

DIST. B. B. MEET HERE MAR. 6, 7, 8

Cass City Has Been Selected as School To Entertain 1930 Tournament.

Word has been received that Cass City has been selected as the school to entertain the 1930 district basketball tournament No. 10. This decision was reached at a recent meeting of the Basketball Tournament Committee. The tournament will be held here on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, March 6, 7 and 8 and probably seventeen schools of Tuscola, Huron and Sanilac counties will participate. The tournament here will afford Cass City basketball fans their second opportunity to see a district tournament right here at home. The great amount of interest in basketball in this community and the fact that Cass City is ideally located convinced the tournament committee of the state that this place should be awarded one of the district meets.

Fifteen games in three days was the schedule of Class C and Class D schools in the district tournament held here in 1928. In Class D, that year, were listed Uby, Pt. Hope, Elkton, Sebawing, Kingston, Kinde, Owendale, Gageton, Pigeon and Carsonville. In Class C, were Crosswell, Vassar, Marlette, Sandusky, Bad Axe, Harbor Beach and Cass City. The 1929 district tourney was held at Bad Axe when a similar schedule was prepared. L. D. Randall, superintendent of schools at Cass City, is manager of the district tournament here next March, and will have full charge of the cage festival. Teams competing in the Cass City carnival will have an equal chance to win honors here and then advance to the regional tournaments which are to be staged about a week later. A sufficiently good showing in the regional meet will qualify the teams to compete in the state championship.

SO. NOVESTA FARMERS' CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS

The South Novesta Farmers' Club met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bentley of Deford on Friday, Jan. 17. After a bounteous potluck dinner was served, a business meeting was held and the following officers elected: President, Eldon R. Bruce; vice president, Chas. Kilgore; secretary, Mrs. Chas. Kilgore; treasurer, Mrs. Edna Malcolm; pianist, Mrs. Walter Kelley; chaplain, Rev. Carless.

It was voted to send Walter Kelley, the retiring president, as a delegate to the state convention of Michigan Federation of Farmers' Clubs at Michigan State College to be held Feb. 4 and 5 of Farmers' Week. A committee was appointed to draw up resolutions to be sent to the resolutions committee of the state organizations. A report of the committee will be published later.

It was also decided that the month of June be designated as children's month with program to be given entirely by the children. The major portion of the program of six of the meetings shall be devoted to agricultural topics.

A very fine program was given consisting of readings given by Mrs. Bemis Bentley, Mrs. Rolland Bruce and Mrs. Thos. Colwell. Miss Wilson, evangelist at the Deford M. E. church, compared life to growing plants in a very interesting way. Mrs. A. J. Knapp gave some beneficial pointers.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Retherford on Friday, Feb. 21. This is the annual dinner commemorating the 16th anniversary of the club.

SHABBONA MAN IN VIRGINIA WITH FORD

Hazen A. Kritzman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter D. Kritzman of Shabbona, is in Fredericksburg, Virginia. Three weeks before Christmas, he was one of a party of four selected by Henry Ford to go to Virginia. Mr. Ford paid their way home for the holidays and they returned Jan. 3, 1930.

An article from the Free Lance Star, a Fredericksburg daily, says: "Mr. Ford arrived early in the morning of Jan. 6, breakfasting at the Princess Anna Hotel where his party stay, breakfasting with his employees and leaving almost immediately afterward for the Vancluse mines. He returned to the city again at 2:30 when the party dined at the hotel. Mr. Ford said his sole purpose of the visit to the city was to visit his mining property which he purchased several months ago. This property consists of 200 acres known as the Vancluse mine, one of the leading gold mines in this section. He stated that the old mining machinery at Vancluse would be sent to Dearborn for a place in his Museum of American History. Engineers are at present assembling the antiquated equipment preparatory to shipment to Dearborn where it will be lodged with Mr. Ford's priceless relics.

"Those engaged in the work and who accompanied their wealthy employer on his inspection tour were R. J. Schuman, H. A. Kritzman, Geo. R. Burns and R. J. Hartman, all of Dearborn. Before returning to Washington, where he is stopping, Mr. Ford paused long enough while here to drive through Fredericksburg with his party. Later in the evening, the Ford party traveling in two of the latest model Ford cars, departed with the national capital as their destination. Both cars bore District of Columbia license tags."

FARM GROUPS GATHER FOR ANNUAL MEETING

Most State Associations Choose Farmers Week for Business Sessions.

Thirty-seven farmers' organizations will hold meetings at the Michigan State College at Lansing during Farmers' Week, February 3 to 7.

Many of the groups choose this time to hold annual meetings and to elect officers, others schedule a meeting that week to take advantage of the fact that most of their members are on the campus and it is possible to get a majority opinion on matters of organization policy. The dairy interests of the state are now represented by six breeders' organizations. The Michigan Milk Goat Breeders' Association is the new member in this group and its officers say that they represent a rapidly growing industry.

The only beef breed which has no state association meeting on the campus is the Galloway. The other breeds are represented by organizations which carry on campaigns of promotional and educational work. All of the cattle breeders associations take an active interest in calf club work.

Even the earth has been divided into sections of which the upland soils are one part and the mucks another. Both have individual problems and there are sectional meetings for the men who grow crops on each kind of soil.

Many of the organizations will have a banquet on Monday night or a luncheon during the week.

Three teams which each have been holders of the state record for pulling during the year will meet Thursday evening of Farmers' Week, Feb. 6, to settle the argument of who owns the best horses in the state.

The teams are owned by J. F. Gohr, Lansing; George Abbott, Elwell; and R. F. Langley, Flint. The horses made their records at county fairs held last fall. The Gohr team holds the record now with a pull of 3275 pounds.

The amount of energy expended by the teams in the contest is measured by a device which records the number of pounds which the team can drag for a distance of twenty seven and one-half feet. The pull exerted is the same as lifting an equal weight vertically.

The world's record pull is 3500 pounds and the teams entered in the East Lansing contest will try to beat this as well as their opponents. Ten thousand people watched the pulling contest at one fair and the event has attracted crowds in all sections of the state.

FIRE TURNED CARO FAMILY OUT OF HOME

On Saturday morning, fire turned the family of Nicholas Milner of Caro out into zero weather. The blaze started in a partition on the second floor, where a stovepipe became overheated. The fire department was called out, and neighbors helped remove much of the household goods from the first floor, but little was saved from the second story. Considerable damage was done by water before the building was saved. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

CASS CITY DEFEATED OWENDALE HERE 21-7

Cass City defeated Owendale here Friday night, 21-7 and pushed the season's record into the win column. The game was poorly played and the locals showed a let-down after the hard fought Caro game.

Owendale failed to show any form and after the first three or four minutes, the maroon squad scored regularly. Defensively, the team continued to show well, holding the visiting forwards to a pair of goals from the field. Coach Lewis injected the reserves throughout the ball game and some looked good and others different. "Lou" Pinney stepped into the game late in the first period and garnered three goals for himself in about three minutes' work. Kelly showed well at guard, getting some nice rebounds off the board. Capt. Edgerton, after the complexion of affairs was established, took things easy and let the "kids" of the squad bear the heavy load. The team functioned better as a unit—as a result Ruhl and Pinney were high scorers with six points each from three goals. Edgerton, with five was just behind. Crandell caged one of each for three and Gowen caged the extra for 21. Ross, Owendale center, lead his team with four points.

The big worry this week is semester tests, and should all players come through the grind, work will start in earnest to polish off for the district tourney here in March. The next home game is here Jan. 28 with Bad Axe.

MILLINGTON TO HAVE 2-DAY POULTRY SCHOOL

Co-operating with the Poultry Extension Department of Michigan State College and the people of Millington, the County Agri Agent, D. B. Jewell, has secured for the extension service of the county, the services of the college for a two-day poultry school. This school will be in the community hall of the Baptist church at Millington on Thursday and Friday, January 30 and 31.

E. R. Hancock, poultry specialist from Michigan State College, will be in charge assisted by the county agricultural agent. The programs will include the feeding, housing and diseases of poultry, the building up of the farm flock, the brooding of chicks; in fact, it will cover all the practical problems confronting the poultry keeper of today. This will give people in the vicinity of Millington a real opportunity to get first-hand information regarding poultry. The forenoon sessions will begin at 10:00 o'clock, the afternoon sessions 1:30. Poultrymen should plan to attend both sessions both days as there will be discussions on the different topics at each session. The poultrymen are especially requested to come prepared to discuss their individual problems, and the greater the number of problems that are brought up, the more successful will be the meeting. Everyone is invited to attend.

LAST MEETING OF DAIRY SCHOOL JAN. 29

The third and last meeting of the dairy school will be held at Vassar town hall Wednesday, January 29. A. C. Baltzer, dairy specialist, Michigan State College, who has had charge of the previous meetings, will again be present. The meeting will begin promptly at 1:15. The problems that will be discussed are the problems of better sires, calf feeding and contagious abortion. Discussion of the last subject mentioned will be of especial interest to the dairymen as it has been one of the biggest problems they have had to contend with in Tuscola county. The previous meetings have been well attended and everyone has felt that they were well worth their time. It is especially requested that people try to be on hand promptly at 1:15 as there will be no forenoon session.

The questions to be asked in their order are:

FARMERS URGED TO USE BUTTER

U. S. Committee Advises Consumption of More Dairy Products on Farm.

A warning against overproduction of dairy products and an injunction to farmers to use their own butter and other dairy products in their homes are contained in resolutions adopted by the Dairy Advisory Committee and approved by the Federal Farm Board.

These resolutions and another cautioning dairy farmers to beware of promotional schemes for construction of physical facilities were submitted to the board by the committee following meetings held in Washington, January 7 and 8 on call of the Board.

The committee in the first of its resolutions asserted that there is a temporary overproduction of butter and other dairy products in the United States. It advised farmers generally to consider carefully, production methods from an economical and profitable standpoint and to this end recommended the sale for slaughter of all low-producing and unprofitable cows from the herd.

In the resolution urging farmers to use their own dairy products, the fact was stressed that the farmers of the country themselves are partly responsible for the price of butter being below the cost of production; because of their failure to use their own butter and dairy products in their homes, and that they could materially improve market conditions by using more butter and dairy products.

The warning against promoters of schemes to construct facilities for handling dairy products was prompted by experience of past years in which producers of farm products have much too often been victimized by schemes to construct and equip packing plants, creameries and various kinds of factories for processing their products under conditions which did not reflect sound business judgment. It was also prompted by the danger that unscrupulous persons may seek to take advantage of the present sweeping co-operative marketing movement to further similar schemes.

For these reasons farmers are cautioned to look carefully into all promotion plans of this nature, which are either started or backed by those whose chief interest is to make a profit out of the scheme. Co-operative organizations, farmer and local commercial and financial interests are also advised not to enter upon these facility building programs until survey has been made by advisors from state governmental agencies and especially not until the division of co-operative marketing, now with the Federal Farm Board, has been consulted and its recommendations carefully considered.

MARK BIRTHDAY OF NATIONAL PROHIBITION

A large audience attended the union service of local churches held at the Presbyterian church Sunday evening in remembrance of the tenth anniversary of national constitutional prohibition.

After the opening service in charge of Rev. George Hill, Rev. Allured gave thoughts from the addresses of prominent speakers at the young people's rally which was held in Detroit Friday evening at which hundreds of young people from Detroit as well as large delegations from Kentucky, Nebraska and Iowa were present. Mr. Allured referred to the following comments of speakers at Detroit.

Dr. Boynton of Woodlawn Baptist church, Chicago, spoke on "By-products of Prohibition." The eighteenth amendment has already accomplished its main purpose which is the removal of legal sanction of the government from the manufacture and sale of strong drink. He said that the Chicago Tribune had gone dry; it had not brought out one fresh bit of evidence for the wet cause in two years. Never was there such a consumption of milk. Prohibition has America pretty well "cowed." The drunkard's wife at the washboard has disappeared and now we have in her place the wet wash.

Congressman Upshaw of Alabama, quoted Lindberg as saying, "Of all the gifts I have received since the Atlantic flight, there is not a single hip pocket flask or a cocktail shaker." Dr. J. M. Doran, U. S. prohibition commissioner took up the diversion of industrial alcohol under the permit system. Pleading for a better observance of prohibition, Mr. Doran said, "It is preposterous for a big business man, who knows the benefits he reaps through the prosperity brought by prohibition, to assume that the law does not apply to him personally." As to enforcement: "I will not agree with statements that the law is not Turn to page 8.

Giving In To Children Costs in the End.

Dear Girls—
It is so much easier to give in to our children when they are small that some of us take this easier way for the sake of peace. And when we become aware of our mistake we find that our problem has become too complex to be corrected.
"He is so small, now," we say, "I am sure that he will outgrow these tantrums. Rather than have all of this confusion give him what he wants." The woman who says this is usually too lazy to teach her child obedience. He travels his self-willed way and becomes disliked by other children and adults, alike.
A spoiled child is never popular. He is accustomed to having the center of the stage and the pick of the playthings and when he butts up against the world he has a very disagreeable time of it. Even a mother who is only thinking of her own child's pleasure is preparing the way for his unhappiness by allowing him to be selfish.
A child who has ruled the house since babyhood has not had the character training that is every child's right. Unless he is a very unusual little fellow his moral fibres will become weakened and he will be more liable to temptation than his brother who has learned that the liberty of the many must prevail over that of the individual.
It is very natural for the child who has not been denied anything to grow up feeling that he is entitled to everything he wants. When mother and father can no longer provide what he desires he takes it, whether in a fair or foul manner. He wants it and that is sufficient reason thereof.
He doesn't accept advice from experienced minds. Why should he now when he has never done so before?
I know a good woman who had three nice children. They were not particularly bad children but they did do as they pleased. I remember thinking, as a child, how nice it would be if my mother would let me stay home from school as Sally did. Whenever the lessons were hard Sally was indispensed.

The mother made gallons of scuppernon wine each year and the little boys were free to have it as they wished. They like it, she said, so why shouldn't they have it. These people lived on a large farm and the father was really a very fine man but it was impossible for him to discipline the children with his wife unholding their every act.
The two boys have grown up to be absolutely good for nothing. They drink to excess and do not provide for their families. The girl is the mother of an illegitimate child and actually hasn't the ambition to work for the poor little fellow's sake.
The point about this family that I want you to get is that they were ordinarily good children who only needed the proper rearing to make them useful citizens but—they were spoiled and "given their way" by a doting, selfish mother.
For your child's own good, teach him to obey and to be considerate of others.
Cordially yours,
LOUISA.

by Arthur Brisbane
Crime's Loud Voice
Earth's Ozone Blanket
Wise Ben Franklin
The Postmaster's Fleet

Crimes speak louder than words, and were loud in this fair country just now.

A man arrested in Chicago, accused of participating in the "St. Valentine's day massacre," was delighted to find that "only policemen" were after him.

Said he: "I am glad to see you; I thought some guys were going to take me for a ride sure."

More interesting is the fact that the well-known gambler, Rothstein, whose murder puzzled New York's police and baffled the district attorney, was probably killed by a man who will never be convicted, for the reason that he himself has since been murdered by Rothstein's friends.
Even our able corporations might learn something about efficient organization from our able criminals.

Scientists of Smithsonian institution hope to learn about magnetic disturbances and weather phenomena generally, by studying the earth's "ozone blanket."

That "blanket" is a thin layer of superior atmosphere, thirty miles up. By measuring the thickness and contents of the earth's ozone blanket, it may be possible to tell what is happening on the sun. 93,000,000 miles away.

It might be possible also later to bring down some of that ozone, with its wonderful qualities for the improvement of the lungs and blood.

Future advertisements may read: "Ozone fresh from the ozone blanket every day."

Going up thirty miles from the earth's surface seems a great achievement.

But a microbe living on the face of an ordinary apple would do as much if he rose from the surface of his apple as much as one-hundredth part of an inch.

Thirty miles is much less than one two-hundredth part of the earth's diameter.

Here is good advice for youth or old age:

"Dost thou love life? Then do not squander time, for that is the stuff life is made of."

More good advice is this: "He that goes a-borrowing, goes a-sorrowing."

And for a nation in which ninety old men out of a hundred die worth less than $100, this is valuable:

"A man may, if he knows not how to save as he gets, keep his nose to the grindstone."

Those wise things were said by Benjamin Franklin, born 224 years ago. There is material for a thousand good sermons in Franklin's common sense sayings.

Mr. Brown, postmaster general, suggests a $76,000,000 program to build a fleet of North Atlantic super-ships for American passengers and mail.

The postmaster demands "a service which could compete with any foreign flag service on the North Atlantic."

Americans will congratulate Postmaster Brown and President Hoover on that proposition, and hope that they will not only compete with but eclipse every foreign service on the North Atlantic and everywhere else.

Why should a country with the best engineers, from the President down, and with more money than anybody else, ever play second fiddle on the ocean or in the air?

The only negro student at West Point is dismissed "honorably" for deficiency in mathematics.

Sixty-three white men failed in examinations with him and were also dismissed.

Prejudice had nothing to do with it, although Alonzo Souleigh Parham, the negro cadet dismissed, is the fourteenth to enter the academy and the eleventh to be dismissed at the end of six months.

Another cut in the cost of travel by air. The Transcontinental Air Transports, on its "air-rail-water" trip "around the Americas," cuts $100 off the price of a 16-day tour.
Air transportation is settling down to a business basis.

William H. Mullins, son of the late James Mullins, and, like his father, among the most highly respected men in Ohio, gives to Salem a home for nurses. This gift, in memory of his mother, sets an excellent example to others that can afford to be generous.

Young Americans, wondering "if there is still a chance," might study Mr. Mullins' start in business on his own account. When very young he saw a locomotive that had been in a smashup on the Fort Wayne road that he bought for its value as "scrap," set himself and two or three mechanics to work, restored it and sold it for enough to start what became a big successful business.
There are chances for those that have energy.

The Crippled Lady of Peribonka
By James Oliver Curwood
WNU Service (©, 1929, Doubleday Doran & Co., Inc.)

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Introducing some of the people of the pretty little French-Canadian village of Peribonka, particularly the Crippled Lady, idol of the simple inhabitants, and heroine of an epic destined to live long in the village annals.

CHAPTER II.—How the romance of Molly Brant, sister of the great Indian chief, Joseph Brant, and Sir William Johnson, in pre-Revolutionary days, comes down to today with the birth of a son, Paul, to Molly Kirke. Wife of a powerful New York financier, and her dear when Paul is thirteen years old. Molly Kirke was a descendant of Molly Brant, and her boy has many of the Indian characteristics. At thirty-two Paul marries Claire Durand, daughter of his father's business partner. He is in charge of an immense engineering work on the Mississippi river, near Peribonka, which his millionaire father has undertaken, but his Indian blood deplores the destruction of the wilderness, and his thoughts are more of Caria Haldan—not then the Crippled Lady—than of his work.

CHAPTER III.—Paul's wife is in Europe, she having no inclination to live in "those horrible woods." He comes to see in Caria, daughter of a central European immigrant, with her devotion to her invalid mother and her work of educating the village children, his ideal of womanhood.

CHAPTER IV.—Paul writes to his wife, urging her to join him, though Caria is the inspiration of the letter. Later that evening, passing the Haldan home, he hears Caria crying. He enters the cottage. Mrs. Haldan, long a hopeless invalid, in Paul's efforts to comfort Caria, he feels, brings them closer together.

CHAPTER V.—Claire announces her intention of joining Paul on the Mississippi in a short time. She also writes to Caria, a letter of kindly sympathy, on the death of her mother.

CHAPTER VI.—Paul goes to Quebec to meet Claire, and brings her to his temporary home. Though she is apparently glad to be with him, and evinces warm friendship for Caria and Paul's other friends, she feels she is only there because she feels it her duty. She is not really happy. He becomes aware of a gulf between him and his wife.

CHAPTER VII.—Paul, Claire, Caria, and two friends make a luncheon party to visit the "Big Gorge" of the Mississippi, an appallingly swift current which disappears in a mountain side. Current below is that the rafting dropped into it is never seen again. In sport they cast into the stream pieces of wood, and other objects, watching them disappear. Finally they carry a large log to the edge of the rushing water. As they toss it over it up-ends, striking Paul and throwing him into the stream. The two women with whom Paul's life is entwined see him go to what they are sure is certain death. One asks the other if she is going with him. Receiving no answer, she announces, "Then—I am!" and springs into the water.

CHAPTER VIII.—Paul sees the action, and believes the woman is Claire. Clinging to a rock, which temporarily checks his rush to death, he recognizes Caria as the woman he has seen. He clutches her, but the two are carried onward. Then, a miracle, Paul's feet touch solid earth. He drags himself with the girl, into a subterranean cave.

CHAPTER IX

After a time they were standing in the blackness.

More distinctly the hollow, rumbling sound about them began to impinge itself upon their ears as Paul supported Caria against his breast. They listened, as if for a voice, his lips pressing against her hair, where they had so long wanted to rest. What they heard was unlike anything out in the world of sun and sky. The roaring and walling were gone, and in their place was a phantom-like cadence that moved and stirred about them, but which seemed to come mostly from a vast dome over their heads. It was like something trying to escape, throbbing until it seemed to be beating with little clubs at the drums of their ears when it was nearest, then leaving them to intone and hum like a huge tuning fork through the shut-in sea of gloom. There was no break in the sonorous sameness of it. It was eternity of sound without change. In a little while it could drive a living thing mad.

"I am not afraid," Caria said. "Are you?"

Her voice was no different than if the sun had been shining, and there was something in it for him which had never been there before. A kind of exultation came with it, a gladness which trembled in the darkness, and which sent shame and triumph sweeping over him in a submerging emotion.

"Afraid? Good G—d, no!"

She drew herself out of his arms and stood beside him, with her hand in his. Their voices had broken down a tenseness about them, and life drew closer, more sure. He wanted to see her, and fumbled in his sodden pocket for his metal box of matches.

"I'm going to strike a light, Caria. I want to look at you!"

A flare of yellow flame made a hole in the blackness. Until it died out their eyes devoured each other. Caria was like an angel. Love, transforming death into a happy incident, was an uncovered glory in her eyes at last, clearly revealed for him to see.

He knew that only the positiveness of their fate could make her look at him like this, with Claire living and waiting in another world outside Claire seemed infinitely removed from him, a century away, a glow of memory—like star-just, yet he thought of her as the match went out. His wife would go on living. He and Caria were about to die. He had seen an understanding and sureness in the shining depths of Caria's eyes when the tiny flame had illumined their faces. She had let him know, without words, that earth bonds were stricken from her, because there was no longer an earth for either of them. For a few hours they were to be in a world of their own. Then—their couch of everlasting sleep—together. He felt a spiritual reaction from the oppression of horror and fear which had come upon him. To feel sure that Caria knew, and that she had given herself to him because of her knowledge—that she was not afraid, but was happy in the freedom which an approaching termination of life made possible for them, filled him with an emotion which took from their brief future its stark and ugly grimness and gave to it an almost joyous aspect.

As if she had been a partner in the few seconds of his thoughts, Caria spoke softly, giving him her hand again in the night which shut them in.

"I want to hear you say it, Paul! I have dreamed, and even prayed in my wickedness, and have fancied your voice telling me the story. For that I have many times asked God to forgive me. But now it is right and just. I want to hear you say—you love me."

"I do," said Paul. "I know—now—that I have loved you from the beginning of time, before I came to the Mississippi, before I was born in this life—a thousand or a million years ago. Sometime, it may have been ages ago, I know that you belonged to me."

"I have always belonged to you," said Caria. "Yours is the love I thought was hopelessly gone from me—up there. But to die with you is my right. Can there be such a thing as doubt for us now?"

"I am sure there cannot," he said. "You would like to live?"

"Without you, no."

"And there is no chance—no hope of saving ourselves?"

"I can conceive of none. No force could contend with the maelstroms in the throat of the chasm. At the other end all physical matter is ground to pulp as the water comes out through the gorge. We are caught between the two."

He calmly and frankly spoke the truth to her. She made no reply in words, but he could feel her response creeping through her finger tips to him, could feel the tremble and thrill of it in her body. He had not frightened her, but had dispelled from her the beginning of a fear. She did not want to live. The truth seized upon and helped him with a kind of shock. Yet it was a simple thing, one he should have known without intuition or discovery. For Caria was—not only a woman, but a soul. Back there, in Claire's world, she would be lost to him—no matter what he might do in the way other men had solved such problems. Only here, at a beginning and an end all their own, could she belong to him.

Again she was in his heart, listening to his thoughts.

"It is strange, but I want to sing in this darkness," she said. "I did not know that blindness could be so beautiful!"

"Nor I!" he answered.

Dame Fashion Smiles

By Grace Jewett Austin

There is a little line somewhere in one of Vachel Lindsay's poems where he tells of nets to snare the moon-beams. And every body knows how valuable the net is for catching fish...

There are various kinds and meshes of net in use. Some are as coarse as a fisherman's net, but not on that account necessarily inexpensive.

The new gown called the "Chanel 5" had its birth in Paris, but is growing popular in America and may be recognized when you see a dress with five to seven bands of shirring going around the gown, from a circle beneath the arms, to the last shirred band at the hipline.

Dame Fashion, a devoted reader of advertisements issued from the Atlantic coast region, across the marvelous central west, and on to the lively Pacific, often gets a chance for a smile out of some new styles put forward with the utmost solemnity.

In recent years the word corset has not been so much in the public view, and a whole generation, in its desire to be pliable, has not worried about them. Now Miss Corset is quite canny, and in certain places she allows herself to be recommended as "body gloves."

The other little smile item concerned cameras combined with vanity cases. Dame Fashion studied quite a bit on the psychology of that. Is the case to be loaned to the one about to be "shot," to aid in beautifying for the picture? Or, on the other hand, is the tool of taking pictures so strenuous that the taker herself will need a first aid to the complexion?

Fur of many a kind is happy this winter in joining mergers. Do not hesitate to put a pretty bit of it on a hat or on a gown, if the effect is pleasing.

Russian Tapestry Used as Model for Pajamas

Ancient Russian tapestry served as a model for this interesting pajama suit. The black and pink designs were hand-painted on the flared coat and ample trousers.

A sweet Paris frock of black taffeta, figured in minute pink, yellow and cream flowers has a little chiffon vestee of pink that attaches at the back of the neck and hangs over the front like a many-pointed bit.

MARK BIRTHDAY OF NATIONAL PROHIBITION

Concluded from first page. reasonably well enforced. It is enforced. It is preposterous to set up a standard of 100 per cent for prohibition enforcement when no one will apply that standard to another criminal law.

As to the bootleggers: "We are driving them out into no man's land where everything is against them and where we can catch them." As to agitation for the repeal of prohibition laws: "If the eighteenth amendment were wiped out tomorrow and the federal agencies enforcing it were taken away from the wet centers which rail against the law, those centers would have to start immediately to regulate the liquor traffic. It is only because the federal government maintains order in the wet centers that they do not appreciate the abyss over which they hang. Our country never will go back to the ox-cart and the rule of the criminal. We will never see the eighteenth amendment repealed."

While Mr. Doran was addressing the convention in Detroit Mrs. Doran was campaigning in the South for fresh fruit cocktails.

Dr. Ella A. Boole, national president of the W. C. T. U., called attention to the fact that the first organized attempt of the work of closing every saloon in America was begun at the second national convention of the W. C. T. U. in 1875. This goal was reached in 45 years. Mrs. Boole said that in the last three years over 1,000 essays on prohibition have been written by public school pupils.

Dr. Frank Kinkdon of Orange, New Jersey, a former pastor of the Central Methodist church of Lansing, spoke of the Smart Alex with his hip flask. He is not showing how smart he is but only how little connection exists between his brain and his physical welfare. If the young people will only keep their heads and think it through, there will be no fear for future America.

The steps during the last century toward national prohibition are: 1—Regulation. 2—Taxation. 3—Restrictions on hard liquor. 4—License system. 5—Government control over dispensary system. 6—Local option for towns. 7—County option. 8—State option. 9—National prohibition.

The wets have always been at least one step behind the dries but have to date been converted to 89% of the dry program.

Rev. Allured, in closing, spoke of the organizations opposed to prohibition now working for a program similar to Canada's government control system. Canada's system is not government control, it is only government sale which is resulting in more drunkenness, more accidents and more crime.

According to an announcement by the Huron County Road Commission a concrete pavement through the village of Bay Port is practically assured for this year. State Highway Department plans call for approximately two and one-half miles of pavement through Bay Port and to run northeast as part of the scenic highway. There will be a grade separation where the pavement will intersect with the railroad under construction by the Wallace Stone Company from their quarries east of Bay Port to the bay. Bay Port is the only town in Huron county that is now without a pavement through its main street.
