JUNIORS ENTERTAINED & TWP. TREASURERS AT COSTUME PARTY

On Saturday evening, February 15, an all high school costume party was sponsored by the junior class. The Durmon from township treasurers as eleventh district which includes the fore part of the evening games were enjoyed. At nine-thirty the grand march was led by Audree Bliss and Alex Ross, at which time the costumes were judged, the judges being Mrs. S. B. Young, Mrs. A. A. Ricker, and Ivan Niergarth.

Florence Schenck in her Alice Blue gown, was awarded the prize for the prettiest costume, while Loma Reagh and John Morris, as pirates, were given prizes for being the most attractive couple. The prize for the most original costume went to Richard Van Winkle, who aptly portrayed a dignified Southern clergyman. Delvin Striffler received the prize for the funniest costume, it being impossible to describe.

Several of the guests hailed from Tompkins Corners and the Far West, while many of them even came from foreign lands. There were also sever-Satanic Majesty, the Court Jester, and the Baby Dolls. Many flappers of by-gone days mingled with the

After the grand march, refreshments were served. Following this, dancing was enjoyed by many. Those who did not care to dance, played games on the stage, while the ouija board foretold the futures of all who

to Basketball Fans at District Tourney Here.

An announcement of interest to all towns having their High School basket ball team entered in the District No. 27 tournament at Cass City Mar. 5-6-7 was made by the tourney manager this week. In the past, the large crowds attending the evening games have completely filled the available space so early, that unless one appeared on the scene of conflict soon after the evening meal, good seats were not available.

In order to take care of this situation and insure everyone, within reasonable limitations, of a good comfortable seat, the entertaining school has increased their seating capacity to 1000 by the purchase of a large block of Universal bleachers that will extend all along one side of the playing court four rows high.

This makes available 850 seats on the sides of the playing court and evnight, Feb. 13, failed to attract many ery seat commands a full view of the voters. With close-fitting sleeves the armseye seam should curve to fit the underarm as closely as is comfortable and must be on the highest point of the shoulder. Stout figures require a closerfitting armseye and one that is higher under the arm than do the more slender types.

The shoulder may be wider for a shirt sleeve, extending slightly beyond the tip of the shoulder. The sleeve does not fit so closely as other types of set-in sleeves. The armhole should be fitted rather loosely for the figure with very round shoulders.

If the armseye is altered the sleeve will need to be altered also in order to keep the same relation between the edge of the sleeve and the armseye. Before altering the armseye in any way make sure the shoulder seam is in its correct position, which is a straight line from the highest point at the neck to one-half inch of the

The armseye may be too small if either the shoulder or underarm seams have been taken in too much or the The seams may need letting out, or the edge of the armhole may need to be carefully snipped until the armseye is comfortable and in the right position. The same should be done if the armhole is not comfortable under the arm.

Care must be taken, however, not to make the armseye too low or too wide too large, the defect can in many cases be remedied by taking wider shoulder and underarm seams, or it may be necessary to alter only one or the other. Bulges or wrinkles, however, require special adjustment. Farmers' Bulletin 1530-F, Fitting Dresses and Blouses, which is free, tells how to make these and other special alterations to insure a good fit.

Black-Eyed Peas Cooked With Rice and Salt Pork

Quaint old names have come down to us with foods that were known in colonial days. Black-eyed peas have been a staple in many places for scores of years, and may be combined with rice and salt pork for a winter dish that every one will like. The dish is known as "Hopping John." The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture gives the recipe.

1 cup dried black- 4 large onion, chopped eyed peas ½ cup rice Boiling water 11/2 tsps. salt 1 cup diced salt Pepper

Wash the peas well and cook them in a covered pan in 3 or more cups of water with 1/2 teaspoonful salt until the peas are tender but not broken. Wash the rice and cook for about 20 minutes in 2 quarts of boiling water to which 1 teaspoonful salt has been added. As soon as the grains of rice are soft to the center, drain and wash cold water through it to wash off the surplus starch and keep the grains whole and separate Brown the diced salt pork until crisp, then remove it from the skillet and cook the onion in the fat for 2 or 3 minutes. Add the rice, peas, fried salt pork, and seasonings and stir until hot and well mixed. Serve with horseradish or chili

Apricots and Raisins

Help Vary Fruit Diet

The new crop of dried fruit is now on the market and at its best. Dates, prunes, figs, apricots, and raisins all help to vary the fruit diet, as the supply of available fruits diminishes. Several of these are rich in iron and other valuable minerals—particularly prunes and raisins-and so may be wisely introduced into the menu as often as possible. Try this combination from the bureau of home economics:

½ lb. apricots ½ lb. prunes 1 cup sugar 4 cups water

Wash the prunes and apricots thoroughly and put them in the water to soak overnight. Cook the fruit together for ten minutes, add the sugar, and simmer until the juice is fairly rich. Serve hot or cold.

Vegetable Custard Is New Dish for Luncheon

As the winter vegetables appear in Famous Prescription Gives Alcreasingly often in the menus, the homemaker is glad to know a few new ways of preparing them. This fineflavored vegetable custard is hearty enough for a lunch dish, with bread of the dinner vegetables. The recipe is from the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of

Lesson for February 23

THE TWELVE SENT FORTH

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 9:35-11:1.
GOLDEN TEXT—The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few.
Pray ye therefore, the Lord of the harvest that He send forth laborers PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Helpers at

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus' Helpers at Work.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-

I. The Plenteous Harvest (9:35-38). 1. Christ's compassion (v. 36).

As He went on His rounds preaching the gospel of the kingdom, He saw the multitude as sheep having no shepherd. 2. A plenteous harvest and the few laborers (v. 37).

He saw the whole needy world as a ripened field of grain ready to be harvested with but few who were willing to labor in the harvest field. 3. Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that He will send forth laborers into His harvest (v. 38).

II. The Twelve Sent Forth (ch. 10). The sending forth of the twelve shows the methods adopted by Jesus Christ in the propagation of the kingdom. It should be clearly borne in mind that this chapter does not outline the policy of the missionary endeavor in this age. In order to show the dispensational aspects of the lesson, the following divisions of the chapter are suggested:

1. Instructions bearing immediately upon the Apostles' work to the death of Christ (vv. 1-15).

In strictness of interpretation these teachings cannot be applied to any later period. (1) The ministers chosen (vv. 1-4). These twelve humble men were chosen and commissioned to carry on the work of the propagation of the kingdom. These twelve stood in a peculiar relation to Israel. (2) The sphere of their mission (vv. 5, 6). They were only to go to Jews. They had no message for Gentiles, or even Samaritans, After Pentecost this sphere was widened (Luke 24:46-49; Acts 1:8). No such restriction obtains with reference to ministers today. The middle wall of partition was broken down by the death of Christ. (3) Their message (v. 7). By "the kingdom of heaven is at hand" is meant the promised kingdom of Israel was at hand; that Jesus Christ, the promised king, was present and ready to set up His kingdom. After the church is translated, the same message will be taken up for a brief time by the believing remnant (See Acts 15:13-18; Rom. 11 and Rev. 7). (4) The supernatural authentication of their mission (v. 8). They were clothed with power to work miracles. These wonderful works were really done by the twelve. (5) Their maintenance (vv. 9, 10). They were to make no provision for their support, but to depend wholly upon the Lord who sent them. Since they had received the message and power gratuitously, they were to give it out in the same way. (6) Responsibilities of those to whom the the people would not receive them or hear their message, they were to turn upon them. 2. Instructions concerning testimony from Pentecost onward (vv. 16-23).

from them and pronounce judgment

After Pentecost, testimony for Christ would be fraught with great danger. Both Jews and Gentiles would assail the messengers with the most bitter persecutions. They were scourged in the synagogues before heathen magistrates. Instead of bringing peace to the homes, they brought divisions of the fiercest kind among families. In their defense they were to rely upon the Holy Spirit to aid them. These conditions were literally fulfilled in the period from Pentecost to the destruction of Jerusalem. Since the fall of Jerusalem, no one has ever been scourged in a synagogue. Verse 23 seems to carry the work forward to the time of the preaching of the gospel of the kingdom in the tribulation time. The Lord's coming then is so speedy, that their testimony is cut

3. The teaching applicable in all ages (vv. 24-42).

The disciple has the position of oneness with the master. He is courageously to declare the whole counsel of God, though most violently opposed. Though the testimony result in the most bitter opposition, the messenger should not be surprised or discouraged, for so completely is the Lord identified with His disciples that He accepts treatment of them as treatment of Himself.

by Arthur Brisbane Mr. Hughes, Chief Justice Henry Ford's New Plan No Bolshevism Needed A Real Stigma

Mr. Hughes is now chief justice and the people have in their service a man of great ability, profound knowledge of the law and highest integrity. They know that Mr. Hughes, for the sake of public service, exchanges a private law practice worth $500,000 a year for the small wages paid by the richest nation to its highest judges.

Henry Ford may spend $100,000,000 establishing schools that will enable students to "fit into life" when they come out at eighteen years of age. He says: "The reason we have so much crime and racketeering is because schools do not teach our young men how to fit in the world. Racketeering is nothing but a revolt against the present improper, ineffectual system

Schools at present are better than they were 50 years ago before racketeering became a science. Students should all learn to use their hands, particularly those not well adapted to using their heads. It would be waste of time for men of the type of Voltaire, Milton, Moliere or Beethoven to learn a trade, but they are scarce.

Mr. Ford should modify his resolution to "devote the rest of his life to educational undertakings." Part of his effort should produce tractors of the caterpillar type—plenty of power with the traction "track" fully inclosed, protected from dust.

In one column you read about a "mob" of 1,200 idle men, fighting police in Cleveland, twenty in the mob injured, officers hurt.

In another column you find comfort, perhaps, in news from Washington that our national banks have resources of over twenty-nine billions

Seven thousand four hundred and eight institutions have on deposit more than twenty-two billions.

Five states of the South, highest in illiteracy, are conducting educational campaigns to reduce "the stigma."

Census takers list illiterates. Iowa has only 1.1 percentage of illiterates, lowest in the nation. Nebraska came first until 1920, and is striving to regain the championship

However, persuading or forcing hard-working people to study at night when they are tired out, and learn enough about their A B C's to remove the illiteracy stigma is not doing

The world still loves titles. In a Los Angeles lawsuit about money collected for a newly invented religious "cult" you meet a mild-looking gentleman called "The Four Winds of the Whirlwinds." He wrote down with his typewriter 50,000 pages dictated by angels to the priestesses of the "Great Eleven Cult."

"Concords of stars led the priestesses to various locations, and there the angels did their dictating."

Men and women gave tens of thousands of dollars in return for nonsense of this kind, which proves that the human race is largely foolish.

Ogden L. Mills, assistant secretary of the United States treasury, in a few words convinces you that this country has genuine prosperity if prosperity consists in getting more of life's good things than anybody else

The United States has only 7 per cent of the world's population and yet, says Mr. Mills, "that 7 per cent consumes approximately 48 per cent of the world's coffee, 53 per cent of the tin, 56 per cent of the crude rubber, 21 per cent of the sugar, 72 per cent of the raw silk, 36 per cent of the coal, 42 per cent of the pig iron, 47 per cent of the copper and 69 per cent of the crude petroleum. "Out of nearly 32,000,000 automobiles in the world on January 1, 1929, more than 24,000,000 were owned in the United States."

We certainly get our share. Perhaps the World court will tell us we

A Gorgeous Lake

O NE of the most beautiful lakes which this world holds is Lake George in eastern New York state. The Indians called it Andiatarocti-'Where the lake shuts itself in." Father Josues, a Jesuit missionary, who probably was the first white man to see it-1642, named it "The Lake of the Blessed Sacrament," but in 1755 this was changed to Lake George, in honor of King George II.

More properly it might be christened Surprise lake. It is so shut away from the world that one comes upon it with unexpected suddenness. The scene astonishes! One had not before realized that nature could take a body of water, sprinkle hundreds of little floating-garden-like islands about in it, forest its irregular shore line, and a background of protecting mountains and produce such an entrancing picture.

Located on the line of early-day exploration activities between Canada and New York this region naturally became a battle ground. The whoop of the savage and the boom of cannon have rolled across it. The ruins of ancient forts are mute reminders of the tragic struggles which occurred. An imposing shaft commemorates the Battle of Lake George-

But to return to the picture, for sheer beauty this 36-mile-long lake rivals the waters of the world. "The visitor," as one writer aptly put it, "feels the gripping atmosphere of romance growing out of the military tragedies of nearly two centuries ago and there is a natural beauty here that the world has not duplicated." # The Crippled Lady Peribonka By James Oliver Curwood

CHAPTER XIII

Paul had told only Claire that he was on his way to her. At the station a familiar face came out of the hurrying streams of humanity to greet him. It was Jimmy Ennerdale, whose presence always gave him greater comfort than that of any other man. He had known Ennerdale for a long time, and Claire had grown up with him like a sister. Jimmy had always seemed older than Paul, with a premature grayness in his hair and a slight stoop in his thin, sensitive body His affection for Paul possessed the unchangeable quality of the marble out of which he was slowly and persistently chiseling fame for himself as a sculptor. He had been working in the West, and Paul had not seen him for a year. Ennerdale had grown older in that time, he thought. His face was thinner, his hair whiter over his temples, his physical tone even less robust than when he had seen him last. He had the same quick nervous alertness about him, and it did Paul good to see the gladness in his face as they gripped hands. He knew that Claire, unable to meet him herself, had sent Jimmy in her place.

"She is like a child, waiting for you," said Ennerdale, as they rode toward his home. "I was there with mother last evening, and she asked me to meet you. She cried and laughed and is damnably happy. If you don't mind. I'd like to come over when you two have settled down, and have you tell me about this monstrous happen ing. May I?"

"You know you don't need an invitation," said Paul. "Come tomorrow." He had an odd feeling of not knowing what was going to happen as he left Ennerdale and entered his home. He could feel himself under a strain roused by the nearness of explanations which it was Claire's right to hear and his duty to make. It would be hard to talk about Carla, as he must, even should Claire in her wisdom ask for

Claire was waiting for him in her This act of thoughtfulness pleased him. She knew that in a peculiarly embarrassing moment they should be alone. Both were sensitive, each a little fearful of what one or the other might betray in their first greeting. He was thinking this closed behind him, his first impression was of a room filled with flowers. Claire, like Carla, loved them. The air was delicately fragrant with their perfume. Claire was bending over a mass of white roses when he entered, and then came toward him with both hands held out. She did not put her arms about him or offer him her lips. yet never had he seen such a light of happiness shining in her eyes. He made a movement to kiss her, but she drew back in such a way that her act seemed scarcely to be repelling

"Not now, Paul. Not until we have talked. Then, if you want to kiss me, you may."

She was astonishingly free of the tension which he had anticipated, and as she stood with her fingers clasped warmly about his, telling him how glad she was that ne was alive, and how doomed to despair and unhappiness she would have been if he had not lived to return to her, he wondered if it were Claire, his wife, who was talking to him, or another Claire -some one he had never known. For she seemed, all at once, to have drawn herself farther away from him than sweet and friendly way that the change in her seemed one which could not bring hurt with it.

It was Claire's fight that was hard est. It was goirg to take a Joan of Arc courage to say what she had planned to say.

She made him sit near her, so they were facing each other.

"Paul, we are going to be honest

You will promise me that?" He knew he was preparing to equivocate as he gave his word. A lie to save Claire from hurt was more creditable than truth. The impulse to shield her, to keep from her all suspicion of his love for Carla, swept over him as he looked at her. She was like the flowers on the table, as easily crushed, he thought. More vividly than ever he saw the difference between her and Carla. Carla would fight on through tragedy even to death. Claire, suffering more. would droop and fade like a petal in a rose, shrinking from the quicker and more physical action which the other would find for timself He was not analyzing himself, or her The thought-like a picture-impressed itself upon him, and Claire, gazing at him in these epic, introspective moments, as if partly seeing the swift

isioning in his mina surprised him

"Paul, I wonder if you know, just now much I honor and respect you. wonder if you realize how fine you are. I have failed to play my partas your wife. I have not let you know these things as I should. The fault in our lives is not yours. It is mine. I think I could have made you love me. Yet I saw the unfairness of it unless I could make myself love you first. I hoped and prayed for that.

"There wasn't love when we were married, on either side. You did not love me, not in the way you wanted to love a woman, and my feeling for you was an immeasurable respect and admiration for an honorable gentleman. It seems trite and superficial to say that the interests of our families brought us together, does it not? But it is true. I wanted to love you. But I discovered-after a little while -that something was in my way."

"I know," he found himself saying. You couldn't love an animal, Claire. I was that, until the day you came to the Mistassini. I have been blind and brutal. God knows I am only half worthy of you!"

"And Carla?"

So softly did his wife speak Carla's name that for a moment it seemed as if he had not heard it.

"We have promised ourselves to be nonest," she continued. "Do you remember a letter I wrote you from Paris in which I said I was coming to you and that I was sure a more important thing would happen for us in your woods than any journey, like your promised one around the world. could give?"

"Yes. I remember."

wife's eves. "I want to hear you say it, Paul." She was repeating Carla's words whispered to him in the blackness of the earth. "That is why I came to you there. A woman may hide her love from a man, but not from another woman, and it was impossible for Carla to keep her secret from me. Yours was still more open, though I saw you making a magnificent fight. I know, Paul. But I want to hear it from your lips. I must hear it. Do you love Carla Haldan?"

"Yes, I love her." "More than any other woman in the world?"

"I could only love one woman in that way." He was conscious of having struck a deadly blow, a hurt he would rather have died than inflict upon Claire. It had dragged itself from him in spite of his determination, and he waited for his punishment, its effect on her. Claire's eyes did not waver. She did not flinch. A starry, radiant light came into her face, and she gave a when he went to her. As her door breathless, half-articulate cry, not of shock or of pain, but of joy. He saw the blood flushing her cheeks, the tenseness leaving her body, and they sat for a time in silence, neither making an effort to speak.

> "I thought I would hurt you. And you are glad!"

Then he said:

"Yes, I am glad. I thank God you love Carla.'

She rose to her feet, and took a letter from the table. She was trying to keep from crying as she gave it

"I want you to read it and then come back to me," she said. "This evening, if you will, Paul. I lack the courage to tell you things. You will understand when you open it, alone,' He went to the Kirke-Durand building and lost himself in the human stream going up with the elevators. On one of the floors was an office, always ready for him. He shut himself in and locked the door. He opened the letter. There were many pages, closely written in Claire's hand. With almost childish candor they began to tell him of a woman's fight to triumph over herself. Like she had ever been, but in such a an indestructible redolence they breathed the sureness of Claire's faith in herself. Without emotional effort she told him that unless Carla had come into his life she would never have let him know what she was about to reveal. There was no man in the world more worthy of a woman's love than he, she said. Yet, from the beginning, she had been unable to build her respect and admiration into greater things she should have given him. That was one reason why, repelling the thought of making him care greatly for her when she could not love him, she had kept herself away from him so much. One's passion for another, in its holiest form, was guided by a single force. One might stem that and hold it back, but it was impossible to make it die. Such a love was Carla's for him. Then she spoke of another man. It was of Jimmy Ennerdale, the sculptor, who was driving his way so persistently to success. She had accepted Jimmy almost as a brother during her girlhood, but very soon after her marriage the truth had come to her, she said, and had grown stronger with each year. She cared for Ennerdale just as Carla cared for him. It was Paul who might have been her brother, with such frank and unembar

nim. She knew that Ennerdale loved her, and repeated that a man could not conceal that fact from a woman, though he did not express it in words. and she was sure Jimmy had no idea of her sentiment toward him. This love for Jimmy was the other reason. the more vital of the two, which had held her aloof from Paul, She loved Jimmy's work and wanted to become a part of it. Paul finished, and it seemed as though tiny raindrops were falling in his brain, so clearly could he hear and feel the beating of his pulse. In a few moments the moaning of life came to him in a distant wave. It struck nearer in the slamming of an elevator door. Indistinct voices passed down the hall. From another street, blocks away, the hammering of rivet drivers on new steel rose above the rush and roar of traffic. Paul looked from his window, as if he might see the pit, out of which the same sound had come night and day for three years. His eyes fell upon gloomy, sooty walls. Under him lay an unending fabric of men's toil, a great sea of roofs strung with wires, craggy with ugly architectural warts, broken with chimneys, streaked with tarred gutters, and with the gaping, shifting mouths of ventilating funnels sucking air into their artificial lungs. He looked down and saw a thousand moving things, in a stream, like ants, every hurrying particle a human soul struggling in the furious Twentieth century effort to make itself greater than God. From all this Claire had freed him. She had given him new life, and with it love and happiness. He crushed her letter in his hand as if some pitiful breath might wrench its precious pages from him.

Then he turned to the telephone. It was impossible for him to wait. He wanted to tell her there was one other woman in the world as wonderful as

In Claire's voice was a trembling note of happiness when he said this. "Dear old Paul," she cried softly. 'But you mustn't come to me until evening. I have something which I must do before I see you again."

That night, when he went to his nome, Claire was not there.

She had left a note for him. "I have gone to see Carla," it said. "Only a woman can make another woman-like Carla-understand."

When this was done, the next step was to make that pile of moistened clay dough into the pretty shapes of real Indian bowls and vases. "Indians do this for hundreds years," said Sally Owl, moving her quick fingers gently but firmly over a clay lump and gradually changing it from a round unlovely thing into a small graceful bowl like those the children often used for their cereal. Other bowls that Sally made were not entirely shaped by her fingers. She used pieces of gourd shells, shallow woven baskets or scooped out pieces of wood to shape them as she wished.

"No done yet." said Sally Owl. "Now make them pretty. See!"

"Is it not easy?" she said. "Some tribes do not make their pottery pretty that way, but in others. Some in long ago times, used their finger nails to make the pictures, some big sharp pointed tools or spoon-like things or funny things called discs but I-I like to make them pretty with my cords and cloth. Tomorrow, when the bowls are dry, I show you how to put the color on. Will come tomorrow?"

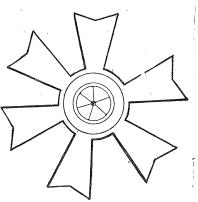

"Oh yes," said the children eagerly. And when the sun came out next day the children were again at Sally

Sally Owl took a large smooth pebble, and picking up one of the bowls she had made, which was now dry began rubbing it quickly and lightly with the pebble. This she kept up for nearly half an hour, to polish it.

"Now," she said, "we paint it." She had a paint brush made of horse hair and some paint that was a mixture of red clay with juices from berries and herbs added to give different shades. It was not long before Sally Owl had made her bowls very beautiful with soft rich tones of reds and oranges and greens and browns.

The next step was the baking process. Just as her grandmothers had done before her, Sally Owl, suspending her bowls one after the other in a shallow pan by means of a wooden tripod of poles tied together with vines and cords, over a low but very hot bed of coals, began to bake them slowly. "This our way," said she with that same merry twinkle in her THE GAME OF TWIRLS
