Bach Farmers Capture Mexican Laborer Sunday after Five Mile Chase.

The curiosity of a child led to the quick apprehension of Ben Gutirrez, a Mexican sugar beet laborer of Ashmore, who is charged with the death of Tony Rodriguez, who lived 61/2 miles southwest of Ashmore, and who was also a sugar beet laborer.

Charles Kundinger, a farmer living 3-4 mile north of Bach, and members of his family noticed a Ford touring car pass their home about 8:30 o'clock Sunday morning. The car lacked a tire and when Mr. Kundinger saw the car stop at the corner one mile north of Bach and pull to the side of the highway, he thought the driver intended to replace the tire on the wheel. To the sheriff, Gutirrez confessed that he had done the killing but that it had been in self defense. He said the two men left Ashmore about eight o'clock Sunday morning. There had been a dispute about money on the way and when they were driving north of Bach, Rodriguez attacked him with a knife. BACTERIAL COUNT IN MILK PLANTS by the United States Depart-ment of Agriculture.) In an effort to help the average milk-plant operator locate the causes of sudden "hops" in the bacterial content of bottled milk. Ernest Kelly, in charge of market milk investigations, bureau of dairy industry, United States Department of Agriculture, is conducting a study of at least 100 representative plants. It is important that the count be kept as low as possible, and although increases during handling may be relatively small it is of considerable help to the plant operator to know where and why any sudden increases are likely to take

Data secured from 20 plants studied to date show that certain operations in the plant, such as sterilization of equipment and storage, are more apt to be slighted than others, and that noticeable increases in bacteria take place as a result.

The discovery that decided jumps in children were Elkton callers Saturbacterial count often take place after day evening. the milk has been bottled and while in storage awaiting delivery has led to the further study of temperature conditions in the average storage room. Two men are now engaged in this work and are making observations in a number of storage rooms, noting the differences in temperature in all parts of the room. Daily variations as great as 34 degrees Fahrenheit have been noted.

It is expected that the complete study will reveal the specific operamum. Such a guide as to possible sources of trouble should be of considerable value to the milk plant operator who is not in a position to employ a specialist.

Buckwheat and Products

Make Good Dairy Feeds Ground buckwheat and other buckwheat products are valuable feed for cattle, for they may be used as a partial substitute for, or as a supplement to wheat bran and gluten feeds, according to the department of animal husbandry at the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y.,

The total digestible nutrients in ground buckwheat are worth about the same as those in oats or wheat bran, providing the buckwheat is properly mixed with other feeds. A suitable, medium-protein mixture, containing ground buckwheat, may be made of 300 pounds of ground oats or barley, 200 pounds of ground buckwheat, 200 pounds of cotton-seed meal, and 100 pounds of oil meal.

Buckwheat middlings contain 1,532 pounds of total digestible nutrients in digestible protein. This refers only to the middlings from which the hulls have been removed, and, in this form some dairymen consider them equal to or better than gluten feed for milk production. A mixture containing buckwheat middlings may be made of 200 pounds of bran or oats, 300 pounds buckwheat middlings, and 100 pounds cottonseed meal.

When comparing the prices of buckwheat feeds with other standard feeds. ground buckwheat may be compared to wheat bran and buckwheat middlings to gluten feed.

Milking Cows Require

Some Grain on Pasture Under average New Jersey conditions, pasture alone is not adequate for cows in milk. Experience has shown that they need a grain mixture containing 12 to 16 per cent protein, says Carl B. Bender, assistant dairy hushandman at the experiment station, New Brunswick.

Many of the more successful dairymen follow the practice of feeding sufficient grain to keep the animals from losing flesh because of production stimulated by the pasture grasses Care is taken not to turn the cows out until the grass is five inches high. and for the first few days they are left out only an hour or two. This is to avoid grassy and garlicky flavors in the milk and to avoid intestinal disorders.

As a means of prolonging the life of pastures the experiment station sug gests dividing the area into four or five lots and moving the cows from one to another every five or ten days In this way the animals are assured of a good supply of fresh grass throughout the season.

Even where pasture grass is ample and fresh, a good supply of clean fresh water has been found highly desirable.

China Buys Dairy Cows

Apparently the revolutions in China are not expected to upset the demand for dairy products. A Vancouver firm. acting for a large dairy concern at Shanghai, reports that within the next two years the Shanghai dairy will add 200 head to its herd of 300 and British Columbia as well as Western Canada breeders will be called on to supply the new stock. Orders have been received for 30 pure-bred Jerseys and 10 Holstein Orders have been received for 30 cows, to be shipped at an early date

"Seedy" Looking Man

The term "seedy" as applied to a person who is somewhat shabby really refers to a plant, the appearance of which is somewhat disorderly owing to the fact that it has gone to seed when all the strength has been exhausted in the process of seed development. The term "seedy" is especially applied to one whose clothing is unorderly and soiled and whose hair may be in need of brushing or cutting.

Fur From This One

The mink is one of the most widely known fur bearers of the North American weasel family, says Nature Magazine. It is long-bodied and heavily proportioned, while its short legs and arched body cause it to walk slowly and clumsily. It swims with ease and thus obtains fish, frogs, crayfish or clams as a part of its food, supplementing the diet of small mammals, moles, mice and rats. Length about fifteen to twenty inches.

MORE THAN OLD PLAYFELLOWS

(©, 1927, by D. J. Walsh.)

NGELA TREVOR had known Keith Gordon since the seventh mother related laughingly how Mrs. Gordon had come with her baby boy to call and how Angela and Keith had stared at each other, gurgled, and finally fought over a pink teething-

Angela was now thirty-one but she had no intention of marrying her old playfellow. He was only Keith of the teething-ring episode, Keith who had been so handy making a snow man, Keith who had helped her in geometry, and Keith who was still so useful when it came to entertaining her friends. There had never been anybody she liked better, but still she did not like him enough. And Keith, she was certain, felt the same way about her. Neither did he make love to anybody else. No brother and sister could ever have been more casually devoted, more unsentimentally fond of each other.

If Keith dropped in for an evening Angela did not find it necessary to change her dress or rearrange her hair for him. He took her as he found her. Sometimes he played chess with her father, sometimes he gossiped with her mother, sometimes the four of them tried a game of bridge. Occasionally he took her somewhere, but usually the whole "bunch" was included.

Altogether, she accepted Keith as a comfortable bit of furniture in her life. If he had not been there she would have missed him. Seeing he was always available she accepted him as a matter of course.

Tonight he had telephoned, asking her to meet him at the Stockford at seven for dinner and a concert afterward. She had accepted and then had sat calmly down to chat with Mrs. Galway, who had run in, and to embroider a bit of lingerie.

Mrs. Galway did not leave until six, and then Angela had to make such a toilet as haste would permit. She left her hair as it was, dabbed on a bit of powder, slipped into her black crepe-it wasn't the most becoming frock she had, but it was the easiest to don and she felt that it would do. Her father, of course, would take her to the Stockford; but her father was late home from the office. There was another delay, the car wouldn't spark or something. But at last she was on her way.

At 7:15 she walked into the Stockford, feeling sure that even though Keith had waited he would not mind. He was waiting, and she sailed hastily up to him with a smile and explanation.

'We got in a pocket at the corner of Cherry and Market," she said "I'm sorry, Keith."

"Nothing matters so long as you have really arrived and safely." She had expected that. All the same she thought he seemed annoyed.

done. The girl who stood near him really belonged to him.

A lovely girl, she was, slender, exquisitely gowned, every dark hair delicately in place, perfect of poise as one who is entirely sure of her appearance.

"Miss Mary Ives," Keith introduced them gravely.

Mary Ives! Not Don Ives' little girl grown into this vision of young womanhood! Why! Don had been something of a beau to Angela when they were fourteen. It was a shock, but she braced her self to meet the consequences. How had Keith come by this girl, anyway? "You didn't tell me-" she murmured reproachfully.

"I didn't know. Don telephoned that he had a business engagement while in town and asked me to look out for his little girl." He smiled at the little girl and she smiled back adorably-at him. "I had already asked you so I thought that between us we could give Mary a very good

Angela was not sure of that. From the look in Mary's eyes she was convinced that Mary could have had a better time with Keith alone, and she began to feel uneasily that Keith was going to enjoy Mary a lot more than she wished he would. There was another thing, too. She felt mightily uncomfortable when she saw herself presently in the many mirrors of the Stockford dining room. No doubt of it, she looked tousled. The contrast was terrible—she was common in appearance, Mary so fresh and charming. Everybody was looking at Mary; Keith looked at her, too.

It was a bitter hour for Angela and growing more bitter with each moment. Mary could laugh and talk. Mary-she knew with that sixth sense of women-Mary loved to see her squirm. And Keith did not know ounces. she was squirming; maybe he did not care.

When she could not eat, Mary inquired tenderly:

"Headache, old dear?" Stressing the "old" ever so little.

The concert afterward! It seemed Mary was studying music and she had the patter of the profession. Angela, whose knowledge, though considerable, lay in other directions, sat silent, and distraught. She began to hate the blithesome Mary; she began to hate Keith. No! If she had hated Roman poems.

him she would not have suffered so deeply.

It was over at last. Keith took her home in a taxi-accompanied by Mary. What would they say and do when she was no longer with them? She had never dreamed that she had such a rampant imagination.

She cried on her pillow like a little girl. For she knew now that she loved Keith. How else could she feel than the way she did? It was terrible next day. They were nearly through dinner when her father remarked casually: "Keith said he was coming up this evening."

That was all, but the world whirled in rosy waves.

Mother was kind. "If you want to fix up a little, dear, I'll do the dishes. There aren't many. Mrs. Dix cleared everything up before she went home." Nobly, however, Angela did her share. Then she flew to her room. She did her hair over and stuck a comb in it. she freshened up her face.

she put on her newest and bluest frock. And then she looked at herself, long and critically, in the glass. It paid to take pains. He was in the living room talking to her parents when she came down. She felt his eyes appraise, realized that the mere fact that she had

As his eyes questioned her Angela spoke daringly, breathless. "Perhaps we are now," she said.

Scared Hungry Guests

Horace Fletcher, who ardently urged everyone to live to extreme old age by indefinite mastication, so that the word "fletcherize" is now definitely fixed in the English language, and who himself died comparatively young, once gave a dinner to which he invited a number of well-known men at Yale, including President Hadley, Professor Lounsbury, Walter Camp and John Hays Hammond.

Knowing his hobby, the guests naturally wondered what they would get to eat. At the appointed time they were shown into a private room at the Graduates' club in New Haven, where they were not surprised to find the table set with the severest simplicity. Instead of china, white crockery was used, and the chief table decorations were three large crockery pitchers filled with ice water. At each place was a crockery saucer containing a shredded wheat biscuit.

The guests sighed. Their worst apprehensions were being confirmed, but just as they had sadly taken their places the head waiter came to the door and announced that by mistake they had been shown into the wrong room. Then Mr. Fletcher appeared, and with an inimitable twinkle in his eve. led his guests into another private dining room, where a most sump-And then she saw that he was not tuous repast had been provided.

British Museum Mail

Yields Rare Articles

The mail man with the most interesting route in the world is the one who drops his bag at the British museum each morning. And the contents of that bag make far and away the most extraordinary postal delivery received by anyone in England. Each delivery is a veritable grabbag in curios. Gems, stones, arrowheads, old books, rubbish, shells, bits of leather, fossils, postage stamps, live animals, stomachs pickled in alcohol, coins, butterflies, weapons, bonesthis is the sort of ragbag collection which the museum officials discover with almost grotesque excitement upon opening the mail in the morning. Though there is seldom anything of decided value, the mass of stuff is always sorted out and weeded carefully for any rare and valuable curio. Most of the senders expect no acknowledgment or reward-in fact. there is no return address on many of the parcels. Evidently they do it for fun. But is it? Ask the postman.

Champion Gum Chewer

Hard won, but shortly worn, were the laurels of him who brought fame to Chicago by the prowess of his mighty jaws—jaws which set a world's record for chewing gum by masticating forty-four sticks at one time. Henry Williams, nineteen years old, of Baltimore, Md., read about that and surmised that he might do better. He did by pushing in forty-six sticks before he had a mouthful. The chewed gum was examined to see that no untouched sticks were concealed within it, and it was found to be all that could be desired. The forty-six were reduced to one mass of plasticity, weighing exactly two and one-quarter

Strength in Unity

The expression, "United we stand, divided we fall," was used in a poem entitled "The Flag of Our Union," by George Pope Morris. The earliest use of the words in America was in Dickinson's "Liberty Song," first published in the Boston Gazette on the 18th of July 1768. The thought expressed in the lines, however, is much older, and may be found in the early

WHY= BLEAK PACIFIC ISLE MAY SOLVE ORIGIN OF INDIANS

Primitive People on Nunivak May Be Connecting Link With Ancient Mongolians.

Anchorage, Alaska.—Far out in Bering sea lies Nunivak island. On this bleak bit of land, 70 miles long by peraps 50 wide. lives a tribe or tribes of people who may be the link connecting the American Indians with the people of ancient Mongolia.

Washed on all sides by treacherous shoals and beaten continually by roaring, pitching surf, ships have always given Nunivak island a wide berth. Only once a year the government cutters or the Boxer of the United States bureau of education dare send a boat ashore.

The landing parties always came back with tales of the most primitive peoples in Alaska. The natives are divergent from the mainland tribes and retain many of the ancient customs of the original native.

If they came directly from Siberia or Mongolia there will be something on the island to connect them with the Asiatic land. Noted scientists, Henry B. Collier and T. Dale Stewart, both of Washington, D, C., are aboard the Boxer en route to Nunivak. They will try to discover how long man has inhabited the island. To do this they intend to dig deep into the old soil, turn out the sepulchers, and unearth utensils, weapons, and relics to add to museum collections. The scientists will make measurements of the native physique, records of their language and observations of tribal customs and art. The Nunivak tribes have lived on the island for hundreds of years, with comparatively Mr. LePla remained and is spending little contact with white man's civilization. It is expected they will possess furs, curios, ivory, and perhaps

Bargain in Train Fares

Hits Even Baby Buggies Glasgow, Scotland.—Merry-go-rounds and even the donkeys in the children's playgrounds have been hard hit by the bargain-rate fare of the Glasgow tramways, which give a two-hour ride for a fraction less than 4 cents.

Baby carriage manufacturers, too, have been affected by the cheap rate tickets. Their business has fallen off because mothers have found it convenient to allow the nurse to take baby for a street-car ride instead of pushing the youngster about the park. This innovation also has had a tendency to make the nurses more content with their tasks and saves shoe leather besides.

Since the twenty-one mile ride for two coppers was inaugurated last July more than 60,000,00 passengers have made use of it-an increase of 13,000,-000 over the previous year—and given the corporation an additional revenue of £55,000.

who specialized in little family cars designed for the average working man say their business has suffered more than the baby carriage trade, because a car ride new is cheaper than buying gasoline.

Spanish Mayor Learns

Women Can't Be Bossed Almendralejo, Spain .- The mayor of this mountain town near the Portuguese frontier is determined to save his woman constituents from the taint of short skirts and bobbed hair despite their assertions that they don't wish to be saved.

But his honor, Senor Francisco Montero de la Barrera, has adopted new tactics. He has abandoned his proposal to fine women who appear on the streets in short hair or abbreviated skirts. Instead he will present this year prizes to the two most charming maidens of his city of 13,000 inhabitants who maintain the old-fashioned long hair and skirts.

British Doctor Explains That Gum Chewing Habit

Birmingham, Eng.-"There's a reason" for chewing gum, it appears from an article written by Dr. W. J. Burns Selkirk, in the British Medical Journal. "Presumably," declares the writer, "it is analogous in effect to the baby's comforter. It seems capable of producing even the state of mind of the ruminating cow and its Buddhistic calm." The doctor also suggests that gum can be offered as a substitute for cigarettes to excessive smokers, that it is useful in curing the "chocolate habit," and that it acts as a sedative for frayed nerves and insomnia.

30.000 School Children

Die on Roads in 5 Years Washington. - Thirty thousand school children, most of them less than thirteen, were killed on the highways during the five-year period ending January 1, 1927, the American Road Builders' association stated recently. A survey of accident conditions over this period revealed that more than 3,000,000 persons had been sent to hospitals as a result of street and highway accidents, in addition to the loss of more than 100,000 lives.

Red Light Is the Universal Danger Signal

People have sometimes wondered why danger signals on railroads are red. Why do they put up a red light on a switch stand instead of some other color to indicate that the switch is open? Many explanations have been given, such as the common one that red, being the color of blood, is the natural danger signal. But the real reason, as given by Harry A. Stewart in the American Magazine, is quite commonplace.

White lights were barred, of course, because the engineer might mistake the light in a window or a street light for a signal. Red was chosen because the red rays are less easily obscured by fog or smoke than any other color (except white) and can, therefore, be seen farther under adverse conditions. The red beam has 40 per cent the intensity of white light; green has 25 per cent, and violet is still lower.

As it is important that the danger signal be visible at the greatest possible distance and as the red beam has the greatest intensity of any of the colors, it was chosen for the danger light. Green on the railroad is the safety light.

How Herb Uses Were Found Some of the plants for which new uses were found during the World war are: Sphagnum moss, dressing for wounds; charcoal from fruit pits, used nettle for making textiles; meal obtained from clover, horse chestnuts, oats, Indian corn, barley, beans, peas and buckwheat used in place of flour; roasted barley and oats, and roasted acorns and beechnuts, used for coffee. In Germany eventually a substitute for coffee was made from carrots and yellow turnips; bloom of the linden tree mixed with beech buds was found to make an excellent beverage; roasted peas and oats form a substitute for

Why Yew in Churchyards Why were yew trees planted in English churchyards? Several reasons have been given by readers of a London newspaper. One is that clergymen planted them because they liked their gloomy appearance. Another is that yew trees were believed to be poisonous and so were planted to discourage cattle from wandering on church property. In ancient days arm. bows and arrows were made from yews and churchyards were regarded as safe places for plantations.

More Interest in Texas.

During the past year the state of Texas has been experiencing a more velopment than the average for the rest of the country. Nothing approaching the land boom in Florida has occurred, nor is an immediate prospect; but continued expansion, stimulated by the great prosperity resulting from the oil and agricultural development, appears probable. The livestock industry of Texas is contributing to the current favorable level of purchasing power. The current high quotations for cattle (in contrast with low hog prices), along with relatively low feeding costs, in-

This home, which provides ample space for a convenient office, also has all of the features which make the separate dwelling worth while. The office is so situated that it interferes very little with the arrangement of the rest of the house.

Select Site for Your

Home With Discretion In considering a site for your own home it is quite necessary that your lot be at least forty feet wide. A lot narrower than this does not permit a proper distance between buildings, and cuts off the necessary amount of air and light. A reasonable space is also necessary in order to guard against spread of fire from one building to another. A lot that is too narrow necessitates a certain type of house-one that is long and narrow, and this is not usually the most attractive style. On the other hand, a lot that is too wide is a source of unnecessary labor and expense. There will be more terrace or curb lawn to care for and a longer expanse of sidewalk to build and keep clean. The assessment for street improvements is also estimated from the number of feet frontage. A lot should not be selected that is too shallow for a few outbuildings, a clothes yard and a small space for vegetables or flowers. The buyer of a lot should always bear in mind the possibility of some day selling, and should select a site which will appear attractive to others. If possible, choose a lot with some shade-trees on it. If there are none, set some out at once, but do not make the mistake of buying quick-growing trees which will afterward prove a nuisance.

Be careful to select a lot on the

GIVEN FORTUNE OF OLD FRIENDS

Made Heir by Brother and Sister He Met When a Student.

Toronto, Ont.-Romance as highly colored as a fairy tale has gilded the personal fortunes of R. B. Bennett, K. C., who comes into national prominence as a formidable contender for the leadership of the Conservative party in Canada. Through his own efforts in the practice of his profession Bennett is credited with having become a millionaire. On top of this he now enjoys a "windfall" which, if it were an episode described in fiction, would be challenged for straining credulity.

When Bennett, nearly 40 years ago, was studying law in Chatham, N. B., along with Max Aitken, now Lord Beaverbrook, among his friends were sister and brother, Jennie Shirreff and Harry Shirreff, both of whom were a few years his senior. They worked together in church and in the temperance lodge.

Girl Trains as Nurse.

Whether sentiment existed between Jennie Shirreff and the young law student is not known. In any case, their ways parted. The girl went to Brookline, near Boston, to train as nurse. Bennett went to the new town of Calgary, Alberta, to practice his profession, and grow up with the West. In 1894 Jennie Shirreff married Ezra Butler Eddy of Ottawa, proprietor and founder of the E. B. Eddy company, paper, pulp and woodenware manufacturers, whose daughter by a former marriage she had served professionally.

When, 12 years later Eddy died, his will declared it to be "one of the great desires of his heart" that his business should be continued. To that end he established a trust with his widow as one of the trustees to operate for ten years, at the end of which period his widow was to ininherit five-eighths of the estate.

Thus in 1916 the former nurse came into possession of a controlling interest of one of the great industries of Canada. She brought to her new responsibility an executive capacity which had found play even during her husband's lifetime when she had : accompanied him on his daily rounds and had become familiar with every detail of his enterprises.

Meanwhile Bennett had reached Ottawa as a member of the house of commons. He, like Jennie Shirreff, had prospered and they resumed their contact on equal terms.

Names Bennett as Trustee.

In 1921 Mrs. Eddy died. Like her husband, she also established a trust which was not to be broken for five years. She appointed as trustees and executors of her estate her brother, J. T. "Harry" Shirreff, who held an important executive position in the Eddy company, and "my friend for the last 50 years, Richard Bedford Bennett, barister." As trustees she directed that her brother was to receive $15,000 and Bennett $7,500 a

New Discovery Will Save Guinea Pigs

Denver, Colo.-Lives of millions of guinea pigs, hitherto known as the "test tubes" of tuberculosis, probably will be saved in the future, thanks to a discovery made in the laboratory of the Denver Jewish hos-

For years guinea pigs were the only known medium for producing tuberculosis bacilli for experimental innoculations. Not only were thousands of the animals sacrificed to science, but thousands of dollars were spent in raising them in hospitals throughout the country.

After months of experimentation, Dr. H. J. Carper, director of the Denver institution, was able to produce the tuberculosis germs through the use of a specially treated potato medium.

One hundred tests. Doctor Carper said, now may be made with the potato germs at the cost of one where germs from guinea pigs were used.

He added that the germs from the potato culture are in daily use in the Denver hospital and that he expected their use to become universal within the next few months.

Hen's Eggs Sell at Rate of $300 a Dozen

Vancouver, B. C.—Three eggs laid "Maizie," world's champion hen owned by the University of British Columbia, have been sold to a Texas poultry breeder for $25 apiece or at a rate of $300 a dozen, according to an announcement by Prof. Everton A. Lloyd The "miracle" hen recently broke all previous records by producing 351 eggs in a 365-day test.

"This is the highest price ever paid for a hen's eggs," said Professor Lloyd. "If the entire set of 351 eggs had been sold at $25 apiece, the pullet's production for the year would have been worth $8,775.

"'Maizie's' record in the egg laying contest was four eggs ahead of the vorld's previous high mark held by an Australian bird which laid 347 eggs in a year's official test. The former record held in North America was established by a pullet at the Puyallup (Wash.) experiment station, which laid 335 eggs in 365 days."

Scientific poultry breeding, it is pointed out, is improving the standard of Canadian flocks. Some of the finest birds on the continent are said to be owned in the Dominion. Poultry is becoming an important farm sideline in western Canada. New settlers entering the mixed farming areas find hens profitable. Elimination of nonlayer and scrub stock from the barnyards is helping to develop the

SILAGE IS MOST ECONOMICAL FEED

Every dairy farmer worthy of the name should have a silo, because dairying is rarely, if ever, profitable in these days without one. However, whenever a farmer contemplates the purchase of a silo, first of all he considers the advantages that are likely to accrue from its use, also any dis advantages. Certainly the only disadvantage is the first cost of the silo, which is not so great either, considering the length of service a good substantial silo will give.

Farmers on every hand are beginning to realize the many good sound reasons for feeding silage. In all my experience, I have not talked to a single farmer who was displeased with his silo, with one exception, and in that instance it was a home-made affair and not large enough, writes H. W. Swope in the Indiana Farmer's Guide. That farmer today has two silos on his farm, is a successful feeder, farmer, and a good business man as well.

Silage is the most economical feed that can be produced for dairy cattle, and corn is without question the best crop to grow for silage. It is the writer's experience that where a farmer has eight to ten cows and sufficient tillable ground to grow corn, a silo will without question be a source of profit to that farmer, regardless of his location. In order to make dairying successful it is necessary to have a silo to furnish feed all the year round. Silage also makes any farm more productive where it is used. One of the reasons I have found a silo to be profitable, aside from the feeding value of silage, is that more silo material can be grown on a given acreage and put into the silo cheaper than it could if it were harvested and fed dry. No other feed can compare with silage in succulence and palatability. The dairy cow that is fed silage will keep up her flow of milk and be more profitable than from any other method of feeding.

Corn Has Surely Proven

Most Economical Grain The results of experiments of the different experiment stations in feeding cattle on pasture indicate that the pasture should be supplemented with grain in maintaining the appetite and in securing satisfactory gains during the last stages of the feeding period. These experiments have shown that it is profitable to feed grain during the first part of the feeding period when cattle are on pasture.

Corn has proven the most economical grain to feed as a supplement while cattle are on good pasture. Since pasture grass is very high in protein, it has not proven so profitable to feed high protein concentrates such as linseed meal or cottonseed meal, ment of everyday life, propaganda, although cattle that received linseed meal had a better finish than those that did not receive it in the ration. This is not always true if cottonseed meal is fed instead of linseed meal.

Producers Responsible for Dairy Cleanliness

Inasmuch as the producers of the milk and cream are responsible for the quality of the finished product in a large measure, they are the ones who must be appealed to and made to see the importance of cleanliness in everything connected with the production and handling of milk. Clean barns, clean cows, clean milk utensils, clean milkers, all are very important. Despite the most careful methods in the matter of cleanliness, some bacteria will get into the milk, hence the milk should be cooled and kept cool as soon as possible to check the growth of the bacteria which have gained entrance into the milk or cream. In this connection it is well to remember that bacteria double in number in every half-hour when the milk is kept at a favorable temperature, which is from 70 to 90 degrees Fahrenheit.

Dairy Notes X

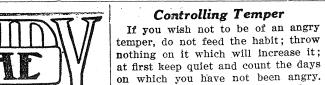

Dry pastures make mighty little milk. Supplement them with some green corn or sorghum. Fix a box where the young calves can have some grain and hay. It is surprising how quickly they can eat it. When feed is not plentiful, as is the case in some localities this year, the boarder cow, masquerading as a milk cow, is an even greater liability than usual.

Give the new-born calf a quart of milk three times daily at the start.

The use of silage in feeding dairy cows through the summer is increasing and will continue to do so as its value in dry pasture seasons is better appreciated.

In raising the dairy calf leave the calf with the cow for one or two days and then take it away and feed from eight to ten pounds of warm milk per day for about two weeks.

TOURIST WARNED

Proper Loading of Car Helps to Make Far More Pleasant Trips.

With the start of the touring season the touring bureau of the Chicago Motor club in its latest bulletin offers some advice to long-distance tourists.

Proper loading of the car for long trips helps to make for a pleasant journey, according to the bulletin. One of the pet peeves of the tourist is to find at the end of a day's travel that a suitcase has rubbed the finish off the body. "Layer upon layer of friction tape, five or six strips stuck on the body where friction may occur, will solve the problem," says the bul-Provide for Wet Weather.

Another lesson that the long-distance tourist soon learns is that every member of the party should be provided with a rain coat or cape, and that these garments should be reached easily at a moment's notice. In addition to this precaution, the tourist who demands comfort on the road will include an umbrella as part of his traveling equipment. The soundness of this advice will be appreciated by the motorist who has been forced to travel all day in wet clothing, because of a drenching received while getting in in and out of the car when stopping for lunch.

"In addition to care in loading and sible to turn a car on a small space in providing suitable comforts the motorist should conduct an inspection of his car before setting out on his journey. Particular attention should be centered upon safety features. Brakes, adequate for normal driving, may prove entirely incapable of performing up to the standard demanded upon the tour. Another feature that frequently escapes attention is the steering mechanism.

Engine Most Important.

"Although it is not generally so regarded, the engine is one of the most important safety features of the car. It may be performing at its best to deliver the extra power necessary for long trins at high speed. If one makes certain that carburetion and timing are right, one will have little trouble under ordinary conditions.

"The tires, of course, must be in good condition. Starting out on weak tires may, in some cases, amount to foolhardiness. It is unwise under all conditions to expect old tires to stand up under the grueling work to which they will be subjected on a touring "The tourist must watch out at all times that he does not become excessively fatigued. It is better to cut the day's journey short than to risk the dangers encountered when one drives in an exhausted condition. Five Notes of Caution.

"Five other points in relation to driving on the tour are summed up by the American Automobile association as follows:

"Making good time is a matter of driving consistently at a reasonable speed. This rate should be neither so fast as to be dangerous nor so slow as to kill the pleasure of the trip.

"Observe generally the rules of the road and show courtesy to other highway users. "Be alert and keep a firm grip on the steering wheel at all times. "Make careful note of the danger and caution signs put along the highway for your protection. Pay particular heed to the warning to descend steep grades in low or second gear. These are among the most important caution signs. It is seldom that they are placed where caution is not needed.

"Never leave the car on the highway while repairs, such as tire changes, are being made."

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

United States and Japan Oppose British Cruiser Demands.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

B RITTANIA rules the waves, and she intends to go on ruling them, if the efforts and arguments of her representatives at the Geneva naval limitation conference are a true indi- to state that the republic will refuse cation of the national spirit. Last week the conferees devoted themselves to the subject of cruisers, earnestly discussing the conclusions reached by the naval experts and, at this writing, having reached nothing like an agreement. As was explained a week ago, the British demanded a minmum of 600,000 tons of cruisers, most of them preferably below 7,500 tons each, on the ground that their need of protecting the home food supply required this, and evidently because their innumerable naval bases would enable the vessels of restricted cruising radius to operate anywhere. America wanted the limit put at 250,-000 tons and said the United States needed vessels of 10,000 tonnage, not having adequate naval bases abroad. Her delegates, however, in the effort to make the conference a success, offered tentatively to make the maximum limit 400,000 tons.

Then the Japanese, who previously had supported the British desire to have the battleship program revised, announced that the original minimum on his new mare. American figures of 250,000 tons as the and Britain were quite acceptable to the British figures, totaling approximately 600,000 tons, are out of the tions in the neighboring republic, and question so far as the Tokyo government is concerned.

"Japan is anxious to achieve a real reduction and limitation of armaments," Admiral Saito said. "We find the figures in the American plan most reasonable. Japan believes the minimum American figures should be adopted rather than the higher tonnage, which, by promoting construction, would increase armaments. The other suggestions of vastly larger tonnage, which would require the other interested powers to build up to these high levels, would defeat the purpose of the conference."

"We would never dare get off the boat in Japan if we accepted the British scheme," one Japanese delegate

Much taken aback, the British delegates said they would look over their figures again to see what possible alterations could be made with a view to further discussions.

Observers in Geneva and official Washington see in the British demand for at least 550,000 tons of cruisers a manifestation of the British insistence on preserving the mastery of the seas. Lord Robert Cecil and his colleagues, they say, are convinced that, though America would be granted parity with England, our congress would not permit the building of so large an American navy for reasons of economy and because the United States has no fear of war with Great Britain, Indeed.

Viscount Cecil said as much last week. "America does not fear us; America knows there is no possibility of war with Great Britain—then why does Washington insist on limiting our navy below the strength the admiralty states we require?" he said. "We must have the cruisers we demand. The admiralty insists they are essential to our defense." Concerning the United States' demand for 10,000-ton cruisers he asked: "But why does America need these boats? What possible potential enemy can she have in mind for such weapons?"

In the experts' sessions concerning submarines the United States won when Great Britain's efforts to have 21-inch caliber torpedoes reduced were rejected and the Anglo-Japanese proposals to divide submarines into two classes-coast defense craft of about 600 tons and fleet submersibles capable of going to sea with a combat squadron approximating 1,600 tons, were abandoned. The experts decided merely to limit the size of the largest submarines and set 1,800 tons as the tentative maximum.

China's voice was heard in the conference for the first time when Chao Hsin-chu, representative in the council of the League of Nations, made this announcement:

"It is repeatedly reported in the press of the Far East that the naval conference may also consider questions relating to China. I therefore have been requested by the Chinese national government and the people to recognize any decision affecting Chine which may be arrived at by the present, or any other conference in which China is not represented, participating equally in the delibera-

Next day, still wearing his cowboy hat, he attended the Tri-State Roundup at Bellefourche. Mrs. Coolidge acompanied him, and they enjoyed hugely the doings of the wild riders, Indians in war dress, cowboys and trick riders gathered from all parts of the West. > COMMANDER BYRD and the other members of the crew of the transatlantic plane America were the recipients of many honors in Paris, and the commander was awarded the cross of the Legion of Honor. The aviators booked passage for return to the United States starting July 12. Byrd says he plans to lead a twoplane expedition to the Antarctic in the fall which will spend perhaps a year and a half in procuring information about the continent at the South pole. Clarence Chamberlin also planned immediate return to the United States by steamer, having declined to pilot the Columbia back, but Charles A. Levine said he was hunting for a French pilot who would bring him home on the big plane.

> G ENERAL CHEN and a large part of his Chinese army went over to the Nationalists and as a result the southerners gained possession of most of Shantung province and at last reports were but a few miles from Tsingtao. The northern forces were still holding Tsinanfu, the capital, and a narrow strip north of the Yellow river. Conditions in Shantung were such that Japan decided to send two thousand more Japanese troops from Dairen to Tsingtao, and a hundred military railway men and telegraphers also were hurried into that region. This movement further enraged the Chinese against the Japanese and caused them to forget their animosity against the British.

KING FUAD of Egypt, whose sovereignty was threatened recently by Great Britain, went to London on a state visit and was received with great pomp by King George, the royal family and the government. He was accompanied by Premier Sarwat Pasha, and the British foreign office undertook to work out with him a treaty which should settle the relations between Egypt and Great Britain for years to come. This plan, however, was opposed by Lord Lloyd, British commissioner in Egypt, who believes the parliamentary regime there will collapse before long and that the British will then have to revive the protectorate. King Fuad is entirely subservient to the British, but Sarwat Pasha is said to be under the influence of Zaghloul Pasha, the Nationalist leader, who opposes the surrender of Egyptian claims to independence.

HOUGH stories of counter-revolu-I tionary movements in Russia are often not trustworthy, those coming now are too numerous and too detailed to be ignored. The revival of the Red terror by the Soviet rulers has failed to terrify their opponents and the anti-British campaign conducted by the government does not distract the attention of the population from domestic to foreign questions. In secret meetings held in central Europe the couriers of the counter-revolution reported a tremendous increase in the dissensions among the Bolshevik leaders, with a new man rising in the background as a lieutenant of M. Stalin, present dictator of Moscow policies. He is M. Eliawa, formerly a quiet member of the party but steadily gaining influence over M. Stalin, since he, too, is a former south Russian peasant. Meanwhile 50,000 counter-revolutionists have succeeded in smuggling themselves into Russian

T LAST D. C. Stephenson, former klan and now a life convict, has told to the authorities his story of alleged corruption in Hoosier politics, and the people of the state are awaiting a grand explosion. Stephenson made his revelations to Prosecuting Attorney W. H. Remy of Indianapolis, and that official declined to tell what he heard until he is ready for action. Indianapolis newspapers asserted that Steison "told all"; that he hit high and low officialdom; that he revealed ter of Washington, D. C., visited sevhow he managed and paid for the eral days this week with Mr. and campaign of Gov. Ed Jackson; that he Mrs. R. J. Wills. told of ruling the legislature, dictating which bills should pass and which should die; that he played a stellar role in the election of Mayor John L. Duvall of Indianapolis; that he dabbled in the election of a United States senator, and much more along that

On the other hand, Stephenson's attorney declared that his client's only charges had to do with the pending prosecution of Mayor Duvall. The exgrand dragon himself said in part:

"There's a little seat in the chair shop next to me that is vacant, and I expect to have company before long. I have not blown the entire lid off the Indiana situation. Remy did not insist that I do so. The rest will come later, and I promise that when the entire truth is told there will be a clean-up in this state that will startle the country and will benefit the state immeasurably."

R EPUBLICANS of New Jersey, in state convention, overrode the decision of their resolutions committee and the protests of the women delegates and wrote into their platform a plank calling for a Volstead law referendum similar to that passed by the voters of New York last fall. The debate was bitter, the final vote being 67 to 18. It is believed the action will have an important bearing on the gubernatorial and senatorial elections of

The New and Finer

Renowned for Reliability

True, the Pontiac Six is admired for the smartly styled beauty of its Fisher bodies—and for the smoothness and snap it introduced into the field of low-priced sixes. But if there is one Pontiac Six quality on which all owners are united, that one quality is reliability!... This is more than a matter of infrequent adjustments-more than a question of extremely low upkeep costs. It is simply the common knowledge—based on experience—that long life is the prime basis of all Pontiac owner satisfaction ... For the Pontiac Six has demonstrated to the satisfaction of nearly 150,000 owners in eighteen months that a low-priced six can be made sturdy, staunch and unfailingly dependable without the slightest sacrifice of beauty, handling ease and comfort!
