corn borer quarantined area to points outside is prohibited by state and federal regulations, unless the consignment is accompanied by a certificate of inspection, according to advises being sent out by the Michigan department of agriculture. Corn on the cob will not be certified for shipment.

Application for inspection should be made to C. O. Larabee, 120 East Sibley St., Howell; or to the State Department of Agriculture, at Lansing. Transportation agencies have been advised of the embargo and will not accept corn for shipment unless it has been certified.

Shipments of shelled corn very often contain pieces of cobs and other corn remnants within which the borer spends the winter and early spring. After May 1, the borer moths emerge. Such a shipment of corn, if permitted, would result in an infestation in a virgin territory.

Farmers who have seed for sale destined to points outside the quarantined area are warned by the Department not to include ears of corn in the package. This is often done to show the buyer the type of ear to be expected from the seed corn, and if

At this meeting the whole situation was reviewed and it was agreed that the general property tax for state purposes for the coming year might be increased to a maximum of $22,000,-000, in order to wine out this inherit ed deficit. Last year the state property tax was $17,800,000.

In connection with highway finance, a most interesting development was the introduction by Sen. Geo. Leland of Fennville of a bill to increase the gas tax to 3 cents and distribute enough of the revenue back to the counties so that taken with the $6,-000,000 which they now receive, it would equal a full 50 per cent of the weight tax receipts. The House Committee on Roads and Bridges reported out Rep. Cameron's bill with amendments so that it is practically identical with Senator Lennon's proposal.

Tragedy of Calvary 📆 Challenge[®]

At Easter we face the challenge of the Cross.

There is no fact in all the Christian story which is at the same time so inspiring and so disquieting as the fact of Calvary. We cannot come within vision of the little hill that lay beyond the wall of Jerusalem and fail to feel our hearts strongly uplifted and profoundly disturbed. It is the scene of supreme love for humanity, of unfaltering loyalty to God. In the former aspect it brings to us hope and consolation; in the latter it challenges us to examine the nature of our faith and the manner of its exercise. Looking at the universe from the standpoint of the Cross we discover the tremendous truth that back of all phenomena is love. No matter how much of surface contradiction there may be: no matter how many things appear in the history of the race, in the facts displayed by science, in the experience of the individual, which run counter to love, Calvary, if it has any meaning at all, means that the ultimate, controlling fact is love.

God is love—that is what the Cross means. And if the ultimate significance of life and the universe is God, then love is the supreme motive and power, which, in the end, must explain all, must reconcile all, must restore everywhere and in all life the harmony and happiness which our failure to understand and to believe this truth have lost to us for a time.

Faith's Foundation. When faith lays hold upon this fact it gets solid ground beneath its feet. Nor can it be easily confounded by appearances. It has learned that the contradictions of appearance are due to the incompleteness of vision when life is regarded from any other standpoint than that of Calvary. Only at of the little hill, can we see things in their completeness. We must keep to the Temple authorities, by a small men unto me!"

coming back to it for a renewed realigation of the truth that when life is viewed steadily and as a whole, from this focal point of God's purpose, love is seen to be the heart of it.

But when faith finds the comfort of this fact it faces, also, the challenge which lies in it.

The practical significance of the fact rests in the response which faith makes to it. The fact must be acted

We derive no benefit from the universal atmosphere if we do not breathe it into our lungs. A man with nostrils stopped and mouth closed, dying of suffocation, does not disprove the existence of air. He proves only his own folly in failing to appropriate the essential element abundantly provided for his life. If the room becomes stifling and respiration difficult we throw open the window, acting upon our faith that God's supply of air is ample.

God's Love All Powerful. Calvary is a challenge to faith to preme force in the raiverse—to dare all things and to suffer all things in unhesitating reliance upon the certainty and sufficiency of God's love to conquer where every other power fails.

Jesus, as He turned His steps toward Jerusalem, faced the apparent collapse of His mission. If men were to judge by the surface indications, by the part picture which was visible to them-the picture of Jesus standing alone in the grip of His enemies; Jesus with the organized prejudice of hierarchical Judaism against Him; Jesus with the might of imperial Rome against Him; Jesus without a human friend who had the courage to stand by Him-men could only say that this was catastrophe and defeat. So judging, Jesus Himself could not have felt otherwise.

The failure of religion to conquer the world in the name of Jesus is judged truly. chiefly due to the fact that, too often. When will Christians answer the strength. They are found at the bedsides of pain, in the hospitals and the rooms of the shut-ins. They are held in the hand and cherished in the heart. But they are in the gardens also, or in the windows of homes and held in crystal vases. They are regnant and royal and sweet, according to the particular type of lily. The rose will have its day after awhile, and it will be a long summer day. But at Easter the lily has sway.

And yet how wise and commonsensical it all sounds, and how often men who count themselves His followers have shaped their service of Him by just such considerations as these. Gail Sharp was born in Kingston township, 1½ miles east and one mile south of Deford on May 23, 1898. There she spent her girlhood days with her parents. At the age of 14 years, she moved with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Sharp, to their new home in Deford. She was a high school student and also attended the Ypsilanti Normal. She taught school here for nine successive years.

She was united in marriage to Henry Zemke on Dec. 30, 1922, and on April 27, 1923, her mother, Mrs. Belle Sharp, was laid to rest in the Novesta cemetery. At that time, they sold their home and moved back to the farm and on May 13, 1924, she laid her father to rest.

On Saturday, April 9, Mrs. Zemke passed away at the Samaritan hospital in Bay City after a serious illness of nine days, and following an operation. She leaves to mourn her loss a kind and devoted husband, Henry Zemke. Funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon at the Deford church, Rev. Scott officiating, and she was laid to rest beside her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Sharp, in the Novesta cemetery. Her companion has the deepest sympathy of the entire community in his bereavement.

"More Milk with More Cow Left at the End of the Year " Milkmaker, a Public Formulā Rātion, Builds for the Future

THE important part that Milkmaker plays in Michigan dairying is probably best set forth in the claims made by hundreds of Michigan's leading dairymen who have used Milkmaker continuously for one or more years. These dairymen tell us that they have secured the following results by the use of Milkmaker, Cows have kept up in better flesh and better physical condition.

2. Cows have maintained a larger and more Calves better developed and stronger at

4. Freedom from trouble with cows at calving time; no retained afterbirth and no udder trouble. The strongest advocates of course are those dairymen who have used Milkmaker continuously since it came on the market in 1922.

Buying a Better Herd These men have realized that in buying and using Milkmaker they are assuring themselves of a better herd of cows two or three years hence.

In buying a bag of dairy feed you do not buy the feed for the feed itself, but for the ultimate results obtained. The results to be obtained are not necessarily determined by the price of the feed. The real value of the feed is determined by the per cent of digestible protein and digestible nutrients, both of which determine results.

A common phrase among users of Milkmaker is "More milk with more cow

Eskimo Religion

The Eskimos in Greenland and Lab rador are, with few exceptions, nom inally Christians. The native religion is a vague animism and consists of a belief in good and evil spirits, line ited each to its own sphere, and in heaven and hell. A childish faith is placed in native wizards, who are regarded as intermediaries between mankind and the spirit-powers. Worship of the whale-spirit is prevalent

ASTER has always been the time of budding romance. In all ages numerous festivals have offered opportunities for the swains to press their suits upon the ladies of their choice. There was the "sugar cupping" to which only the unmarried came. The youths and maidens, armed with a cup and sugar or honey, came to the flower-decked well, and dipping the sugared cup into the well murmured an incantation to the spirit that dwelt there, and then drank the water. The incantation is a secret, but it is believed that the object was to make a wish, and promise allegiance to the spirit, if the wish were fulfilled.

It has long been considered a necessity, on Easter day, to wear something new; otherwise the rooks, envious of human finery, might cause your best clothes to tear. To avoid this the young people of European villages go to the market to buy a small article of wearing apparel. The custom of giving presents, especially gloves, is common in New England. In France the custom of wearing something new prevails to such an extent that every woman considers herself very ill treated indeed if she has not a new cap to wear on Good Friday, and a new hat to wear on Easter Sunday. As a consequence, these days are called the feast of caps and the feast of On the continent of Europe there are numerous parades, aftended by great pomp and splendor. In comparatively recent times the nobleman of the district, accompanied by his suite, rode in state through the town scattering coins pell mell, the peasants standing by, loudly applauding such splendor. In Spain there is the custom of the Easter king, who, wearing a tin crown and flourishing a kitchen spit as a scepter, furnishes a ribald counterpart of the English Lord of Good Friday in the Argyle M. E. Misrule. There is also an ostentatious church at 1:00 p. m. Special singing. hanging and burning of a stuffed figure of Judas. Biblical Story of the Resurrection

And behold there was a great earthquake, for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven and came and rolled back the stone from the door and sat upon it.

His countenance was like lightning and his raiment white as snow. And for fear of him the keepers did shake and become as dead men.

And the angel answered and said unto the women, Fear ye not, for !

He said. Come, see the place where the Lord lav.

And go quickly and tell His disciples that He is risen from the dead, and, behold, He goeth before you into Galilee; and there shall ye see Him; lo, I have told you.

And they departed quickly from the sepulcher with fear and great joy; and did run to bring His disciples word.

And as they went to tell His disciples, behold, Jesus met them, saying, All hail. And they came, and held Him by the feet, and worshiped Him. Then said Jesus unto them, Be not

GLADYS. HER ACTOR HUSBAND

By MARY PARRISH

(Copyright by W. G. Chapman.)

T WAS a terrible scandal in Glenwood, the fashionable New York winter resort. What made it so very terrible was the fact that it happened in the most exclusive set in the millionaire colony, and of course got into all the papers with all the Gladys, only daughter of the aristocratic Benthams, had eloped with an actor. Papa Bentham issued a decree to the effect that Gladys might return and be forgiven if she came alone, but never did he wish to set eyes on the miserable coward who had lured her away, and no doubt had an eye on the Bentham money when he laid his plans. Gladys wrote in reply that her husband was not a coward, that he hadn't "lured" her, and that he had not had any "plans" as to her father's money, that he was quite able to support her, that he was the dearest fellow in the world, she loved him, and was very happy, but wanted very much to see him and "mommy," and hoped to be forgiven. But Richard Bentham was obdurate and inflexible in his decision. His wife, who all her life had found it best to agree with her masterful husband, indorsed his decision. In fact her ambitious plans to marry her daughter to a titled foreigner having been so summarily set at nought she was perhaps the more bitter of the

It had all come about in this way Gladys in a shopping trip to New York had met Vane Hillary at the home of a friend. He had come from California with a letter of introduction to Mary Weed, and having the speech and manner of a gentleman, had been entertained and treated as a friend by the family.

The meeting of Gladys and the young Californian was a case of love at first sight. She overstayed her time at her friend's, and the two were much together. A few days after her return home she found it positively necessary to go back for some silk that she had not been able to match, and the trips to the city becoming so frequent as to excite mamma's suspicion, Gladys explained as far as she thought it safe. and asked if she might invite Mr. Hillary to the house. Mrs. Bentham inquired as to the business, standing, etc., of the young gentleman, and was "An actor!" she shrieked in horror. "Well," answered her daughter, "we are not living in the time of Queen Elizabeth or the Long parliament. An actor, these days, if he's a good one, takes his place with other artists, and is admitted into the best society."

"Oh, no doubt, the great stars, those who have become famous, ves. At what theater is this Mr. Hillary playing? I don't remember having seen his name among the luminaries."

big reputation in the stock on the coast. But he realized that unless you are known in New York, you never get anywhere. It isn't fair, and it isn't right, but it's so, and that's why everybody comes to New York and overcrowds and makes it so hard to get a hearing." "You seem to have been well informed on the theatrical situation," remarked Mrs. Bentham with stinging sarcasm. "But I positively refuse to entertain at my home any cheap actor. He is not the proper society for you or my friends, and I must insist. that you regard my wishes, and do not meet him again under any circum-

Given a girl of nineteen, high spirited, a trifle spoiled, and very much in love, and what would you expect? You would not count on her following these directions with meek precision. Gladys wrote a tearful letter explaining the situation to Hillary, and adding she knew she was going to be forced into marrying a horrid foreigner with a title. The answer was also what might be expected from a young man very much in love. He was not rich, but in a little while he knew he could take care of her, and begged her to wait. The next letter told her he had a good engagement, had begun rehearsals, and it was rosy with hope. They were to first try the play out of town before coming to New York, and it opened in Philadelphia.

It was useless for Gladys to try to invent a shopping trip to Philadelphia, and since her last visit she was no longer allowed out of her mother's sight without a chaperon. When Jean Flower wrote begging her to come to New York to her dinner, Gladys was allowed to go in care of Mrs. Vincent, who was cautioned not to allow her charge to leave the house at any time alone. Gladys had hoped to slip away to Philadelphia to see Hillary act, as the play had opened and was running well; but being so carefully watched, she now found it impossible. She decided to go home, and was duly put into the pullman by Mrs. Vincent, who waved an adieu and turned away. Gladys went through the train, got off, canals, fill them in and pave them. It lost herself in the crowd, and took a train for Philadelphia. She saw Hillary that night at the play. The perfectly convincing way in which he Doubtless the nicest thing about made love to the heroine brought mat-Bucharest, from a middle-aged ters to a climax, and they were marqueen's viewpoint, is the last syllable. ried the next day.

Gladys wrote to her mother and father announcing the fact, and asking to be forgiven. An answer came back that she might return alone, and be forgiven, but on no account would "that actor" be received into the family. The terms were uncompromising in the extreme. But the two lovers were so blissful in their married life the parental ultimatum by no means Hillary was a hard worker, and his courage did not fail. But when they had to come down to living in one coom in a cheap lodging house, and to cooking meals over a gas jet, his mis ery and remorse at seeing the girl who had been used to luxury brought to this pass made him utterly wretched. Gladys faced the situation with never a tear or a murmur. She even laughed at the queer makeshifts, and pretended to enjoy it.

One day when Hillary came home from an unsuccessful quest, and found Gladys trying to achieve an omelette, he took her in his arms, holding her very close, and saying between his kisses: "Darling! You are the bravest, truest little woman in the world! This awful experience has made me know you better than years of prosperity ever could. But to see you having to stand this is breaking my heart! You could"—he paused, his voice breaking—"could go back to

"Then let me stay for my own sake." And her head went closer against his heart, and his lips pressed against her hair.

he does now." Then Mrs. Bentham began to ask questions concerning Vane Hillary. Had he ever heard of him? Yes, he was a very good actor, a hard student, straight as a die, and also a gentleman. Mrs. Bentham received the news in silence, but pressed him to come again.

The gentleman playing the lover part was suddenly called away, and 🕻 Each time you taste our Erskine had to jump in and play the role. He made such a hit that a New 🖠 York manager who had been lured to the performance engaged him on the spot for an important production. Mrs. Bentham made Erskine promise to bring his wife the moment she came to New York. Nearly all Glendale turned out for the first night in New York. Mrs. Bentham sent a pleasant message to Erskine, and he answered asking if he should call with his wife. He was most pressingly urged wrecked their happiness. The play went on from Philadelphia to other cities. It did not seem to warrant a New York opening. Busivess decreased instead of improving and after eight weeks of the tour the play closed. Hillary found himself back in New York without having had his metropolitan hearing, upon which he had built such high hopes. He again sought an engagement, but it was the old story among the theatrical managers; they had not seen him act, and they could not jeopardize a production by intrusting an important part to an unknown actor. It was in vain to try to prove that he had "made good" in the company

Mrs. Barting declared that if the cast was amateur, there must be a professional to conduct rehearsals. She knew of a most capable stage director who could be secured for the modest figure of seventy-five dollars a week. The committee promptly indorsed her suggestion, and Mr. John Erskine came down from New York for the rehearsals. He at once gave evidence of knowing his business, managed the amateurs with tact, and had the manners of a gentleman. Mrs. Bentham, not knowing much of the stage back of the footlights, determined to investigate. She went to a rehearsal, and became so interested in the goodlooking young director, that she asked been very pretty. The snow had come and covered it and the big snow mounds where the flower-beds were in the summer had given the snowy scene a look of tiny hills and valleys.

And then there had been more and more snow and the garden had been filled with snow people.

There had been a snow man with eves of coal. Splendid eyes they were. They were looking so fine and piercing in their white background. Then he had carried a stick and had a pipe in his mouth. He had not been alone in the garden. There had been a whole group of little snow They were each about half his size and none of them had pipes in their mouths, but under their snowy arms they held some bark from the trees which was supposed to represent school books. Then there had been a few snow animals. It had looked like a very fine snow village there in the garden with all its snow inhabitants. And there had been several snow houses and a snow fort and a flag nole, too. Mrs. Cucumber Green was the playname of a little girl as many of you know. She had chosen the name some time ago-when it had been summer and the name of Mrs. Cucumber Green had sounded so nice and cool.

Allie Baa was Mrs. Cucumber Green's rag doll child. She was a darling rag doll child with a rag body and face, and her face had had features painted upon it which were a little bit worn now owing to having been kissed so much. But Allie much preferred being loved the way she was and having so much wonderful affection from her dear mother, Mrs. Cucumber Green, than having a face with outstanding features. Yes, Allie Baa had been taken out in the winter, all wrapped up with a warm hand-knitted sweater and scarf But now it was springtime and Al-spring. Of course Allie Baa didn't expect very much. Nor did she expect any thing actually new. But she thought how nice it would be to have a new bit of ribbon tied around her neck or a new bit of silk to wear over her shoulders. She thought perhaps that would not be impossible as she knew there was an old chest filled with odd pieces of silk and ribbon which often went to help decorate Mrs. Cucumber Green's family. Some doll children might have Mrs. Cucumber good at sewing nor did she care about sewing. So when she dressed up her children she did it in quite an odd manner-a bit of ribbon added here or some other little gay touch. It was only when Mrs. Cucumber Green's mother had time to do a little extra sewing that Allie had A New Scarf. actually new clothes. But knowing that her mother, Mrs. Cucumber Green, did not like to sew Allie was never hard on her clothes. And then, as Allie was wondering, along came Mrs. Cucumber Green and handsome scarf of pale green from yond and soon will pass away. the old chest-a true springtime color; But they love to sit and tell you of and Allie felt very happy, indeed, as her mother kissed her and said: When they starved and froze but "Oh, my darling, how too adorable

Well Developed Pullets Necessary for Heavy Egg Production

BIG, well developed frames and plenty of reserve fat are necessary in order to carry pullets through without moulting. Michigan Growing Mash provides the protein for building body frames and tissues in growing chicks. Insure large, well developed, fat pullets at maturity by feeding a well balanced ration, furnishing all necessary types of protein. This growth and development is necessary for the pullets to maintain heavy egg production. Ask

The Red River Special Line includes tractors and separators for every threshing run. Whether you want a machine to thresh your own grain and that of a few neighbors, or whether you are in the market for a big custom threshing rig, the Red River Special Line exactly fills the bill-five sizes of separators. each one with full roller bearings Alemite-Zerk lubricated—the famous 4 Threshermen and all sheet metal parts of Armco Ingot Iron, the great rust resisting metal. The tractors are the N & S Lauson Built 16-32 and and the N & S 25-50. These Lauson built tractors, in every way, measure up to the high standard of quality set by the Red River Special Line. Roller and Ball bearings are used in every principal bearing point, in the wheels, transmission and motor. These tractors are built strong and sturdy, to stand up to their work in the belt or on the draw-bar, and to operate steadily and economically with a big surplus of power.
