We are also making Eskimo posters.

The Kindergarten and first grade are very busy working on the band selections for the art exhibit, Wednesday, January 21. Our mothers are busy making the band suits of maroon and gray.

Second Grade.

"We like our new 'Stone Silent Readers," say Class One. "But you don't enjoy them more than we do 'Good Times on the Farm,'" said Class Two. A new stock of groceries have arrived from various houses. Our shelves are quickly being filled to start business.

Third Grade.

The A class in Arithmetic is studying division. For Nature Study we are studying the winter birds.

This week we are going to have the first of a series of five spelling matches. The losing team is going to treat |Sunday. the winning team to a party.

Fourth Grade.

The cold weather has a very bad effect upon the attendance in our room. We wish the parents would make a special effort to have the children here each day.

We have a new spelling chart and we are very anxious to have gold stars after our names. We get a gold star for perfect work in spelling for a week.

Marie Smithson is absent from school on account of chicken-pox. The "A" class is reading in the Young and Field Literary Readers. This week we are enjoying stories from American History.

These cold days prompted us to study the poem, "The Frost Spirit," by John Greenleaf Whittier.

Fifth Grade.

In Geography we have been traveling among the Alps and Pyrenees. Now we are visiting Italy. We hope to leave Italy this week and continue eastward.

Sixth Grade.

We have a new set of books in our room. They are for all grades. The books are a set of "Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia." They are beautifully illustrated and tell us many things.

In Geography we are studying the western states of United States. We made 'some very nice rainfall maps. There showed us the effect the mountain ranges have on the rainfall.

The story, "Smoky," by Will James is about the most interesting story we have ever read. It is the story of a wild pony on the Great Plains.

High School.

Supt. Randall will help judge a debate at Caro tonight in which Caro and Standish debate the question, "Resolved, That Intercollegiate Athletics Are Detrimental to Colleges." Coach Kelly and Principal Niergarth attended a meeting of the Tuscola County Athletic Association held at Caro Wednesday evening. They drew up the County baseball schedule for this spring and also discussed conditions for the County Track Meet.

Supt. Randall attended a meeting of Tuscola County school men held at Caro Wednesday afternoon. They met to discuss plans for the Seventh-Eighth Grade review exams to be conducted later in the spring.

Tuesday night the Lambda Sigma met at the school. We suppose you're wondering what the appetizing menu was this time. It was peanuts! Miss Lammers even refused to let them eat them until after they had done some literary work-the real motive of the club. Janet Allured gave a book report, "The Great Meadow," by Elizabeth Madox Roberts. Evelyn Robinson read a short story, "From England to America," by Margaret Montague. They are planning a party for excitement after exams. New club officers will be elected then also.

stars were falling everywhere about. "Good gracious, we reached the Land of Wonders in a shorter time than ever before," said the Jogalong. "And in a star storm, too."

"A star storm?" queried the boy. "Are these stars falling?"

"Everything in the point of view," replied the Jogalong. "In other countries this would be called a snow storm, but anyone with two eyes in his head can see that stars and nothing else are falling. Only, they are not gold-they are white which is safer, for even in the Land of Wonders there are people who would try to gather them all up if they were gold. Good gracious! Now we are going to have trouble!"

One of the most enjoyable meetings of the South Novesta Farmers' Club was that held Friday, January 16, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Colwell, 1½ miles west of Cass City. Fifty members and guests were present and a delightful dinner was served at noon. During the business hour the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Charles Kilgore; secretary, Mrs. Thomas Colwell; treasurer, Mrs. Frank Hegler. Rev. Carless of Kingston, Rev. Barlow of Masolin, Ohio, Mrs. A. J. Knapp, and Charles Steers gave helpful and in-spiring talks. Mrs. Loella Pugh of Pontiac favored the company with a number of readings. Mrs. George Spencer gave a reading, "Cooperative Farming." Mrs. Thomas Colwell gave two short readings, "Depression," and "The Good Times We Are to Have in '31." Mrs. William Kelley also gave a reading and the Kelley brothers furnished music. Guests were present Deford, and Cass City. turn to it his nominations of George Otis Sen. Wheeler Smith, Marcel Garsaud and Claude L. Draper so that it might rescind its confirmation of those names, Mr. Hoover with understandable indignation curtly refused, declaring that he "cannot admit the power of the senate to encroach upon the executive functions by removal of a duly appointed executive officer under the guise of reconsideration of his nomination."

The President was fortified in his action by an opinion of Attorney General Mittchell, and he gave out a public statement explaining his course and intimated that the action of the senate was actuated by "a hope of symbolizing me as the defender of the power interests if I refuse to sacrifice three outstanding public servants." He said there was no issue for or against the power companies involved.

Senators who are in opposition to the administration thereupon prose in their wrath and scathingly denounced Mr. Hoover, and the body, by a vote of 36 to 23, ordered the clerk to restore the names of the three power commissioners to the executive calendar, which placed the senate on record as holding that no power commission exists. Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana served notice that he would seek to tie up the salaries of the commissioners in the annual independent offices appropriation bill, intimating that if necessary a filibuster would be conducted against the measure.

While the action of the senate was in order under its rules, it was unprecedented and does not seem to have met with general public approval. Since the commissioners had been duly sworn in and the attorney general has ruled that the appointments were constitutionally made, President Hoover was on solid legal ground in rejecting the senate's demand and indeed that was the least he could do under the circumstances. In this case the rules of the senate are in conflict with the law and the Constitution. Whether or not Mr. Hoover was wise in impugning the motives of the senate is open to question.

Indian Racial Divisions For generations there has been a decided rift between the Hindu majority and the Moslem minority in India. In India politics these two classes are spoken of as the Hindu and Moslem "communities" and the word "communal" has come to be applied in a specific sense to the religious cleavage between these two communities.

Lions Not Bloodthirsty

Unlike other carnivorous animals, lions, apparently, only kill when they good condition, for sale or exchange are hungry or attacked-and they do not slay for the mere sake of killing. They usually hunt in pairs-male and female together-and it has been observed that the lioness is the first to break cover, and is more ferocious than her mate.

July 1 settlements. He discloses that the board not only holds huge contracts for future delivery but also is fast gaining control of the cash wheat supply. Legge said the grain stabilization corporation is holding about 75,000,-000 bushels of cash wheat, and about 55,000,000 bushels of futures contract wheat which must be delivered between now and next July 1.

He admitted that on July 1, when the new crop begins coming in, he expects the board to be holding "virtually all of the national carry-over." Such a position with any futures contracts' outstanding would place, the board in a position to wipe out shortspeculators who happened to be due to deliver wheat to the board. A similar condition existed several months ago, and at that time the board spared the short sellers by extending the delivery date.

WITH the warm approval of President Hoover, an appeal for funds for the relief of sufferers in the drought-stricken districts of the United States has been issued by John Barton Payne, head of the Red Cross. It is the hope of Mr. Payne that $10,000.000 will J. B. Payne be contributed by the generous citizens of the country. He says the demands for help in the drought areas are increasing. Not only food, clothing and fuel for human beings are needed, but also feed for the live stock.

In his letter to Mr. Payne the President reviewed briefly the drought relief work of the Red Cross since last fall, when $5,000.000 was set aside for the purpose and appeals for further funds were postponed until it should be possible to measure the volume of requirements. He continued:

"The problem has now developed more than the available funds and is not wholly one of food, clothing, and other personal care among farmers. who have suffered from the drought. There is also difficulty in the smaller rural and industrial towns as a double reaction from the drought and depression. I understand that these towns are unable to organize effectively to meet their problems as are the municipalities.

DR. John Grier Hibben has announced that he will retire from the presidency of Princeton *1*2.1 university at the end of the academic year in 1932. There is much discussion as to who will succeed him, but the board of trustees has not yet taken up the question. Most R. A. Fosdick prominently mentioned for the place is Raymond A. Fosdick, an eminent New York lawyer who graduated from Princeton with the class of 1905. He is now one of the trustees. Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania, a member of the class of 1900, is also suggested. He, too, is on the board of trustees. Doctor Hibben was elected president of the university January 11. 1912, and inaugurated the following May 12. He succeeded Woodrow Wilson, who resigned in 1910 upon his election as governor of New Jersey. Only three of Princeton's fourteen presidents served terms longer than the 20 years of Doctor Hibben. They were John Witherspoon, the sixth president, who served from 1768 to 1799: James Carnohan, the ninth.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I--With his English wife, Catherine, and twelve-year-old son, "Jeems," Henri Bulain, French settler in Canada in 1749, cultivates a fertile farm, adjacent to the Tonteur seign-curio As the form or the Bulain eurie. As the story opens the Bulain family is on its way home from a visit to the Tonteurs. Catherine's wandering brother, Hepsibah, meets them.

CHAPTER II—Hepsibah, as is his eustom, has brought presents for his sister and her family. To Jeems he gives a splendid piece of crimson vel-vet, laughingly telling the boy it is to be a present from Jeems to Toinette Tonteur, small daughter of the sei-gneur. Hepsibah also gives Jeems a pistol, bidding him perfect himself in marksmanship, for the people of the frontier are constantly in fear of raids by Indian war parties, allies of the English. by India English.

CHAPTER III—Hepsibah fears for the safety of the Bulains, in their iso-lated position, but Henri laughs at the idea of danger. Jeems presents the velvet to Toinette. CHAPTER IV—Next day Jeems, feel-ing he was wrong in brawling before Toinette, goes to her home to offer his apologies. He hears Madame Tonteur refer to him as a "little English beast," but makes his apologies and goes home, saving nothing of what he had overheard. Hepsibah takes his acparture. The Tonteurs go to Que-bec, where Toinette is to be educated. After four years, during which Jeems practically reaches mannood, the Ton-teurs return. War between Britain and France flames, and French settlers hasten to join Dieskau, French com-mander. Henri and Jeems remain at home. Absent one day on a hunting trip, Jeems sees from a distance his home in flames. CHAPTER IV-Next day Jeems, feel home in flames.

CHAPTER V—He finds his father and mother dead and the house and barn blazing. A hatchet, of English make, left on the scene, convinces him the slaughter is the work of Mohawk In-dians, English allies. The sound of gunfire has come to him from the Ton-teur seigneurie, and at dawn, fearing for Toinette, he hastens there. Ton-teur and his servants are dead. A shot wounds Jeems. Believing him an enemy, Toinette, from a hiding place in the mill, has fired on him. He rushes to the mill, where the girf de-nounces him as an Englishman and tries to kill him, fainting before she can carry out her design. CHAPTER V-He finds his father and

CHAPTER VI

Toinette was alone when she awoke from the unconsciousness which had come to ease the anguish of her mind and body. It seemed to her she was coming out of sleep and that the walls which dimly met her eves were those of her bedroom in the manor. That a truth whose evidence lay so horribly about her could be reality and not a dream broke on her senses dully at first and then with a swift understanding. She sat up expecting to see ms. But he was gone. She was no longer where she had fallen at her enemy's feet. But Jeems had made a resting place for her of empty bags and must have carried her to it. She snivered when she looked at the musket and the stain of blood on the floor. She had tried to kill him. And he had gone away, leaving her alive! As had happened to Jeems, something was burned out of her now. It had gone in the sea of darkness which had swept over her, and she rose with an unemotional calmness, as if the tower room with its dust and cobwebs and store of ripened grain had become her cloister. Passion had worn itself away. If a thought could have slain, she would still have wreaked her vengeance on Jeems, but she would not have touched the musket again that lay on the floor. She went to the head of the stairs and looked down. The son of the English woman had left no sign except the drip of blood that made a trail on the steps and out of the door. Exultation possessed her as she thought how nearly she had brought to the Bulains the same shadow of death which they and their kind had brought to her. The thrill was gone in a moment. The red drops fascinated her, painted brightly by the sun. Jeems Bulain-out there with her dead! The boy her mother, had tried to make her regard with bitterness and dislike from childhood-a man grown into an English monster! She struggled to bring back her power to hate and her desire to kill, but the effort she made was futile. She followed the crimson stains. All about her was the haze of smoke, soft and still in the air. In the distance, obscured by the fog which ran from the smoldering ruins, she saw a form bent grotesquely under a burden. It was a shapeless thing, distorted by the sun and the smoky spindrifts dancing before her eves, but living because it was moving away from her. Behind it was a smaller object, and she knew the two were Jeems and his dog.

musket. She tried to speak when he stopped before her. Accusation and a bit of ferocity remained in her soul, but they were impotent in the silence between them. His eyes meeting hers steadily from under the lurid brand of her blow, seemed less like a murderer's and held more the gaze of one who regarded her with a cold and terrible pity. He did not put out a helping hand though she felt herself swaying. He was no longer youth. He was not even Jeems Bulain. But his voice was the same. "I am sorry, Toinette." Jeems scarcely knew he spoke the demanded. She might have asked that same question in those unimportant years when he had dared to visit Tonteur manor with his foolish gifts. Why was he here? He turned in the direction from which he had come and held out his hand, not for her to take, but as a voice. She understood what his burden had been. Tears? Such trivial things could not exist in the after-heat of the holocaust that had consumed them. Pride, defying grief, raised her chin a little as she obeyed Jeems. She knew to what she was going. And when she came to the

Even now, when it should have known better, the mill wheel continued to whine and scream, and suddenly it occurred to Jeems that it could not have been that way yesterday when Tonteur was alive. A devil must have come to abide at the top of the mill! He waited, scanning the horizons that were thinning of their smoke. Death had passed and death might return over its own blackened trail. Toinette, beside her father, made him think of that. It seemed a long time before she rose to face him. She was not crying. Her eyes were blue stars in a countenance as pale as marble. The sun shone on her and gave an unearthly radiance to her hair. Her beauty held him stricken just as his own terribleness forced from her a gasp of protest when he drew off the coat borrowed from one of the dead men and spread it over Tonteur. But she did not speak. Only the mill wheel continued its virulent plaint as the loose earth fell on the baron. Toinette looked steadily toward the sky, and when Jeems was done she accompanied him back to the mill. She watched him go for his bow, where he

Their own hope was to swing westward out of the path of stragglers, then eastward again toward Lussan's. Tomorrow or the day following, he would have her safely at the next seigneurie, and there she would find means to be taken to her friends in Quebec. He would then join Dieskau to fight the English. The important thing was to reach Lussan's tonight. The Indians would not go near there, for they believed all abandoned places to be inhabited by ghosts and evil spirits. If they stumbled upon it by accident they would get away as quickly as possible. He still held her hand as darkness gathered closer. In this gloom she

They struck a deer run and followed it into a plain between two lines of hills where a devastating fire had passed some years before. Here they traveled through a young growth of bushes and trees reaching scarcely above their heads, with the light of the stars falling on them. listening, searching the slumbrous distances of the wilderness which lay about them. He caught all movement and all sound, the direction of the wind, the shifting play of the shadows, the almost noiseless flutter of an owl's wings over their heads.

And then he knew what had touched his shoulder in the darkness-Toinette's cheek pressing against it for a moment as lightly as a feather.

He felt her trembling. When she looked at him, her eyes rested on the brand of the musket barrel which lay in a red stripe across his forehead. The stars seemed bigger and clearer when at last they came to the half mile of abandoned road which ended in Lussan's clearing. It was the road down which Jeems had watched Tonteur and Paul Tache and a proud little princess ride to the sale years before. Now the princess walked unsteadily at his side. She was white and fragile in the starlight, and her strength was gone. Her dress was torn by brush

He could hear her sobbing as tears came at last to give her comfort. He fought back a thickening in his throat and a hot flame in his eyes as the boy in him called out for his mother. He, too, wanted this easement for his grief. But he stood-a man. Odd watched tirelessly and sleeplessly with his master.

After a long time, there was silence in the old house, and Jeems knew that Toinette was asleep. He went in quietly and replaced the coat about Her face was white and lovely, her. and wet lashes glistened on her cheeks. Timidly his fingers pressed the silken braid of her hair. He brushed a wisp of hay from her forehead. Unconsciously his lips moved. Hope and faith and prayer seemed to stir in the room as he dared to raise the soft braid to his lips, and then he returned to his place outside with something like a glory enshrined with his sorrow. He sat on the ground with the house at his back and his bow and sheaf of arrows and the English hatchet within reach of his hands. The stillness seemed a live thing that had barred all sound from solemn hours of meditation, and he soon began to feel its influence. Slowly and irresistibly it brought the desire to close his eves and sleep, and he rose to his feet in a struggle to keep awake. Odd's teeth clicked and his eyes gleamed with un-

Richelieu-and what lay beyond. From the moment they had risen to their feet, Odd had stood as rigid as carven wood in the white-coated grass with his muzzle leveled toward Lussan's meadow. Something definite had come within his reach, which made it unnecessary for him to measure the wind, and suddenly there rose above other sound the wild and raucous crying of a blue jay, and a cawing of alarm among the crows. A second and a third blue jay joined the first, a piercing bird call terminated sharply in a single screeching note. "That was an arrow," said Jeems, beginning to string his bow. "More than once I have had to kill a noisy blue jay when creeping up on game." He drew Toinette into the shelter of the house and called Odd. her calmly for a little while. He touched her face gently with his hand, and then went to his father. Odd trailed at his heels. In the stump field was a shovel. Under his mother's big tree he planned to dig. When he returned, his mother was not alone. Toinette was there, on the ground, with the English woman's head in her lap. Both were so tired in soul and body that their minds seized upon this end of their journey as a relief from longer supporting the burdens of the flesh. In a way, it was like coming to a home which they had forgotten. For this was Lussan's, a place filled with memories of hope and triumph and bitterness out of which it built a welcome for them even in its loneliness. Toinette's lips almost smiled, as if she saw Madame Lussan at the threshold of the door calling to her above the laughing voices of men and women, above her father's cheery greetings to friends and neighbors, above the restless stamping of her horse's hoofs and the crying of the auctioneer. She might have seen and heard these things but yesterday; now there was sleep-a dark and lifeless ghost of a house, crickets rasping their wings in the tangled grass, a jungle growing where before there had been a broad and level green.
