PINNEY STATE BANK OPENS TRUST DEPT.

Authorized by State Banking Dept. to Act as Executor of Estates.

The board of directors of the Pinney State Bank announce that that institution is now authorized by the State Banking Department to act as executor of estates when the bank is so designated in the wills or as administrator of estates where no wills have been made. The bank may also act as a guardian of the persons and estates of minors and incompetent persons. They consider this an important addition to the service offered by the bank to the community.

In recent years, the appointment of a financial institution as executor of estates has been made quite extensively and the practice is growing more and more each year. The opening of the trust department at the Pinney State Bank now offers a service before available only by going to the larger cities of the state.

Socratic Method of Workers' Education Productive of Splendid Results

By ARTHUR GLEASON, Economic Authority.

The way a group of grown persons best educate each other is in the method used by Socrates and his friends. It is the way of endless discussion centering on one subject. It is almost the hardest work in the world, but the results are sometimes amazing. A grown man discovers he is beginning to grow again. Endless discussion about one subject cannot maintain itself on words. It dies away unless it feeds on knowledge and finally interpretation. It reaches out for facts and then for the meaning of them. In modern terms, this Socratic method means a class of from five to twenty-five, who read books, listen to talks, and ask questions. They take to themselves a like-minded teacher, who is a good fellow, and together they work regularly and hard. This is the heart of workers' education—the class financed on trade-union money, the teacher a comrade, the method discussion, the subject the social sciences, the aim an understanding of life and the remolding of the scheme of things. Where that dream of a better world is absent adult workers' education will fade away in the loneliness and rigor of the effort.

We take pleasure in announcing the opening of

A Trust Department

We are now authorized by the Banking Department of the State of Michigan to act as "executor and administrator of estates of deceased persons and as guardians of the persons and estates of minors and incompetent persons."

To the people of this vicinity this means that the advantages of having a corporation act as executor of their estate are now available without having to go to one of the larger cities of the state for such service.

The Executor of your will should be an agency possessing the following qualifications:

1. One whom you can rest assured will be on hand when the work needs to be done.
   If you name the Pinney State Bank as Executor, you may rest assured it will be there when necessary. It takes no vacation, it does not die, and it does not move away.

2. One not likely, through ignorance or fraud or carelessness, to fall in the duty.
   If you name the Pinney State Bank as Executor, its assets are behind the faithful performance of your wishes as stated in your will, and to protect its reputation it cannot afford to function in any way that is not intelligent, honest, and careful.

3. One who is WILLING.
   Bear in mind that your friend or your relative may be too busily engaged in his own business to care to undertake the job. The Pinney State Bank makes it part of its business now, so there can be no doubt of its willingness to act.

4. One who knows just what to do and when to do it.
   If you name the Pinney State Bank as Executor, you may be sure that your estate is being managed by someone whose business it is to understand the proper procedure.

We invite all of you to come in and ask us more about this service. The fees of an executor or administrator are fixed by law and are no more in case of a bank or trust company than with an individual. But to find out about the service and how you can use it costs you only the time you take to ask us.

PARENTS AND SCHOOLS.

There are certain things that parents must do, to get the best results for the children from their schools. They should get over the idea that they can buy education with their tax money as they buy groceries at a store. They may be able to call up a store and get all the groceries delivered without effort on their part, but they can't get the best education for their children in that way. They have to put some personal thought and effort into it. There are a number of things that must be done here if we want the best quality of schools.

First, the parents must support the discipline of the school. When difficulties occur between teachers and pupils, in most cases the teacher is right. She is simply trying to make the children work, while in many cases they are too indolent or too much absorbed in their fun. If families encourage the children to take a defiant and rebellious attitude, not merely the work of those particular children is hurt, but the discipline of the whole school room is injured.

Second, if there are cases where teachers are at fault, and they are human and make mistakes like the rest of us, nothing should be said to the children to that effect. The parents should quietly and reasonably discuss the questions at issue with the teacher, or possibly with the superintendent. Most of these difficulties can be straightened out with a little consultation.

Third, parents must take some pains to find out about modern educational ideas, and back up such ideas when offered in their city. Some people may clamor for old fashioned education. But nothing in this world stands still, and education can't.

It is a fine thing where parents visit the schools and personally observe the work. But if they generally do the three things named above, they will help very much.

QUIZZING THE CANDIDATES

About now the candidates for offices big and little are receiving questions from organizations and individuals, who want to know what they think about a long list of questions.

There are a great number of people and organizations whose minds are concentrated on one issue or line of issues. They want to know what the candidate thinks about that one thing, and they are indifferent to what he thinks on anything else. They will often vote for a poorly qualified person, simply because he happens to agree with them on the one point to which their interest is attached.

When people are elected to office, they must please the mass of the people. If they set out just to please the one idea people, they will give a very one sided administration. We need people who have all round qualifications, rather than crusaders who go into office with the purpose to settle some one problem alone.

Organizations have great power in politics now. When some such society quizzes a candidate about the idea or ideas which it holds to be predominant, it has the power to turn many votes against that candidate if his principles on that point are considered unsatisfactory. But the people who take a different point of view have also to be considered, and they frequently rebel against the tendency of some minority interest to try to dictate and control the affairs of the government.

The candidate who refuses to cater to special elements, but who examines all questions seriously and tells the people frankly what he thinks about them, wins the most support in the long run. His work is apt to be so good, that people who disagree with him on one or two points will yet support him.

PROSPERITY.

The Republican platform and speakers declare that the country is highly prosperous, and the Democrats deny it.

The U. S. Department of Commerce reports, which are the most reliable figures compiled by any source, find that manufacturing production for the first six months of 1928 exceeded the previous high record made in the first half of 1927.

Some people may argue that the Department of Commerce has been interested to make out a good case for the Coolidge administration. Yet distorting these figures, which are collected with scientific accuracy, would be a most gross breach of trust. They are collected by officials who are free from political influences.

The Democrats endeavor to prove that a lack of prosperity exists, by quoting conditions in certain industries that have had difficulty, notably the textiles, coal, and agriculture. But conditions in these are so exceptional, that they throw little light on general business.

The textiles have been upset for several years by changes in the styles of women's clothing, which have greatly reduced the amount of textile fabrics needed. Coal has been upset by the fact that production was artificially stimulated during the war, far beyond the needs of the country. Naturally there has been depression, which has been made worse by strikes. Agriculture is upset by underlying conditions which both parties are earnestly trying to remedy, and the position taken by the two platforms and candidates as to how they should be remedied does not differ materially.

Manufacturing business has made such an extremely high record as a whole, that the people must have more money than ever before. It is inconceivable that they take chances on upsetting this favorable condition by any change of administrations this fall.

SUPPORTING LOCAL ENTERPRISE.

People seem to take a lot of pride in showing off the things they bought a long distance from home. If they have traveled 1000 miles the past summer, they like to exhibit things they bought in the distant or famous cities they visited.

But probably if they had inquired in their home stores, they could have bought the same thing for the same or less money. If you value your home town, and want to help push it ahead, why not also say a good word for the things you bought at home? Why not show off that dress or that hat that you bought at home, and remark on what a fine stock they carry in that store, and how good our home stores are? It's the truth.

When your neighbors and friends ask you to take up some public service for the benefit of the community, you will not be sorry if you consent. No one gets much out of life without giving something.

Your home town gives you many benefits, a chance to earn a living, useful public institutions, etc. It is well to make a return for the same, by patronizing the home stores on which the town largely depends.

When trade is rushing, it is usually because someone in behind is pushing it with advertising.

CEDAR RUN.

O. J. Hendrick of Flint and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Lane of Detroit spent the week-end at O. A. Hendrick's.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Black and children of Caro visited at T. C. Hendrick's Sunday.

Mrs. Clara Spaven, Mr. and Mrs. R. Spaven and Watson Spaven visited at Mrs. McGrath's in Cass City Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Barron of Toronto, Ont., are spending their vacation with relatives in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Leach, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Leach and daughter spent Labor Day at the Spaven home. Robt. Spaven returned home with them. He had been visiting in Saginaw.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Deming spent Labor Day in Detroit.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Earl Beutler of Detroit, a daughter, on Sept. 1. She will answer to the name of Aileen Etta.

Wm. Wilson and daughter attended the family reunion at the David McComb home on Labor Day.

William Wilson and daughters, Irma and Doris, spent Sunday at Jas. Wilson's.

The Cedar Run school house has been remodeled and repaired so that it looks like a new building which is a decided improvement. Miss Norma Emmons is the teacher this year.

The hum of the silo filler was heard in this neighborhood last week. The two silos on the Spaven farm and one on the E. S. Hendrick farm were filled.

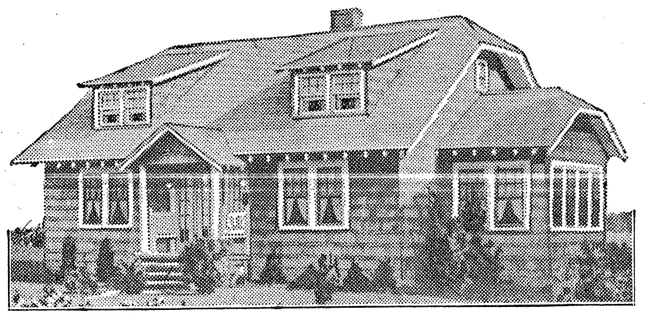
Anybody Would Be Glad to Call This Cozy Little Bungalow Home



First Floor Plan.

By W. A. RADFORD.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to practical home building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Here is a cozy little bungalow that almost anybody would be proud to call home. Aside from the good proportions of the house as a whole there are three things that chiefly account for its attractiveness. The roof is broken by the two front dormers and by the snubbed gables. The walls are most pleasingly covered with shingles laid in alternate wide and narrow courses. And last of all, the design is appropriate to its site and the ground about it is effectively landscaped.

Yes, this is a very charming home and for the family whose needs can be comfortably met by five rooms it should prove highly satisfactory. The first floor provides a long living room with a fireplace and off the living room a sun parlor, a dining room and a kitchen with an adjoining breakfast nook. There is an entrance and stair hall between the living room and dining room and from this we can ascend to an upper room where the sloping roof admits just two bedrooms and a bathroom.

Both these bedrooms are ample in size and both are provided with large closets. Likewise good cross ventilation is possible so there can be really no objection in this case, though it is sometimes raised, to the bungalow type of house. In addition to the bedroom closets, there is a coat closet in the entrance hall downstairs and a broom closet off the breakfast nook. In the kitchen there are large built-in cabinets which afford all the storage space for household articles that is likely to be required.

Paint New House in Dry, Clear Weather

A new house should never be painted before plaster walls or wet basements have thoroughly dried out, or while the new wood is water-soaked from rains or insufficient seasoning.

The painting also should be done in dry, clear weather, never during or immediately after a heavy dew, frost or fog or when a storm is threatening. Before painting is started, all knots and sappy places should be given a coat of shellac or aluminum paint to seal in the pitch so it will not bleed through the paint later on.

The first coat is the foundation of future coatings, and the adherence to the wood of future coats during all time to come depends upon it. Considerably more linseed oil and turpentine must be used in the first coat than in succeeding coats, for the reason that the porous new wood soaks up a great deal of oil, and if an extra amount is not used, the paint film will be robbed of sufficient oil to give it satisfactory adhesive and wear-resisting qualities.

The turpentine assists in the penetration, so that the absorption demand of the wood will be completely satisfied. Where the wood is extremely soft, more oil and less turpentine is required, and where the wood is exceptionally hard or resinous, more turpentine and not so much oil should be used. This is where the experience of a competent painter is of value in diagnosing the absorption demand of the wood and the specific requirements of the surface being painted.

Tile Used for Floors, Roofs and Partitions

Lightweight and incombustible tile for use as fireproof partitions, roof-decks and floors is manufactured from gypsum and wood fiber, with about 97 per cent of the whole being gypsum and the balance wood fiber. When used for partitions such tiles are laid up very much as brick is laid up, only the mortar used is a gypsum mortar.

For roof-decks they are manufactured to special sizes, laid across the steel roof members, fastened and then are ready for any standard kind of roof covering. When used for floors, they are covered with cement topping, over which the finish flooring is applied.

Decorations Emphasize Importance of the Door

Substantial workmanship and graceful design are combined in a one-panel door widely distributed for home construction in this country in which several unusual patented features are utilized to prevent warping and shrinking. This "door within a door" construction is utilized in the manufacture of both hardwood and softwood doors of the one-panel type, veneered with species of woods which successfully take any decorative application.

The importance of the expanse represented by doors in interior decoration is being more widely recognized by specialists in the art with the general introduction of rather brilliantly colored interiors.

Attractive colors are well set off by the graceful design of the one-panel door, in which the proportion of the panel, molding, stiles and rails are carefully worked out to artistically fill the space, or mass, which the door represents. The close-grained wood of this door is well adapted to any process of painting, enameling or staining.

Insulated Home Has Larger Value for Loan

While advertising campaigns, model home demonstrations and magazine and newspaper articles have apprised the home-building public of the economies of properly insulating the dwelling, there is one aspect of insulating economics which frequently is overlooked.

Its importance is attested by the fact that building and loan associations and other home mortgage concerns will give a substantially higher mortgage percentage on the insulated house.

This is because of the fact that the insulated house will in a few years have an even greater preference over the uninsulated structure than is the case today. Insulation is being impressed upon the public consciousness as a desirable and economical constructional feature and it is believed that as time goes on more and more attention will be paid to this consideration in building.

Insulation usually costs but a few hundred dollars, but the increased value resulting usually more than accounts for the added cost.

THINGS THAT FAIL

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I THOUGHT that men must build success
On old successes. 'Tis not so.
For all the champions I know
Had been defeated more or less.

The smoother road that great men tread,
I learned, a harder path they came;
And he who found the eternal flame
Had left a thousand campfires dead.

Yes, many another dream must fade
That men may recognize the true;
And men will find the thing to do
Because of errors that they made.

We winnow life as hands the wheat;
Amid the chaff we find the grain.
I say that every loss has gain,
I say the bitter makes life sweet.

From rocks that loosen great men make
A footing that they know will hold;
Defeat will only make them bold
Some other height to dare, and take.

On rocks that tumble toward the vale
We upward climb to find the peak;
And men shall find the things they seek
By making use of things that fail.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"BANKRUPT"

TODAY the bankrupt is one who is unable to pay his debts and whose property becomes liable to administration under the law. According to the circumstances of the bankrupt the law decides whether or not he may continue to do business. And it is in the circumstance that such restriction was imposed upon certain bankrupts of a time long past that we find the very colorful origin of the word.

"Bankrupt" comes from the Latin "banca" and "rupta" and means literally a broken bank. During the Middle ages a "bank" was simply a bench or table on which the so-called banker of the day, the man who took money for safe keeping or exchanged foreign money, transacted his business. In Italy if such a banker became insolvent and was unable to meet his obligations, the law decreed that his money "bench" (from which we have the word "bank") be broken! And it is from the broken benches of old Florentine and Venetian bankers that we have the word "bankrupt" today.

FOR THE GOOSE—

THERE'S times when you have to tell a lie. And times when you don't have to tell the truth.

It's just as dumb to go crazy over things just because they're popular as it is to hate 'em for the same reason.

There's such a thing as bein' too far sighted. I know a woman that wouldn't buy herself a set of false teeth for fear she wouldn't have enough for a tombstone when she died.

FOR THE GANDER—

When your enemy wants to make peace it might be on'y fear or self-interest—or just that he's gettin' tired of war.

But it's always better to have him for a friend than an enemy. Just as long as you don't trust him none.

Big feathers, little feathers—every hen must find thousands of new ones this fall before she can start into heavy egg production! Have the new feathers waiting by feeding Purina Chicken Chowder and Purina Hen Chow now.

There are too many autos all right. But what if they took 'em all away from us. Wouldn't we holler?

The shorter the molt the longer the winter laying period. Purina supplies feather making materials. Purina shortens the molt. Purina will have them laying again and paying again when egg prices are up.

Order the new feathers now—from the Checkerboard Bag.

Who Benefits from Prohibition?

Employers—

Who benefit by increased production and a reduced labor turnover; by sober workmen, fewer accidents—and no more blue Mondays.

Everybody's Wife—

Who shares in all the increased prosperity, and rejoices in all it means to her family. Probably she has one of the 612,000 washing machines; surely she has one of the 1,000,000 vacuum cleaners; or some of the 900,000,000 dollars' worth of furniture which has been sold each year since 1924. A million farmers' wives are enjoying the 1,000,000 bath rooms which were put into farmhouses last year.

Merchants—

Who get much of the two billion dollars formerly spent in drink. And who have thousands of buyers where they used to have hundreds.

Wage Earners—

Whose wages were eight billions more in 1926 than in 1918, which is an increase of 25 per cent while living costs are reduced 18 per cent since 1920.

The brewers of the country were to have a meeting in Chicago, Sept. 6 to devise means to assure the "survival of the brewery industry.." Their goal was said to be 2.75 per cent beer.

Worshipers Bothered

Mouse Expert Fly Catcher

A mouse that catches flies was the novel window display of an automobile man in Sydney, Australia. Heedless of the large crowd watching him, the tiny rodent would dart from his hiding place in a corner and spring up the window pane or take a flying leap. He would always "get" his fly. He kept the window clear of all the buzzers, and the dealer says he was the best and cheapest attraction he ever had.

Relic of Long Ago

Bronze swords, elaborately engraved, and other rare relics estimated to be three thousand years old or older, have been unearthed on the Swedish island of Oeland in the Baltic sea.

Privileges Given Texas

The special privileges which are accorded to Texas by the Constitution are the reserved right to all public lands of the state and the right to subdivide into not more than five states.

Preserving Corn Meal

Since corn meal spoils rather easily, special attention should be given to the way in which it is stored. It should be kept in a cool, dry place and should be closely covered to exclude insects. This applies to the mill and the shop as well as the home. The water-ground meal spoils more easily than the granular meal. When convenient, therefore, it should be milled only in small quantities as needed.

That's the Big Point

It is estimated that a waiter walks 12 miles a day in the course of his duties. We can well believe that, says London Opinion, but why doesn't he come back?

Fewer Museums Due

Everything get more expensive. Think what it will cost a sentimental public 50 years from now to buy and preserve the hospitals where the great men were born.—San Francisco Chronicle.

PAUL WRITES TO HIS FRIENDS IN CORINTH

LESSON TEXT—I Cor. 1:10-13;3:5-11, 21-23.

GOLDEN TEXT—Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul Writes a Letter to His Friends.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Writes a Good Letter to His Friends.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Paul Urges Team Work.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Paul Pleads for Christian Unity.

Concerning Contention in the Church (1:10-13).

1. Exhortation (v. 10). "That ye all speak the same thing."

In view of the fact that he besought them in the name of Jesus Christ, the one thing which he desired them to speak was the Lord's name. The name of the Lord stands for all that the Lord is and does. "That there be no divisions among you," that is, no factions, no alienation of affection. "That ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment."

2. The reason for this exhortation, (v. 11).

Word had been brought to Paul by members of the household of Chloe that wrangling was going on among the members of the Corinthian church. He assured them that he had sufficient evidence of the strife which was going on among them.

3. Nature of the contentions (v. 12).

Their disputes were about their teachers. Their interests were centering in their favorite ministers. Some were for Paul, perhaps attracted by his logic; some were for Apollos, doubtless moved by his stirring eloquence; others were for Peter. Doubtless these were Jewish converts who looked to Peter as their authority. There were still others who had as their cry "back to Christ," repudiating all human teachers.

4. The grounds of allegiance to Christ (v. 13).

(1) He is Head of the whole church.

The unifying power of the body is the head. He raised the question, "Is Christ divided?" The mere raising of the question gave the answer.

(2) Redemption accomplished.

By his atoning death He has supreme Lordship over all.

(3) Allegiance to Christ acknowledged in baptism. By one Spirit are we all baptized into one body (I Cor. 12:13).

II. Concerning Christian Ministers (3:1-4:5).

Since the dissensions in the church gathered around the ministers, Paul proceeded to cure the evil by exhibiting the ministerial office in its true light. To conceive of ministers as party leaders or teachers of philosophy tends to divisions. Divisions in the church occur when men are occupied with the messenger rather than with the message. The cure in such a case is to get a right conception and proper estimate of human teachers. Ministers really are:

1. Servants of God (vv. 5, 6.

They are instruments in His hands for the execution of His will. They are men sent to deliver a message, to do a definite work.

2. Ministers are equal in rank (vv. 8, 9).

They are called by the same spirit to teach the same truth, and therefore stand in the same relationship. Official hierarchy in the church has no foundation in the Scriptures.

3. Every minister must give an account to God for his work (vv. 10-21).

If he lay other foundation than Christ he is not a Christian minister at all. If he build sound doctrine on the foundation he will receive a reward. If he build false doctrine on a true foundation he will suffer loss and receive punishment. Sorrow and anguish will be to him who builds good material upon a wrong foundation, and likewise to him who builds poor material upon a right foundation. Human wisdom has no place in the solemn work of building the church of God.

4. Ministers are the property of the church (vv. 22, 23).

Frequently the assumption is that the church is owned by the ministers. Ministers should be followed only as far as they follow Christ.

5. Ministers are God's stewards (4:1-5).

Their business is to dispense His truth. They do not originate the message. God demands fidelity on their part and He will enter into judgment with them as to their faithfulness.

Proof of a Divine Reality

The best proof of a divine reality at the heart of things is the passion for growth, the desire for perfection, that makes itself felt in all who are sensitive to the possibilities of spiritual attainment.

Being Content

We have been content with a slight elevation above the evils of our time, and not intent on the inward searching, purifying and consuming of the Holy Spirit.—F. B. Meyer.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

COPYRIGHT BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

EDWARD

Molly had a doll she had named Molly, too, and she had a brother named Edward.

Up in a High Tree.

Edward was a tease, not a nice, good - natured, funny sort of a tease, but he was the kind who hurt people's feelings.

He would see some one who had on a suit which was not new or which had been patched and he would try to make the one who was wearing it feel very uncomfortable.

Edward would also see boys wearing their older brothers' suits and he would say with a mean look:

"Where did you get that suit?"

And he liked to tease Molly by making fun of Molly-doll, and by tossing her up in the air, and playing with her as though she was a ball, and he could bat her in a game of his own mean making.

Molly-doll was a rag doll.

Oh, how Molly would feel when her doll was lifted up in Edward's hands and then he would say, so meanly:

"She's only rag. What's the difference?"

One day he left Molly-doll up in a high tree and she couldn't be found.

He didn't tell where she was. And that afternoon, quite late, the snow fell, and Molly was afraid her doll was left out in the snow.

She hunted and hunted and then a neighbor boy, who wasn't mean as Edward was, found her and brought her safely to Molly.

But they didn't tell Edward they had found her.

He thought she was still up in the tree.

That night when he slept, lo and behold Molly-doll came and stood at the end of his bed.

No longer was Molly-doll a rag doll. She had grown, oh, she had grown. And she was wearing instead of a painted wig, great icicles and cold.

A Neighbor Boy.

And her body seemed very stiff and straight. It seemed so very strong as though she were made of steel or of iron instead of rags.

"Edward," she said, and her voice sounded harsh and terrible, "Edward," she continued, "you left me out in the tree today and you didn't care if it hurt your sister or me.

"I've come to show you."

Edward couldn't think what she meant, but he was frightened as everyone who is a bully can so easily be frightened when anything goes against them.

She took Edward in her arms which had grown so big and hard, and she tossed him up in the air and around and about, so that he was frightened he might land on the ground.

Instead he was in his bed when he awoke. But oh, what a horrible dream it had been. And when h discovered Molly had her Molly-doll and that somehov she had been rescued he was really thankful and pleased.

A Jolly Game

One player starts a story, and after relating an incident, leaves off abruptly for his neighbor to continue the narrative. He tries to connect the story by means of incidents from his own imagination, and then he, too, "passes it on," and so on round the party. As can be imagined, the course of the story will undergo many changes.

Another similar idea is the game of suggestions. The first player starts by saying a certain thing has been suggested to him, say a garden, and he asks his neighbor what a garden suggests to him. Probably he will say flowers. The third player is asked what flowers suggest, and so on, until you get a string of suggestions all relating to the first one.

Juvenile Deduction

The teacher had given a lesson on the Wars of the Roses.

"What do you know of Margaret of Anjou?" he asked.

"She was very fat," said Billy.

"How is that?" inquired the teacher.

"Because," he replied, "I read that she was one of Richard's stoutest opponents."

For Lack of It

One day in school the teacher said: "Mickey, give me a definition of salt."

"Shure," Mickey responded; "it's the stuff that makes potatoes taste bad when you boil 'em and don't put any in."

Solomon Not a Negro

There is no foundation whatever for the notion that King Solomon was a colored man; it may arise from the fact that the royal family of the Abyssinians—a black though not a negro people—claims a traditional descent from King Solomon and the queen of Sheba.

"Clean" Milk

While a rigid application of the definition of the word "clean" would exclude milk which contains foreign matter or any bacteria whatever, for ordinary purposes we may understand that clean milk is milk of good flavor from healthy cows, that is free from dirt and contains only a small number of bacteria, none of which is harmful.

Lawmakers' Wrong Idea

Twenty-one sections of the Kansas statutes deal with steamboats and there is not a single steamboat in the state. The laws to govern vessels were passed in the early days when railroads had not invaded the plains of Kansas and when it seemed likely to optimistic lawmakers that the streams of Kansas would prove fruitful highways for boats.

Uncommon Sense

PAY

AN AMERICAN scientist—a professor in a college, recently refused the sum of $2,000,000 for the formula by which he has produced a new vitamine, which is helpful in the prevention of many maladies due to wrong diet.

A food manufacturing company made him this offer.

Had he accepted it, there is no likelihood that any effort would have been made to fix a high price on the product containing the vitamine.

But a monopoly would have been conferred, and that is what the discoverer of the vitamine desired to prevent.

He wanted the result of his labor and study to be for everybody.

Now there are not many people who would lightly refuse a sum such as that which was offered this scientist.

Two million dollars means not only freedom from financial cares indefinitely, but the possibility of living in real luxury, and in leaving a fortune to a family afterward.

But it is a characteristic of many men of science that they take their pay in satisfaction, and not in money.

* * * * * * *

The colleges are filled with men who could go into the business world and earn large sums because of their intimate knowledge of chemistry and of engineering and of other branches of learning, which have now been applied to manufacturing and finance.

Some of them accept the offers made them—and no one can blame them.

But in a time when money is regarded as all important, it is cheering to note that there are men who care little for it, and that these men are not only not lunatics, as some people might regard them, but men of very great ability.

There is hope for the human race, and hope for progress when such things as this can happen.

* * * * * * *

This is no attack on wealth, or on the importance of acquiring an independence, which is the duty of every man with a family.

But there are some things which are more to be desired than great riches, and chief among them is a man's knowledge that he is doing great good for his fellow men, and asking no return in money for it.

We never think much about this when it is done by a soldier, who risks and often loses his life in the service of his fellow countrymen.

It seems strange only when it happens in time of peace, and when the figure in it is a man belonging to a profession poorly paid, and with relatively few opportunities for fame.

Some day governments will be wise enough to place able scientists beyond any possibility of want, so that they can fight disease and work for better human conditions with no fear.

But that will not be for a long while.

In the meantime hundreds of earnest able men forego luxury and even comfort that they may do the world's most important work, and ask no pay whatever.

Left Pew to Strangers

On condition that his old pew in Harryville Presbyterian church be set apart at all times for the use of strangers and visitors, Caulfield Wilson, of Ballymore, Ireland, willed $1,750 to the church. Wilson directed that a brass plate be placed on the pew with the inscription, "This pew is endowed by Caulfield Wilson and is free at all times for the use of strangers and visitors while attending the public worship in this church."

VOICE AND PICTURES NOW SYNCHRONIZE

New Apparatus Made Available for Schools, Churches and Motion Picture Theatres.

Engineers are now at work on a simplified photophone device suitable for use in the home, which will make it possible, it is stated, to reproduce "talking movies" in the home very much as the ordinary radio broadcast programs are now being received in more than eight million homes. This announcement was made by General James G. Harbord, President of the Radio Corporation of America, at the formation of a new company to be known as "R. C. A. Photophone, Incorporated."

Gen. J. G. Harbord

In discussing the formation of the new company, General Harbord pointed out that although the Radio Corporation, General Electric and Westinghouse had been preparing for several years to market apparatus synchronizing voice and music with motion pictures, public introduction of the apparatus had been delayed until the engineers had achieved "complete practicability" so that it would be as simple to operate as a radio set, and, at the same time, highly perfected.

"The Photophone," said General Harbord "is both simple and practical. The essential principle is the recording of pictures and sound on one film. While various methods have been devised for 'talking movies,' experience has shown that the most practical is that of recording pictures and sound on the same film. This is the method employed by the Photophone. It is now possible to photograph the President of the United States—voice as well as action—and to distribute films reproducing the event throughout the country.

Uses and Operation

"Easily operated reproducing apparatus for use in theatres, schools and churches will be nationally available. An entire opera, musical comedy or drama can be electrically recorded on the film, just as it is seen and heard, and then reproduced from the same film. Whatever can be seen or heard, whether it is a nightingale singing or an army in battle, can now be recorded and reproduced for both the eye and the ear. Moving picture dramas with complete orchestral accompaniment, or with music and speech, will be available for nation-wide use.

"Standard films without the sound can be used without any change in the machine. The only thing the operator has to do is to close one switch when he is projecting pictures with sound, and open it when he does not want the sound. Any type of 'talking film' can be used in the machine. The type of sound reproducer to be used will vary with the size of the room in which the pictures are to be shown. The reproducer embodies some remarkable new developments in acoustics.

"Sight and hearing have been the two avenues of approach to the human mind for education, religion and entertainment. Now one medium combines the appeal to sight and hearing simultaneously, with universal accessibility and availability. The complete practicability of the new art has already been demonstrated, and there remained only the need for an intelligent and serviceable system of manufacture and distribution.

"One can only guess at the many varied uses of this invention as an instrument for the spread of knowledge, for bringing the people of the world closer together, and for the advancement of civilization."

REPORT OF NORTH SANILAC D. H. I. A. FOR AUGUST, 1928.

Of the 266 cows in the Association, 38 were dry, 8 produced over 50 lbs. of butterfat and 11 produced over 1250 lbs. of milk. There was one unprofitable cow sold and 10 new cows entered, two of these were heifers; seven of them belonging to Fred Loss who is a new member of the Association. There were two separators tested and both were wasting more than a quarter of one per cent butterfat or from ten ($10) to fifteen ($16) dollars per month each. Anyone separating milk should have their separator tested, an inferior separator will often throw away enough butterfat to pay for a new one in a year's time.

The high cows and herds are as follows:

Dr. Caldwell's 3 Rules Keep You Healthy

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house, and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.
