MICHIGAN SPECIAL TO BE SOLD TODAY BY GOVERNOR

Monday was "blue ribbon day" for members of the Cass City Livestock Club at the Michigan State Fair at Detroit in that members of the club were awarded four grand champions in club classes.

David Knight showed his stylish senior yearling Holstein to the head of his class and another grand champion for the club. This is the sixth consecutive time a Cass City club member has won a Holstein grand champion position at the state fair. Jim Milligan's Angus steer, Quali

Enrollment has not been entirely completed, but the indications are that the number of non-resident pupils in the high school will be slightly larger than last year, while the resident high school attendance may be a trifle less. The non-resident attendance in the grades is larger this year.

Last year's graduating class, the largest in the history of the school, took 57 pupils from the high school ranks. This year's senior class may run a little under 50 members and probably will graduate the second largest number of pupils. The juniors

FALL KICK OFF.

The fall business meeting of the B. Y. P. U. will be held Friday evening, Sept. 6, at which time there will be instituted the "Commission Plan," a new scheme for young people's work. Rev. and Mrs. Curtis attended the national meeting at Detroit to learn of the commission plan. This is conceded as one of the greatest schemes for young people yet found. There will be four commissions, and each member will be a commissioner. Each commission will have its own personal task. A complete program will be outlined for the year, including parties, hikes, camp, and Christian training. Any young people not working in any other organization will be welcomed at this meeting. After business, games will be conducted, and followed by a pot luck luncheon.

Just 407 tickets were sold at the Cass City depot for the business men's excursion to Bay Port on Tuesday. It is estimated that over one thousand people were in attendance. Dryden, Imlay City, Kingston, North Branch, Clifford and Gagetown also had a good representation. Two trains, one with 13 coaches and the other six, were employed to carry the merry crowd. When the train was leaving Cass City, Miss Patience Kitchen of Novesta miraculously escaped serious injuries, if not death. In some manner she fell lengthwise of the track under one of the moving cars. A bystander grabbed her by the clothing and pulled her out before the hind truck of the car reached her.

Beautiful Fisher Bodies With their low, graceful, sweeping lines and smart silhouette, their ample room for passengers and their sparkling color combinations and rich upholsteries—the new Fisher bodies on the Chevrolet Six represent one of Fisher's greatest achievements.

Outstanding Economy The new Chevrolet Six is an unusually economical car to operate. Not only does it deliver better than twenty miles to the gallon of gasoline, but its oil economy is equal to, if not actually greater than, that of its famous four-cylinder predecessor.

Remarkable Dependability In order to appreciate what outstand-ing value the Chevrolet Six repre-sents, it is necessary to remember that it is built to the world's highest standards. In design, in materials and in workmanship-it is every inch. a quality car!

Amazing Low Prices An achievement no less remarkable than the design and quality of the Chevrolet Six is the fact that it is sold at prices so amazingly low Furthermore, Chevrolet delivered prices include the lowest financing and handling charges available.

Handsome and Commodious Home Suitable for Farm or Citv

By W. A. RADFORD Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to practical home building, for the read-ers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these sub-jects Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

In different countries there are different names for much the same type of house. In France the home shown in the accompanying illustration would be called the "chateau," for it has the same lines as country houses there. In the United States this is what is known as a rectangular hip roof house with a pitch to the roof so that there is an insulating air space between it and the second floor ceiling.

This is a very handsome, stable-appearing and commodious home and will be equally attractive on the farm, in the smaller towns, or in the city. To get the best effect, however, this home should be set on a lot where there is plenty of room for allowing trees and decorative garden.

The home is 30 feet long and 24 feet deep and is of frame construction. Without the open porch at one end, the sun room at the other end, and the colonial type pergola porch roof with the colonial columns, it would be a rather plain rectangular home.

The interior is laid out very similar to the New England colonial house. The entrance door is practically in the center of the front and leads into

Moving Into Country The tide of population is turning away from cities because men and go out of town to live, particularly if trouble. they are to raise families, explains an editorial in Liberty. "This is most noticeable, perhaps, in New York. Manhattan has long been losing in resident population. In 1925 the number of people who lived on the island was 340,000 less than in 1920. "New York city is becoming just a workshop. Eight hours a day, five days a week, men transact their affairs there. But they cannot live They are realizing it more and there. more. "What is true of New York city is true of other cities, though in a somewhat less degree," continues the editorial. "People are putting in their working hours where they must, and spending the rest of their time in the country, where there is air and sunlight and quiet, and their children can learn that a tree is not necessarily a stunted shrub with a fence around it."

Why "Royal Fusiliers" The exploits of the "Royal Fusiliers" have been the subject of many a song and story of English history.

Forged Iron Hardware Adds to Period Home

Among all the details which go to achieve atmosphere and individuality in a house, forged iron hardware has always held important place. Indeed, with the continually spreading tendency to build period homes of Elizabethan, Spanish, colonial and other types the call for such hardware has become universal.

Recently one manufacturer has made available beautiful forged iron hardware to fit the spirit of these modern homes. It is fabricated in the finest, authentic traditions of the art of mental craftsmanship.

There seems to have been a strange sympathy in the medieval mind with the properties of iron that led in those days to a very wise use of it in many | of uneven shades plainly marked. from the Tenth to the Seventeenth were produced.

In later times our own forefathers crispness of line which characterize so much of their handicraft, brought to a high degree of excellence the forging of iron hardware, and some of their designs, the Curley lock, the tulip and the heart, so-called, have won a popularity which bids fair to increase as time goes on.

It is these three designs, together with the Etruscan motivated from some excellent examples of iron craft of medieval days found in southern Europe, which are now available to home builders, in absolutely authentic form, by the introduction of this new forged iron hardware.

Birdhouses Need

Protection of Paint Birdhouses, usually placed so that they are peculiarly exposed to all inclemencies of the weather, should be painted very carefully with a good grade of outside house paint, and then, preferably, varnished with a good spar varnish. It is foolish to suppose that, merely because a birdhouse is a small article, it needs no surface protection. All destructive surfaces, exposed to wind and weather, require paint and varnish to preserve them.

Stucco Colors and Odd Textures Here to Stay Texture and color effects through the use of stucco in residence construction apparently are here to stay. And such effects have received the approval of the most noteworthy persons in the building profession, for colors and textures mean an end to the commonplace and the drab in the building of even the smallest homes. They mean that every person has an

SNAKE BITE FATAL TO REPTILE EXPERT

Serum Injections Fail to Halt Deadly Poison.

New York .-- For more than 30 years Charles E. Snyder, former head keeper of mammals and reptiles at the New York zoological garden in Bronx Schmitt near Bad Axe. park, befriended snakes.

He fed them, made pets of some, and pointed to their comparative harmlessness and utility in public lectures.

His interest in reptiles led the veteran keeper on periodic trips to capture more of them. One morning, in the Ramapo mountains, one of them struck for the liberty of its mate, which was almost in Snyder's grasp. The former keeper died, a victim of rattlesnake poison which anti-venom serum failed to halt.

Serum Rushed to Hospital. Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of mammals and reptiles at the Bronx zoo, had rushed serum to him at the Good Samaritan hospital in Suffern, N. Y.

Snyder, who was fifty-seven, died about 24 hours after the two poison fangs had sunk into the back of his today, Sept. 3. left hand. It took him five hours to reach the hospital, a delay which was held responsible for his death, although even after such a lapse of time the failure of the serum to counteract the poison was considered unusual. There was no trepidation in Snyder's mind as he struck into the Ramapo woods, accompanied by Paul Rain is needed to break the long Snyder, a friend and snake enthusidrouth.

ast. They were on Little Tor mountain, 100 vards apart, when Snyder saw a rattler between four and five feet long gliding over a rock ledge near his feet.

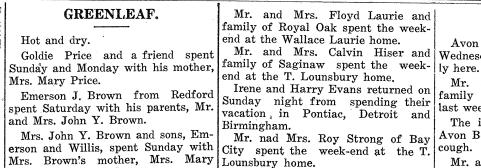

As the snake squirmed into a crevasse Snyder ducked to catch its tail so that he might swing it out with a quick jerk into the open and pin it with a forked stick he was carrying. Sinks Fangs in Hand.

As he stooped, another snake, apparently the mate of the first reptile, lunged from a hiding place in the grass. It sank its fangs into the hand. Snyder shrank back calling to his friend, and the reptiles took to cover. With his companion at his side, Snyder sucked the two wounds, sought to squeeze out the poison and used a handkerchief as a tourniquet about his arm to shut off the circulation. Hospital and serum treatment followed, but to no avail.

"Ten acres is the whole extent of the ranch. Through it all the earthworms may burrow but the plot actually devoted to them comprises but 2,000 square feet. It is a patch of straw, hay, corn fodder and other decomposed materials about a foot in depth, with a pit four feet square in the center, where is sunk a bottomless box in which the breeding processes are carried on. As a protection against poultry, shrews, moles and other creatures of which the worms are natural prey and food, there is a screen cover.

"This nest is kept damp." Sour milk, cheese and bread crumbs, cornmeal, eggs and all sorts of table scraps are thrown into the box. The continuous propagating results are astonishing.

"Tiny worms emerge by millions from the cocoons in which the eggs have been laid. Soon they begin to make their blind ways to the outer edges-blind, because they have no eyes, but are guided by primitive, tight-detecting organs. In due course they are dug up from the mulch and placed where they can be packed for market on short notice.'

WHAT DR. CALDWELL LEARNED IN 47 YEARS PRACTICE

A physician watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the system and is not habit forming. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for anybody's system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when Syrup Pepsia will empty the bowels just

WILDERNESS

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

TUDITH KINCH sat before her door with eves shaded by her hand, looking anxiously down the trail. She was awaiting the first appearance of Zack and Betty, her boy and girl, who had gone to town early that morning. Zack was fourteen and Betty eleven and since the death of Sam, her husband, the three had had hard work to eke a living out of the worn-out mountain farm. But Judith was brave and the children had stood nobly by ner. This year their potato crop had been unusually abundant and owing to the fact that much rain had fallen in the lowlands and her little farm being on the side of a steep hill, which afforded wonderful drainage. Judith was hopeful that her potatoes would bring a high price. Not that she wished others to suffer loss, but usually her potatoes were poor on account of lack of moisture. This morning, bright and early, Zack and Betty, with the help of their mother, had loaded the first load of their precious crop onto the old farm swagon and hitching the mules to the rig had taken them to the town to sell. Judith would have gone too, only she could not bear the jolting of the heavy wagon. Now, at four o'clock in the afternoon, she sat listening for the first rumbling sound which would apprise her of the fact that her children were returning to her.

As Judith sat waiting she unconsciously reviewed her life. First there had been her girlhood spent in an eastern state and then her courtship and marriage to Sam Kinch, who, as a young man promised much and as a husband failed to fulfill that promise. How his roving disposition had finally landed them on top of this high mountain far from neighbors and friends and so poor that there had been little more than a bare living and then. when they had been about to give up and go back East. Sam had been seized with some unaccountable malady from which, after a lingering illness that lasted for several months, he had finally died and left her with debts and two young children. Judith sighed áll. as she thought of all this, not so much for herself as for Zack and Betty. It was too bad that they should not have their chance. They were both bright children and would take readily to education and with the proper training would soon be able to extricate them all from this state of poverty. But where was the money to come from? If all went well the money and credit from the potato crop would barely keep them through the coming winter, which every sign indicated would be a hard one, but just here Judith caught the first rumble of the wagon and, arising, went slowly forward to meet it.

Judith sent a "Hoo-hoo!" down the trail in response to the shrill whistle that always announced Zack's approach, and after a few moments the creaking old wagon came into view. But instead of just Zack and Betty on the high seat there was a third person. a small and slender boyish figure, who sat between her children and seemed to have some difficulty in accommowas an elderly man, brusk in manner but nevertheless showing a great fondness for his nephew. He looked sharply at Albert and then turning to Doctor Britt said: "Why, doctor, Albert looks a different person. It must be this mountain air. What say, Doc?" he said turning to the doctor. "I say it's the mountain air, too."

said Doctor Britt. "It is wonderful. It is clean, pure and invigorating. I have noticed every time I make the trip up here that I feel better for days. I was glad, Mr. Jackson, when you sent Albert to me for I was looking for just the right case to experiment on, and you can see for yourself what it has done already. In a month he will be pretty sound and in three months, if I am not mistaken, he will be a well boy again. I have two other people right now I would be glad to have up here," the doctor said, turning to Judith. "I would send a nurse with them and have them stay a part of the winter up here. Could you manage it, do you suppose?"

"Why, I don't know," stammered Judith, but before she could frame a refusal the thought of what she was owing Doctor Britt, who had been so kind to Sam and who had not worried her about the doctor bill, came to her and she could think of nothing to say except: "Why, doctor, could anyone live up here just the way we are doing?"

"Well," said the doctor, "if you would let me send a carpenter and have a wide porch put on the south side of the house and tack up some awning, I should say they would get along fine. We could set up some cots because, of course, I should want them to sleep and rest out in the open as much as possible. And as for pay, why, Mrs. Kinch, I can assure you at least $40 a week for each patient I send up here. Take time, however, to think it over, for I will be up the last of the week to see Albert again, and then you can give me your answer." And that was how Judith's fortunes changed for the better. Her little house was filled to overflowing and two or three little shacks were built to accommodate the sick people Doctor Britt sent up the mountain for Judith to care for. She had to employ extra help, but she herself always gave her personal attention to every one of her guests. She was housekeeper, mother and comforter to them

Zack and Betty procured wonderful educations and went forth to battle with the world well equipped physically and mentally, but Judith preferred to stay on her high mountain and cause the wilderness to blossom like a rose.

Camel Living Fossil, Says Gobi Explorer

A camel is an impossible sort of creature in every way. Nothing about him is like an ordinary respectable animal. To me, writes Roy Chapman Andrews in the Saturday Evening Post, he seems to be a living fossil. a relic of the Pleistocene. But one must not be too careless about removing his overcoat, otherwise the beast will catch cold and die In spite of his size he is a very delicate animal—or thinks he is. If he has a tiny cut in one of his great flat footpads he will cry and moan like a baby. The Mongol's remedy for such an emergency is simple. The camel is thrown, his legs crossed and he is tied so tightly that he cannot move. Then a piece of leather is sewn over the cut, as one would patch a garment. It looks like a barbarous operation, but is no more painful than shoeing is to a horse. The camel's only food is the sagebrush and thorny Gobi vegetation He would not eat green grass if he had it. dating himself to the jolting wagon. As they drew up in front of where Judith was standing she noted the gleaming pallor of the boyish face that looked eagerly down at her. Why, he was only a boy! Not many years older than Zack.

"Mother !" cried Zack, "we've brought you company."

"I am real glad," answered Judith in her hearty way. "Get right down and come into the house. You must be all jiggled to pieces on that high seat."

The boy got slowly down and Judith was alarmed to see how thin and frail he was as he came to her with outstretched hand.

"I know you are Mrs. Kinch," the boy said. "I am Albert Corday. I have been staying down in the village with Doctor Britt, but he said I must get higher up in these mountains and when he saw your young folks he asked them if they would bring me up here for a few days. He said he would he up soon to see how I was getting along and to tell you that he would make everything all right when h, came."

"Of course it will be all right," said Judith. "Come right this way. Wouldn't you like to lie down and rest a while before supper?" and she led the way to the house without waiting for a reply.

At the supper table Albert seemed to be rested and was able to give an account of himself. He was a student in a near-by college and had studied too hard. A bad cold he had contracted in the early spring had refused to be shaken off and he had been obliged to leave college and seek some place where he could be out of doors the better part of the day. His parents were dead and he was under the guardianship of an old uncle who was so absorbed with his own business affairs what he had scant time to look after his nephew.

"I get very lonely at times," Albert said, "and when Doctor Britt called in your son and asked him to bring me up here-why-why I was awfully glad, you know."

"Well, I am glad you came," Judith said in her motherly way, "and I hope you will make yourself perfectly at home and I am sure Zack will find it mighty nice to have a young fellow stround that he can talk to."

A week later Doctor Britt appeared in company with Albert's uncle, who population use the preparation.
