55 TEACHERS FROM 9 TOWNS MEET HERE

Listen to Practical Discussion Regarding Teaching of Reading to Primary Pupils.

Fifty-five from Bad Axe, Caro, Sebewaing, Harbor Beach, Carsonville, Vassar, Gagetown, Kingston and Cass City were among the instructors from Thumb of Michigan schools who attended the second of a series of meetings held at Cass City Monday, which have for their object the raising of the standard of instruction in the schools of this district. There are eight monthly meetings in the series.

Miss Adella Jackson, critic teacher at Ypsilanti Normal Training School, was in charge of Monday's meeting and in the session which continued two hours, Miss Jackson, an instructor of wide experience and wonderful personality, gave her audience a great deal of valuable information regarding the teaching of reading and spelling to grade pupils.

The teacher must have a definite goal, the speaker said, and continued work along the lines which will most economically bring about these ends.

1. Develop ability on the part of the child to read with interest.

2. The aim must not be to read words. This is a great drawback to any child when he reaches the intermediate grades. He reads in jerky fashion and has no knowledge of the facts the author is trying to put across.

The child must realize that the printed page means something. He should sense that a series of words is a sentence and has a meaning.

3. If the child has no interest, the teacher must develop an interest in reading.

The reading period should be a happy period, said Miss Jackson. Children should be free to give any suggestions or ask any questions, because they learn more in so doing.

A child gains a rich and varied experience through reading. There should be no presentation of any reading matter until the child has a background. If the matter is foreign to his experience, it will have no meaning. The teacher should take time to give him the necessary background as this will develop an interest in the story.

The child cannot appreciate the material on the printed page unless he has had a certain amount of experience in living. Wise parents see that a child has experience in deciding matters concerning his own little affairs, things about the home he is interested in, and his own conduct. He must have friends. He learns from them how to converse intelligently. The lack of these often retards a child.

Children's Book Week, said the speaker, may be utilized to develop a desire to own books. Keep a reading table upon which are placed books children like best. These are brought from the homes. Two books especially mentioned which were enjoyed by children were "Donkey John of the Toy Valley" by Margaret Morley and "The Happy Forest" by Daisy Plympton.

Develop in children the love of good poetry by reading poems to them, said Miss Jackson. Children invariably return asking to read the poem. She cautioned teachers to encourage better expression and not to discourage it by too much destructive criticism.

GRAIN COMPANY ADDS TWO NEW MACHINES

Two new machines have been added to the equipment of the Cass City Grain Co.'s plant at Cass City. A Miracle Ace Hammer Mill is the name of a grinder which reduces to a surprising degree of fineness corn, oats, barley and other grains. A Modern Burton Feed Mixer will be installed within a few days. This second machine mixes home grown grains after being ground with other ingredients, enabling the farmer to have his home-grown grain used in any feed formula he desires.

LIST OF JURORS DRAWN FOR DECEMBER TERM

Wm. G. Hurley, county clerk, R. J. Hutchinson, deputy sheriff, and Robert Brown, justice of the peace, met at the county clerk's office on November 10 and in a drawing from the petit jury box, made a list of petit jurors who will serve at the December term of court in Tuscola county. CASS CITY DEBATERS WIN FIRST CONTEST

Unanimous Decision Rendered by Judges; Next Debate Comes December 7.

Cass City high school's debating team, Margaret Jondro, Mabel Crandell and Virginia Day, were the victors in the debate here Friday night with Glen Roth, Lila Gardner and Gladys Service, representatives of the Vassar high school. Both teams did very well in this, the first debate of the season.

Cass City upheld the affirmative side of the question, "Resolved, that a Federal Subsidy for the Development for American Merchant Marine Would Be a Wise National Policy." The judges, M. J. Crawford, superintendent of the Caro school, Mr. Thompson, superintendent of the Gagetown school and Fred Harrington, English instructor in the Bad Axe school, delivered a unanimous decision for Cass City. The local team had spent but nine days in preparing for the event.

The Cass City team will again present the affirmative arguments on the question on Dec. 7 at Carsonville.

UNION THANKSGIVING SERVICE NOVEMBER 28

Following a custom of many years' standing, Cass City churches will unite next week for the annual Thanksgiving service. This will be held at the Presbyterian church on Wednesday evening, Nov. 28, at eight o'clock. Rev. Wm. Curtis, pastor of the Baptist church, will deliver the address, his topic being "Reckoning with God."

TWO MASTER FARMERS IN THUMB DISTRICT

Michigan's ten "master farmers" for 1928, chosen by a committee headed by State Commissioner of Agriculture Herbert E. Powell, were announced Sunday by the Michigan Master Farmers' Club.

The selections were made on the basis of ability and agriculturists, success in homemaking and force in community and public affairs.

Those chosen are: C. E. Johnson, Gogebic county, raiser of Holstein cattle; Fred W. Johnson and son, Montcalm county, potatoes, dairy cattle, steers; Howard Nugent, Huron county, Holstein cattle, beans, corn and alfalfa; Charles J. Salewsky, Menominee county, potatoes, dairy products; Bert Thurston, Tuscola county, general farming, Holstein cattle, Poland China swine; D. D. and J. W. Creyts, Ingham county, Holstein cattle, Berkshire and Poland China swine, horses, sheep and poultry; W. E. Eckerson, Jackson county, steers and lambs, certified wheat and oats; Edward Doll, Chippewa county, cattle; R. J. Fitch, Mason county, fruit.

LEWIS TEAM LEADS VOLLEYBALL LEAGUE

Holmes Squad Is a Close Second with Percentage Mark of .750.

The Lewis team is holding first position in the Business Men's Volleyball League, having won 10 out of 12 games played so far this season. The Holmes squad has proven nearly as good with nine games to its credit. Pinney's team, looking smart and handsome until this week, dropped into third position Tuesday night when they presented Haven's sextet with three games. Two other decisive victories were marked up Tuesday when Holmes defeated Gage three times and Lewis won three from Bigelow. Burt defeated Benkelman two out of three.

The standings:

	W	L	%
Lewis	10	2	.833
Holmes	9	3	.750
Pinney	7	5	.587
Burt	5	7	.418
Haven	5	7	.418
Bigelow	5	7	.418
Gage	4	8	.333
Benkelman	3	9	.250

Results of Thursday, Nov. 22—Pinney won 2 out of 3 from Bigelow; Holmes 2 of 3 from Burt; Gage won three straight from Benkelman; Lewis won three from Haven.

BAD AXE AND CASS CITY TIE 7-7 FRIDAY

Bad Axe and Cass City ended their regular season Friday in a 7-7 tie, playing the last half of the game on a rain-soaked field. Both teams wasted scoring chances that could have broken the tie. Cass City wasted the first chance when a long pass, Flint to Edgerton, put the ball on the Bad Axe 5-yd. line. Three bucks failed to put it over and one fourth down, Brown's place kick was wide.

Bad Axe scored after a 20-yd. run by Mirety. On fourth down, a pass put the ball over and Smith's place kick added the extra point. At the start of the second half, Cass City threw Bad Axe for losses until they were forced to punt from their goal line. Here the kick was blocked and recovered by Vaters, Cass City end. Reagh scored on three line bucks, and Brown tied the score on a beautiful place kick.

The rest of the game was a battle in the mud with neither team threatening to score.

ELLINGTON FARMER RECOVERS FROM ATTACK

Edward Schiele, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Schiele, Ellington township farmers, has recovered from injuries inflicted by two Mexicans who, after beating him terribly, left him unconscious on the Schiele farm on the afternoon of Nov. 10. The young man was attacked between three and four o'clock and was not able to make his way home until eight o'clock that evening.

The Mexicans hailed Schiele while he was working in the field. He answered their call thinking they wished direction and walked to them. One flourished a knife and demanded money. Schiele put his left hand in his pocket as if to get the money, striking out with his right and knocking down the one who held the knife. He was then attacked by the second Mexican, who sprayed a liquid in Schiele's face, blinding him, the young man said. The two men beat him and left him lying unconscious. His pockets were rifled of 18 cents, all the change in them.

MISS McRAE ON MICHIGAN STATE COLLEGE STAFF

In a list of five which the state board of agriculture has ratified to appointments to the Michigan State College staff appears the name of Miss Annabelle McRae, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher McRae of Cass City. Miss McRae's position on the college staff is that of graduate assistant in home economics.

DOUGLAS McTAVISH FELL AND BROKE HIS HIP

Douglas McTavish, 87, had the misfortune to fall and break his hip Monday. He was at his farm which is leased to Ben Crocker to look after some work on the place. While in the house, he was playing ball with one of the little Crocker children and slipped and fell on the floor, fracturing the hip. He is resting as comfortably as can be expected under the circumstances. Mr. McTavish resides with his son, John, in Evergreen township.

UPPER THUMB CHAMP GAME PLAYED TODAY

Cass City and Caro Will Decide Who Will Head the League.

Cass City and Caro will contest for the championship of the Upper Thumb League at the county seat this (Friday) afternoon commencing at three o'clock. Both teams have won four games and when these two teams came together on Oct. 19 they tied the score 12-12.

Two men of high standing in state athletics will serve as officials in the game today. They are Dr. Huston, Western Conference official who worked in the Michigan-Illinois and Illinois-Chicago games and who Saturday will officiate in the Michigan-Iowa contest at Ann Arbor, and Coach Butler of the Central State Teachers' College at Mt. Pleasant.

Both Cass City and Caro teams wanted today's contest in their home town, and a flip of the coin decided the matter in Caro's favor. Many Cass City people are planning to accompany the local players and cheer them on their march across the field.

THUMB OF MICHIGAN ASSO. NEWS LETTER

The association's publicity committee met at the bank at Port Sanilac, Friday, Nov. 16 to plan the advertising campaign for 1929.

The matter of publicity for Thumb farm products received considerable attention. The committee will ask for a considerable appropriation for this purpose, but in the nature of things must wait on the agricultural committee to study out the situation and outline the campaign.

It is planned to continue summer resort advertising on much the same line as during the past year, which has brought The Thumb more to the attention of the outside world than ever before.

The agricultural committee is gathering information about the matter nearest to its hand, the drainage proposition, and is conferring and co-operating with the county agents and drain commissioners.

Tile draining the fields is a matter of the most vital importance to a large majority of our farmers, but the expense is almost prohibitive to many farmers, especially at the present time after three seasons of poor crops.

In Ontario there is an act of great benefit to the farmers, under the terms of which the township or county may issue bonds to provide money to lend to farmers at a low rate of interest with payments spread over a period of ten or twenty years for the purpose of draining their lands.

The agricultural representative of Lambton County, corresponding to our county agents, says "This act has has been a God-send to the farmers of southwestern Ontario, as it has enabled men of very moderate means to secure some real assistance."

Such a provision of the laws of Michigan that would enable the county to advance money to our farmers in this way would be of vast benefit to us all, enabling the men who needs drains the most, but who has not the means to install them at the present time, the opportunity to borrow the necessary money at small expense and repay it out of the increased returns from his farm. As the funds for this purpose would be raised by a bond issue, the interest being paid by the farmer, and the principal returning into a revolving fund, there would be no increase in taxes. On the other hand, many farmers would find themselves much better able to pay their taxes than they are now, when they are struggling against adverse conditions with their lands frequently submerged and the seed rotting in the ground.

This proposition should go hand in hand with the campaign for the extension of the main and branch county drains.

It remains to be ascertained whether such a provision as they have in

While driving to Caro Friday night, Joseph LaPratt and his housekeeper, Mrs. Ella Winchester, of Caro, collided with Joseph Walton of Saginaw, who was driving homeward. Occupants of both cars were quite badly injured. Mrs. Winchester is in Community hospital at Caro, suffering from shock and with an injured shoulder. Walton is at the home of his mother, Mrs. Caroline Fritz, with a broken arm and minor bruises. Both cars were badly damaged. The accident happened near Wahjamega, the rain obscuring the vision of both drivers.

Robbers entered the law office of Otis Pengra some time Tuesday night and took from his safe his cash book, five checks, and two postoffice money orders, also several notes, which Mr. Pengra had for collection. The combination on the safe was undamaged and Mr. Pengra thinks he must have forgotten to lock the safe. The robbers gained entrance through a rear window. The Bay Port Oil Co., station and the Charles Kinde store at Bay Port were broken into the same night. Sheriff Hoffman is working on the cases.

Since attending the Chicago Normal School of Physical Education, Miss Virginia Boomhower of Bad Axe, has been prominent in athletic competition and now field hockey seems to be her forte. In the recent game between the famous English girls hocky team and the All-Chicago hockey team in Washington Park, Chicago, Miss Boomhower took part as right inside forward on the Chicago squad. She is a fast runner and particularly good in triangular pass work. Miss Boomhower is the daughter of Circuit Judge and Mrs. X. A. Boomhower of Bad Axe. She is now in her third year in the Chicago school.

R. E. Spacer of Vassar was wounded in the leg while deer hunting near Melstrand. He was taken to the hospital at Munising.

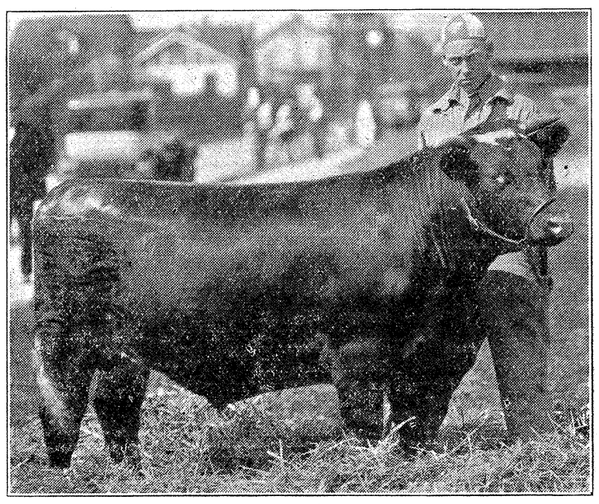
Jim Milligan's Shorthorn Starts Saturday for the Cleveland Show



Jim Milligan, a member of the Cass City Livestock Club, is pictured here with Richland Viceroy, his Shorthorn steer that placed as grand champion baby beef, at the Michigan State Fair this year. He will show the animal at the Cleveland Livestock Show Nov. 27 to Dec. 1 where competition is keen and where steers will be exhibited by boys and girls from several states. Incomplete entry lists showed approximately 60 Angus, 40 Herefords and 75 Shorthorns for this exposition. Mr. Christy of the Prescott Farms at Prescott has visited the Milligan farm to help Jim get the calf ready for exhibition and says it will take a good calf to beat him.

Mr. Milligan will also exhibit Wildwood Again, an Angus steer at Cleveland.

Willis Campbell, club leader at Cass City, will introduce the Michigan representatives at the banquet at the Winton hotel at Cleveland Monday evening. Col. Fred Reppert, one of the country's leading auctioneers, will do the selling on Wednesday.

THANKSGIVING THOUGHTS

The various national holidays tend to become mere occasions of festivity and enjoyment, yet each one of them has a distinctive atmosphere which appeal impresses itself on thoughtful people. The true meaning of such a day may seem in the rush of modern life to be obscured. Yet when any occasion has some vital significance, sooner or later the American people will again become conscious of it, and insist that its true meaning be recognized.

Thanksgiving day is one of the most vital of these occasions. It originally resulted from the strong religious faith of a group of early colonists, who amid scenes that would seem destitute and menacing to us yet found faith to praise the divine power for the things that had been given to them. They could sing psalms, even if hostile Indians threatened and crops were uncertain, and a mountain of work yet lay ahead of them to tame a vast wilderness.

The idea seemed so appropriate and helpful, that the custom spread over the whole country, and became a national holiday. Though it is observed today in ways quite remote from the original spirit, yet we do well to retain it, in the confident hope that as the tides of people's thought swing to and fro, we shall yet realize its value more than we do now.

If those early colonists amid all their perils and labors and troubles, a tiny fringe of civilization in a raging wilderness of savagery, could thank God and take courage, surely we should do so in our teeming civilization, with all our comforts and opportunities.

If we fail to thus render thanks, and manifest that thankful spirit by practical helpfulness, we fall far short of the moral level reached by our forefathers here in Michigan.

PROSPERITY AND RUIN

During the political campaign recently ended, both political parties promised to bring prosperity to the American people. Steady employment, good wages, fair prices, were the issues stressed more than anything else.

Then along came Armistice day, and many of the clergymen preaching in their pulpits issued a warning about the dangers of prosperity. They said that many nations of history have had more prosperity than they could stand, and they went down because they did not know how to use that prosperity. They warned America that it too might decline from a similar cause.

Material prosperity does many people more harm than good. Many children of wealthy people are injured by having more money to spend than they know how to handle. Prosperity is a good deal of a siren. She sings us a sweet song of ease and enjoyment and lavish living. But has a dark and treacherous side in her nature.

In ancient days, when nations became very prosperous, they had all their labor done by slaves. The lazy men lost all energy and virility, and strong, and healthy barbarians would invade them and overturn their empires.

We are not in danger from the same cause, and it is impossible to think that this scientific age will ever go back to barbarism. We shall have all the material comforts we have now, and many more. But unless material prosperity is uplifted by finer ideals, lawlessness and crime may spread, life and property may become insecure, vices may make disease more prevalent, and people might not be so happy as they were amid far simpler and more straitened conditions. Unless our prosperity is lifted out of the dirt of avarice and money getting, by ideals of generosity and service, it will not promote happiness.

ADVERTISING OUR HOME TOWN

If the subject of advertising one's home town is mentioned, most people imagine it means spending a lot of money for paid advertising. Yet a great deal of such advertising is done with practically no expense to anyone.

Every time people send away a picture post card showing scenes in their home towns, they advertise that community.

Every time you send away a copy of your home town newspaper, you give one of the best forms of advertising, which creates an impression in each issue of the business and attractions of the community.

Every time you give a favorable mention of the activities of your home town, in conversation or by letter, you advertise it. In an enthusiastic place, such advertising is a tremendous factor in promoting community growth.

Thanksgiving feast is not the only one to look forward to. Our stores here in Cass City are cooking up a wonderful feast of Christmas and winter bargains.

Some of the time which people spend looking into their mirrors, might well be spent in looking at their home places and observing the things that need improvement.

A retail store can place only a small portion of its goods in its show window to attract the public, but it can give people a good idea of its entire line by use of newspaper advertising.

HOLBROOK.

Epworth League Friday (tonight) at Wickware. Topic, "The Never Ending Adventure," with Rev. Blackmore as teacher.

Miss Marion Ballard returned to her home on Sunday from her stay at the Hubbard Memorial hospital at Bad Axe.

A party held at the home of Marion Kritzman of Shabbona Friday night was pretty well attended. Those from here were Clark Jackson, Charles Simkins. Flossie Law and Delpha Gracy.

Our milk hauler, Nelson Simkins, is driving a new Ford truck.

Mrs. John Jackson and son, Clark, were Sunday visitors at the home of Mrs. Howard McCardle of Jeddo.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Souden are the proud parents of a fine baby boy born Nov. 15. He will answer to the name of Clifford Francis.

Mrs. Russell Sills and son, Calvin, of Bad Axe visited at the home of Mrs. Sill's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Price, on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trathen and daughter, Lorena Barnes, were Sunday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Moore of Cass City.

Loren Trathen has purchased a Chevrolet truck and milk route from George Codling and is hauling milk to Minden City.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hewitt and daughter, Helen, were Sunday visitors at the A. Moss home.

As told by Mr. Campbell, teacher of the agriculture class: Teacher—"Why does a clover plant droop at night and not through the day time?" Bright Student—"Through the day the plant let's the sunlight in and at night it closes up to keep the moonshine out."

A Correction—Last week's item was that Robert Spencer sold four calves and a yearling for the sum of $450. It should have read the sum of $470. Mr. Campbell, Robert Spencer and son, Lynn, motored to Swartz Creek on Saturday to select a calf for Lynn from the famous Crapo Farms. Lynn expects to feed two Hereford steers this coming year to be shown at the fairs. He finds it a pleasure as well as a paying proposition.

POULTRY

YELLOW CORN IS BEST FOR HENS

Yellow corn should constitute at least 60 per cent of the total rations for laying hens. This is especially important during the winter months when the supply of green food is limited. The chief virtue yellow corn possesses which is not present in white corn is vitamine A which must be provided to maintain the health of the flock. Where rations are devoid of this vitamine the hens will develop a disease very similar to roup. In fact it is called nutritional roup. The eyes water, swell shut, and white pustules form in the throat. Naturally the egg production is very poor. One can tell by observing the color of the egg yolk whether the danger line is near. If the egg yolks are extremely pale, it is a practical index that the ration is low in vitamine A and that vitamine A must be provided, otherwise danger is ahead. This is due to the fact that feeds rich in the yellow coloring matter found in eggs are usually rich in vitamine A. If yellow corn constitutes half of the ration, there is no cause for alarm.

In case it is impossible to feed yellow corn, then it is absolutely necessary to feed some green leafy material such as clover or alfalfa leaves. Pea green alfalfa leaf meal may be used to the extent of 10 to 15 per cent of the poultry mash, or clover or alfalfa hay should be kept in suitable racks before the hens all the time. Some people build a V-shaped rack of slats which will hold a bale of hay. The rack should be high enough off the floor so that the hens may pick easily off the lower corner. Later the bale may be rolled over, and after the leaves are consumed, the stems may be used as litter. It should be remembered that if yellow corn is used, it is not so necessary to feed the hay. Succulent material, such as root crops, is not a substitute for the green leafy material.

Materials Necessary for Producing Eggs

Every egg must have a shell. Bones also require minerals. Both bones and shells are largely made up of calcium. Without the necessary calcium, laying hens will lack the materials necessary for producing eggs. Even though enough other feed may be supplied to furnish the necessary materials for a large number of eggs a hen cannot lay more eggs than she has shell material for.

Considerable experimental data has been compiled which shows definitely that a plentiful supply of minerals has a marked effect on the number of eggs laid. In addition to a plentiful supply of oyster shell or other high calcium mineral, hens need free access to a supply of sharp sand to aid them in digesting their feed. These items represent a small cost to the producer but make a large difference in the net returns.

Growing poultry also requires a liberal supply of minerals. In addition to calcium, many producers are mixing from four to five pounds of bone meal with every 100 pounds of mash. Bone meal furnishes phosphates in addition to calcium and therefore aids in bone growth.

Plan to Keep Rats Out of the Poultry House

To keep rats out of a poultry house, build a concrete wall four inches thick on the outside or the inside of the old foundation. This wall should extend two feet below the ground level and at least one foot above it.

A four-inch concrete floor is then placed directly on the compacted earth. If the natural drainage is poor, a cinder or gravel fill six inches thick is first placed on the earth; however, in most cases this fill is not needed.

The door is equipped with a spring hinge or some other device which will close it automatically. If the door is of wood, a good plan is to place a piece of sheet metal or of one-fourth inch, 12-gauge wire screen, one foot high on its base in order to prevent the rats from gnawing through it.

Sprouting Oats

One of the easiest ways to sprout oats is to place the oats in a bag and soak it in a pail of water overnight. Use warm water in winter. Soak two quarts for each 100 hens. After soaking overnight, hang the bag behind the kitchen stove. Dip the bag in warm water once daily, shaking the oats each time, and hang up again. The oats is ready for use on the fifth day. If one uses five bags for sprouting oats, he can have a constant supply by starting a new bag each day.

Eggs in Winter

Many poultrymen are finding that they need warmer houses for winter egg production and are lining their houses with commercial wall board at the time of the fall renovation. This lining gives the house a smooth appearance on the inside and removes a lot of the cracks and crevices around the uprights. This reduces the time required to brush out the dust and enables the poultryman to make a better fight against mites, lice and disease.

GAGETOWN

Mrs. Ernal Lloyd and children of Pontiac visited a few days last week with Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Crawford of Brookfield.

OUR SHARE OF CHRISTMAS TRADE.

The people of this community are going to spend a big sum of money in the next few weeks. Much more than a normal month's business will be done. The way that business goes makes a big difference to our community.

If we keep most of that money here, it means a new tide of prosperity for the winter, and something of that money will go into substantial improvements that will add to the permanent facilities of the town. If much of it goes away elsewhere, trade will drag in our community. Think it over, when you decide where to buy your holiday and winter stuff.

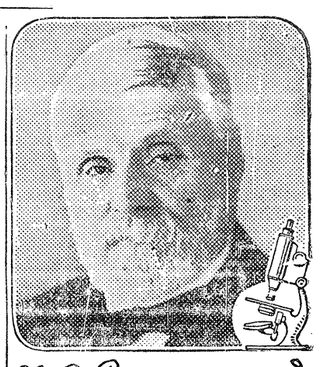
Prescription He Wrote in 1892 is the World's Most Popular Laxative

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their system. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful management this prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.



W. B. Caldwell M D
AT AGE 83

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for elderly people. All drug stores have the generous bottles.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

Ernest Churchill of Detroit visited his cousin, Mrs. William Parrish, on Monday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Corkins, Mr. LaCornu and Miss Scott, all of Pontiac, were Sunday visitors at the J. C. Corkins home.

Wilfred Leepla, who is employed in Detroit, spent a week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Leepla. He returned to the city Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Higgins and daughter, Lorraine, and Misses Arcele Martin and Gertrude Mussall of Detroit attended the funeral of Miss Zelma Kehoe here Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Landon attended a house party at Bellevue Saturday and Sunday when Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hoyt of Bellevue and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Mallison of Battle Creek entertained 14 rural carriers and their wives at the Hoyt home in Bellevue. On the return trip Sunday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Landon stopped at Pontiac where Mr. Landon sang from the First Baptist church over the radio. The solo was "Out of the Deep" by Christopher Mark and was dedicated to his mother-in-law, Mrs. Hugh McColl, who makes her home most of the time with the Landon's.

After her first appearance as a piano soloist before the Musicale-Art club Tuesday afternoon at the Masonic Temple at Bay City, music lovers of that city predicted that Mrs. James K. Brooker would be one of the popular local artists in the future. The Bay City Times of Wednesday, Nov. 14, says: "Her numbers were given with so little fuss and with such ease that she captured her audience on that point alone. Probably the most outstanding thing about Mrs. Brooker's playing is the beauty of her tone. One forgets the great technical skill which must be behind every good concert, in the sheer enjoyment of the music when she is at the piano. In the delicate and almost diaphanous passages of the Bach number which she played first, and in the thundering of Chopin's 'Revolutionary Etude' which concluded her program she successfully ran the gamut of moods. Her touch was as sure in the avalanche of sound in the last composition as it was in the light measures of the first. In the parts where there was a quick tempo, it was a delight to watch her fingers flying over the keys. Other interesting features of the afternoon program were, a paper on the subject of Eugene O'Neil, the great American playwright, by Mrs. F. C. Patterson, and an interesting talk upon the productions of "Marco's Millions' and the 'Strange Interlude' by O'Neil given by Mrs. N. R. Wentworth."

Cass City Schools

This is station ARF way upon top of the schoolhouse. Our program this week should be of special interest to our listeners. Let's see what are we doing in high school? It would be easier to tell what we aren't doing, as this year we are working more as individuals than as a class.

First hour after lunch, you'd find both junior high and senior high students some working on color charts; some on costume designs for street, afternoon, house and evening; some may be making designs for Christmas cards; others designing place cards for Thanksgiving dinner; and still others making—well, that nearly lets out some one's Christmas secrets.

If you should step into second hour class you'd wonder what is going on for that class is responsible for the Thanksgiving decorations in the art room. You see we're having a little contest between the classes. First hour class under Audrey Bliss as commander in chief, decorated our room for Hallowe'en, second hour class headed by Virginia Day is putting the finishing touches on our Thanksgiving decorations; and third hour class under the direction of Janet Allured, will make the room look Christmasy. The group succeeding in making the most attractive display, is to receive a grand treat of which you'll hear more. Third hour class is working on problems similar to those of the first hour with the addition of a little cartooning.

In fifth and sixth grades we are making free hand illustrations. In sixth they are pictures of incidents in the lives of the Pilgrims done in water color. In the fifth we are illustrating a Thanksgiving song with crayons on colored paper.

In third and fourth grades we are making Thanksgiving place cards for our mothers. In first and second grades we have been cutting all kinds of fruit and pasting them in baskets also made of cut paper. This concludes our program for this week, but we will be on the air next week at exactly the same hour. This is station ARF signing off at exactly 3:30 Eastern Standard time.

Kindergarten: We are learning Stevenson's little poem, "Foreign Children" in connection with our activity of making built up posters of the children of other countries. We first got our idea from our study of the Pilgrims in Holland before they came to America. We have a very interesting display table upon which we put all our clay modeling and collection of Thanksgiving pictures and stories. We are having a very interesting time each day in building an old fashioned church with the blocks. If we had logs, we could make a church such as the Pilgrims had. We are making use of all our available material for a Thanksgiving booklet, each child being allowed to fold paper, cut pictures, and sew booklet as he wishes, without instruction. We hope to have some very original ones. Next week we are going to make a Thanksgiving basket which is a real beauty. In connection with this activity we have planned to have a large bushel basket in our room, for which each one will contribute. We shall decide later to whom this shall be given.

First Grade—This week we have created an Indian atmosphere until even our friends doubt our ancestry. Through Neville Mann's efforts a half forest was carried up to school, consequently, wigwams loom up in the back of our room. The class discussions assume the form of a Council-fire, the only two phases lacking are the tom tom of Indian war-drums and the war whoop, so characteristic of this First-y-like-Always-Like tribe.

Fifth Grade—We are making Thanksgiving Posters. The A class in reading is preparing a Thanksgiving play. We have just finished our work on the coffee industry in geography. We are making a product map of South America. We are rather interested in our new arithmetic work book, and each class has been able to earn relatively high scores.

The Lambda Sigma Club enjoyed a pot luck supper Thursday evening at 6:30 o'clock. A friendly social hour proved that we are accomplishing our aim to promote a closer interest between the Junior and Senior girls of our high school.

AMBASSADOR BRIDGE LARGEST IN WORLD

Huge Detroit-Canadian Span to Cost 20 Millions.

Detroit.—The Ambassador bridge, spanning the Detroit river between Detroit and the border cities of Canada, will be the largest suspension bridge in the world when it is completed next year at a cost of $20,000,000. The first physical contact between the two shores was celebrated with elaborate ceremonies recently when the two-mile bridge first reached Canadian soil.

The first spanning of the Detroit river was by means of a steel cable 1⅞ inches in diameter which was strung over the path to be taken by one of the two main supporting cables of the permanent bridge structure. The cable was lifted from the bed of the river, where it was placed a few days before, to the top of the two huge towers which will cary the burden of the finished international bridge.

Nineteen Inch Cables.

From this steel cable will be hung the working platforms from which the workmen will construct the 7,622 parallel and closely compacted steel wires which will form one of the two main bridge cables. The same operation will be followed in the construction of the other main 19 inch cable.

Because of the size and importance of the Ambassador bridge, dignitaries from both the border cities of Ontario and Detroit were present at the ceremonies. The mayors of Detroit and the Ontario border cities of Windsor, Sandwich, Ford, Riverside, La Salle, Tecumseh, and Walkerville officiated in the elaborate program. A squadron of airplanes dropped brilliantly lighted colored balloons on the river and along the shores.

The mayor of Detroit gave the order for the setting off of an aerial bomb, the signal for the raising of the cable from the river bed, while the mayor of Sandwich, Ont., gave a similar signal on the Canadian shore. As the cable was raised into position on the towers rising 363 feet above the river, the flags of the United States and Canada appeared from the steel rope and from the tops of the towers.

When completed the Ambassador bridge will be approximately 7,400 feet in length. Adjoining the ends of the bridge structure proper will be two terminals, each roughly equivalent to a large city block in area. The main span between the towers will be 1,850 feet in length, or 100 feet longer than the Philadelphia-Camden bridge, which is at present the longest suspension bridge in the world. The bridge under construction over the Hudson river between upper Manhattan and the Palisades on the Jersey shore will dwarf them all when it has been completed.

The bridge will carry an unobstructed roadway 47 feet wide, with a capacity of five lanes of traffic, and an 8-foot sidewalk. The number of lanes of traffic used in any one direction may be varied to suit traffic conditions.

Plenty of Clearance.

Maj. Gen. Edgar Jadwin, chief of engineers, United States War department, ordered the clearance over high water in the river to be 135 feet near the shore and 152 feet for a short distance near the center of the span. This allows the passage of vessels with stacks, masts, or funnels 20 feet higher than any plying on the lakes and 60 feet higher than any present freighters. The approach grades are entirely acceptable for the best highway practice.

An idea of the magnitude of the bridge may be gained from the following statement of approximate quantities of different kinds of materials entering into its construction:

Structural steel and cable wire, 24,000 tons; concrete masonry, 25,000 cubic yards; cement, 40,000 barrels; roadway pavement, 60,000 square yards; sidewalk, 8,000 square yards; rivets driven, 2,000,000; terminal buildings, 540,000 cubic feet; maximum number of laborers simultaneously employed in field, 550.

Two Alligators Set Up Home Beneath Store

Oklahoma City, Okla.—Two alligators have established a permanent home beneath the downtown business building of Oscar Grace, proprietor of a local cleaning establishment, where they have led more or less hectic careers for the last year.

Grace has torn holes in the floor and has dug crevices in the foundation in an effort to reach the 'gators and restore them to a glass tank where he can enjoy their companionship. But so far, his only reward has been badly scratched hands and arms.

Rasping of their backs on the floor, he said, is "making a nervous wreck of me."

Dame Fashion Smiles

By Grace Jewett Austin

Just a mere man, surveying a large assemblage the other day, declared it was a "gay spectacle." The reason was not far to seek. The gayety is accounted for by this blessed zeal for color which seems to grow and grow with each succeeding year in the United States. Paris may say, "black, black" just as often as it pleases, but this happy land, where every one has a million blessings, is going to express its joy more and more by color.

Grace J. Austin.

There are some individuals who can talk who do not have mouth, nor tongue, nor teeth. You will notice Dame Fashion does not say "persons," but Noah Webster has told us that an "individual" may be a "singular as opposed to a collective concept or idea." So here is a modish gown, desiring to talk a bit:

"How do you you do, Everywoman—for I know every woman in the world is wanting at least one new gown. I want to tell you we are prettier right now than we have ever been in the history of the world. Dame Fashion was recently given Mrs. Pennell's new book on the 'Art of Whistler,' and we agreed that his pictures—except for that of his mother, which no one could improve—would look so much better if his women did not have such floor-sweeping dresses.

"On the whole, I have a rather straight silhouette, in spite of tiers of soft ruffles at times. If women had been intended to be shaped with hoop and bustle forms they would have been made so, but women are dressed more now like Greek goddesses than they have ever been since Helen's and Sappho's time. And if that is not getting back to beauty, I don't know what is." Her voice was clear, bright and cheerful, just what you would expect to come from an "individual" wearing the rich Arabian red, or the clear independence blue of the American flag; the soft, juicy beige color that the French like to call "marron glace"—the candied chestnut—or the gracious English green.

Gown did not say so, but she is sure to appreciate the addition of a little appropriate costume jewelry. Dame Fashion really believes that it won't be long until there isn't a woman left in the country who "wears only her wedding ring and the brooch that was Aunt Sarah's." With the costume jewelry, plus imagination, one can get about the same thrill as from wearing diamond tiaras and emerald necklaces—with no worry about burglars!

All cut-crystal jewelry is very good this season. Would you like the fun of learning to be a real connoisseur in it? Now there are the "wood-cut" crystals; they are pretty strings of beads, ready to be effective color-effects, and costing only a dollar or so. But you will find some other crystals and they will twinkle more, and these are "tin-cut." There is quite a specialty of the "diamond-cut" crystals—Oh, but they are lovely!

Perhaps you have a chain where there are little round crystals between the larger beads. The technical name for these little clear crystals is "rondels"—a very picturesque name, for a "rondel" was really the name for a little round tower at the foot of a higher fortification, and when the little round things were placed between bigger beads, some clever person gave them that name. This season there is a promise made that diamond-cut rondels will be made, and put in strings all by themselves. If they look the way they should, they'll make a marvelous aristocratic piece of costume jewelry.

REMEMBER BACK WHEN---

It takes the "old timers" to remember back in the seventies when the cork pine measuring four to five feet across the butt were cut from the forests in this community and floated down the Cass river to the big sawmills at Saginaw.

The pine tree pictured above was one of the last big trees left standing in this section. It was cut down on the John Striffler farm two miles northeast of Cass City nearly 25 years ago. It measured about four feet across the butt.

Many records for egg production have been made with Purina Chows. While you may not have the world's champion birds, Purina will make them do their best. It will make you more money to feed it.

It's our guess that nobody's more thankful on Thanksgiving than the family pup. After the big dinner, life is just one heaven of bones!

The Purina plan for dairy farmers says to raise all the feed you can, use enough Cow Chow and Bulky-Las to supply what your own feed lacks, and keep tab on the results. Then if Purina doesn't make you more money, don't feed it. Isn't that a fair plan? Why not give Purina a trial?

A dollar doesn't go as far as it used to, but then neither does a skirt.

A little Calf Chow takes the place of a lot of milk in feeding that calf.

No place, we are sure, is so fine as it seems when you are homesick for it, and none so bad as it seems when you are homesick in it.

Woolen underwear has, no doubt, a great deal to do with the present national spirit of unrest.

We have another car of Cream of Wheat flour on the road. Our price on this flour is very low quality considered.

Already we're commencing to notice signs of Thanksgiving! We met a turkey the other day with a wary look in his eye and the local grocery stores report a big business in cranberries. We're goin' to commence to slow up on breakfasts—just to be ready.

Ten years ago November 11th—d'y're-member? The only way we could express ourselves was with noise. It was more quiet this year but there were folks in Cass City who didn't forget—they can't'.

We have just found out why a chicken crosses the road. Because it can't crawl under it! Simple, eh? Simple-minded, yes. But feed Purina and your chicks will be glad to stay home—Body-building, egg-producing, profitable feeds.

GOAL OF RED CROSS ANNUAL ROLL CALL 5,000,000 MEMBERS

Disaster Relief and Work for Veterans Cause Heavy Drain on Resources.

In order to enable the American Red Cross to carry on its broad activities, ranging from service to the world war veteran to instant response in time of disaster, a membership of 5,000,000 should be enrolled, and in this year of 1928-1929 that is the goal set for the twelfth annual roll call, to be held from November 11 to 29, Armistice to Thanksgiving Day.

John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross at Washington, in calling upon the nation for 5,000,000 adult members, directs attention to the great expenditures required of the Red Cross for disaster and veteran relief work, and for its many other activities devoted to health preservation and improvement and to cutting down the number of accidental deaths, through life saving and first aid courses.

"The Red Cross should at all times have a large reserve fund," Judge Payne stated, "because when disaster strikes, and this organization is called into instant action, there is no time to stop and raise funds. Dollars may mean lives, so we should have at all times a good reserve. We have been forced each year to draw upon our reserves, and we find that the demands are increasing annually."

Judge Payne pointed out that in the fiscal year of 1927-28, the Red Cross had extended aid in 66 major catastrophes in the United States and its insular possessions, and in 22 nations abroad. This does not include the West Indies hurricane disaster in Porto Rico and Florida, which occurred after the close of the Red Cross fiscal year, June 30, 1928.

The Red Cross expenditures for disaster in that period were $16,544,258.87, of which approximately $13,000,000 was expended in the Mississippi Valley for the flood relief work, which came from a fund contributed by the public. More than $1,000,000 was expended in the St. Louis tornado damage, and more than $1,000,000 in New England. In both cases public relief funds were raised, although in New England the Red Cross contributed in excess of $500,000 from its own funds for the relief work. In the majority of the other 66 disasters, and in all of the 22 foreign catastrophes in which the Red Cross extended aid, the money came from its own resources.

The largest item in the annual budget of the Red Cross is for its veteran relief and work for disabled ex-service and service men, upon which it expended in this year $1,169,795.

Every man and woman is asked by Judge Payne to join the Red Cross during the roll call period, to aid in these humanitarian enterprises.

Ten years after the Armistice, the American Red Cross still carries on for the world war veteran, providing comfort and entertainment for him in hospital, aiding his family where necessary, preparing and following through his claims for insurance, compensation or disability.

America holds the Red Cross emblem sacred because it represents a universal helpfulness—a service to all citizens—without regard to race, color or creed.

VETERAN RELIEF IS BIG RED CROSS TASK

Service to Disabled in Ten Years Since Armistice Has Cost $65,800,000.

In this year of the tenth anniversary of the Armistice, which ended the world war, the American Red Cross still finds a great army of disabled and sick veterans requiring assistance, and whose families also must be aided, according to a statement by James L. Fieser, vice chairman in charge of domestic operations of the Red Cross at Washington. In the ten years since November 11, 1918, the Red Cross has expended approximately $65,800,000 in veteran relief work, Mr. Fieser said.

There is a daily average of 25,500 disabled and sick world war veterans enrolled in Veterans' Bureau and other government hospitals which care for these men and women, and about the same annual average of veterans succumbing to wounds and illness, for whose dependents the Red Cross is pledged to give required assistance, Mr. Fieser pointed out.

In addition, the Red Cross, under its charter granted by Congress, has a definite duty towards service men of the regular establishment of Army, Navy and Marine Corps, and follows them to all foreign ports or duty. The expenditure in this work for the year ending June 30, 1928, was $307,458, the annual report states.

"Upon the Red Cross rests the sacred obligation of carrying on relief work for the disabled service and ex-service men and women and their dependents, taking up the work where the Government is not able to carry on," Mr. Fieser said. "The Red Cross has 349 trained workers, serving either full or part time in the field, in liaison work, camps and hospitals, who are always in personal contact with the sick and disabled in hospitals, with the men in the regular Army, Navy and Marine Corps, and who stand ever ready to serve veterans back in civil life, who need the help of a friendly agency to aid in establishing their rights and claims.

"To maintain this staff and to support the practical services they render, the Red Cross made expenditure of $1,169,795 for the year ending June 30, 1928. In addition 2,700 Red Cross Chapters, in that number of communities, who have established special work for the disabled service and ex-service people, expended during the past year $1,732,000."

The annual report states that the number of death claims alone of veterans which are handled through the War Service at national headquarters of the Red Cross, has increased from 12,010 in 1923-24 to 24,602 in 1927-28. During the year ending June 30, 1928, War Service assisted Chapters in adjusting Government claims amounting, in benefits to veterans or their dependents, to $693,203.42 in awards for compensation, insurance, adjusted compensation, burial expenses, etc. In addition to this amount, which represented lump sum payments, awards were obtained for $183,389 in monthly installments of insurance and compensation and in quarterly adjusted compensation payments.

Mr. Fieser points out that Red Cross Roll Call comes once each year, and that it is the only occasion upon which the Red Cross asks for funds with which to carry on its activities, of which War Service is one. From Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day the American people are asked to support this work through their Red Cross memberships.

WHY

Modern Smoker Constitutes Element of Danger

The man with the pipe was the original smoker. In so far as forest fires were concerned, he was almost harmless. Originally he was of our great-grandfather's time—a real woodsman—and too wise to set the forest afire. He was without friction matches, cigars and cigarettes. Our great-grandfather lighted his pipe with an ember from the campfire and threw the ember back into the fire. He carried a flint and steel and used a tinder box or produced fire by friction. He was an economist with fire because fire was not easy to get. When the flint spark had served its purpose it went out. The fire from the flint could not be thrown into the forest, neither could the fire from friction be cast aside and become an element of forest destruction like the modern firebrand, the match. In those days when they started a fire they had to act deftly and quickly to get the fire going. Today every man, woman and child in the United States uses an average of seven matches a day. When the pioneer built a campfire he took care of it and very seldom through his carelessness was a forest fire set.

The difference between then and now is marked. Ninety per cent of forest fires are set by human beings and most of them are traced to smokers. It is the rule rather than the exception to throw burning cigarettes, cigar stubs and lighted matches into the forest or inflammable brush or grass adjacent to the forest. These modern conveniences and new sources of personal enjoyment (matches, cigarettes and cigars) have brought great personal responsibility. This responsibility is either to use the property and pleasure of others or to abandon their use when in or near the forest. —Exchange.

Why the Sea Is Salt Explained by Science

The old question of who put the salt in the sea has been referred to Vulcan, mythological patron of volcanoes, by Dr. E. G. Zies of the geophysical laboratory of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, says Current Science. We read:

"He attributed some of the chlorin content of the oceans to the outpourings of hydrochloric acid gases from fumarolic areas, such as the Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes in Alaska. The hydrochloric acid gases change to salt in contact with sodium mineral content of the rocks and water, just as the acid contents of the stomach produce salt when they come in contact with soda or baking powder. These minor volcanoes and other eruptions also belch forth considerable quantities of hydrofluoric acid gas. This is the acid that will etch glass. To it is due fluorin content of the sea. Recently the sea was discovered to be a veritable mine of fluorin, and a floating chemical plant was placed aboard a ship to extract this valuable chemical from the seawater. Doctor Zies declared that so much fluorin is sent down to the sea that some unknown chemical mechanism must be at work to precipitate most of it to the submarine rock floor."

Why New Pearls Are Best

The life of a pearl is roughly a thousand years. After several centuries the outer skin begins to wrinkle like the skin on the hand of an elderly person, and the pearl has to be peeled to uncover the new skin beneath. It would be a better investment, therefore, to buy modern pearls than pearls worn by Queen Elizabeth, although even her gems would still have quite a long lease of life.

Because of the craze for evening bags covered with seed pearls the tiny gems are growing in value. Thousands often go to the making of one bag, which may cost anything from $500 upwards, or much more if the draw cords end in sapphire, ruby or emerald drops, as they often do.—Kansas City Star.

How to Remove Whitewash

How can whitewash be removed from a wall? Soften the whitewash by thoroughly wetting with a solution of two pounds of potash in five gallons of water, repeating the operation several times if necessary. When softened, remove with a scraper.—New York Telegram.

How Storm Travels

If it is a general storm, the kind that brings rain or snow for several hours, it is practically certain to go several hundred miles to the east or southeast by the next day. This is because that is the direction of the general air movement, as determined by the rotation of the earth.

Why We Talk of Jinx

The word "jinx" was derived from mythology. It refers to an evil genius or spirit which some superstitious people believe to be continually active seeking to circumvent humans in their undertakings and bringing failure misfortune and bad luck.

Why Ponies Are Small

Indian and Shetland ponies had as ancestors large European horses, but lack of food made small size favorable to existence, hence the species gradually became smaller and smaller until the modern types were developed.

Why Army Privates

Civilians not in public office or employment were in olden times "private persons," and the term was extended to soldiers without rank.

THUMB OF MICHIGAN ASSO. NEWS LETTER

Concluded from first page.

Ontario can be applied in Michigan. The agricultural committee and the legislative committee are working together to study this out in conjunction with the drain commissioners and farm agents, and hope that they may have something constructive to offer along this line before long.

We want roads! We want paved highways! We want to get our share of the three cent gas tax money! Are we getting it?

It looks as if we were not getting our share. Why? The answer is—lack of co-operation. On the west side of the state they got together some years ago and decided on what they wanted, and the counties and cities all up and down the west shore—in fact the whole west side of the state—went at the matter with a definite program. They have been getting what they went after through concerted and persistent effort.

In The Thumb there has been no such concerted effort, The Thumb of Michigan Association is the only organization that has ever attempted to unite all the interests of this portion of the state in securing our due. The Association has set itself the task of securing its share of the state funds for the paving of the trunk lines and has adopted a definite program.

If we are to succeed in putting over our program, we must all pull together. It is a mistake for one group or another to run to Lansing with insistent demands for paving their particular roads. The result, if this policy should be followed, would be that we would fall further and further behind the procession in getting what we want. Let us work together! We will, under the leadership of the Association, push the paving of M-29 along the shore. We will continue to advance the pavement of M-19 and M-53, and will secure the paving of these roads much faster than if each group should squabble before the authorities in Lansing over who is going to get theirs first.

HOSPITAL NOTES.

Stanley Colson was able to leave the hospital for his home in Kingston Tuesday.

Mrs. A. J. Knapp underwent an operation Tuesday for removal of tonsils.

Mrs. Avon Boag of Decker and Mrs. George Ibbitson of Gagetown are still patients and are doing nicely.

Edwin Gruber was able to leave on Saturday for home in Argyle.

EVERGREEN.

Mr. and Mrs. Reves of Caro and Mr. and Mrs. Greenwood of Caro visited at John Hall's Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Flint and daughter, Leila, and her children called at John Hall's Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Hall and children and Mr. and Mrs. Miles Dodge, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dodge and family, Mr. and Mrs. Steve Dodge and family, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Frost of Novesta and Cass City had a surprise party on Mrs. Jed Dodge at Deford Friday night, the occasion being her 58th birthday. She received some nice gifts and a birthday cake. Games were played and all enjoyed the evening.

Frozen in Hot Spell

In some parts of the southwest evaporation is so rapid that exceedingly cold temperatures are produced by the heat. There is a record of a man freezing to death when he went to sleep under a wet blanket.

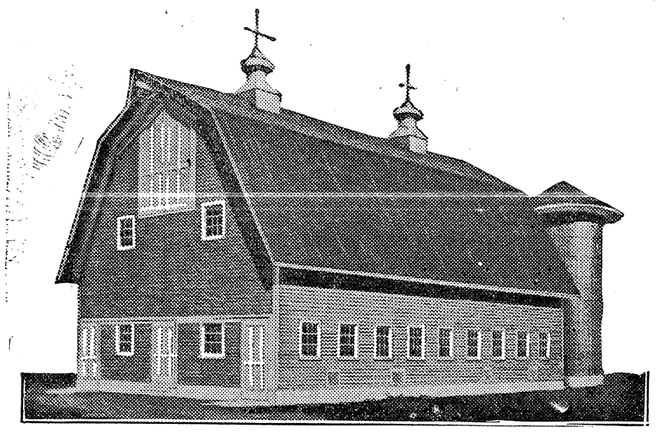
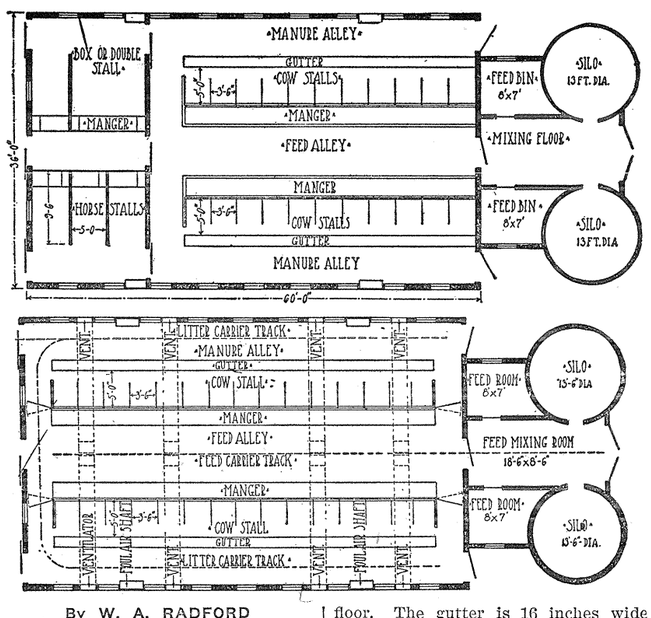
Arrangement of Barn Provides Best Manner of Stabling Cows





By W. A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all problems pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on the subject. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

The arrangement of this barn shows the manner of stabling cows in the best dairy barns. The cross-section of the floor shows what is considered the acme of perfection in dairy stable building.

The cows face each other across a feed alley 8 feet wide between the depressions for the manger. From one stall partition across the alley to the other stall partition is 12 feet. The floor in this feed alley is the same height as the top of the manger. The cows' front feet, when standing, are on a level with the bottom of the manger. The manger has a depth of 10 inches and is 2 feet 2 inches in width across the top. The stalls are 3 feet 6 inches wide and 5 feet long, measuring from the stanchions to the gutter. This is the ordinary length and width of a cow stall for full-sized cows.

In practice it is seldom that a dairyman has enough small cows to make the special stall necessary. In this plan, however, four of the stalls are narrower and these may be used for small cows or heifers. The gutter drops six inches from the stall floor. The gutter is 16 inches wide and back of the gutter is an alley floor five feet in width. This alley floor is four inches lower than the stall floor and only two inches above the bottom of the gutter.

The reasons given for the higher feeding floor and the lower alley floor at the rear are that the feed is kept up where it works down into the mangers easily and also that looking at the cows from the front they appear to better advantage when you look down on them. On the other hand milk cows appear better from the rear when standing a little lower than the cows.

Besides this, ventilation is more easily handled when cows face in. Other reasons for this arrangement are that the coarse parts of roughage naturally gravitate down from the feeding alley to the stalls for bedding and from there to the gutter. The outside windows give better light at milking time than could be had by facing the cows the other way.

Dairymen differ in their views about facing cows in or out but it appears that a great many more good stables are built to face cows in than to face them out.

This stable is 36 feet wide, which accounts for the liberal alleyways. When carriers for feed and manure are used, these wide alleys are quite an advantage. While a litter carrier may be run through a narrower hallway, it is much more convenient and satisfactory to have plenty of room.

Home Building Should Blend With Landscape

In building a home, the architectural type should blend in with the surrounding landscape or add to the collective beauty of the other homes immediately adjacent; this item is too often overlooked.

The American colonial type, more especially those of frame with large spacious porches, require a much larger space than the English type, southern Italian or Spanish. To properly bring out all of the artistic lines of the American colonial a wide expanse of open lawn directly in front and as far back as the back line of the house is required.

We find many American colonial homes being wedged in between other types and their beauty lost by reason of restricted area. The real beauty of an American colonial can only be shown through proper landscaping which must be carried on conservatively and not overdone.

Many architects today in planning colonial types have resorted to severity in the lines, a condition made necessary by reason of the small lot area on which the house is built. A very elaborate entrance is about the only departure from the straight lines which is found, although some are using the plaster for ornamental purposes.

The southern type of American colonial differs from the severe New England type in that generous porches and columns were used to beautify as well as lend comfort and hominess to the design.

Tints in Brick

Architects have discovered a new world of beauty in that age-old material, common brick. For each brick is a rough, natural unit of burned clay, with its own individual character in form and color. What architects know now all America will know tomorrow.

Portable Fireplaces Used Without Flue

There are few home lovers whose sensibilities are untouched by the open fireplace, with its connotations of cheerful family gatherings and quiet reflection. There still remain many houses, particularly in the warmer regions of the country, where the fireplace has been omitted, and owners of such homes are confronted with costly bills when it is desired to install flues for the wood or coal-burning fireplace.

With a recently introduced line of portable fireplaces, especially designed to take the realistic electric coal grates, the desire for the fireplace is met at moderate expense. Moved about like any piece of furniture, these may be taken along from rented homes when the family finally does purchase its own house, and may be moved about the house at will.

The portable fireplaces can be supplied to harmonize with any scheme of decoration or style of furnishings.

Electric fire grates are simply connected to any electric outlet and successfully create the illusion of flickering coals by the ingenious arrangement of red glass, electric lights, and little vanes which revolve, causing the "glass coals" to alternately dim and brighten.

Shoulder on Shingles for Self-Locking Effect

The shoulders of certain self-spacing shingles seal the slots. In this way the thousands of openings found in the ordinary individual shingle roof are closed. Neither rain nor snow can blow through the roof boards and between them. Heat from within the house cannot escape. Nor can the heat from the summer sun beat into the house. Such advantages make the most practical of individual shingles.

DAIRY FACTS

GOOD COWS NEED SOME VACATION

Give the good dairy cow a rest of six to eight weeks before freshening, for it will mean more production than if she is milked up until she freshens, declares Burt Oderkirk, extension dairyman at Iowa State college.

"Through selection, feeding and breeding, Iowa's most progressive dairymen have developed high producing herds in which there are many cows that will milk continually throughout the year from one freshening to the next without a rest, unless their owners see to it that they receive a vacation," Mr. Oderkirk asserts.

"The profitable cow of the future will be one which produces 300 pounds or more of butterfat in 10 to 10½ months, takes six to eight weeks' rest to build up her body for the next lactation, and drops a good calf each year. A cow that will continue such a program year in and year out will prove most profitable."

Cows bred so as to freshen in the fall, when properly fed, will milk heavily through the winter and when put on grass will continue satisfactory production until hot weather arrives. They will then naturally go down in production and may be dried up.

If there is difficulty in drying up a cow before she is to freshen, she should be taken off grass and not allowed any other succulent feed for a time. She may be milked only once a day for awhile and other milkings skipped later on.

The feed given good dry cows before freshening will be well paid for when the cow freshens. Hence, feed the dry cow so as to get her in good condition.

Cow's Cheapest Food Is Water, Says a Dairyman

The owner of a cow which produced 10,584 pounds of milk and 542.6 pounds of butterfat last year was asked, "What is the cheapest and best form of food for dairy cows?"

"Pure water," he replied; "only be sure that the water is put in the cow and not in the milk can."

Milk contains approximately 87 per cent water and if the cow does not have access to an unlimited supply of fresh, clean, palatable water, her milk flow is bound to suffer heavily. A high-producing cow will consume from 24 to 30 gallons of water per day. Cow testers have found in numerous cases that the milk production of a herd was increased 7 to 8 per cent when automatic drinking cups were installed in the stalls, offering the cow unlimited supply of water whenever desired. A reliable automatic water supply system has proved to be one of the most valuable items of a farm's equipment.

Alfalfa as Winter Feed Superior to Other Hay

Alfalfa should be provided for winter roughage. It is superior to any other hay because of its high protein and mineral content and also because of its high yielding capacity. One acre of alfalfa, if the land contains the proper amount of lime, will produce as much as two acres of clover and, ton for ton, it is a better feed for cows as well as for other live stock.

Those who do not have alfalfa should consider seeding a suitable acreage next year. In recent years quite a number of farmers have prepared seed beds by thorough disking without plowing. This gives a more compact seed bed than can be prepared in a hurry after first plowing and is becoming a popular method. The disking should be done in at least two directions. Three double diskings will usually put the soil in good condition.

Dairy Squibs

Salt is a profitable addition to the daily ration of the dairy cow.

To aid digestion and to stimulate appetite, keep salt before dairy cows at all times.

Dairymen who tuberculin-test their nerds are in line for better profits and have the satisfaction of knowing that disease does not lurk in their herds.

Cow testing increases the average production of the dairy herd, first, by eliminating the low producing cows, and second, by enabling the farmer to select the foundation animals for his herd on the basis of performance

If you are lacking in suitable roughage, do not put too much faith in straw and coarse corn fodder.

Only the best proved sires can be relied on to increase the production of daughters over that of dams having a yearly production of 400 pounds of butterfat.

Properly cured hay and green food carry factors that are not only beneficial to the proper development of calves, but are also necessary for proper reproduction.

Belief in Immortality

It is impossible to say when the doctrine of the immortality of the soul was first advanced. It is certain that the early Assyrians and the Egyptians, the history of which comprises some of the oldest records, were firm believers in immortality.

Genius and Reliability

Mother!

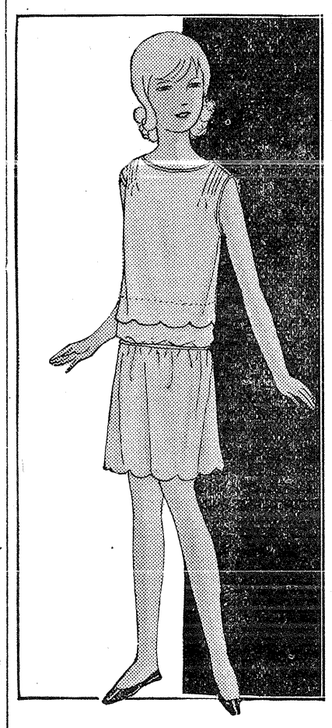
Clean Child's Bowels

"California Fig Syrup" is Dependable Laxative for Sick Children

Hurry Mother! A teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup" now will sweeten the stomach and thoroughly clean the little bowels and in a few hours you have a well, playful child again. Even if cross, feverish, bilious, constipated or full of cold, children love its pleasant taste. It never cramps or overacts. Contains no narcotics or soothing drugs.

Tell your druggist you want only the genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother, you must say "California." Refuse any imitation.

An Overlapping Bolero for Little Misses' Frock



In designing this dance frock Miss Conover, fashion expert of the Woman's Home Companion, had in mind the needs of little girls from nine to thirteen, that age unfortunately known as awkward. To her design she has given grace by means of an overlapping bolero and a pair of scalloped edges which are faced. This frock is best interpreted in crepe de chine.

Velvet and Crepe Satin Fabrics for Day Dresses

The fabric choice for day dresses has to do largely with velvet and with crepe satin. Chanel, Premet and Louiseboulanger, notes a fashion writer in the Kansas City Star, sponsor dull or flat crepes and morocrain, these houses being the exceptions in this regard.

Printed fabrics continue to be shown, in a lesser degree, but in varied forms, usually more in small prints than large. Of course, woolen fabrics are played up, and among these broadcloth is listed, as well as some of the novel crepe wools and jersey in novel weaves.

For evening, lace is raised to the rank of chiffons and is used by all the better houses. Metal tissues show a strong upward trend, and among them is the novelty chiffon lace. Satin weaves remain important, taffeta and moire are repeated, and velvets of several types occur with significant frequency.

Among the varieties are sheer or transparent velvets, panne and faconne. Stiff metalized fabrics are sponsored by Bernard, Nicole Groult and others. Among the more ultra lace novelties are those in chenille, these being indorsed by Chaney, Lelong and others.

As to color, blue heads the list for both day and night, but blue in infinite variety. Vionnet shows a marked preference for corbeau tones, Patou and Chantal for sapphire, Goupy for turquoise and so on through an interesting range of tones. Blue with red, a military touch, has the entire approval of both Worth and Talbot; in fact, red ranks among the exalted of colors and is liberal enough to include American beauty, tomato, brick and, of course, all the wine tones.

Brown is universally approved, beige continues its successful way, in the open spaces, at least, being especially approved for sports; and purple has Miller Soeurs, Beer and others as its staunch friends and advocates. Patou is intensely interested in bottle green, but the tendency toward green is made manifest only among the so-called off or unusual shades.

Woolens Loosing Pounds; Silks Are Made Thicker

The newest silks and woolens show an inclination to exchange weights—the woolens loosing pounds and the silks taking on a substantial thickness says the Woman's Home Companion. Some of the woolens are almost as sheer and soft as silk georgette and there are heavy silks of woven design suitable for costumes of a tailored and a semi-tailored character.

The development of a decorative selvage that incorporates the better elements of a border with the convenience of a selvage is one of the interesting new things in woolens. It promises to do away with a lot of unnecessary hems on the lower edges of blouses and skirts.

A departure from vague patternings is felt in the heavy coat materials and is echoed in a series of very soft jerseys and kashas which are printed in small but definite designs such as we have become accustomed to in other materials but which are new in woolens.

One of the sheerest woolens has a transparent lacy weave, giving an effect which is very smart.

Tulle Scarfs in Style

Tulle scarfs in a new guise are attracting attention for formal evening wear. A recent process of filling in the holes in the tulle makes it possible to paint scarfs with a variety of designs. Huge crimson poppies and old Persian designs in gold and silver are the most effective.

Why Not Put the Half-Billion to Work?

Six thousand lives lost—a half-billion in property destroyed by fire every year! What a tragic, needless sacrifice!

Every owner pays a share of the annual half-billion loss—whether he has a fire or not. He pays it in insurance, taxes and depreciation.

Most of this loss occurs in structures of comparatively small size; common sense has forced fire-safe construction of new large buildings.

Sound financing will not always permit making a small structure completely fire-proof. But a small increase in cost will yield a large increase in fire-safety.

Competent architects say that a fire-safe first floor of reinforced concrete will increase the cost of the average dwelling about two per cent—and even less in larger structures. Statistics indicate that at least thirty per cent of residential fires start in basements. A first floor of reinforced concrete will effectually protect the upper structure against a basement fire.

Single dwellings, small apartment houses, stores, hotels, factories, warehouses, theatres, and churches can have the fire-hazard reduced to minor proportions by employing reinforced concrete for first floors, stair enclosures and other vital locations. The additional cost is surprisingly low—and the reduced fire-risk only one of the benefits.

Why not put the half-billion to work?

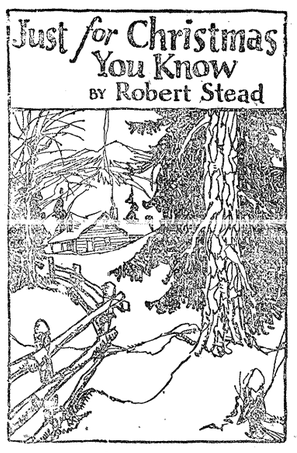
AVON BOAG, Owner

T. B. Tyrell, Auctioneer. M. J. Ehlers, Clerk



THE sun was gilding the crests of the Rockies. How it gilded them, this Christmas Eve! A line of gold ran to north and south, blocking them out against the champagne sky like huge crumpled masses of purple cardboard. Great fan-shaped shafts of light were piercing the heavens, touching to bursts of color every tattered remnant of cloud. But below, the shadows were settling on the foothills, and in the valleys it was almost dark.

Almost dark, too, it was in the heart of little Mrs. Derrit. For three years she had worked the farm alone, and each Christmas seemed a little darker than the one before. She was beginning to wonder if it is true that time heals all sores. It was five years now since Dave had died, and three since young David left the farm, and the ache seemed heavier than ever.

Mrs. Derrit rose from the rocker where she had been sitting beside her kitchen stove. The gloaming had swallowed up the walls; her few cheap pictures had faded into night; only a stray flicker from the fire glinted on the cream separator in the corner of the room. She crossed the floor and with a hand fumbling in the darkness, found the match-box on the wall. Then she lighted her lamp and set it on the kitchen table. One must eat, even on Christmas Eve.

If Olson, the hired man, had stayed it would have been not quite so bad. But he had done his chores up early and left for the dance in the Swedish settlement across the valley. Olson was Mrs. Derrit's right hand, without which the farm work would have been impossible. He was a bachelor, living in a lean-to beside the machinery shed, and coming to the house only for his meals, which he ate for the most part in silence.

Mrs. Derrit placed food on her kitchen table, and sat down before it. Her meal was frugal, not so much from necessity as from weariness. She ate and drank mechanically, then arose, washed her few dishes and put them away, wiped her table and spread a colored cloth upon it. The light from the lamp fell gently on its patterns. She drew the rocker to the table and sat down. The little clock on the shelf said only six o'clock. It was three hours until bedtime, and who could say how long until morning?

Her little hands found work to do—mending for Olson. For a while her needle darted back and forth, trailing a little thread of silver light in the glow from the lamp; then presently work and needle rested in her lap. For was not this Christmas Eve? And down through memory came a procession of these gracious anniversaries, marking the birth of the Child, and sacred to children everywhere in

Then Presently Work and Needle Rested in Her Lap.

Christendom. In a moment or two Mrs. Derrit was no longer seated in her little cabin in the vast foothill valley, but was back in that home down East where little David had first entered her life. What Christmas Eves were those! What laughter and shrieks of delight when Big Dave, her husband, with his great fur coat with the red sash and whiskers of cotton batting burst through the door, being unable to accommodate his bulky form to the chimney after the tradition of Santa Claus! What feasting and fun, and, after little David had grown tired of play, what hours of domestic rapture linking husband and wife! It all seemed now so strange and unreal, as though it had been part of some previous incarnation.

Down the years came memory. David was now a healthy lad. Troublesome, sometimes, but never bad; just overflowing with that boyishness which no mother quite understands and none would ever relinquish.

Then the breaking of the old home ties and the plunge into the great West. Young Dave had taken to the new land even more readily than did his father. How he grew! How he loved to show his strength in the field, his skill in the corral! How soon his mother found she had no boy at all, but two grown men in her household!

And then that sad, sad night when Dave, his father, had been brought home by neighbors who found him in the road. Just at the crossing of the creek, in the lower end of the farm, it was. No one ever knew how it happened, but all supposed he had slipped from his wagon as it lurched on the prairie trail. It was piled high with wood from the valley; perhaps he had been clambering down to steady the load as it lurched, and slipped under the great rear wheel. There was frost in the earth, and a little snow on it; she remembered there was still snow on his face when they laid him in the room. . . .

David had stood by her for two years, but his infatuation for the Ransom girl had been his undoing. They would have nothing of the farm, after that. David could earn big wages in a distant city, working in an automobile factory, where there were no cows to milk and no chores to do after supper. So they had gone. She had blessed them—what else could a mother do?—and had settled down to her farm and her memories.

For some time glowing letters came back from David, and from his wife, whom Mrs. Derrit still thought of as the Ransom girl. She held no spite, did Mrs. Derrit, but if it hadn't been for the Ransom girl—! Then after a while the letters fell off, until they almost stopped. It was two months now since she had heard from David. Not even a letter for Christmas!

Mrs. Derrit arose and went to her window. The moon was now up, flooding the great shoulders and sides of the valley with light, just as it had done that night when they brought Dave home to her, with the little patch of snow still on his cheek. There was snow tonight, too, just a light sifting of it as there had been then. . . . It would be cold and frozen down by the creek. For a while she had avoided the spot, but afterwards it had a fascination for her. Often, on moonlight nights, she had walked that far. She wondered if Dave—her Dave—knew? Perhaps. Who could say that even tonight, this Christmas eve, he was watching, waiting somewhere, wondering if she still remembered? Remember? Aye, for ever and ever!

She drew on a shawl. It could not be so very cold, the night was so bright, the moonlight so soft against the edge of the hills. The door creaked as she opened it; there was frost on the hinges, but her heart was warm; she was going to do her vigil for Dave. Down the winding road she went; the road along which they had brought him home. How warm it was! Or was it cold? Cold and warmth are so much alike. How the road stretched on and on! It never had seemed so far. And the moon—why was the moon growing dark, when it had not yet reached the zenith? And what made it sway like that?

Ah, here was the spot, the very spot. She sat down on the ground. This was where they found him. Her hands touched the snow, but it was not cold. Nothing was cold. All was warm. But the moon had gone out. Why had the moon gone out? . . . Ah, there he was! Dave! She felt his arms about her; she felt his kiss on her lips. There was snow on his cheek! . . .

* * * * * * *

"Don't you know me, mother? Don't you know me?" he was saying, as she opened her eyes. She was in her room. there was no doubt about that. Yes, it was her room; through the open door she could see the cream separator in the kitchen. But who was that woman, that— Why, it was the Ransom girl! And what was she carrying? She was bringing it to her; why was she bringing it to her? And David, kneeling beside her bed?

"We brought you another little David, for Christmas, mother," the Ransom girl was saying, and before Mrs. Derrit knew it a little face was pressed against hers, and suddenly her hard, dry cheeks were wet. "David, David," she cried. "Your Grandpa's David!"

Big David's hand was in hers.

"You found me on the road, David?" she asked, after a while.

"Yes," he answered, gently. "Just—just where—it happened."

Her eyes were big and bright. "I knew he would come," she said. "But I didn't know he would bring you, and wee David, and—and the Ransom girl!"

"Well, here we are," the Ransom girl rejoined. "The city is all right for a while, but when a man has a wife, and a family, it's back to the farm! We were keeping it a secret from you, just for—just for Christmas, you know!"

Feeds Ground Fine and Fast

and Mixed Correctly to Any Formula Using Home Grown Grains

With our new

Miracle Ace Hammer Mill

which we recently installed at Cass City, we are in position to give you an excellent job of grinding of Ear Corn, Snap Corn (corn in the shuck), Oats, Barley, etc., to a degree of fineness that will surprise you.

Within a few days we will have installed a

Modern Burton Feed Mixer

With this new equipment we will be in position to mix your home grown grains, after being ground, with the proper ingredients, which we have in stock, to make you a balanced ration to your liking.
