About thirty Lady Maccabees went to Caro Friday afternoon to attend a school of instruction given by the deputy commander of this district, Mrs. Mary Lockhead of Flint.

A young girl of this city found a package of love letters that had been written to her mother by her father before they were married. The daughter saw she could have sport and read them to her mother, substituting her own name for that of her mother and a fine young man for her father. The mother jumped up and down in her chair, shifting her feet, terribly disgusted and forbade her daughter having anything to do with a young man who would write such sickening nonsensical stuff to a girl. When the young girl handed the letters to her mother to read, the house became so still you could hear the grass grow in the back yard.

OLD FOLKS SAY DR. CALDWELL WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice. He treated constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a combination of senna and other mild herbs, with pepsin. The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs? A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Elderly people find it ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

DO CHRISTMAS SHOPPING AND MAILING EARLY

With Christmas a scant six weeks away, the Postoffice Department is out with its usual admonition to "shop and mail early" to insure delivery before Christmas.

During the holiday time the volume of mail increases approximately 200 per cent. It is a physical impossibility to handle this great mass of mail efficiently and promptly within the last few days before Christmas, so the Department advises mailing of gifts and cards at least a week or 10 days before Christmas, according to distance. Mailings to the Pacific coast should be made even earlier and those to Europe should be made not later than December 5 to insure delivery by Christmas.

All valuable parcel mail should be insured and coin, currency, jewelry or articles of similar value should be sent as sealed first-class registered mail.

Articles easily broken must be crated or securely wrapped and all such articles must be plainly marked "Fragile." All perishable articles must be securely packed and marked "Perishable." Such parcels should be sent special delivery.

Actuary's Duties

An actuary is a computing official of an insurance company, one whose profession it is to calculate insurance risks and premiums, a person skilled in theories and problems involved in making these calculations.

Increased seating capacity for the Huron City Methodist Episcopal church, in which Prof. William Lyon Phelps of Yale university preaches Sunday afternoons during the summer months, is planned. Construction of a wing, 14 feet wide and 20 feet long, on the southeast side of the building, has been started. It will cost about $6,000, it is estimated. It is said the cost will be defrayed by Professor Phelps, Mrs. Phelps, Murray Sales, Frank W. Hubbard, and Edgar A. Guest.

Except for the soft condition of the ground and sheer good fortune, Ferdinand Weidner, prominent young Sebawaing township farmer, might have had his life crushed out under his tractor Wednesday morning. Mr. Weidner was in the act of backing his tractor up to a plow in one of his fields when the tractor dropped into a furrow. The sudden jar caused the seat post to snap off and Weidner was thrown to the ground directly in the path of the moving machine. One of the wheels ran over his left leg and he was severely bruised about his whole body. It is also believed he suffered a rib fracture. Following the accident Mr. Weidner got up and shut off the engine and started to walk to the house. He collapsed near his barn and at the same time was seen by John Stomer, his hired man, who helped him into the house.—Sebawaing Blade.

Two casualties were reported in northern Michigan as the first day of the 1929 deer season drew to a close. The wounded men were Oliver Rounds of Caro, who was struck by a stray bullet while hunting in Alcona county, and Charles Bryne, Greenville, shot twice by an unidentified hunter north of Newberry when he was mistaken for a deer. Neither of the hunters was injured seriously, however.

It's time to CHANGE to winter grades

WINTER is near.

Is your car ready? Three steps are necessary to put your car in shape to meet the heavy demands of cold weather driving.

- 1—Change the lubricant in the differential and transmission, using Polarine Transmission Oil (Winter) or Iso-Vis Lubricant (B).
- 2—Have the chassis thoroughly greased.
- 3—Flush the crankcase with Polarine Flushing Oil and refill with winter grade of either Iso-Vis or Polarine recommended for your car.

These three steps are vital to the good conduct and smooth operation of your car this winter.

Iso-Vis and Polarine meet every winter need. They maintain their viscosity and lubricate thoroughly at any operating temperature. They're highly refined and scientifically correct for all motors.

If you use Polarine—drain the crankcase every 500 miles for maximum efficiency and economy. If you use Iso-Vis, the constant viscosity oil—you can drive a thousand miles or more without changing, for Iso-Vis wears and wears and wears.

CHAPTER VIII

Sunday, ordinarily such a pleasantly hurried day in the parsonage, was no less than a dreary ordeal. Marjory appeared very late for her breakfast. She need not have appeared at all, for she ate nothing. "Headache all gone?" inquired Ginger.

"M'm."

Hiram, instead of walking companionably to church with the girls, excused himself and went on in advance, explaining that he wished to see somebody about something. Marjory dreamed absent-mindedly during the service, while Ginger, on the contrary, listened attentively to every word, reporting confidentially to her sister, later on, that she didn't think so much of the sermon.

In the afternoon, Eddy Jackson came in the car to take them to Pay Dirt and although Hiram tried to be excused from the party there was no evading Eddy's friendly insistence.

But while there was great gaiety at Pay Dirt, the arrival of the car from the parsonage brought a sudden slump in their high spirits. Alexander Murdock was there, and Ginger's wrath, long slumbering, vented itself upon his unoffending head. Why should he spend all of his spare time at Pay Dirt? What had a mere car grocer to do with the conduct of agriculture? And why, if mere friendship for Eddy attracted him thither, did he so openly ignore his friend in his ardent attentiveness to Miriam? And why, for that matter, should the so-sensible Miriam, be suddenly thus gay and shining?

"What's the matter with everybody anyhow?" demanded Eddy crossly. "That's some grouch of a preacher, if you ask me. Margie's clear at the bottom of the dumps, worst thing in the world for her complexion. And even you, Ginger, you're no cheerier than a broken crutch."

"Well, I have a lot of trouble," said Ginger dully.

The one bright moment in the afternoon for Ginger was when Alexander announced that he was leaving the next day for the farther West.

"Walking?" she inquired coldly.

"Oh, no. Business has been quite good. I shall be able to ride quite a little distance before I connect up with another Orange and Black."

"Sort of a can tour."

"Something of the sort, yes."

But if the parsonage group had little to contribute to the day's enjoyment, it was more than compensated by the glad hilarity of the others. Mr. Tolliver laughed like a boy at the bald and ribald jokes of the can grocer, Miss Jenkins and Mrs. Jackson exchanged giggling reminiscences of their own untrammeled youth. Miriam and Alexander were ringleaders in the day's recreation, doing all sorts of absurd young things.

But the sparkle had gone from their merry plans, and it was a relief when Eddy started the motor for the ride back to town.

"Won't you come along, Alex?" invited Ginger pointedly. "We can make more."

"Oh, no, thanks. Miriam promised to take me in herself along about midnight. My doctor prescribed more Pay Dirt for me."

At the end of the driveway, they looked back. Miriam sat on the high gate, Alexander Murdock steadying her with one hand, while he swung the gate beneath her with the other. Their father smiling, waved farewell. "Poor father," mourned Ginger. "What would you call it but preacher's luck, to lose his eyes just when there's the most to see?"

A dull supper at the parsonage, followed by the usual evening service at the church.

Tub Andrews hurried up to them after the service, offering himself as an escort home—a mere formality for those few safe intervening feet.

"I don't think we ought to," objected Marjory. "You see, the minister is staying with us—and I think we ought—I don't think it would look well for us to go off and leave him—"

"Ginger can take him," suggested Tub generously. "She can give him pointers on running a church—Ginger can give pointers on running anything."

"But Ginger is so young," stammered Marjory. "I feel that I am rather the head of the house now, and—"

Hiram Buckworth himself appeared at that moment. "Girls, if you will excuse me," he said gravely, "I will walk over with Mr. Westbury. We are discussing some church business."

"Hurray for Jop," chimed Tub, "that suits me to a T. We've got some church business of our own to talk about."

Hiram hesitated a moment, biting his lip as though he felt annoyance, but nodded at last, and went away, not without reluctance. And Marjory yielded her smiles to Tub Andrews, clinging meanwhile to Ginger to ensure her accompaniment, as they walked slowly homeward. On the familiar old veranda, Tub started at once, cheerfully, in the direction of the hammock.

"You can't stay tonight, Tub," said Marjory, with a smile warm enough to soften her dismissal. "I have to send you right straight home. I have been under the weather for a day or two, and Miss Jenkins didn't want me to go to church at all. She has ordered me to bed."

Tub, complaining loudly, submitted perforce to this ejection, and sauntered away, whistling lugubriously.

Marjory still clung to her sister's hand.

"Ginger, wait a minute. Sh! Don't let him hear you. Let's sit in the hammock a while."

They sat down, huddled together, and waited in silence until the sound of Tub's footsteps, and Tub's whistling, subsided into the darkness. "Ginger, I want to ask you something. Will you just sit here with me, and talk until—Mr. Buckworth comes home? And Ginger, if he comes over, and sits down—he always does, you know—would you mind—would you just as lief— You wouldn't mind, would you—"

"Go to bed, you mean?"

"Well, you see, Ginger, I want to ask him about something."

"I see. I'm to talk my head off until he gets here, and then I'm to go to bed."

Marjory squeezed her arm about her sister's waist.

"You see— Well, you see, Ginger, it is like this. You remember that night when you crept downstairs—how long ago it seems!—and he had his arm around me. Well, Ginger, I didn't care a bit because you saw it. It didn't make any difference to me. I think it embarrassed him, or made him angry, or something, for he hasn't so much as looked at me since."

"I see," said Ginger dully.

"I want to tell him that you—you didn't think a thing of it—a little thing like that. I think maybe he thinks I feel bad about it."

"You don't, do you?"

"No." Marjory's voice sank to a whisper. "Not a bit. I like him."

So the two girls sat, and waited, and presently from the church, they heard the two men, coming slowly, talking as they walked. Marjory clung to Ginger's hand, and held her breath. At the end of the flagstone path they stood for a while before they said good night and parted.

"You talk," whispered Marjory.

Ginger talked. "I think it's such a silly name for a farm," said Ginger. "Just like Eddy Jackson. Who else would do such a dumb thing? Pay Dirt. Everybody knows a farm is nothing but dirt, and if it didn't pay, nobody would farm it. Oh, hello, Mr. Buckworth. Home so soon? It's lovely tonight. Won't you come and talk to us?"

"Not tonight, thanks, I am tired. Pleasant dreams." And he passed inside.

The girls sat very still for a moment. They heard him say good night to Miss Jenkins, and go up the stairs. Marjory's tense arm about Ginger's waist relaxed suddenly. Her quivering breath was more a sob than a sigh. Her shoulders rose convulsively.

"You—can go now. Thanks, Ginger. I'll sit here a minute, and listen to the night."

Ginger went in without a word. She was a stricken soul. She climbed to the studio, and counted her store of dimes. She looked at her complicated page of multiplication and addition. She sat for a long time, figuring, thinking.

Obviously, Marjory and the richness of a wealthy husband were to be denied them as succor. Marjory was forever lost to her plans for the future. All the years of washing dishes for the sake of Marjory's hands had been in vain. All her dreams of a romantic figure breezing mysteriously into their commonplace circle were dissipated into thin air. Ginger was practical enough to admit defeat when she met it, and Marjory was her Waterloo. Marjory, beautiful peach-bloom Marjory would marry a minister, and her future would be that of catering to a Methodist church, and a parsonage minimum of three.

In that hour, Ginger Ella rose to great heights of renunciation. She relinquished all her dreams of fortune, of fame, of social supremacy for her beautiful sister. She would be satisfied to see her merely happy. She smiled. She went down the wobbly ladder without a moment's pause, for her decision was made. She knocked at the door of her father's room, now occupied by Hiram Buckworth.

Silence prevailed within. Ginger knocked again.

"Who is it, please? Just a minute." He opened the door with one hand as he struggled into his coat with the other. Ginger, all uninvited, stepped inside, and closed the door behind her.

"Mr. Buckworth," she began gently. "I was just going to bed," he interrupted rudely.

"You misunderstood what I told you," she persisted patiently. "I didn't say Marjory was engaged—exactly—"

"No. You merely said it was understood."

"But I didn't mean a man. I meant money."

"Money?" He was entirely puzzled.

"Yes. You see, we have always been so very hard up. Father did not go to seminary as you did—he didn't even go to college. He only gets about as much money now after all these years as you will get at the very start. And it takes so much for his eyes, and the furniture is simply falling to pieces, and you can see yourself we haven't any clothes."

"Yes, I know, Ginger," he said without sympathy. "But what has that to do with—her?"

"She is so beautiful. So we naturally decided that she had better marry a millionaire. You must admit she's got the looks for it."

"Ginger, what do you mean? Is Marjory engaged, or isn't she?"

"Not engaged—not exactly. But it was all understood—we talked it over

"Ginger, What Do You Mean? Is Marjory Engaged, or Isn't She?"

and we all agreed—we girls did, that is, father just laughed at us—that Margie should marry money, lots of money, millions—"

"And she's not engaged to that—fat young Andrews—or anybody else—"

"Certainly not. There's no man mixed up in it at all. Just money."

If looks could slay, the career of Ellen Tolliver would have ended at that moment.

"Why, you little devil!" he ejaculated irreverently, and flung her roughly out of his way.

"She's still in the hammock," called Ginger meekly.

Then she went immediately to bed. She wept for a while, softly, for it is natural that youth should abandon its dreams and its expectations of great riches with reluctance. But in the end she smiled, and stiffened her slim little shoulders beneath the white sheets. Very well, then. Plainly the future of the entire household devolved upon her, and her alone.

"Selah," she whispered into the darkness.

Mr. C. F. Redlich, the successful expert says:

The "Perfect Retention Shields" hold the rupture perfectly, no matter what position the body assumes or how heavy a weight you lift. They give instant relief, contract the opening in a remarkably short time and strengthen the weak tissues (the real cause of rupture) so that they frequently recover their previous natural retaining power, needing no further outside support. Stomach trouble, backache and constipation often caused by Rupture promptly disappear.

Truly remarkable and prompt results have been obtained not only with recent and not fully developed ruptures but also with old, long neglected ones.

Ingenious, recently perfected devices are now holding ruptures firmly which heretofore never had been retained.

No elastic belts nor filthy legstraps are used.

I guarantee the durability of my absolutely sweat and moisture proof, sanitary appliances.

75% of ruptured children recover completely through expert mechanical treatment according to statistics.

Do not waste your money on widely advertised mail order contraptions. You cannot fit yourself.
