

PREPARING PLANS FOR "EAST RIVER" BRIDGE

State Highway Dept. Asks for Information from Co. Drain Com.

The State Highway Department is now engaged in preparing plans for the construction of a new bridge over the north branch of the Cass River, two miles east of Cass City. This is an improvement which comes in connection with the proposed paving of 3 1/2 miles of M-81 between the eastern corporation line of Cass City and the junction of M-81 and M-53, four miles east of Cass City.

In order that the highway department may make an intelligent design of the bridge, C. A. Miller, division bridge engineer, located at Saginaw, has written Conrad Mueller, Tuscola county drain commissioner, that the highway department would like to be informed of any knowledge the drain commissioner may have of any contemplated drainage work which might affect the stream at the location of the proposed new bridge.

"If you know of any petition for cleaning out the stream or any agitation for this work, or any proposed diversion of water in the stream above the bridge," the letter to Mr. Mueller says, "we would very much appreciate your giving us this information at your earliest convenience."

Drain Commissioner Mueller expects to visit the bridge site the latter part of this week and will then report his opinion regarding the matter to the State Highway Department.

D. H. LaVoi, extension specialist in animal husbandry, will address Sanilac county sheep men at a meeting to be held at the court house in Sandusky Thursday, March 12, at 1:30 p. m.

Sheep, like other farm products, have suffered serious declines in prices during the past year but a considerable amount can be done by the sheep men themselves to insure better prices and greater profit from the sheep business. It is hoped that all breeders of purebred sheep will make an especial effort to be at this meeting as several matters directly affecting the business will be discussed, says C. J. Hart, county agricultural agent.

DEATH BILL IS SIGNED BY GOVERNOR

Legislature Works Fast After Taking Time Out For Conventions.

Governor Wilber M. Brucker on Wednesday signed the Foster capital punishment bill, which goes to the voters for approval at the April election. After he had affixed his signature the governor issued a lengthy statement in which he endorsed fully the adoption of the death penalty and urged its popular approval as a heavy weapon to combat killing and lawlessness.

The county conventions of last week and the state Republican convention scheduled for Friday, March 6, at Kalamazoo, were sufficiently important to cause adjournment of the Michigan legislature. But on the other hand the law-makers made good use of their available time by proposing many new measures and working fast on those going through the legislative mill.

Senator George G. Sadowski, the only Democrat in the Senate, asked for an adjournment for the state convention of his party at Flint on Feb. 26, but when his resolution making provision for the adjournment came out of the senate judiciary committee the words and date had been changed to take care of the Republican convention. It was passed in this form by both houses. Senator Sadowski and the two Democrats in the House, Rep. Martin R. Brodley of Menominee and Rep. Tracey W. Southworth of Monroe, were granted leaves of absence to attend their party convention.

Would Limit Tax.
Rep. James Helm of Adrian, who has announced that he will continue to talk tax reduction until some means has been adopted to bring it about, has submitted a bill which would limit the total of state, county and local taxes that could be levied on real estate to 20 mills. It was pointed out that this is less than is now being paid by most communities in the state.

"If we set a constitutional limit on the total of real estate taxation, then we will know that the burden has been lightened," Rep. Helm is quoted as saying.

The resolution was sent to the committee on amendment and revision of the constitution. The proposal that the Conservation Department pay 10 cents an acre as a tax on its reserved forest lands, the money to go to the county, township, and school districts, has been reported favorably by the committee on general taxation.

Another proposal affecting the tax system is made by Senator Rushton in a bill which would remove the taxes on standing timber and substitute a payment of 10 per cent of the value of the timber cut. The state would distribute part of this money to the counties and townships. The state would pay 10 cents per acre to the counties and townships on the standing timber. It is claimed that this would discourage the present practice of denuding forest lands and allowing the cutover holding to revert to the state, tax delinquent. Timber owners claim that the high taxes almost force them to cut the timber, even when the market for the sale of lumber products is unfavorable. The law would not be compulsory, timber owners being permitted to remain under the present tax system if they prefer.

Speaker Fred Ming has endorsed the proposal to tax all stock transfers. This would raise revenue which he considers necessary for the tubercular hospital which he is sponsoring for the northern part of the lower peninsula.

Another economy move is proposed. Turn to page 8.

SEBEWAING SUGAR PLANT TO OPERATE

The Sebewaing plant of the Michigan Sugar Co., one of eight branches, has been chosen to operate during the coming season. The remaining seven, due to reverses last season in the sugar beet crop, and like prospects for the coming season, will remain closed.

Price per ton for beets has been slashed from $8 to $6, with the usual 75 cents paid for plant delivery. Field labor has been cut $5 per acre, paying $18 per acre instead of the previous $23.

Wm. Deecan, manager of the factory at Sebewaing says the plant must contract 12,000 acres of beets to insure operation. Contracting will be started Saturday. The Sebewaing plant was chosen because of its central location in one of the largest beet producing territories in Michigan. It has been the best paying plant of the entire eight during past seasons.

MRS. URQUHART'S FUNERAL AT RESIDENCE TODAY

Funeral services for Mrs. Dan Urquhart will be held this (Friday) afternoon at two o'clock at the home on South Seeger street. Rev. Bottrell, pastor of the local Methodist church, will officiate and burial will be in Elkland cemetery.

Ida Gertrude Sadler was born Nov. 7, 1870, in Lapeer county and was married to Dan Urquhart March 20, 1889, in Greenleaf township. She lived on a farm 8 miles east and 1 1/2 mile south of Cass City, where a daughter, Mrs. Fred Emigh, now resides, until eight years ago when they moved to Cass City and have lived here since that time.

She is survived by her husband, three daughters, Mrs. Fred Emigh of Hay Creek, Mrs. Oakley Phetteplace of Ypsilanti, and Mrs. Cecil Sullivan of Northville; one son, Leonard, at home, a nephew, Albert Whitfield, who has made his home with Mr. and Mrs. Urquhart since a small boy, and two sisters, Mrs. Anna McLean of Port Huron and Mrs. Bertha Brown of Cass City. Two children preceded the mother in death, Fanny Louise, 6 years old, and Clark McKenzie, 1 1/2 years old.

Mrs. Urquhart passed away early Wednesday morning, March 5, after an illness of ten months, during which time she was a patient and cheerful sufferer showing plainly her devout Christian character. She will be greatly missed, not only by her own family, but by her many friends and neighbors because of her willingness to give a helping hand to all.

Notice to Elkland Twp. Voters.

MAD DOG ATTACKED CATTLE NEAR ELKTON

In sending a remittance for his Chronicle subscription, G. W. Goff of Flint writes: "I note in the paper there is much loss by dogs killing sheep. If the farmer would put some bells on the sheep, they would not be half as much lost."

Dr. M. M. McMurray of Elkton has written the Chronicle as follows: "A strange dog was in the vicinity of south of Elkton last week. One farmer noticed this dog attack his cattle and his dog. He called me and told me how the strange dog acted. I was suspicious of the symptoms and had the dog followed and shot. The laboratory findings are to the effect that the dog was affected with rabies. There was no means of identification on the dog. This dog may have come miles and done much harm to other dogs and cattle, which may in turn affect many people. I thought it wise to send you a report of this, that you may publish it in your paper, that folks may be on the alert and watch their dogs."

FARMERS TAP MAPLES FOR FIRST HARVESTS

Careful Methods Needed to Produce a Good Quality of Syrup.

Weather conditions have started Michigan's first harvest of the year unusually early and many farmers of the state are devoting their time to tapping maple trees and are displaying their skill in manufacturing syrup or sugar.

Michigan ranks fourth in the production of this crop and the quality of its product gave it second place. Most of Michigan's harvest is marketed in the form of syrup while some of the states sell this product in the form of sugar.

The forestry department at Michigan State College says that maple syrup can be easily adulterated and they also say that there is a wide variation in the quality of syrups and, consequently, in the value of them.

It is probable that many Michigan farmers this year will tap their maples who usually do not bother with this crop. The forestry men recommend that the trees be tapped four feet from the ground and that the holes should be bored with a slight angle upward to a depth not exceeding two inches. A one-half or three-eighths inch bit should be used. The holes can be slightly enlarged about the middle of the season to increase the amount of sap secured.

Strict cleanliness is essential in producing a high class syrup. Metal containers should be used and the sap should be strained when it is placed in the storage tank and, again, when it is taken from the tank to the evaporator. Prolonging the season for collecting syrup will result in the production of poor quality syrup.

N. E. A. LETTER FROM WASHINGTON

Curtain Dropped Mar. 4 on Third Session of Seventy-first Congress.

Washington, March 4—Excerpts from a letter read by Senator Copeland to the Senate during debate this week sums up current sentiment as Congress adjourns. The message from the New York's Senator's sister said, "You must be glad you are going to have a rest and so is the country." No better epitome has been produced to reveal the undercurrent of feeling against a tumultuous legislature. The curtain drops today on the third session of the Seventy-first Congress.

The legislators now entertain the uneasy suspicion that on their return home the anticipated welcomes will be replaced by deadly lethargy. In fact, some of "the boys" have definite plans to remain in Washington until the situation in their home districts can be cleared up by correspondence or through trusted aides. Reports from unofficial inspectors of political fences indicate that many explanations are in order to fix up the folks. The ghosts of the expiring session may arise to plague Senators and Representatives who are heedless of messages from their constituents.

Though there is some uncertainty as to which party will control the new Congress the present session did not hesitate to provide junkets for those continued in office. The Senate was particularly generous in authorizing investigations involving extensive touring during the spring and summer.

Candidate for Twp. Treasurer.

At the suggestion of many friends, I will be a candidate for treasurer of Elkland township at the township caucus. Your support will be greatly appreciated. Mrs. Bertha Brown.—Advertisement tf.

Notice to Voters.

To the voters and tax payers of Elkland township. Next Wednesday, March 11, a township caucus will be called for the purpose of nominating individuals to fill the various township offices. At that time, we will nominate a supervisor. In this time of depression and very cheap produce, with taxes extremely high, we feel that we should choose with greater concern as to the ability of the candidate. We believe he should possess a satisfactory education, good business judgment and a personality that will satisfy the public.

Audley Rawson is one of the men to be considered for the office of supervisor. He was born in Sanilac county in 1893 and received his high school training in the Marlette schools. Later he entered Michigan State College where he took advanced work in General Agriculture. He has been a resident of Elkland township 19 years excepting 7 months in 1928 and a tax payer for 15 years. He has always been active in community work being a charter member of the Cass City Community Club and at present acting as its treasurer. These qualifications we are sure fit him for the office he is seeking.

This letter is sponsored by a group of voters and taxpayers interested in the future of Elkland township.—Advertisement.

High School News.

Thursday, February 26, the Hi-Y Club sponsored an assembly program. Richard Van Winkle, president, acting as chairman introduced the speaker, E. A. Byrum, state boys' work secretary. He talked to the assembly for half an hour telling of his experiences in South America while he and a group of Michigan boys were touring in a "Good Will" tour there. He exhibited some Indian costumes worn in that country, and the instrument with which the squaws made the yarn. After the program the Hi-Y boys met him personally. He told them how they would be able to make a success of their club and maybe some day go on the Good Will Tour.

Caswell Hunter explained what the little red boxes hanging in the halls were for. They're for anyone's pennies who wishes to contribute to the purchasing of a new flag.

The school declamation and oration contest will be held in the assembly March 5. Freshmen entering are Georgene Van Winkle, Lucile Bailey and Guss Moss. Marie Vader and Ralph Rawson will represent the Sophomores. Ruby Kelly, Horace Finney and Richard Van Winkle will enter in the oratorical contest.

George W. Snyder, M. D., of Chicago, Said This

"It is more important to use an antiseptic for the stomach, bowels and kidneys than an antiseptic for the mouth and teeth for the reason that 95% of all diseases arise from intestinal disorders. I have prescribed Dr. Burnham's SAN YAK as a laxative and kidney diuretic for swelling of the limbs, high blood pressure with rheumatism, dizziness and diabetes and found it the one and only product I would be willing to tie to. San Yak is the only laxative I ever prescribed that does not irritate and flush away the mucus membrane of the lower bowel. Hence its use in moderation is highly commendable to health." Sold at Burke's Drug Store. Be sure and get Dr. Burnham's San Yak.—Advertisement.

Children Like This Safe Prescription

Coughs and Sore Throat Relieved Almost Instantly

Stop children's coughs and sore throats before these ailments lead to dangerous ills. Use Thoxine, a doctor's famous prescription which brings relief within 15 minutes, yet contains no harmful drugs.

Thoxine works on a different principle. It has a quick, double action—it relieves the irritation and goes direct to the internal cause. Ideal for all children because it is pleasant tasting and easy to take—not a gargle. Ask for Thoxine, put up ready for use in 85c, 60c, and $1.00 bottles. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded. Sold by Burke's Drug Store and all other good drug stores.—Advertisement 5.

Balloons for Sale

There are several fascinating things that you can do with this picture of Harry and his balloons. You will have to make believe a little and think and work a little, but that's fun.

1. First make believe there is a number in the center of each balloon. You must guess what numbers are there. If you choose the correct numbers they will add up to twenty-nine. The same numbers can't appear more than once.

2. Make believe that the balloon which is about to sail away is the king of all the others. On it is a number which if it multiplied each of the other numbers in turn would allow them to remain unchanged.

3. Now here's something hard.

Make believe that you have erased the numbers and in their places are words. One begins with n, one with i, one with t, one with g, one with p, and one with f. See if you can discover the words and put them together in a sentence. The word beginning with g is gardens and the one beginning with n is now.

4. Now, make believe that Harry is on his way to give away his balloons at some one's birthday party. When he started, he had one balloon for each child who was to be at the party. When he arrives he finds that only three children are there. He divides the balloons so that each has exactly the same number. How many does he give to each child? Look out, there's a catch to this one!

5. And here's something for the very smallest children to do. Make believe that there has just been an April shower. While it was raining something appeared in the sky which exactly matched the colors in the balloons. What colors are the balloons?

Jackie Coogan earned a million dollars before he was ten years old.

A Doll Carriage to Make

Cut figure one on dotted lines. You will then have cut off figure two, the lower half. Cut on dotted lines D and D' for your handle. Punch holes as marked on carriage top, handle and body. Insert paper fastener through hole 1, then 2, then 3, thus clamping together the body of the carriage, the handle and the top. Punch a hole at each corner of the body of the carriage. At the same time punch a hole in each of four milk bottle tops, washed clean. Insert a paper fastener through the hole in a milk bottle top, then on through a hole in one corner of the body of the carriage. Do this to each corner so that your four wheels are in place and your carriage is completed. If you would like a larger carriage trace the pattern given here with a pantograph and be careful to mark on it all the dotted lines and dots.

PLAN 3-DAY MAIL SERVICE TO EUROPE

New Liners to Be Faster Than Present Ships.

New York.—Three day mail service across the Atlantic ocean is not to be limited to air transport. The United States lines has placed before the Navy department plans for two new 50,000 ton liners, with a speed greater than either the Bremen or Europa can display.

These new superliners are to be equipped with catapults with which fast long distance mail planes can be launched from 600 to 1,000 miles at sea. Work has been going on for six months on the plans, it was learned, and they have for some time been in the hands of naval experts for special study.

Germans to Cut Time.

The new vessels, it was said, are not likely to be laid down until at least one of the 30,000 ton liners, the keel of which is to be laid at Camden, N. J., soon is nearly ready for the sea. However, should the demand for greater speeds be felt, especially in competition with projected transatlantic airlines, it is understood that at least one of the 50,000 ton high speed vessels will be started earlier than is now planned.

Coincidental with the plan to put mail in New York from Europe and Great Britain "within three days" it was also learned that the North German Lloyd, which is now operating ship to shore mail planes from the decks of the Bremen and Europa at a saving of twelve hours, is planning in the spring to cut twenty-four hours from the present schedule between New York and Bremen.

May Cost $30,000,000 Each.

This is to be accomplished by sending a plane off the ship far out at sea, first to Cherbourg and then on to Bremen. Hitherto the plane has ended its flight at the first port of call.

The navy's interest in the new liners is due to possibility that they might find use in a national emergency as auxiliary cruisers or aircraft carriers. While it is not possible to compute the actual cost of the giant liners now, it is estimated that they will cost $30,000,000 each.

The all air transatlantic project in which both Imperial Airways and Pan-American Airways are interested is to be opened with a line between Bermuda and the United States. Representatives of the two airlines, as well as the great French airways system, have been in conference here on details of the Bermuda link and airways concessions in the West Indies and South America.

Coyote Finds Defender in Western Zoologist

Pullman, Wash.—The coyote, long the object of paid hunters and considered the enemy of stock raisers, has found a friend and supporter in Arthur Svhila, assistant professor of zoology at Washington State college.

Svhila, who believes that coyotes should be preserved through a discriminate plan instead of being destroyed, declares that the animals do more good than harm.

"The coyote serves as an important remover of carrion," Svhila declared. "He feeds primarily upon what he gets by hunting, and he never passed up a dead animal."

"A decrease in coyotes is resulting in an increase in jack rabbits, ground squirrels and other rodents detrimental to agriculture. A certain number of coyotes should be permitted to inhabit agricultural territory."

And then, too, the mournful howl of the coyote is a distinct drawing card for western dude ranches.

Church to Sign Bonds to Free "Sick Sinners"

Jacksonville, Fla.—If it is the Christian duty to get a prisoner out of jail, then Calvary Baptist church of Jacksonville intends to do it.

By an almost unanimous vote the congregation decided to allow its trustees to sign bonds of jailed citizens who would make good if given a chance.

"I am not advocating that this church go into the business of bonding people out of jail," Dr. A. C. Shuler, pastor, said, "but I think the church should realize that its mission is to help sick sinners and not to nurse well sinners."

Calvary Baptist church is a corporation and owns property, and is therefore eligible to sign bonds.

Gooding ruled that Wisconsin statutes give cows the right of way.

CLOVERSEED STOLEN FROM OSBURN FARM

Darwin Ostrander, 37; Lloyd Ostrander, 18; and Laverne Callender, 19, were arrested Tuesday by Sheriff James Kirk in St. Clair county and brought to the Tuscola county jail charged with the theft of 5 1/2 bags of cloverseed, valued at $200, from the farm of James Osburn, supervisor of Kingston township. The cloverseed was taken Monday night.

The three men reside between Capac and Yale, and according to the story related to officers, they visited at the Osburn farm Sunday. A metal heel plate mark on the ground was one of the clues which led to the arrest.

While the men at first denied any knowledge of the theft, officers say they later confessed and revealed the hiding places of the cloverseed. Three bags were hid in a swamp and 2 1/2 bags of the seed in a grain separator standing in an orchard.

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

Unsolved Riddles That Still Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad

What Became of William Turner?

AMONG the many interesting and curious facts connected with the history of individuals or nations there are few which possess the grim, compelling qualities of the "disappearance cases"—the instances in which human beings have apparently vanished from the face of the earth, never to be heard from again. But if, in addition, the affair is complicated by the identification of a body which is supposed to be that of the missing person, the matter becomes one of national and sometimes international prominence.

But the apparent impossibility of identifying even near relatives is well illustrated by a case decided in the English vice-chancellor's court in connection with a suit in which the plaintiff wished to establish the fact that a certain William Turner had come to his death.

Turner had last been seen on May 7, while he was being entertained at Guildford. He then presented an emaciated appearance, he was unkempt and unshaven and there were many who were of the opinion that his mind was unsettled and weak. Ten days later a body was found in the River Wey and, at the inquest which was summoned on the same day, two men named Etherington swore that the corpse was that of their father, who was missing at the time.

The friends who had entertained Turner at Guildford, on the other hand, declared their belief that the body was that of William Turner, but it was nevertheless interred as that of Philip Etherington. A colored handkerchief was found around the neck of the body and this article assisted in the ultimate identification of the corpse some months later when Philip Etherington, supposedly drowned and buried, walked calmly into his daughter's house and told a rambling story of why he had not previously appeared.

The question as to the identity of the drowned man was then revived in earnest. The proofs were, to the minds of most people, clearly brought out at last, for William Turner had left behind him at Guildford a fragment of a handkerchief which was found to correspond with the one discovered around the neck of the drowned man. To the vice-chancellor's mind the chain of evidence was complete and satisfactory and judgment was given that William Turner had come to this death by drowning. Yet the two sons of Philip Etherington had positively identified this same body as that of their father, whom they had seen every day for more than thirty years, and with whose facial and bodily characteristics they would be supposed to be as familiar as with their own.

Moreover, in spite of the fact that Turner was quite prominent in the community, most of those who knew him agreed with the Etheringtons as to the identity of the body, despite the fact that they also claimed that there was little similarity between the appearance of Turner and Etherington during life. Nor did decomposition of the features enter into the matter in the least, for the common notion that the human body decomposes rapidly in water is contrary to the fact, for, especially during winter or in the months when the water is cold and if the body remains below the surface, the features were often remarkably well preserved. Identification may therefore be comparatively easy, because of—rather than in spite of—the fact that the body has been immersed in water.

No case of a similar character ever created the sensation in England that the Turner affair did, for the reason that the body was not long enough in the water to distort the features in any way, yet neither the Turners, the Etheringtons nor their friends were able positively to identify the drowned man. At first he was buried as Etherington and later the stone above his grave was altered to read "Turner"—yet the latter's family and friends have never been wholly satisfied that it was his body that was interred there.

His Advice

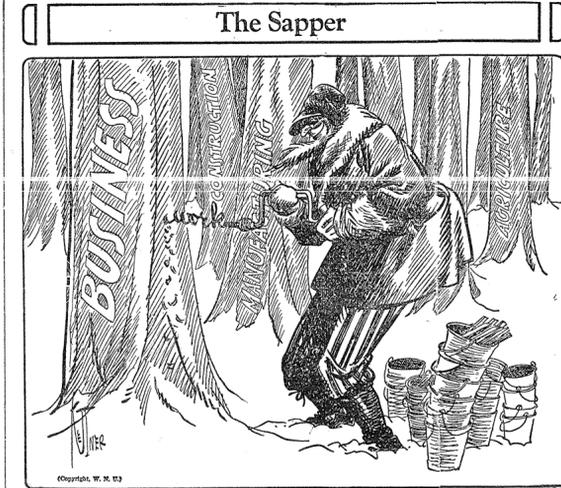

The dean of a certain English cathedral was one day walking through the precincts when he came upon a laborer at work. The man looked up at him and went on with his work without touching his cap. The dean was annoyed, and stopped.

"My man," he said, reprovingly, "do you know who I am? I am the dean of this cathedral."

"The laborer looked at the dean, and then glanced up at the magnificent building.

"Darned good place, too," he said. "Mind you keep it!"

Complete sleep and rest is impossible in many parts of New York city and a state of emergency exists, declares the noise abatement committee in its first report. Noise in that city is increasing each year. "The continual pressure of strident sound to which New Yorkers are subjected," it is asserted in the report, "tends to produce impairment of hearing, to introduce harmful strain upon the nervous system leading to neurosis and psychasthenic states and to cause loss of efficiency of workers and thinkers."

N. E. A. LETTER FROM WASHINGTON Concluded from first page. months at the taxpayer's expense. Through courtesy the "hold-overs" with seniority rights on committees will exercise doubtful power until the Congress is definitely organized in December. The states drawn up for elected officers of the House are only tentative and may be changed in actual voting. The House leadership has lost much of its popularity of late and new faces may rule the rostrum. The open rebellion against autocratic tactics has gained recruits so that the Longworth dynasty is seriously threatened. The Democrats may yet obtain control of legislation. It is noteworthy that they are not evangelizing rebellious Republicans. A number of social functions have been staged here this week. Something in the nature of farewells, because the "lame ducks" are numerous this season with practically 70 changes in Congressional personnel. The ballot boxes of last November changed the plans of many society folks whose prestige hinged on their political jobs. It is not an easy matter to appear gracious and amiable in public when the hosts are conscious that the sun is sinking on their political hopes. Unless there are some recess appointments of "lame ducks" to high government posts the exodus will be underway shortly. A digest of the President's veto message will be stacked up against the claims of legislators in bidding for public opinion. Mr. Hoover will have an advantage in that his reasons for exercising the veto power can be constantly driven home while a scattered Congressional explanation will obviously lack effectiveness. A President always finds front page headlines, while a Senator or Congressman away from Washington has a struggle to find space in any section of a paper. There is some magic psychology about official statements with

Washington date lines that overstate the most impressive local explanations from politicians. No doubt the White House will capitalize heavily on this situation. The controversy will be revived when it is necessary to suggest taxes to provide revenue for bonus payments.

The Plains of Abraham

CHAPTER XII

At noon of the second day of his journey Jeems came to the village of Kanestio, whose chief was Matozee, or Yellow Bear. He had traveled the seventy miles in thirty hours, and was determined to return as quickly, for he was troubled deeply by the thought that Toinette was alone at a time when the sentiment of the Indians was turning against them. Why he and not a tribal runner had been sent to Yellow Bear puzzled him, and the fact that he bore a message of small importance increased his uneasiness.

He had scarcely reached Kanestio when his weapons, a knife and hatchet, were taken from him and he was brought to Matozee. This individual, who was killed at Lake George the following year and who was a boy in appearance though the French held him among the bravest fighters of the Six Nations, informed Jeems that he was a prisoner. He said Tiaoga had defaulted in a payment of corn that was due, and Jeems was to cover part of the obligation. Matozee tersely explained the agreement between the chiefs. If Jeems attempted to escape and was caught by his warriors, he would be killed; if by any chance he succeeded in getting back to Chenusio, then he would answer to Tiaoga with his life. A dead line, was drawn encircling the tepee in which he was to live, and he found himself under a surveillance little less strict than that accorded to a prisoner whose fate was to be torture or death.

The fourth afternoon he perceived an excited gathering of women and children some distance from him but paid no attention to it. Depressed by fears which had become unbearable, he was determined to gain his freedom before another dawn. Increasing cloudiness during the afternoon and a promise of storm with the beginning of evening added to his hopes for success. Thunder and rain came with darkness, and he feigned sleep at an early hour. It was almost midnight when he sat up and listened to the downpour. He was about to rise to his feet, certain that no Senecas would be lying in the deluge, when he heard the sodden rustle of the skin flap to the tepee as it was drawn back and some one entered.

In a moment a small voice whispered his name. Cold hands found him as he held out his arms. He felt a child's drenched form.

Then came choking words half smothered in the heat of the storm: "I am Wood Pigeon. I ran away from Chenusio three days ago. I have come to tell you Silver Heels is dead." Lightning flashes which accompanied the storm that night revealed a solitary figure hurrying through the wilderness toward Chenusio, a figure which sped until it was winded and then continued at a slower pace with a persistence no beat of rain or blast of wind could halt.

The traveler was Jeems. Wood Pigeon had repeated the message Toinette entrusted to her a few minutes preceding her flight with Hepsibah Adams, and no blackness was so thick that it hid from him the tortured faces of his wife and his blind uncle as they beckoned him to vengeance.

Even vengeance seemed futile and inadequate. Hope did not rise in his breast. He had hoped when he knew his mother was dead, he had hoped as he sought for life among the ruins of Tonteur manor, he had never quite given up hope that his uncle was alive. But now it was impossible for him to find that saving grace within his mental reach. As he went on, he was slowly dispossessed of the power to hate, though every sinew in his body was bent with implacable resolution in its mission of death. He would kill Tiaoga. He would kill Shindas. There would be only justice and no gratification of the flesh or the spirit in his act. A greater and more encompassing thing than the impulse which had sent him from Matozee's village began to choke him with a force that was sickening. It was his aloneness. The vastness of the world. The sudden going of the one who had remained to make it habitable for him. Without Toinette there was no reason for his existence, no reason why it should continue to give him the warmth of life. Toinette was dead. It was a fate predestined from the beginning, something he had always feared vaguely. Nothing counted now; to kill Tiaoga and Shindas would not cause a rift in the hopelessness which lay ahead of him.

He advanced with a speed which would have exhausted him at any other time. As the hours passed, an explanation for this haste gathered in his consciousness. He was going home. That in all of its significance was the cabin in which Toinette and he had lived. Their home. A thing that had not gone with her body and yet was a part of her which he would find as he had left it when he came to the end of the trail, unless Tiaoga had destroyed that, too.

He reached Chenusio. The place gleamed with pools of water. Suspicious dogs appeared to identify him, but the people were asleep. He found his cabin with the door closed as it would have been if Toinette were asleep inside. He could feel her presence when he entered. But she was not there. He made a light cautiously and screened it so that eyes outside could not see. The floor, the walls, the room were illumined faintly. He began to put his hands on things, to gather them here and there, making a bundle of his treasures on the table—her things. When he had prepared the bundle he armed himself with a knife and a hatchet and his bow, then extinguished the light and went out, closing the door behind him.

He sought Shindas, for his plan was to kill him first.

Then he would kill Tiaoga. Shindas was not in his tepee. The place was empty and his weapons were gone, evidence that he was away on a journey. For a few moments after this discovery, Jeems stood in the shadow of an oak looking at Tiaoga's dwelling place. The urge to destroy was not strong in him. The gentle whispering among the trees and the drip of water from their foliage combined in a melody of peace which struggled to turn him from the thought of death. It might have won if a tall figure had not come out of the tepee he was watching. Jeems knew it was Tiaoga. The chieftain advanced toward him as if an invisible fate were leading him to his execution. Then he paused. The moon was bright. It lit up his features thirty yards away as he gazed into a mystery of distance which his eyes could not penetrate. What had brought him, what he was thinking, what the night held for him, Jeems did not ask himself. He strung his bow and fitted an arrow. Then he called Tiaoga's name in a low voice to let him know that retribution had come. The bow twanged and a slender shaft sped through the moonlight with the winged sound of a hummingbird.

He Heard the Arrow Strike.

bird. He heard the arrow strike. Tiaoga did not cry out. His hands clutched at his breast as he sank to the earth and lay there a motionless blot.

Jeems went down the river. For many days he hid along its shores seeking for Toinette's body. He saw Senecas pass and repass, but as he traveled almost entirely in the water he was successful in evading them.

When he reached Lake Ontario, he turned eastward, still carrying his bundle. At night he slept with it close to his face, breathing the precious incense of Toinette's things. Sometimes he held to his lips the piece of red cloth she had worn around her hair.

No spring of action encouraged him to return to Forbidden valley or the Richelieu, and it was chance and not a definite purpose which brought him to the place on Lake Champlain called Ticonderoga by the Indians. This was late in the summer of 1756. The French had occupied a point of land and were building Fort Vaudreuil and Fort Carillon. Jeems seized upon these activities with the avidity of one who at last had found something to assuage a killing hunger. He joined Montcalm's forces and was given a musket and a spade in place of his bow and arrows.

He entered now an apprenticeship of digging and building in the earth where the forts were going up. The work and its environment, the excitement of war, and the ever-increasing news of French victories were a relief to his broken spirits, but they did not thrill him. He fought against this apathy. He tried to hate once more. He repeated to himself many times that the English and their Indians were responsible for the tragedies which had befallen his loved ones. But he could not rise to the passion for vengeance. He wanted to fight, he wanted to see the English and their allies overwhelmed, but his emotions were as dull as they were implacable.

They burned with a fanatic evenness which neither triumph nor defeat could raise to great heights or lower to the depths they had plumbed. Death could never stir him again as it had already stirred him, no shambling could sicken him and no victory bring to him the remotest gladness of the song he had chanted in the freight at Chenusio.

He made no confidants, and no one knew his story. An officer found he was acquainted with the country, and he was made a Lake George scout in time to be captured by Rogers and his rangers on Christmas eve of 1756. He escaped in January and was back at Fort Carillon early in February, when he learned that Paul Tache had been one of the French officers at Oswego, and that he had been killed. Jeems felt a pang of regret. Lately he had been thinking of Paul Tache and of Toinette's mother, wondering what their attitude would be when some day he told them what had happened after the massacre at Tonteur manor.

There is no letter of information which covers the lapse in Jeems' military history between February and August of 1757, at which time he was present at the capture of Fort William Henry, or Fort George, and witnessed the massacre of its English garrison by uncontrollable French Indians led by the Abenakis. Here Jeems must have experienced an unusual shock, for soon after the killing, when in their madness some of the Indians were cooking English flesh on spits and in kettles, he came upon the black-frocked priest who had accompanied the Abenakis and found him to be the Jesuit, Pierre Roubaud, who had made Toinette his wife at Chenusio. Father Roubaud was even then preparing that eyewitness document which was destined to become a valuable part of Jesuit and French-English history, and whose hundred or more age-yellowed pages, written mostly by torchlight amid scenes of horror, one may read in the Jesuit archives at Quebec. The priest saw Jeems, but so intent was he upon his task and so great were the changes wrought by sixteen months that he did not recognize him, and Jeems left his presence without making himself known.

After Fort William Henry and the brilliant French successes which preceded it, Jeems began to feel the inevitable pressure which is bound to crush the life from a country that is enormously outweighed by its antagonist. The English colonies had put an end to quarrels among themselves, and a million and a half people were set in motion against the eighty thousand in New France, and behind this inundating force were powerful English armies and a still more powerful English navy already inspired by Pitt and Wolfe. As Te Deums were sung because of his victories, Montcalm knew that New France was hovering at the brink of ruin, but at no time did the outcome of his heroic contest press with greater certainty upon himself than upon Jeems.

As the captured cannon were rushed from Fort William Henry to Ticonderoga, Jeems surrendered himself, as Montcalm was doing in another way, to the last chapter in his fate. There was no goal at which he could aim, nothing for which he could play; winning for Canada, should the miracle of ultimate victory come, could hold no more of solace and happiness for him than defeat at the hands of the English. There were times when his French and English body was divided against itself, when his mother and Hepsibah Adams and all they stood for looked upon him questioningly from out of the past as if he had turned traitor to some precious part of them, yet in such a way that they could not condemn him. In hours like these, the spirit of Toinette came to his side and placed her hand in his, and he knew it was for her, he was fighting, for the home which would have been theirs, for the country she would have made a paradise for him. She grew nearer as the sureness of an approaching end crept upon him, and he felt the beginning of a comfort he had not known before. It was the consolation of something about to happen. Something that was tremendous and final. Something that would have to do with her and with him. He knew what it was and waited patiently for it as another year passed.

Then came Ticonderoga, that July 8, 1758, when over a space of a hundred acres one could not walk without staining the soles of his shoes with French or English blood—that red day in history and heroism when three thousand toll-worn, harassed soldiers of New France faced six thousand British regulars and nine thousand American militiamen; the day on which Jeems and his comrades drove back the waves of scarlet and gold and a thousand killed Highlanders of the Black Watch led by Duncan Campbell of Inverawe, until, as Montcalm wrote to his wife, even the bullet-scarred trees seemed to be dripping blood. Through hours of tumult and death, Jeems loaded and fired, and stabbed with his bayonet, and the thing for which he was waiting did not come. Men fell around him, tens and scores and hundreds of them, and shiver and crumble before blasts of fire. But when it was ended and the English dropped back in a last smashing defeat, he was unscathed except for bruises and powder burns on his flesh.

But Montcalm retreated, and this puzzled Jeems. The army began to learn the truth as, weary and footsore, it turned toward Quebec. Rapidity, folly, intrigue, and falsehood had fed at the heart of New France until it was honeycombed by the rottenness of dissolution. Montcalm was its one star of hope, and as autumn came, then winter, it seemed to Jeems that Montcalm's God had deserted him. The St. Lawrence was filled with British ships. The harvest was meager, and a barrel of flour cost two hundred francs. Even Montcalm ate horseflesh. Still he did not lose faith in God. A thousand scoundrels headed by Vaudreuil had fattened on the nation's downfall, and he prayed for them. "What a country!" he exclaimed. "Here all the knaves grow rich and the honest men are ruined." A fighting man, a man of sword and death, he kept his faith to the end. "If we are driven from the St. Lawrence," he wrote to his wife, "we will descend the Mississippi and make a final stand for France among the swamps of Louisiana."

Thus planned and prayed the man whose bleached skull is now shown to visitors in the Ursuline convent at Quebec. Through the spring and summer of 1759, Jeems watched the spiders as they wove their web ever closer about Quebec, the last French stronghold in America. It was in May of 1756 that Toinette had been killed, and it was in May of 1759 that he first saw from the Montmorenci shore the mighty rock which so long had been the mistress of the New world.

Four months later, on the most eventful September 13 of written history—that "To-morrow Morning" which will never be forgotten—he stood on the Plains of Abraham.

Montcalm's God was about to complete an immaculate elegy which hung in the air like a mighty chorus waiting for a whispered command to begin. To Jeems DuLain, facing the sun and the thin red line of the British across the meadows where Abraham Martin had grazed his cattle, fate was bringing an end to uncertainty and chaos. It had missed him at Fort William Henry, at Ticonderoga, at Montmorenci, but here he could feel its presence—an escape—a release from bondage—something greater than iron or flesh—as the crimson lines drew nearer. He felt the spirit of what Montcalm had said to his doomed heroes a few minutes before. "God is surely watching over the Plains of Abraham today."

DEATH BILL IS SIGNED BY GOVERNOR

Concluded from first page. by the Governor, providing for rigid control of departmental salaries by the administrative board. The matter has been laid before the senate finance committee. If it is favorably acted upon all department heads will be forced to file a list of employees in their respective departments, with the salary received by each one, on July 1 of each year. Under the existing practice each department is given an appropriation to run its affairs, the number of employees and their salaries being left up to the department head. The measure to curtail the powers of the administrative board in handling appropriations has been given third reading in the house. Provision is made for a million dollar emergency appropriation to be used for purposes not specifically provided for by the legislature.

Special Election. A special election will be held April 6 to elect a representative to succeed Rep. D. Skeels, publisher of the Whitehall Forum, who died two weeks ago. He was serving his fourth term from the second Muskegon district. A special legislative committee, Representatives John Dykstra, Muskegon; Kistler, Mason; Burhans, Van Buren; Senators Leland, Allegan, and Van Eenennaam, Muskegon, was appointed to attend the funeral services of the legislator.

Another special committee attended the funeral services held at Flint for John Fitzgibbon, noted political writer of Detroit. While not a member of the official family, Fitzgibbon has been at the capital for so many years, being an intimate of 12 governors of Michigan, that his passing was recognized by a special committee representing the legislature. Senators Peter B. Lennon and Fred W. Harding were appointed for the Senate and from the House, the representatives were Vern J. Brown, Len W. Feiginger and J. C. Armstrong. Other members of the legislature went on the air tour last week, visiting the airports at Pontiac, Detroit city, Wayne county and Dearborn. The trip was for the purpose of inspection and to help the members in providing legislation to encourage the aviation industry. There were 75 passengers on the trip, made in planes loaned for the occasion.

Automobile Legislation. There was considerable opposition to the plan suggested by the administration to license automobile drivers and no further effort is expected to be made to change the departments handling the business. Friends of Secretary of State Fitzgerald were opposed to the plan to give the Department of Public Safety charge of the licensing work, and they will likely have their way in the measures adopted. Driving an automobile in such manner as to cause injury to person or property, but not causing death, would be defined as felonious driving, punishable by a fine of $1,000 and two years imprisonment under a bill introduced by Rep. Darin, River Rouge. Rep. Jewell, Hubbell, introduced a bill to require motor car owners to show proof of ability to pay damages resulting from accident.

Numerous amendments to the state constitution have been proposed, among them one by Rep. Henry Osborne, Soo, to limit to taxpayers, their husbands or wives respectively, vote on bond issues or public expenditures. Some of the proposed amendments will die in committee or the voter next November will find himself confronted with a stack of questions, each important in itself.

A Commendable Remedy. Meeks—Van Strutt's wife egged him on to that flagpole-sitting stunt, didn't she? Milds—Yep; and the boys in the neighborhood egged him off.

It Would Be Nice. Young Wife (at teller's window)—How could I get my bankbook balanced? Teller—I'd suggest that you make a deposit, ma'am.—Brooklyn Eagle.

EASY TO GET AROUND. She (to new acquaintance)—Do you have any difficulty going round curves? Autoist (demonstrating at once)—Not the slightest, my dear.

Looking Forward. By some future railway genius The records will all be broke. He'll invent a noiseless whistle And discover smell-less smoke.

An Ambiguous Compliment. Young Sappe—I've just inherited $100,000. Ain't I the lucky dog? Miss Dill—Right now you're a little immature. But you will be one if you live long enough. You're started that way.

Immensely Gas Production. The amount of natural and artificial gas produced in the world in a year would fill a dirigible a mile in diameter and twenty miles long, powerful enough to lift the Egyptian pyramids.

HAPPENINGS IN THE NEIGHBORING TOWNS

Carefully Selected from Interesting Exchanges for Chronicle Readers.

A Community Club has been organized at Peck with Dr. L. E. Cochran as president; Thos. N. Graham, vice president; James A. Bennett, secretary-treasurer. An evening session of the Peck school was held Wednesday evening. This gave the friends and patrons of the school an opportunity to see the recently completed improvements in the building and how the class-room work is developed. Each room was open to visitors.

Supt. L. L. Richards, who has been connected with the Port Hope schools for the past five years and superintendent the last three, has signed a contract whereby he returns there for the coming school year.

Dr. George Sturm, of Bad Axe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Sturm of Winsor township, and Miss Laura Rankin, daughter of Robert Rankin of Bad Axe, were united in marriage by Rev. C. C. Kemp at St. Paul's Episcopal Rectory, Thursday afternoon. The groom is a graduate of Pigeon High School and is well known in that vicinity. Mrs. Sturm has been employed in the Medical Building at Bad Axe for a number of years.

Roy E. Pugh, 33, an advertising executive of the Flint Journal since 1920, died Feb. 26 at his home in Flint after a one day's illness. Death was due to ptomaine poisoning and influenza. Pugh, who served in the World War went to Flint from Bad Axe as a vocational training instructor and later entered the advertising field. He was widely known in Eastern Michigan baseball and bowling circles and was an accomplished musician.

Mrs. Emma Harborn, Verona, suffered serious burns on her hands and face when an oil stove exploded in her home. She will recover. Flames damaged her home but were extinguished by neighbors.

Caro was chosen for the 1931 parish Jersey show to take place next fall by the purebred breeders of the Saginaw valley parish meeting Monday afternoon at Saginaw. Don B. Jewell, Tuscola county agricultural agent, was named chairman of the show committee.

The famous Lapeer County litigation suit, brought by Burt Sisson, blind piano tuner of Imlay City, against Herman Schultz, for nonpayment of $5 for tuning a piano in the Schultz home, has been settled after two years. Schultz refused to pay because he said he had not ordered the work done. Sisson sued in justice court and won. Schultz appealed. The same thing happened in circuit court and the case went to the supreme tribunal. Sisson won each time. He received a check from the Lapeer county clerk last week, covering the $5 judgment and his costs.

NEED OF GOOD METHODS IN PASTURE FIELDS

The idea that land which is left in pasture improves from year to year is incorrect, members of the staff of Michigan State College say, and they also state that 20 cows will remove 11,000 pounds of phosphoric acid from the pasture field in the course of 30 years if no effort is made to replace the plant food contained in the grass which the cows eat.

Members of the College dairy department advise that pastures be given better care and say that the pasture field furnishes one of the cheapest means of producing milk. Ninety pounds of bluegrass will maintain the body weight of a 1,000 pound cow and furnish enough nutrients to permit the production of 40 pounds of 3.5 per cent milk.

Animals should not be turned until the grass has had a good chance to start growth, and it is a good plan to provide a temporary pasture in which the animals can be turned when the summer drought has stopped the growth in the pasture field. Later, when the rains have started a new grass growth the animals can be changed back.

Sudan grass, rye, or rye and vetch are recommended for temporary pasture crops. Sudan grass can be used in the fall and the others both in the fall and spring. Alfalfa and sweet clover have become very popular as pasture crops. The use of 5-10-5 fertilizer in amounts from 300 to 1000 pounds per acre applied four or five weeks before the stock is to be turned on the pasture in the spring is advised for the better Michigan soils. This application will be needed only every second or third year.

FOUR PAPERS READ AT W. C. T. U. MEET

The W. C. T. U. met Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Anna Patterson. Devotionals were in charge of Mrs. T. H. Wallace and the program in charge of Mrs. Walter Schell. Papers read were: The Flower of Temperance Chivalry; by Mrs. Mary Keeler; A Fund That Fascinates, Mrs. McCrea; Life Sketches of Frances E. Willard, Mrs. Thomas Colwell; That Polyglot Petition, by Mrs. T. H. Wallace.

Of all the moneys coming into the treasury of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, none carries the fascinating interest that attaches to the Frances Willard Memorial Fund; none is so far reaching in its influence; and (unless you except the actual membership dues without which the W. C. T. U. could not exist) no fund is of such vital importance to the extension and perpetuation of the work. There are needy territories among the states which could never be helped were it not for this fund.

The World's Christian Temperance Union was founded in 1833 by Frances E. Willard and is now organized in more than forty counties with a membership of almost a million women. The great appeal and proclamation for world prohibition given in 1884 was the cry of the womanhood of the world that the legalization of sin in any form be abolished; it was the vision of woman for world peace and world purity; it was the proclamation of women for world prohibition.

DEATH OF ELDER MUDGE.

Elder Abel Mudge passed away at his home in La Grange, Indiana, on Wednesday, February 25, after many months of intense suffering. He had been sick for nearly 18 months.

Elder Mudge was born September 19, 1852, in Canada and was married to Mrs. Carrie Harper of La Grange in June 1929. He was pastor of the Church of Christ, south of Cass City, leaving there in 1929, and has since made his home in La Grange. He was pastor of the Christian church at Stroh, Ind., but his failing health compelled him to give up his work a year ago.

Mr. Mudge is survived by his widow, one daughter, Mrs. Loren Neazor of Detroit, a granddaughter, Mrs. George Youngs, of Cleveland, Ohio, and three great grandchildren. Funeral services were held from the Caton funeral home Friday afternoon at two o'clock, and burial was in Greenwood cemetery. Rev. Fry of Bronson, Mich., officiated.
