The SONG of the WINDMILL by A. J. DUNLAP. The sun-blistered windmill towered over the tank, where green mosses grew and the thirsty herd drank. It caught in the wheel that spun round on its tower. The might of the swift winds and harnessed their power. At night when the old mill had pumped all day long, it sang in the moonlight and starlight this song: 'I'm always in tune with the swift winds that blow, to harness their power for the old world below. The power that I catch is the wind's, not mine; and back of the wind is the mighty Divine. When all of the world is in tune with the power, that whispers and sings to me here in my tower, then cannons will moulder and crumble to dust, and swords will decay in their scabbards with rust, and over them all, cottage, hovel and throne, a peace will abide, the old world has not known.'

TAKE IT FROM DAD

By Frank H. Cheley

Is College Worth the Price?

"Dad, we had another hot argument around the lunch table. Think we better organize a debating society. Why there simply isn't anything upon which many people agree, is there? Why, it never occurred to me in the world but what every fellow that wanted to get anywhere would go to college but there was a third of that gang today who said, 'Nothing doing, it simply does not pay.' That's their stand."

"That's right," commented Mr. Smith without looking up from his paper. "College is not for all boys. It depends upon the boy and what he is going to do. Many a boy wastes four years in college and a deal of his father's money to absolutely no avail. He would have been a heap more self-respecting and happier, too, if he had gone to work instead of to college."

"Humph, that doesn't sound much like the line you peddled me when I wanted to quit school and go to work."

"Yes, but you're a mere kid. Every boy in the land should have a high school education. If it has been the right kind and he has tended to his knitting he ought to be able to make a good living for himself whether he goes on to college or not—that's a minimum necessary to get on in our ever more complicated modern society. From that point on it's a matter of—"

"Whether college is worth the price?"

"Exactly, my boy, provided you do not insist upon interpreting entirely in terms of money for there are other prices involved. If education is anything it is an investment. An investment of four prime years of life, plus a cash outlay of some four thousand dollars, plus a tremendous amount of nervous and mental energy. All of these items are a young chap's stock in trade—his capital. If his investment is going to bring returns in technical or professional training which will in turn, open larger opportunities for self-realization as well as income, then a thoughtful boy is justified in attempting the investment."

"Every boy, whether or no, with the exception of the few ultra rich who do not count anyway, must sometime come to stand on his own feet; fight his own way and be an independent individual. Usually at best that involves a certain amount of experimenting—trial and error. Then too, Bob, without casting any aspersions upon anyone, we are forced to recognize that some men have a much greater ability and aptitude to study and research than others. Many men are motor minded and exceedingly practical. They must be doing things instead of thinking things, to be happy."

"Bob, it is largely a matter of individual temperament, circumstance and attitude. I firmly believe in higher education. I just as firmly believe that a large number of the nearly half million boys in colleges are largely wasting their time at a very large expense and emerge handicapped the rest of their lives with expensive tastes and habits with no conception at all of work and with a very late start in the big battle of life."

"Turn a minute to your Ready Reference there again, Bob. Look under education. See if it doesn't give you some facts and figures to think about?"

"Education—Costs of—Advantages of—DOES AN EDUCATION PAY? Aha, here we are, let's see—"

"DOES AN EDUCATION PAY? Does it pay to fit one's self for a superior position? Does it pay to get a glimpse of the joy of living? Does it pay for a chrysalis to unfold into a butterfly? Does it pay to learn to make life a glory instead of a grind? Does it pay to open a little wider the door of narrow life? Does it pay to know how to take the dry, dreary drudgery out of life? Does it pay to taste the exhilaration of feeling one's powers unfold? Does it pay to push one's horizon farther out, in order to get a wider outlook, a clearer vision? Does it pay to learn how to center thought with power, how to marshal one's mental force effectively? Does it pay to acquire a character-wealth, a soul-property, which no disaster or misfortune can wreck or ruin? Does it pay to have expert advice and training, to have high ideals held up to one in the most critical years of life? Does it pay to make life-long friendships with bright, ambitious young people, many of whom will occupy high places later on? Does it pay to become an enlightened citizen, able to see through the sophistries of political claptrap and note intelligently on public matters? Does it pay to change a bar of rough iron into halrsprings for watches, thus increasing its worth to more than fifty times the value of its weight in gold? Does it pay to experience the joy of self-discovery, to open up whole continents of possibilities in one's nature which might otherwise remain undiscovered?"

Bob closed the book with a slam. "Anyhow, Dad, I'm going to college 'cause I'm going to make it pay."

"I believe you will, son—I hope so." (© 1930, Western Newspaper Union.)

"I learned from a neighbor, Mr. Harry Preipski, that Konjola was all that was claimed for it and it had helped many of his fellow workers at

Auction Sale Season at Hand

Farm auctions are events in the lives of most farmers.

That is to say, most farmers hold but one auction, or two at the most.

When the time comes to hold an auction, they are banking everything—all their personal property—on the success of a ONE DAY SALE.

If they make a mistake that day, there is no chance to try it over again. That is why it is important to do things right. If they fail, it means a loss that cannot be recovered later.

Buyers do not go to auction sales by accident. They read about the sale a week in advance in the newspapers.

They not only learn the date and location of the sale—they read carefully what is offered for sale.

After looking the list over carefully, they decide whether the articles or livestock offered are what they want.

The auction sale advertiser who does not give a full and complete description of what he has for sale is CHEATING HIMSELF.

Bidders buy as cheaply as they can. If there is not a good number of bidders, it is generally because the man holding the sale has not properly advertised.

"Holstein Cow" may mean almost anything.

"Grade Holstein cow, 5 years old, extra heavy milker, to freshen November 15th," is definite. The prospective buyer who reads that knows what is offered, and there are dozens of men who want that kind of a cow—and they don't care a hoot about a mere "Holstein cow."

Here are a few suggestions for the farmer who is planning to hold an auction sale:

- Advertise your sale well. Let every prospective buyer in the community know "WHAT, WHEN and WHERE."
- Get a good auctioneer—the best is the cheapest for you.
- A day or two spent in arranging and cleaning up implements will help the crowd and the auctioneer. It is hard to tell what an implement is worth if it is covered with rust and mud.
- If an all day sale, have a hot lunch, especially if the weather is apt to be cold. Buyers are human, and they never bid well when they are cold and hungry.
- List your sale with this newspaper as soon as you set the date. There will be no delay in printing your bills.
- Remember that ADVERTISING IS NOT AN EXPENSE. It is an INVESTMENT. Buyers will not come to your sale unless they know about it. The Chronicle circulates in this entire community as well as the surrounding territory. Let us help you get the bidders. Your property will not sell for what it is worth unless you have a crowd of BIDDERS.

SILAGE FOR BABY BEEF FEED FAILS

Not Profitable Where Yield of Corn Is Low.

Corn silage is not a profitable feed for fattening baby beef calves under northwestern Minnesota conditions, according to the trials conducted at the northwest experiment station of the University of Minnesota at Crookston. The reason given is the low yield of corn silage obtainable in the northern part of the state, for it has been demonstrated that silage feeding is profitable in the corn belt where yields are normally high.

Calves fed a ration of ground barley, linseed oil meal and alfalfa hay made greater daily gains as well as cheaper gains, and were valued at 15 cents per hundredweight higher than calves fed the same ration plus corn silage. The feeding period was 106 days, lasting from November 27 to June 11. All of the calves were purchased at the same price. The margin per head over feed cost for the calves fed silage was $22.37, while for those fed the same ration without silage it was $27.71.

In these same trials, but with different lots of calves, it was learned that ground barley alone is more efficient than a mixture of ground barley and ground oats. It was also shown that feeding ground oats during the first half of the fattening period and ground barley the last half is not as satisfactory as feeding ground barley throughout.

It was concluded that the advisability of adding ground oats to a ration of ground barley, linseed oil meal, alfalfa hay and corn silage would depend upon the relative prices of oats and barley. At the values used in this trial, 38 cents for oats and 52 cents for barley, the addition of oats did not prove profitable.

Vaccination Tests at

Experiment Stations

Vaccination tests at Ames, Kansas, and other experiment stations, indicate that pigs even a few days old can be immunized against cholera in a high percentage of cases and with pigs approaching weaning (seven to nine weeks old) immunity is as certain as with old hogs.

The explanation offered by careful observers of this apparent variation between experiments and practice generally hinges on this fact: Pigs up to six or eight weeks of age have tender, pliable skin and soft flesh. With ordinary vaccinating practice, where rapid handling and treatment is commonly the rule, it is probable that among certain individual pigs there is more or less leakage of serum from the hole through which it was injected. If this is true, it does offer a reasonable and plausible explanation why vaccination is uncertain with young pigs. This fault or error should not apply to pigs eight weeks old or older especially when the job is carefully done—with speed not the dominating thought while the job is being done. It appears to be sound policy to vaccinate pigs when the younger ones reach two months of age.

Clover in Stubble Is

Cleanest Hog Pasture

Clover in wheat and oat stubble is usually the cleanest pasture on the farm. This is a good place to put your pigs. The sanitation program is spoiled if big spring shotes, fattening hogs, or old sows are turned into the stubble fields after threshing.

At this time of year sanitation is very necessary. Tests of Dr. H. B. Raffensperger have shown that worm eggs incubate rapidly during warm weather. Eggs dropped now from wormy spring shotes or old hogs may ruin next fall's pigs. A few fall sanitation pigs on stubble fields, if the plan is rigidly adhered to, will not endanger the spring pigs materially.

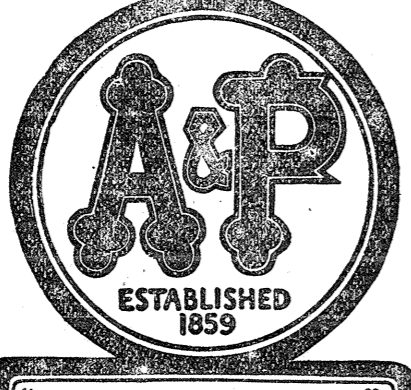

Use of Soy Beans Not

Favored for Hard Pork

One of the feeds which is receiving attention is soy beans and unquestionably they furnish a very high protein supplementary feed. Recently, however, the packer has been putting in his "two cents' worth," regarding soy beans and his song doesn't sing quite as well as some of us would like to have it. The packer states that the flesh of swine fed soy beans as a protein supplement is inclined to be soft and that not only the meat cannot be cured right, but that the lard will not harden as will the carcass of the animal that has not been fed soy beans.

Grain for Lambs

Lambs which have not been marketed should be given some grain after they are weaned in order to get them into good condition for market. The best plan is to provide grain in a creep for the lambs before they are weaned, and then they will be accustomed to eating grain. Lambs handled under this plan will make better gains even though they are on good pasture. The plan avoids a setback at weaning time, and the lambs may be marketed earlier.

SPEAKERS SAY STATE HAS ENVIABLE PLACE

Campaign Against Bovine Tuberculosis Puts Mich. First among Dairy Sections.

Dr. D. C. Lochead, Rochester, Minn., one of the speakers at the Achievement Day banquet held at Michigan State College September 19 to celebrate the victory over bovine tuberculosis in this state said that the findings of the Mayo clinic show a marked reduction in the number of cases of human beings affected with tuberculosis of the bovine type.

Dr. John R. Mehler, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, who has had the responsibility of directing the warfare against animal diseases in this country, congratulated Michigan on its success in combating bovine tuberculosis and urged that the state take an equally prominent position in controlling other livestock diseases.

H. R. Smith, Chicago livestock commissioner, acted as toastmaster at the banquet and pointed out that it was fitting that the first great dairy state to conquer bovine tuberculosis should hold its achievement banquet at the first agricultural college to be established.

Happenings in the Neighboring Towns

Any stinting of the dairy cow's ration because feeds are high priced will prove to be a poor economic practice, according to members of the dairy department of Michigan State College.

The dairy specialists anticipate that the shortage of hay in Michigan will cause some dairymen to hesitate about buying this roughage for cows, and the members of department point out that a reduction of the ration may result in injury to the cow.

WIDE ACTIVITIES CLOSED BY DEFEAT

Concluded from first page. Which prohibition agents were put under civil service. Rep. Grant M. Hudson of Lansing, also defeated, sponsored numerous proposals which proved a boomerang in this year of wet reaction.

Hudson led the fight and introduced the bill for the combining of prohibition, customs, narcotics, immigration and agricultural inspectors into the border patrol.

Cramton's prohibition activities in recent years have been confined mostly to speeches in the House advocating or defending the dry cause. In every instance his actions met with entire approval of the Anti-Saloon League. It was as chairman of the sub-committee on Interior Department appropriations, handling the largest single appropriation bill of the government, however, that he gained his reputation.

In this post he did much for the national park system of the country. He was the author of the bill to create a national highway on both sides of the Potomac River to Mount Vernon on the south and north to Great Falls. He fathered another bill for greatly extending the park system of Washington into Maryland and for creation of the colonial parks embracing the first settlements at Jamestown, Va., the old capital at Williamsburg, and Yorktown, the scene of Gen. Cornwallis' surrender.

For a number of years Cramton carried on a running dispute with the Indian Defense League and other altruistic organizations about appropriations for feed for the Indian children on reservation. He was charged with favoring a per diem allowance insufficient for a balanced diet. After the appropriation for this purpose had been deadlocked between House and Senate for weeks, Cramton finally yielded to the higher amount which has been advocated by President Hoover.

Cramton was accused by governmental ownership proponents of having favored the so-called "power trust" in the awarding of a contract for development of a power site on an Indian reservation in Montana. It was affairs such as this which took Cramton's attentions from keeping his political fences in repair in his own district.

DAIRY COWS NEED GOOD LEGUME HAY

The average dairy cow will need from one to one and one-half tons of legume hay per year and the substitution of straw, marsh hay, or timothy hay will not prove to be a profitable dairy practice, the college experts say.

men say. They also point out that the higher price for hay this year will increase the cost of feeding each cow approximately ten dollars.
