If your team can win consistently it will have the chance to go on to the regional to be held at Flint one week later. Don't forget the dates, March 5-6-7, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday and look up your team's starting time and be on hand to start them with a rousing cheer.

SURPRISED S. S. SUPT. MONDAY EVENING

As a testimonial of the good will that members of the Evangelical church have for Edw. Helwig, over a hundred met at the church in his honor Monday evening. A program was given and Rev. Chas. W. Lyman, the pastor, in behalf of Mr. Helwig's friends, presented him with an upholstered rocker. Mr. Lyman expressed the appreciation of the congregation for Mr. Helwig's faithful services in the church, especially as superintendent of the Sunday School, a position he has held for many years. The program included the following numbers: piano solos, by the Misses Ruth Schenck and Ione Calley, readings by Mrs. E. W. Kercher and Mrs. Chas. W. Lyman, vocal duet by the Misses Katherine Joos and Laura Jaus; and a Hawaiian duet by Burt and Leonard Elliott. Following the program, the company enjoyed pot luck refreshments served in the church dining room. The affair was planned as a surprise and Mr. Helwig, in his remarks admitted that it was a real one.

MICHICAN IS 18TH STATE TO SIGN UP

Ratifies Nationwide Movement To Boost Use of Dairy Products.

Michigan is the eighteenth state to ratify a nationwide movement sponsored by the National Dairy Council to stimulate the consumption of butter and other dairy products, M. L. Noon of Jackson, president of the Michigan State Farm bureau and director of the Michigan Milk Producers' association, announces.

The campaign in Michigan, Noon stated, will be launched within a week under the direction of Martin Seidel of Bay City, secretary of the Michigan Association of Creamery Owners and Managers.

The dairy interests of the state intend to enlist the support of the Michigan State College extension department, the state bureau of dairying and the Michigan Bankers association in the movement to increase the consumption of butter. The college will have charge of making certain surveys in rural and consuming centers.

"The great danger in the present surplus of dairy products," says the National Dairy Council, "lies in its continuance. If it lasts until May, the beginning of the flush period in production, prices to farmers during the most productive period of the year will be far below the 1929 range."

Advertising Campaign.

In compliance with a resolution adopted last month at the annual meeting of the Kent County Farm bureau the Michigan State Farm bureau has launched a statewide advertising campaign urging farmers to eat butter instead of dairy substitutes.

"Every pound of butter substitute consumed kills the market for about nine quarts of milk," reads a farm bureau circular now being distributed among farmers. "How can the dairy business remain prosperous if dairy farmers help kill the market for their own product?

"Milk is the most economical food. The farmer should use it constantly. He buys it from himself at wholesale instead of paying retail prices for substitutes.

"It is claimed that the farmer buys one-third of all the butter substitutes produced. In so doing he helps create a surplus of butter and loses more money by lower butter prices than he gains in buying low priced substitutes.

"What do you think of the arguments offered by the farmer who buys substitutes? He kicks about the low price of milk and butter, says there's no money in the business, etc., yet he says butter prices are too high and buys substitutes to save money. In other words, too low to sell but too high to buy. Not logical, is it?

4,500 Boys to Participate in District Tournaments to Be Held in Michigan

A. W. Thompson, director of high school athletics in Michigan estimates that approximately 4,500 boys will take part in the forthcoming district basketball tournaments to be held in 43 villages and cities about the state. This is by far the greatest number of participants the annual court jubilee has ever drawn. Proof that the tournaments are gaining rapidly in popularity is seen in the fact that it has been necessary to increase the number of district events from year to year.

Information available in Mr. Thompson's office indicates that there will be at least 500 schools represented this year. Each one will have from 8 to 10 boys ready to answer the referee's starting whistle. The State Association allows expenses for nine players.

Popularity of basketball has grown largely because the smaller schools find it a relatively inexpensive sport. It requires the least number of players of any of the interscholastic team sports and usually the place for the games is provided by the school gymnasium.

Preparations for the district tournaments have been in the making for several weeks. The last minute details are now receiving attention. Charles E. Forsythe, assistant director, has been visiting various sections of the state to meet with tournament managers. At these meetings, regulations on which the tournaments are to be conducted come up for explanation and discussion. This means that the tournaments will be uniform in all respects. Decision to select only those men whose names appear on approved list of officials guarantees competent handling of the contests.

Attendance records at the district tournaments, over the entire state, have been broken every year. Proper handling of teams, orderly and uniform methods of elimination have made the tournaments exceedingly popular. A team is seldom requested to play so far away from its home in district events but that the home town rooters may follow without undue inconvenience.

Town, who are checking the county's books. County Clerk Guy N. Ormes is custodian of the alimony fund, receiving the amounts and forwarding the same to the right parties. The county really has no part in this alimony money, which is for the greater part paid for the support of minor children, and amounts are stated by the court at the time the divorce decree is granted. KILLED IN AUTOMOBILE CRASH SUNDAY NIGHT

Howard Coulter, 30, Met His Death near Howard City in Collision.

Howard Coulter, 30, who had spent the greater part of his life in this community, was killed Sunday night at about ten o'clock in an automobile accident near Howard City, Mich., when his car collided head-on with one driven by Michael Doxstater of Grand Rapids.

Both men were alone in their cars. Doxstater, who was not badly hurt, told officers he did not see the Coulter car approaching. Both cars were badly wrecked. Mr. Coulter had his skull crushed and right arm broken and was cut in many places in the head by pieces of splintered glass.

John Howard Coulter was born on a farm in Evergreen township, Sanilac county, Michigan, on Dec. 11, 1898. He spent practically all of his life in or near Cass City excepting the past two years when he held a position as a travelling salesman. He was employed by a stove company until the latter part of last September when he was taken ill at Kalkas-

LOCALS DEFEATED IN LAST GAME OF SEASON

Cass City closed its 1930 basket ball schedule losing to Harbor Beach in a closely played game 16-14, the winning basket going into the meshes with five seconds to go. With 30 seconds to go, Pinney sunk a shot to tie the score at 14-14, then Woodwaskki got loose and dropped in the winning goal.

The locals played 12 games in the regular schedule winning seven and losing five. The real test of the year, however, is next week in the tournament and if the locals' form doesn't reverse, fans look for the home team to be eliminated early. For the past two years, the maroon team has tasted the sweets of a tourney championship and probably will go the limit to repeat. The team can go great as attested by the Caro victory here or terrible as attested by the Unionville game at Caro.

In last night's game, Edgerton and Gowen both scored four points with Ruhl, Pinney and Crandell each getting a goal for 14. Hunter and Woodwaskki each scored five points, while Teddick got four and Krause two.

TEAMS CONTINUE IN SAME POSITIONS

All volleyball teams in the A and B Leagues continue in the same positions as last week though it is noticeable that the margin of points between the two high point teams in each group is growing less. This is particularly marked in the A League where competition is keen. Here are the standings to date:

CARO, GAGETOWN TOURNEY WINNERS

Caro won the Class C championship and Gagetown the Class D basketball title of Tuscola county Friday night in the finals of the county tourney. They will meet for the county title on a neutral floor at Unionville on Friday night, Feb. 28.

Caro had no trouble disposing of Vassar, 43-14, running up a lead of 19-3 in the first period. Gagetown had to fight all the way to beat out Fairgrove, 15-12.

FAIRGROVE DEBATERS STILL IN THE RACE

Fairgrove debaters won unanimously in a debate with a Saginaw school Friday and were scheduled to debate at West Branch Thursday. Two other schools, Millington and Unionville, were not eliminated from the race until just recently.

These three, numbered among the smaller high schools of Tuscola county, presented outstanding talent in the county's debating circles.

LONDON CONFERENCE FACES GRAVE CRISIS

Mrs. Knapp Asked to Join Group Signing Cable to American Delegation.

That the London conference faces a critical situation is indicated by a night letter sent to Mrs. A. J. Knapp at Cass City and received by her Thursday morning. In this telegram, she is requested to join an important group in sending a cablegram to the American delegation at London, England.

Mrs. Knapp has served two years as president of the Michigan State Federation of Women's Clubs and is now serving as a member of the board of directors of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

The telegram received by Mrs. Knapp Thursday morning read as follows:

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.
Mrs. A. J. Knapp:

News reports confirmed by private information indicate London conference faces grave crisis. Are you willing join large important group signing following cable to American delegation, London? Please telegraph reply to Raymond Fosdick, sixty-one Broadway, New York. Text follows:

"First, upon the reconvening of the Naval Conference we, the undersigned, reiterate the hope that the remaining negotiations be conducted in full remembrance of the fact that all of the powers at London have agreed in the pact of Paris to renounce war in favor of settling disputes by peaceful means.

"Second, we base our expectation upon President Hoover's Armistice Day speech in which he declared 'We will reduce our naval strength in proportion to any other, having said that it only remains for the others to say how low they will go. It cannot be

SEE BRIGHT FUTURE IN DISEASE BATTLE

Federal Officers Say Methods of Control Save Herds from Huge Losses.

Encouraging results in the battle against many serious diseases of animals has caused the bureau of animal industry in the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture to ask all livestock owners to co-operate with all public agencies which are trying to still further accelerate the work of disease control.

The federal bureau states that of the 35 serious animal disease present in the world only 24 are known to be present in this country, and 17 of those present are being effectively controlled or are approaching eradication. Tick fever is one example of a disease which is being erased from the national map. Four-fifths of the original area in which this disease occurred is now free from the disease, which has been eradicated from five states.

Tuberculosis, hog cholera, and contagious abortion are three serious diseases whose control has progressed remarkably during the past few years. The help of herd owners is still needed in the additional work which is necessary to further reduce the losses from these three diseases.

Specific measures for inoculating animals to prevent the occurrence of certain diseases, methods for using dips to cure or prevent skin diseases, and ways to avoid losses from internal parasites or poisonous plants are described in printed matter which is distributed free by the bureau of animal industry, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

CHARACTER TRAINING IS P. T. A. SUBJECT

Membership Drive in Final Week of Contest which Closes Mar. 3.

Parent Teachers' Association meets Monday, March 3, at 8:00 p. m. at the high school. The general subject, "Character Training," is the most important topic of the year.

Supt. Randall speaks on "Recent Trends in Character Education in the Public School." In connection with this subject he will explain the purpose and value of the citizenship marking recently included on the pupils' report cards. J. Ivan Niergarth will tell of the new system of student government just being put into operation in the high school. Mrs. Charles Day will explain the program of character training which holds such a large place in the class-room work of the smaller children. The opportunities and importance of character-building in home life will be discussed by Mrs. Walter Schell. If time permits, further treatment of the general subject as it relates to religion will be given by one or more of the resident pastors. Everyone is invited who is interested in this vital problem of how to train up a child in the way he should go and how school, home and church can best co-operate to this end. Opportunity will be given for questions and discussion at the close of the program. Recreation and refreshments will follow.

The Parent Teachers Association membership drive swings into the final week in its campaign which started February 3 when members at that time were divided into two groups with Alex Henry and Robt. Warner as captains, in an effort to increase the membership to the highest point in the society's history.

A goodly number have already been added to the membership, but there is still room for more who should not let the opportunity pass. Officers especially urge that parents with children in school link up with this association which is striving to improve conditions between the home and school.

On Monday evening, Mar. 3, all members who have been added to the association during this drive will be counted and each team will receive credit for the names they have received. The side bringing in the lesser number of members is to furnish refreshments at the April meeting which comes on Monday, the 7th. The membership committee is anxious that both teams take an active part in this last week of the drive, in an effort to report a large gain over last year's membership.

STOLE $80 FROM HIS GRANDMOTHER

Melvin Bouford of Watertown township was brought before Justice William Imerson at Caro on Jan. 22 charged with stealing $80.00 from his grandmother, Melissa Bouford. He pleaded guilty and admitted that he had spent the money. Bouford waived examination and was bound over to the circuit court.

Three Smiths, John Sr., John Jr. and Stephen, were charged with the larceny of oats by John Young, a farmer of Gilford township. Officers state that the three Smiths were caught in the act of stealing the oats. Brought before Justice Wm. Imerson on Saturday, they pleaded guilty. All waived examination and were bound over to the circuit court for trial.

WEED SCHOOLS AT FIVE TUSCOLA POINTS

Weeds have long been a problem on every farm and in order to help solve this problem, the County Agricultural Extension Service of Tuscola county is co-operating with the Crops Extension Department of Michigan State College in putting on a series of weed schools in the county. Paul Miller, crops specialist of Michigan State College, will have charge of the meetings.

The topics discussed will include kinds of weeds and their identification by their seeds, weed control by cultivation and by chemicals. Samples of weed seeds will be shown.

Special attention will be given to the three worst weeds in the county, bind weed, sow thistle and quack grass. Farmers are invited to bring in for identification seed samples containing weeds, or weed seeds.

TAKE IT FROM DAD

By Frank H. Cheley

I'm Going to Quit School and Go to Work

Bob was all boy, every inch of him! To call him an animated interrogation point would be putting it mildly; alive from head to toe, eyes open, ears open; his mind an endless sensitive movie film catching everything that came his way; a growing unfolding young modern American (of which there are some twenty-five million more or less in this land of ours).

Above everything else Bob was a never-ending array of questions. No sooner would Dad have his dinner and get comfortably settled with his paper than Bob would appear, after twelve hours of busy activity, as fresh as a lily and loaded with a new perplexing query for Dad.

It got to be a regular game at the Smithhoughs, this question and answer matter, until Dad Smithhough often found himself wondering through the day or as he relaxed a bit on the way home, what fool question Bob would have concocted for him that day.

His dad had always been too busy for questions and he often recalled as he pondered some of the "staggerers" his Bob handed him, how different he might have been if his father had only talked things over with him!

So, after Bob Smithhough had floored his dad a few times with queries that were too deep for the old gentleman, he began to prepare himself.

Tonight, obviously, something was wrong. Bob was quiet, almost melancholy and noticeably irritable. Something had gone wrong! In due time it would come out and it did. When both gravitated to the living room, without much ado and no introduction to the subject, Bob seated himself half dejectedly and asked his question by way of an ultimatum.

"Pop, I'm going to quit school and go to work."

"That so," said Dad, without looking up. "Been elected president of an oil company or director of the United States Steel Corporation? Congratulations, my boy, I didn't suppose you had sufficiently trained your mind as yet for so great a responsibility. Now if you had said you were going to work on a road gang or had a job delivering milk, I would have understood."

There was a friendly twinkle in Dad's eye and a humorous tone in his voice. "When I was your age, Bob, I'd have given anything I possessed to have gone to school and I didn't have any modern university like your new school to go to either, but I had to work to help the old folks make ends meet. The thing which I knew best was that I didn't know much. I read a good deal and was just sort of half conscious of a great marvelous world about me and I was hungry to learn. I didn't want to live in my little world always. I wanted to know about science and invention and travel. I was hungry to be in the midst of the big things of the world. I was earning twenty dollars a month and my room and board and lived twenty miles from anywhere. I longed to be in the midst of things; to be a somebody and do something beside hard manual labor all the time. I had to fight for my chance, Bob. Yours came without a fight, that's why it seems worthless to you.

"What's wrong—teacher ridden you a bit, perhaps bawled you out? Perhaps you bluffed and got caught! Yes—well take your medicine like a man, my boy, but listen, remember you're a Smithhough—the only male descendant. Dad's counting on you to do at least some of the things he wanted to do and dreamed about but never could. Quit school? Nonsense! Listen, the only thing in the world they give away today is an education. A regular boy who means business can have all of it he'll take. Think of it, all the education that you'll accept, free; high school, college, and then on and on if you desire. It's simply up to you. The big stick of modern achievement is in your head, boy. See that little stubby red volume there on the shelf. That's the latest 'Who's Who in America,' Bob. There are about thirty thousand brief biographies of American men and women of accomplishment in that book—the folks who have led out in every single realm of constructive thought and action—only twenty-seven of them stopped school in the eighth grade.

"The other day I saw a very interesting query. 'When is a man educated?' and the answer was, 'When he can look into a mudpuddle and see more there than mere mud!' Bob, education is the knowledge of how to use the whole of one's self, and no boy in the eighth grade has ever approached that point.

"It's true college doesn't make fools, it just develops them. If you're a dumbbell you haven't much chance, but Bob, you're no dumbbell. You have the physique and the mind in the making, but it takes effort and struggle. Now get at your lessons. Know a little more history than your teacher tomorrow."

And Bob did!

CONTROL GARLIC BY FALL PLOWING

Keep Plants Down by Grazing Live Stock.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Timely plowing late each fall and again early in the spring, followed by the growing of thoroughly cultivated row crops, are the essential steps in the so-called cultural method of controlling wild garlic, says the United States Department of Agriculture. In most places this system must be followed for at least three years in order to obtain a satisfactory clean-up of the weed.

Details of the method are given in Leaflet 43-L, Wild Garlic and Its Control, just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. The leaflet also gives a description of the plant and of other plants often mistaken for garlic. Farmers should be able to recognize wild garlic, the department says, as it is more difficult to eradicate than the other species.

Grazing with live stock, especially sheep, for several seasons, as closely as may be safe without serious injury to the pasture, aids in keeping down the growth of garlic in steep, rocky or wooded pastures that cannot be plowed. When dairy cows are pastured in garlicky fields, it is necessary to remove them from the pasture four to seven hours before milking to eliminate entirely the garlic flavor and odor from the milk. Milk cows should not be turned into such pastures in the spring until suitable forage plants are large enough to furnish good grazing.

Copies of the leaflet may be obtained free while the supply lasts by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Bad Practice to Leave Calf With Cow Very Long

A common practice is to leave the calf with the cow for the first three or four days. This plan allows the calf to be with the cow during the time when the udder is inflamed. However, the longer the calf is allowed to remain with the cow, the harder it will be to teach it to drink. If at first a calf does not drink readily from a pail, it is advisable to keep it without food for at least 12 hours. It is then hungry and is usually willing to try drinking. Warm whole milk, fresh from the cow, should be measured or preferably weighed into a clean pail. The quantity of milk that a calf will do well on varies according to the size, breed and individuality of the calf. In general, for Jersey or Guernsey calves, one pound of milk daily for each ten pounds of live weight is a safe quantity. Ayrshire, Holstein, Brown Swiss and Shorthorn calves may be fed one pound of milk a day for each eight pounds of live weight.

Skim Milk Calf

The skim milk calf should be allowed to eat some grain. One good mixture consists of equal parts of corn meal, wheat bran, and ground oats. If the oats are not available a mixture of equal parts of corn meal and wheat bran may be used. A Jersey calf at three months of age should weigh in the neighborhood of 150 pounds and should eat one pound of grain. By the time it is six months old its weight should be around 300 pounds.

Dairy Facts

Sentimental regard for a bull is usually misplaced.

Every farmer who milks ten or more cows can hardly afford to be without a silo.

Every dairy farmer should provide in his crop ration some of the legume hay crops.

Where nonlegume roughages are used in the ration, the protein is low and must be furnished in the grain ration.

Experimental results show that milk and fat can be produced at a lower cost where silage is included in the winter ration.

Dried blood meal, mixed with the milk, also helps when a calf is sickly or inclined to scour. Start with one teaspoonful and increase to four teaspoonfuls, if found necessary.

In cold, stormy weather dairy cows should be outdoors only long enough to drink, and if the stable is comfortable and water available they should not go out at all except on clear, warm days.

* * *

The dry roughage part of the ration includes legumes and other hay crops. Alfalfa, clover, soy bean and cowpea hay represent the best dry roughages that can be fed, because they are high in protein. When these crops are grown on the farm they provide the cheapest protein that can be fed.

Happenings of a Quarter Century Ago

Items from the Tri-County Chronicle of Feb. 24, 1905.

Up to the time of going to press no train has reached Cass City since Thursday of last week. Mail from Detroit has been brought here by way of Caro, Stage Driver Mead bringing five sacks of it Monday as the first consignment. The troubles on the P., O. & N. are too numerous to mention these days. Engines have been disabled; two of them went off the track at Imlay City during the week and the snow to a great extent must be shoveled off by hand, no luxury in the line of a snowplow being in the company's possession.

The members of the fire department held their regular meeting Tuesday evening. Two new members were received into the department, A. H. Muck and A. A. Predmore. A committee was appointed to confer with the council and ask them to provide the hose cart and the hook and ladder wagon with runners when the snow is plentiful.

Miss Kate Zinnecker is enjoying a brief vacation from her duties at W. A. Fairweather's store.

The Misses Sopha and Edna Matzen gave a Washington's birthday party to a company of their lady friends Wednesday evening.

The death of Mrs. Geo. Bond occurred Feb. 18 at her home near Wickware after an illness of less than a week.

James McLeish, a resident of Novesta, died at his home last Saturday.

Mrs. G. W. Goff has moved this week into the A. A. McKenzie building on Main St.

A WRONG DIAGNOSIS

Doctor—What you need to do, sir, is to relax. You are overworking yourself. Too much work and worry will send any man to his grave years before his time. Remember that. Your brain is overworked. Now, just what is your occupation?

Patient—I am a member of congress.

Doctor—Let me examine your pulse again; I must have made a mistake.

A Drawing Card

"Mrs. Silver, I understand you are a movie actress and that you have been happily married for ten years."

"Yes."

"To one husband?"

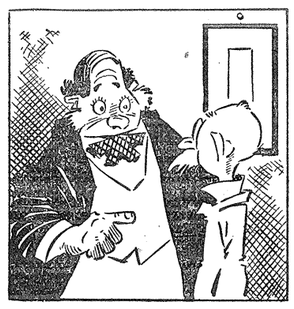
"Yes."

"Wonderful. I want to make you an offer to appear in vaudeville."

Family Avocations

"Is Miss Freda at home?"
"No, she is out on her horse."
"Is Miss Joan at home?"
"No, she is at the gymnasium."
"Is Mrs. Smith in?"
"No, she is flying the Atlantic."
"Is Mr. Smith in?"
"No, he is at the cookery class."

NEVER REGAINED IT



Doctor—That man once lost his health, but I've guarded it now for twenty years.

Ex-Patient—And that's the reason why he's never regained it, I suppose.

You All Know Him

He tried to cross the railroad track
Before the rushing train;
They put the pieces in a sack
But couldn't find the brain.

A Cheap Triumph

Edwin—Don't you believe me, dearest, when I tell you that you are the only girl I ever loved?

Angelina—Oh, yes. But that's not nearly as nice as it would be to know that I'd stolen you from some other girl.

Knows His Business

"Is he a good rabbit dog?" inquired the hunter, after inspecting the animal.

"I'll say he is!" the dealer replied with pride. "You should have seen the way he went after my wife's new sealskin coat!"—American Legion Monthly.

A Rumor

Boarding House Lady (to inmate)—I heard today that you have a habit of not paying your bills.

Poet Lovejoy—Ah! It's only a rumor.

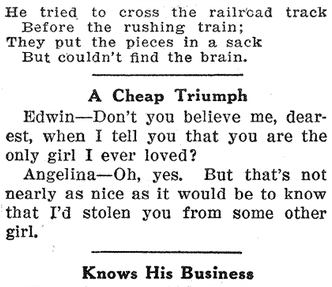
Boarding House Lady—If you were only a roomer it wouldn't be so bad, but you eat more than anyone else in the house.

That Cruel Thrust

Young Doolittle—The little things of life are dear to me. I love the insignificant, the plain, the simple—

Miss Spiffins (interrupting)—Yes, I've often noticed how self-satisfied you seem to be.

HE RANG IN



Sister—Well, what luck did you have with the latest belle?

Brother—Oh, I succeeded in ringing in.

They Cry for Them

Georgie, Porgie, pudding and pie,
Kissed the girls and made 'em cry—
The time this happened is far away,
Kisses don't make girls cry today.

Necessary as the Seeds

Blinks—Wait a minute, I'm going to start my garden tonight and I have to stop in the drug store.

Jinks—Huh! You can't buy seeds in there, can you?

Blinks—It's a porous plaster for my back, not seeds, I buy there.

Louisa's Letter

Select Some Good Books for Reading.

Dear Girls:—

A man is known by the company he keeps—and by the books he reads, which remark also applies to woman. In fact it is easier to "size up" a person if we know the books she likes than it is to judge by the company she keeps. For a woman's company is not always of her own choosing. It depends to a large extent on family relations and intimates.

But books—that is another matter. She can cast aside the shallow or salacious books without any qualms of conscience and without causing any heartaches. Or if she prefers those kinds of literature she can devour them and never call for anything deeper or more worthwhile.

Sometimes we get in bad company in the book world before we realize it and the reading of superficial stuff becomes a habit which is hard to break. Our brains like other parts of the body need exercise and, if they fail to get it, they atrophy to a certain extent. We cannot expect to read silly nothings for ten years and then leap into a book that calls for some thought with any amount of eagerness. We will probably find them a little tiresome just at first.

And yet, some of the most instructive books are the most interesting. Not long ago I read a most fascinating book by Pierre Loti which described his travels through Morocco, as a member of the French embassy, to the ancient city of Fez. I was enthralled. His descriptions of the African light, the plains covered with flowers, the brilliant costumes of the people, the veiled ladies with painted eyelids were all suggestive of romance. But the unhappy lot of these peoples, their unsanitary cities, their filthy streets and revolting cruelties, made me glad that I was reading about this African land rather than living in it.

This book as well as many others I could name—biographies, psychologics, books of travel, etc., are equally as fascinating as a good novel if one gets in the habit of reading them. Let's be versatile and not confine our reading to one kind of book. Let's get a wider outlook on life through our books and not think the world's great purpose is to revolve around the up-to-date cocktail-drinking crowd we read about in the modern novel.

Yours,

LOUISA.

Cass City Schools

Kindergarten.

We are beginning to observe the early signs of spring, first of which is the March wind. In connection with this, we are learning several wind songs which we dramatize. We are making kites, clothes lines, windmills, sail boats, birds and aeroplanes.

Our March poster is under way, bringing us much good cheer and happiness.

We are taking special delight in observing how Nature influences us, even in the building of boats and aeroplanes. Boats are shaped like fish, aeroplanes like birds.

Boats and aeroplanes are run by engines and we are surprised to learn that we are run by engines, too. We have decided to help our hearts in their work by observing all the rules of good health; cleanliness, fresh air, exercise, plenty of sleep, good wholesome food and regular habits.

First Grade.

Just another month has flown by. It seems only last week we were studying the Eskimo and his habits.

February has, however, been filled with many new and happy experiences.

First, February 14th, Valentines; lacy ones, red hearts filled about the edges, booklets, inscribed with those well worn words, I Love You. Next, Lincoln's birthday, with a long trail of log cabins and flags. On the 21st, George Washington's birthday was duly celebrated. We made cherry trees. Never before have trees borne such luscious fruit. Our hatchets would credit tool-dom. Maybe they might be classified as battle axes—we're not just sure. Then last of all our parade around the schoolhouse—drums, that found several beats at different times, flags waving at half mast, heads bedecked with newspaper hats, and our chests protected by enormous shields. The success of the parade might be determined by the applause we received from various windows as we passed.

And now breathlessly we look forward to March.

Second Grade.

We have been having a contest ever since school started in arithmetic and spelling. We decided that we would end our contest with Valentine Day and the losing side would have to treat. When Valentine's Day came, Alton's side was ahead so they were the winners. The people on the losing side of which Mary Jayne was the captain, brought money and treated Alton's side to ice cream. Carol brought a lovely cake so we had that to go with our ice cream. We had assigned three postmen for the afternoon and they were kept busy delivering valentines. Everyone had a good time.

Tuesday we enjoyed a spelling match with the third grade. This is the second one we have had and the boys and girls did better this last time. Carol Heller was the last one to go down in our room.

We have finally managed to get our new books fixed so that they can be taken home. We put cards and pockets in the backs of the books and tried to arrange them as nearly like a real library as we could in order that the children would have an idea of what to do if they wanted to take books from a real library. We choose a new librarian every week to take care of the books.

Third Grade.

We have started in our new geographies and find the work very interesting. Keith McComb and Clark Watson have given us interesting reports on milk and flour. Isabel Bradshaw was quite delighted to win our last spell down. Thelma Surprenant is usually the successful one. We have had two great birthdays this month. We had our Lincoln program by ourselves and went to the fourth grade room for our Washington program.

Fourth Grade.

February surely is an eventful month. We celebrated Lincoln's birthday by giving three minute talks about interesting things concerning Lincoln. Our Valentine party came next and each child was well pleased with the messages of love that were found in the valentine box.

The third grade helped us celebrate George Washington's birthday and added much to the program for the afternoon.

We enjoyed the playlet given by the fifth grade. We hope they will entertain us again. Our English class made Washington booklets with red, white and blue paper and a silhouette of Washington.

Now that we have had a few nice warm days, we will study about birds in our Nature Study class and we have some nice bird pictures for our bulletin boards.

Ivan O'Connor has a new distinction. He has been chosen class poet.

The reports in geography are very interesting. Jack Middleton will tell us the story of "Rubber" this week.

Fifth Grade.

This month we read Washington and Lincoln stories. The B class gave a program showing different periods in Lincoln's life. We are now working on Citizenship booklets, giving the lives of Washington and Lincoln.

Valentine's Day we had a Valentine box. The A class very delightfully entertained us. We were treated to sandwiches and cake.

In arithmetic we are adding and subtracting fractions. In geography we are studying Spain, Portugal and the Balkan countries. The Hygiene class brought food boxes to illustrate the need of pure food laws.

We have chosen new monitors and have instituted a system whereby we are marked in citizenship as well as general deportment.

Sixth Grade.

Our magazine, "Bits of This and That," was published this month. All the poems and stories were written by members of the class. Theda Bardwell planned and made the very attractive covers. We had so much fun making the magazine that we are looking forward to another publication.

"Stand Well," "Walk Well," "Sit Well" and "Hold Your Body Well" are some of the health mottoes that adorn our room. Leitch Marks is leading in the language card race. Leitch has passed his second test.

Home Economics.

The seventh grade class have been unusually slow and have spent three extra weeks completing their cooking uniforms. This week they have arranged their desks in the cooking laboratory, prepared oatmeal, and studied the Home and Family, the House, and have also done simple experiments in measurement and weights.

The ninth grade class is most ambitious. Some of the girls are making their third problem and many are doing beautiful work. They have studied various materials and are learning some of the tests helpful in purchasing materials and are also making a study of the various textile fibers and special reports.

The 11th and 12th grade—Hot lunches are still in progress but we hope to stop them soon. Some of the girls are making pajamas, smocks, and dresses, and all are doing the Dietetics work.

Lafayette National Park

LAFAYETTE National park is the first of all those broadly-varying and matchless areas of outstanding scenic attractiveness, which Uncle Sam has selected, set aside and maintains as national rest-and-play grounds for the benefit and enjoyment of his people, that lies east of the Mississippi.

It is unique among these national domains, in that it is the first having contact with the sea. It is, in fact, surrounded by the sea and its arms, on territory near which a daring French explorer planted his feet long before the Mayflower pulled up at Plymouth. If, as has been said, the coast of Maine is "An eloquent chapter in the continent's ancient history," then, Lafayette National park is "One of the most dramatic paragraphs in the chapter."

The park is located on Mount Desert island, which is celebrated for its picturesque beauty, the largest island in the archipelago east of Penobscott bay and the largest rock-built island on our Atlantic seaboard. It is indeed a superb grouping of natural topographic elements and features—mountains, cradling half-hidden lakes, hills and plains, cliffs and crags, bold and rocky coast line, majestic woodlands made up of various members of the tree tribe, underbrush of strange varieties, beautifully carpeted with a confusion of many-hued wild flowers, mottled by sunshine and shadow, all encompassed by blue-green salt water and overhung by a sky of shifting colors. "Of its own and in its own way," says the guide book, Lafayette National park is "an American masterpiece."

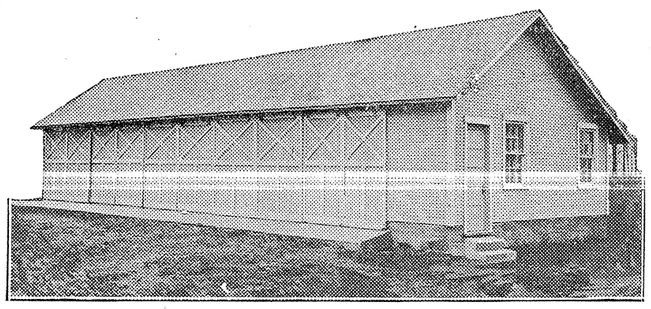
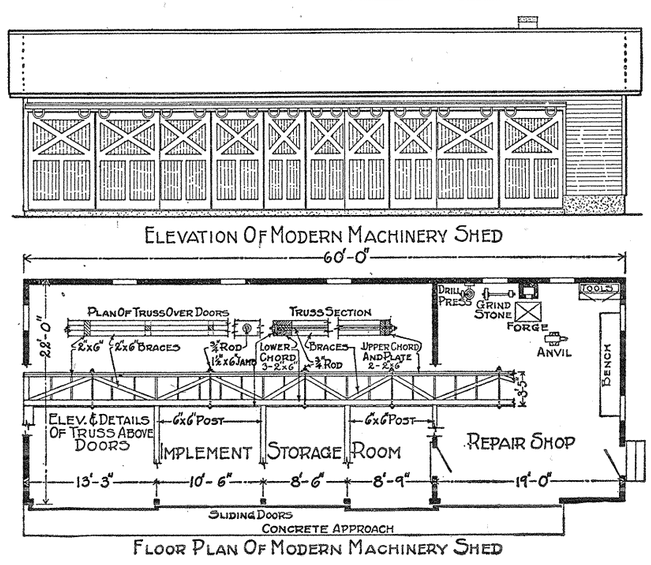
Modern Farm Machinery House and Repair Shop Good Investment



ELEVATION OF MODERN MACHINERY SHED



FLOOR PLAN OF MODERN MACHINERY SHED

By W. A. RADFORD

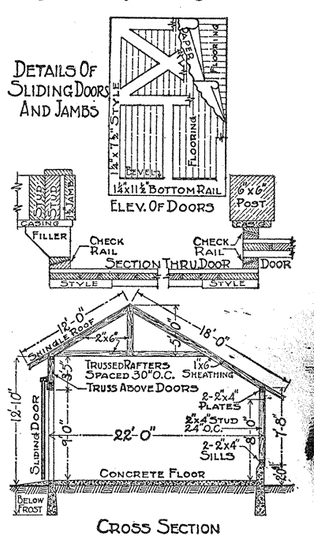
Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all problems pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on the subject. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 407 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

It often has been said that more farm machinery rusts out than wears out. In this day of power farming it is economy for every farmer to have a good weather-tight house for his machinery and the equipment that goes with it, and also a room where the more simple repairs can be made.

Shown in the illustration is an excellent design for a modern machinery shed and repair shop. This building is of good construction, but is not expensive. It is a simple two-gabled one-story farm building, stands on a concrete foundation and should have a concrete floor. However, many farmers do not go to the expense of laying concrete in the storage space, but a concrete floor is pretty much a necessity in the repair shop. The continuous sliding doors at the front of the building permit the storage of the larger of the modern farm machines without trouble. At the same time these doors close tightly, which keeps out weather and the birds which are a nuisance around machinery.

The building is 60 feet long and 22 feet wide. In connection with the floor plans are elevations and cross-sections together with a number of details which will enable farmers themselves or a local contractor to erect this building. The cross-section gives dimensions of the materials used, the thickness of the floor and the depth of the footings to get below the frost line.

The average investment in machinery on the modern farm runs into the thousands of dollars. It will readily be seen that if the depreciation on this machinery can be cut in half, the saving will soon pay for a building such as this. Then there is the added advantage of always having the machinery in condition for the work it is supposed to do. The time factor is becoming more and more recognized on farms. When the machinery is in "tip-top" condition ready for work, advantage can be taken at various seasons of favorable weather, whereas the delay of a day or so might make a tremendous difference in the farm income.



CROSS SECTION

Millwork for Home Is Factor in Its Beauty

In the construction of beautiful, substantially-built homes, much has been said about the good work of the plumber, the concrete maker, the roofer and the insulator, but little has been told concerning the millworker's important contribution, according to recent remarks made by general contractors.

It is said that public opinion seems to have taken for granted that frames, sashes, doors, interior trim, cabinet work, etc., can be easily manufactured by anyone regardless of skill. Builders state, however, if there were no skilled millworkers, the ugliness of most of the woodwork would cause a domestic drawback if not a severe backset.

Paper Does Not Take Place of Insulation

Good building paper should not be confused with insulation. While it has insulating value per inch it is more a resistant to air leakage than to heat flow. If one wants a warm house one can be sure that building paper will play its valuable part in its construction, but it does not take the place of insulation—it is rather an important addition.

Shellac Useful for Interior Trim Finish

Shellac, a spirit varnish, is useful for most interior trim finishing. Its proper uses are not generally understood as is evidenced by its frequent application where it actually causes damage. Again on surfaces where it should be employed, an unfair advantage is taken of certain of its virtues.

Loose Floor Boards

If floor boards are loose, evidently due to insufficient nailing, they may be face nailed. If it is done carefully, it will do very well.

Dining Alcove in Small Home Is Popular Now

Following the modern trend in construction, except in unusually large homes, the dining room, once called the most essential room in the house, is becoming more and more a non-essential.

Especially in the small house, the apartment and the bungalow of few rooms, the dining room is being replaced by the dining alcove, or breakfast room as it used to be called. The space once devoted to the dining room might easily be devoted to a library or sewing room combined.

The kitchen, that necessity in every home of whatever size, should be so placed that the smoke and odors from the cooking foods are carried away from the rest of the house. Thus it would in many cases be at the northern end of the place, where the prevailing winds in our climate at least would blow the aromas away from the other rooms.

The kitchen may very happily be designed toward the front of the house, especially if the house faces north, and there can be no possible objection to such a design. The service entrance may be at the side of the building, the drying room and the service yard being inclosed within a lattice wall, a stone wall or a high hedge.

Rough Stipple Finish Good for Plain Room

A rough stipple is an unusual wood treatment which would be suitable in a plain room and with furniture of a somewhat heavy or massive type. To obtain this finish a little plaster of paris is mixed with the final coat of paint which is applied in the usual way and stippled.

The roughness of the mixture causes little projections of the paint to remain in the finish. A glaze coating (which is usually wiped over) is sometimes spread over the rough coating.

Big Corporation Useful On Crime's Highway Worrying the Burglar Education and Money

The General Electric company has perfected a device to transport electric power over longer distances at less expense. The invention, called a "thyratro," is described as a modified vacuum tube, adapted to power transmission uses.

Some day science will "hook up" the world's great power stations of North America, Niagara, those in the Rocky mountains, on the Columbia river, Brazil, with other great stations in Africa and all over the world, as radio stations are now hooked up.

Then will come wireless transmission of power, so that airplanes will be able to "pick up power" at various points in their journey, instead of carrying tons of fuel.

The research work done by such institutions as General Electric, United States Steel, Westinghouse, Standard Oil, etc., will give back to the public in increased prosperity a hundred dollars for every one that those big corporations have ever received.

This country is traveling rapidly on the road that leads to thoroughly organized crime and complete contempt for law.

A United States grand jury reports that officials supposed to suppress the sale of drugs are organized on a "racket" basis, misrepresenting their activities to get more money from the government.

Some of them are alleged to be narcotic addicts. The charge is made that the big men in the business can "buy their way out," if they get in trouble.

In the seven months past criminals and others have purchased three times as many pistols as were sold altogether in the twelve months of 1928. A big demand for killing machinery.

Mr. Louis Pierson of New York's Irving Trust company delights in annoying burglars. He built, far underground, below his new fifty-story building, a safety vault lined with toughest steel, thick as the ancient walls of Jerusalem. It is the biggest vault in the world except those of our Reserve Bank and the Bank of England.

Now he surrounds his steel walls with a thick layer of water, so that the poor bank burglar, even if he did break through the heavy steel, would have to do his work in a diving suit, most awkward for handling dynamite and drills.

Henry Ford, planning to spend one hundred millions educating young people on his own lines, making them "fit into life," teaching every one a trade, wants no advice.

He is right. No one knows better than he how to prepare boys for useful work. But Mr. Ford spoke hastily when he said he wanted no advice on education from those that never earned or saved a dollar.

The world's greatest educators have not been money makers or savers. Aristotle, who taught Philip's son, Alexander, made no fortune for himself. Alexander, conqueror of the world, spent collecting specimens for Aristotle, greatest naturalist and philosopher of the world, more than the total fortune left him by King Philip.

Conrad Hubert, who changed his name from Horowitz, made many millions, left $6,000,000 to useful charities, left $1,000,000 to his brother.

The brother, who sticks to his old-fashioned name, Horowitz, has been a humble court interpreter and he says he will now devote his time to German opera and charity.

Why did the rich brother wait until he was dead to give a million dollars to his mother's other son?

Many of us forget the proverb often quoted by Nathan Straus:

"What you give in health is gold, what you give in sickness is silver, what you give after death is lead."

Automobile makers will spend $15,000,000 scrapping old cars to clear the way for new cars and moderate the second-hand car nuisance.

R. H. Grant, vice president of General Motors, one of the best salesmen in America, is chairman of the scrapping committee.

Perhaps Mr. Grant could find a way to ship those old cars, knocked down, to foreign countries—China, Africa, anywhere. Ten million old cars scattered over the earth would soon create an appetite for ten million new cars, just as the little car creates a demand for a larger car.

An expert says that in nine years, from the end of 1920 to the end of 1929, stocks were going up 66 per cent of the time, and going down 34 per cent.

The difficulty is to pick out the time when they are going up.

Two $50,000 speed boats, each carrying three Liberty motors, with 38 knots speed, will help hunt rum runners in New York waters.

Other fast boats, costing $250,000, will be put on the lakes to check rum running there.

FAMILY WAYS

Mr. and Mrs. Emu were calling on Mr. and Mrs. Ostrich one day when Mr. Ostrich began talking of the children.

The emu family look something like the ostrich family. They have very long legs but instead of beautiful feathers their bodies are covered with something which looks very much like gray hay.

Their necks, which are long, also have the same kind of hay covering.

"You see," said Mr. Ostrich, "we looked after our children together.

"In the daytime Mrs. Ostrich would sit on the eggs and at night I would tell her to rest and I would sit on them."

"Of course," said Mr. Emu, "it is something the way with us as it is with you.

"I help Mrs. Emu, but then I find she lets me take over all the work to do."

"To be sure," said Mrs. Emu, "and why not? I always say to myself:

"'If he's willing to work, it would be foolish of me to stop him.'

"Yes, that is what I always say."

"You certainly do," said Mr. Emu. "And you live up to your words, too."

"Don't you sit on your eggs during the day?" asked Mrs. Ostrich. "I like to have a hand in the hatching out of the eggs."

"How Grandly You Talk."

"I hardly call it having a hand in the hatching when you sit on the eggs, my love," said Mr. Ostrich, with a foolish smile. "And besides you haven't a hand."

"I know," said Mrs. Ostrich, "but it's something creatures say so I thought I would, too."

"You asked me a question," said Mrs. Emu. "Do you, or do you not, want to have it answered?

"From the way you are going on talking it would appear that you do not wish to be informed."

"How grandly you talk, Mrs. Emu," said Mrs. Ostrich. "To be sure I do wish to have my question answered."

"She talks grandly," said Mr. Emu, "because she can spend her time thinking of words and so forth.

"She does not have to work, nor even look after her children."

"Right, my dear," said Mrs. Emu, "but as I said before you always offer to help me, so I give right up to you."

"You give work right up to me," said Mr. Emu.

"It's this way," explained Mrs. Emu. "Mr. Emu finds me sitting on the eggs, and he always says:

"'Oh, can't I do that for you?'

"Now wouldn't it be extremely foolish for me to say that he could not.

"If he is so willing, I must be willing, too. Then I get used to being idle and doing nothing but wander about and I forget about Mr. Emu and the work, until I find he is looking after the children."

"I think you forget about me on purpose," said Mr. Emu, "but it makes no difference—for I do not mind hatching the eggs in the least."

"Do you hatch the eggs?" asked the ostrich.

"Yes," said Mr. Emu. "Mrs. Emu lays them. Then I hatch them out, and what is more I look after the children until they are able to care for themselves."

"Well, that is strange," said Mrs. Ostrich. "We like to divide the time."

"It simply means," said Mrs. Emu, "that you follow the ways of the ostrich family and we follow the ways of the emu family.

"We have different family ways—that's all."

The Success or Failure of an AUCTION SALE

Farm auctions are events in the lives of most farmers.

That is to say, most farmers hold but one auction, or two at the most.

When the time comes to hold an auction, they are banking everything—all their personal property—on the success of a ONE DAY SALE.

If they make mistakes that day, there is no chance to try it over again. That is why it is important to DO THINGS RIGHT. If they fail, it means a loss that cannot be recovered later.

Buyers do not go to auction sales by accident. They read about the sale a week in advance in the newspapers.

They not only learn the date and location of the sale—they read carefully what is offered for sale.

After looking the list over carefully, they decide whether the articles or livestock offered are what they want.

The auction sale advertiser who does not give a full and complete description of what he has for sale is CHEATING HIMSELF.

Bidders buy as cheaply as they can. If there is not a good number of bidders, it is generally because the man holding the sale has not properly advertised.

"Holstein Cow" may mean almost anything.

"Grade Holstein cow, 5 years old, extra heavy milker, to freshen November 15th," is definite. The prospective buyer who reads that knows what is offered, and there are dozens of men who want that kind of a cow—and they don't care a hoot about a mere "Holstein cow."

Here are a few suggestions for the farmer who is planning to hold an auction sale:

—Advertise your sale well. Let every prospective buyer in the community know "WHAT, WHEN and WHERE."

—Get a good auctioneer—the best is the cheapest for you.

—A day or two spent in arranging and cleaning up implements will help the crowd and the auctioneer. It is hard to tell what an implement is worth if it is covered with rust and mud.

—If an all day sale, have a hot lunch, especially if the weather is apt to be cold. Buyers are human, and they never bid well when they are cold and hungry.

—List your sale with this newspaper as soon as you set the date. There will be no delay in printing your bills.

—Remember that ADVERTISING IS NOT AN EXPENSE. It is an INVESTMENT. Buyers will not come to your sale unless they know about it. The Chronicle completely circulates this entire community as well as the surrounding territory. Let us help you get the bidders. Your property will not sell for what it is worth unless you have a crowd of BIDDERS!

JESUS TEACHING ABOUT HIMSELF

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 11:2-12:50.

GOLDEN TEXT—Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus the Friend of All.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Great Helper.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Who Jesus Was.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Our Lord's Testimony Concerning Himself.

I. How the Kingdom Was Received (ch. 11).

In showing the attitude of heart of the people, four classes of hearers are described.

1. The perplexed hearers, like John the Baptist (vv. 2-11).

John believed that Jesus was the Christ (v. 2), but was somewhat perplexed as to the manner of the establishment of the kingdom. The Baptist had in his preaching mainly emphasized the line of prophecy which made the King to be a mighty conqueror (Matt. 3:10-12). He said that the ax is laid unto the root of the tree and that there was to be a separation of the chaff from the wheat and a burning of the chaff. John saw Christ as the one who would remove the sins of the people by the shedding of His blood (John 1:29), but he failed to see the interval between the time of His suffering and the time of His triumph.

2. Violent hearers (vv. 12-19).

These were willing to receive the kingdom according to their own way, but were unwilling to conform to its laws. They seized it with violent hands. They would not repent when called upon to do so by John, nor rejoice to do so when called upon by Christ (vv. 17-19).

3. The stout-hearted unbelievers (vv. 20-24).

In Chorazin, Bethsaida and Capernaum, Christ had done most of His mighty works, but the people deliberately set their hearts against Him and His message. Tyre and Sidon were filled with immoral profligates and idolators, but they will be more tolerably dealt with in the Day of Judgment than will those who wilfully reject Jesus Christ.

4. Hearers who are babes in spirit (vv. 25-30).

There were some among the people who heard Jesus with childlike faith. They believed that Jesus was the Messiah and opened their hearts to receive Him.

II. The Antagonism to Jesus (ch. 12).

In chapter eleven we saw the shameful indifference of the Jews to their King. In this chapter we see the positive and bitter antagonism manifesting itself against Him. The immediate occasion of their wicked determination was Christ's relation to the Sabbath.

1. The Son of Man is Lord of the Sabbath (vv. 1-8).

The hungry disciples were plucking corn on the Sabbath. With this the Pharisees found fault. To their cavils Christ replied, and showed that God's purpose in instituting the Sabbath was to serve man's highest interests and to contribute to his happiness.

(1) He is greater than their greatest King, David (vv. 3, 4). (2) He is greater than their sacrifice and priesthood (v. 5). (3.) He is greater than the temple (v. 6). The temple, with its gorgeous rites and ceremonies, was but typical of Himself. (4) He is greater than the Sabbath (v. 9), for He is the very Lord of the Sabbath.

2. Healing the withered hand (vv. 9-14).

In order that they might accuse Him, they asked, "Is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath days?" Jesus' reply was both a question and a declaration.

3. The unpardonable sin (vv. 22-32).

The occasion of their blasphemy against the Holy Ghost was the casting out of the demon. In this act, Christ displayed His power to cast out demons. The effect of this miracle was twofold: (1) Upon the multitude. They were amazed, and cried out, "Is not this the son of David?" (2) Upon the Pharisees. When they heard what the people were saying, their anger and satanic malice were aroused. They said He was casting out demons by the prince of the demons. With unanswerable logic, He met their accusations and demanded decision. He charged home upon them their awful guilt. They had attributed the work of the Holy Spirit to the devil. This Christ calls the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, for which there is no pardon.

The Last Step Wins

It is the last step that wins, and there is no place in the pilgrim's progress where so many dangers lurk as the region that lies hard by the portals of the celestial city. It is when heaven's heights are full in view that hell's gate is most persistent and full of deadly peril.—A. B. Simpson.

Stability and Sincerity

Stability and sincerity go together. A true Christian will hasten from wrong.—John Timothy Stone.

DELICIOUS MEALS FOR YOUNGSTERS

Children Better Off if Served Before Rest of Family.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In some homes it is the custom for the children to come to all the regular family meals, no matter how young they are. In others, children are given their meals at their own little table, either before the family eats or at the same time. The plan adopted must largely be determined by circumstances, and it need not be the same for all meals. Whichever way is easiest for the mother and best for the children should be chosen. In homes where the evening meal must be late or the noon meal hurried, the children will be better off if served earlier than the rest of the family. When children eat apart from adults there are fewer distractions and usually no questions to be answered about differences between their food and that of the grownups. If questions arise at the family table let the children know that they do not eat the same dishes that grownups eat just as they do not wear the same kind of clothes.

Children are observant, and will imitate what they see adults doing. Choosiness in foods is often the result of imitation. Father, mother, big sister and the rest share alike in their responsibility to set the example of enjoying carrots, spinach, or whatever the menu offers. The fewer the reminders to eat and the better the example set, the greater the result with observant children.

The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture makes the suggestion that if the china, glass, and eating tools belong to the child personally and are always set out for him, much will be added to the interest of the meal. Have the china gay in pattern, and everything of good shape and weight for little hands to hold. A child's own table and chair will prove more comfortable, usually, than a high chair at the family table.

Bibs may be attractive in color and easy to put on. There may be a tray or an oil cloth doily at the child's place. The table, if possible, should be in a sunshiny room, the food should be good to look at as well as good to eat, and the mother should be calm and unhurried, ready for happy comradeship. The joy of accomplishment is so absorbing that the child who feeds himself seldom becomes a problem at meal time. A beginning can be made as young at 15 months, and with a little patience on the mother's part, over spilled food, and sensible protection of the clothing, the table and floor, the day of independence will soon be reached.

Fruit Juices in Roasts

One way of disposing of left-over fruit juices is in roasts of various kinds. Ham, beef or lamb roasts are much improved when this extra tart flavor is added in the cooking. Unsweetened apple, plum or grape juice adds a pleasing flavor, giving a taste that is different.

AMBER MARMALADE QUITE DELICIOUS

Needed Materials on Hand in Almost Every Home.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

An orange, a grapefruit, a lemon, sugar—materials that are on hand in almost every household throughout the winter months, or easily obtainable for making marmalade. It seems hardly credible that from these three fruits one can make from 12 to 14 glasses of delicious preserves—about five pints.

Twenty-five years ago people used to call this product "three-day marmalade" because it was thought necessary to parboil the peel on three separate days. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture has found, however, that just as good marmalade can be made when the successive boilings are done immediately after each other. The purpose of parboiling the peel is to remove any strong flavor and make it tender. The water is discarded after each boiling. Here is the recipe in full.

1 orange, weighing about 7 ounces	1 lemon, weighing about 3 ounces
1 grapefruit, weighing about 1 lb.	Sugar

Select especially tender, clean, yellow, smooth, thick-skinned fruit free from all blemishes. Fruit with thin, tough peel is not so satisfactory for making marmalade because such peel is likely to become still tougher after cooking with sugar and acid.

Remove the peel and slice it very thin. Parboil the sliced peel three times in the following way: Add 1 quart of cold water, bring to the boil, cook for 5 minutes, and discard the water after each cooking.

Cut the fruit pulp into thin slices, removing seeds and "rag." Combine this sliced pulp with the drained parboiled skins. To each weight or measure of this mixed fruit pulp and parboiled skins, add three times the weight or measure of water and boil rapidly for 40 minutes. Again measure the fruit mixture and to it add an equal weight or measure of sugar. Boil this mixture rapidly for 25 minutes longer or until the jelly stage is reached. If a thick marmalade is desired boil longer, but watch it carefully lest it stick and scorch as it cooks down. Let the marmalade stand overnight in the kettle. In the morning reheat and put it into scalded jelly glasses. If put into the glasses immediately after the first cooking, the sliced peal is likely to rise to the top, leaving the clear jelly at the bottom. When cold, cover with paraffin and store in a cool, dry place.

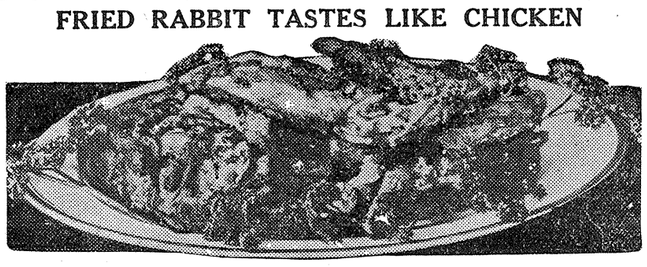
Chocolate-Coated Apples Wholesome Confection

Here's truly wholesome confection that is easily made with materials to be had almost anywhere. Be sure to use firm-fleshed, tart apples for good results. The recipe was originated by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture.

1 cup sugar	¼ tsp. salt
1 cup honey	3 tart well-flavored apples
½ cup water

Prepare a sirup of the sugar, honey, water and salt by boiling for 2 or 3 minutes. Wash, core and pare the apples, cut into half-moon shaped pieces about half an inch thick, drop into the sirup, and cook rapidly until the apples are transparent and practically all the sirup has been absorbed. Lift onto waxed paper to dry. Cut up into small pieces some of the cake chocolate made especially for dipping candies. Put into a shallow dish over hot water to melt slightly, and stir with the fingers until the whole mass has melted. Dip the pieces of apple into the melted chocolate until well coated and place on waxed paper to dry, which requires only a short time when this method of coating is used. Pack the apple candies in layers between sheets of waxed paper.

FRIED RABBIT TASTES LIKE CHICKEN



Young Domestic Rabbits Deliciously Cooked.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Was it chicken, or was it rabbit? The guests will have a hard time telling, until they examine the shape of the pieces. Your domestic rabbits, cooked in any of the ways young chickens are cooked, are very delicious. They may be eaten throughout the year, as they are not subject to the "open" and "closed" seasons. Domestic rabbits are raised in hutches, under sanitary, clean conditions, and fed rolled cereals, alfalfa hay, and leafy vegetables. The nature of their food makes the meat sweet, tender and excellently flavored.

Just as with poultry or with various cuts of meat, young tender rabbits may be fried or baked, while the older ones require longer, slow cooking. The bureau of home economics has co-operated with the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture in trying different methods of cooking domestic rabbits, and has evolved a number of excellent recipes. Here is one for fried rabbit:

Fried Rabbit.

1 egg	1 young domestic rabbit
½ cup milk	Fat
¼ tsp. salt
½ cup flour

Beat the egg, add the milk and the salt, and stir into the flour to form a smooth batter. Wipe the rabbit with a clean damp cloth and cut into pieces of the right size for serving. Dip each piece of rabbit into this batter and be sure that it is thoroughly coated. In an iron skillet heat well-flavored fat until it is hot enough to set the batter quickly. Brown the pieces of rabbit evenly, then reduce the heat, and cook at a lower temperature for 25 or 30 minutes, or until tender.

To each cup of gravy desired use 2 tablespoonfuls of the fat in which the rabbit was cooked and 1½ tablespoonfuls of flour. Blend thoroughly, add 1 cupful milk. Cook until thickened. Add 1 tablespoonful of chopped parsley, ½ teaspoonful salt, and a dash of pepper. Serve around the rabbit or in a separate dish.

Rapids. "I was bothered for years with rheumatism. I am a night watchman, and my work requires me to be on my feet a great deal of the time. This rheumatism in my feet and legs made it very hard for me to do my work, as at times I could hardly get about. I also had stomach and kidney troubles; could not eat without being in agony afterward; and my rest was broken by frequent bladder actions.

"But now I have taken five bottles of Konjola and my aches and pains are all gone. My appetite is better and I can eat almost anything I want. Kidney trouble no longer bothers me. I feel like a different man."

WHAT THE SEA GULL LEARNED

The tide had turned. Sparkling in the sun and playfully making white caps, the waves were coming up the sloping shore. There was little wind and the waves were very small indeed. They ran up the beach and then they ran back and every time, although you would not notice it unless you watched very carefully, they went up a tiny bit farther and did not go back quite so far.

Some children had been playing on the beach that morning and before they went home to lunch they had heaped up a big pile of sand. When the waves saw this ahead of them they felt discouraged. It did not seem as if they could ever get around or over so huge a sand heap. But they knew it was their duty to keep trying, so up the beach they ran, and back, and up again, over and over.

A sea-gull flew by, close over the tops of the waves. He was a young gull and not very wise so when he saw the tiny waves lapping at the base of the pile of sand he laughed and said, "Foolish little waves, you had better give up trying to climb that mountain."

But the waves paid no attention to this advice. Over and over they made their runs up and down the beach and if you had been watching you would have seen slowly, but surely, the big sand heap disappearing.

An hour or so later the young sea-gull flew by that way again. He thought he would see if the foolish waves had given up trying to climb the mountain that was far too high for them to ever think of getting over. But when he reached that part of the beach he was so surprised that he almost forgot to flap his wings.

There was no mountain there! The sea-gull looked all around. Had he made a mistake in the place? No, he knew well that sheltered bit of shore just south of the big ledge of white rocks. There was no mistake, the mountain had gone. The waves had climbed right over it and covered it up!

"Well," said the young sea-gull to himself, "that just goes to show what keeping at a thing will do. Surely I'm as smart as a wave. After this I'm not going to give up trying to do a thing just because it seems hard." And before he flew off he dipped down close to the tops of the tiny waves and told them how sorry he was that he had called them foolish.

And the waves sparkled in the sun and murmured to each other as they ran gently up and down the sloping shore.

THE PAPER BAG FAMILY

When paper bags come into your house, they spell fun. Draw a face on one, stand it up and watch Sonny Sackin smile at you. Cut a width up on each side, twist and there are arms. Stuff cotton in the top for a head and a draw string round it, slit the lower half in the middle and twist for legs! The right sized sack will make a splendid house with doors and windows cut out. Another bag, lain on its side the long way, face made on the end, slits made in bottom edge and twisted for four legs, and at the other end for tail, makes the family pet. See, the pictures show you how!

CHANGED MIND QUICKLY.

Three men were arrested for carrying rifles in deer territory during the closed season. They were fined $25 each with an alternative of spending 20 days in jail. Two of the men paid fines. The third refused to pay with the remark that he would "stick the county for 20 days' free board."

At the jail he discovered that he was to be placed in a cell with a man who showed decided signs of insanity.

"How long is that fellow going to be my room-mate?" he asked the janitor.

"Don't know," was the answer.

"Get me a blank check. I'll pay the fine."

POOR RABBIT GETS NO MORE VACATION

Poor old Brer Rabbit, after playing around in the story books all these centuries, now finds himself haled out of the tortoise race into the economic race where he will be a subject for investigation at a special school to be conducted at Michigan State College, March 10 to 14.

Professors and laymen will conduct classes during five days, and people who are already growing rabbits for sale or who are interested in the financial possibilities of the business are invited to enroll in the course.

The first rabbit show to be sponsored by the college will be held during the last four days of the school. This will give prospective breeders an opportunity to see all the types of rabbits which are now popular.

The class work will include study of feeding methods, disease control, marketing, and judging. Judge John C. Fehr, Indianapolis, Ind.; Dr. E. G. Baxter, Webster, N. Y.; Prof. F. M. Langworthy, Albion; and prominent breeders in the state will act as instructors for the classes.

The school is being conducted by members of the poultry department at State College, and members of the department state that there is a rapidly growing public interest in the business of growing rabbits for fur and meat.

GRAIN MAKES FINE MEDICINE FOR EWE

A grain mixture of equal parts of bran and whole oats is excellent medicine for the ewe flock, and the addition of either barley or corn to the mixture makes the remedy even more effective for thin ewes, according to animal husbandry specialists at Michigan State College.

The grain mixture is especially important the month before lambing. Ewes which have been carried through the winter on leguminous hay and which are in fairly good flesh will pay well for the grain mixture at that time.

Bran has a value as a source of phosphorous and as a conditioner in addition to its normal food value. The grain mixture should be fed at the rate of one-half to one pound a day.

Legume hay has a special value as roughage for the ewes. If other forage is given to the flock, at least a pound and one-half of clover or alfalfa should be fed to enable the ewes to contain the proteins and vitamins needed by them.

Roots or silage may be fed in amounts up to three pounds a day per animal, but two pounds is recommended as a safe limit. Even though the silage may contain considerable corn, the grain mixture should not be omitted from the ewe's ration.

Ewes which are in good condition and which get plenty of exercise should produce healthy lambs that gain weight steadily until they are old enough to eat finely crushed grain or leafy hay.

LONDON CONFERENCE FACES GRAVE CRISIS

too low for us.' This policy of reduction has had and continues to have the overwhelming endorsement and support of the American people. We protest against any possibility that this policy of reduction may be abandoned.

"Third, as a fundamental basis for the reduction of armaments, we urge the importance of taking steps at the London conference to utilize the principle of joint conference in the case of disputes which otherwise might lead to war.

"Fourth, we pledge to the President and American delegation our active and continued support for the conclusion of such agreements as embody the principles of reduction and conference, and at the same time, meet the justly aroused expectations of the entire world. We cannot impress too strongly upon the American delegation the calamitous effect which the failure of the London conference to achieve those principles would have upon American opinion."

HAPPENINGS IN THE NEIGHBORING TOWNS

Concluded from first page.

The north wing of the macaroni plant of The Huron Milling Company at Harbor Beach has been torn down during the past week. The building was erected about 35 years ago and up until about five years ago was a part of the company's macaroni plant, at which time the local company ceased the manufacture of that food product. It has not been used since then and was somewhat of a fire hazard.—Times.

The stories printed in the last two issues of the Banner about little Berneda Mae Downey and Anita Mae Welch and their many grandparents brings forth the information that Carl Leroy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Smith of Pontiac, also boasts a long list of living ancestors, 11 to be exact. And the unusual part about this case is that there are two great-great grandmothers among the group, which comprises besides, two grandmothers, two grandfathers, three great-grandmothers and two great-grandfathers. They are: Grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Smith of Columbiaville and Mr. and Mrs. John Riley of Brown City; great-grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Smith of Flint; Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Riley of Brown City and Mrs. Milligan of Pontiac; great-great grandmothers, Mrs. Milligan of Detroit and Mrs. Henry Marion of Brown City. Carl Leroy's mother was formerly Bernice Riley of Brown City.—Brown City Banner.

A judgment of $4,126 was given Friday in favor of William F. Tomlinson, Port Huron contractor, in his suit against the Harbor Beach Community House Corporation. Judge Boomhower's decision gave Tomlinson about a third of the amount asked in the suit heard two weeks ago. Tomlinson held a contract for $74,000 to construct the Harbor Beach community house. The structure was completed in July, 1927. His suit was to collect $12,000 for extras which were not provided for in the contract. The corporation filed a counter claim of $2,200 for work which it was claimed the contractor did not complete.

Mrs. Warren MacIntyre, a teacher at the Longfellow school in Saginaw, was badly burned Saturday morning when gasoline she was using to clean clothing exploded. While the burns on her arms, legs, face and head are painful, the physician who attended her at her home in Bay Port, said they are not serious. The force of the explosion, believed to have been caused by friction, shattered several windows in the home, damaged the interior and caused a bulge of about six inches in the ceiling. Fire also started, but was extinguished by neighbors before gaining headway. Mrs. MacIntyre had returned from Saginaw to spend the week-end at her home at Bay Port.

A plan to convert an old building at Sandusky into the needed addition to the school, has not met with the approval of the state inspector of schools. Word received from the state department after the matter had been looked into, discouraged the idea for various reasons, one being that the lot, on which the building is located, is so small that children would have no place to play.

I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth. He will not suffer my foot to be moved: He that keepeth thee will not slumber. Behold, He that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep.

The Lord is thy keeper: the Lord is thy shade upon thy right hand. The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night. The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil: he shall preserve thy soul. The Lord shall preserve thy going out and thy coming in from this time forth, and even for evermore.—Psalm 121.

Art of Giving

He who gives things only gives little. The real part of any present is the imaginative sympathy through which one has understood and responded to a desire in some other human being and has put something of oneself into the choice of that which will gratify this desire.—Woman's Home Companion.

The American Parthenon

THE Parthenon was "The crown of the glory that was Greece." This temple which bordered on the Acropolis at Athens, was dedicated to Pallas Athena, the goddess of wisdom, more than 400 years B. C., and was used throughout the centuries of its existence as a temple of worship. The pagans occupied it for about one thousand years and the Christians for about another ten centuries. The Christians were routed by the Turks and the ancient structure became a mosque. In 1687 the Turks were overthrown by the Venetians and the building was ruined.

In Centennial park at Nashville, Tenn., on the banks of the Cumberland, stands a faithful reproduction, both as to form as well as to size, of that masterpiece of Greek architecture. First constructed as an attraction of the Tennessee centennial exposition in 1897, it was later rebuilt as an unusual and permanent attraction of the Tennessee capital.

The charm of this beautiful building springs from the refinement of its outline and the well-balanced effect of its proportions, these characteristics blending in a dignity and grace, which have made it famous as the most perfectly proportioned structure the Greeks ever built. It is 101 feet wide, 228 feet long, 65 feet high and is encircled by a row of 50 giant, fluted columns, each 34 feet high and 6½ feet through at the base, which are easily the most attention-attracting feature of the entire ensemble.

Ancient Greek Symbols

Ancient Greece had no national flag, since it was divided into many separate kingdoms. The standard of Attica bore a white war horse; that of the Corinthians the winged horse; the Lacedemonians the letter L; that of the Thracians a death head; that of the Thessalonians the immortal sorrel horse, Xanthes; that of the Messemians the letter M

Windows Important

The value of windows to a building from esthetic and utilitarian aspects can scarcely be overemphasized. Windows have a profound spiritual function to perform in that they not only express the spirit of the building but also bring in the great out-of-doors.

LAPEER GETS MUSIC CONTESTS

Lapeer will again, as it was two years ago, be invaded by over 1,000 high school musicians who are to take part in the district music contests the first part of April. The exact date has not been set as yet, announces E. E. Irwin, chairman of the district and superintendent of the Lapeer schools.

This area, known as District E of the Michigan State Music Contests, includes the counties of Huron, Tuscola, Sanilac, St. Clair and Lapeer. Other similar contests are to be held at Kalamazoo, Mt. Pleasant, Ypsilanti, Houghton and Traverse City. The state finals are to be held at Ann Arbor, May 2-3. The National Contest is to be held at Flint, Mich., and Lincoln, Nebr., on May 15-16-17. The bands will compete at Flint and the orchestras at Lincoln.

Contests will include bands, orchestras, boys and girls glee clubs, mixed choruses, string ensembles, brass ensembles, wood wind ensembles and sight reading for bands.

The District E contest was held at Cass City last year. Lapeer held it two years ago. All the Michigan contests are under the direction and supervision of Miss Ada Biking, state director of music.
