SUPERVISORS WANT PERSONAL INCOME TAX

Request Special Session of Legislature to Revise Antiquated Tax System.

The Tuscola board of supervisors, on Monday, the opening day of the October session, adopted a resolution requesting the governor to call a special session of the legislature for the purpose of revising tax laws. The resolution, introduced by Ernest Haas, Geo. Freeland and Henry VanWagon, members of the resolutions committee, read as follows:

"Whereas, the burden of supporting state, county and local governments and the public schools has grown to almost an unbearable burden upon the property owners of this state;

"And whereas, certain interests are now enjoying practical exemption from public taxation while the farmer and home owner feel their burden constantly becoming heavier;

"And whereas, thousands of farms are now on the delinquent tax list and thousands of working men face eviction by reason of excessive taxation;

"And whereas, previous experience has shown that revision of our antiquated tax system is impossible during regular sessions of the legislature when local and regional matters take precedence over questions of state-wide importance;

"Now, therefore, be it resolved by the board of supervisors of Tuscola county in session that we petition the Governor, Hon. Wilber M. Brucker, to call a special session of the legislature for the purpose of a complete revision of our tax law to the end that real and personal property may be relieved of the unjust and confiscatory burden included in the above revisions and pass personal income tax large enough to take care of all state expenses; also a corporation income tax to take the place of the present unjust corporation fee.

"Be it resolved that the clerk be instructed to send a copy of this resolution to his excellency, the Governor, and a copy to the state senator and representative of this district."

On Tuesday, the committee introduced a resolution extending sympathy to the family of Supervisor Richard Hascall, who passed away several days ago. The resolution called attention to the loss to the county of an esteemed citizen and a loyal public officer.

On Monday, the report of the jail inspectors was presented to the board and the financial reports of the county road commission and the drain commissioner were read.

The auditor general's report was read by County Clerk Ormes. It gave the state tax apportioned to Tuscola county as follows:

GREAT PLANS MADE FOR HOME-COMING

Great plans are being made to make the home-coming this year the most successful and most enjoyable ever held in Cass City. The football game of the year between Cass City and Caro will be played beginning at 3:30 Friday afternoon, October 23. Everyone is urged to come out and help the boys to win. Your presence will help to encourage them.

Seats will be provided for all and the game can be easily watched from the bleachers. With colors flying from the bleachers and goal posts, the field will have a gala appearance. In the evening a party will be held in the auditorium of the High School which will also be trimmed in maroon and grey, the Cass City colors, and purple and gold, the Caro colors.

WINS PLATE IN SALES CAMPAIGN

Glenn Churchill, employed at the A. B. C. Sales and Service, has been presented with an engraved plate in recognition of outstanding performance in the "world series" selling campaign conducted by the Chevrolet Motor Co.

THUMB OF MICHIGAN POTATO SHOW NOV. 4-6

The 7th annual Thumb of Michigan Potato show will be staged at Mayville, November 4, 5, and 6. The following eight counties comprise the show district: Saginaw, Bay, Huron, Sanilac, Lapeer, Oakland, Genesee and Tuscola.

Wednesday, November 4, will be entry day. The exhibits will be in place by two o'clock and the judging will be done by 2:30. Judging will be done by J. J. Bird and H. C. Moore, specialists from Michigan State College.

Thursday will be banquet day with Herbert Leon Cope of Caro as toastmaster. The two principal speakers will be H. C. Rather, head of the Farm Crops Department of Michigan State College and H. C. Moore, head of the potato work of Michigan State College. Friday will be contest day.

In the forenoon, the grading contest will take place and also the singing contest. In the afternoon, the judging contest for the boys' and girls' clubs, Smith-Hughes students and adults will take place. Besides the regular exhibits, Michigan State College will have an exhibit featuring the better production of potatoes and the State Department of Agriculture will have a grading exhibit.

VETERAN VASSAR TEAM IS DEFEATED 26-0

Simmons Thrills Crowd with Sensational Running in Game Here Friday.

The Cass City goal line is still uncrushed as the maroon and gray chalk up their third straight victory by defeating the strong Vassar eleven 26-0. Vassar, heretofore undefeated, was no match for the hard-running, hard-blocking Cass City eleven.

Simmons, the speed demon of the squad, found little difficulty in dashing off long gains through the holes opened in the opposing line, many of his runs ending in touchdowns. Pinney repeatedly shot off-tackles for consistent gains, one of his dashes resulting in a touchdown. The general ship of Ruhl was again an outstanding feature of the game, while his punting and passing showed marked improvement over the Pigeon game.

The homecoming game with the undefeated Caro team that has held the Thumb championship for the past two years, is the outstanding football classic of the coming week. In view of the fact that Caro scored a 44-0 victory over Cass City last year, Caro will enter the game as the favorites, while the Cass City eleven will be fighting as the underdogs. Caro has made an impressive record to date, scoring victories over Pigeon, Cross-well, Sandusky, at the same time holding their opponents scoreless. This contest between two undefeated, unscorred-upon teams, will have bearing upon the county, Thumb, and even Class C championship honors.

CHEVROLET TRUCK CARAVAN HERE OCT. 17

Bringing to Cass City one of the most unusual exhibits of its kind ever shown in this city, the "Chevrolet Truck Caravan," a pageant showing the complete line of Chevrolet commercial cars and numerous special bodies, is due to arrive at Cass City at 1:15 p. m., Saturday, Oct. 17.

Under special police escort and accompanied by a brass band, the caravan, after parading the downtown streets, will halt at the A. B. C. Sales and Service Garage, on East Main Street, where the various units of the parade will be open for inspection.

Fire engines, ambulances, hearses, hydraulic hoists, buses and many other special body mountings have been placed in the caravan through the cooperation of numerous special body manufacturers.

With a total of 40 units in the column, the first section of the parade will be made up of 16 six-cylinder trucks with Chevrolet-built bodies, immediately followed by the column of special body units. All of the Chevrolet-built bodies in the caravan are products of the new Chevrolet body plant at Indianapolis, which is one of the most modern body plants in the United States.

Heralding the advancing column as it enters the city, a special truck, equipped with bombs and a microphone attachment, will lead the parade through the streets.

For the convenience of those interested in the features of Chevrolet truck construction, a staff of factory experts will accompany the caravan to answer technical questions concerning construction detail and uses of the various body types.

The caravan is the first of its kind in the history of the Flint Zone of the Chevrolet Motor Company. It left Flint September 14, and six weeks will be required to complete the tour, which will include approximately 118 cities and towns in Michigan.

P. T. A. WILL HAVE MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

Mrs. Hulbert and Mrs. J. D. Turner Are Captains in the Contest.

The Parent Teachers' Association met Monday evening in the auditorium of the high school. The meeting was called to order by the vice president, Robert Warner, because of the absence of the president, Mrs. Walter Schell.

After community singing, a short business meeting was held. Mrs. Theo Hendrick, chairman of the membership committee, announced a membership drive and named as first chairman, Mrs. Hulbert, and her committee, Stanley Asher, Mrs. Kenneth Kelley, Clarence Quick, Alex Henry and Mrs. Ben Schwieger, Mrs. J. D. Turner was the second chairman and her committee are Mrs. O. Glaspie, Miss Ruth Ann Erskine, Bruce Brown, M. D. Hartt and Mrs. Corpron.

Programs for the year's work were given out. The High School Glee Club, under the direction of Miss Reed, sang two selections, "The Autumn Lullaby," by Fears and "The Lilac Tree" by Gartham.

Music washes away the dust in every day life from the soul, said Rev. Allured, in introducing the speaker of the evening, Prof. J. E. Maddy, of the U. of M., Fine Arts Division.

Mr. Maddy, by means of pictures, explained the enriching of human life through music. He stressed the idea that we should be interested in music for the pleasure we get from it.

The next meeting of the association will be held Monday evening, November 2, and will be school night. The regular afternoon class sessions will be held in the evening and all parents are invited to attend these classes. There will be no business meeting.

CAN IMPROVE MARKET PRACTICES ON BEANS

Economist Suggests Methods to Improve Conditions for Michigan Farmers.

Better sources of market information, a different grading system, and an aggressive effort to recover customers lost to producers of other districts are three of the recommendations for the betterment of market conditions for Michigan beans made by the economics department of Michigan State College.

These findings are the result of an investigation made recently by Professor W. O. Hedrick, who made study of the business methods employed by all types of Michigan bean elevators, and who states that the number of elevators in some sections in this State is too great to permit efficient marketing practices.

Adoption of the federal bean grades in place of the Michigan grades is recommended because these grades would be more acceptable to consumers of Michigan beans, according to the Michigan State economist. The grades in use at present are set by the jobbers who sell beans.

A complete discussion of the Michigan bean marketing system will be contained in Special Bulletin No. 217, written by Professor Hedrick, to be printed in a short time by Michigan State College.

Mrs. Ostrander Writes of Henry Ford's Old-Time Village at Dearborn, Mich.

Justice Isaac Cragg received a letter from his daughter, Mrs. Harry Ostrander of Pontiac, in which she gives an account of her visit to Henry Ford's old-time village at Dearborn. The greater part of Mrs. Ostrander's letter is printed in the following paragraphs:

Greenfield Village at Dearborn, Mich., named from Greenfield Co., Mass., Mrs. Henry Ford's old home town, is composed of old historic buildings and relics brought from here, there and all over. It is really an education for young folks and will keep green in people's memory the old-time events of long ago.

Edison's laboratory, where for years he worked and experimented to make the electric light, has been brought here in its entirety. After Edison became famous as an inventor, this shop was almost stripped of its wood, and in order to get it all, it was necessary for Mr. Ford to buy sheds, chicken coops and even dog houses in order to get all the material back to put it together as it was. It is a large building and the sides are lined with shelves filled with bottles and materials of all sorts. The first telephone and a phonograph to reproduce your own voice are there. A pipe organ is at one end, given to Edison by Teddy Roosevelt. An arm chair where Edison sat at his work table and reconstructed his first electric light bulb two years ago at his golden jubilee is still there. The chair and table, even to the putty and other material he used on the table have not been touched since he left it two years ago. The building and contents were all brought from Menlen Park, New Jersey. The trees around the building are the same. Five carloads of soil were brought here also, so we were even standing on New Jersey sod. Students from Ford's technology school were working there replacing old dynamos and other machinery.

The next building was Sally Jordan's boarding house. This was surrounded by an old flower garden. At this place, Edison boarded and here he perfected his light. This was the first house to have electric lights. Some time they intend to have a southern cook and serve meals there just as they did long ago.

In 1880 the first electric street car was constructed with a little bit of "engine." The car was open to the weather. The little platform with its two benches, backs together, for the Turn to page six.

C. A. held in Saginaw Tuesday evening. Fifty were present from the two counties. Horace Pinney spoke of the older boys' conference, Rev. Allured on the international Y conference at Cleveland, and Mr. Parks of Caro on the international boys' conference. Fred Moore of St. Clair also gave an address.

KINGSTON BANK BANDIT CAUGHT

Fourth Member of Gang Seriously Wounded It Is Reported.

John Bodar, wanted in connection of the Kingston Bank robbery last January, was arrested in Toledo, Ohio, and is being held for Sheriff Kirk. The telegram to Mr. Kirk on Saturday said Bodar was in the hospital seriously wounded by officers when he resisted arrest.

Three others convicted of participating in the Kingston bank robbery, now are serving prison terms. Two other members of the gang remain at large. Bodar was arrested on a warrant issued at Caro. He was named as a member of the gang by the men now serving time for the holdup. He has a police record, Toledo police informed Sheriff Kirk.

COSGROVE RELEASED FROM CUSTODY

With officers convinced of her innocence in the poisoning of her son, Woodrow, and the death of another son, Floyd, Mrs. Geo. Cosgrove was released from custody Saturday by Tuscola county officers. Her husband, Geo. Cosgrove, stepfather of the two young men, was held until Wednesday evening for investigation when he was released from the county jail at Caro by Sheriff Kirk and returned to his home in Greenleaf township. Both were placed under arrest early on the morning of Oct. 8 by order of Detective-Lieutenant Neil R. Black and Detective Charles Cavanagh of the Michigan State Police.

Tuscola officers are of the opinion that both Mr. and Mrs. Cosgrove are innocent. It is said that state police are now working on another angle of the case.

A coroner's jury, on August 15, declared that Woodrow Cook, 22, had died of mercuric poisoning administered by a person or persons unknown. An analysis of the youth's vital organs disclosed the poison according to a report of Dr. W. G. Gamble, Bay City pathologist.

The body of Floyd Cook, 17, brother of Woodrow, was exhumed September 9 from the cemetery at Ulby, and although the examination conducted by Dr. Gamble has not been officially recorded, it was intimated that mercuric poisoning was the cause of death.

SUGGEST METHODS FOR REDUCING CO. TAX

Group of Citizens Ask Supervisors to Reduce to Minimum Co. Expenses.

"There was no great difficulty in raising taxes several years ago, but the pendulum has swung the other way," said Dr. O. G. Johnson, head of the Tuscola Taxpayers' Protective Association, in opening the meeting of county taxpayers at the Caro school building Monday night. "The cost of government has gone up and the size of our income has gone down," he told the audience that filled the first floor of the auditorium. Dr. Johnson said the association leaders had no intention of making the society a political organization to promote the candidacy of any individual for office.

After the meeting was opened for discussion, Grant Ross, master of the Pomona Grange of Tuscola county, presented resolutions which requested Governor Brucker to call a special session of the legislature to enact laws to lighten the tax burden of land owners. It was carried without opposition.

Suggestions for reducing expenses came from all sides of the house. Among these was a reduction in the force of deputies in the drain commissioner's department, a reduction from seven to four cents in mileage paid to county officers and employees, and the elimination of the county agricultural agent's position. A 20 per cent reduction in county officers' salaries was proposed but when it was pointed out that the board of supervisors had no legal right to increase or decrease a county officer's salary during his term of office, it was suggested that the supervisors should fix salaries at lower standards at their present session, to become effective Jan. 1, 1933, so prospective candidates could decide before the campaign opened next summer whether the jobs looked attractive or not.

Delaying court house construction for a year or two and deferring this year's tax collection for the court house fund was voted upon and the proposition was carried by a large majority.

Carl Keinath, chairman of the court house building committee, responding to a request for information, said it was first thought necessary to raise $267,000 for this purpose. Present plans are that $200,000 will be amply sufficient to build and furnish the new court house. There are approximately $140,000 in the court house fund at the present time, said Mr. Keinath.

Supervisor Steve Dillon, another member of the building committee, advocated the building of the court house during the coming year because materials could be purchased at low prices. Both Mr. Dillon and County Clerk Ormes pointed out the fire hazard to county records in the old court house. J. L. Purdy of Gageton said he favored the building of the court house during the coming year, but thought that the amount in the court house fund at this time should be the limit expended for the new building.

Dr. O. G. Johnson, J. L. Purdy, Roy Haines, Arthur Tonkin and Clarence Fuester were named as a committee to represent the Tuscola Taxpayers' Protective Association and were asked to confer with the board of supervisors in an endeavor to reduce to a minimum the expense of all departments in county affairs.

At the meeting Monday night, it was intimated by one person that the county road commissioners had paid $15,000 for a power shovel similar to one which had been purchased by a contractor for $11,000. Godfrey Schultz, a member of the road commission, appeared before the board of supervisors Tuesday and said that such a statement was entirely false and without foundation; that the road commission had purchased a few months ago a K-2 crane shovel with 35 ft. boom and other equipment for $7,400. A trailer to transport this outfit cost the county $1,000. This is the only equipment of this kind owned by the county. The purchase, Mr. Schultz said, was made from the Bay City Shovel Co. and the statements he made regarding the purchase could be verified by consulting that company. He also stated that the books of the commission were open for inspection regarding this or any other transaction of the road commission.

On Wednesday, F. W. Cutts of Caro who is credited with making the statement regarding the high priced purchase of the shovel, issued an apology to the road commission. His statement follows:

To whom it may concern:
As I made a statement in the meeting on Monday evening that I understood that the county road commission paid $15,000 for their drag line dredge and that Mr. Procter said one only costs $11,000, and if so, it looked as though there was velvet in the transaction. I have found by inquiry that it did not cost that

GETTING RIGHT OF WAY ON M81 EAST OF TOWN

Construction of Bridge over Cass River Is Project for This Winter's Work.

J. A. McDonald, representing the right of way division of the state highway department, has been here for several days buying the right of way along M81 from the eastern corporation line of Cass City to the junction of M81 and M53, four miles east of Cass City. The highway, now 66 feet wide, will be extended to 100 feet or more in width. This necessitates the securing of 17 feet on each side of the present right of way. In the vicinity of the bridge over Cass river, two miles east of town, the highway will be 130 feet wide. Mr. McDonald says that he has met with success in his work thus far making purchases from land owners along the highway. The 3 1/2 miles paving project on trunk line 81 has been authorized by the state administrative board and Grover C. Dillman, state highway commissioner, intends putting on this work next year.

The construction of the bridge over Cass river has been authorized as one of the projects for this winter, it is said.

UNEMPLOYED TO FILE NAMES AT ONCE

Commission Expects to Employ Two Three-day Shifts a Week on State Roads.

Register for Employment.
Those who are greatly in need of work in Tuscola county are requested to file their names with the supervisor of their township before Saturday night, Oct. 17. The county expects to hire labor for highway construction this winter from unemployment lists furnished by supervisors.

The state administrative board, meeting in special session Tuesday, authorized new highway projects amounting to $3,000,000. The projects will be scattered throughout the state with about 60 per cent of the work being let this winter. The board had previously authorized an expenditure of $2,000,000 in highway projects during the coming winter.

The board's action brought the total authorized expenditures during the winter to nearly $5,000,000 and provided for the employment of an estimated 15,000 men on a half-time basis. Other authorizations sufficient to raise the state's outlay to $10,000,000 and to employ 30,000 men are to follow.

It is estimated that $10,000 or more will be available for hand labor on state trunk lines in Tuscola county this winter. The road commission is planning on employing two three-day shifts per week. It will be an eight-hour day and the pay will probably be thirty cents an hour. Employment will be given to those who need it most. Those who are unemployed are requested to register their names with the supervisor of their township before Saturday night, Oct. 17.

Among the projects recommended for this winter's program by the Tuscola road commission, the state has selected the following: M38, Mayville to Vassar, widen grade, 11 miles; M31, Caro northeast, widen grade, 2 miles; M38, eliminate county line jog east of Frankenmuth, gravel, 0.5 mile. The program in the other two Thumb counties is as follows:

Huron county: M53, Sheridan township line, north, widen grade 1.5 miles.
Sanilac county: M19, Elmer north, widen grade 8 miles.

"More genuine satisfaction than any car I ever owned" THE FORD is good-looking. It is safe. Comfortable. Speedy. Reliable. Long-lived. Economical. Everything a good car should be. There is, too, an added something about it that brings enthusiastic comments from every one who has ever driven a Ford . . . the joy it puts in motoring. "I have been a car owner continuously for nearly 20 years," writes a motorist connected with a leading university. "During this period I have bought eleven new automobiles. Eight of the eleven were in the middle-price field, one cost three thousand dollars, and the last is a Ford I purchased thirteen months ago. "In the light of this experience I can say in all sincerity that I have derived more genuine satisfaction from the Ford than any car I ever owned. In saying this, I am thinking in terms of comfort, safety, driving pleasure, ease of control and economy. My next car will also be a Ford because it will give me what I want at a price I can afford to pay." When you get behind the wheel of the Ford and drive it yourself you will know it is a truly remarkable car at a low price. You will like it when you first buy it. You will become more and more enthusiastic the longer you drive it. After thousands of miles of driving you will say "it's a great car." Its economy will save you many dollars. It was a good meetin in this respect. Several of the boys got sum things off these chests, so to speak, and feel better for airin these greavases. We herd the supervizers side and found out that there was sum things we thot wrong about becaus we didnt ritely understand about them. It was as good as town meetin' day, I mean the old fashioned kind, when we tuk time to ask our officers all kinds of questions and got the "low-down" on the komuniti's governmental affairs.

Then befor the kolekshun was taken and the meetin dismissed, a komitee of 5 was named to way all sugjeschuns made at the meetin, assembel the good ones, discard the poor ones, and present the result to the bord for there considerashun and copersashun.

I don't expekt that the supervizers can do all that the felows at the meetin wanted em to do, but the supervizers bein taxpayers themselves, they are ankshus to have releef as well as us in these finansul maters, and maybe considerabel good will result for meetin together like this.

Well, pesant seasion opens Thurs. and I'm goin huntin. Got my land all posted with "no huntin" sines, not becaus I like to deni hunters this sport, but becaus a few hunters are poor sports and shute my cattle and tear down my fences. Jus becaus thes few hav no respect for property, the hunters in general must be denie the privilej of huntin here.

Maw says to tell you and Mira to come down to Cass City next week Friday. It's home comin day and we play Caro hear. Our Jerri has developeed into quite a football player and our hole family is proud of his work on the team. Even maw will risk a cold watchin the boys on the iron grid.

MRS. OSTRANDER WRITES OF FORD'S OLD-TIME VILLAGE

passengers was also open. The chair or parlor car had a small covering and was equipped with three chairs on each side. It was a funny looking thing. It took two men to start it and three to stop it, and it could not turn around. I don't know how it got back to where it started from. It ran from two to ten miles an hour.

A Sir John Bennett Jewel Shop was brought here all the way from London, England, and is being built now, brick by brick, the same as it was there. It has a great steeple topped by a queer weather vane. Then there is a balcony over the entrance holding four huge figures. They represent giants of Bible times—Gog, Magog, Father Time with his sickle, and the Avenging Angel. They are 14 ft. in size and at each quarter hour, an arm of each strikes a large bell that is hung between them, causing the chimes. In England, there is a mythical story of Gog and Magog which I am going to try and learn.

The Village Blacksmith Shop, with a chestnut tree in front and an old broken buggy under its branches was next visited. All the horses are shod there now and other work done with the tools of that age. There are a lot of beautiful horses being driven on old rigs of all kinds here. Coachmen are in livery and wear plug hats, tight pants, etc.

A shoe shop where in 1880 was made as 75 and 80 pairs of shoes were made by hand in a day has been reproduced here. This was brought from Massachusetts. When Mr. Ford's plans are completed, he is going to have a man here making shoes in this shop the same as they used to years ago.

A toll house from the Merrimac River in 1828 has been brought here. It was also used as a shoe repair shop and John Greenleaf Whittier, it is said, used to hang around this little house as a young man.

An exact copy of a tin type gallery of 50 years ago with tin type pictures of noted people is an interesting place to visit.

An old post office has 128 old shutters and doors of plank studded with iron hand-wrought nails every few inches. It is the only registered privately owned post office there is. We were given our pick of two post cards there and could mail them right there. This was also a drug store and they intend to some time have a druggist on duty there to handle drugs and medicines made from herbs.

There were great troughs made from wood to pound herbs in and a mallet like a potato masher. This old post office was brought from Phoenix, Conn. We next visited a log house owned by an old hermit near Ford's old home where Mr. Ford visited as a boy. It was in good shape with a bench outside the door, great beams across the ceiling, a ladder to climb to the loft, an old elevated oven stove like our old stove, old bed, quilts, cupboards and candel, old iron kettles and frying pans and a wooden wash tub made of a half barrel. Outside about 20 feet from the house was a brick oven for summer cooking; also a hollowed-out sycamore tree about 2 1/2 ft. through and 10 ft. long used in old time to smoke meats and such.

A carriage stood near with an odd assortment of vehicles of olden days; also an old tread mill to use with a dog or goat to churn butter. Two nice coach dogs were here that ran under the horses on the coaches, two ponies for the pony carriage, and two of the largest oxen I have even seen in my life. Buck and Bright each weighed 2,550 pounds. Boy, they were whales! They exercise them two hours each day on a big cart.

Smith Creek station was next. When Thomas Edison was a young lad he sold popcorn, etc., on a train running from Detroit to Port Huron, and in his spare time, he did some experimenting in some part of the train. One day he caused an explosion that did some damage and he was soundly boxed on the ears which caused his deafness for life, and was put off the train at Smith Creek station. The station is right there in all its age and just the same as it was then. The trains then were wood-burners and two years ago when Edison, Ford, Firestone and others came to the golden jubilee, they came into the village on the old train into the old station.

The Clinton Tavern was brought from Clinton, Mich. It was built in 1831 and is a big rambling building with a long porch along the front and old fashioned rockers on it. There is a long balcony on the second floor. We saw the old tap room with its big bar and arranged on the shelves were all kinds of bottles and glasses. Bottles were made like the name of the drink they held, such as Black Bear, Log Cabin and animals and fishes. The parlor of this old tavern was fitted up nicely. A grandfather's clock stood on the floor with an old piano, horsehair sofa and chairs. There were nice curtains, a fireplace and nice old carpet. The next big living room had a rag carpet, rockers, an old music box, a mantle and a long settee all marred by age. The dining room was a great long room. At its long tables banquets are held now on special occasions. A bill tacked over the old desk where guests registered years ago was a time table for stages dated 1856. It then took 12 hours to go to Lansing. The kitchen was a great long room, poorly lighted, with a monster fireplace hung full of pots of all kinds, bake ovens, old gourds and iron dippers. Bellows, old bootjacks and an old apple parer were fastened to one end of a table like Grandma Wells used to have. There was a cupboard of old dishes of every kind. I would have liked to stay in that old kitchen longer but had to keep up with the rest.

A complete grocery store was brought from Waterford, Mich., right here in Oakland county.

A beautiful chapel which will hold 150 persons was brought from Bradford, Mass. It is built of red brick and has a tall white spire. It is called the Martha and Mary chapel, named after Mr. and Mrs. Ford's mothers. The bell in the spire was cast by a son of Paul Revere.

The school house where Ford went to school was built in 1861. The desks are solid. No kid would break them in a hurry. School is being held there now, attended by about 40 pupils from Dearborn. The teachers are from the South. When Edison was here two years ago at the opening, he and Ford sat together in Ford's old seat and carved their names in the desk. The guide said that was the favorite seat in the school now.

The court house brought from Logan Co., Ill., was where Abraham Lincoln practiced law from 1840-1848. The entire outside wood is black walnut and is held in place by screws. The floor is oak and put down with screws. The plaster was pulverized and used again on the walls. Inside is a large fireplace where a wood fire lit by Herbert Hoover two years ago while he was here at the golden jubilee is kept burning. In honor of Edison, who made light for the world, a man is on duty always and the fire is to be always kept burning.

Across the desk Haskell surveyed him coldly. "Just a moment, Baker. You said something about my ordering you to split your party. You're blaming me for your failure." He met Alan's eyes without a tremor; he was able to look steadily at Alan, as he added: "I didn't order you to split your detail. I may have suggested it, but that patrol was yours, and you're not going to hang the blame on—"

"You didn't order me to? You say you didn't order me?"

"That's exactly what I said, sergeant. I gave you no such orders." Speechless for moments, Alan finally found words. "You're a liar. A sneaking liar! You're trying to crawl out—"

Haskell jerked around to Whipple. "Make a note of that remark." He turned to Alan again, and in hard tones, with no hesitation or weakness, he said: "You came in here thinking you had some heavy artillery against me. You meant to get me. Whether I gave orders or merely suggested, isn't the question now, sergeant. The question is: How are you going to prove your charge? Do you happen to possess any documentary evidence, or can you produce any witnesses, that I gave you that order? You can't! Hardstock and Younge were down at the wharf. On the other hand Constable Whipple here was present and heard what you said. So it is the word of two people against yours, and one of them your officer commanding. What do you think of your heavy artillery now?"

He smiled sardonically, in triumph. Alan stood mute, thunderstruck. A moment ago he had thought that Haskell had actually forgotten those crazy orders. But now, with the meaning of those words dawning upon him, he realized that Haskell had deliberately planned this perfidy. By a brazen, incredibly brazen lie, he intended to squirm out of any and all responsibility for the wrecked patrol.

The very effrontery of the denial staggered Alan. In a dazed manner he sought to find a way out of what Haskell had just said. But after a little space it was borne in upon him that Haskell had beaten him; that he no longer held a sword over the inspector; that his own heavy weapon was turned against himself now. Whipple had been here; his own men had been down at the wharf. In sickened despair he felt his situation like the fanged jaws of a trap pinning him.

He stood there speechless, staring into the cold taunting eyes of his enemy. Presently he was able to say, throatily: "I hadn't thought of that, inspector. I knew you were tricky, but still I thought you were too near being a man for a thing like that. I've been associating with men like Larry and Bill and Ped for so long that I'd forgotten your kind exists. A lie, a damnable bare-faced lie, from an officer—in that uniform. . . Good God! If you hadn't said it, I wouldn't have believed."

"Is that all, constable?" Haskell inquired, with a faint sneer on his mouth.

"Yes, that's all. You've got me." He turned and trudged out the door. His thoughts were all a confused turmoil. Busted—a constable—saddled with the whole blame of that disgraceful patrol—the ground cut out from under him by that brazen lie!

Habits of Moths

Moths eat only when in the larval or worm stage. The winged moth never eats, for its mouth is not made for eating. One winged or adult moth in an experiment lived for 77 days without eating. The male moth lives nearly twice as long as the female.

Now he realized to the full how unscrupulous Haskell could be in a showdown fight. When reputation and Elizabeth Spaulding and command here were at stake, Haskell was as cunning as a slinker wolf and as malign as a carcajou. The inspector had been out to get him, and had got him. He stood on a level now with Whipple and Burgoon—he, once the proud leader of a proud detachment.

One fact came home to him, hard and inexorable: his Inconnu trip was smashed. To make that patrol he had to have Haskell's backing. But to hope for any co-operation from the inspector would be a fool's wishful thinking. Haskell was out to get him, not those criminals. That Inconnu plan was dead.

Alan felt the terrible hopelessness of his situation. He was bound hand and foot. There was nothing on earth he could do—nothing except forget the aching vision of running those six unknown murderers to earth.

Did he dare forget? . . . Dimly through the creeping mist he saw the candle light of the tiny hospital where Larry, his able silent comrade on many a patrol, lay tossing in pain and fever; where Larry, so strong of body, so proud of his physical powers, was facing the black realization that he would never again go out on patrol with other men, and would never again follow a Strong-Woods trail. Jutting out from the barracks he could see the massive outlines of the cement cell where Dave MacMillan, helpless to prove his innocence, awaited the full vengeance of the law. He felt a responsibility toward Dave MacMillan, all aside from Dave being Joyce's father. If it had been his duty to arrest MacMillan and bring him in, it was a higher duty now to fight for him, to clear a man whom he knew in his heart to be innocent.

Thinking in hard practical terms, Alan saw that so long as Haskell had power over him, he could not stir a hand. If he was ever to get those criminals, he had to be free. Several paths lay open to him. One by one he studied and rejected them, till only the last remained.

For minutes he weighed that possible act. Its cost to him was a terrible cost. It would wipe out his brilliant reputation, his whole police record. It would kill his last chance of ever bringing Haskell to account. It would uproot him and take him for good and all out of this North country.

Torn by doubt and indecision, he wavered. The price seemed too staggering.

Presently he heard some one come up the terrace and glide past him and go on toward his cabin. The figure was merely a moving blur in the mist, but Alan recognized that light footstep.

He called softly: "Joyce! You wanted to see me?"

"Alan! I've been wondering where you . . . Your cabin was all dark, and I couldn't find you." In eager hope she asked him: "Alan, what did Haskell say about Dad? He's going to release Dad on bail, as you thought?"

Alan shook his head, sorry for her, sorry for all the heartache that lay ahead for her now. "Joyce, Haskell can be brutal and inhuman. He wouldn't consent even to letting your dad remain here. He intends to send him outside to Edmonton."

It was on his lips to add, "Your father is being sacrificed to Haskell's need of a victim." But he could not bring himself to tell Joyce that. The news had stricken her cruelly enough. If only she could be near her father, if only she could visit him, the ordeal might be lightened for her. The lonely waiting weeks of suspense would be agony, if her father was a thousand miles away, among strangers, with no one to lift a hand for him.

He offered gently: "Joyce, if you want to go along and be near him, I'll pay—I'll see to it that you can. It'd be best for you, and for him too, if you would."

Joyce did not answer at once. As he looked down at her, Alan was struck by the sense of how young and innocent a girl Joyce was; and with bitter self-reproach he remembered those long months of the winter past when he had left her alone to her battle, because Elizabeth, protected, sheltered, kept in ease here at Endurance, had demanded it of him. He realized that in her desperate plight she needed his strength and protection far more than Elizabeth did. Except for him Joyce was alone in the world, without friends, relatives, money, and with her father in the shadow of the gallows.

Presently, with the spirited courage he had always loved in her, Joyce asserted:

"Alan, I'm going back home. The Dogribs are bringing in their furs next week. I'll send several of their men en derouine to the Hares and Loucheux and get their furs, too. I'll sacrifice all our trade goods and raise money for Dad's defense. It'll be a true way of fighting for Dad if I go back home. I don't mind being alone. I can take care of myself. It'll be lonesome, but all the time I'll be knowing that I'm doing the right thing and being a real help to Dad."

Alan acquiesced reluctantly, against his better judgment. A slender girl like her, scarcely out of her teens, going back to that isolated post. . . . A white girl, winsome, pretty, of lissome body, alone there, with Indians coming and going, with half-breeds coming and going. . . .

Joyce asked him: "What happened between you and Haskell, Alan?" Briefly Alan told her what had taken place down there in the cabin. His account left Joyce speechless, in a silent fury, her little fists clenched, her lips parted in astonishment.

"But he can't demote you, Alan!" she cried. "He can't blame you for his mistake."

"He can't? He's already done it! If I try to fight him, if I make the slightest insubordinate move, he's actually got the power to jail me!"

"But the Inconnu patrol—he'll let you go on that, Alan?"

"And capture those men and get the credit? Not Haskell! He's too wise. Getting those bandits comes second with him. So long as he saves his face, he doesn't really care whether he gets them or not. That Inconnu patrol is dead. It was our best hope, but now it can't ever be. I could stir up trouble for him, I could bring on an investigation; but that would take months. It'd be too late then; those bandits'll be gone."

She repeated, brokenly: "Gone, gone—yes, it'll be too late then. Alan, that means—means Dad will be found guilty—and sent to prison—or worse. . . ."

For the second time in the years he had known her, Joyce broke down and cried. It hurt Alan as few things in his life had ever done. As he felt her sobbing against him, as he thought of this tragedy looming over her, his last hesitancy about his plan was swept away. With those bandits safe in the watery wilderness of the Thalach, Dave MacMillan would be convicted; and he would be sent up for life. It would break Joyce, break her spirited courage, her wild-born nature. When he thought of the terrible stigma upon a girl so innocent and brave, he swore silently:

"I'll never see her brought down to that. I'll get those men, I'll bring the truth into court."

He realized fully that he was starting on a long trail, a trail never to be retraced. He was committing himself to a staggering self-sacrifice. But he had to traverse that path; in honor he could do nothing else.

He rose abruptly, brushing away his last trace of hesitancy; and gave Joyce his hand to rise.

"Joyce, there's something I've got to do now. I've got to go. You mustn't stay here. Come." He took her arm, and as they went down the slope, he asked: "I want to see you again before I—some final arrangements with you. . . . Won't you be down at the wharf in half an hour?"

Wondering at his odd tones, his stern purposive manner, Joyce promised him.

At Mrs. Drummond's house he left her and started out along the terrace to Haskell's cabin.

Across the desk he demanded, with no preliminaries:

"I want to buy out. Tonight! Here! Now!"

Haskell's eyes narrowed in suspicion. He could hardly believe it. He knew how deeply Baker was rooted in his work and friendships and life in this northern country; and he could scarcely conceive of a man deliberately throwing away a long brilliant police record at one irremediable step.

But there was no doubting Baker's words, no doubting his grim manner. Baker was demanding to buy out—to get out for good. As he studied the sergeant, Haskell drew back warily. Baker might be laying some trap for him.

He refused, "I'm too short-handed here as it is now."

"I don't give a d—n about that. I'm buying out."

Haskell's confidence was returning as he saw that Alan intended no physical violence. "If you buy out, your record ends. You'll have to start all over."

"I'm buying out for good. There'll be no starting over again. I'm getting out of the Mounted, out of the country!"

Haskell debated swiftly. He was not averse to Baker cutting his own head off; and he saw now there was no trap laid for him. But there were other things to be considered. His sober judgment, casting back over the last nine months, recalled the score of times Baker had corrected bad mistakes of his and kept the post running smoothly. Wisdom whispered to him that he needed the man, needed him desperately. And Elizabeth Spaulding . . . Was she going away with Baker? Was Baker taking her with him?

If she went, his act in busting the sergeant would prove a boomerang against himself. He tried to temporize.

"I haven't the authority to let you. You'll have to make out application and wait for permission from headquarters."

"That's the rule for close-in detachments. Down north here where a communication would take several months, it's understood that an officer can accept a buy out on his own recognition."

"But it's not the official rule. Under the circumstances I don't choose to accept your papers."

"You will choose! I'll make you choose! You've busted me, all right; you've saddled the blame and shame of that patrol on me; you've mouthed your lie and you've got a stool pigeon there to back you up. But I can bring on an investigation just the same. There's things happened last winter that you can't lie out of. Williamson is coming down here next month. He hasn't got any too much use for you now. If I'm here when he comes, what I'll tell him won't help your standing much."

Haskell lit a cigarette to hide his nervousness. He asked, "Where are you going if you get out of service?"

"That'll not be your affair, thank God! I'm leaving here. Tonight. That'll all you need to know."

Haskell started a little. Tonight—

no boat coming past—It meant Baker was going by himself! Meant Elizabeth would not go with him but would stay here at Endurance!

Very thoughtful, he looked away, debating. Baker's motives, his reasons for this precipitate move, were dark and puzzling. But he saw no way in which they could possibly harm him. Hardstock, an experienced northern man, would still be available, a reliable veteran to turn to, especially if hated by the hope of this vacated sergency. Hardstock would be easier to manage, too. Since Elizabeth was going to stay here, at least temporarily, why shouldn't he let Baker go? The farther away he was, the better!

The more he studied the situation, the more it seemed too good to be true that Baker was deliberately cutting his head off, buying out, getting out of the country, leaving Elizabeth here alone, killing any possibility of the investigation that he secretly dreaded.

"I'll consent on one condition to your buying out. Otherwise you'll have to wait for official and regular approval."

"What's the condition?"

"There seems," Haskell said steadily, with the ability to look Alan squarely in the eyes, "to be a difference of opinion between us about the responsibility of this Alooska patrol. If you'll sign a statement to the effect that you had complete charge of the detail and split your party on your own initiative—if you'll do that, you can buy out. Otherwise you can't."

Alan wavered. Signing a brazen lie, taking all the stinging disgrace upon himself, strengthening Haskell's guilty hand. . . . But then his thoughts leaped to Jimmy and Larry and Dave MacMillan, and to Joyce, pinning her last hope to him. What did it matter, his signing a lie? Would it change one jot or tittle of God's truth? What did a rag of paper matter on his long free-flung hunt for those murderers, avenging his partners, shielding Joyce?

He said: "I'll sign. Load it as heavy as you like. But don't knock Hardstock or Pedneault or Younge."

Haskell wrote out the declaration of responsibility. Alan read it. As he wrote his name, he sneered:

"If I were you, I'd frame that, inspector, and hang it on the wall. It's a certificate of your dishonor."

Not answering, Haskell went on looking up the remaining enlistment period and figuring the amount. Whipple brought over the forms and filled in the data. Both Alan and Haskell, with the constable as witness, signed the numerous official sheets of the procedure.

Folding his copy of it, Alan walked out of the door, out of service, out of the Mounted Police.

Transportation Methods

The extremes of transportation methods are to be encountered at a certain Cuban airport, where the most modern of airplanes land and at the same time supplies are brought to the place by an ox team, which is of the same type as was in use for a century or more. The vehicle is a crude lumbering affair, with wheels cut from a solid tree trunk.

STANDARD OIL LAUNCHES BIG AD CAMPAIGN

Standard Oil Company of Indiana has announced plans to carry out in the remaining months of 1931 the biggest advertising and sales campaign the company has ever undertaken in so short a period.

Directors have decided that the way to end the trench warfare with depression is to go over the top in something resembling a business way what a major offensive is in warfare.

Advertising is to lay down the preliminary and prolonged intensive bombardment of gloom and hard times. And as the barrage prepares the way, the foot soldiers of the sales organization are to follow with a determined onslaught to secure new business.

The advertising campaign began October 9, and will continue until the middle of December. The main ammunition will be introduction of a new gasoline which the company has been making at refineries for some time, and now has at distributing points ready for delivery, but about which the story is not being told in advance of the actual advertising.

Following a series of "teaser" ads the campaign will come out in force on October 15, with large announcements in 1,462 newspapers in the thirteen north central states in which Standard of Indiana operates. These newspapers have a circulation of 12,571,677 in a territory of 32,000,000 population where 8,871,750 cars and trucks are operating with a gasoline consumption of nearly five billion gallons a year. Follow-up advertisements will appear regularly in the following two months.

The newspaper advertising which is to be the main reliance of the campaign, will be supplemented by advertising in trade, and class publications and national magazines, by radio announcements in connection with the broadcasting of the season's big middle west football games from WGN, Chicago, and by twice-a-day brief announcements on thirty-one radio stations in the territory served. Radio advertising will be used primarily to direct attention to the more extensive newspaper advertising. Copy will be changed on billboards, direct mail matter will be circulated, motion pictures will be shown, and practically all other usual forms of advertising will be employed in some supplementary way.

LEGION STORIES OVERDRAWN, FUNERAL DIRECTOR REPORTS

While the American Legion boys undoubtedly had a good time at their recent convention in Detroit, many of the stories were considerably overdrawn, reports Earl W. Douglas, on his return from the fiftieth annual convention of the National Funeral Directors' Association, held in the same city a week later. The golden jubilee session of his own organization was the most progressive in its long history, he declared. The forward-looking policy of guarding public health by insisting on stricter educational and technical requirements for embalmer's licenses was strengthened.

The financial interest of the public was also protected by the determination to persist in exposing burial certificate rackets and wild-cat burial insurance schemes. The association, he said, has been a pioneer in bringing to earth swindlers that operate on the fringe of the profession and tend to discredit the legitimate and honorable funeral director.

Colonial Furniture

Colonial refers merely to the time before the Union was formed. New England and Virginia were settled by the English, New York by the Dutch and Louisiana by the French. The Colonial furniture of each section resembled the furniture which had been brought to that part of the country. Almost all Colonial furniture was a simplified reproduction of the more elaborate furniture made abroad. A few designs originated in this country.

Women's Bureau

The women in industry service, under the jurisdiction of the Department of Labor, was established in July, 1918, as a war measure. In June, 1920, the bureau was given a permanent status by the passage of the creative act under which it now functions.

HERE is the news you've been waiting for—hoping for—wondering whether you'd hear it this year or next. The news of a NEW GASOLINE—a BETTER GASOLINE. Mark that last phrase! That which is new is not always better. But Standard Red Crown is NEW and BETTER. We introduce it to you as the best all-purpose gasoline ever put on the market. And we've anticipated some of the questions you'll want to ask about this brilliant, sparkling, modern fuel. From now on you'll hear plenty about Standard Red Crown—plenty of praise for a fuel that gives you more for your money—easy starting—more power—more performance—more miles.

Read these questions and answers—and then drive to the nearest STANDARD RED CROWN sign—for your first filling of "The Better Gasoline"

What is Standard Red Crown, the Better Gasoline?

A gasoline in which the fractions are so adjusted to weather conditions as to give a smooth flow of power at any season of the year.

What are fractions in Gasoline?

They're the compounds taken from petroleum each of which vaporizes within definite temperature limits. The skillful merging of these fractions and adjusting the proportions to meet different weather conditions make good gasoline.

What happens if these fractions are not properly adjusted?

The engine may perform satisfactorily under one set of conditions but not all. For example, in winter good gasoline requires large amounts of light ends to give quick starting and satisfactory performance, but in summer too much of these light ends causes vapor lock troubles.

Is Standard Red Crown a natural product?

No. Nature is not concerned with producing an ideal gasoline for automobiles. It must be made by skillful men. Standard Red Crown owes much of its anti-knock value to the use of the improved cracking processes developed by the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

How is Standard Red Crown made?

Under processes developed in the research laboratories of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) utilizing the tremendous refining facilities of this organization.

Is Standard Red Crown a NEW Gasoline?

Yes. It has just been put on the market.

Why do you recommend it for winter driving?

Because it starts easily and accelerates smoothly and because it can be depended upon to operate smoothly in the engine and deliver a rhythmic flow of tremendous power.

Why is Standard Red Crown recommended for 1931-32 cars?

Because it is designed to respond to the delicate adjustment of the latest type engines—because it performs better in the older types—because it burns clean at any speed—because it's priced to meet current economic conditions. It gives maximum performance at a moderate price.

Where can I buy Standard Red Crown Gasoline?

Standard Red Crown is sold where the Red Crown emblem is displayed. It is priced for the average pocketbook—but gives maximum performance.

MRS. HAROLD DICKINSON

The community was saddened Friday afternoon, October 9, to learn of the death of Mrs. Harold Dickinson, who passed away quite suddenly at Pleasant Home hospital that afternoon. Although Mrs. Dickinson had been poorly for some time, she was much better of late. Tuesday she complained of feeling ill and gradually grew worse but her condition was not thought serious until Friday when she was taken to the hospital and passed away soon after.

Mabel Lucile Albrant was born January 15, 1903, at Caro. She lived there until her marriage to Harold Dickinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Dickinson of Cass City, nine years ago, when with her husband, she came to make her home here where she has since lived.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon from the Presbyterian church. Services were conducted by Rev. P. J. Allured, and burial was in Elkland cemetery.

She leaves besides her husband, five children, Gladys Marie, 8; Dorothy Jean, 6; Marian Lee, 4; Curtis Harlan, 2; and Richard Allen, 6 months old; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Albrant of Caro, four sisters and one brother, all of whom attended the funeral.

Other-relatives from out of town who attended the funeral were, Mrs. Anna Marks and Mr. and Mrs. August Kinde of Kinde; Mr. and Mrs. John Dickinson, Bad Axe; Mr. and Mrs. Gideon Dickinson, Fairgrove; Mr. and Mrs. Joe Dickinson, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. George Bergen, Flint; Mrs. Hugh Gardner and children of Port Huron and several relatives from and near Caro.

ALBERT WETHY

Funeral services for Albert Wethy, 56, were held Saturday afternoon from the Douglas Funeral Home. Rev. P. J. Allured officiated and burial was in Elkland cemetery.

Mr. Wethy, son of Orson and Harriet Wethy, passed away Wednesday, October 7, at the Pontiac State Hospital, where he has been a patient for many years. The body was brought to Cass City Friday.

He is survived by one brother and five sisters, all attending the funeral except one sister who was unable to be here because of illness.

Mr. Wethy attended the Biddle school when a boy and lived on the farm now known as the Biddle farm on M-53, then owned by his father, Orson Wethy.

WM. E. RANDALL

William E. Randall, 82, passed away Tuesday noon at the Pontiac State hospital. The body was brought to Cass City where a private funeral was held Thursday morning from the Douglas funeral home.

Beside his wife, he is survived by three daughters and four sons, Mrs. Minnie Summerville of Chicago, Mrs. John Spurgeon of Detroit; Mrs. Homer Larabee and Elmer, Louis and Arthur Randall, all of Lansing, and Charles E. Randall of Cass City. Two children, Samuel and Hazel Randall, preceded the father in death.

Rev. P. J. Allured officiated at the funeral services and burial was in Elkland cemetery.

A hunting accident Sunday near Port Crescent will cost the right eye of John Gordon, 20, of Port Austin. He is in the hospital at Bad Axe and will recover. Gordon and Fred Snay were building a duck blind. Gordon suddenly reached for his gun when some ducks flew up and it discharged. A part of the charge struck him in the face.
