Weddings Performed by Official.

New York.—J. J. McCormick, deputy city clerk, who has in the opinion of confirmed optimists conferred more happiness on humanity than any other man in the world, celebrated his fifty-seventh birthday by following his accustomed pursuit of uniting couples in matrimony in the city marriage chapel. Mr. McCormick has married more than 85,000 couples during the five and a half years in which he has presided over the marriage chapel.

When asked whether he regarded his record creditable or otherwise he replied firmly:

"I am not ashamed of anything I have ever done."

Mr. McCormick professed to an absolute lack of bias on the subject of brides.

All Brides Look Alike.

"All brides look alike to me," he said. "I have seen so many of them that I no longer regard them with any attention. They all look like a mass of feathers."

Despite this apparent lack of romantic feeling, however, he sturdily defended his belief that most marriages are brought about by true love.

"I see little difference in the couples that come before me," he said. "Whether they are rich or poor, young or old, black or white, they seem to be really anxious to get married, and that's all there is about it. I don't believe the young ones have any more chance of being happy than the older couples."

Mr. McCormick begins marrying people every morning promptly at ten o'clock and continues his particular kind of labor of love until four in the afternoon, taking only a brief time for luncheon. If he were a "two-hour for luncheon" man, it is estimated that 5,508 couples would have been prevented from marrying during the last five and a half years.

He has reduced marrying to a fine art and is regarded as the most efficient marrier in the world. He can unite any couple in just a minute and a half. On his high record day he married 112 couples. The flood tide of matrimony comes in June, he has found, and Saturday morning is the big time of any week.

The most talked-of marriage which Mr. McCormick could recall having performed was that of Irving Berlin and Miss Ellen Mackay.

"I did not know who they were," he said. "I did not know anything about it. I was just going out to lunch when one of the other fellows in the office said: 'There's a couple'd like to be married right off. Could you do it before you go out?' 'Sure,' I said, and in they came. Afterward I found out it was quite an occasion."

Count Ludwig Salm Hoogstraeten and Miss Millcent Rogers also availed themselves of Mr. McCormick's kind offices when they contracted marriage, the difficulties of which have since been press agitated around the world. The list of other notables at whose marriage he has officiated was too long for him to give.

Contrast in Weddings.

Sometimes the would-be bride and bridegroom and their attendants are beautifully dressed, carrying bouquets of orchids or lilies of the valley as large as their smiles. And sometimes they are so poor that the $4 needed for the license and marriage fees seems a fortune.

In fact, there are occasions, said Mr. McCormick, when a couple who didn't suspect that $4 is the cost of matrimony of the municipal brand, are faced with the calamitous discovery that they haven't enough funds between them to carry on.

This happened with one wedding party whose exchequer supplied the $2 required for the license, but fell 50 cents short on the marriage fee. The aggregate fortune of bride, bridegroom, and two attendants was $3.50.

Nothing dismayed, the bridegroom asked that the ceremony be postponed a few minutes while he sought his banker outside the municipal building. His bride and the best man and bridesmaid waited in the anteroom while Mr. McCormick proceeded with the wedding of more richly dowered couples.

Presently the bridegroom returned triumphant.

"I've got it," he announced, presenting the missing half dollar. "I hocked the wedding ring."

CHAPTER VII

Of all the people gathered in the house that evening Anne had been the most silent. Her ravaged face, the contours broken by gray hollows, hearing the stamp of shock and horror, had been unnoticed among the other faces. Now and then a pitying glance had been directed to her, grief as Sybil's friend must have added a last unbearable poignancy to the tragedy.

After her question to Flora her mind had seemed to blur and cease to function. She had run from the house not knowing what she did, gone hither and thither with the others, looking, speaking, listening in a blind daze. It was not till they returned to the living room that her faculties began to clear and co-ordinate.

Her thoughts circled round the image of Joe as she had last seen him—the vision of him as someone strange and sinister. And the boat—the boat with only Gabriel in it—it kept coming up like a picture revolving on a wheel—going and returning, going and returning. Had he stayed, and what for? That question revolved with the picture of the boat.

She thought of telling Bassett and gave that up—with the police expected she could not get him alone, and why add to his burden with her suspicions? Yes, that was what it was—nothing but a suspicion. She had no certainty; Joe might have been in the boat, Joe might have got off the island some other way. Tomorrow something might come to light that would make these hideous fancies seem like the dreams of delirium. That was the state of mind she tried to maintain when she went upstairs and overheard a man was on guard at the causeway.

With that knowledge her outlook changed. Her passive role was over. If Joe had done it and if he was on the island he would try to get off at low tide. It was safe to assume that he was outside, hidden till the causeway was open. To go out to find him would be useless, he would never reveal himself to her, and if she was seen suspicion would instantly be aroused. She must get somewhere that would command the causeway and its approaches. The best place—the only place—was the living room entrance. From there she could see in all directions, the balcony end, the kitchen wing, the pine grove. She would try to wave him back, possibly get to him—she had to take her chances and trust to Heaven.

The tide was at full ebb at midnight. At a quarter before she made ready. She took from the bureau a book she had been reading—if she met anyone she could say she had come down to find it—and opened her door with the stealth of a burglar. A dead silence reigned as she stole down the stairs and into the living room.

At the entrance, pressed against the door, she looked out. It was a world of white enchantment, breathlessly still. She could see the patterned surfaces of leaves, the cracks and fissures of the rocks. Below, the channel lay almost bare, pools glistening like dropped mirrors, mounds of mud casting inky shadows.

She could hear the murmur of the men's voices from the open library windows, and like the throbbing of a muffled engine, the beating of her own heart.

Into that deep enveloping quietude came a sound, so faint, so infinitely small and hushed, that only expectant ears could have caught it. It came from the room behind her, and turning, she slid back against the wall, her body black against its blackness. The sound continued, the opening of a door opposite, the door into the kitchen wing. It seemed no door in the world had ever opened so slowly—creaking, stopping, resuming, dying away. She could see nothing, for the darkness of the gallery lay impenetrable over that furtive entrance.

There was a footstep, light as the fall of a leaf, and she saw him coming toward her in that high luminous pallor from the windows. He was like a shadow, so evenly dark, a shape without detail, moving with a shadow's noiseless passage. She saw the outline of the cap on his head and that he carried his shoes in one hand.

She came forward with a hand raised for caution, sending her voice before her in an agonized whisper: "Go back, Joe. The causeway's watched. You can't get over that way. Go!"

He was gone, a fleet flying, vanishing back into the darkness under the gallery. Out of it came the soft closing of the door.

The room swayed, pale light and darkness swam and coalesced. She knew she was near a table and put out her hand to steady herself by it, something solid to hold to for one minute. The polished surface slid under her fingers and she groped out with the hand that held the book. The book slipped from her clasp, fell with a thud like a thunderclap, and a grasping snatch to save it swept a lamp crashing to the floor. Panic expelled her faintness and she made a rush for the door. She had gained it. Her fingers clutched round the knob, as she heard the steps of the men in the hall and knew it was too late to escape.

They burst in, thrust into the room's dim quiet as if shot by a blast. "It's nothing," she called, hearing her voice thin and hoarse. "Nothing's happened. It's only Anne Tracy."

The lights leaped out and she saw them, Bassett with his hand on the electric button, stricken still, looking this way and that. His eye found her first, backed against the door, a small green-clad figure with an ashen face. "What's this mean?" said Rawson. "Nothing." She was afraid the handle would rattle with the shaking of her hand so let it go. "I upset the lamp in the dark. I didn't see it, that's all."

"What are you doing here?" "I came down to get my book. I forgot, and left it when I went upstairs."

She could get her breath now and her voice was under control. She felt strength oozing back into her body and with it courage.

"You're as white as a sheet," Williams blurted out. "Did something frighten you?" demanded Bassett.

"No, but a sort of faintness came over me, there by the table, and I grabbed at it and upset the lamp." Rawson looked at the table with the shattered fragments of the lamp beside it. It was not far from the entrance door.

"Did you see anything—anything outside?" "No, not a thing and I didn't hear a sound."

"What do you suppose made you feel faint?"

"Oh!" She dared to make a gesture, upraised hands that dropped limply. "Hasn't there been enough here to make anybody faint?" "You've got to remember, Rawson," said Bassett who thought the man's insistence unnecessary, "what a shock this has been—especially to Miss Tracy who was Miss Saunders' friend."

"I remember." Then to Anne: "Miss Tracy, if you should withhold any information from us you'd get yourself into a very uncomfortable position."

"I wouldn't, I wouldn't," she breathed.

Rawson's glance remained on her, dubiously intent. Bassett noted it with a resentment he found it difficult to hide.

"You can absolutely rely on Miss Tracy," he said. "She would be perfectly frank with you if she had anything to tell."

"No doubt, no doubt," said the other, and walked to the entrance. "I'm going out to have a look around." On the sill he turned and addressed Anne. "I gave some instructions to you ladies and I expected to have them followed. You'll please remember them in the future."

He passed out into the brilliancy of the moonlight. Now that he was gone Bassett felt he must make her understand. He had been astonished at what she had done. It was so unlike her, a disobedience of orders at such a time as this.

"You must do what they tell you, Anne. They have to make these rules and it's up to us to keep them."

"I will now, you can trust me. Mr. Williams, you can see how it was. I couldn't sleep and my mind was full of this awful thing, and I thought if I could put it on something else—get free from my thoughts even for a few moments!"

Williams granted his comprehension. He felt rather tenderly toward her, she looked so small and wan and her voice was so pleading.

"Where was your book?" he asked. "On the table behind you. I was feeling round for it and I think I pushed it off with the lamp."

"What was the name of it?" "Victory," by Joseph Conrad." He went to the table. His back turned, she and Bassett exchanged a long look. Williams picked up the book and came back with it.

"Here it is," he said, giving it to her. "And just make a note of the fact that you're not to go round the house at night after books or anything else."

She assured him she would not, she would give them no more trouble, and opening the door she slipped away. They remained without speaking till she came out on the gallery and walked to her room.

"Well," said Williams, "her book was there."

Bassett stared at him: "Was there? Why shouldn't it be? Good God! You have any idea she was lying? If you have, get it out of your head. I've known Miss Tracy for three years and she could no more say what wasn't true than—well, she couldn't, that's all."

"I don't think she did. It sounded to me a perfectly straight story."

"It was. You can take my word for that."

They were back in the library when Rawson reappeared with Shine. Shine, unable to sleep, had been sitting by his window when Rawson, scouting, had stopped to inquire if he had seen anyone. Shine had not, but had volunteered to join in a hunt and the two had been about the house and the immediate vicinity. Nothing had been discovered and Patrick had seen no sign of life or heard no sound. Now they had come back for the electric torch and were going to extend their search. A person concealed on the seaward side of the island might be moving at this hour when the causeway was free. Bassett said he would go with them and the three men left the room by one of the long windows.

Williams opened the library door and turned off the lights. The noise of the departing trio would suggest to anyone on the watch that the house was free of police supervision and there might be developments. He took the desk chair as easier to rise from than the deep-seated leather ones and settled himself to a resume of what they had so far gathered.

He was convinced of Mrs. Stokes' guilt and ran over the reasons. A hysterical woman, frantic with jealousy—that alone was enough. But that woman had been the only member of the party who at the time of the shooting had been some distance from the house. She had taken the pistol with the intention of using it if an occasion offered. The occasion had offered. Miss Saunders, unable to resist the beauty of the evening, had gone to the Point alone. He set no store by Rawson's opinion that the woman's state of mind was too genuinely distracted. He considered it as part of a premeditated plan carried through with nerve and skill. She would have known that the report of the pistol would have been heard at the house. This, when Miss Saunders did not return, would have suggested foul play. And she, Mrs. Stokes, was the only person out on the island. A later entrance, with an assumption of ignorance, would have turned suspicion on her like a pointing finger. She was too intelligent for that.

It was at this juncture that he suddenly cocked his head and let his hands drop softly to the arms of the chair. From the stairs outside came a faint creak, a pause and then again, step by step a bare or stockinged foot in gradual descent.

The big man arose as noiselessly as he could and made for the hall. But his bulk and his boots were not adapted to rapid movements or silent surprise. As he reached the hall he heard the pattering flight of light feet and cursed under his breath as he felt for the electric button. Her room—the one he had seen Miss Pinkney put her in—was just beyond the stair-head to the right. And her husband's—he turned and faced the secretive panels of its closed door.

Williams dropped his head and trod thoughtfully back to the library, but this time he left the hall lights on. Also he lit the library ones and allowed himself the solace of a cigar. "She won't try that again tonight," he said to himself and dropped into an easy chair.

Then Stokes must know. They had had opportunity for private conference in that hour after the murder when the others were out of the house. She had either told him or he had accused her; for all they knew he might have seen her do it. Anyway she wanted to get speech with him and it might be support, counsel, the matching up of their stories—but whatever it was she must have been in dire straits to take such a risk.

Williams smoked on, comfortably sprawled in the deep chair, thinking out a line of attack on the Stokeses.

The spectacular success of the Pontiac Six is as simple as A-B-C. When introduced it was a car such as no one had ever seen before—a six developed by General Motors, manufactured by Oakland and offering, at $825, qualities of performance, comfort, beauty, economy and reliability entirely new in the field of low cost sixes. Yet revolutionary as it then was, the Pontiac Six is even farther in advance of its field today. For not only is it still the lowest priced six with Body by Fisher—not only is its power plant still the largest used in any six selling up to $1000—but the fundamental rightness of its entire design has been proved by actual service in the hands of over 60,000 owners!

Pontiac Six, $825 to $975. Oakland Six, companion to Pontiac Six, $1025 to $1295. All prices at factory. Bodies by Fisher. Easy to pay on the liberal General Motors Time Payment Plan.

PRISON END TO AMAZING FRAUD

Seven Years Meted Out to $20,000,000 Swindler of Toronto Bankers.

Toronto, Ont.—Found guilty on 15 counts of forgery, Percy D. Ham, one of the socially elegant of Toronto, was sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary. So closes one of the most amazing frauds in the history of finance in Canada.

Ham, a quiet, unassuming young gentleman of artistic tastes, was a junior clerk in a government office. With this modest background and with no financial capital, he launched a scheme of operations of staggering proportions. In a period of about two years he negotiated sales and purchases of bonds amounting, according to the court records, to more than $20,000,000.

Ham, a quiet, unassuming young gentleman of the maze of purchases and sales without a 5-cent piece for himself, although losses sustained by brokers and friends as far as they were traced, amounted to $648,000.

Ham had been a precocious child. To satisfy an adventurous longing, counsel said, the young clerk had launched out in the hope of demonstrating that he was not the insignificant clerk he in reality was.

Credulity of Victims Amazing.

The credulity with which his campaign was accepted by a hard-headed financial world was one of the most amazing features of the case. Bond purchases, running as they did into millions a month, must inevitably attract attention in a market as small as this one. Instead of being regarded with suspicion, Ham commanded respect. Pop-eyed fictions sprang up, crediting him with being the agent of governments and of financial syndicates planning far-reaching coups.

Ham began his operations on a small and evidently experimental basis. His first purchase was of only a few thousand dollars of government bonds—practically all his transactions were in government bonds. His capital did not exceed a few thousand cents, but he negotiated the purchase this way: Ham said he was acting for an out-of-town friend, and gave his personal check, to be held by the brokers until the bonds were delivered to his friend, who would immediately advance payment. Though bonds are sold "cash on delivery," Ham's proposal was accepted. The credit of his check for the few days requested was accepted by brokers who knew him, or his father, or his friends. Ham covered the transaction within the time specified by reselling the bonds through another firm.

Financial Pyramid Erected.

The operation was repeated over and over again on an ever-increasing scale.

After each transaction Ham came to be regarded as an even more desirable client. But there was never any profit for Ham. Every transaction showed a loss of at least the two commissions for buying and selling, and often a fractional loss in addition in the market price; the weight of the offerings being sufficient to depress the price on a narrow market.

There is no evidence that Ham at any time attempted to use his credit or the securities which were temporarily in his possession for speculating purposes. Playing the market for an advance or a decline did not seem to fall within his scheme of things. Neither is there any evidence that he planned at any time to abscond, although in the later phases of his adventure he must have been in possession of enormous quantities of negotiable securities.

Resorts to Forgery.

These difficulties he met by forgery, selecting two prominent citizens—one John Gleeson, an Ottawa capitalist, and Rev. William Beattie, a London clergyman with wealthy relatives—and attaching their names to a series of notes, which he used as collateral. He stated that these gentlemen had selected him as their confidential agent, Beattie, he said, was under special obligation to him for having saved his young son from drowning. He insisted that the nature of their plans was such that the men must remain in the background and that they could not be communicated with directly. In one case, under pressure, he produced a letter, with Gleeson's name forged, to substantiate the note. Five notes, totaling $500,000, purporting to have been signed by Gleeson and Beattie, were produced and used by Ham. These he used in two ways. He deposited them with brokers as collateral. But the cruelest feature of his operations was when he used these notes to secure advances of cash and securities from private individuals. The individuals were friends of his or of his family. In case of one lady, a widow, he secured advances amounting to $200,000, which represented most of her capital. In some cases he secured advances with only his personal security and on promises of large returns in interest.

Exposure of the Fraud.

Exposure came when one broker communicated directly with Gleeson, the supposed backer of huge transactions. Like a bombshell it developed that Gleeson knew nothing of Ham and had signed no note.

Ham was summoned to the office of one of the largest bond houses in Toronto and given the third degree. He still insisted that he could make good his commitments and was given a few hours to do so. That afternoon he was discovered in the kitchen of his home, with the gas turned on and suffering from asphyxiation, which a short sojourn in the hospital cleared up.

When the $245,000 that was lost went to was not satisfactorily divulged by the trial. A substantial sum went to brokers as commissions.

Hunter Uses Bow and

Arrow After Big Game

Corvallis, Ore.—Prof. B. G. Thompson of the Oregon Agricultural college started his archery hunting on squirrels, rabbits and other small game, but now he is looking for the largest game to be found in the state, and if there were lions and tigers here, he would probably set out to get one of them.

This year's bag includes a bear and a deer. He wanted to get a deer last year, he said, but was afraid he would fail, so he took along a rifle. He used the rifle and brought in two bucks. This year, however, he left his gun at home, determined to bag a buck with an arrow.

He shot at two, then brought down his third at 65 yards with his six-foot English longbow. The arrow, 23 inches long, feathered with turkey feathers and tipped with a two-inch steel blade, struck the deer's knee and glanced into its stomach, penetrating several inches. The big buck ran about 50 feet and dropped dead. The bow requires about 75 pounds pull.

The bear was even easier to bag than the deer, Thompson said, because he was not active. Thompson declares that if everybody used arrows in their hunting there would be plenty of game in the state.

Girl Must Go to High

Court to Get Diploma

Eureka, Kans.—Kathleen Ryan, who fought and won a case against the Eureka school board for her high school diploma, will have to fight the case to the highest court in Kansas. The board, at a special meeting here, decided to appeal to the state supreme court, after losing the case in the district court.

Miss Ryan, a high school student, was charged with "cheating" in a high school examination in history and refused credit for her work. She was not allowed to graduate with her class. She denied the charges and was given another and more strict examination. This she passed with flying honors. Still the school authorities refused to give her the coveted honor.

Through her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Ryan, the girl appealed to the district court. Judge Benson, before whom the case was tried, heard testimony and decided that in view of the fact that the girl passed the second examination, she was entitled to credit and her diploma.

Now the school board has voted to file an appeal.

Take Fingerprints of Dead Veteran in Church

Winchester, Va.—An unusual incident occurred recently in connection with the funeral of Miles W. McKay, an ex-serviceman and animal trainer of Quincy, Ill., when the casket was opened in Christ Episcopal church and his fingerprints taken by legionnaires in order to safeguard the man's compensation and war risk insurance, as required by the veterans' bureau.

It had been overlooked until the body was taken into the church. McKay was taken ill of heart disease. Being an utter stranger here, there was no relative or friend at the last rites, but legionnaires, who, hearing he was an ex-serviceman, turned out and gave him a regular military funeral and burial in the national cemetery here.

Wrecks "Scandal" Set for Safety of Radio

Tempe, Texas.—A radio set which its inventor claims readily tunes in on all the neighborhood gossip has been dismantled because of fear of possible prosecution for revealing family secrets.

Its discovery is claimed by Buford Young, Texas farmer, who attempted to build a three-tube set. When he tested his apparatus he declared he could listen in on conversations in nearby homes. When newspaper men demanded a test he told them to return later and he would demonstrate. In the meantime he has taken it to pieces, as he fears it "is too good to be legal."

Young said he apparently wound the coil the wrong way. He was unable to pick up any station and was rearranging the parts when a neighbor's voice was heard to say, "Will Broach's mule is out."

Young said he stopped his experimenting and verified the statement. He then assembled some friends, who steadfastly maintain that Young conducted a series of successful tests.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Mr. and Mrs. Silas Norton and Adeline Wager of Elkton were callers at the H. R. Wager home Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. J. D. Brooker returned Saturday from a two weeks' visit with friends and relatives in Grand Rapids and Lansing.

R. N. McCullough reports the sale of the Edd. Knoblet place, corner of Oak and Third St. to Mr. and Mrs. Homer Silvernail for $2,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Hazen Patterson and son, Stewart, of Pontiac came Friday evening to spend several days with Mr. Patterson's mother, Mrs. Anna Patterson, and with other relatives near Cass City.

John A. Sandham had the misfortune to step on a piece of loose ice Saturday, causing him to fall in such a way as to receive a compound fracture of the left arm, breaking both bones completely.

Word was received last week that Mrs. Clarence Houghton of Detroit had fallen on the ice and broken a small bone in the wrist of her right arm and had also injured her back. The last report was that she was able to sit up.

Mr. and Mrs. George Marchon and daughter, Harriett, motored to Saginaw Saturday to visit Mrs. Marchon's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Heckathorn. Mr. and Mrs. Marchon returned to Cass City Sunday. Miss Harriett remained to spend the week there.

A family reunion was enjoyed Sunday when Mr. and Mrs. Dan Delong entertained for dinner Mr. and Mrs. Levi Delong, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Reagh and son, Ronald, all of Cass City. Mr. and Mrs. John Dickinson and son, Jack, of Bad Axe, and Lyle DeLong of Deckerville.

'Twin boys, William Dean and Oscar Allen, were born Friday, January 21, to Mr. and Mrs. Karl Jekel of Pueblo, Colorado. Mrs. Jekel is better known to her Cass City friends as Leone Heller. Mrs. Jekel is seriously ill in a hospital at Pueblo. Her mother, Mrs. Wm. Heller, is with her.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE THUMB POTATO SHOW

The Thumb of Michigan Potato Show just held their annual meeting at the show room at Mayville. Officers elected for the ensuing year were as follows:—President, Leo Blackburn, of Mayville; vice president, Thomas Valentine of Fostoria; secretary, Ernest Haas, of Mayville; and treasurer, August Fink of Mayville.

Directors elected for Tuscola county were M. C. Mount, Mort Kitchen, Charles Frenzel and Edward Duncan of Mayville, also Stanley Stokes of Kingston, Frank Koch of Millington and Roy Henry of Caro.

Lapeer county directors were Wilber Maudsley, T. B. Lions and Frank Willets of Mayville, also Earl Fulsom of North Branch and Norman Goodrich of Lapeer.

Huron county directors were A. C. Bredow and Matt Holz, both of Bad Axe.

Directors for St. Clair, Saginaw and Sanilac were Louis Schroeppel of St. Clair, Alfred Schreuer, Frankmuth and Oscar Buschlin of Snover. The directors report showed a very healthy condition for the organization showing that all expenses and premiums had been paid and a small balance left. The total expenses of the show this past year were $765.00.

H. C. McCrary, potato specialist from the Michigan State College gave a discussion on "Quality Potatoes" stating that Michigan was slowly regaining their position on the market as a shipper of good potatoes but that the growers and shippers needed to be extremely careful since just this market year showed one other state receiving an average of fifty cents per bag more than was paid for Michigan potatoes. Close attention to seed handling and grading in McCrary's opinion, would tend to correct this price difference.

Clean Before Painting

Surfaces which are to be painted must be clean and dry. Dust must be brushed or washed off and grease, whitewash and water paints must be removed.
