THAT KIND OF PERSON By FANNIE HURST

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
(WNU Service.)

HE chronic restlessness which beset the soul of Agnes Lynn was largely due to the fact that she was continually being made aware, by appreciative friends, that she was too big a person for her

Her role was that of primary teacher in the two-room rural schoolhouse nestled in a rather lovely valley that separated, by miles, two thriving villages.

For four years Agnes Lynn, who had been graduated from Normal school in the capital city of the state, had held this position as one of the two teachers in the little old, proverbially red, schoolhouse that stood beneath a pair of twin oaks and was backed by a beautiful rise of Pennsylvania mountains. The second teacher was a poetic-faced, middleaged man named Roger Nash who had a bad limp due to what some people feared was a tubercular bone condition. But that was gossip.

Except for the insistence from her local friends, as well as those in one or another of the two adjoining villages, to say nothing of those in the city where she had been educated Agnes could have found it in her heart to relax to the quiet, rural beauties of her life as school teacher in this green and placid valley. And yet she knew that she owed it to herself, her friends and her future, to put to more significant use the fine and virile brain with which she was so undoubtedly endowed.

It took all of her will power to fight against the inertia induced by the tranquil years in the tranquil valley. The children who trouped daily into her classroom were clean-faced, clean-hearted little youngsters, prodnets of a wholesome agricultural environment, eager to be friends with her. The pleasant companionship of Roger Nash, frail, visionary, passive, was of sufficient intellectual stimulation to ward off tedium. Her room at the farmhouse where she boarded was a lovely old one of rare, early American furniture, spic-and-span cleanliness and a view of apple orchard, mountain stream and rich countryside that never ceased to delight her. As a matter of fact, an apple tree actually leaned in at her window to awaken her.

That was why, throughout the years she spent in the valley, Agnes had to fight against the sweetish kind of inertia that enveloped her. Life was so pleasant here, so deeply tranquil, each day filled with a fresh simplicity. And yet in her heart she realized how meager the sphere, how unworthy of her abilities, how spiritually and mentally lazy of her to remain. Teaching limited her talents. Throughout her college career Agnes had exhibited a talent for executive work.

Her chance came when the principal of the Normal school from which she had graduated wrote an offer to recommend her for the position of executive secretary to the vice president of a Chicago mortgage and trust

There was simply no withstanding the lure of this offer. It meant not only the tripling of her salary, but it offered her contacts that could lead to big achievements in the business world. There did not seem much reason for Agnes to hesitate. And what hesitating she did was too private to confide to even the best of her friends. She would not have dared to admit it. Opportunity had rapped long and insistently at Agnes' door.

Chicago, insofar as its resemblance to the life she left in the valley was concerned, might have been a city, not in another state, but on another planet. Not even her life as a student in the capital city of her state had prepared her for the degree of intensity, the complicated arduousness that awaited her. Life was like a gale that caught her from the moment she stepped off the train and kept her swirling and twirling at high tempo.

The demands of her position also kept her keyed to a degree of intensity that was as astonishing as it was exhilarating. For the first few months of the new environment, bewildered as she was in many respects, Agnes realized that she owed it to herself to have ventured forth into these active fields of enterprise. Gone were the old fears of intellecual lassitude, mental decline and physical smugness. The city had her in its tempo.

She rose in her fairly comfortable boarding house room that had for its vista the window of another boarding house room precisely like hers, she dressed in haste, she breakfasted in haste at a cafeteria, she met her employer in the tense, terse, impersonal mood of the city, she performed her tasks with a mechanical and speededup rectitude, she lunched in a business women's club to the rattle of dishes and the roar of the elevated railroad, she met her employer for an afternoon of more of the speed of routine, she dined in a table d'hote tearoom with the evening paper propped up against the sugar bowl. She sought out the movies, the theater or the company of a male or female colleague in her office for her evening's entertainment.

There was a man. There naturally would be in the life of an attractive, up-and-going girl like Agnes. He was salesmanager for the Chicago branch of an enormous automobile concern. A hale, hearty fellow, with concrete ambitions, tried and true. Lilianthal was headed for wealth. He wanted power, position, money. He was on his way to obtain them. He was already slated for one of the vice presidency plums of his firm.

Strange that he should have been attracted to a girl of the particular type of Agnes. There was nothing obvious about her. She dawned upon you slowly. There was the obvious about Lilianthal. He was precisely what he seemed to be. In the phraseology of his trade he was a "comer." And yet, buried in him, was the consciousness that here in this slender, well-bred girl, was the sort of woman with whom he could proudly share his ultimate success. He visualized her in pearls and good lace, presiding at his table.

A successful man needed a wife like that. Class! That was Agnes all over-nothing showy, but class! There came a time when the rather simple routine of the young business woman became a thing of the past. Instead, the best lakeshore hotel restaurant, night after night with Lilianthal. Opera. Races. Motor rides. And all, bear in mind, strictly within the pale of the rigid social formula of Agnes. Lilianthal, who was known to have had his fling, treated her with the kind of elaborate deference a man of his type will show toward the woman he contemplates as mate.

In fact, if Lilianthal erred at all, it was in conservatism. Agnes was to be treated as the woman worthy to become his wife.

For sixteen months Agnes succeeded in sidestepping the impending proposal of marriage. It came one night, the very week, to be exact, that the banking house which employed her services increased her salary by 331/3 per cent and gave her a bonus of five hundred dollars.

At the conclusion of eighteen months Agnes was not only justifying the confidence of her friends in her executive ability, but was about to make a marriage that was in keeping with her general success.

It was then, while Lilianthal was waiting a promised week for his answer, that Agnes sat down and took

It was the first time she had dared allow herself the time to make mental inventory of the state of mind and being of this girl who had come out of the valley.

First and foremost it was obvious to her that she was not in love-with

It seemed to her as she sat there, facing herself in her boarding house room, that she was bankrupt in countless ways; that she was empty handed, empty-hearted. Everything that the new life had brought her was something mechanical and outside of herself. Good clothes. Good shows. Good restaurants. Showy companionship. And to replace the old joy-ofthe-valley that seemed to have flowed out of her, there remained nothing.

Lilianthal was out of the question. Confidant predictions to the con trary notwithstanding, Agnes was miscast. She was not that kind of person. Memory of the valley-sweet mornings of walking to school, the trouping children, the pleasant chats beneath the schoolvard oak trees with a sensitive man called Roger Nash. the simple foods, the simple pastimes, the lovely, tranquil, early American room, became a nostalgia that was almost too much to bear.

Agnes had dared to take stock of herself. The results were appalling, but had to be faced. Agnes was not the kind of person she was supposed

It took courage to go back; it took more courage than she would have believed herself capable of. It is not easy in life to take what may be regarded as a retrogressive step and that is just what Agnes did in returning to her position as school teacher in the valley. At least that is how her friends, who were so ambitious for her, regarded it. She had gone backward. She had not been of the stamina they had hoped. Agnes is not particularly inter ested in the psychology of it. She only knows that the valley is sweeter and greener and cleaner than ever and the task of teaching the young is one that fills her with ambition. The days have a tonic for her that nothing else could quite achieve and so have the long, stimulating hours in the counpany of Roger Nash, the visionary.

See-Saw A

"The saw is very dull. The seen is very beautiful."

Handicapped

Struggling with a three-year-old appetite, she had a mouthful of potato and was reaching for her glass of milk. Some one asked her a question and her answer was: "Uh huh."

"Is that the way to answer?" her mother prompted. "Why," she replied, gulping down her mouthful, "I didn't have anything | more butterfat on silage than on fod to talk with!"

GIVE DAIRY COW PROPER FEEDING

Liberal Ration Increases the Milk Production Later.

Giving the dairy cow a good start by proper feeding throughout her dry period is a sure way to help her freshen in a desirable condition, says C. L. Blackman, dairy specialist at Ohio State university.

A cow beginning her lactation in low condition, he states, may produce less than 70 per cent as much milk as she produces when she freshens in good condition. Apparently cows freshening in low condition produce less than their possible capacity throughout the entire lactation period.

Progressive dairymen who keep records and study their cows have learned this fact from experience. Blackman points out. They have found that the most profitable feed is that fed during the dry period.

As soon as the cow is dry she should be fed according to her condition. If she is in good flesh, very little except a good legume hay and silage, or pasture, need be given during this time. However, if she is in poor flesh it is best to feed liberally. Instead of a high protein ration the dry cow requires one that is light and laxative.

If a high quality legume hay is available, he suggests that the ration contain 400 pounds of corn or corn and cob meal, 200 pounds oats, 100 pounds wheat, 100 pound wheat bran, and 100 pounds linseed oil meal or soy bean meal.

If only poor roughage, such as timothy hay, oat straw, or corn stover is available, it is usually best to increase the oil meal or soy bean meal by 50

Drinking Cups Increase

Cow's Yield of Milk A dairyman recently said that of all the improvements that he had put into his dairy farm the one which brought him the most returns in actual dollars was drinking cups for his cows. Another dairyman found by actual figures that the drinking cups not only saved a lot of work, but have also greatly increased the milk production of his herd. Every farmer who has drinking cups knows that cows, like people, drink more often when the supply is convenient, particularly when they are eating. At least four pounds of water are required for each pound of milk produced, so that any increase in consumption of water s usually followed by a correspondingly larger milk yield.

Silage Increases Milk

and Butter Production A survey of dairy herds in a large section of Pennsylvania showed that a cow fed on silage produced 150 gallons of milk more per year than when he silage was withheld. a gallon this amounts to $30 more per year. For a ten-cow herd the increased profits amount to approximately $300 in a single year.

Another extensive survey carried out by the Minnesota Cow Testing association showed that silage-fed cows produced a larger quantity of butterfat per cow, resulting in the production of 70 pounds more butter per year. At 42 cents a pound this amounts to an annual increased profit amounts to an amount of $30 per cow.

Dairy Hints

There is no best breed of dairy

The rock-bottom essentials of a good dairy barn are that it be clean, well ventilated and well lighted.

Niggardly feeding of good cows is mistaken economy; likewise, liberal feeding of poor cows is just as poor practice. Proper feeding, culling, and management of the average dairy herd, combined with breeding for high production, will give the highest dairy re-Breeding records eliminate guess work as to calving dates and permit the dairyman to dry up the cow a reasonable length of time before she is due to freshen. For tillable pasture land that has gone to weeds, breaking may be best; this to be followed by a fall nurse crop for the pasture grasses after a cultivated crop in the spring and sum-

Grubs are beginning to show in the old cows by this time. It is recommended that stockmen look for them so as to remove them from the cows' hides. The grubs may be removed as soon as the hole is cut through the hide by gently pressing it out. Comparing corn silage with corn fodder for feeding dairy cows, experiments conducted by the North Dakota experiment station revealed that the cows on trial produced 4 per cent

NEW DELHI IS NEW DATE LINE IN NEWS

Capital of India Is Laid Out Like Washington.

Washington.-New Delhi, new headline for many news dispatches from India, is to the British Indian empire what Washington, D. C., is to the United States.

"The general plan of this magnificent new city as laid out by Sir Edwin Lutyens resembles L'Enfant's plan for the American capital," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society. "However, New Delhi is not the first capital to be located on the banks of the sprawling Jumna river.

"Within an area of 45 square miles around New Delhi, seven huge cities have been raised by powerful emperors and princes. Only crumbling temples and leveled walls strewn about the flat countryside attest the bygone glory of these dead cities. The most recent Old Delhi, still stands, an enduring monument to the power and wealth of the Mogul emperors who ruled India for three centuries.

"While New Delhi may be patterned after Washington, even to having a separate government, in many other respects it is different. There is a central mall called King's Way, with imposing government buildings of mixed classical and Indian architecture fronting it. Instead of the legislative hall being the focal point, as is our capitol, the massive British viceroy's palace, or government house, set on a low Acropolislike hill, is the hub. Broad avenues and boulevards radiate from Government court in front of it like spokes, each pointing to an Indian historical landmark. Palaces of Indian princes and the homes of officials and members of the assembly line these arteries. Employees and workers have comfortable bungalows and hotels on the outlying streets.

Great Council House.

"Set off a little to itself, almost as if it had been thought of at the last minute, is the great council house, a huge structure resembling from the outside a round and magnified Lincoln memorial. It encircles 13 acres, about four times the ground area of the United States capitol. Its most distinctive feature, aside from its cartwheel shape, is the majestic row of tall, white columns lining its half-mile periphery.

"Inside the council house are large chambers, tastefully decorated, where meet the three legislative branches of the government of India, the council of state (upper house), the legislative assembly (lower house) and the chamber of princes. The magnificent library in the center of the building is large enough to hold all three hodies meeting together. Of especial interest to the occidental mind are the beautifully carved stone screens behind which purdah ladies may watch the princes when in session.

"Many visitors to New Delhi wonder why there are not more shade trees. The reason is clear. Because of the dryness of the climate, pipe lines must be led to each tree to keep it alive.

"Never cless the imperial city is not a deser? all the year round. During two months, January and February, when the weather is clear and cool, it is literally a garden capital. Lawns, shrubs and flowers, such as sweet peas, roses, lupines, hollyhocks. red poinsettias and purple bougainvillea bloom in profusion and make the British feel at home, although squatting Punjab women, in gayly-colored clothes, are the gardeners. March spells the doom of this Edenlike atmosphere with the advent of the first dust storm. These hot blistering winds from the plains wither up ev-

Simla, the Summer Capital.

"The 'season' at this inland capital is short and follows closely the climatic changes. The end of October, when the weather begins to become more livable, marks the annual influx of government officials, princes, and members of the assembly from Simla, the summer capital, high in the Punjah hills. From then until March, life at New Delhi is not unlike that in any other large capital such as London or Washington, D. C. Social affairs, garden parties, state balls, polo matches, charity entertainments and, of course, politics occupy the time of its migratory inhabitants. For about seven hot months in summer, New Delhi is practically a deserted city, excepting for caretakers.

"Parliament street, a main avenue, leads directly to the great mosque in the center of Old Delhi, some five miles distant. There, Friday mornings, thousands of turbaned Mohammedans gather for prayer. Lined up in straight rows, they look like soldiers performing Swedish exercises, as they kneel and bow in unison.

"The remains of Shah Jahan's intricate palace with the famous peacock throne room, the ornamented city gates and the shops on the 'street of silver' long have attracted colorful tourists from the length and breadth of India to Old Delhi. Foreign visitors wearing pith helmets in the cooler months also visit the scenes of the gallant assault of Britain's little army against the Delhi ramparts during the mutiny of 1857."

Expressing Doubt

The idiom "to take with a grain of salt" means "to accept with reserve or doubt." As early as 1647, it was used by Trapp in his "Commercial Review" with the meaning, "to accept a statement with a certain amount of reserve."-Literary Digest.

Generally the Latter "To be indifferent to public opinion," said Hi Ho, the sage of Chinatown, 'will make you either a very great personage or a very insignificant one."

Statistics for the 1930 population of Michigan classified as urban and rural, and by sex, color, age, marital condition, illiteracy, etc., have been issued by the Bureau of the Census in a bulletin (Population—Second Series) entitled "Composition and Characteristics of the Population." This is a pamphlet of 74 pages, 9 by 111/2 tables.

The urban population of Michigan in 1930 was 3,302,075, representing an increase of 1,060,515, or 47.3 per cent, since 1920. The urban population formed 68.2 per cent of the total population, (4,842,325), as compared with 61.1 per cent in 1920. Urban population, as defined by the Census Bureau, is in general that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, the remainder being classed as rural.

The rural population of Michigan in 1930 was 1,540,250, comprising 775,436 persons living on farms, and 764,814 not living on farms, representing as a whole an increase of 113,398, or 7.9 per cent, as compared with the rural population in 1920 (1,426,852). The rural-farm population, taken alone, decreased 69,063, or 8.2 per cent, between 1920 and 1930, while the rural-nonfarm population increased 182,461, or 31.3 per

COLLEGE BEEF HERD

Michigan livestock men who attend Feeders' Day at Michigan State College Friday, June 26, will find the lots of fat cattle at the new barns south of the Red Cedar river for the first time this year.

The day's program begins at 10:30 Eastern Standard time and will start with an inspection trip through the new barns. Members of the college staff will explain some of the experimental work which will be done in these buildings.

A luncheon will be held at noon in the Union building. Charles E. Snyonly when they separate easily from Journal, will talk about the livestock situation in the central states and of the price prospects for the future. Dr. P. G. Minneman, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, will present the findings of a study made of the livestock area in southeastern Michigan. Members of the college animal husbandry department will tell how the various lots of animals in the feeding trials were handled and the information of the rates and costs of gains made by the animals will be given. Baby beeves, lambs, and hogs fed in the trials this year.

Reports A.A.A.

READ this record that shows how New Iso-Vis distinguished itself in the Indianapolis Speedway tests. It's certified by the American Automobile Association.

- I New Iso-Vis did not thin out from dilution.
- 2 During entire 9,000 mile tests, all parts of engine and chassis were lubricated effectively.
- 3 Consumption: Iso-Vis 50 (Heavy) at 30 m. p. h.—only 2 qts. in 1000 miles. At 55 m.p. h. all oils all cars showed consumption 7 times that at 30 m. p. h.
- 4 Carbon formed was only 7.8 grams per cylinder at 30 m. p. h. using Iso-Vis 50 (Heavy).

5 The cylinder wear was too little to measure.

New Iso-Vis rings the bell on every point. No matter how you choose motor oil, if your choice is based on cold, hard facts, you must choose New Iso-Vis. These figures can't be dodged.

The make of car you drive makes no difference. New Iso-Vis proved itself in 13 prominent makes on the Speedway.

POINTS TO SUN AS CAUSE OF WEATHER

Scientist Tells of Study to Trace Changes.

Washington.—Science is beginning to point to the sun as the cause of our weather. In the same gesture is contained a promise that the sun may enable accurate long-range forecasting in the future.

Facts and promise were revealed today by Dr. C. G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian institution, in the 1930 report of field work and exploration. He described the findings of his sun-observers-engaged in three scattered stations at their tedious labor over a period of many years—as "surprising."

Sees Error in Old Views. The weather to which Doctor Abbot refers is not climate. Weather is the changeable, day-to-day conditions of the atmosphere. Science thought it knew where weather came from. Doctor Abbot believes the earlier conclusions may have been erroneous. His report depicts our weather as the result of solar variations. "Hitherto," the report says, "it has been commonly supposed that weather was merely the fluctuation affected by local terrestrial conditions in the orderly periodic march of climate. "These new results indicate, on the contrary, that weather is principally caused by frequent interventions of variations of the sun, affecting terrestrial affairs.

"For many years we have operated stations on high mountains in distant desert lands making daily observations of the intensity of the sun's rays, on which all life and weather depend. This tedious campaign is just reaching its victory.

"Short-interval changes of solar radiation, taking four or five days in which to produce a rising or a falling sequence of solar changes averaging only eight-tenths of 1 per cent, obviously cause changes in the temperature and barometric pressure at Washington and other stations as well.

Opposite cause in solar change plainly produce opposite effects in weather. Some of the effects are simultaneous with their solar causes. Others are delayed ten or more days, probably drifting down in waves from distant centers of direct solar

Doctor Abbot disclosed that five definite periodicities of solar variation have appeared in periods of 68, 45, 25, 11 and 8 months respectively, and that these appear to be related to the sun-spot cycle and to other regular phenomena of the sun.

The observers and Doctor Abbot now are seeking a cycle of shorter periods, and for the year 1924 he has established one repeated period of 45 days and another of approximately 6

Nevada Mourns Desert Music Makers' Passing

Tonopah, Nev.-Folks of the southern Nevada desert country have mourned the passing of Fred Thomas, known as the "music master of the desert," who died here recently only a few days after re-establishing relations with his high born kinsmen in England.

Born to the purple, Thomas left his ancestral home in England in 1906, where he enjoyed the wealth and luxury of peerage, to roam the world as an adventurer and wandering musician. The mining and construction camps in many parts of the West knew him before he came to Nevada in 1914 with his violin to play for the desert folk.

Several months ago, when he knew death was approaching, he wrote to his relatives who could not at first believe he was alive. Two days after they had accepted him, he died.

Move Town to Collect Gold From Streets

Nome, Alaska.-Love may make the world go, but it was gold that moved Flat City, historic mining town in the Gold deposits on which the town rested were far too valuable to be long ignored, so a big dredge moved right up Main street, literally sluicing the village away.

Business houses were moved back as the gold dredge advanced and worried housewives remained home to watch their beloved china and glassware as tractors pulled their houses out of the path of the monster gold recovering machinery.

Court Asked to Oust Goldfish Fishermen

Seattle.-Indignant because one of her boarders amused himself when allegedly inebriated by fishing in her goldfish bowl, Mrs. L. R. Rotterdilge appealed to court for the privilege of ousting the fisherman.

T. B. Clemens appeared to derive much enjoyment from the pastime of casting a worm laden hook into the goldfish bowl. He didn't catch any fish, as the worms apparently didn't appeal to the goldfish. But the practice annoyed Mrs. Rotterdilge, and anyway, she claimed that Clemens hadn't paid any rent for three months.

VAST SILENT LAND IN NEVADA UNTROD

Unexplored Area Believed to Be Rich in Minerals.

Reno, Nev.-Adventurers who seek the solitude of the open spaces, or the mystery of unexplored and unhabited lands should come to Nevada.

Nevada smiles like a rose in snots lies in a burning sun the rest of the way, a hundred miles is just around the corner, and a man is known by his first name from one end of the state to the other. Nevada has a plentiful share of beauty spots, but it also has thousands of miles of lonely desert and sagebrush lands traversed only by the inveterate prospector in his perennial search for underground wealth.

A favorite expression of the Nevadan is that "This state has a square man, woman and child for every square mile," and census bureau figures show there is an area of 109.821 square miles with a population of less than 100,000.

There are many sections of Nevada where a hundred miles or more may be traveled without any sign whatever of human habitation except perhaps the bleached bones of a skeleton. The parched bones of animals strew parts of the desert.

The lure of the unknown beckons the adventuressome spirit of Forty Mile Canyon, or "The Silent Land" as it is known to old prospectors and the Indians. This is an area containing 3,600 square miles that has never been surveyed, or penetrated by a white Moyer.

No road reaches into this vast waste of malapai ranges and fantastic jumble of calico hills. It is full of box canyons and there are, so far as known, no living springs. Aside from a few scrubby pinon and juniper trees the region is devoid of vegetation and the heat in mid-summer is intense.

Lured by its mystery and romance, and stories told by old Indians of great mineral wealth, a few venturesome prospectors have attempted to penetrate this land of desolation, but they never proceeded far or remained long.

Rare Ruins Discovered

in Arizona Desert Tucson, Ariz.—Ruins older and more extensive than any previously found in Arizona have been uncovered by a group of archeologists and Papago Indians near the historic mission San Xavier del Cac, it is revealed by Dr. Byron Cummings, dean of archeology at the University of Arizona.

Believed to have been inhabited at least 3,000 years ago by a simple race of Indians who never left the Stone age, the ruins were unearthed by Papagos and viewed later by a party of scientists headed by Doctor Cummings.

Four pueblos were found near Martinez hill, located south of here near the famous mission constructed in 1694 by padres who ventured northward from Mexico City. Massive architecture indicates the structures may have stood several stories high.

Strategic fortifications and burial chambers covered by desert sands of many centuries tell the drama of a race of Indians who were always in the neolithic state.

Casa Grande, Ariz.-Calendar improvement may be a hobby of modernists, but records at the Casa Grande ruins near here disclose that a perfect system of time measurement was in use thousands of years ago. Once a year at exactly the moment the earth has completed its orbit around the sun the rays of the sun beam through the Hohoakam, marking definitely the beginning or end of a year.

The Hohoakam was the calendar used by the prehistoric peoples who occupied the ruins. It is thought smaller divisions of time were marked by new moons.

Sacks of Gold Save Contractor Loss on Job

Tonopah, Nev.-One Nevada contractor now believes in the old saying,

"Gold is where you find it." He took a job for removing old timhers from an abandoned mine, the work proved more difficult than expected and it appeared he was going to lose money on the contract. Removing a section of lagging from an old drift, two sacks of ore tumbled out apparently concealed there by a "high grader" in the boom days. The ore was some of the richest found in the region, and the contractor says his contract turned out to be one of the most profitable he ever had.

Highland Lake, Conn.—Three bluejays and a red squirrel have been entertaining the winter colony here. The show started when a cottager tied a cruller to a wire trellis and the squirrel and bluejays discovered it about the same time. The squirrel assailed the jays and drove them away.

The cottager repeated the invitation to a meal next day and had another show. For a month the scene has been repeated day after day with hardly a vari-

President Hoover Delivers Addresses in Three Middle West States-Moves Toward Restoration of Economic Prosperity.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

R ESPONSIBILITY for the existing economic depression in the United States should be laid to frozen confidence rather than to frozen assets, according to President Hoover, who addressed the Indiana Republican Editorial association and its guests in Indian-

President apolis. The Chief Executive expressed his hopes and plans for renewed prosperity which shall be wrought out of the nation's great natural resources by a people with renewed courage; and he vigorously defended the course of his administration in the crisis and denounced panaceas for recovery. After alluding to the Russian five-year plan, Mr. Hoover proposed what he called an American plan. Said he: "We plan to take care of 20,000,000 increase in population in the next 20 years. We plan to build for them 4,-000,000 new and better homes, thousands of new and still more beautiful city buildings, thousands of factories; to increase capacity of our railroads; to add thousands of miles to our highways and waterways; to install 25,000,000 electrical horse power. We plan to provide new parks, schools, colleges and churches for this 20,000,000 people. We plan to secure greater diffusion of wealth, a decrease in poverty and a great reduction in crime."

From Indianapolis the President and his party, which included Mrs. Hoover and their son Allan, went to Marion, Ohio, and took part in the dedication of the magnificent memorial to Warren G. Harding. Mr. Hoover delivered the chief address in which he severely condemned the "friends" who betrayed Harding's trust. Former Senator Freylinghuysen, president of the memorial association, presented the memorial to the association, and Calvin Coolidge, who succeeded Harding in the presidency, replied in acceptance. Gov. George White accepted the structure on behalf of the Immediately after the ceremonies Mr. Hoover went to Columhus and reviewed a parade of Civil war veterans attending the Ohio G. A. R. encampment.

Next day the presidential party journeyed to Springfield, Ill., for the dedication of the remodeled tomb of Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Hoover was the guest of Governor Emmerson and again delivered the main speech at the imposing ceremonies.

The politicaal implications of President Hoover's trip to the Middle West e evident and not denied. The three states he visited have all caused alarm among the Republican leaders by their votes in recent elections. Only last November Illinois replaced a Republican senator with a Democrat and sent five more Democrats to the house in place of Republicans; Ohio elected a Democratic governor and sent six Democrats to congress in place of Republicans, and Indiana replaced six Republican congressmen with Democrats. The Republican managers hoped the presidential tour would have effect in bringing these states back into the fold, and there was also the expectation that it would help in promoting Mr. Hoover's prospects for renomination and re-election. That he is a candidate is no longer in doubt, if it ever was. The recent conference of young Republicans in Washington, under the guidance of Senator Fess, national Republican chairman, made that certain.

IN A letter to leaders of American industry and organized labor the National Civic federation takes the first step in setting up a ten year plan of systemizing production, eliminating unemployment and integrating the industrial and eco-chinery for this purpose. Mr. Gerard's letter was addressed to all leading manufacturers in the country, officials of the American Federation of Labor and heads of all international mions. The letter declares that Mr. Woll's proposal for a great congress of industry has received the indorsement of the national civic federation and expresses the readiness of the federation to summon such a congress "if it can have reasonable assurance that the response will be such as to make success probable." Manufacturers and labor leaders were asked to state their opinion and that of their organ-

"What is desired is to draw together a great conclave of delegates, not a mere collection of individuals without representative character," Mr. Gerard's letter declared.

FOR the purpose of encouraging other nations to help in the disarmament movement by telling all about their military strength, the United States, through Secretary Stimson, has made public its report on that matter to the League of Nations. The document shows the land, naval and air armaments of the country, giving the exact number of men, warships and aircraft maintained for military and naval purposes. The total number of army reserves is also given, though this information was not asked by the league.

The data gave America's total land effectives as 139,957, including 13,080 officers. The National Guard was listed at "10,774 average daily effectives" and was not included in the total forces because it was reported "not available to the federal government without measures of mobilization."

The total strength of the naval force was fixed at 109,886. including 10,429 officers and 17,500 enlisted personnel of the marine corps. The total armed air forces, including effectives in the army and navy, were placed at 27,324 officers and men, of which 13,155 were credited to the army air corps and 14,169 to the naval air force. The total number of airplanes in the armed forces was listed as 1,752 including 965 army craft and 787 naval planes. Three army and two navy dirigibles, including the Los Angeles, were added.

W. A. Castle in this country there are indications that this may be true. Undersecretary of State William A. Castle gave out a statement the other day to the effect that the government does not consider its position as signifying an inflexible thesis, and there have been strong hints at the White House that President Hoover would not oppose the scaling down of war debts if he were assured this would be followed by ample reductions in European armaments.

Mr. Castle said the government is and always has been open minded on the war debt question and has been watching the situation abroad very carefully; he added that no crisis has yet arisen of a nature that would call for any action by this country on the war debts. If such a crisis should arise, he said, it was obvious this government would have to consider whether a temporary change was necessary. Official opinion in Washington was that Mr. Castle's statement was designed to help Chancellor Bruening of Germany in the troubles that beset him.

FRANKLIN D. Roosevelt's presidential boom was given a decided boost in Massachusetts by the luncheon given by Col. Edward M. House at his summer cottage near Manchester-bythe-Sea. The governor of New York was the guest of honor and among those present were the most influential Democratic leaders of the Bay state. Little was said about politics during the luncheon, but the feeling was general that the affair was of considerable political significance, and friends of Mr. Roosevelt are of the opinion that the Massachusetts delegation in next year's national convention will be in line for his nomination. Just before the party rose from the table Colonel House offered a toast to the governor as the man on whom the eyes of the nation are focused.

It will be remembered that Colonel House recently announced that he was corresponding with leading Democrats with a view to promoting Roosevelt's presidential prospects. Among the guests at the luncheon was Henry Morgenthau, like House a close friend of Woodrow Wilson, and it is believed he has associated himself with House in this movement with the sanction of Roosevelt, although the governor has not yet declared himself a candidate for the presidential nomination.

JUAN BAUTISTA Perez, obeying a demand made by the congress of Venezuela, resigned from the presidency of that republic, after evading for some time the oral and written suggestions of members of congress that he step out of office. The drive against him was managed by supporters of Juan Vicente Gomez who were determined that the veteran should resume the place he held for 20 years from the time of Castro's downfall until May, 1929. He retired then on his own motion and when Perez was elected to succeed him the constitution was amended to permit Gomez to become commander-in-chief of the army and to be responsible only to congress. An academic, rather than active type, President Perez left the task of putting down insurrections-three of which have occurred since he took office-to General Gomez and his army of 12,000 men.

Gomez, in fact, has been almost as much the ruler of the country since retiring as he was before, and his return to the presidency in the election set for June 19 was considered certain. He is getting to be an old man but retains his youthful vigor and picturesqueness, and probably is the man Venezuela needs.

With all the traditional splendor and ceremony Paul Doumer was inaugurated as the new president of the French republic, succeeding Gaston Doumergue. Premier Laval called at the senate for M. Doumer and took him to the presidential palace, their automobile being escorted by cavalry through throngs of cheering citizens, as the artillery fired the 21 gun salute. At the palace the retiring president transferred his office to his successor, and M. Doumer received the insignia of grand master of the Legion of Honor from the hands of General Dubail, head of the organiz-

President Doumer's first official act was to go to the city hall and be received by the council, after which he proceeded to the Arc de Triomphe and there, in a solemn ceremony, relighted the eternal flame at the tomb of the unknown soldier. This rite was especially moving, for M. Doumer lost four of his five sons in the war.

President Doumer received the resignation of Premier Pierre Laval and his cabinet and urgently requested Laval to retain his office. The latter consented and offered for the president's acceptance an unchanged ministry, including Foreign Minister Bri-

CARDINAL SEGURA, the exiled primate, slipped back into Spain the other day but was promptly apprehended and ushered out again across the French border. His presence in Spain threatened a recurrence of the attacks on church institutions, for the radicals were enraged by the news of his return. The Vatican protested his expulsion.

O NE more member of the federal farm board-the third within a few months-has resigned from that body. He is Samuel R. McKelvie, the wheat member of the board, and he said that as his term had just ended presidential acceptance of his resignation was not necessary. His successor has not yet been announced. Mr. McKelvie, who took part in the recent grain conference in London, will retire to his large live stock ranch in Nebraska.

Changing Color of Gold

The color of gold can be changed by alloying it with various other metals. The old method was to alloy it with about five times as much silver, but as such articles readily tarnished, a new process was introduced which does away with the use of silver. Certain base metals are added to give the white appearance, the amount of gold and of alloy being the same as in the case of ordinary gold of various carats.
