Got Name of Manitoba The origin of the name of Lake Manitoba, which was called lac des Prairies by its discoverer, La Verendrye, and later known in English as the lake of the Prairies, Meadow lake, lake of the Meadows, and Assiniboine, before the general use of its present name, is a matter of dispute as to whether it was derived from the Cree and Oiibwav languages meaning "Strait of the Spirit," or from the Assiniboine, signifying "lake of the Prairies." Abbe Dugas, in his book, Canadian Westy' concludes it is the latter. He says "the Indians who dwelt on the shores of Lake Mani-t ba and the banks of the assiniboine at the time of its discovery were Asthat of the Sioux. There were the tribes Matatoba, Hic Toba, and Ti Toba. This termination in their language signifies 'prairie' and 'mine' 'yellow water,' 'mine apolis,' 'water town,' and 'mine toba' means 'water' or 'lake of the prairies.'" It is a common mistake to suppose that honeybees collect wax from flowers. Beeswax is a product of digestion and is secreted by the workers in the form of tiny scales which appear between the segments on the under side of the abdomen. The notion that bees collect wax from flowers undoubtedly arose from the fact that they collect pollen, which is carried to the hive in small masses attached to the hairs of the hind legs. This

Gen. Washington Knew

Pinch of "Hard Times" Washington.— George Washington arrived at his home from the Revolutionary war practically "broke," recent letters reveal.

He sent his mother 15 guineas with the explanation that these were all he had and that they were due some one else.

"I now have demands upon me for more than £500, 340-odd of which is due for the tax of 1786, and I know not where or when I shall receive one shilling with which to pay it."

Old Court Records

Complete Archives

St. Louis, Mo .- Three packing boxes of old official court records of Ste. Genevieve, Mo., shipped recently to the Missouri Historical society, has given that body complete official records from that district between 1761 and 1865-almost 100 years.

Previously the society had been given official papers from 1761 to 1804. Recently, however, it was decided to turn papers dating from 1804 to 1865 over to the society.

More German Food Served in Paris Cafes

Paris.-The ever increasing number of Germans frequenting Montmartre and Montparnasse, the two gayest night haunts of Paris, has caused restaurateurs and cafe proprietors to substitute German dishes for American ones served as specialties.

In former years the restaurant men catered to Americans with breakfast foods. "hot dogs" and baked beans. The decrease in Americans has resulted in the appearance of German dainties.

Bandits' Heads Warning

to Chinese Comrades Pieping, China.-Bandits captured in Tatungfu, northern Shansi, have served as a gory object lesson for their comrades still at large. Six were captured by Tatung police in a robbery. They were taken to the center of the city and while thousands watched old-fashioned executioners chopped off their heads. The executioners have had little practice recently and took some time for the executions.

How Air Affects Birds

Some birds, such as condors, buzzards, hawks, gulls and albatrosses, can ascend to great heights and soar about for hours without any apparent motion of their wings. They are able to do this by taking advantage of minor air currents through imperceptible movements of different parts of the body. The principle is similar to that by which a kite or glider is flown. A bird which is flying forward and upward against the wind without flapping its wings is in effect riding on an ascending current of air.

How Easter Was Given Date A provision of the Council of Nicaea was that the date of Easter should be solemnly announced at the celebration of the Twelfth Night, which is represented by the Feast of the Epiphany to commemorate the manifestation of the Son of God to the Wise Men at Bethlehem, at his baptism by John at the Jordan, at the marriage feast at Cana of Galilee.

How to Bore Square Hole It is possible to bore a square hole. The device has a bit like that of an ordinary auger, with a hollow square casing which has chisel edges. In operation, the auger turns, but the casing does not. It merely follows about one-eighth of an inch behind the auger bit on its inward course, cutting out the corner cores.

How "Waxed" Paper Is Made The term "waxed," as applied to paper, means that the paper has been given a coating of paraffin wax. The coating is usually accomplished by passing a paper through a bath of molten wax and subsequently through squeeze rolls to remove the excess wax and smooth the coating.

WHEN you buy a Ford there are two things you never have to worry about. One is reliability. The other is long life.

Here's an interesting letter from a Ford owner in North Carolina:

"My Ford was purchased May 8, 1928, and has been run 121,767 miles. It has never stopped on the road for repairs of any kind whatsoever except punctures.

"The brakes were relined at 101.000 miles. My gas mileage averaged 21 miles to the gallon, and on tires, 19,000 miles per tire. I travel over all kinds of road conditions-mountainous and flat.

"I consider this a wonderful record and I assure you my next car will also be a Ford."

This is just one of many tributes to the reliability and long life of the Ford. A Ford owner in Iowa tells of driving his Ford 73,000 miles in a single year. Another writes of 120,000 miles of good service.

Think ahead when you are considering the purchase of an automobile and consider what it will be like after thousands of miles of driving. Will you still be satisfied? Will you still say "it's a great car"?

If it's a Ford, you know everything will be O.K. It will be taking you there and back in good style, just as it has always done. And you will have saved many important, worth-while dollars in cost of operation and up-keep and low yearly depreciation.

ON LIVING IN A SMALL TOWN.

There are so many reasons why people who live in small towns have a a total eclipse. Of course, even in better time of it than those who live this case, the eclipse will only apin the big cities that there isn't room pear total to observers near the line to put them all down here. But one of joining the centers of the sun and the things that makes our city cousins moon. If the three bodies occupy mad is that we small-town and country folks have so much more to say about the government of our state and of the nation than they do.

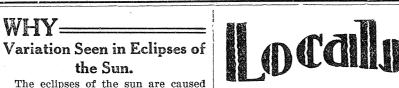

A writer in a recent issue of the American Mercury points out that one as much to say about the State's af- or the other, and the eclipse is said fairs on election day as 35 voters in to be partial. Farmers have their trouble, and so do small town business men, but they are triffing compared with the troubles of city people in times of industrial distress and unemployment. For one thing, the city dweller has to have cash in his pocket or starve. We know many good citizens who don't handle as much cash in a year as thousands of city folks spend for a month's ning, his period of silence having ended, he made this rather Gandhi pessimistic statement:

"If our hopes and fears are weighed in the balance, I am afraid our fears will far outweigh our hopes. But it is too early to make predictions. We ought to be able to say a week hence whether our hopes ultimately will overbalance our fears. At present everything is in the lap of the gods." He had listened to flowery and hopeful speeches by Lord Sankey, chairman of the federal structures committee, and several others, including Indian potentates, but he seemed bored and unimpressed.

Next day, however, the mahatma was free to speak, and speak he did, letting the British know that the minimum demand he, as authorized by the All-India nationalist congress, is empowered to make is undiluted selfgovernment for India. He wanted the British to let him know very soon whether this would be granted, and was willing to let other minds work out the details. But if the answer was to be "No," he wished to return speedily to India and resume there his revolutionary movement. The queer looking little Hindu leader did not say this quite so bluntly as it is written, but there was no mistaking his meaning, for he is always unafraid to speak frankly.

India, he said, was willing to remain a partner in the British empire, but that partnership must be such that it may be terminated at the will of either party.

"If God wills," he said, "it will be a permanent partnership, but at the same time, the right to terminate the association will constitute a real test of the equality of position enjoyed by both partners.

"There was a time when I was proud of being called a British subject but many years ago I stopped calling myself a British subject. I would far rather be called a rebel than a subject, buf I still aspire to be a citizen, not of an empire, but of a commonwealth in partnership. "Not a partnership superimposed by one nation upon another, but a partnership of mutual agreement. In such a partnership India will be ready to share Great Britain's misfortunes, and if necessary, to fight side by side with Great Britain, not for exploitation of any race or any person, but conceivably for the good of the whole world."

after a long debate on proposals to reduce by 10 per cent the dole and salaries and costs of social devices. Prime Minister MacDonald has appointed a cabinet committee to investigate Great Britain's adverse trade balance, and many think this means the government has decided to adopt a tariff policy. The London Daily Mail says there is a strong opinion in parliament that a general tariff of 20 per cent on all classes of foreign imports will ultimately be adopted without an electoral appeal to the country. The Laborite Herald however, contends that a tariff cannot be imposed until the electorate has been consulted and hints that a general election is impending. One immediate result of the wage cuts instituted by the government was a threat of mutiny among the navy men of the lower rating. The dominance of the conservatives in both the present cabinet and the house of commons makes it likely that the opposition to India's demands will be stronger than when the round table first met last winter. The Tories have reiterated their position against those demands. It seemed certain that the debate would be long drawn out and probably at times acrimonious.

The federal structures committee. ignoring Gandhi's desire to have a decision on the general question of self rule first, went ahead with the working out of details.

BANKERS, economists, ex-service men and many other groups are holding almost daily conferences to see what can be done about unemployment and the recovery of prosperity. One of the important sessions was that of the American Legion labor conference in Washington, and in it the chief address was made by Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord. now president of the Radio Corporation of America. He'told the legion that the surest

Gen, Harbord. contribution it could make toward the solution of the problem would be to offer its services unreservedly to President Hoover, and continuing, he had some harsh words for those who advocate the demanding of full payment of soldier bonuses. "I can't imagine anything more ridiculous," he declared, "than your going to your Detroit convention with a program to relieve the country's unemployment and depression problems in one hand and a tin cup in the other. You would be laughed out of the country.'

The prohibition issue was brought to the fore by M. H. McDonough, president of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor, who told the conference that legalization of beer would do more to relieve unemployment than all other relief measures combined. He said this would afford, within six months, appearances or statements or even to give Gen. Pershing interviews. But he chatted every day with his old friends and thoroughly enjoyed his rest with its informality.

One remark the general dropped was quoted by the press. "There's nothing vitally wrong with the country," he said. "Anyone who says we're on the rocks doesn't know his country. We'll come out of it. The depression can't last."

A VIATION news was a mixture of good and bad. Don Moyle and C. A. Allen, who started a flight from Tokyo across the Pacific and were missing for nine days, were found alive and safe on an island off the coast of Kamchatka. Three passengers and a pilot died when a plane fell into the sea at Oakland, Calif .: and a navy plane carrying supplies to stricken Belize crashed, killing an officer and two enlisted men. Wreckage of a monoplane found near the Shetland islands was identified as the plane in which Parker Cramer and Oliver Pacquette were trying to fly to Copenhagen. At this writing there is no word of the fate of Rody, Jo-hanssen and Viega who, flying from

the Nova Scotia coast. O N ITS second reading in the house of commons the British government's economy bill, authorizing the use of orders in council to effect savings of $350,000,000 in administrative expenditures, was approved by a vote of 310 to 253-a majority for the government of 57. The division came sulting from the hurricane that smashed that city may reach the shocking total of 1.400, or nearly one in ten of the entire population. Hundreds of the victims were burned in huge pyres without attempt at identification, because of the danger of pestilence. Other hundreds were swept out to sea by the great tidal wave that accompanied the storm. Relief measures for the survivors were promptly carried out by the Honduran authorities, the American Red Cross, the Salvation Army, and the American naval forces in the vicinity. S CARCELY 2,000 members of the once mighty Grand Army of the Republic were able to attend the annual encampment in Des Moines, the sixty-fifth and perhaps the last. They were tenderly cared for and many of them managed to march over at least a part of the route when the big parade was held, but in the main they were content to sit in arm chairs and exchange reminiscences.

Osmena and Manuel Roxas, speaker, of the insular house, stated that plans had been made for the sending of an independence commission to Washing ton this fall. The delegates will seek a round-table conference and may consent to a compromise settlement of the question. (@ by Western Newspaper Union.)

buried Alooska. CHAPTER III

A Call to Vengeance

During that dash down the Mackenzie, Alan's thoughts were not enviable. . . . "They used Margaret Fournier as a means of making their getaway from the steamer. It worked so well then that they might try the idea again. They might try to capture Joyce and use her as a sort of hostage to protect themselves."

But somehow he did not greatly fear they would do this. He remembered the gun she always carried, his own gift to her on her twentieth birthday. A black automatic, a tiny thing like a toy, it nevertheless was blunt and effective as a terrier bulldog. That big red-bearded bandit who had threat ened to put a bullet "squar' a'tween" the eyes of Margaret Fournier, would likely get one between his own if he tried any brutality with Joyce Mac-Millan.

To Alan it seemed pretty clear that Bill in his haste and excitement had made a mistake about those men being strangers to every one aboard the steamer. It didn't look possible. They knew this country, knew it intimately. It took years to learn the ins and outs of so huge a region. But they knew. Alan concluded: "They aren't strangers, of course. Bill just made a mistake." Half-hidden between two blanket packs Constable Whipple sat fingering his rifle, peering ahead anxiously, as though at any moment he expected to meet the outlaw canoes here on the

something of scorn in his eyes. Whipple was constantly spying upon the in Jimmy and the manner of his death: "You were the only one who drew a gun. You knew they'd kill you . . a belt-gun against six rifles; but you stood up and shot. You were always that kind: and so was Curt. Now you're both gone; now I'm alone, of us three-" The desolation was unbearable. Bill following, he turned and went out of the cabin, into the sunshine of the deck. A grim mood had come over him, a mood shot through with personal and deadly intention. He was no longer merely the stern and efficient representative of the law. Vengeance, a burning and righteous vengeance, had entered his heart.

With a dozen men crowding around to listen, he questioned Skipper Ashmun briefly. "Bill said these men were strangers. That can't be. Didn't you recognize them at all? Haven't you got some idea who they were?" "Alan, I positively never seen a man of 'em till I looked up and there they stood p'inting their weapons at And I see just about everybody us. that goes up and down the river.' "And they knowed the lay of the land like a book," another man spoke "That's the queerest part of 't." up.

Alan was fairly staggered. Bill had reported accurately. The men were strangers. How under heaven could six men enter this country unknown, unseen?

Then, granting they had, granting them strangers, how did they come to this time two or three of them might know the lay of the land so perfectly? be dead-somewhere up the spruce -where to strike, when to strike, how to escape by a straight shoot to their one superlative refuge, the Thal-

Azzah. In all his years of police service he had never met quite so dark a circumstance as this. As he and Bill went down the ladder, the rail was lined with people wishing them a quick capture, wishing the criminals a swift and speedy justice. Alan did not hear, did not care. But as he stepped into the canoe and with a shove sent it skirling toward the launch, he did hear one voice from some man on the steamer; and it rang in his ears like a croak of evil prophecy: "Going after men like them, Alan Baker, you'd better take your luck along!'

* * * At the MacMillan trading post Joyce had lighted candles in the kitchen and trading hall. Though she hardly knew just when her father would return from his fur-buying trip, she had kindled a comfortable fire in his bedroom and had prepared a supper of scones and breaded mushrooms and willow ptarmigan which she herself had shot that morning. As she stood tiptoe at a pantry shelf, away from the crackle and sough of the cook stove, she heard some peculiar noise somewhere out in the night. She went over to the window and there heard it more distinctly -a faint drone that rose and fell with the ground winds drifting out of the spruces. The puzzling sound grew louder, plainer. Then suddenly Joyce knew. The police launch! Coming up the Big Alooska. Coming slowly because of the treacherous channel, but driving on through the twilight in spite of the other men, listening with long ears, redanger. That launch went out only on matporting everything that happened and ters of importance. And this patrol must be very important, to bring the men up a perilous river at this hour. Throwing a cape about her shoulders, she ran through the trading hall, Elizabeth. out into the sharp pine-scented air;

Indian languages and customs made her uniquely valuable in preparing pamphlets for the far northern agengies. Independent, earning a good salary, with friends and sports and work she liked, she had given up all of it and returned to this isolated fur post on a sub-Arctic river. Her mother had died, and her father, alone, crushed by the relentless competition of big companies out to "get" him, had morally gone to pieces. Alan in his letters had written her the sorry facts. Her duty, clear as a call, had spoken to her, "If you return, you may be able to stop that; you may help Dad back to where he was." And she had come.

She knew that other folk were surprised at her loyalty, and thought her foolish, and were shrugging shoulders at the hopelessness of a mere girl trying to lift Dave MacMillan above the whisky and Indian-woman life he had sunk into. But Joyce did not consider it foolish, and she could see no great loyalty about, it. Whatever his demoralization now, her father had been the best of fathers to her. Looking at him not as a father but as a man. she could realize, in her own womanhood, that he had been the best of husbands to her mother. She felt it was her mother's death, the inconsolable tragedy of God withdrawing his hand, which really had broken sturdy Dave MacMillan.

And Joyce was beginning to realize, as the slow months passed, that her patient battle was anything but futile. Slowly, so slowly that only she herself could see it, she was winning her struggle, she was lifting her father out of his bewildered demoralization. If only she were given another season or two, she could salvage his life.

Down in Ontario, debating what path to take, Joyce had thought of asking her dad to come and live with her. From a money standpoint, considering her good salary, that was the sensible thing to do. But she had chosen to return here. At that time she had not fully realized the secret and irresistible reason of her return. If anyone had told her that reason, she would have denied it hotly. But now, face to face with a personal tragedy which forced her to disillusioned thinking, she looked into her heart and saw there the real motive. It was Alan Baker who had drawn her. By degrees unknown, unperceived by her, girlhood friendship had deepened into love.

She had come back to be near Alan Baker. She had come back in the passionate hope that he and she would marry.

There had been an unspoken understanding between herself and Alan that when the road ahead was a little clearer for both of them, they would be married. And then Elizabeth had Alan's engagement to Elizabeth had been a dazing, unexpected blow. When 'Bill, coming past on patrol, awkwardly blurted out the news of it, she had not believed. It took days of racked wanderings in the woods, weeks of helpless anguished tossing, before the spirited strength and courage that were so great a part of Joyce, fought up out, and she steadied herself and began to believe.

But even now she did not fully accept. That engagement seemed strange to her. Though she knew nothing of Alan's secret motives, she did feel his voice, and she saw he had brought he won't go! Then she won't marry five men with him on this patrol. It | him! She'll throw him over for Haswas no routine work, no ordinary purkell; that's what she'll surely do. Bill says she and Haskell are together half suit. this time.

She answered: "I was out hunting this morning, and I slept a couple hours this afternoon. They might have passed then. But they couldn't have gone by while I was here and awake."

"What time were you asleep this afternoon, Joyce?" "I can't exactly. . . our clock isn't. . . Probably from about four tiii six,

Alan half-turned to Hardsock. "Bill, you heard what Joyce said? They couldn't have reached here this morning, so they must have passed here after four. We're nearer up with them than I figured. We'd better stay here till the deep dark breaks. At night this way we can't sight those men on ahead. They'd hear the launch coming and dodge aside into some creek."

He turned again to her. "If it won't be imposing, Joyce, will you give us a bite to eat and some coffee?'

Imposing-an hour of his company, setting a meal for him, learning the truth of his relations with Elizabeth! But she merely nodded and invited the patrol up to the trading store.

Ahead of the men the two of them went up the path together, Alan shielding her from the brush overgrowing the trail; and as they went he told her briefly of the robbery, the murder, the escape up the Alooska.

The news fairly stunned Joyce, as it had him when Bill reported. And with her there was an added reason, a reason that struck her with sudden fear. Before Alan finished, she was grasping his arm in trembling fright "My dad! He's on northeast, up river-up there somewhere! He's bringing down some furs. Alan! what if he runs into these men?"

"Good Lord !" Alan breathed to himself. "If they meet Dave . . . They're not the kind to let anybody go past alive and report their whereabouts!' For Joyce's sake he tried to lie convincingly. "They may not meet him at all, Joyce. And if they do, why, they'd hardly shoot a man down wantonly. If for no other reason, it doesn't They've got charges enough pay. against them as it is. And they won't rob him; their canoes are riding heavy now."

He saw that his lie succeeded with Joyce, for she began questioning him about the details of the robbery, wondering who these six strangers could be, and giving him some valuable information about the water stages on up the Alooska,

They went on back to the kitchen, and Joyce set about getting a meal for six tired hungry men. As he set extra plates and cups on the table, Alan asked himself:

"Isn't she wondering why I haven't been here for so long? I'd think she would wonder at least why I stopped helping her about Dave. But she hasn't mentioned it; she must not have missed my help much. It was pretty shabby of me to stop like that, even if . . ." He recalled how Elizabeth, jealous of the comradeship between him and Joyce, had asked him to let Bill attend to any patrol work up the Big Alooska. Elizabeth's references to "that MacMillan girl" had an-ing to prepare her in some measure, he told her of Larry going into the shed, happening to notice a strange pack of furs, examining them, seeing the L. & H. marks and the serial numbers. He hesitated a moment then, with Joyce frowning perplexedly at those strange furs being in the shed; but there was no mercy possible now, and he took the final step.

"Joyce, I hate myself for telling you this. But you've got to know. Those furs in your father's shed are one of the packs stolen from the Midnight Sun

"Stolen? From the Midnight Sun? But Alan! What-what's it doing here?'

"This afternoon while you were asleep, Joyce, your father, or else one of these bandits, put the furs in there. That pack is--it must be his share in the arrangement. Joyce, your father is someway connected with these bandits."

Realization came slowly to Joyce. Then sharply, like an instinctive defense, came passionate disbelief and anger; and she drew a little away from him.

"I'm sorry, sorry," he said in heartfelt sympathy. "You father used to be my friend. And he's your father; that's what hurts the worst."

Joyce drew still farther back from him, with her eyes flashing, with a defiant toss of her head. He believed her father guilty! He had gone prying around for evidence! He was blind! Heartless! A man-hunting wolf! Inhuman! Worse.

Alan was thoroughly surprised. He had seen Joyce handle insolent Indians and 'breeds, shooting their dialects at them like fluted Yellowknife arrows; but with him, with Bill, with her father, she had always been as quiet as a summer wind. The way she was assailing him now. defending a lot that did not. Forty miles below Endurance, sweeping near to shore around a great bend. Alan looked ahead and sighted the Midnight Sun out in midstream, plowing steadily up south. At his gesture Pedneault swerved the launch and snubbed its headlong speed, and Bill began unlashing one of the canoes. As the two craft drew nearer, Alan rose up and signaled that he wished to come aboard the steamer. The boat stopped, a ladder was let down. Paddling across in the birchbark, he and Bill hurried up on deck.

Margaret Fournier was safely back on board. Several of the men, hastily patching one of the smashed canoes, had followed up the Alooska a mile and found her on a willow island where the bandits had set her off.

When Alan came on deck, almost his first sight was of Jimmy Montgomery's little girl, perched upon a pile of cargo, showered with care and attention from every one. As he glanced at the tiny golden-haired tot, Alan thought of her mother dying less than a year ago, of her young father cut down today by an outlaw's bullet; and he had a swift vision of the bleak orphanage, the friendless and homeless life, which lay ahead for her, now that Jimmy was dead. He was not deceived by the attention she was getting now. Every one was all sympathy for her today, but that would cool mighty quick; and then she'd be thrown into some orphanage, maybe along with halfbreed and Indian children. Alan thought, "She's Jimmy's child; Jimmy was my partner; it's up to me to do something about her."

With nothing more definite than this in mind, he directed Ashmun, the white-haired skipper "You put her off at Endurance tonight. Give her to Elizabeth. Say I'll be back in two or three days." Following the old captain, he stepped softly, hat in hand, into the one well-fitted cabin of the steamer. He remembered Jimmy as a trail partner and a quiet gentle soul and the most utterly fearless man he had ever known. molding cape and dress closely about her vigorous young body, Joyce tried to pray that Alan was not leading this patrol. Her girlish pride was crying out that she did not want to see Alan Baker. Her rational mind was warning that it would be better for her if she never saw him again at all. But no pride or rationalizing could beat down the secret throbbing expectancy of meeting Alan, of hearing his voice, in a few minutes more. Through the whole long winter Joyce had been slowly realizing that her return to this northern Waterways country had been a terrible mistake. Once she had been away, free of it all. With the true instinct of colonial Britons for their children, her dad and mother had sent her out to school, a solid old English institution in Ontario. When she finished, she quickly hunted up a job for herself, a place with a government bureau, where her knowledge of there was something behind it which Alan had told no one. It seemed to her, from what she had observed, that

Alan had no passionate affection for Her question, or rather the way she Month after month Joyce had waited for word of his marriage. The word had not come. She wondered. . . What was causing this long delay? She could only guess at possibilities, but during the lengthening months the belief had been born in her that somethink had arisen as a barrier to the marriage and that the engagement might be broken off.

When she thought of all these things and remembered how intimate and comradely she and Alan had been to one another, Joyce could not kill her lingering hope. As she stood there on the planking now, awaiting the patrol. with her heart thumping at the prospect of seeing Alan and talking to him once more, she knew that tonight she would come a little closer to discovering whether her wild guesses were truth or only wishful hoping. Down the river a great yellow eye blinked through the trees. Swinging around a bend, it played up across the water. In a few moments more it picked her out, there on the landing; and Joyce stood bathed in the blinding shaft of the launch's searchlight. The craft came on and on until by shielding her eves she distinguished its outline and caught the glitter of rifle steel.

The engine ceased. Skillfully, gently, the launch nosed in toward the landing. A figure stepped past the searchlight and stood holding the painter on the half-deck of the bow; and Joyce knew then, her eyes seeing only him, that Alan Baker led, this patrol.

Joyce tried to welcome him calmly, but in that moment she was thankful for the deep twilight, and she stepped back a little, where the shadows of a low-sweeping balsam veiled her face. About the only rag of pride left to her was the fact that Alan Baker did not know or remotely guess her heart toward him. With his first question, after their warm handclasp, he asked her: "Has anybody passed here lately, Joyce?

"Not that I've seen. Nobody in the last four days." "But surely they did! Were you here all day?" Joyce noticed then a tautness in

A question from the girl broke into his thoughts.

"When are you and Elizabeth going to be married, Alan?"

asked it, hurt Alan, for some reason he could not exactly word. Her voice was so very casual, as though she had not even a friend's interest in his marriage. Could it be possible that he and Joyce, once so intimate and so near to each other that they had spoken of children and a life together, were now casually discussing his marriage to another girl?

He said, "We haven't-we'r don't exactly know yet."

There was a pause. A swift color had flown into Joyce's cheeks; a little feverishly she was repeating to herself those surprising words: "He doesn't know yet, he doesn't know yet! Does that mean-mean he's doubtful if it will ever be?"

"But it'll be this summer, I suppose?" she questioned, poking at the stove and still not looking at Alan. "I don't know. Yes, I guess so, Joyce." Then he explained reluctantly, "Elizabeth wants me to get out of the Mounted." Joyce gasped. Out of the Mounted

-she could not imagine such a thing. The work was a part of Alan. What would he do without it? And what would Fort Endurance do without him? She said: "But Alan! What would you turn to? The Mounted has been your work-"

"Well, I've got the offer of a job down in Victoria. It's pretty good, as far as money goes. And Elizabeth would like it there. I haven't exactly decided. It's a big step to take."

Those few reluctant sentences were a revelation to Joyce, like a white light beating upon something which had been dark to her. Alan didn't want to go! Elizabeth was trying to force him. She wanted to live in a city; she wanted the things which that salary would bring her; she was using Alan to get what she wanted. But she and Alan were not of one mind! If he really loved her, deeply and passionately, would he be so reluctant, would he allow anything on earth to come between them? Joyce dared not ask him anything further then; he might add a word that would destroy this new-born hope. But a hundred thoughts were running wild through her. . . . "Suppose he directing 'em!" In low tones, there in the darkness, they talked the situation over. Larry finally asked: "You're going to arrest him, Alan? An accomplice that way, even if he didn't have a hand in the actual killing, they'll give him the limit. It'll be h-l on Jovce."

Alan stirred. His voice was torn with pain. "I don't know what . But I'll have to do something I'll . about it."

After a little silence he directed: "Larry, you go down and relieve Ped. Don't tell these other men anything about this yet."

When Larry had gone, Alan left the musty-smelling shed, and walked up along the side of the trading hall to Joyce's window. As he came up, purposively cracking a stick, he had a glimpse of her whole room. Its furniture was a dresser, a chair originally straight but with a pair of rockers fitted to it, a sheet-iron stove with woodbox against the wall, and a bed which he knew had been a condemned barracks cot. But Joyce had somehow lifted the bleak room almost to cheeriness. There were birchrind creels of great-spurred violets and Arctic primulas and adder's-tongue on the dresser, some sprigs of bright-red berries above it, a wolf-rug across the foot of the bed, and on the dresser a picture of himself, of her former employer down in Ottawa, of her dad and mother.

She had heard him and turned toward the window and recognized him in the weak light.

He said: "Joyce, I've got to talk with you. Maybe you'd better come out here where we'll be alone." She stepped to the window.

As Alan helped her down, trying to say lightly. "It's unlucky, Joyce, to come through a window that way.' he felt the hard bulge of that little bulldog automatic pressed against him. At least his gift was still protection to her.

He suggested: "Let's go a little farther away, Joyce. I don't want that long-eared Whipple overhearing this."

Rather aimlessly, he led her a stonetoss west of the storage shed to a doesn't yield to Elizabeth! Suppose little clear place in the spruces. Tryto us, Alan, I checked on them serial my brains ought to be. But also I'm between the devil and the deep sea?'

She looked up, with tears still glistening on her cheeks.

"Alan, I don't believe-oh, I can't believe-about that pack. Alan, say it isn't so!"

Her bewildered misery tugged at Alan. He wanted to comfort her with some lie. But he dared not build up any hope, for he knew it would only prove a tragic disappointment to her in the end.

"Joyce, we've got to believe. The pack is there. No use going over to see if it is. Larry and I made no mistake. We mustn't blind ourselves to the truth."

She suggested eagerly: "Don't you think these furs might have got there some way besides-besides. Alan! Don't you see?-that pack was planted there! Those men knew you'd find it. and stop, and investigate, and arrest my dad! That would give them time and chance to escape-'

As gently as he could, Alan interrupted her. "No, Joyce. Your dad wasn't framed. Larry and I talked that possibility over. If those men had reasoned as you suggest, they'd have put the furs in a conspicuous place where we'd have been sure to find them. "The pack wasn't planted. Let's not delude ourselves.

"Joyce, let's try to look at the evidence as others will see it. Your father is absent, and has been for four days, just at this particular time. There is the question of these bandits being strangers and yet getting about this country so well. There's the fact that he was bitter against the big companies and probably was tempted to retaliate against them in the only way in his power. And, Joyce, there's the bale of furs; that evidence alone is enough to prove a connection. . . .

He asks "freedom for India, but for India as a valued partner of Great Britain, not held by force, but by the silken cord of love."

Nice words, but the silken cord of love is easily snapped, and Gandhi, who, with Hindu gentleness and suavity, was laying down an ultimatum for the British, well knows it. If he goes back with a British answer unsatisfactory to his followers, blood will flow, and a great deal of it.

On the other hand, if the British say to India, which is unthinkable: "Go in peace and do as you please," conditions in a month will be ten thousand times worse than they are now and still worse every month thereafter.

The mayor of one of New York's big cities, who understands criminals, says (his exact words are given): "Two coppers, young and honest, pick up a couple of criminals. The latter say: 'Boys, can we talk to you?' The young coppers ask: "Talk about what?" "The criminals say: 'Well, we have got $1,000 here, $500 apiece for each of you. Does that talk?'

"The coppers, young and still honest, take the two criminals to court. A criminal lawyer puts up a holler about the Constitution and the rights of his clients. They are released. The lawyer gets the thousand dollars. and the criminals, as they leave court, turn to the two policemen and say: 'You boys are suckers; you might as well have got the money as have him get it.'"

A British flyer, Lieut. J. N. Boothman, won the Schneider trophy, now permanently Great Britain's property. He averaged 340.08 miles an hour over a triangular course. This beats the best previous record, also British. In a magnificent performance another British flyer, Lieutenant Stainforth, set a speed record of 379.05 miles an hour, flying one lap of the course at 404.2 miles an hour.

A nation that can make such airplanes and find men to run them ought not to be discouraged about a few million pounds sterling one way or the other.

It is what men have in their brains and hearts, not the gold reserve, that makes a country.

This country, with its gold piled up, and France, too, for that matter, should remember that Alexander conquered rich Persia when all the money he got from his father was less than what he afterward spent on scientific research for Aristotle.

A number of distinguished scientists, and Henry Ford, answered Adolph S. Ochs' interesting question: next eighty ye ears bring what will th forth?" And the last words of Henry Ford's reply are as encouraging as anything that could be said to the human race: "The newest thing in the world is the human being. And the greatest changes are to be looked for in him. Bacon used to say. "We are the ancients," meaning that the human race had been so much longer on the earth in his day than in the days of the ancients. But we, all of us, are mere children, creatures of yesterday. How Soil Is Enriched by Both Snow and Rain Telegram.

That snow fertilizes the soil is an old belief which has some scientific basis. In 1729 William Byrd of Westover wrote as follows of south Virginia: "The Soil wou'd also want the advantages of Frost, and Snow, which by their Nitrous Particles contribute not a little to its Fertility." Both snow and rain, according to the bureau of chemistry and soils, bring down fertile elements from the air. especially nitrogen and sulphur, and this fact accounts for the general opinion among farmers that a winter of heavy snowfall is usually followed by a season of good crops. It is doubtful, however, whether snow brings down more fertilizer elements than a corresponding quantity of rain. But snow has several advantages over rain. Frequently a heavy fall of snow affords an ample and uniform moisture supply without undue erosion of the soil and at the same time protects certain crops against frost. Some farmers hold that a fall of snow plowed under has a particularly desirable effect upon the fertility of the soil.-Pathfinder Magazine.

How Diamonds Are Shaped None of the world's big diamonds are diamond shape. Few, if any, diamonds are. Diamond-shape refers to the cuttings on the diamond. And these cuttings are the results of mathematical studies intended to get the greatest possible brilliance from the stone.

If a ray of light enters a diamond, it will go clear through, without reflection and dispersion, unless the other side of the diamond has a particular angle.

If this angle is 241/2 degrees, the light still goes through.

If it is 25 degrees, the light is dispersed; and dispersed light splits into mediate future. the colors of the rainbow, returning rainbow hues to the eye looking at it. Indian Fighter Saves

TO HUNT FOR GOLD Important Strikes Are Made in Abandoned Mines. Reno, Nev.-The business depression and the low price of silver have stimulated the gold mining industry in Nevade, with new important discoveries of high grade and shipping ore being made in scattered sections. Many of the famous old silver camps, such as Virginia City, Tonopah, and Goldfield, have responded to the world-wide cry for gold and mine operators are shipping the yellow metal from camps formerly thought to be only silver producers.

Unemployed persons have taken to the Nevada wastelands, some with a small grubstake and visions of a strike, others merely in the hope of finding steady employment at a daily wage.

$45,000 a Ton. The latest strike to capture the imagination is located 63 miles from Reno, at Fireball camp in Pershing county, where ore samples assayed 257 ounces of gold and 123 ounces of silver per ton. Conservative engineers who visited the Fireball returned with glowing reports.

The greatest gold excitement of the year took place in February when two old desert men, Charley and Jim Scossa, discovered high grade ore assaying as high as $45,000 a ton, in the old Rabbit Hole district, 50 miles above Lovelock. This discovery caused a real gold rush and the camp now has grown into a permanent town. Mining men of Tonopah are speaking in whispers of some great gold discovery which has been made in that vicinity. In Famous Camp. High grade veins in an old abandoned mine with ore assaying into the thousands have been discovered during the last month in that famous old mining camp, Virginia City, which once poured $70,000.000 of silver into the national treasury when it was needed most by the Union during the Civil war. Numerous good gold discoveries have been made in Elko and Humboldt counties, which give promise of production for years to come. Southern California capitalists are quietly investing huge sums in developing work there. Even the old "ghost town" of Gilbert has had a resurrection and a small army of leasers are working there in old mines. Round mountain continues to be the most prosperous camp with 200 men employed at Gold Hill and Sunnyside.

THE OLD FARM SERIES Be Silent of Faults We should never speak publicly, at least, of our own faults, nor of the faults of others, unless we hope to effect some useful purpose by it .--Goethe.

A.J. Dunlap

Only twelve thousand years ago we lived in the late Stone age, and our greatest achievement was a flint, well sharpened, a spear, perhaps a bow and arrow, to kill the enemy. Compare that "tool" with the 150,000 horsepower steam engine that Henry Ford recently bought from Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric company.

If we have progressed from a sharpened flint to a 150;000 horsepower engine, airplane, submarine, tractor and knowledge of the atom, in 12,000 years, how far shall we go in the next 12.000.000 years.

Science assures us that the earth is already at least one billion years old, and that man can look forward to hundreds of millions of years more.

An able Boston merchant says: "The worst of our troubles are over, and our greatest remaining difficulty is the attitude of bankers and others that lend money. When they get over their fears, their damaging desire to have safes filled with ready cash, business will revive."

On the other hand, one of the ablest American bankers said: "Citizens, frightened, are injuring themselves and the country by withdrawing money and hiding it. It is not the bankers safes that are filled with cash so much as deposit boxes, old mattresses and other hiding places."

There does exist foolish timidity among leaders, and harmful hoarding among citizens. But business is improving, the country is 100 per cent solvent, with credit unlimited, and more than five billions in gold accumulated. When the people want better times and get ready to prove that they want them, they can have them. (@, 1931, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

How to Build Fish Pond

In constructing a fish pond the following features should be provided for: Water-tightness, so that a small inflow will be sufficient, making high temperatures during the summer months; a shallow area, from 18 to 30 inches deep, where the fish may nest; a deeper area, of 6 feet or more. for winter quarters, and a fertile bottom for the growth of aquatic plants. upon which fish food depends.

How Rope May Be Marked

A new method of marking rope is to treat selected interior strands with a fluorescent material; so that if it becomes necessary to trace the manufacturer at any time the rope can be examined under a beam of ultraviolet light and the treated strands will stand out in contrast.

Sea Replacing Singing Beach's Musical Sands Boston.-At Manchester-by-the-Sea, Mass., Singing beach apparently is slowly regaining its voice. Winter storms carried away most of the musical sands which emitted strange noises when walked upon. San Diego: Calif.-Ants here are fond of using telephones. They don't use them to talk over, but rather to nest in and stop the instrument.
