TT PAYS to be slick. Everything is 'Front' in this world. Education is a waste of time and nothing goes but bluster, brag and pretense!"

Thus Mark Dorrance to his closest friend and fellow workman, Bert Lansing, who smiled dubiously as he re-

"Getting rather pessimistic, aren't you, Mark? Of course you refer to the gold-plated superintendent, Tracy Dunbar.

"And isn't he truly all brass, with a basis of self-conceit and braggadocio?" demanded Mark stormily. "Why, say-he's about half the time on his job and it's a wonder the company keeps him. They can't know that we do all of the work and he gets the credit for it."

"Which speaks well for our dillgence, eh, Mark?" laughed Bert. "That may be, but I believe in merit rewarded. If the right man was made superintendent, it would be you." "Thanks, Mark," bowed Bert. "That shows that I have at least one admiring friend. Returning to Dunbar, though, you may find that the elements you idealize do not always spell permanent success. Somewhere Dunbar will strike a snag. Then, if he isn't true blue, his good luck will desert him. What is the direct animus of the especial moment as to Dunbar?"

"Well, when a fellow's got a girl he don't care to play second fiddle in her company," explained Mark in a complaining tone. "Last evening we were out at a little party. Dunbar is clever, I'll admit it, and fairly bewitched the crowd with his entertaining ways. He acted, though, as if he could take his pick of any girl in the room. I didn't like it. And by the way, Bert, he was especially attentive to that pretty sister of yours, Daisy."

"Oh, don't let that trouble you," and Bert laughed confidently. "Daisy is engaged to a gentleman in New York who will probably claim his bride before the year is over."

"That may be," answered Mark, "but I consider Dunbar a crafty, dangerous man. Certainly he interested Daisy. Flirtation is a perilous game for a lonely girl with a distant lover only to think of."

"Daisy is a sensible, loyal girl," asserted Bert, "and I am not afraid of Mr. Dunbar winning from her anything more than amused attention. She is shrewd enough to see through his artificial society ways, just as we

The conversation dropped there, but it was destined to lead to results. An outside incident hastened this materialization. Bert and Mark were young engineers and Dunbar was superintendent, all three engaged by a big construction firm in the city to build a water power plant. The dam was about a mile from the town where the young men lived. It was to be a long job and the young men had been accustomed to going home nights.

There came up, however, trouble among the sluice workers. It arose over the refusal of Dunbar to pay them a certain rebate agreed on. They refused to work. He claimed that they had violated their contract and were not entitled to the money. These men claimed they were being robbed and quit the job, but hung around making some ugly threats.

On this account Bert and Mark consented to remain nights near the plant, and quite comfortably established themselves in a little building that had been used to store dynamite in the early stages of the construction work. They would go to town alternate evenings and did their own cook-

One afternoon Bert was returning from the village when he heard a yell for help. He was amazed to trace it to the side of the rough road, apparently beneath its surface. Finally he discovered an old man who had fallen into an unused pit. He helped him out, scared and bruised.

"Where's the eggs!" gasped the rescued one, looking wildly about.

"The eggs?" repeated Bert vaguely, "Yes. I was carrying a basket with forty dozen of them in it. Automobile came along. Stepped aside to get out of the way of it and fell into that hole. As I did so the basket swung clear of my hand. I'm a poultry farmer down the road. Suppose all that hen fruit just smashed to smither-

Bert made a search. It was a queer thing, but he discovered the basket safely nestled in among a lot of hazel brush and not an egg cracked or broken.

The old farmer was delighted. He found out who Bert was.

"Say," he observed, "I'll send you down a basket of the nicest, freshest eggs you ever saw, tomorrow."

The man kept his promise and there bar frequently hired from a local garage. Then at a distance they noted Dunbar himself.

He had evidently driven up to the plant, had gone into the office and coming out had been confronted by a party of the dissatisfied workmen. About a dozen of these were chasing him now.

"Lynch him!"

"Where's the money you stole from

These and other vicious and furious shouts followed the fugitive. He ran for his life, his face ashen pale and terrified. He dodged behind the little cabin where Bert and Mark slept nights. As he came into view again an amazing spectacle was revealed.

Swat!—through the air sped a white oval missile. It struck the glossy silk hat of the runner and carried it into a mud puddle. Swat!-two more of the missiles landed on his back, giving out slimy ooze of white and yellow. Then a perfect fusilade, and as Dunbar turned to discern the distance of his foes two more projectiles landed on his face.

With a shriek of fear the fugitive made for the near woods. He had to pass the waiting automobile. He was a bedraggled, forlorn specimen, a target for the basket of eggs his pursuers had discovered given to Bert by the farmer.

The rioters halted near the machine as their prey escaped them, and then the fair admirers of Tracy Dunbar knew what kind of a man he was. He had never returned the rebate money to the company, but had robbed the workmen by dishonestly keeping it for himself. Bert noticed his sister among those in the auto.

and Bert had to drive them back to That night his sister made him a confession. She had almost consented to elope with Dunbar and marry him. But now the shocking truth had forever dispelled the illusion concerning a fascinating, but unworthy man. Her real lover never knew how nearly she had come to losing a happy, loving future. It was discovered that Dunbar was an embezzler of a large amount. He got safely out of the country and Bert Lansing succeeded him as superin-

Home for Aged Insects Providing for pets is a laudable Palmateer Sunday. practice, but sometimes the person making the will loses his sense of the fitness of things. Medical men have long known that fondness for animals may increase to a degree where it becomes a mild form of insanity. Mental affliction of this nature combined with religious fervor must have been responsible for the will of Seth Buddhimal, a wealthy and pious banker of Sihora, central India. Its provisions were made public a few weeks ago. "To build and endow three rest houses into which tired, wingless, injured and aged insects may retire from the world, I leave $100,000. These sanctuaries shall be maintained in perpetuity. Poor travelers shall be permitted to sleep in them overnight, provided they promise to remain still and kill no bugs. At the break of day, the travelers must be aroused, and if they have done no harm, a sum of 25 cents shall be given to them. Should a sleeper kill an insect, even accidentally, he will be ejected from the rest house and no money shall be given

Such a will in America would merit protest and ridicule, but in India it merely echoed the sentiment of a great many pious persons. It is estimated that there are no less than 200 such bug houses in India, where it is felt that no insect is too small or pesty to contain the reincarnated soul of an ancestor. An American example of this sort of dementia, however, has been found. It was reported in a book called "Ancient, Curious and Famous Wills," by Virgil M. Harris.

WHY==== Shedding of Tears Is Something of Mystery

"Tears, idle tears, I know not what they mean," says the poet. But the physiologist will not acknowledge such ignorance. He knows that tears are a secretion of the lachrymatory glands that flow over the eyeball and are drained off into the nose. Everybody knows that the fluid is somewhat salty and slippery and so serves to lubricate the eyeball and wash away any particles of dirt which may have fallen on it.

But what has more recently been considerable antiseptic power and so protect this sensitive surface from disease germs from the air, writes Edwin E. Slosson, director of science service, in Collier's. They contain a certain ferment known as lysozyme, which gives the tear fluid the power to destroy microbes even when diluted with water 6,000,000 times.

But why the lachrymatory glands year. will sometimes function so freely as to flood the drainage system and overflow upon the cheeks at the sound of certain words or a certain tone of voice or the sight of a certain telegram or item in the newspaper-that the physiologist does not know and the psycologist will not tell him because they are not on speaking terms as yet. Once these two get their heads together we shall begin to find out something.

Why Turkish Language Makes Little Appeal

There is little likelihood that Turkish ever will become familiar to those who speak English, even though Latin script is substituted for the present national characters, as advocated by the Angora government, observes the Manchester (Eng.) Guardian. Turkish sentence structure is almost the reverse order of English practice. Sir Charles Eliot, in discussing these difficulties, cities as a typical Turkish sentence: "Capital ground, and Varna between running Lloyd of Company of Vulcan steamer on Stambul to coming are we." Read it backwards and the meaning is clear, but to undertake such a task with every sentence in a book or article would appall any linguist.

How Temperature Is Shown

The weather bureau says that both the glass of the thermometer and the mercury, or other fluid, in it expand with increase of temperature and contract with decrease of temperature. For equal changes of temperature the expansion or contraction of the inclosed liquid is greater than that of the glass. When the bulb is put into hot water the glass wall heats first, and it in turn heats the inclosed fluid. Of course, the wall does not heat up fully before any heat gets to the mercury, say, but during the first half second, or so, it is distinctly warmer tent Quickly, however, the heat gets than the glass, and therefore rises

Why We "Touch Wood" One theory of the origin of the old superstition of touching or rapping on wood is that it came from the ancient game called "touching wood." According to the superstitions reflected in the game, a player who succeeds in touching wood was safe from capture. Thus to touch wood is to avert an evil. Another equally plausible theory of Another equally plausible theory of its origin is that in the long, long ago trees were supposed to harbor spirits. Because of this belief the savages of those days considered it lucky touch a tree. While the body touched a tree the spirit of that tree protect, ed it and no harm could come to it. Such games as wood tag or tree tag and the wood-touching superstition are

Why Flowers Have Scent The fragrance of flowers is due to special essences or oils which the plant produces. These oils are complicated compounds of only two elements, carbon and hydrogen, and are known as volatile oils, since they escape readily into the air.

= Septic Tanks Installed in County

The county agricultural extension office cooperating with the agricultural engineering department of the Michigan State College put on five septic tank demonstrations last week. Tanks were built at the following places: Chas. Donigan, Millington; Norman Carner near Carr's Corners; Wm. Dowling near Akron; Geo. Mar tin near Deford and Fred Janks near Caro. For Mr. Donigan, Mr. Janks and Mr. Martin, new forms were built and any one wishing to put in a tank found out is that tears have also a can rent the forms at these places at a small cost. The county agent's office can secure the siphons and ball jar necessary from the Michigan State College and with a bulletin should be no great expense to install a tank. Forms are practically all spoken for the immediate future and the agent is looking for about twenty septic tanks to be put in during the HAT a joyful moment it is, when the organ sounds the first chords of a wedding march! Every heart is filled with tenderness, as the bride and groom take their place before love's altar.

It is the right of every girl to have her wedding beautiful and "correct" in every detail. The young lady in your family is expecting that kind of a ceremony-some day. Until she wishes to make it known, the date must be a secret most precious.

But when it is announced, she will be just as particular about having that done properly as about the flowers in her bridal bouquet.

When Wedding Invitations and Announcements are entrusted to this office, you may rest assured of three things: Whether printed or engraved, they will be quite in harmony with what you consider best. Their cost will both surprise and please you. And as for keeping a secret—why, even "the lucky man" himself could not bribe us to tell him when it will happen!

GETTING OUT OF THE SLUMP

(©, 1927, by D. J. Walsh.)

HEN Ed Brand carried home post card he had no conception of it as a sort of potential bomb. It read innocently, "Stopping off at Brettsville for a few days, Milly." And as Milly was a distant cousin of Grace's and had not made them a visit since Grace and Ed were married this was exactly the right thing for her to do.

Before Ed and Grace were married Milly had shown no reserve when it came to convince Ed that he could us how," they begged of Grace. "If have her for the asking, but after he | you knew what home is without you!" was tied to Grace she had, very decently he thought, faded away, and for these seventeen years they had heard from her only through an occasional post card.

These seventeen years had cemented the beautiful hectic early love of the dainty, delicate, shy Grace and the tall, gangling Ed into something more commonplace to the casual eye, but with its roots reaching into the eternal. There were the plump, blueeyed, pink-cheeked twins just sixteen -Merty and Berty; there were three short graves on the elm-shaded hillside—a reminder of the diphtheria epidemic; there was Ed's typhoid sickness that had left him not so strong and needing Grace's tender solicitude; there was the struggle for a home; always the self-sacrifice that transcends into beauty what might otherwise be almost sordid.

Milly followed hard upon the post card-only it took Ed and Grace some seconds to comprehend that the straight, slim figure in the straight clinging black dress, orange touched, almost knee-high, revealing slim, shapely legs and French-heel satin slippers—that this was Milly. Her hair was boyishly bobbed and she was a la mode to the last touch.

Ed and Grace remembered Milly as a fat, ungainly girl with big freckles on a white skin and wispy red hair. She was always making herself conspicuous by following some latest fad —invariably unbecoming. But now—

"Goodness, Milly, you look younger than you did seventeen years ago! Why, you look young enough to be our daughter, doesn't she. Grace."

And there was nothing for Grace -fat, flabby, her dull hair twisted into a tight bun on the back of her head, her feet uncomfortably spreading in red felt bedroom slippers—to do except nod feeble assent.

In fact, it seemed to Grace that for some days to come that was about all she did. She who by right of her wifehood and motherhood had been the mainspring of the home now seemed effaced by the dominating cleverness and good looks and youth of Milly. The twins hung on her every word, followed her about like puppies and openly criticized their mother's appearance. Ed was not better than the twins—at least in admiring Milly. But he had hastily hushed the twins when they told their mother she was too fat to have any style, and had warned them they were in a glass house and should be careful about stones. But Grace observed that now Ed shaved every morning, that he wore becoming ties and that he carried his great length straighter than heretofore.

Milly's heart was not unkind in spite of the veneer that kept it from

"You don't have to stay that way you know, Grace," she said, following Grace upstairs after she had seen her wipe a tear from her eye with the corner of her blue calico apron. "Come in here and let's talk." She drew Grace inside her room and closed the door, curled herself upon the bed and proceeded to tell Grace a few things about keeping young and good look-

Grace humbly and hungrily accepted all that Milly had to tell her. It seemed that her life was to consist chiefly of lettuce and rolls-the latter not edible. That night she toiled to the attic to begin the process of making herself young. She wouldn't for the world have had Merty or Berty or Ed discover her. She wanted to surprise them. She succeded in doing this —and herself as well.

She had not reckoned with her weight or the light construction of the attic floor, to say nothing of its age. She knew it was a rickety building that rocked beneath every wind, so she gave no heed to its protesting creaks with every bend or turn she took. But when she attempted a somersault it shrieked and gave way noisily beneath the strain, precipitating Grace's two plump, white-stockinged legs through the ceiling of Milly's room, to which Mert and Bert had gone for a good-night chat, and even Ed stood in the doorway, laughing at one of Milly's sallies. Even through the surprise and the shock and the pain, Grace heard with humiliation the shout of laughter that went up; but it was followed by a panicky silence, a rush up the stairs

A medley of aches and pains and groans, Grace was put to bed and the doctor was called. Some ribs broken, a strained leg cord, a broken collarbone and general shock-"Better stay in bed for a week," said the round, owl-eyed doctor. "And the exercise start on. You need the reducing." over the head with it."

Milly had been planning to leave the next day. But she could not desert the family in their predicament, Ed, Merty and Berty were all as nelpless as babes in this emergency.

"I'll stay," Milly assented to their pleadings. "But don't expect any such feeds or shining house as Grace kept for you. I'm no housekeeper." She need not have mentioned the fact. They discovered it in less than a day. The coffee was watery, the biscuits were lead, the potatoes burned, the meat underdone, the beds

Milly Perkins' ink-smudged went unmade; just covered everything. And Milly was cross. Her merry ways departed with her leisure and pretty clothes. She was "crosser in two minutes than mum was in all her born days," agreed the twins.

"Why didn't your mother teach you to do anything? You're big enough to do all the work!" retaliated Milly, unexpectedly overhearing them.

"Only get well, mother, and we'll help you with the work if you show "It'll be heaven to have you around again," said Ed.

The three of them were sitting on her bed. She was to get up the next day and they were eagerly anticipating it.

"Even if I'm not so pretty and jolly as Milly?" she countered.

"Pretty and jolly-we've not seen either since she's got down to work. And think of you keeping so sweet and motherly with all we piled on you! And to my eyes you're a sight better looking. What did I marry you for? Why, you got her beat a sight," cried Ed.

"Well, after all, the slams I've got, it's comforting to hear you say that,"

"Well, I don't bless the day she came," said Ed.

"I do," said Grace. "Do you know what she's done? She's held up a mirror before us and showed us how we've slumped. We'd never have caught on in a thousand years if it hadn't been for her, when Milly came along-just our age and looking ten years younger—it just showed us what we'd slumped to. Why, I didn't any more realize how fat and frumpy I'd got to be-"

"We love you just that way, mumsie," said the twins penitently.

"You can love a mother with a figure as well as you can a feather bed," said Grace," and I don't doubt but what you may love her a mite more. Lettuce and rolls will do it every time—that's what Milly said. I'm going to get out of this slump as fast as ever I can. And, Ed Brand, don't you let me see you go back to wearing any old string of a tie and shaving just the days you're going some place and walking with a slouch. If you could change like that for Milly you can do it for the twins and me. We're all going to get out of this slump and stay out of it." "We ain't goin' to slump no mo"."

Once Vesuvius Slept

The Romans of Caesar's time knew Vesuvius as a low mountain with a cuplike depression hundreds of feet deep at the top densely filled with trees and shrubbery. The Romans were puzzled at the burned appearance of the rim. The slopes below were covered with vineyards while numerous towns hummed with crowded life. In A. D. 63 a heavy earthquake shook that region. On August 23 in the year 79, the long fettered forces burst forth in the frightful eruptions which destroyed Pompeii Herculaneum and other towns. Other heavy eruptions occurred in 472, 1631 1794 and 1872, the most recent in 1906, Today Vesuvius is the world's most famous volcano.—Capper's Weekly.

TERMS COMMONLY USED IN DAIRYING

Dairying is practically a new line to many farmers, and it is well that they become familiar with the terms commonly used in dairying practice, says M. R. Tolstrup, associate professor of dairying at Clemson college, South Carolina, who explains below some of the common terms.

The Babcock test is a quick, simple inexpensive and accurate means of finding the butter fat contents in the various dairy products; namely, butter, cheese, ice cream, cream, whole milk, skim milk, buttermilk and whey.

The sediment test is a simple device, by use of which it is possible to find the amount of impurities contained in milk. The purpose of the test is to improve cleanliness in producing milk.

The moisture test is a simple test to determine the amount of moisture contained in butter. The federal government limits the amount to 16 per cent or less.

The salt test is an easy and inexpensive means of telling how much salt there is in butter. The acidity test is a particular, inexpensive and rapid means of telling whether milk and cream are sweet by determining the percentage of acidity that it contains. Over-run in butter making means the difference between the number of pounds of butter fat put into the churn and the number of pounds of finished butter made from same. The difference is made up of water, salt and casein (or curd).

Standardization of dairy products means bringing them to a certain desired composition. It is used espeice cream, and in some places in market and modified milk.

Lining Tank With Cork

Saves Milk-House Ice Great savings in ice can be made by dairy farmers through the use of corkfilled cooling tanks, states E. R. Gross, agricultural engineer at the New Jersey State College of Agriculture, New Brunswick.

The construction of such a tank is comparatively simple and the additional expense is quickly offset by the saving in ice. When finished, the tank is really three boxes fitting snugly into each other. The outer of concrete, the middle of cork and the inner of con-

Ground Grain for Cows Grain that is fed to dairy cows should always be ground. When whole grain is fed to cows too much of the grain goes through the cow undigested which causes a lot of wasted energy which the cow should use to make

Ordinarily it will make very little difference whether the corn is shelled and ground or the corn and cob ground. The essential thing is to have the grain ground fine in either case.

A dairy cow's feed requirements are measured by her body weight and milk production.

What a sow is fed affects profits more than any other element in her care and keep.

It is said the product of a really good cow averages $142.45 a year above the cost of her feed.

Start culling out the boarder cows. Set a standard of production not below 200 pounds of fat per year. Dry pastures and dry milk cows go together. A good soiling crop—green

On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on the subject. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, for reply.

Practically everyone who builds a home, except those who put up houses to sell, wants and seeks individuality. Few people erect homes with any other expectation than that they will live in them many years. For this reason they select designs that are different from those in the neighborhood, for that is what lends distinction to the new home; it reflects the "individuality" of the owners. Nothing is so inartistic as a row of houses that all present the same appearance. Undoubtedly the reader has cast his eye along a street in which the homes were all built at the same time, by the same builder. There may be slight changes in the roof lines of the different houses; the porches may be larger or smaller, and placed at different points; but the general effect "sameness" that leads to the thought that "here is a neighborhood of a people who have no ideas, or, rather, no ideas different from their neighbors, when it comes to building a

To meet this desire for something different from the general run, architects have racked their brains, called on their experience and education and have evolved from their minds so many different home designs that every decorative scheme I've tried, the there is little if any excuse for the woodwork stands out like a sore prospective builder to have anything thumb. "Fur" From Sheep

Karakul is the fur of sheep known as karakul. The karakul sheep takes its name from Kara Kul (Black lake), a village in the eastern Vokhara, province of central Asia. The fur is taken from the young karakul lambs when they are but a few days old, as the character of the curls deteriorates with age. The skins of prematurely born lambs have value as fur, but the ewes are not sacrificed to secure them.

The Chief Executive planned to make the automobile trip to Rapid City frequently to attend to the more pressing business of his office. On his way west the President stopped a few hours in the Calumet region of northwestern Indiana to help in the dedication of Wicker park, the war memorial of Lake county. In his address he spoke of the prosperity and growth of the country in a material way, but he mildly chided the nation for delinquencies.

"In spite of all this progress," he said, "we are still a great distance from what we would like to be. Our delinquencies are sufficient to require us to put forth all our efforts to work toward their elimination. Although our government is sound and our courts are excellent, too many of us disregard the obligations of citizenship by neglecting to vote, and violence and crime are altogether too prevalent. The number who are lacking in religious devotion is altogether too large.

"While we have reached the highest point in material prosperity ever achieved, there is a considerable class of unskilled workers who have not come into full participation of the wealth of the nation."

One of the bursts of applause greet ed the President's reference to Col. Charles Lindbergh when he said:

"The ideals which we seek must be practical. We are lavish in our admiration of realities. When one of your Western young men is the first to fly from America to Europe our country hails him with a popular acclaim so spontaneous, so genuine, as to disclose the true values of our national character.'

South Dakota as a whole welcomed the President warmly as the special train made its way across the broad prairies, hesitating at the farm centers long enough to give the inhabitants a glimpse of the Chief Executive and his charming wife. The official welcome was staged at Pierre, the capital, where the President and Mrs. Coolidge were prevailed upon to change their program slightly, leaving the train and taking their place at the head of a parade which went through cheering crowds in the business section. Governor Bulow, Senator Norbeck, Representative Christopherson, committeemen, legislators, newspaper editors, farmers, and business men from all the central section were on hand to greet the President and escort him from town to town.

N EW YORK went completely daffy over Col. Charles Lindbergh when he flew there from Washington. The city gave him a reception never before equalled. As the young master of the air said, it was "the reception of Paris, Brussels, London and Washington rolled into one." Millions of the inhabitants of the metropolis stood in a line stretching from the Battery to Central park as the pretentious parade passed, madly cheering the hero and struggling for opportunity to see him. From all the buildings along the route paper confetti was hurled until it appeared as if the marchers were passing through a heavy snow storm. At the city hall Mayor Walker greeted arm herself up to the same general them at graduation.

the colonel as the son of one immigrant to the son of another, and pinned on his coat the city's gold medal of honor; the aviator talked briefly to the throng through the microphone; his mother was called to the front and introduced to the roaring crowd, and the procession resumed its march to Central park. At the Eternal Light at Madison square there was a pause while Lindbergh laid a wreath at the base of the memorial. At the Mall the colonel was met by Governor Smith who presented him with the state medal of valor. Colonel Lindbergh spent most of the week in New York and was entertained extensively, though he found some time to rest. Early Thursday morning he unexpectedly flew down to Washington and returned to New York in a few hours with his transatlantic plane, and on Friday he flew in it for St. Louis, where another rousing welcome was accorded him lasting three days. Lindbergh says he hopes to visit many American cities in the "Spirit of St. Louis" for the purpose of boosting commercial aviation. To date he has signed only one contract—for a book describing his flight to Paris.

Chamberlain and Levine spent a jolly week in Germany waiting for their plane to be repaired. They visited various cities and were handsomely entertained. Commander Byrd had his Fokker monoplane America all ready at New York for a flight to Europe with Bert Acosta as his companion but was delayed by adverse weather conditions. Hope for the rescue of Nungesser and Coli sprang up when reports came that flares had been seen in the wilds of northern Quebec, but unhappily the stories were soon discredited. Commander de Pinedo, Italian "four continent flyer," completed his tour, returning from the Azores to Italy via Portugal and Lieuts. F. B. McConnell and C. Anlerson of the army were killed during air maneuvers at Langley field when their plane crashed and burned.

S OVIET RUSSIA'S rage over the murder of her ambassador to Poland, following the break with Great Britain, was enough to cause grave concern to European statesmen, and it was aggravated when the Polish court before which the assassin of Voikof was tried found the youth, Boris Kowode, guilty but sentenced him to life imprisonment instead of death and requested the President of Poland to commute the sentence to fifteen years. Kowode's lawyers turned the trial into one of bolshevism and its terrorist activities rather than one of the slayer. The Soviet rulers seem actually to be trying to intimidate the enemies of communism, for they are executing scores of men many of whom they accused of being spies in the pay of other governments, and then gloatingly announcing the executions to the world. They also decided to exile many thousands to Siberia. The Russian territorial army reserves, numbering some 300,000, usually called out for three weeks' practice, have been notified they are to stay in the service four months, and as most of them were being concentrated along the Polish frontier Poland was frankly alarmed. Members of the League of Nations council, which met in Geneva, considered taking formal collective action denouncing Russian communistic propaganda abroad, but abandoned the plan at the request of Poland.

HE league council discussed the I prospects of the projected disarmament conference and decided the second reading of the preparatory pland should be held early in November. Only Herr Stresemann, German foreign minister, criticized the lack of progress.

"I regret the inability to advance a solution for the problem, and even if the second reading does not result in failure, a solution seems delayed to the distant future. The convenant of the league says all nations must reduce their armaments," insisted Herr Stresemann, voicing the German government's thesis that if the rest of the powers cannot agree to reduce standard as her European neighbors. Germany notified the ambassadors' council that the forts on its eastern frontier had been demolished, as required, and demanded that the Rhineland occupational forces be reduced accordingly. France agreed to this provided Marshal Foch be permitted to examine the forts and found the German statement to be correct.

WHILE negotiations for a compromise between Chiang Kai-Shek, Chang Tso-lin and the governor of Shansi province were proceding, the Nanking Nationalist army continued its advance toward Peking and captured the important city of Haichow near the Shantung border. The southerners, according to reports, "committed robbery and outrage in wholesale fashion." Gen. Feng Yu-hsiang has pledged allegiance to the Hankow faction of the Nationalists and has been given command of its drive on Peking. Roger Green of the Rockefeller Foundation at Peking, accompanied by 29 physicians and nurses, has gone to Hankow to help in the care of some 12,-000 wounded soldiers gathered in hospitals from the Honan battlefields. Antagonism against the Japanese is steadily increasing in southern China and it is still feared they are planning to reoccupy Shantung province in order to prevent the Nationalists from driving out Chang Tso-lin. Representatives of the Japanese communities in Manchuria have sent to Tokyo demands that the government prevent the civil war from entering Manchuria and Mongolia and that all Japanese investments and nationals there be protected.

N THE recent elections in the Irish Free State the government secured 46 seats, a net loss of 7, in the Dail Eireann; Fianna Fail (De Valera's party), 44; the Sinn Fein, 5; Labor, 22; Farmers, 11; Independent, 14; National league, 8, and Independent Republicans, 2. President seats than at the dissolution. It is believed he will annex ten members from the farmers and independents and be stronger than before the election. Eamon De Valera says his 44 will refuse to take the oath of allegiance to the king. If they hold out, another election is probable.

WEDNESDAY was a busy day for Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury. He took in almost $400,000,-000 in income and other tax payments, due on the completion of the second quarter of the calendar year. He took in about $89,000,000, paid by the debtor nations of Europe on Amer ican war loans. He sold $249,598,300 of new treasury 3% per cent bonds. Then he paid off maturing short term securities aggregating $378,000,000 and paid $70,000,000 in interest on various issues of the Liberty bonds.

The recipts went to swell the $600,-000,000 surplus for the fical year expiring June 30, next, and the retirement of Liberty bonds and refinancing involved in the transactions means the reduction in the annual interest on the public debt many millions of dollars.

Great Britain turned in $67,575,000, which was its ninth semi-annual payment of interest. France paid $10,-000,000 "on account," Italy paid $5,-000,000, and smaller payments were made by the other debtor nations.

N OBLES of the Mystic Shrine gathered in great numbers at Atlantic City for their annual meeting, and 100,000 wearers of the fez took part in a mammoth night parade along the five-mile Boardwalk that was said to be the finest procession ever seen in the resort city. Clarence M. Dunbar of Palestine temple, Providence. R. I., was elevated to the office of imperial potentate to succeed David M. Crossland.

RIGHT START FOR CALF IMPORTANT

"Give the calf a good start. The first six months of its life is not only the most expensive time, but also the most critical period and the time when most difficulties appear."

The suggestion made by Prof. F. W. Atkeson, dairy husbandman for the University of Idaho.

"Most dairymen," he says, "make a practice of leaving the calf with its mother for at least the first day or possibly longer, depending on the condition of the cow and calf. The first milk, called colostrum, is high in minerals and protein which start the calf's development. It also tends to put the digestive tract in good condition and it develops disease-preventing antibodies in the blood.

"After the calf is removed from its dam it should be fed its own mother's milk for four or five days, after which time it may be given mixed milk from the entire herd. For calves of the smaller breeds, like Jerseys or Guernseys, from six to eight pounds per day, divided into either two or three equal feeds at regular intervals, may be fed. Larger breeds, like Holsteins, will need ten to twelve pounds per day. In a few days the quantity may be raised two pounds if the calf seems able to bear it. It is well to bear in mind, however, that more calves die from overfeeding than from underfeeding.

"The calf may be safely changed from whole milk to skim milk at any time after two weeks of age, the time depending upon such conditions as the value of calves and milk. The change should be made gradually by substituting one pound of skim milk for one pound of whole milk each day. As the calf gets older the milk allowance may be increased until at three months it is receiving from fifteen to twenty pounds per day.

"It must here be borne in mind that the fat removed from the milk must be replaced by grain. The calf should be encouraged to eat grain as early as possible and for the first three or four months should be fed all it will consume at each feeding. After this grain may be limited to three pounds a day. The calves should have water and salt before them at all times. Fresh, good quality hay should be fed regularly as early as the calves will consume it."

Utensils of Dairy Must

Be Thoroughly Cleaned Everything that comes in contact with milk and cream needs washing and scalding after use. Milk contains an abundance of food for bacteria. When particles of milk are left in the milk utensils they soon sour and produce objectionable odors and flavors. Unless these breeding places for bacteria are removed quickly and thoroughly they cause the milk and cream of the next milking to become contaminated and spoil. It does not make any difference how clean and sweet the fresh milk may be, the cream cannot reach the creamery in good condition if handled in unwashed or unclean utensils.

After use the milk pails, strainer, dipper, separator and all other utensils should first be rinsed with cold water. This will remove the milk which adheres to them. This thorough rinsing makes the washing easier. Then the utensils should be washed with hot water that contains some alkali, such as washing powder. A brush and plenty of elbow grease is also necessary. After washing they should be rinsed and thoroughly scalded with plenty of boiling hot water.

Where the milking is done with a machine the rubber tubes and teat cups should be placed in a disinfectant solution and allowed to soak until the next milking. Then they should be rinsed out with clean water before using.

In Selecting Herd Bull

Carefully Study Records When selecting a herd bull, see to it that he is not only of satisfactory individuality himself, but that his ancestry is a fair guarantee of a continuance of that individuality in his get. Satisfied on this point, study the pedigree. If you are a Holstein breeder, for instance, you will want to know the conditions under which the sevenday records were made, and you will also want to know how much 365-day blood is in the more or less immediate ancestry. You will also want to know if the butter records were made with a normal Holstein percentage of fat, or whether the large butter records were made from a relatively small quantity of milk.

When cows are kept in stables it is of special importance that they receive a daily grooming. If the long hairs on the flanks and udder are clipped it will aid in keeping these parts clean. In addition to grooming, it is important that a damp cloth be used to wipe off any dirt or dust from these regions before the cow is milked. Sufficient bedding, proper construction of the stables and frequent cleaning of both the stables and the cows will make for sanitary conditions.

HOW=

WORD "YES" IS BECOMING OBSOLETE IN AMERICA .-There are many substitutes for the word "yes" in the English language, says Prof. Louise Pound of the University of Nebraska, the Progressive relates.

Foreigners and teachers of English remark concerning the lessening use in American speech of the affirmative, "yes." It is still used in written discourse, but it seems to be disappearing from oral speech. "Yes" is a compound or "yet-so," or perhaps of the old Anglo-Saxon "gea si," "yea be it." It was well established in the Sixteenth century, alongside the historic affirmative "vea" and the competing "aye," which appeared in the last part of the century. "Yes" is now being replaced by a variety of forms.

A canvass of substitutes for "yes" in a room containing more than a hundred young people brought to light the following list as well as others of less interest. Substitutes like "all right," "you bet," "O. K." and the group of nasal expression, "nh-nh," "uh-huh," etc., were not taken into account. All of the forms listed were known to many persons among the hundred or more questioned. Those known to only a few perhaps were not taken:

Yeth, yum, yo, yaw, yezz, chess, chass, chahes, chuss, des, yair, chow, yip, yaw, yap, yop, yup, yurp, yis, yuss, yays, chassm, hya, eye-ah, yass, yahss, yazz, ye-us, yahuzz, ye-y-ss, yeh, ye-ah, yessir, shassm, yar.

Mainly, these mutilated forms of "yes" are colloquial. But they are employed by many who seem never to use "ves" in its standard form.

How Nature Provides for Breath in Trees

Do trees really breathe? This question is answered by Charles Gillett, breathe to keep life in our bodies," he says, "so do trees breathe as long as they live. Other processes are intermittent, but breathing must go on, day and night, winter and summer, as long as life lasts. In the winter the tree is not growing and breathes only ning. I want to take long strides enough to keep it alive. The leaves are the lungs of plants and through and the barley and the rye and althem respiration takes place. In the falfa. winter time the bark carries on the work of the leaves. Examine closely raised dots on the surface. These are the lenticles or the breathing spores. A tree takes on in the winter the temduring the cold weather the water in the tree freezes solid. Ice crystals and blue green suits. form within the tree, where there is ample room for the process to take place. This process serves as a protection for the tissues against alternate freezing and thawing. The cell sap stiffens in excessive cold, but when the thermometer rises life stirs again."-Pathfinder Magazine.

How Plant Saved Travelers

A party of travelers who recently returned to Texas owed their lives, when lost in a terrible storm that swept the prairies, to a plant which has, on more than one occasion, been responsible for saving human beings.

This plant, which was first brought to the attention of the scientific world by Gen. Benjamin Alvord, is one of the most remarkable in the world. Known as the compass plant, it received its name from the strange prop- the water skimming, skipping along. erty exhibited by its leaves of presenting their faces to the rising and and see the trees bend and hear them setting sun. How Nervous Are Helped

A therapeutic-industrial workshop for the rehabilitation of nervous girls and women has been opened recently by the vocational adjustment bureau, New York city. The aim of the workshop is to form a bridge between recovery from mental illness and re-entrance into industry, and in some instances where an early diagnosis of an imminent breakdown had been made, it has functioned as a preventive

How to Clean Bottles

How We Get Olive Oil Olive oil is prepared from the fruit of the olive trees. The olives are gathered just before the period of maturity, then they are crushed in a mill; pressed in a hydraulic press, then filtered. The best edible oils are not heated.

THE WIDE-AWAKE WIND

It was long past the time when and even those who had felt quite studied during the semester. wide-awake at bedtime were now sound, sound asleep.

Only the wind was wide-awake. And why not? The wind had been sleeping for three whole days.

That is a pretty long sleep and enough certainly to rest a strong and energetic old creature like the wind. He had been asleep in his own sleeping place. For of course you know the wind has a special place where he goes and sleeps. It is a wonderful place and although no human has ever seen it, the fairies and the brownies, the birds and the breezes, the clouds and the sun, all know about it. And people know a little bit about it, too. At least they know, after a fashion, that the wind has a place where he goes when he wants to sleep. For when the wind quiets down after the wind has been blowing and tear-

"The wind has died down." The wind always has gone to his sleeping palace when they say that. Then the breezes blow just softly and gently enough so that it soothes the wind and makes him sleep so restfully, then the little bees and insects hum and sing ever so softly, which is also very soothing. Then the creatures who live about the wind's sleeping palace put on their slippers made of moss so that they will not awaken the wind.

But he had been asleep for three days now and he was feeling so wide-

"Funny," he said to himself, as he blew a great long whistle, "that people should all be sleeping."

In that way, you see, he was like those who cannot understand how some one else feels sleepy when they North Dakota forester. "Just as we have had their sleep and feel all rested.

"Yes, he repeated," it is funny that they should all be asleep.

"As for me I feel wide-awake. "I feel like blowing everywhere. Oh, I want to wander far this eveacross the prairies and blow the wheat

"I want to take great steps across the tall roofs in the big cities and the twigs of a tree and find the little blow around the city corners and blow down the long streets.

"I want to take a rolling, tumbling, rough trip across the ocean and see perature of the surrounding air, and the waves rise up to meet me and greet me with their gay white caps

"I want to take steps across running streams and little lakes and blow "I want to go to the great forests

"In fact they have sung far more beautifully for if they had had an audience they could never have sung so well. The forest trees need their own setting for their voices. Places where there are crowds of people would not do for the forest trees. "There would not be enough of them, and there would be too many people.

"Oh, I am so wide-awake. I shall start off now, and oh, such a trip as I will have."

So the wide-awake wind went off, and he took long strides across the prairies, and great steps across the tall roofs in the cities and around the city corners.

And he took a tumbling, rolling trip across the ocean, and he took steps across little brooks and lakes and rivers, and then he went to the great forests. And he sang and the trees

And all over, that night the wideawake wind gave his strange, beautiful, wild, lonely, comforting song to the sleeping world.
