SPEAKERS COMMEND BOY SCOUT MOVEMENT

Addresses and Discussions on Citizenship Interested P. T. A.
Audience Monday.

Speakers at the Parent Teachers' Association meeting at the high school auditorium on Monday evening gave the Boy Scout movement a hearty endorsement. Probate Judge Hill in his address on "Juvenile Delinquency," said he has not had a Boy Scout to answer to a charge of delinquency during his term of office. Mrs. A. A. Ricker, president of the P. T. A., commended the work of Scoutmaster Curtis in his wonderful work with the boys of the community and suggested that the P. T. A. as an organization should give this movement its moral and financial support.

Speaking on "Christian Citizenship," Mrs. Ricker said that during the last 20 years 20,000 young men between the ages of 18 and 25 years had been admitted to the Indiana Reformatory at Pendleton. More than 85 per cent of them came from broken homes where the father and mother had separated and remarried. Only one per cent of Indiana's population cannot read or write but that one per cent furnishes 37 per cent of the reformatory inmates. Only one college graduate and only 15 high school graduates were in all that 20,000 youth. Not a single Boy Scout has ever been sent to the reformatory. Only four per cent of the 20,000 belonged to a church. The percentage of negroes and foreigners is very low, most of the criminals being everyday Americans, born and reared in this country.

Four splendid ways to discourage crime, said the speaker, are to lessen divorce and to support education, the Boy Scouts and the church.

Mrs. Mary Holcomb read a splendid article on the "American Home and Citizenship Training."

Judge Guy G. Hill spoke on juvenile delinquency and stated the distinction of the dependent, neglected and delinquent child as it relates to the jurisdiction of the probate court. In his experience as probate judge, he has been led to avoid the harshness wherever possible which may be inflicted by statute to those guilty of delinquency, and quite frequently places the juveniles on probation. Very few violate the provision of probation.

Mr. Hill has not found any increase in delinquency during his term of office, but says it is increasing in the larger centers of population. Most juvenile offenders come from homes in which parents do not know what their youngsters are doing and with whom they are associating. These parents are not necessarily bad, but show a laxity in keeping check on the whereabouts of their children. Boys and girls who regularly attended church and Sunday School are very rarely found among the trouble makers. The average age of delinquents is between 13 and 15. Many of these are of low mentality and have made slow progress in school work.

Mr. Hill said there was great need of improvement in Michigan's juvenile laws. State institutions for juvenile delinquents are hampered in their activities by a lack of funds to do their work efficiently.

Musical numbers on the program were violin solos by John Day accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Chas. Day, and selections by the sixth grade girls' glee club. Miss Tarnoski played a violin obligato in the club's numbers.

From the seriousness of citizenship discussions to the ridiculous was but a short step Monday night. Rev. Wm. Curtis, master of the play hour, selected several usually dignified persons as participants in a game of table-top polo. No experience on the part of players made it hard work for them to keep their places on the prancing steeds but did not lessen the fun for the spectators. "Art" Ricker proved himself a deliberate and unexcitable captain who led his team to a 2-1 victory.

Popcorn was served by the refreshment committee.

SUCCESSFUL SINGING IN EUROPEAN OPERA

Mrs. Jane Philip English, who is visiting at the home of her parents at Bad Axe, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Philip, has achieved marked success in opera singing since she left Bad Axe six years ago. She was engaged in concert work in Holland, Italy and France but was required to leave on account of illness. Following a vacation at her home she plans to go to New York where she will re-enter opera work.

Possessing an exceptional voice, Mrs. English was able to appear among splendid artists of the Old World. Preceding her appearance in opera, however, months and years of hard work were required in mastering the foreign languages and training before leading European teachers. While Mrs. English was born in Bad Axe, she left when eight years of age to live with her grandparents in Caro, the England family. There she attended school and later taught school. Her first intensive study for her musical career was in Detroit and her first professional engagement was in St. Paul's cathedral of that city. She next studied in Chicago and then went to Milan, Italy, and studied with Cataldi and Sebastiani of Rome and Madam Febre of Paris.

Her debut was in Opera Rigoletto at Orvieto near Rome. She was later engaged to sing in Rome in Lucia di Lammermoor. She next entered concert work in Holland where she appeared in the principal cities and from Holland went to Paris. Following two musicals in Paris, she became ill. Mrs. English is considering presenting a concert in Bad Axe before she leaves for New York.

The years abroad made Mrs. English one of the most patriotic citizens of America, she states. Europeans think of the United States as a rich industrial nation but have little faith in American love for music and art. The most beautiful things that Mrs. English saw were the Vatican in Rome and the cathedrals of France. "The most inspiring sight I had seen since I left America was New York harbor, the skyscrapers and the Statue of Liberty," she said.—Huron Co. Tribune.

TRADITIONAL RIVALS PLAYED 6-6 TIE FRIDAY

Inability To Tackle Was Glaring
Weakness of Locals in Game with Caro.

Cass City and Caro, traditional rivals of Tuscola county, played a 6-6 tie Friday before one of the largest crowds to ever witness a football game in city park. Caro showed a powerful team led by Rajkovich, the star half, and plunged and ran their way to a touchdown in the first seven minutes of play. The locals held the gold sweatered lads whenever they threatened the goal line the remainder of the half. With one minute to go in the first half, Caro worked the ball in Cass City territory and tried a flat pass that Edgerton intercepted and streaked 75 yards to a touchdown.

Both teams failed on try for points and the score at the half was knotted 6-6.

The second half was a long succession of drives by the Caro team on the Maroon goal line and the locals were lucky to stave off the score. Several times Caro worked the ball within 20 yards of the double stripes only to lose it through fumbles, penalties or on fourth down.

This game may bring about the same situation as last year when the season draws to an end—a championship game between the two rivals. This possibility is very remote, however, as several teams in the League have very strong clubs and one will probably be untied at the end of the season.

Cass City has an open date this week and it is welcomed by Coach Lewis. The squad had several minor injuries in the Caro game and the week's rest is prescribed for some of the injured.

Inability to tackle was the glaring weakness against Caro and the offenders will be drilled long and hard at the tackling pit this week.

Capt. Blades, veteran tackle and bulwark in the line on defense, dislocated his shoulder in the first play of the game and will be lost to the team for at least three weeks. The schedule is resumed next week, playing Brown City in a non-league game.

M. M. CLASS HONORS MR. AND MRS. HOLMES

A very unusual and enjoyable party was given Friday evening by the M. M. class of the Methodist Sunday school in honor of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Holmes. The guests, who were characters from Mother Goose stories, assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Hutchinson and took their seats in the school room. School was presided over by Mother Goose. The pupils included Simple Simon, Jack the Giant Killer, Little Bo-Peep, Jack and Jill, and many other famous personages.

Simple Simon created much amusement trying to catch two gold fish out of a pail with a line and safety pin. Doctor Foster arrived and administered medical attention when needed.

After school was dismissed, the students ate their lunch, which the ladies had brought in the dinner pails.

Mr. and Mrs. Holmes were presented with a beautiful tablecloth as a token of the esteem of the class and all wished them success in their new home.

SHOW MORE INTEREST IN FARMING METHODS

Enrollment in Agricultural Short Courses Increases Rapidly.

While the farm population in Michigan has been decreasing, the interest of farmers in learning new angles of their business has increased, according to class records in the short course office at Michigan State College.

The first short courses, three in number, were given in 1897. Forty-five students enrolled in those courses. Last year 19 short courses were given at Michigan State and 455 students enrolled.

Many of these courses last one week and are designed as a clearing house of new information about a particular subject. Most of the students can spare only a short time from their business and the short courses meet their needs.

The longest of these courses is the two-year general agricultural course of 16 weeks. Fifty-one men took this course last year.

Five courses are given in dairy subjects, five courses in horticultural subjects, and one each in poultry, agricultural engineering, home economics, bee keeping, seed production, farm management, and veterinary medicine.

The 16 week course in general agriculture begins October 28. All others are held in January, February, or March.

PARTRIDGE SEASON OPENS OCTOBER 16

For First Time in Three Years,
Mich. Hunters Have Chance to Hunt Ruffed Grouse.

For the first time in three years, on October 16, Michigan hunters will have a chance to hunt partridge.

The season of five days which opens October 16 and closes with the evening of October 20, applies to the Lower Peninsula only. The birds are still protected in the Upper Peninsula.

The partridge season was closed during 1927 and 1928. During several years, for reasons not well accounted for, the birds had been diminishing in number, not only in Michigan, but through the whole country. About 1925 the birds were at their lowest ebb. The following year there was some improvement, and in 1927 the birds were coming back in many places. A year ago and again this year, there was a marked increase, sufficient, the conservation commission believed, to warrant a short open season in the lower peninsula this fall.

A real but rather weak beginning of recovery is reported from the upper peninsula, but not enough to justify opening the season in that section of the state.

Michigan was not alone in losing its grouse. Every other state in which grouse are known has been experiencing the same thing. Almost every northern state has been carrying on investigations of the grouse scarcity and grouse diseases, but to date no one factor has been proved to be the cause of these periodic decreases of the birds.

In different localities conditions are not necessarily the same at the same time, as shown by the variance between the conditions in the upper and lower peninsulas of Michigan. It is possible that the birds in the upper peninsula in another year or two will again be abundant.

Several of these "tides" of grouse have occurred in the past through the grouse states.

SAGINAW LADIES GUESTS OF W. S. C.

Mrs. Norman Gillies gave a comprehensive and interesting report of the meeting of the Michigan State Federation of Women's Clubs held at Lansing last week at the meeting of the Woman's Study Club Tuesday afternoon.

The local club had as guests Mrs. Alfred Mitchell, president of the East Central District, Mrs. E. T. Armstrong, state chairman of the Department of International Relations, Mrs. Fred Phillips, president of the Saginaw City Federation, and Mrs. Patterson, formerly District Club Extension chairman, and now District Library Extension chairman. All four ladies are from Saginaw and each one gave a short address.

The local club accepted an invitation from the Harbor Beach Woman's club to be their guests on Tuesday, Oct. 29, the Cass City ladies to furnish the program. The response—wit and humor—for last Tuesday's meeting were prepared by Mrs. Kelsey and Mrs. Hooper and produced many laughs. Tea and wafers were served during the reception by the committee, Mesdames M. D. Hartt, Alice Nettleton, J. A. Sandham and Lewis Law.

The next meeting of the club will be "A Day with Music and Musicians" on Oct. 22 at the home of Mrs. E. Pinney to which the Cass City Music Club has been invited. Mrs. James K. Brooker of Bay City will render a musical program.

CARELESS DRIVER CAUSES $1,000 LOSS

The residence of Mrs. Mary Gemmill on West Pine Street was very badly damaged by fire Friday afternoon. The loss on residence and contents is estimated from $1,200 to $1,500 and was fully covered by insurance.

Flames were belching from the house when the fire was first discovered and the fire department was further handicapped on their arrival by a line of new fire hose springing a leak so large that a second line had to be laid before progress could be made in subduing the flames. The hose leak, it is said, was due to the carelessness of an auto driver who ran his car across the hose directly after the line had been stretched. Fire Chief West says that the driver's thoughtlessness was responsible for about $1,000 loss at this fire. A warning is given to avoid a recurrence of this heedlessness.

JUNIORS TO PRESENT PLAY ON OCTOBER 18

The Junior class of the Cass City High School will present "The Youngest," by Phillip Barry, in the High School Auditorium, Friday evening, Oct. 18, at 8:15. This is one of the cleverest comedies from America's outstanding satirical playwright.

Richard Winslow, the youngest, has a desire to write and insists upon his right to live his own life in his own way. His older brothers, Oliver and Mark, insist that he shall give up this writing idea and help them in their pin factory. Nancy Blake, a friend of Martha, Richard's sister, arrives and immediately decides to engineer the family so that Richard shall gain permission to write. The way in which she does this and the unlooked for results furnish a very interesting evening.

A new and unusual setting is being built by the art class under Miss Bigelow's supervision.

INCREASED INTEREST IN VOLLEYBALL HERE

Ninety Men, Young and Older,
Have Names Listed as Players
This Season.

An increased interest in volleyball this fall and winter is evidenced by the larger number of players that have been signed up for this season. The names of 90 men are on the list, an increase of almost 30 over last year.

At the volleyball meeting Tuesday night, players elected the following officers: President, Frederick Pinney; secretary-treasurer, A. C. Atwell. Dues were fixed at $2.00 payable to the treasurer at once.

Several members requested the formation of two leagues—A and B—for this winter's schedule. The A League is for experienced players who play the spiking game. The B League is favored by some of the less experienced men who feel that they could have more fun if they play in a league of their own. Any player can elect to play in either league. That is, if John Jones feels that he would have more fun in a league of less experienced players, he signs up for B League. If he wants to play in a faster league that also is optional. Most new green players are electing the B League along with some of the less agile of the old timers. As more than one round will be played during the year, after the first round, a player may change from one league to the other.

Following is a list of the players who have been signed up for the 1929 season:

F. Pinney, A. Atwell, Geo. McIntyre, F. Hutchinson, R. McNamee, H. Dickinson, F. Reid, S. McArthur, J. West, A. Kinnaird, L. Tuckey, R. N. McCullough, B. Benkelman, D. Stratton, M. Peterson, J. C. CARSONVILLE JOURNAL SOLD TO SANILAC COUNTY NEWS

The Sanilac County News, a new newspaper recently organized and located at Sandusky, has purchased the stock, equipment and subscription list of the Carsonville Journal and will move the same to Sandusky at once.

Mr. Dean, in announcing the sale of his paper last week said:

"The Journal commenced publication May 1st, 1918, and has therefore been in operation eleven years and five months, under the management of the present owner, J. V. Dean.

"The town however, has seen many changes during these eleven years and conditions have reached a point where a newspaper in so small a community has such a small chance of being a paying proposition that the publisher decided to sell."

A community fair is being planned at Vassar to be sponsored by the Vassar Exchange club. The project was discussed at the club's meeting Monday night when "farmers' night" was observed.

THE HOOSIER GIRL EVANGELIST

Last Sunday morning and evening, Miss Imogene Quinn, widely known as "The Hoosier Girl Evangelist," began a two weeks' intensive revival campaign in the Cass City Evangelical church. Large congregations greeted her both in the morning and evening services, and the impression she made on her hearers, made up in the evening especially, of members of several local churches and the general public, was indeed an excellent one. She has a very attractive personality, and is a preacher of rare power.

Miss Quinn has been preaching the gospel since early childhood, and thousands, it is said, have embraced the Christian faith through her ministry. She is an ordained Methodist Episcopal minister, holding her official membership in the southern Illinois conference. She has the happy faculty of bringing something new and refreshing in each nightly message, and at times, brightens her sermon points with irresistible humor, which makes them all the more convincing.

As a song leader and soloist she also stands high in her profession. She will be ably assisted from time to time by the well known musical talent of the Evangelical society.

Beginning last Tuesday morning, the church bell rings daily at 10 a. m., calling upon Christians in the community to pause for a few moments of silent prayer for the success of the revival. At least three other churches, the Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist, are extending fellowship aid by their attendance and good will.

Tuesday morning of this week, the evangelist, accompanied by Rev. and Mrs. Lyman and Mrs. Stanley A. Striffler, motored to Bay City, where Miss Quinn was the principal speaker at the Fellowship Retreat of the ministers of the Bay City district of the Michigan Evangelical Conference. Her subject was "Prayer and Evangelism."

The meetings are to continue nightly, Saturdays excepted, at 7:30, and everybody is cordially invited to attend.

SAVE MONEY

Ownership of a Pontiac Big Six is an experience in economy. True, most people choose Pontiac, not because it is so inexpensive, but because of the many big car advantages which it provides. But it is a fact that with a Pontiac you actually save money. You save—

When you buy . . . When you drive . . . When you trade it in

You save when you buy a Pontiac because it is the lowest-priced car ever produced which offers so many advantages. You save when you drive because, according to a large corporation which employed 996 cars of 33 different makes during 1928, Pontiac costs one cent less per mile to operate than any other low-priced six. You save when you trade it in because the demand for used Pontiacs has always exceeded the available supply. Come in to see and drive the car which offers all these advantages.

Pontiac Big Six, $745 to $895, f. o. b. Pontiac, Mich., plus delivery charges. Bumpers, spring covers and Lovjoy shock absorbers regular equipment at slight extra cost. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

Consider the delivered price as well as the list (f. o. b.) price when comparing automobile values. . . Oakland-Pontiac delivered prices include only authorized charges for freight and delivery and the charge for any additional accessories or financing desired.

HONORING COLUMBUS

In recognizing on October 12 the deed of the marvelous man who discovered our continent 437 years ago, attention should be paid to the enormous change in human affairs created by that event.

But with that exception the discovery of America seems about the most important date on which we can place any definite finger. It might be said that the discovery of printing did more to promote human knowledge.

The discovery of America led the way to a long story of development that revolutionized the history of the world. It opened up a new country where people could settle and escape from the evils and conflicts that held back development in the older continents.

It provided an environment in which democratic ideas could be tried out, and finally worked out a type of government quite new to the world. As this government attained a stability and prosperity, the ideas which were at the base of it have spread, and now have become the prevailing principles on which the majority of the governments of the earth are based.

All these wonderful changes began to come when a man named Columbus had the heroism and the knowledge that enabled him to establish the existence of this continent, and we owe to him much of the prosperity that has developed in the land which he opened for our occupancy.

FOOTBALL ENTHUSIASM.

The American people have their fads and fancies, they go from one thing to the next, one sport or occupation is fashionable this year, and then they take up something else.

And when that same bit of leather is pushed over the line for a touch-down, or kicked through those difficult goalposts, it seems as if the crowd would yell itself hoarse. The supporters of the winners are raised to the top pitch of happiness, while the gloom and depression of the losers takes on the deepest dye.

It is pleasing to observe this enthusiasm occurring over a thing in which the mercenary motive is lacking. We are accused of being a nation of dollar chasers. But that football crowd yelling out on that field indicates that dollars are not the only things we think about.

The winners of that game are no richer than they were the day before. Some of them may have bet money on the issue, but that is a kind of incident, something they did not so much to make money, as to emphasize their confidence in their own judgment of the teams.

The thing that arouses that intense interest is the spectacle of skill, of achievement, of dexterity, of physical courage, of quick thinking. We all admire these qualities. When a team wins at football against worthy opponents we know the winners had those qualities. Probably the losers did too, only not quite so much on that particular day.

SUNNY SQUIBLET.

According to the average newspaper reporter, people no longer go to work. They graciously "accept positions."

Many of the schools are reported crowded, but there is always room at the head of the classes.

President Hoover asks people to become familiar with America's laws, but many people seem to become familiar with them to see how they can best violate them.

"The question," said the farmer, "don't interest me at all. What I want to know when I hear a hen cackle is whether she's laying or lying." They won't be lying if you feed Purina Lay Chow (Egg Mash) and it sells for $3.00 per cwt. Calves raised on Purina Calf Chow are profitable calves. As soon as they will eat grain feed Omolene. Pheasant hunters are wondering why the 1929 pheasant season, October 25 to October 31, opens at noon instead of at daylight as it did last year. It has been changed at the request of sportsmen who say that under the old system most of the pheasants were shot early the first day and had no chance to scatter. It is thought that by opening at noon the first day the birds will have an opportunity to spread through the hunting districts. Start those cows on Cow Chow now and they will pay you back many times the cost of the feed before spring. Feed Cow Chow with your home grown grain. Farm Land Valuation.

We received the information this week of the sale of a 240-acre farm six miles north and one east of Deckerville, that brought $32,000. Detroit parties made the purchase and will come here very soon to make their home.

We have heard much on the values of farm property in Sanilac county, but this information seems to contradict all such "hard time" stories. Keep the appearance of your farm in good shape, even extending greater efforts in making your place attractive, and you will find someone who wants that particular plot of ground and is willing to pay for it.

Burton Feed Mixer

Farmers' wives do not have their meals prepared and sent to the farm by some first-class hotel. They know it is cheaper to take the ingredients and "prepare their own meals."

Farmers may now also "MIX THEIR OWN FEEDS," as we have a 1-ton BURTON FEED MIXER.

Why not give this mixer a trial and have us mix for you some laying mash, dairy feed, calf meal, hog or chicken fateners.

Kindly give this mixer consideration, and drop in at our elevator to see how thoroughly this mixer does its work.

GINGER ELLA

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—In the usually quiet home of Rev. Mr. Tolliver, Methodist minister in the small town of Red Thrush, Iowa, his motherless daughters, Helen, Miriam, and Ellen—"Ginger Ella"—are busy "grooming" their sister Marjory for participation in the "beauty pageant" that evening. With Eddy Jackson, prosperous young farmer, her escort, Marjory leaves for the anticipated triumph.

CHAPTER II—Overwork and nervous strain attendant on the building of a new church to replace the outgrown structure has affected Mr. Tolliver's eyes to the point of threatened blindness, and he is forbidden to use them, though continuing to occupy his pulpit. Ginger has tried in many ways to add to the family's slender income, but she is not discouraged. Marjory, with Eddy Jackson and a friend he introduces as Tib Andrews, returns in triumph, acknowledged the prize beauty, and with fifty dollars in gold, the chief prize. She gives the money to her father as part of the expense necessary for the treatment of his eyes by Chicago specialists.

CHAPTER III—With Miriam, Mr. Tolliver leaves for Chicago. Eddy Jackson brings another friend, Alexander Murdock, who he says has just returned from a tour of the world, to the parsonage. Ginger, whose heart is set on her two sisters making rich marriages (Helen is engaged to a professor of mathematics, Horace Langley, poor in the world's goods), is at first elated, but becomes chilled at the announcement that Murdock is working in a "chain" grocery store. Obviously no "catch," Ginger thinks, and snubs him. Mr. Tolliver returns, his eyes unimproved and the doctors giving him little hope.

Had it not been for the pleasurable excitement attendant upon Helen's wedding, Ginger felt she could not possibly have endured the strain of the days that followed. Her confidence in the outcome of her chain letter home-for-the-blind was absolute. Winters might come, with their consequent coal and coat bills, daughters might go, with their petty love affairs, but Ginger Ella and the chain letter would go on for ever.

Plans for the wedding took precedence over everything else, for Helen, yielding to the argument that for her in this case the way of genuine sacrifice lay in gracious acquiescence to plans already made, proceeded calmly with her arrangements. She knew in her heart that she would have preferred a more apparent display of her unselfishness. She would have enjoyed a real martyrdom. She would have been proud to stand gloriously forth, to her father, her sisters, and Red Thrush, giving up her marriage for a year, for ten years, for ever, if need be. But she was honest enough to realize that the course of true denial followed another channel. Mental rest, the doctors had prescribed, and that could never be had in the sacrifice of his daughter's plans.

The wedding was to be held in the church, with the girls of Helen's Sunday school class, the Ruthens, serving a buffet luncheon in the Sunday school assembly room, the room that was used for church dinners, socials and the like. This luncheon was to take the place of a home reception. The details of the ceremony had been carefully practiced. Horace Langley, with Eddy Jackson as his best man, was to wait in the small room at the left side of the pulpit. The bridesmaids were to gather in the primary room, just inside the main entrance.

Helen decided that when all the invited guests sat silently waiting within the church, she, with her father, would walk quietly across the intervening space from parsonage to church—such a very little way—and while Helen took him on around to the pulpit room on the right of the altar, she would join her attendants in the primary department.

For fully a week, although but ten days had elapsed since the forging of the first link that was to grow into an endless chain of silver dimes, Ginger had dogged the steps of the postman.

"Letter for me? There's not? That's funny."

Friction in Criticism

If you would be loved as a companion, avoid unnecessary criticism upon those with whom you live—Helps.

Definite Cabinet Term

The postmaster general is appointed for a term of four years. The other cabinet members serve at the pleasure of the President.

Took Name From Locality

The woman's garment known as a "basque" derived its style as well as its name from a similar garment worn by the peasants of the Basque country in France and Spain.

Penalty of Age

Each departed friend is a magnet that attracts us to the next world, and the old man lives among graves—fichters.

But on the very day before the wedding, as though to fill her cup to utter overflowing, the postman delivered three letters addressed to E. Tolliver, all in strange handwriting. "Well, that's funny," stammered Ginger, and held out a trembling hand, and with the guilty consciousness of the evildoer, sure the very postman must be suspicious of such a sudden burst of correspondence, she added, "Bunch of ads, I suppose." She was so excited that she fell off the ladder three times before she finally got herself—and the three letters—into the attic studio under the dormer-window.

She was trembling nervously. Her chilly fingers tore uselessly at the stiff paper, she had it open at last, a dime rolled out upon the floor. She seized and kissed it.

"You're my nest egg," she whispered, "you're my lucky piece, you're what some dumb farmer would call pay dirt."

She opened the other letters, three dimes resulting. A sort of stillness came over her. She sat, huddled into a small hunch on the old stool and read the letters—pleasant letters, sympathetic. "It is a joy to help in such good work," "God bless the cause," "Pleasure to add my mite."

"The darlings," said Ginger. "The dear, sweet, generous, Christian souls," Ginger had a significant habit of judging one's Christianity, not by his thoughts, but by his contributions. Three dimes to her represented three devout Christians. Very still she sat on the old stool, very quiet, enveloped in a sweet and grateful gladness. Her mind leaped swiftly on to expensive curative treatments for her father, new rich furniture to replace their threadbare shabbiness, coal and steak and chickens—

She kicked the letters, one after the other, and crumpled them in her hand, to be burned.

"Little white angels," she called tenderly.

Then she cast about for a proper receptacle for this incipient fortune. Three dimes, of themselves, did not require much treasuring, but the highly imaginative eyes of Ellen Tolliver looked already upon the thousands and thousands, in neat little stacks, that were to come. In another part of the attic she ferreted out an old doll's trunk, very dusty, very shabby, but stout, well made, with a strongly hinged top, and best of all, with the old lock still intact and the key dangling from a string. Within it, side by side, she laid the three dimes, and turned the key in the rusty old lock. Then she moved everything else off her desk, and directly in the middle of it she placed the trunk, royally alone. The key she thrust unconcernedly into the table drawer. She was not afraid of thieves.

Her sigh was a great and glad one. "At last fortune smiles upon the parsonage, and all the Tollivers in it," she whispered joyously. "Perhaps not much of a smile so far—just a little giggle, but a nice little giggle. The poor little church mice are going to surprise folks one of these days."

She wished greatly to tell her sisters of this sudden turn in the tide of the family fortune, but that little inner monitor, which Ginger most unscrupulously called a hunch, warned her against this confidence, and she buried herself and her seething emotions as well as she could in plans for the following day.

Long before the high hour of noon on Helen's wedding day, she was daintily arrayed in her blue organdie. Pivoting up and down the hall from room to room, hurrying everybody, criticizing the general appearance of her sisters, offering endless pert suggestions, and always inciting them to greater haste.

It was she who announced the early arrival of Horace Langley. Mopping his brow, she said he was, and clinging like grim death to the arm of Eddy Jackson, who laughed at him. Much later, with the final announcement that the other bridesmaids were on hand, she dispatched the twins, in pastel pink and yellow, to join the springtime bevy of orange, green, mauve and rose in the primary department.

Then she led her father down the stairs to the living room, where he was to wait for Helen.

"All the who's who are there," she proclaimed blithely, "and all the hoodlums are parked."

She ran up to her sister's room, and gave a last tender touch to the white veil. "Oh, Helen," she whispered. Helen took her in her arms and the two girls wept together. After all, Ginger was Helen's baby, had been Helen's from the moment when, returning from the little cemetery on the hill where her mother was laid away in flowers and snow, she ran to the upstairs room of that other old parsonage to answer the pleading wall of the orphaned baby.

"You—you mustn't," said Ginger stoutly, winking away her tears. "You'll spoil your looks. Helen—I wish father could see you. Now, don't cry. I'm going right down."

She smiled bravely, tearfully, at her sister, unfailing refuge of sixteen years, now leaving her, and ran down the stairs.

"Tell him to wait for me just a minute, I am coming at once," Helen called after her.

Ginger went to her father. "Father," she said, "I must go now. Helen said for you to wait here for her just a minute—I think she's going to pray, father, she looks just like praying. Oh, father, she is beautiful. She looks like a picture of a Madonna with all kinds of secret happy thoughts in her heart that nobody else knows anything about. Just wait, darling, she is coming."

And Ginger tripped daintily down the flagstone path like a floating blue cloud in her airy gown.

In the living room Mr. Tolliver, accustomed to patience by weeks of blindness, waited quietly. But Helen, in the room she shared with Ginger, was not praying. Helen was not a sentimental girl, but one of deep fine feeling, much of which centered around the baby sister whom she had so long held as her special charge. Helen was not going away brusquely to happy marriage without a final tender word and gesture for the child who would come home lonely in her absence. She had written Ginger a letter—written it the night before her marriage, when girls may well be excused if their every thought is for themselves and their lovers and their hopes. Helen's were for her youngest sister. It was for that purpose that she denied herself to Horace, and to the girls, shutting herself up for hours behind a locked door, to write to Ginger Ella telling her how much she loved her, how much she had enjoyed the years of caring for her, how much she hoped for her future. Not a flowery letter, no literary work of art, but one that came from Helen's heart.

With this letter, she was going to leave for Ginger a precious thing, the little diamond ring that had been their mother's engagement ring. It had been given to Helen, at her mother's death, had been worn by her in sacred remembrance for sixteen years, but now, with the band of her own betrothal upon her hand, and soon to be enforced by the wedding circlet, she would pass this treasure on to Ginger. She had intended to leave her farewell message on the dressing table of the room they had occupied together, but now, upon sudden impulse, thinking of Ginger, she knew in a flash of revelation what the girl would do upon her return. She would fly straight up the vabbly ladder to her private sanctuary in the attic, where, alone with her loneliness, she would weep out her heart to exhaustion, and fall asleep.

Helen smiled to herself with quivering lips. "The darling," she whispered, and then, mischievously, but with determination, she carefully draped her veil about her shoulders, ran down the corridor, set Ginger's ladder under the trapdoor, and climbed round by round, pushing open the trapdoor above her. In the attic she drew herself up, crossed the dusty beams, and stood beside Ginger's tiny little table desk. Her sympathetic eyes noted the pads of paper, the well-sharpened pencils, the little old doll's trunk, the pigeon-hole of letters.

"Oh, Ginger, my darling," she whispered, and wept again for leaving her.

The bride in stately white and escorted by a fairy-like vision in dainty blue frills, floated along the familiar old path across the velvety lawn. A low murmur of admiration drifted down the walk, and Helen, smiling, lifted a hand to her townsfolk in friendly greeting. Ginger, leaving the bride at the door of the primary room already vacated by the maids in their slow procession, flew around the church and grabbed her father.

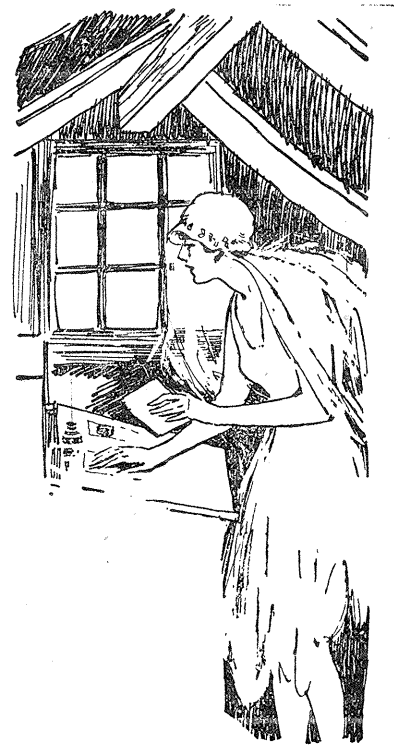

Slowly, solemnly, rose the strains of the wedding march. Eddy Jackson, breathing hard, accompanied the groom to the white chalk marks placed for them before the altar. Down the ribboned aisle tripped small white fairies, sprinkling flowers, after them, the bridesmaids in pastel, rainbow-tinted gowns, after them, the bride, serene, untroubled, sweet-eyed.

Ginger, cool and slight in her crisp blue, with a firm finger on her father's arm, led him slowly down the aisle and placed him squarely upon the chalk mark, before she went to stand by Helen, serving the double role as maid of honor to her sister, and as her father's escort.

"I do," murmured Helen sweetly.

The familiar voice of her father, resonant and low, unbreaking, continued the service. And presently Helen's hand was in that of Horace. A great lump rose in Ginger's small throat. And in the momentary breathless silence that followed Helen leaned forward, put both arms around her father's shoulders, and kissed him tenderly.

Helen was married—it was all over.

"Oh, Ginger, My Darling," She Whispered, and Wept Again for Leaving Her.

Twilight ends when the sun is about 18 degrees below the horizon, consequently its duration varies with the latitude and the season, depending on the declination of the sun.

With laughter and kisses, and many gay words, the crowd surged down to the Sunday school room for the buffet luncheon served by the Ruthens. And when the proper moment came, Helen slipped away from the others, and went into the small room beside the pulpit where she changed quickly from her bridal robes to trim black and white, for traveling. And then, just a very little later, there was a cab at the curb, and the guests from within flocked out to mingle fraternally with those equally interested outside.

Horace took Helen's hand in his, and in a shower of flowers and rice, they ran down the walk. With her foot on the running board of the car, she paused. Her eyes swept the small sweet sea of loved and loving faces. She found the bright eyes of Marjory and Miriam, found her father standing a little away by himself. Then she found Ginger, a small, solemn figure, with lips forced to a grim smile. And Helen tossed her great bouquet, lilacs of the valley, forget-me-nots and tiny rosebuds.

Ginger had not thought of this, it must have been sheer instinct which shot her lithe young arms high over others to catch the precious trophy. Helen smiled at her.

"My Ginger," Her lips merely formed the words, but Ginger, staring, read the syllables distinctly.

The cab rolled away.

A shout of laughter, a chorus of prophecies, surrounded Ginger, with the captured bridal bouquet in her hand. But she heard none of it. She was going home. She answered no smiling thrusts, called no responsive greetings, to the merry throng about her. She just set her small face toward the old brown door, and her obedient little feet carried her leadenly toward it.

Up the stairs, heavily, heavily, and down the hall to the bedroom she had shared with Helen. The room looked strange—big and roomy. She marveled at its bigness, for she and Helen had often complained laughingly of its slight dimensions. Suddenly she realized. One of the little twin beds was gone, and the other, her own, was in the center of the space the two had occupied. Ginger's eyes burned suddenly. But she was glad that other bed was gone. She had not realized how it would have been, lying there, and gazing across at that empty pillow where Helen's brown hair, Helen's gentle face, Helen's friendly eyes, had been before.

"She thought of that," she said aloud.

Conscious of the weight of the flowers, she crossed dully to the desk by the window. There she found a fat blue vase, filled with fresh water, waiting to receive them.

"She did that. She meant all the time that I should have her flowers," Carefully, with fingers that seemed unfamiliar and strange to her, she loosened the white ribbons, folded them carefully, and placed the flowers in the blue bowl.

Then she sat down, on the solitary little twin bed, and stared at them, stared all about the room.

"That's what she was doing all morning," she thought, "fixing this room for me. Putting my things where her things had been, straightening the drawers, and tidying the closet, so everything would be full of me, and wouldn't show so much emptiness of her."

She got up suddenly, and turned down the hall. The ladder was against the wall. She climbed dismally, pulling herself, a great weight, through the trapdoor, and crossed the beams to the dormer window. From force of habit, she drew the small stool up to the table, and reached for her pad. And then she saw a white envelope.

"My Ginger."

She picked up the letter. It was then she saw the velvet box. She opened it curiously—a small diamond, in an old-fashioned setting—her mother's engagement ring that Helen had worn for sixteen years. Ginger held it in her hand a long time, and stared into the dim recesses of the dusty old room with grave, glad, wondering eyes. This was to her a symbol of Helen's trust.

"If I'm not a whole lot better after this, I'm a whole lot worse than I think I am," she decided finally. "I know Helen expects me to keep a motherly eye on father and the twins, and I shall not disappoint her. Oh, how pleased she'll be when she hears about my home for the blind."

There was a certain confidence in her manner as she slipped the small gold band upon her finger. After all, already, she had taken the family affairs in charge. The first links of her chain were firmly forged.

SAME PRESCRIPTION HE WROTE IN 1892

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as today. People lived normal lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe bowel stimulant.

This prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative. It has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds, fevers. At your druggist, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

say that there is still opportunity for prize winning entries before the close of the contest, November 15. Prize winners will be announced at the State Horticultural Show held at the College at that time. First and second prizes of 25 and 10 dollars are offered for both hickory nuts and walnuts, and a special prize of a set of horticultural reference books is offered to the Smith-Hughes high school whose pupils send in the best collection of Michigan nuts. Each entry submitted for prizes must be accompanied with directions for locating the tree which bore the nuts. The College department is attempting to locate especially desirable trees which can be used to develop commercial plantings. Walnut trees come into bearing in from five to ten years depending on the soil and other conditions. Hickories are slower in reaching bearing age but probably will bear profitable crops in from 10 to 15 years. A large acreage which is not adapted to general farming can be used profitably for nut culture in Michigan.

ANT EATS BUILDING AS MERE APPETIZER The old-time, unwelcome guest who was accused of eating his host out of house and home now has his record dimmed by the northern, white ant which will not only eat houses but has sometimes satisfied its appetite by attacking warehouses and public buildings in Michigan, according to the statement of the entomologist at Michigan State College. This insect is too lazy to walk to houses or other buildings for its meals and waits till its unsuspecting host carries cornstalks or wood in which it is concealed to the house or barns. Usually, the presence of the ants in the buildings is not suspected until the winged form begins flying around the basement in late winter or early spring. An inspection of the building will then show where the ants have eaten tunnels in the sills and wood-work. It is necessary to take immediate measures to control this insect when it once has become established in a building. Liberal amounts of kerosene applied in the nests and in places where the ants are working will usually kill them. Several doses of the kerosene will probably be needed to completely root the insects. Circular bulletin number 63 issued by Michigan State College describes this pest and gives more detailed instructions for its control.

There will be judging contests for adults, for boys' and girls' clubs, for children of rural schools and for students in the Smith-Hughes High School projects. Michigan State College co-operating with the State Dept. of Agr. will have exhibits which will cover 120 feet wall space. This will include exhibits of graded potatoes as well as exhibits featuring culture and better seeds. C. M. McCrary, potato specialist, Michigan State College, will judge the show. Hon. H. E. Powell, state commissioner of agriculture, will be one of the banquet speakers. Specialists from Michigan State College will discuss potato storage and the cost of growing potatoes. There will be specialists on hand at all times during the show to answer questions. The show will be financed by contributions from the business men of Mayville, from the State Department of Agriculture and by the various counties, included in the show district.

THE THUMB HATCHERY will Open Branch Hatchery in Cass City It is certainly a privilege as manager of the Thumb Hatchery Inc., to announce that a branch hatchery will be established in Cass City. These hatcheries are community hatcheries, working in co-operation with the local breeders and poultry farmers and every effort will be made to make the poultry industry in this section profitable. Two mammoth incubators of 16,000 capacity each have been ordered and will be installed just as soon as they arrive. All equipment will be ready for the coming hatching season. This community is in need of a well-organized hatchery and it is our desire to bring to the people of Cass City and community, a hatchery that will give them the best. Our policy is QUALITY CHICKS at Reasonable prices and our slogan is "THERE ARE NO BETTER CHICKS IN THE U. S. A." This last statement may seem a broad statement, but I am keeping in close touch with all the best that is being produced in the United States and Canada—so our strains come from the very best. Every year, for the past five years, pens of Rocks and Reds consisting of ten birds, have been sent to the M. S. C. Egg-Laying Contest, with very satisfactory results. This hatchery is being established as a community co-operative hatchery, with the idea that this organization has something to give in the way of SERVICE, as well as to receive. It is our desire to enter into the up-building of the community and do our part in every way possible.

Barred Plymouth Rocks Our Barred Rock pen of 1927 had a 190 egg average for the twelve months. Five of the ten, laid, 195-205-219-224-236 eggs each. In 1928, our Rocks held second place in the Rock division, the ten birds laying 2125 eggs. Six birds out of the ten laid 238-210-260-250-266. These birds are a fair average of the strain of breeding. Last year males were purchased for new mating whose dams' records ranged from 203 to 271 and whose sire had a record of 243 eggs. S. C. RHODE ISLAND REDS The third year on Reds which were in the contest, finished fifth place with a total of below first year. The best bird laid 249 eggs, 1929 eggs from 10 birds and only 111 eggs with several going over the 200 egg mark. In the entire year, the 10 birds never laid an undersized egg.

White Leghorns I am very proud of our White Leghorns. The foundation of our strain is Tancred and English, which means good production and good size. This year, for next year's males, I purchased some of the finest stock obtainable in the United States and these are the males which will be used on our flocks next year. The Thumb Hatchery has 300 of those beautiful males to head our flocks. Our idea is that the Best is none too Good for our Tuscola county farmers! Will make further announcements later regarding other lines of poultry activities and location.
