In Friday's activity period, the High School and Junior High students listened to a radio program from the American School of the Air. Miss Hale, head of Rural Schools in Maine, was the speaker. More school news on page two.

18 YEARS A MEMBER OF SCHOOL BOARD

The sad death occurred, at his home on Saturday afternoon, of one of Grant township's most respected residents in the person of Dougald Walter Brown, aged 59 years, after a lingering illness of approximately three years. He leaves to mourn his demise his wife, Sarah Gillies, daughter of the late Alexander and Jane Gillies, one son, Gillies J., at home, and one brother, John P., of Santa Anna, California.

Deceased, who was born at Gladstone, Ontario, Canada, moved with his father, the late John Brown, and family to Michigan about 1885 and settled on the homestead where he passed away.

Mr. Brown took a very keen interest in the municipal affairs of his community, having occupied the position of township clerk for nine years and having served as a member of the public school board for approximately 18 years.

The funeral services were held from his residence on Tuesday at 2:00 p. m. to Frazier Presbyterian church, Rev. H. Roberts officiating, to which church Mr. Brown had been a valued member.

Interment took place at Elkland cemetery where the services were in charge of Tyler Lodge, No. 317, F. & A. M., of which Mr. Brown was a member.

N. E. A. LETTER FROM WASHINGTON

Greatest Shift of Personnel Will Be in the House on March 4.

Washington, February 23—Another week and the curtain will ring down on a turbulent and prodigious Congress. The sessions have been marked with pugnaciousness and rancor, especially in emphasizing the difference between the policies of the executive and the legislative branches of the Federal Government. Like the closing of all gay affairs the question uppermost in the minds of the more thoughtful participants is "who will pay the fiddler?" As is customary in social affairs, the politicians are all quite willing to let the other fellow have the check and pay the bill. The prevailing query in private conversations is whether the President or the Congress will eventually suffer the worst from public reaction.

It is argued that months will be required for the public to measure the relative services of the two governmental agencies. Each is hopeful that developments will justify their positions in regard to public matters. The real test will come when the spectacular coloring of the Hoover-Congress imbroglio has faded and the whole subject becomes a routine.

COUNTY SCHOOLS WIN SEAL AWARDS

The Fractional school, taught by Clara Reynolds, sold more Christmas seals on the basis of enrollment than any other school in Tuscola county, the Michigan Tuberculosis Association announces, and will receive in reward an attractive set of six colored Indian health posters. The prize for the second best county sale, consisting of the health game, "Dodjium," was won by the English school, taught by Eleanor T. Peter.

According to the report of the Tuberculosis Association, a total of 51 one-room and two-room schools in the county won prizes for seals sold in the December, 1930, sale. The prizes included six first aid kits, 18 "balls of fun," one "Healthland" book, and 26 sets of health posters.

Christmas seals worth $6,476.71 were sold by pupils of one and two-room schools in the sixty Michigan counties to which seals are sent directly from the office of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association. This sum represents a substantial part of the state Christmas seal fund, which gains its principal volume from seals sold through the mail and through local chairmen.

GRASSHOPPERS HOPPING IN GRASS HERE FEB. 25

A. A. Jones sighted a robin on Jan. 25 and on Wednesday, Feb. 25, he brought another proof of mild weather when he deposited a bottle containing a half dozen small live grasshoppers on the Chronicle's office counter, with the remark that there were hundreds of other live grasshoppers in the grass in his neighborhood.

"What do you expect to find on March 25?" he was asked.

"An Irish snake," came the ready reply, "and on April 25 I may call around to take you for a sleigh-ride."

INCOME TAX TO COME UP AGAIN

Legislature Again Considering Measures Defeated in Former Sessions.

Michigan Press Association's Legislative Letter.

Every week the deliberations of the present session of the Michigan legislature take on more the tone of those of the 1929 session. The income tax proposal was missing but this will soon join up with capital punishment, deficit appropriations and prohibition. Senator Peter B. Lennon has announced that he will introduce the income tax proposal shortly, drawn along the lines of the federal tax.

Capital punishment came a step nearer a referendum vote when the senate voted, 23 to 7, to pass the measure proposed by Senator Foster providing for electrocution for first degree murderers. The bill goes to the house, where it is expected to pass, and then to Gov. Brucker for his signature. No debate or outbursts of oratory accompanied the approval in the senate. Every effort seems to be centered on getting it signed by the governor in time to have the electors vote upon it at the April 6 election.

The governor received the first legislative enactment when the house passed the measure to extend the time limit on automobile licenses to Mar. 1. This was rushed through both houses and given immediate effect in order to make legal the action of the secretary of state's department in extending the time to that date this year. Gov. Brucker has indicated he would sign the bill.

Proposes "Legal" Beer. Rep. Robert Wardell of Detroit has introduced a bill legalizing the manufacture of beer containing 3 1/2 per cent alcoholic content. It was referred to the judiciary committee of which Rep. George Watson, Capac, is chairman.

The proposal for a "straw vote" on the question: "Do you favor the national prohibition law in its present form?" was killed before it got to a vote in the house. Attorney General Paul Voorhees ruled the attempt unconstitutional. He declared that the legislature is confined to legislative acts and proposed amendments to the constitution. The vote as proposed would serve no good purpose, his ruling stated.

Rep. Dacey, who introduced the original resolution, countered by introducing a bill to repeal the state prohibition act. If passed by both houses, this would come up for a vote at the November, 1932, election.

Check Wild Driving. Automobile drivers figuring in serious accidents will be subjected to examinations to determine their fitness to control a motor vehicle, according to proposals for changes in the present regulations. These were tentatively agreed upon at a meeting attended by the governor, representatives of the Department of Public Safety and traffic experts from the larger cities. Issuance of drivers' and chauffeurs' licenses would be under a new department within the department of public safety, the fees collected going to that department to go towards the expense of its maintenance.

Drivers would be compelled to give notice of change of address; compulsory revocation is provided for traffic law violators, for periods of six months to permanent, according to the nature of the offense. Ninety days' imprisonment is provided for driving during the period of suspended license. The bill is being drafted by Charles L. Rubiner, assistant attorney general.

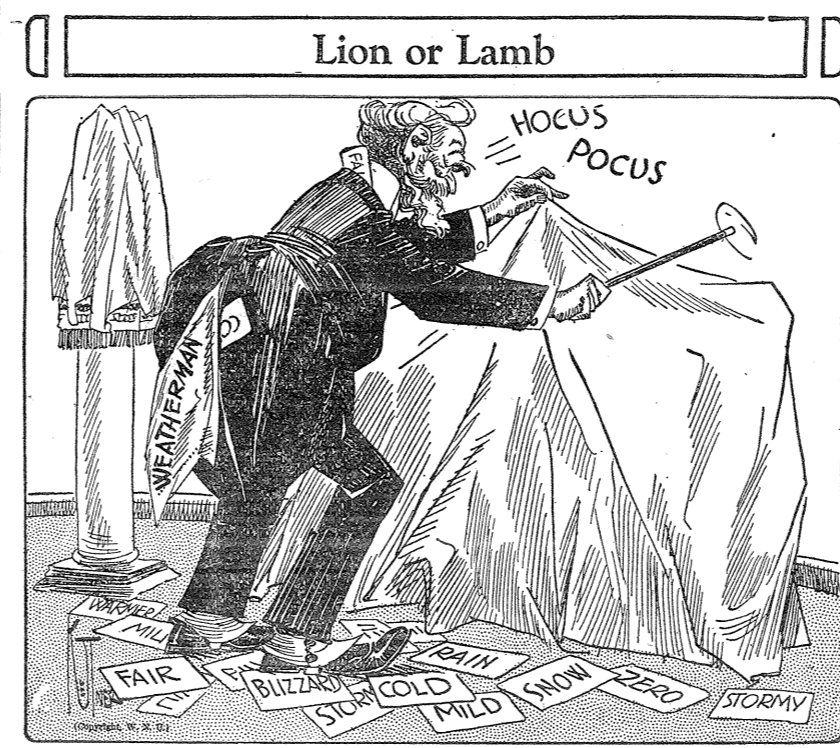

Opposition to putting the control in a new department caused the introduction of two bills, one in the house by Rep. Walter B. Brady of Detroit and another in the senate by Sen. Calvin Campbell of Indian River.

Seeks Parole Curb. A resolution to remove the power of the governor to pardon, reprieve or commute the sentences of persons convicted of first degree murder has been submitted by Senator Rushton, chairman of the judiciary committee. It provides for an amendment to the constitution and would be submitted to a vote at the November, 1932, election if approved by the legislature.

Governor Brucker and Speaker Fred Ming of the house appeared as speakers before a meeting of anti-tuberculosis workers. The governor repeated the malt tax is "wrong in principle," when Speaker Ming predicted that "the malt tax will go through the legislature."

Another familiar proposal was brought up by Rep. Culver when he again entered a chiropractic bill, similar to that proposed by him at previous sessions. It was referred to the committee on state police and public safety.

Gov. Brucker's sixth message to the

BEST METHODS FAIL ON UNFERTILE SOIL

Good Seed and Improved Implements Wasted Unless Plant Food Is Available.

Most of the advantage gained through the use of better farm implements, improved varieties of seed, and knowledge of how to control insects and plant diseases is nullified in an attempt to increase crop yields unless the farmer has been careful to conserve the fertility of his soil, according to members of the soils department at Michigan State College.

Records of the State Department of Agriculture show that the average yields per acre for oats and wheat in Michigan were less in the last 10 years than they were in the 10 years between 1870 and 1880, and the yield of corn during the last decade was only a fraction of a bushel higher than it was in those years.

This failure to secure the reward of better farming methods is due to the loss of plant food elements from the soil through the successive years of cropping, and, unless provision is made for the return of plant food to replace that lost in the crops harvested, yields will fall still lower.

One of the vital food elements, nitrogen, can be conserved by keeping a normal supply of decaying plant tissue in the soil. This can be done by plowing down legumes, by the use of quantities of manure, or by plowing down crops such as rye where the soil is so low in fertility that it is impossible to secure crops of legumes without using such measures first.

Supplies of phosphoric acid and potash in the soil are most easily increased by the use of commercial fertilizers. The proper analyses for use in Michigan are given in detail in Circular Bulletin 53 which can be obtained from the college or from county agricultural agents.

Unionville, Akron Tuscola Champions. Unionville won the Class C championship of Tuscola county high schools, defeating Vassar, 19-12, while Akron swamped Gageton for the Class D honors, 33-12, in the finals of the county basketball tournament at Caro Friday night.

Inability to cage its shots cost Vassar the Class C title. Unionville got out ahead, 9-1, in the first period, but Vassar slowly crept up to within two points at 14-12 with a minute to go. Then Unionville sewed it up with five points in the last minute.

ROTARIANS HEAR INTERESTING TALKS

Rev. Paul Barnhart, pastor of the Ubyly M. E. Church, addressed members of the Rotary Club Tuesday noon. For 17 years Mr. Barnhart resided in South America. Part of that time, he lived in Chili and there served as interpreter for the president of that country.

Times have changed since the days of President Geo. Washington, he said, and in this day we cannot live an isolated life. There is need of the church and business studying the problems of the world today and so organize the

TUSCOLA MEETINGS FOR BEAN GROWERS

Bean growers in Tuscola county have the opportunity of becoming a unit of the Michigan Bean Growers, incorporated, a state-wide cooperative marketing organization of bean farmers through a series of farmers' meetings to be held by A. B. Love, extension specialist in marketing of the Michigan State College, during the week of Mar. 2 to 6, inclusive, to explain the economic soundness of their plan of organization which is being sponsored by the Michigan State College and the Federal Farm Board.

Coming to Tuscola county at the request of more than 60 farmers from 16 townships as expressed at a farmers' meeting held at Tuscola county court house on Aug. 22, Mr. Love will present his reasons that the federated type of decentralized local units giving "home rule" to a state-wide cooperative association such as is in use by the Michigan Bean Growers, Incorporated, is economically sound as evidenced by the success of similar existing state-wide cooperative marketing associations in Michigan.

Meetings will be held at the following places on the given dates and time:

Monday, Mar. 2, 7:30 p. m., Fairgrove High School.

Tuesday, Mar. 3, 1:30 p. m., Gilford Town Hall.

Jogalong Tales

CHAPTER 6

Beside the pond grew many yellow honeysuckle vines and the blossoms filled the air with their fragrance. Hovering over a small cluster was a tiny bird.

The boy was very much interested. He had never before seen one so small. As he looked at it, it suddenly disappeared as if by magic.

"It's gone, Mr. Jogalong!" he said.

"No, it hasn't," replied Mr. Jogalong. "There it is on the top blossoms."

Sure enough the small creature was standing before the blossoms on the topmost part of the bush, its wings still whirring around and around, and from time to time sticking its long tongue deep into the blossoms.

"He's gone again," said the boy.

"Oh, I wish I could see him go. He must wear a magic coat or something the way he disappears from sight. And listen! What a strange sound he makes. Is he singing?"

"Singing! Good gracious, no. He doesn't know the first thing about singing. He is making that hum with his wings. It's the hum that gives him his last name. His first name comes from his ruby throat. His last name comes from the sound he makes with his wings. Now do you know who he is?"

"Well, I should be able to guess when you have told me," said the boy, laughing. "Mr. Ruby-Throat Humming Bird, of course."

All at once the bird disappeared again. They looked around and there above a tiny gray cup in an old, old tree, hovered Mr. Ruby Throat, as proud as any king. Inside the cup were two of the tiniest birds anyone could imagine. They were no bigger than tumble bugs! They were as snug as any birds or bugs could be in their tiny gray cup castle made of soft down and covered with lichens which Mr. and Mrs. Ruby Throat had taken from the branches of dead trees to make their home invisible.

"Do you hear anything, Boy?" asked Jogalong, rather sadly.

The boy listened. "Why, that's my mother calling. She always calls like that for me to come to supper, you know. You must come with me, Mr. Jogalong." The boy was about to reach up and take the Jogalong's hand to lead him politely home with him, but Mr. Jogalong had disappeared quite as mysteriously as the Hummer.

"Oh, dear," sighed the boy. "I did want to see so many other things, and I haven't the faintest idea how to get home alone."

But suddenly he took a look around him. Why, there he was in his very own back yard! And, strangely enough, there he had been all the time, for the Land of Wonders, boys and girls, is everywhere. As Mr. Jogalong would say, "It's everything in the point of view. And if you want to enter the Land of Wonders, just stand still and look around."

Kindergarten.

Just now we are busily engaged in making a dish cupboard, dining room table, table-cloth, and napkins for the children who lunch here. We are also learning how to set the table.

First Grade

This news is written by the first grade children:

"We are going to tear down our post office. We enjoyed it very much Valentine's Day."

"We had a story about George Washington. His birthday was February 22."

"We are getting up a program. It is by the kindergarten and first grade. It is, 'The 1931 Calendar.' For January we have four people go skating."

"Watch our news next week and we will tell you what is going to happen in February and March."

Third Grade

We are reading stories about Geo. Washington in reading class.

We have already heard four book reports. So far we have heard "The Lost Monkey," by Carol Heller; "The Farm Twins," by Ellamay Glaspie; "Twilight Town," by Mary Jayne Campbell; and "Boy Blue and His Friends," by Elsie Willy. They were very interesting and very well given.

In language class we are dramatizing a story of an incident in the life of George Washington.

For opening exercises we are hearing the story of "Buddy on the Farm."

Fourth Grade

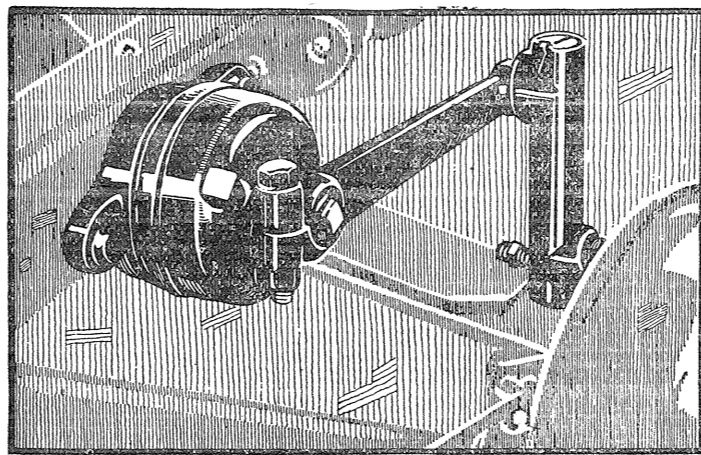

The nature study class are beginning the study of birds.

The geography class have been very much interested in the study of Holland and Switzerland. The class was undecided upon which would be the most interesting country in which to live, so we decided to have a debate in our English class, "Resolved, That Holland is a more interesting place than Switzerland in which to live."

The affirmative side is upheld by Charlotte Auten, Clark Watson and Thelma Suprenant. The negative is supported by Donald Allured, Mary Lou McCoy and Richard Calley. We will let you know next week the result of our debate Friday.

We were weighed this week and we

FORD COMFORT

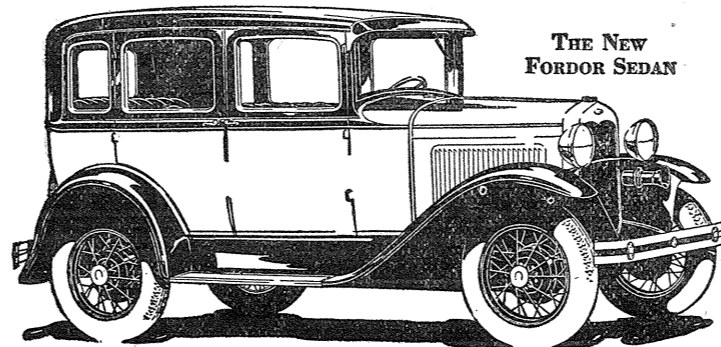

Every new Ford is equipped with four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers

ONE of the fine things about driving the new Ford is the way it takes you over the miles without strain or fatigue. No matter how long the trip, you know it will bring you safely, quickly, comfortably to the journey's end.

The seats are generously wide, deeply cushioned and carefully designed to conform to the curves of the body. Every new Ford has specially designed springs and four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers. These work both ways — up and down. They absorb the force of road shocks and also provide a cushion against the rebound of the springs.

Other features that make the new Ford a value far above the price are the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, silent, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, more than twenty ball and roller bearings, extensive use of fine steel forgings, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, torque-tube drive, Rustless Steel and unusual accuracy in manufacturing.

In addition, you save many dollars because of the low first cost of the new Ford, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation.

ELKLAND ROLLER MILLS TOLD BY ROY You Must be Satisfied. Published Every Friday. Vol. 6. Feb. 27, 1931. No. 34. Published in the interest of the People of Cass City and vicinity by the Elkland Roller Mills Edited by Roy

Somewhere they estimated that the proposed voyage around the north pole in a saucer-shaped boat will cost $330,000. We can think of lots of things we'd rather do with $330,000 than ride around the north pole in a saucer-shaped boat. Looking for grand-ma's glasses isn't the job it used to be. Now-ads she leaves them right where she empties them.

Try This on Your Friends. "Listen! Lend me $20 but only give me ten of it. Then I'll owe you ten and you'll owe me ten and we'll call it square."

Now here's a hot proposition — Cavalier coal! You can forget your heating troubles with Cavalier in your bin. It holds the fire.

We have some mighty pretty trees here in Cass City. Did you ever notice that?

Hubbard (angrily) Why did you wake me out of a sound sleep? Wife: Because there was so much sound I couldn't sleep.

Poor coal fills your furnace with soot, cinders and ashes. You get more coal for your money, buying that

WHEAT IS GOOD FEED FOR FATTENING PIGS

Eight pigs which were started on a wheat ration at a weight of 36.12 pounds per animal and which were fed for 139 days, when the average weights were 188.1 pounds, paid $1.07 per bushel for the wheat which they ate in feeding trials conducted by the animal husbandry division at Michigan State College.

Eight similar pigs were fed an equal length of time on an identical ration except that corn was substituted for the wheat and the second lot of pigs gained a little more slowly than the wheat-fed lot. The cost per hundredweight of gains for the corn-fed lot was a little less than for those fed wheat but the price paid by the hogs for the wheat make them a much better market for this grain than the ordinary sales channels.

Both lots of pigs sold for eight cents a pound and the returns from each ration were computed on that basis. During the feeding period, the pigs consumed 4,114 pounds of wheat and the other lot ate 3,711 pounds of corn. The pigs on the wheat ration ate a little more tankage, linseed meal, and alfalfa hay than the other lot, but the difference was only a few pounds in each case.

Pigs receiving a wheat ration should get some form of protein supplement such as skim milk or tankage and this is more necessary with young pigs than older hogs which are being fattened.

Sea Delicacy

Lobscouse is the king dish of the sea. It is one of the oldest and most savory of the forecastle dishes, and he or she who does not love lobscouse does not love the sailor. It consists of meat stewed with vegetables and ship's biscuit and has been characterized by an enthusiast as "glorified Irish stew." Of all the delicacies of the sea lobscouse excels choke-dog, daddy funk, dead horse, hishee-hashee, measles, sea-pie, soap-and-bullion and twice-laid. It's the sort of dish the sailor loves, and why not? It's the best going.—Literary Digest.

Early Mail Rates

In the times of Benjamin Franklin letters were charged for by the sheet instead of by weight, and also for the distance carried. Ten cents was charged for one sheet, 20 cents for two sheets, and so on, and for every 50 miles another full fee was added. Envelopes were not used in those days, the letter simply being folded up and sealed.

Bewitching Spring Designs

The three words chosen for our headline—suggestive of what man tries to take from nature's work to clothe himself and family with, that which is attractive and cheerful. Hence we put the touch of color and attractive design into all that we wear.

In 10 years we have not been able to clothe ourselves as cheaply. The American people are not quitters. Let us get right down to fight and throw this depression. Say like Andy, "Ise regusted." Buy something if only 5c worth and as Rev. Smith says, "Have a heart, man!"

I thank my young friends for their interest taken in forming words from the three letters given. Very creditable suggestions given, indeed! Here's another for them and the letters must be in not later than Mar. 15, and not more than 50 words and only one from a person. Three prizes will be given of $3.00, $2.00 and $1.00. matter to be met by taxpayers. The situation in Washington has been compared to a great parade of public characters with "band wagon boys" wondering how their performance rated with various classes among the rank and file. They are vitally interested in mass psychology when the people as taxpayers feel the "pinch" of Congressional liberality in appropriating money for various causes.

The sharp exchanges of comment regarding legislation between the President and the Congress has for the present at least served to aid the legislative group in its effort to lessen the prestige that Hoover gained during the war as a humanitarian. The controversy has unmistakably been shaped to show for political purposes that all is changed and that the Chief Executive has become reactionary and even "hard boiled."

Natural-ly the mental pictures have been accentuated so as to reveal Congress as the sole champion of the "dear people." The President's friends are depending on what they believe to be an inevitable turn of sentiment when facts and not eloquent oratory must be faced. The tremendous scope of the adjusted compensation bonus to soldiers will require the employment of hundreds of extra government clerks. The scramble for Federal jobs is so great that legislators are in a maze trying to tap the patronage tree. It takes colossal gall to vote against Administration plans and then rush over to the White House to demand berths on government payrolls for politically deserving constituents. Yet, the White House is besieged with these demands each day.

It is cogently argued that President Hoover may spring a surprise on the next Congress. Unless there is a last-minute change in plans there will be

Some of the incoming legislators are making a private survey of the political situation so that they will not be stampeded by the present leadership during the caucus when the Senate and House are organized.

CHAPTER XI

No one but Wood Pigeon observed the faintness which came over Toinette. Some force had drawn a smothering curtain about her making it difficult to see or breathe. When the shock passed, they were standing alone with the mob closing in behind Tiagoa and his single captive. Its pent-up emotion burst loose in a pandemonium, and amid the excitement Toinette went back to the cabin which Jeems had built near Tiagoa's tepee.

At first she had regretted the absence of Jeems, but now she was glad he was gone, for the increasing tumult in the village, the chanting of death songs by the women, the screaming of children, and the yelling of savages who were working themselves into a frenzy of rage about the fire which would soon receive its victim terrified her with the growing conviction that nothing could save his uncle. If Jeems had been there, she knew he would not have seen Hepsibah Adams put to death without a struggle fatal to himself. This thought, together with the reflection that it was a fortunate chance which had sent him away, strengthened her determination to help Hepsibah, and she watched with Wood Pigeon until she saw the chief enter his tepee. Then she hurried to him, with Wood Pigeon and Odd following her.

Tiagoa's greeting held no promise. The Seneca folded his arms across his breast and regarded her calmly, revealing no gentle aspect as he spoke a few words in acknowledgment of her visit. That his prisoner bore the same relationship to Jeems which he bore to Shindas and that the man about to die was loved by Silver Heels brought no surprise or hesitation to his face. He waited patiently for her to finish, then shook his head and pointed through the door to the shadowy gathering in the path of the setting sun. He stated coldly that the prisoner must die. His people demanded that the spirit of the white man who had slain three of his warriors be destroyed in flames. They would wait until it was dark, which was the tribal custom. Then the prisoner would be brought from the tepee in which he was lying bound, and the fire would be lighted.

If it were her desire, she might talk with Jeems' uncle, Tiagoa said. He was looking into the twilight when he made this concession. The Indian women at the farther end of the village were chanting more loudly as darkness came on.

Tiagoa spoke again. It was growing late. The captive was in Ah De Bah's tepee, near the river, and the Tall Man and Shindas were guarding him. He watched her depart with Wood Pigeon and Odd. Then she might have seen a change in him, a change which came when he knew he was alone.

Toinette was breathless when she came to Ah De Bah's home, which the hunter had set apart from the others. The Tall Man stood motionless before the door with a rifle in the crook of his arm, and Shindas sat on the ground near him. Both saw her coming. She paused a few paces from them with her mind struggling against a chaos of uncertainty and dread. What could she say to Hepsibah Adams? How could she help him when Tiagoa and Shindas and Ah De Bah were eager for his death?

Shindas spoke a word to the Tall Man and advanced toward her. He seemed to have expected her, and pointed to the tepee. Ah De Bah did not look at her as she entered. Neither appeared to notice Wood Pigeon or the dog.

She found Hepsibah stretched out

Happiness First

Fame without happiness is but a sorry jest at best. What matters it to a thirsty man if his empty cup be of gold, or silver, or the finest glass? —Ellen T. Fowler.

George W. Snyder, M. D., of Chicago, Said This

"It is more important to use an antiseptic for the stomach, bowels, and kidneys than an antiseptic for the mouth and teeth for the reason that 95% of all diseases arise from intestinal disorders. I have prescribed Dr. Burnham's SAN YAK as a laxative and kidney diuretic for swelling of the limbs, high blood pressure with rheumatism, dizziness and diabetes and found it the one and only product I would be willing to tie to San Yak is the only laxative I ever prescribed that does not irritate and flush away the mucus membrane of the lower bowel. Hence its use in moderation is highly commendable to health." Sold at Burke's Drug Store. Be sure and get Dr. Burnham's San Yak.—Advertisement.

like a dead man, and knelt on the earth at his side. He was scarcely conscious of her presence until she touched him. She felt the buckskin cords at his wrists; then her hand found his sightless face.

Bending low over the doomed man she whispered:

"Hepsibah—Hepsibah Adams—I am Toinette Tonteur."

Shindas waited with Ah De Bah as the gloom thickened about them. After a time they saw Wood Pigeon going toward the circle of fires. Shindas stopped her, and in answer to his question she told him Toinette was weeping beside the white man and that the dog was with her.

A fresh outcry told them that at last the time had come, and Ah De Bah went to the tepee and held back the flap. He spoke to Toinette, calling her Soi Yan Makwun. There was no answer. He spoke again and entered. After a brief interval, his voice rose in a demand for Shindas, and the young Seneca answered it. Ah De Bah was hunting like an animal in the blackness. The tepee was empty. Toinette and Hepsibah Adams were gone.

Shindas did not speak. There was no light to reveal his face as he went to the edge of the river and saw that a canoe was gone. He grunted his wonder when the Tall Man joined him. The canoe had been launched within fifty paces of them, and they had not heard a sound. Words of self-abasement fell from Ah De Bah's lips. He and Shindas were like two children, and every man and woman in Chenusio would taunt them because of the ease with which the escape had been made. But the missing canoe could not be far distant. The fugitives, one of them blind, could not possibly succeed in their flight. The night would see the white man given to the stake, and now that Silver Heels had proved herself a serpent in the tribe and a traitor to Tiagoa, she would probably die with him.

Ah De Bah made queer sounds in his chest as they ran to Tiagoa and the expectant people with him. He was not so calm as Shindas when they arrived. It was Shindas who announced the deception of the stranger whom they had accepted as the true spirit of Soi Yan Makwun. Tiagoa was coldly and terribly still. His face changed before their eyes. The furrows in it grew deeper, and it became as hard as stone in the fields. Then words came weighted with the decision of death, rising until they swelled in a passion that was like a fire consuming everything in its path. He declared that his honor and the honor of his people lay in his hands. He called on Shindas and Ah De Bah to go with him to recapture the fugitives, for this was a duty imposed on him first of all. Before the night was much older, the fire stake should have its triumph. He had forgotten the blind man, for a man without eyes was already dead. He would give to the flames the white girl who had betrayed them.

The fires burned down until they were eyes in the night. Hours passed, and the Senecas listened in the stillness as if oppressed by fear. At last they heard the chanting of a voice coming nearer as fast as a canoe could travel. It was the death song with which Tiagoa had grieved for his daughter, and the savages were moved by it as leaves are moved by a wind. The suspense was broken, for in the song of grief was also a note of triumph which brought the message that Tiagoa had been successful in his pursuit. Fresh fuel was piled on the fires, and the flames leapt high. When Tiagoa and his companions came from the river, they brought no prisoner with them. Yet a fierce light shone in their countenances as they entered the illumination, and beginning his death song again Tiagoa snatched a burning brand and flung it into the midst of the pitchy material about the torture stake. In a moment a winding sheet of flame licked its way up the pole, and around this Tiagoa danced, finishing his song to the crackling of the pitch. He described how they had overtaken the fleeing ones at the edge of the Great rocks beyond which the water thundered in a maelstrom. The blind man had fought with a hatchet he had stolen from Ah De Bah's tepee until another blade was sunk in his brain to quiet him. He was a devil in his blindness, and Tiagoa pointed to Shindas, who held back his buckskin shirt to show a long and bleeding gash. The white man was dead, and his body, weighted by the darkness of his soul, was gone forever in the deep waters beyond the rocks.

But the unclean one who had tricked them, the girl whose evil spirit had come to bring dishonor upon them and to desecrate the soul of Soi Yan Makwun, they had taken alive. Tiagoa's face grew livid. His soul had gone so black when they caught her that he could see only death, for he heard his daughter's voice crying to him for vengeance. So he had killed the treacherous one. He had killed her at the command of Silver Heels, whose spirit was singing to him. He had killed the white girl with his own hands and had flung her body to disappear with that of the blind man.

Suddenly Tiagoa drew from his hiding place next his breast a thing which brought a gasp to the lips of those about him. All recognized it as Toinette's beautiful braid of hair streaming from the bleeding scalp the savage held above his head.

Tiagoa became more than ever a fiend in the flesh as he danced about the stake. Flecks of blood from the red scalp struck his face. At the height of his madness he flung it into the heart of the pitchwood fire.

Soi Yan Makwun was avenged and the demand of his people answered.

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

Unsolved Riddles That Still Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad

The Cause of the Sepoy Mutiny

WHAT was the cause of the Sepoy mutiny? Why did the natives suddenly rise against the English and, without a word of warning, try to sweep them out of India? Where they predisposed to believe the wildest stories and to rush into action in a paroxysm of terror or was the whole affair a plot fostered and fed by one of England's hereditary enemies in Europe?

These are questions which even the passage of more than half a century has failed to answer and the cause of the Sepoy rebellion remains today, as it was the time it occurred, one of the most perplexing of historic riddles.

It is true that the annexation policy of Lord Dalhousie, though dictated by a clear insight into world affairs, was most distasteful to the native mind. The spread of education, the appearance of steam engines and telephone wires throughout India, and the changes which constant British occupation would effect undoubtedly had a deep effect upon the Indian mind. But would these alone tend to mutiny and murder? Authorities on the subject are inclined to doubt that they would.

The Bengal Sepoys, mostly Hindus of high caste, regarded reforms along Western lines as attacks on their own nationality and attempts to undermine a civilization which had withstood the ravages of centuries. They realized that annexation meant they believed that it was their duty to see that India was held aloof. The numerous dethroned princes were the first to learn and take advantage of this spirit of dissatisfaction. They had heard of the Crimean war and they had been told that Russia was the eternal enemy of England. Moreover, they had little to lose by revolt and much to gain.

But the movement, as undoubtedly planned by the native leaders, was to be of a far more peaceful nature than the one which finally broke loose and, for a time, threatened to shatter British influence on the peninsula. It was to be a battle of wits, rather than of one of open hostility—a diplomatic struggle, instead of a hand-to-hand fight.

Then, in this critical state of affairs, of which the British government had no official knowledge, a rumor ran through the cantonments of the Bengal army that the cartridges of the army had been greased with the fat of pigs, considered unclean by both Mohammedans and Hindus. No assurance could quiet the minds of the Sepoys. Fires occurred within the native lines; officers were insulted by their men; confidence vanished and only the shell of discipline remained. In addition, the breaking of the long-threatened storm found many of the regiments denuded of their best officers. The administration of the great empire in which Dalhousie laid the corner-stone, required a larger staff than the civil service could supply, with the result that the army was drawn upon for some of its ablest minds.

The annexation of Oudh probably added the last torch to the rapidly growing fire, despite the fact that the former government of this province had been distinctly distasteful to the Hindu element. The enemies of Great Britain, however, spread the word that the government in London had decided to apply equally stringent measures throughout all India and, when the introduction of the greased cartridges had incited the native army to revolt, when the advocates of mutiny saw nothing before them but destruction—either of their lives or their traditions—they fell an easy prey to the specious arguments of those who were strongly opposed to an extension of British dominion.

All that dangerous class of religious fanatics and devotees which abounds in India, all the political intriguers, all who had something to gain by fighting the "invaders," swelled the ranks of the enemy and gave spirit and direction to their measures. They cry throughout the country became "The English rule is at an end—let us plunder and enjoy ourselves."

But, back of all this, it appears that there must have been some dominating influence, some mind that directed the movements of the natives in their well-planned revolt, some spirit of deep-seated hatred that worked up to the climax of the Sepoy revolt. Who was responsible for this? What country fostered the rebellion and fed fuel to the flames whenever they appeared to be on the point of dying down? The influence is clear that it was Russia—the real cause of the Sepoy mutiny is listed among the unsolved riddles of the last century.

Road Sweeper and Artist

The English town of Folkstone recently had an art exhibition of the local talent and one of the best specimens of painting was the work of F. Castle, who earns his living as a road sweeper for the Folkstone corporation. He has a humble home with a studio in the attic. "I think out my pictures as I work on the roads," he said, "and then I spend the week-ends putting them on canvas, for that is the only time I have." Nobody taught me to paint. I suppose I must have a natural gift. Some day we shall be wise enough to organize work so that everybody with natural gifts will have enough leisure to develop them. Then the world will be a brighter and a happier place."
