Rev. Joseph H. Green of Ionia had the honor of delivering the first lecture in the new high school auditorium when he gave the commencement address to the Class of 1927 on Tuesday evening. The audience was the largest that has ever assembled in Cass City for commencement exercises said Supt. Holmes in introducing the speaker.

Mr. Green said that it had been his privilege to visit many new school buildings in Michigan in late years, and in his opinion, no community had received more for its money in the building program than

Show at School

The girls of the Home Economics department of the Cass City high school held a style show in the auditorium of the new school building Wednesday afternoon in which they appeared in review in dresses made by themselves in sewing classes. Very lovely indeed were the varicolored dresses displayed as their owners filed across the stage, one by one, to music by Mrs. I. D. McCoy. About forty garments were shown. Much credit is due their instructor, Mrs. E. Baker, for the excellent colors and styles chosen by the individuals and the neat workmanship on every garment. In addition to the style display the following numbers were included in the afternoon's program: A health play by the first grade pupils under the direction of Miss Barton; "Grandma's Dance" a reading with fancy dancing by Dorothy Holcomb; a "Garden Frolic" by Betty and Patty Pinney, Millicent Graham, Helen Doerr and Dorothy Holcomb. These little girls were gowned in fancy crepe paper dresses and were trained by and accompanied on the piano by

Mrs. C. W. Day. The attendance was very good and many availed themselves of the opportunity to view Cass City school's first style show. Punch and wafers were served at the close.

WHEN A WOMAN DRIVER HOLDS OUT HER HAND YOU CAN EXPECT ANYTHING TO HAPPEN!

CARE OF TIRES BY CAR OWNERS

Average Motorist Will Be Found Guilty of Neglecting Some Detail.

Most forgotten of all parts of a motor car when they are in good condition, and most blamed when they go wrong, tires plead mutely for a driver's attention.

If you should ask the average motorist whether he takes care of his tires, he would probably reply, "Of course"; and yet the chances are that he is neglectful of some detail of tire care.

Three Tire Factors.

There are only three factors which govern the cost per mile of tire operation. The first is the quality of the tire, the second, the conditions of operation, and the third, the care of the tire by the owner. In order to cut down the cost of tire mileage, all three factors must be regarded as important.

It is of no benefit to buy the best tires obtainable, put them on your car, and then forget about them. Watch for small cuts, bruises, pieces of metal or other foreign matter in your tires. Slight defects such as these, if unattended to, will cause serious trouble.

Proper inflation of tires is most important. Tires of any size are made to hold a definite amount of air under pressure. Any certain tire is designed to carry its prescribed weight only if it is properly inflated. Therefore, don't wait until your tires are obviously flat before reinflating them, and don't trust to the "kick" method to tell you whether or not they are hard enough. Take a pressure reading once a week, whether your tires seem to need it or not. Underinflation flexes the tire side-walls too much, causing them to break down.

Care of Balloon Tires.

Underinflation in a balloon tire is not as noticeable as in cord tires, and for this reason, extra care must be taken in checking up on balloon tires. In this type of tire, it is not necessary to use such high pressure as incord tires, but it is just as important to see that you have proper inflation. Balloon tires are also often overinflated. This destroys much of their power to absorb road shocks.

Don't abuse your tires by driving in car tracks and deep ruts, or by scraping curbstones. And don't forget that proper care of your tires means a saving both of time and money.

Automobile Inspection

Would Avert Accidents

Many automobile accidents could be

Many automobile accidents could be eliminated if motorists got into the habit of having their cars inspected and overhauled regularly, in the opinion of the National Safety council, which points out that a great proportion of automobile accidents are due directly to faulty equipment.

The following rules also should be carefully adhered to by motorists in order to cut down the number of unnecessary accidents:

Brakes should be kept in efficient condition at all times, and frequent tests should be made.

chains should be used during icy and wet weather.

Number plates should be kept clean.

Motorists should not tolerate noisy mufflers.

All cars should be equipped with bumpers, as they will lessen damage due to collision.

Army Car Drivers Must

Army Car Drivers Must Share Road With Others

Listed among the strict prohibitions observed by operators of United States army cars are: Smoking while driving, repeated sounding of horns, and holding back faster-moving cars. On dry, dusty roads the driver must run at reduced speed, so that no unnecessary dust will be raised to obscure the vision of other motorists. When meeting an approaching car the soldier-chauffeur is ordered to give it no less than half the road. If the road is narrow or rough he must slow down to half speed. No operator is allowed to halt on a bridge, narrow road or bend of the road. These traffic orders have been drawn up to provide the greatest possible saving of life, time and motor equipment.

Brunette Is Most

Careful Car Driver
Fair men are more careful motor car drivers than dark men, but brunettes are much steadler than blonds at the steering wheel, it was declared by experts at a luncheon celebrating the opening of the fall automobile show in London re-

Incidentally it was stated that one woman in four in England knows how to drive a motor car.

Passing on Blind Turns

Very Dangerous Practice

Passing on blind turns! That's too common a trait of the average motorist, according to the safety bureau of the National Automobile club. Making up time, delay in passing the ear ahead until too late for such passing, recklessness, taking a chance, all these factors enter into the problem of hazard.

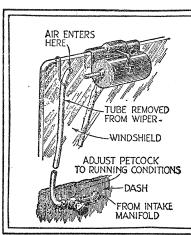

A group of newspaper men set out to observe the other day a driver who was just ahead of them and who seemed to have a habit of attempting to pass at the wrong moment. Time after time this driver would slow up on the straight-away only to speed and pass the cars ahead when he came to a turn. There was something radically wrong with his driving complex. He might have intended to be careful, but his judgment brought him to grief.

Most accidents are caused by just such drivers, drivers who should not be allowed at the wheel of a motor car, as they are a menace to the safety of others. The innocent victim is usually the man swinging around a turn only to find a foolhardy pilot taking more than his share of the highway.

A forfeiture of a driver's license, a few days in jail, these are sentences that should be the reward of the man who takes a chance when in taking the chance he endangers the lives of others on the road.

An emergency cotter pin can be made from a common hair pin by a few twists of the pliers.

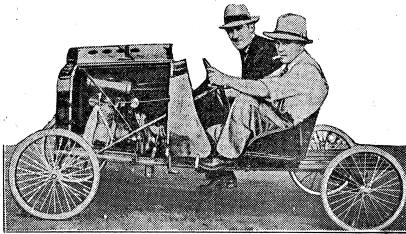

A man never realizes just what "dumbness" means until he is driving on a country road and meets a cow.

An eastern judge has ruled that a man has a right to drive his car without any assistance from friend wife in the back seat. He also has a legal right to monkey with a buzz saw or light a match to find a gas leak.

SMALL CAR MAY SOLVE TRAFFIC PROBLEM

This light car is used by business men of The Dalles because it can "wiggle" its way through heavy traffic. It is so light that it can be picked up, one end at a time and parked in a small place. It is capable of running at a speed of 12 miles an hour. This type of car, in the opinion of experts, may solve the traffic problem of the future.

This company appreciates Col. Lindbergh's recognition of its product. From the beginning this company has shown in substantial ways its faith in commercial aviation. The Standard Oil Company [Indiana] was a pioneer in developing gasoline and oil for aviation use. Today it furnishes a major part of the supply for airplanes in this country.

Red Crown Ethyl is on the land what Stanolind Aviation Gasoline is in the air. Motorists throughout the Middle West have discovered that Red Crown Ethyl gives amazing performance. It uses carbon—turning it into power. It knocks out that knock. It costs a trifle more but it's worth more than it costs. Everywhere and everywhere the same.

Rye-A condition of 85 per cent for the rye crop in Michigan prospects a production of 2,702,000 bushels from 195,000 acres remaining for harvest. Since last month rye has not gained in growth as much as wheat since the acreage is on heavier soil and has therefore been retarded by the continued wet weather. The condition for 1926 was 79 per cent, and the ten-year average is the same as now at 85 per cent.

The indicated production for the United States from a condition of 87.6 per cent, is 46,000,000 bushels compared with 40,000,000 bushels harvested a year ago.

Hay-Cool, wet weather during May caused abundant growth of all tame hay and increased the condition figure two per cent over last month to 88 per cent now. This condition is 12 per cent higher than in 1926 and four per cent above the ten-year average. All clover and timothy hay has a condition of 87 and alfalfa at 89 is two points below the high average. Wild hav with a condition of 90 is six points better than average and three per cent better than a year ago. Hay in general has good growth and color. New seedings are better than the old ones, some of which show rather thin stands although they are now filling out above expectations. Alfalfa is earlier than usual this year. Winter freezing damaged alfalfa in the west central section of the state. For the United States the condition of all tame hay is 88.0 per cent which is 2.7 per cent above average and 12.0

per cent above last year. Pasture—Throughout the state pastures made excellent growth during May with an ample supply of moisture. Less stock than usual is now on pasture because of the cool nights and soft ground. The condition is 90 per cent or three points above average for this date.

For the country the condition is 88.3 per cent which is slightly better than average. Farm Labor-The ratio of labor supply to demand is now 100 with both reported at 84. This compares with 97 per cent a month ago. Farm work has been backward, and some laborers have been layed off from fac-

Sailor's "Weather"

The seaman often speaks of "weather" when he has in mind nothing more than wind, says Nature Magazine. "Dirty weather" suggests to the landsman the idea of rain and mud, but in nautical parlance it means a

Small Home Has Features That Will Appeal to the Discriminating Builder

Floor Plan.

By W. A. RADFORD Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all problems pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on the subject. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago,

Money saved in the first cost of a home is usually money spent later on in repairs, and frequently the initial savings are far less than the after costs for upkeep. The idea of a permanent construction appeals to farseeing people because they realize that an investment of such importance and amount as that required to build a should not be regarded lightly. They know the correct way to figure the cost of a home is over a span of years. On such a basis a concrete for Use in Small Home Leaded glass in the old English manner, with medallions or heraldic crests suitable in feeling and cost to the small home, is now available in rectangles or diamonds for as little as $1.25 a square foot in either domestic clear or colored glass. Medallions or centerpieces range from $4 upward. Installation costs vary according to location. Here is news that will be really interesting to owners of small homes.

Much of the charm and individuality of early English, Georgian and Colonial houses was due to the use of leaded glass in their window openings. Along with a growing appreciation of these old-time homes has come a revival of interest in leaded glass such as was used in them. Leaded panes are so much more interesting than mere sheets of glass and give a room such a cozy, inviting appearance—at the same time adding a note of smartness to the exterior—that a house is materially improved and its resale value is increased through their use. And now, thanks to the owner of one studio, the twenty-eighth generation of workers in stained glass, leaded glass windows are obtainable at a reasonable cost.

The olden-time feeling that things made during the period when good craftsmanship was the rule is one of the most appealing things about these leaded windows. Color is another. A bit of color judiciously introduced in living room, dining room or stairway window brightens the interior and makes for charm and interest.

Paints That Are Not

Discolored by Smoke

Smoke is the enemy of a white house. Look at the homes in your neighborhood that once were white. Smoke had a lot to do with their present appearance. There are specially prepared paints which, because of their chemical composition, are not readily darkened by smoke gases. If your house is white make inquiry regarding these paints.

home with tile roof, such as illustrated

here, is a sound investment of money. Resale value is another factor that favors permanent construction. A rundown house is a slow seller and often can be transferred only at a great sacrifice. A well-built, fire-resistive and durable home is very apt to increase in value. It pays to build a home, but the largest dividends are enjoyed by those who build, not for present needs, but who build a home that is good at the end of the owner's Critical examination of this design reveals many pleasing features. The large front porch is desirable, and, being an open porch, it does not shut off light. Then there is a convenient side porch which permits ingress and egress without going way through the house. There is a generous provision of window openings, assuring light and ventilation to the last degree.

The interior room arrangement will satisfy the exacting. All the rooms on one floor is good practice because it means a saving of steps and time and added convenience for the entire household. The good-sized living room is given a cheerful touch with a fireplace. The dining room has five windows and is of ample size. Each of the two bedrooms adjoins the bath and the kitchen is nicely located in relation to the dining room. Having the icebox on the rear porch will be approved by most housekeepers.

Now, while this is a quality home built of quality materials, still it is not excessive in cost. Of course, any definite estimate on cost will have to be provided by the local dealer and builder. Prices vary in different sections of the country owing to freight rates and varying labor scales and the only practical way to approximate the cost of any building is by consulting the local source of supply, the dealer and builder. Or the builder may bid for the complete job, including labor

It will be of material value in getting these figures to submit a working plan. Until the bidder has full, definite information before him he must do considerable guessing and to protect himself he is obliged to "guess" high. but with the working plan he can figure costs down to the smallest detail and make an absolute bid.

For permanency, beauty and reasonable cost this design stands forth as a most attractive and practical answer to the question, "How shall I build the new home?"

Foundation of House

Shows Its Condition Several suggestions that will help everyone who is contemplating the purchase of a house are made in a letter contributed by a reader to

"Before you buy a house," he writes, 'you should start with the basement and examine the walls for water stains and horizontal water lines caused by water seepage, or water standing in the basement.

"The foundation and retaining walls should be inspected for proper thickness," he continues. "A minimum width for main foundation walls below grade for a light-frame structure of one or two stories should not be less than ten inches, if of concrete; 13 inches if of brick, and 18 inches for stone.

"Concrete walls having a sandy or clayey appearance are deficient in cement, or else are constructed of bank sand and gravel containing a large percentage of loam. Such walls should be examined for sand and loam pockets, which are detrimental to the walls' structural strength and permit the entrance of water.

"The wall plate or mud sill, which lies directly upon the foundation and upon which the floor rests, should be minutely examined for dry rot and decay. This is generally the first member of a dwelling's superstructure that

Plan Porch So It

Porches on the small house should be a part thereof rather than the excrescences they too frequently appear. Excessive grouping of posts is considered undesirable, as are ugly, short, round columns. The location dy. of the porch has much to do with the exterior appearance and interior comfort. Porches are often built so as to shut off light and sunshine which are needed within. Form and mass are always the first points to be considered. Glazed porches, which serve

Stop! Look! Listen!

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to the general public, to our loyal stockholders and to our many friends and tourists for the whole-hearted way in which they patronized us during the past six years.

Now that we are closing our accounts on July 1st in preparation for our annual meeting in July, we are asking all of those who have an account with us to please call and settle with us, either by cash or a good, short-time bankable note by July 1st. We have been very liberal in extending credits and we are sure that all who are indebted to us will cheerfully respond to our wishes and save us the trouble and expense of calling at your homes. We positively must reduce our accounts receivable to a minimum.

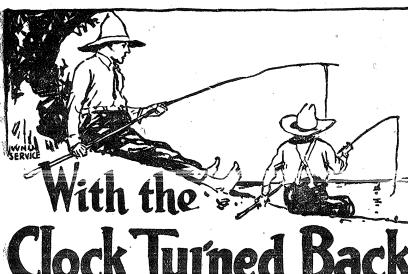

We expect to do business at the same old stand for many years to come and we also expect to be blessed with an increased business in the future for we aim to give the public even better service than in the past. We also expect to maintain the quality of White Star Gasoline and Kerosene which is superior to all. Tourists from all over the state are calling on us for this wonderful product—the gasoline that gives you more miles. with smiles, and greater power, less carbon, and the satisfaction in knowing that you have a smooth running motor and a motor fuel that is excelled by none.

We give scripture-measure, pressed down and running over. We give free crank-case service and give the same consideration and courtesy to the gentler sex that we would want extended to our wife or daughter. We again thank you for your past co-operation and ask at least a fair share of your business in the future.

CHAPTER VIII

Magnate of Crawdads.

It was three days after his conference with young Mr. Edwards that Thomas Brent lay in a shady spot beside Indian creek contemplating a large soiled package and a number of small sticks with strings attached. Freck was in Dodson; he was making daily trips there now on a flea-bitten mare which Mr. Brent had bought from Aunt Margie, and waiting at the telegraph office for any message that might come for Mr. Thomas Brent. He did not return to the cave until evening and Mr. Brent had the whole day to himself.

"It's time I was getting Freck started in some business." he mused: "something where he can live out in the country. I don't believe you could change that boy to a city job." Suddenly he slapped his thigh heavily and pawed for the package of meat. He undid the wrapper, displaying a large beef liver, and then began cutting it in small hunks and tying one to every bit of string. Then, sticking the poles in the bank of the stream about a foot apart, he sank the liver and began to await developments.

Far into the afternoon his activities continued, and then, staggering up the hill to the cave, he carried a gunn"sack full to the very brim with live crawfish.

"I don't see why I couldn't develop a money-making proposition for him," he mused as he went back to the stream again. "That boy ought to be a magnate in less than a year."

Whereupon he closed his eyes for the well-earned nap that had become a part of his afternoon life. When he awoke it was to find Freck and his flea-bitten mare near by.

"Any luck, boy?" he asked. "No, sir; there wasn't any news for you at all, Mr. Brent," Freck said. "Maybe it'll come tomorrow."

"Maybe it will. I don't care much when it comes just so it gets here some time. Look here, Freck, do you ever think much about your own future? What you are going to be when you grow up, and so on?"

Freck's face went blank. "Why, I thought I was going to be your confidential agent," he said. Mr. Brent laughed. "You were, but you gave the job to that brother-in-law of confidential agents, you know. "Do? Why, you'd be a crawdad magnate. The first thing you know you'd be getting your picture in all the papers and be owning motor cars and steam yachts, and I don't know what all."

"I'd like to have an automobile," Freck said sagely.

"I don't see any reason why you shouldn't have it. Why, see here, Freck, down in town you can go along at night and find two or three negroes on the street selling these crawfish. They seem to make a pretty good living at it just selling them out of baskets all wrapped up in dirty old newspapers and that sort of thing, so why wouldn't it be a good idea to sell them the way crawfish ought to be sold? Fix up a crawfish cafe, sell them there in salads, crawfish sandwiches, crawfish this way and crawfish that."

'Oh, snakes!" Freck whistled in addition to the exclamation. "You sure ain't like what you was when you first come out here, Mr. Brent." "I'm not? Why not?" Brent asked surprisedly. Freck grinned. "It'd take too long to tell you," he answered. "But what would I do? I couldn't run this busi-
