TO GRADE M-81 EAST OF CASS CITY

Will Pave Next Summer; State Prepares to Build Bridge over "East River."

The Chronicle, in this number, carries a notice which asks for sealed proposals for 3.412 miles of 20 ft. concrete pavement in Sanilac and Tuscola counties on M-81, from M-53 west to Cass City. Bids will be opened on Nov. 24. The work will consist of grading and shaping the road, constructing the necessary drainage structures and surfacing to a width of twenty feet with concrete pavement.

"One of the primary objects of placing this project under construction at this time," says the notice, "is to assist in the relief of unemployment in the locality in which this project is located."

In a letter received by Godfrey F. Schulz, a member of the board of road commissioners of Tuscola county, from Grover C. Dillman, state highway commissioner, under date of Nov. 4, Mr. Dillman says:

"For your information, I would advise that the State Administrative Board yesterday approved of a number of projects as a part of our winter construction program which included the grading of trunk line 81 from Cass City east to trunk line 53 and the paving of this 3.5 miles next summer; also the grading and drainage of 2 miles on trunk line 29 west of Unionville."

The Cass City Sand and Gravel Co. is stocking gravel for the state which will be used in constructing a new bridge over the north branch of the Cass River, on M-81, two miles east of Cass City. Stafford & Barnes are trucking the gravel to the bridge site where it is being placed on a plank platform. Perforated pipes are being placed in the gravel pile so that the gravel may be heated by steam during the winter months if necessary. The gravel is furnished by the state to the successful bidder. While no date has been set for placing bids for the bridge job, it is expected that a date will be announced soon and all indications point to the fact that the bridge will be constructed this winter.

A. W. WRIGHT FATALLY INJURED IN PLANE CRASH

Arthur Wright, who left here in 1902 with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. O. Wright, to live on a ranch at Hinsdale, Mont., was seriously injured in the crash of his airplane at Austin, Minn., on October 4 and died about two weeks later. The end came peacefully after a day spent in hope by his family and friends since it was regarded by the attending physicians as the critical day. Spreading infection in the left leg which was badly crushed in the plane crash made it necessary to amputate the limb Friday morning. He appeared to stand the shock of the operation well and was making progress during the day Saturday, it was felt. The turn came late in the day and he passed away shortly after eleven-thirty that night. Two passengers, with Mr. Wright in his plane at the time of the accident, were killed.

Arthur W. Wright was born May 4, 1890, in Cass City. At the age of 12, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. O. Wright, moved to a ranch at Hinsdale, Mont., where they lived until a few years ago when they moved to a ranch at Scout Lake, Sask. He attended high school at Great Falls and Missoula. A brother, Nelson Wright, still resides at Hinsdale and operates the original ranch. A sister, Helen, lives at Seattle.

Mr. Wright and Florence Crane were married at Kansas City, Sept. 17, 1918, while Mr. Wright was stationed near the Missouri city during his training period in the air service. He also spent several months at Little Rock, Ark. In addition to his parents, Mr. Wright is survived by his wife and four children, Sylvia, 12, William, 10, Stephen, 9, and Frank, 5.

Funeral services were held at the home on Tuesday afternoon with Rev. D. R. Martin officiating. Mr. Wright was a Mason at Hinsdale, Mont., and the burial at Austin was under Masonic auspices.

Mr. Wright was a nephew of Mrs. John Marshall of Cass City.

CASS CITY DEFEATS SCRAPPY MARLETTE

Most of Games Played with Cass City's Next Year's Probable Line-up.

Cass City, playing against a small but scrappy Marlette team, ran its total victories to five for the season by a score of 13-0. Next year's line started the game for Cass City and showed to good advantage, while in the backfield the only lower-classman without injuries was Quick, who was the outstanding ball-carrier of the day. Although playing against an eight-man line, Quick repeatedly cut back over center for gains of ten to fifteen yards. Marlette never threatened to score on the Maroon and Gray. Ward, who is being made over from a lineman to a back, showed fine defensive ability in backing up the line.

Playing here this Friday, the locals will take on the strong veteran Sandusky outfit. Sandusky, equipped with a large backfield and two good ends, is slated to give the Cass City boys a run for their money. Next to the Caro game, this contest should be the hardest fought of any battle on the local's schedule this year.

The final game of the season will be played here against Bad Axe. In last year's contest, Bad Axe held the Cass City team to a 0-0 score and are coming here this year with a much improved eleven.

HORNER'S CALF IS GAINING FAST

Audley Horner, who has entered an Aberdeen Angus steer in the Michigan Beef Calf Feeding Contest sponsored by the Michigan State College, has records showing that his calf has gained 2.4 pounds a day for 140 days. At the start of the contest, this Cass City boy's calf tipped the scales at 460 pounds and on Nov. 5 it weighed 807 pounds.

In this state contest, there are entered eight Aberdeen Angus, 11 Herefords and 19 Shorthorns.

Other Thru breeders in this contest are Wilbert Prowse, North Branch; Stewart Coffron, North Branch; Geo. L. Perry, Crosswell; Sanilac Stock Farm, Sandusky; D. R. Leslie, Decker; A. L. Priemer, Harbor Beach; Leo Roggenbuck, Harbor Beach; Warner Ramsey, Port Hope; Edw. Roggenbuck, Harbor Beach; S. H. Pangborn & Son, Bad Axe; J. H. Wakefield, Kinde; Otto Monte, Fairgrove; James, Robert and John Robertson, all of Yale.

If a senior calf makes a gain of 2.25 pounds a day, he qualifies for the contest. A junior calf must gain two pounds per day for the 210 days.

SIGN OF IMPROVING BUSINESS CONDITIONS

Another sign of improving business conditions was noted during the past month by the corporation division of the department of state. One of the best means the state has of gauging economic conditions, is through the number of new companies which seek articles of incorporation.

During the month of October, requests were received by the corporation division for 8,000 application blanks. This is taken to mean that many new companies, sensing improved conditions are preparing to be ready for prosperous times.

The Silver Lining

FARMERS GROW GOOD ALFALFA SEED CROP

Michigan Produces Enough to Plant Acres Needed by State Dairy Herds.

Enough Michigan grown alfalfa seed was produced this year to plant most of the fields needed by the thousands of state dairymen who now work at a disadvantage because they have no alfalfa hay to feed their cows, according to the farm crops department at Michigan State College.

Farmers in Michigan have increased the acreage planted 800 per cent since 1919 and the state now is the leader in the group east of the Mississippi river, but the amount of hay produced here is still far short of the amount needed to feed local dairy herds. Alfalfa, as a hay crop, yields better, has a higher feeding value per ton, and sells for higher prices than competing crops.

Most failures to secure successful alfalfa stands are due to the use of unadapted seed which can not produce plants which will withstand Michigan winters. The unusually large Michigan crop of alfalfa seed this year makes it possible for State farmers to secure seed which eliminates this gamble from seeding.

Hardigan, Grimm, Cossack, and Ontario Variegated are the varieties recommended by the College crops department but common Michigan varieties will be satisfactory for seeding which have a place in a crop rotation and are to be plowed down in two or three years.

While most of the alfalfa seed producing sections were harvesting a light crop this year, Michigan farmers secured unusually good yields.

FORMER THUMB EDUCATOR LAUDED BY U. S. BUREAU

The Battle Creek Moon-Journal in its issue of October 23, had the following to say of H. Z. Wooden, a former superintendent of the Sebewaing public school:

"H. Z. Wooden, principal of Ann J. Kellogg school, today was lauded by the federal bureau of education at Washington as an expert in pioneering experiments concerning supervised correspondence courses in small high schools, which, it is declared, are gaining in favor throughout the United States.

"Because of the experiments by the Battle Creek man and five other educators, students in many small cities are being offered hundreds of courses which could not otherwise be made available.

"Supervised correspondence courses, according to Walter H. Gauntz, rural school specialist of the federal office of education, are offered by local high schools which make a contract with a reputable correspondence school, state or university extension service. The local school secures the lessons, provides periods in the regular school day for study, supervises the pupil's work, and returns the lessons to the correspondence study center for a report on pupil accomplishment. The local school board pays for courses pursued."

CLIFFORD YOUTH SHOT BY BROTHER

Paul Hodges, 22-year-old youth of Clifford is the victim of a tragedy, occurring near his home southeast of Clifford late Tuesday afternoon, when he was accidentally shot and killed by his brother, Kenneth, according to the latter's confession, made Wednesday afternoon.

The young man, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clare Hodges, was said to have been last seen by his father, who had left the field about 5:30 p. m., where they had been engaged in husking corn. The field was located about one-half mile from the house

TUSCOLA "DRY" LAW VIOLATORS JAILED

Four From This County Appeared Before Judge Tuttle in Federal Court.

Earl Rifenberg, Gifford, Tuscola county, former Bay City bootlegger, is awaiting sentence in the Bay county jail following his conviction in federal court Thursday on an indictment charging third offense sale and possession of liquor and maintaining a nuisance. It was Rifenberg's fifth appearance before Federal Judge Arthur J. Tuttle on a liquor charge but the first time that he has stood trial. The jury in the case deliberated only 20 minutes.

Henry Wilkinson, Caro, was likewise convicted after a jury trial on dry law charges and was sentenced to the Genesee county jail for 300 days.

Two other dry law violators from Tuscola county have received sentences from Federal Judge Arthur J. Tuttle in the district court at Bay City. Kasimir Szarapcki of Gagetown will serve 59 days in the Saginaw county jail and Raymond Carlyle of Vassar, 32 days at the same jail.

Under questioning by Prosecuting Attorney Smith Wednesday afternoon, a younger brother, Kenneth, aged 20, disclosed the fact that he was hunting in the fields Tuesday afternoon and, according to authorities, confessed that he had fired the fatal shot, stating that he mistook his brother's cap, seen moving near the ground, for a rabbit or a bird.—North Branch Gazette.

NEWS OF THE NEARBY SECTIONS

Happenings Here and There Garnered from the Chronicle's Exchanges.

Directors of the Patrons' Mutual Fire Insurance company of Sanilac county authorized a loan of $10,000 to be negotiated by officers of the company at a meeting in Sandusky. The loan was authorized to take care of excessive fire losses occurring since last spring, and was decided on in place of a special assessment on members at a time when taxes are about due. Losses of the fire company since Jan. 1, were said to be $46,000 mostly since April 1, and the heaviest in its history. Assessments made annually amount to about $30,000, it is claimed. A previous high loss rate of $27,000 was the high mark several years ago.

Construction of the shore road, M-29, at the property of the Port Crescent plant of the Sand Products company will be asked of the state highway department by the Port Austin Exchange club. The gap of about eight miles between Oak Beach and Port Austin is the only break in the route of the road along the shore of the Thumb district. Construction of this gap has been delayed as the state highway department has been unable to obtain right-of-way through the sand company's property. The club asks that a permanent route be built so as to avoid the sand company's property in order that the shore road may be completed.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred McDougall, proprietors of the North Branch hotel, and well known through this section of the state, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, October 26. They entertained a company of 150 relatives and friends at a reception at the hotel in honor of the occasion. The affair opened in an unusual manner, when Mrs. McDougall entered, mounted on the host's beautiful roan pacer Trampmeek. Three baggage players, in Scottish costume, preceded the hostess. As the group circled the dining room three times, John R. Church sang, "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet." There were many other program features and at the close of the evening refreshments were served.

Harvey, William and Walter Blasi, ages 33, 31 and 29 respectively, sons of William Blasi, former residents of Sebewaing, and for the past 15 years residents of Brighton, were killed when their automobile was struck by a locomotive Sunday evening at a crossing in South Lyon. The three men were employed at the General Motors Proving Grounds at Milford.

CASS CITY LAD WILL REPRESENT MICHIGAN

First Vocational Boy from State to Exhibit at Kansas Royal Show.

Harry Crandell, Jr., left Cass City Thursday, Nov. 12, for Kansas City, Mo., as the first and only vocational boy from Michigan to have an exhibit of live stock at the Kansas Royal Live Stock Show.

One division at the Royal is set aside for the "future farmers of America," and in this Harry is exhibiting a pen of Southdown sheep.

The trip was awarded to Crandell by the State Live Stock Producers Association for being the outstanding live stock project boy of the 1930-31 year in Michigan.

Remarkable in the selection of Michigan representative at the Royal Show is that two other Cass City boys, Ephraim Knight and Romney Homer, were listed with Harry Crandell, Jr., as among the first four outstanding vocational boys in the state. The name and address of the other lad was not given the Chronicle.

The judges who awarded this signal honor to young Crandell are Mr. Beamer of the Live Stock Producers' Association, Prof. Geo. Brown of the Animal Husbandry department, M. S. C., and E. E. Gallop, state supervisor of agricultural vocational education. This group met Saturday morning to select the state winner. Harry Crandell, Jr., will speak at a banquet sponsored by the Kansas Royal as Michigan's representative.

Willis Campbell, agricultural vocational instructor in the Cass City schools, is naturally much pleased over the success of young Crandell, his pupil, in winning the honor.

Other stars of the troupe amused the large crowds that attended, with their comedy (all wholesome and clean), wrought miracles with their magic, gave health talks, and sold medicine. They departed on Sunday for other fields of activity, with many easily acquired dollars. HAGAN The First and Last Shots The question of who fired the first and last shots in any of our wars and when and where they were fired has always been a subject for much dispute. So the World war will probably be no exception and future years probably will see various claimants to those titles arising. Already members of the crew of the U. S. S. Kearsarge claim the honor of firing the first shot in the World war for Quartermaster Holman of that ship. On Good Friday, April 6, 1917, the day that the United States declared war on Germany, the Kearsarge was at the Charlestown, Mass., navy yard. A detail was sent in the naval tug Iwana to seize the German merchant ships in East Boston at Long wharf. They left at 3:30 a. m., crossed the river, forced the high gate on the dock and took possession of the ships. From the deck of the Kroonland, Quartermaster Holman fired into the air as a signal to the navy yard that the gobs had arrived and had the situation in hand. And, that the Kearsarge crew asserts, was "the first American shot fired in the World war." As for the last shot Lieut. F. V. X. Greene, U. S. N. R. claims that honor for a United States naval railroad battery of 14-inch rifles and quotes from its log as follows: "November 11, 1918. Battery No. 44. Gun ready to load at 9 a. m. Between 10:05 a. m. and 10:58 a. m. fired five rounds at railway garage, Longuon. Last shot fired by J. A. Kafka, S. F. 2c, U. S. N. Sponged out and secured. One-third of men given liberty in afternoon." (©, 1930. Western Newspaper Union.) There's Many a Slip—"Now that we're engaged," faltered the timid suitor, "I—I presume I may kiss you as much as I like, mayn't I?" "Yes, dear," replied the girl sweetly. "Make the best of the time you've got. One never knows how long an engagement will last these days." Labor-saving devices are so numerous that what the world needs now is some labor-using ideas.

"I'll see it through if YOU will!"

THEY tell me there's five or six million of us—out of jobs. "I know that's not your fault, any more than it is mine. "But that doesn't change the fact that some of us right now are in a pretty tough spot—with families to worry about—and a workless winter ahead. "Understand, we're not begging. We'd rather have a job than anything else you can give us. "We're not scared, either. If you think the good old U. S. A. is in a bad way more than temporarily, just try to figure out some other place you'd rather be. "But, until times do loosen up, we've got to have a little help. "So I'm asking you to give us a lift, just as I would give one to you if I stood in your shoes and you in mine. "Now don't send me any money—that isn't the idea. Don't even send any to the Committee which signs this appeal. "The best way to help us is to give as generously as you can to the Unemployment Emergency Committee in your own town, as well as to the established welfare, charity and relief organizations there. The Old Gardener

Says:—

THE ripper squashes and pumpkins are, the better they will keep. Still, immature squashes and pumpkins will keep well if properly cared for. After being picked they should be thoroughly dried by being placed in the sun in some airy place where the temperature will not run higher than 45 degrees at night. A covering of hay or blankets must be ready in case of frosts. When well dried they may be put into winter quarters. A furnace cellar, if not too warm, is a good place to store these vegetables. A dry chamber or an attic near a chimney will also serve. The best temperature is from 50 to 55 degrees, or varying from 48 at night to 60 during the day.

STATE FARMERS PLOW BIG ACREAGE IN DAY

Plowing eight acres of Michigan soil in one day may seem an unreasonable task for one man driving a team of horses, but the plowing contest at Michigan State College proved that men driving horses in multiple hitch can turn over an acre of soil a day for every horse in the team, and there were eight and nine-horse teams entered in the contest.

The teams were driven with a single pair of reins which guide the leaders in the team. The other horses in the hitch are controlled by the "tying in," and "bucking back" system which prevents the animals from forging too far ahead, or from lagging behind. Each horse is compelled to do its share of the work and none of them are compelled to pull their team mate's load.

The evenest set which is used for multiple hitches eliminates all side draft, and the single trees for each horse can be set at the proper height for efficient work. Many of the farmers who use the big hitches work two year colts, and the loads can be adjusted to prevent any danger of overworking.

The teams entered in the college contest were almost all owned by farmers who use four, five, six, or eight horse teams on their farms. More than two thousand people watched the plowing race, and saw that the number of horses in the hitch did not affect the quality of the plowing. First place winners in the various classes were: four horse, Wayne Weatherwax, Cement City; five horse, Bernard Bosworth, Grand Ledge; six horse, Clyde Butterfield, Olivet; and eight horse, Sherman Read, Richland.

TRESPASS LAW APPLIES TO ROADWAY

The Horton Trespas law applies to a roadway just as much as it does to adjoining lands and hunting on the roadway constitutes trespass unless permission had been given by the adjoining property owner.

This is the answer being given by the department of conservation to numerous inquiries relative to hunting on highway rights-of-way.

A year ago the department received an opinion from the office of the attorney general relative to this question. The opinion said that "no person has a right to shoot from the highway any more than he would have a right to go on the land, as the only rights the public have is an easement to pass over."

If the land adjoining the roadway "comes under the Horton Law, that is where land is occupied as a farm or a portion of it has been set aside as a game preserve," it is an offense to hunt on the roadway without permission. Otherwise, the action against the hunter would be for trespass, the opinion said. Shooting from the highway gives the hunter no more right than going on the land and shooting.

MAYVILLE POTATO SHOW WAS A SUCCESS

The 7th annual Thumb of Michigan Potato Show at Mayville, held Nov. 4, 5, 6, was one of the most successful shows held. In spite of the poor season, the number of exhibitors was increased from 71 in 1930 to 136 in 1931. Every class was filled except one. All of the counties in the show district, Bay, Genesee, Huron, Lapeer, Oakland, Saginaw and Sanilac, had exhibits. But two choirs appeared for the singing contest, the Bristol choir from Genesee county and the Marlette choir from Sanilac county. These tied for first honors. A large number of growers took part in the judging and grading contests. Twenty-four took part in the adult judging, 22 in the 4-H club judging, and 94 in the Smith-Hughes high school judging contest.

The annual banquet on November 5 was well attended. H. E. Cope acting as toastmaster. H. C. Moore, in charge of potato work at Michigan State College, was the principal speaker and also judged the show. Other speakers in the show were Alfred Allen of the State Department of Agriculture, Maurice Eveland, who is president of the Potato Show Association. Musical numbers were furnished by Miss June Maudsley and Rev. Bauer of Mayville.

The business men of Mayville gave a banquet for 4-H club members on Friday, November 6. There were 32 club members and leaders present. Prof. H. E. Rafter, Farm Crops Dept., Michigan State College, gave a talk as did Mr. Eveland. Lee Fowler, leader of the Watertown Potato Club, discussed the cost of growing potatoes as shown by his club members. The outstanding prizes of the show were Sweepstakes on late potatoes won by John Valentine, Postoria, on a sample of Russet Burbanks, and Sweepstakes on early potatoes, won by Sanny Wells, Caro, on an exhibit of Bliss Triumphs. The cup offered by the Mayville State Bank for the best 4-H club exhibit was won by the Watertown Potato Club.

The effect of the potato show, which has been run seven seasons, is readily seen in the Thumb sections. This fall, trucks from Illinois, Ohio and Kentucky have been in the Mayville district looking for potatoes. Mayville potatoes have established a record for quality in Detroit and other nearby cities.

WATCH BODY POSTURE TO AVOID AUTO ACCIDENTS

The common habit among many motorists of slumping in their seats while driving is an open invitation to automobile accidents, the Automobile Safety League warned today.

The League based its statement on the findings of Dr. Dudley R. Reed, director of the health service of the University of Chicago, and other authorities who point out that sitting in an improper position induces fatigue, thereby encouraging accidents, places the body where quick response cannot easily be made in emergencies, sometimes limits the vision and is often a contributing cause to nervous and other troubles arising from undue strain, cramped lungs and other organs. Posture experts point out that it is easier to sit correctly on deep pile upholstery than on smooth and slippery materials which induce sliding and slipping about on the seat. On long drives especially, the correct position can be maintained most successfully on mohair velvet or velmo upholstery as the erect fibers of the material grip the clothing, offering support to the motorist instead of causing him to slip and slide about.

Here are the essentials of proper riding or driving position as suggested by the League from reports by Dr. Reed.

Sit with the back well against the back of the seat and with the weight resting mainly on the seat bones. One should recline slightly more than ninety degrees and there should be support for the back below the shoulder blades and at the top of the hips. The feet should reach the floor and the pedals without stretching or straining and there should be no pressure under the knee. In this correct body position, quick response in emergencies can be given with less effort, the spine is placed where it can serve most efficiently as nature's own shock absorber for the body, there is less fatigue and the lungs and other organs are given the greatest freedom to function in a natural manner.

NUTTY NATURAL HISTORY BY HUGH HUTTON

THE GANGES GOLLIPUP

At the beginning of the bathing season swarms of these creatures ascend the river from the Indian ocean, voraciously attacking the Ghats living along the banks. After their appetite has been appeased, they build their nests in the caves of the pagodas, where their young are hatched from deviled eggs. The gollippups, as they are called, are born with forelegs, but as these are usually bitten off by crocodiles, they grow hindlegs to take their place.

The gollipup has a double peanut head, but is forced to use a radish for a body, as it hasn't yet found a nut that would quite take its place. The legs are cloves, and the feet split peanuts, so you see there isn't a great deal to him after all.

The Outlook for Agriculture.

Alexander Legge in the Rotarian. In these days of depression it must have been noted that most of the complaint comes from the centers of population which depend on manufacturing and trade. Comparatively little of the outcry is heard from our agricultural communities. Back in 1920-21 the situation was exactly the reverse of what we see today. Then it was agriculture that bore the brunt of economic disaster. Now the burden rests more heavily on those engaged in certain lines of industry.

The average farmer's cash return is badly shrunken, but even at that he is in a better position to worry through the depression than the average man in industry or trade. His pockets may be empty and his credit strained, but at least he can count upon food and shelter for his family while he waits and works for better times. Just contrast his situation with that of the industrial or commercial worker who is out of a job or working part time or living in daily dread of unemployment.

Considering agriculture as a whole, the outlook for that greatest and most necessary of all industries is distinctly hopeful. Agriculture has been taking its deflation rather steadily for more than ten years and now, as a result, it is down to a basis of solid values. The process has been painful, but there is compensation for it in the form of a capital position superior to that of any other comparable basic industry. That fact should not be overlooked.

Farm land values are, on the average, back to just about the pre-war level, and in some areas are even lower. Apparently deflation has run its course in this particular, and there are signs of activity in the farm realty market that indicate both the desire and the ability to pick up desirable acreage at the low prices now prevailing.

Another yardstick with which to measure the relative advantage of agriculture as a whole is the extent and proportion of farm-mortgage indebtedness. According to the estimate of the United States Department of Agriculture the total market-down value of farm lands and buildings is about forty-three billion dollars. Against this there is a total farm-mortgage debt of about nine and one-half billion dollars, or just about twenty-two per cent. That is not ideal, of course, and yet I don't know of any other nation-wide basic industry that is carrying so small a mortgage load.

Looking at this angle of the situation in another way, it is estimated that only about half the cultivated farm lands of the United States carry any mortgage debt at all. Possibly this condition can be explained in part by the fact that rural credit sources have been rather inclined to look askance at farm-land investments since the disaster of 1920-21—a fact which a good many of our rural bankers must now view with regret as they realize what has happened to their investments made outside of their own communities and their own country.

No man can say when or how the return of prosperity is coming, but no sensible man can doubt that it will return. When the engine gets off dead center and the vast mechanism of business gets to functioning smoothly again, I believe we are going to see better times for agriculture than it has experienced in a long while. I fully believe that the farmer is well on the road toward the solution of some of the problems that have baffled and hampered him in the past.

Our farmers have learned some hard and valuable lessons in their ten years and more of deflation. One of these lessons is the folly of trying to make a living profit by producing commodities at costs that are not well inside their farm prices. Another lesson is the hopelessness of producing without regard to what other farmers are producing in the same commodities; and still another lesson is the futility of entrusting the marketing of farm products to men and interests that care nothing at all about the farmer's prosperity.

Prophecy is uncertain at best, yet I do not hesitate to forecast for the American farm home in the near future a fair share of the national prosperity—a better share than the farmer has been able to procure for himself through the hit-or-miss production and marketing that have

In the Matter of Friendship.

All that can be expected of any man is to make the best use of the things that are within his power. Only the contented man is rich; so we must look for the things that bring contentment and first of these is to find a friend; and if you find two friends you are indeed a lucky man; and if you find three friends—real friends—then you are a rich and powerful man. In prosperity it is easy to find a friend, but in adversity it is most difficult of all things. No matter how small a man's means may be, if he gives of what he has to his friend it is the same as if it was a great amount. A man's pleasures are insured by sharing them with a friend and his griefs are reduced by securing the sympathy of a friend. The counsel of a friend is the best counsel because it will be true advice; for, when received from a mere acquaintance, it may be so filled with flattery that its value will be destroyed, and faithful and true counsel rarely comes excepting from the true friend. It is said that in youth we have visions and in old age dreams, and the vision and the dream may give us an ideal of perfection; but experience and large contact with men compel us to accept the man who measures in his virtues only to the substantial average. If we view a man as a whole and find him good as a friend, we must not be diverted from the happy average—the everyday, human average—by using a magnifying glass upon his faults or frailties. We must, in order to have and hold a friend, accept him as he is, demanding one thing in return for our affection—his fidelity.—Harry B. Hawes in Pathfinder.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Six bandits come aboard the steamer, Midnight Sun, while she is tied to the bank of the Mackenzie. Father Claverly and the other passengers on the boat are amazed at the sight of banditry in this Great Waterways country, a thousand miles north of Edmonton. Jimmy Montgomery, who had spent years with the Canadian Mounted draws his gun in the face of the overbearing rifles and fires upon the ruffians. He is shot through the heart by a half-breed. The bandits get away with gold dust and choice peltry.

CHAPTER II—Corporal Bill Hardsock brings the news of the crime to Sergeant Alan Baker at the Mounted Police post at Fort Endurance. After a brief dispute over plans with his incompetent superior, Inspector Haskell, Alan starts out after the bandits in the big police launch with the corporal and four constables.

CHAPTER III—Reaching the Midnight Sun, they stop long enough for Alan to board her and consult witnesses of the crime. Alan asks the skipper to put Jimmy Montgomery's orphaned four-year-old daughter off at Fort Endurance and leave her in the care of Alan's fiancée, Elizabeth Spaulding. At the MacMillan trading post on the Big Aloukska, Joyce MacMillan is alone, awaiting the return of Dave, her father, from a fur-buying trip. She is thrilled when the police launch ties up there for the night, as she has not seen Alan Baker for months. Secretly she had hoped to marry him; then she was stunned by the news of his engagement to Elizabeth. She now perceives that the planned marriage is not definitely certain.

CHAPTER IV—Larry Youngs, one of Alan's men, discovers in MacMillan's fur shed a bale of pelts stolen from the Midnight Sun. The evidence incriminates the bandits of the country that Alan is compelled to tell Joyce. She hotly defends her father. Alan leads his expedition up the Big Aloukska. Compelled by Haskell's foolish orders to divide the party, Alan falls to capture the bandits. The police expedition returns to Fort Endurance with Larry badly wounded.

CHAPTER V—Haskell, who is Alan's active enemy and is trying to win Elizabeth, blames Alan for the failure and orders his demotion to the ranks. He flatly denies that he ordered Alan to split the police party. He refuses to let Alan lead a second expedition against the bandits. Seeing only one way now to go after the bandits and clear Joyce's father from the charge resulting from the obviously planted evidence, Alan buys out of the Mounted. Haskell gives Alan his release on condition that he signs a paper to the effect that Haskell did not give the order to split the party.

CHAPTER VI—After making arrangements with Hardsock and old Dad Pence to look after Joyce's safety while she is alone at the MacMillan post (her father being at Fort Endurance), Alan starts out of the country in a motor canoe. As the days pass and she does not hear from him, Joyce is heart sick for Alan. She questions Hardsock when the latter pays her one of his brief calls and from what Hardsock tells her she believes final arrangements for the wedding have been made.

CHAPTER VII—On his journey, Alan runs across "Buzzard," a famous aviator of the World War, and now "on his own" with a dilapidated machine. Ability of spirit draws them together, and Alan enlists "Buzzard" in the enterprise. Lacking sufficient funds to procure equipment they loot government stores, starting their pursuit of the bandits, themselves criminals in the eyes of the law.

CHAPTER VIII—"Slob-tee" Jensen, leader of the bandits, plans to capture Joyce MacMillan and escape to Manitoba. At Fort Endurance Haskell catches on that Bill Hardsock is caching gasoline and oil for Alan at En Traverse lake, and plans with Constable Whipple to capture Alan when his plane alights there.

For a few days after Alan Baker bought out of service and left Fort Endurance, Inspector Haskell enjoyed more peace and security than he had felt in many months. But after the first satisfaction wore away, it gradually occurred to Haskell that maybe he ought to make some move to capture those six bandits. To let them escape without raising a hand against them would look bad, very bad, to Superintendent Williamson on his coming visit to the post.

Thinking over his situation, he remembered how Baker had demanded to lead a patrol to the Inconnu river and lie in wait there. Baker had said they would try to escape by that route. He knew what he was talking about. Haskell realized he knew.

Should he send a detail to the Inconnu?

The more Haskell pondered the idea, the more it appealed to him. It was reasonably sure to succeed. It would be the positive action he needed. On his wall map he hunted for the Inconnu. He found a small channel of the Mackenzie by that name, but Baker's Inconnu was some large river. Perhaps the chart listed it as "The Unknown," the English translation of the name. He searched for an Inconnu and an Unknown, but found neither. Such a stream simply was not shown on his map.

When Little Otter came in to the post for a supply of chewing stemmo,

Aids Whale's Diving
Blubber is now believed to be the equipment that enables whales to withstand the pressure of great sea depths.

Home of Tornadoes
Tornadoes seldom occur outside the United States, and chiefly in the Mississippi valley.

Haskell pumped him. The sub-chief had only the haziest idea where the Inconnu was, but Indian-like he would not admit his ignorance. He started talking, gesticulating—till Haskell caught him in a flat self-contradiction and kicked him out of the cabin in angry disgust.

The Inconnu patrol blew up. There was nothing Haskell could do about capturing those bandits. He knew that if Williamson asked why no move had been made, the short-handedness at the post would be at least some excuse. Besides, one of the other detachments, over on Hudson's bay or southeast in the Reindeer Lake country, would probably nail those bandits and the affair would blow over.

Those rainy imprisoning days, as he sat in his cabin and looked out along the slope for a mere glimpse of Elizabeth Spaulding, he was tortured by the question of why she was still here, and what stood between her and Baker. Why had Baker bought out in such hot haste and left this North country that was his home? Was Elizabeth waiting for him, or had they split up?

Sometimes it seemed to Haskell that his appointment to this northern post had not been a mere vagary of luck but a manifest act of destiny, that he might meet Elizabeth Spaulding. His triumph over Baker, his commission as a Mounted officer, his career in the Mounted—what did the whole of it weigh as against the prospect of losing Elizabeth after he had found her? With the sincerity of the only passionate love in his life, he felt that if Baker married her and took her away, his victory over the ex-sergeant would be a grinning mockery.

Late one quiet evening, when Bill Hardsock was gone on patrol, Haskell saw Elizabeth go up the slope to the cabin which had been Baker's, and light the candles there, and after a quarter-hour come away again. Tripping down the grassy terrace to Mrs. Drummond's flower garden, she sat down alone by the edge of it.

He went out of his lonesome cabin and out along the twilight slope toward her.

Hat in hand, Haskell came up. With cold sardonic eyes she surveyed him, amused at his humility. Toward her the man had no pride left.

She reminded him sharply: "I believe I asked you not to talk with me again."

"Yes, you did," he said humbly. "I haven't forgotten. It's made these last couple weeks pretty miserable. But when I saw you over there tonight . . . Elizabeth, won't you let me—can't I stay just a little while? I got some news day before yesterday that cut me up pretty bad. . . ." He waited for her to comment, but she said nothing. "You remember last winter I said my father was in poor health? I got a radiogram night before last about—about him."

Elizabeth understood that his father had died. She was quite well aware that Haskell was not exactly stricken by the news, though he was trying to play upon her sympathy.

She wondered why he was discussing the matter with her now.

As he went on talking of it, she began to see his reason. He mentioned the big country estate outside of Cobham, the town house in Ottawa, the extensive and valuable timber limits up the Klamikl. When he hinted at himself being the only heir and the owner of all this, she saw his whole drift.

The news left her entirely cold. From his treatment of Alan she knew how tricky and dishonorable he could be. He was trying to bait her. . . . She smiled sardonically at him for being so crude about it. Probably he thought to make her his Ottawa mistress.

The affections of such a man were evanescent at best, and certainly quicksand to build upon. Imagining her relations with this man if she ever allowed herself to become dependent on him, she saw him staving off marriage by the old threadbare dodges, and at last turning coldly away when passion went. Alan Baker in time would go farther than Haskell and his Cobham estate. Alan was every way more a man. He was honest, he could be depended upon.

Angry and contemptuous, she rose. "I've got to go. But there's something I really must thank you for, Inspector. "To thank me for?" He too had risen; he was leaning toward her eagerly. "I'm glad . . . I didn't know I'd done—"

"You didn't intend it as a favor. But it was." With mocking irony in her tones she went on: "Last winter Alan was offered a very splendid position in Victoria. I wanted him to take it. You used to say he was a non-com with no prospects, and that was somewhat as I felt. He didn't want to leave. He wanted to stay in service and live here in the North. Just when he was wavering, you forced his hand. You made him buy out, and so you made our marriage possible. I'm awfully grateful to you, really. You didn't realize what a favor you were doing."

She left him standing there, staring after her, dazed and speechless. That same evening, only an hour later, Haskell made a discovery so startling that in some measure it took his tortured thoughts away from Elizabeth.

A knock sounded on the door, and Whipple came in with a report. "Sir, last week I missed fifty gallons of gas and five of oil from our stores. I thought it might be a paper mistake, but today I checked up again and we're short still more."

"Well, what about it?" Haskell snapped. "Nothing, sir; nothing at all," Whipple said hastily. He saw that his chief was in a vicious mood, and he backed away to the door. "I just thought that you would like to know, sir. Most likely some half-breed with an outboard motor is stealing this, sir." And he closed the door quietly. Alone again, unable to bear his stinging thoughts, Haskell turned in desperation to the service radio set in an effort to distract himself. As he had done on evenings past, he picked up an Edmonton station. Among the orders, news and personal messages he heard that an aviator named Feathererof and another man, name unknown, had stolen a machine gun, a propeller, pack-chute, flying instruments and other things at Edmonton; and escaping in Feathererof's monoplane, had last been sighted following the Alberta and Great Waterways railroad toward McMurray. The posts were warned to be on the lookout for the plane and to arrest the criminals on sight.

The name and description of Feathererof meant nothing to Haskell, but the description of the other person made him thoughtful. Tall, rangy, sandy-haired, gray-eyed, with a long prominent scar across his left temple—that description would fit Alan Baker to a dot. And Baker had gone south and might conceivably have reached Edmonton.

Haskell pondered this possibility a minute and then dismissed it. It was Bill Hardsock who innocently opened his eyes to the truth.

Knocking, entering, standing before the desk, Bill requested: "Sir, if you don't mind, I've got three days free time coming to me, and if you don't mind I'd like to take them now. I'd like to have them in a row, if you don't mind—"

"I'm short of men as it is," Haskell cut him off. "You can't go. That's that!"

It wasn't "that" for Bill. Refusing to be driven out, he planted himself there wide-legged and pleaded for his three days—pleaded till Haskell saw that the corporal must have some special and urgent reason for wanting off duty.

"Are You Getting Married?" He Demanded Sardonically.

"Are you getting married?" he demanded sardonically.

"No, sir," Bill answered, with more outward respect than he had ever shown before. "I—I want to—go trout fishing."

Haskell angered. He started to order Bill out of the cabin on penalty of c. b. But then he suddenly checked himself, he half-rose from his chair, gasping, with a revelation voicing through his brain.

There it was—the whole crashing truth! Baker's strange haste to buy out, his strange journey out to civilization, that plane coming north, the missing gasoline, Bill Hardsock's request for a leave of absence. . . . All these disjointed facts suddenly clicked together like the parts of a Chinese puzzle.

That man wanted in Edmonton had been Baker! He was coming back in a plane to get those bandits! Hardsock was stealing gas and oil for the machine to maneuver on! He needed these three days of absence in order to take the fuel out to the rendezvous! Wanting time to think, time to make the right move, Haskell said jerkily: "Just a—minute, corporal. I'll have to . . . I want to consider your request." And he turned away to the window.

So Baker had not given up! He was out of service, but he was coming back to finish with those bandits. Haskell's knowledge of Baker's grim persistent nature and the man's uncanny wisdom in a wilderness man-hunt, whispered to him: "And he'll cngner them, too! He'll run those men down! He's going to have a showdown fight with them."

For a moment he was staggered by the man's superb daring. For a moment, forgetting personal scores between himself and Baker, he felt an admiration for this magnificent attempt.

Then, as he saw deeper into the consequences of this feat, his admiration darkened and flickered out. How would it look for the ex-sergeant to capture or kill those men, or at least corner them and go down fighting? What would the higher officials have to say about that?

All his hatred and jealousy of Baker flared up. Not only was this man going to marry the girl he loved; this relentless sergeant, rising out of a crushing defeat, was going to show him up and make his very name a joke throughout the Force.

"You are instructed—" he still heard those cracking words flashing up across the wilderness from Edmonton—"to capture that plane and to arrest those criminals on sight." Baker was a criminal, a wanted man, subject to arrest, certain of a penitentiary sentence! Somewhere to the south he was flying up across the latitudes. He had a rendezvous somewhere with Hardsock.

Hardsock could be trailed to that meeting place! The plane could be captured, Baker arrested, sent up for a term. . . . Presently Haskell turned around, smiling pleasantly. "I was disgruntled about something when you first came in, corporal. You really have patrolled hard for several months. I'm sorry I snapped at you. You can have your three days of whenever you like. You want to start tomorrow?" And when Bill nodded eagerly. "Very well, I'll throw in the rest of this evening, too. By the way, when you go past barracks ask Whipple to step down here."

"Snakes!" Bill breathed to himself, as he thanked Haskell and went out the door. "That Spring-heel Johnny must be winding up to ask a favor of me, or something. But I've got my three days to help Alan out. Lord, I hope Alan shows up during my free time. He might maybe let me go along on his trick."

With no suspicion of the ugly truth, he turned up the twilight slope. When Whipple came in, Haskell ordered him to close the door and pull down the window, to guard against possible eavesdropping. Then he tersely explained the situation. He added:

"Hardsock will probably steal some more gasoline and oil tonight. What he's already stolen isn't enough for a plane to do much maneuvering on. I want you to watch him stealing that stuff so that you can later be a witness. He'll probably have time to take those drums only a couple miles from here tonight. Tomorrow he'll take all of it on to the place where he's to meet Baker. He's been sneaking it away little by little when he had it chance, and hiding it close by; but during his three days he'll take it to the meeting place."

"You go down to the river bank now to those two teepees and get that Indian called Ogi-Tomax. You remember Hardsock thrashed him one time last winter for carrying a squaw-club and beating his wife. He's got a grudge against Hardsock, he'll have a personal interest in this, he's just the man we want. Take a can of my cigarettes with you and a little rum as a silence present. I'll personally pay him five dollars a day. Do you understand so far?" Whipple nodded. Haskell went on: "You and the Indian are to shadow Hardsock tonight and tomorrow. Find out where he's taking that stuff and where he's going to meet Baker. As soon as you do that, whip back here and report to me."

It was late the next evening before Whipple returned. He came back tired, bedraggled, but with electric news.

He and the Indian had watched Bill steal more gas and oil from the stores. They had shadowed him to the temporary cache two miles up the Mackenzie. There he had loaded his canoe with the gunwales with the drums and cans and had taken them all to a big lake twenty miles on up the river. He had cached the fuel on a headland called Goose point; and was waiting there without the faintest suspicion that he had been trailed and was being watched. The Indian, lying low back in the willows, was keeping an eye on him.

As Haskell listened to the report, he forgot the haggard day and night just passed. He had scarcely dared hope for such news as this.

After careful thought, guarding against any slip-up, he ordered Whipple: "Go get your rifle and belt-gun. I'll take mine, too. We'll go up there in the launch. You can drive it. We'll capture Hardsock and those supplies. That'll be that. Then we'll wait there. The plane'll be alone in a couple days. We'll keep the launch in cover close by. When the machine lights down and they go ashore to get the supplies, we'll ram it and put it out of commission. Then we'll have Baker and this Feathererof—and we'll put them where the dogs won't bite 'em!"

After his despair of their last week, after his helpless festering anger at Baker, it was a new lease on hope to know he was going to smash Baker's venture and throw him into prison and make his marriage to Elizabeth impossible! Baker was walking all unknowingly into a deadly trap. Walking into arrest and criminal disgrace and prison. He would be lucky to get off with a sentence of two years. That was the statute minimum for his offense.

Buckling on his belt-gun, Haskell snuffed the candles and went out of his cabin—the easiest, most exultant, most deadly certain trip he had ever made.

DAIRY FACTS

CATTLE LICE TAKE HEAVY DAIRY TOLL

Eradicate the Pest Before Heavy Infestation.

Cattle lice, which run up a heavy toll in the form of reduced milk yields and slackened gains, are likely to be more troublesome this winter than usual, according to a report to the University of Illinois by an assistant entomologist of the Illinois state natural history survey. There has been a gradual increase in louse population on dairy animals and other stock in the past two years, owing largely to lack of proper control measures. Fortunately, the lice are not hard to eradicate until a heavy infestation is allowed to develop.

From the standpoint of cheapness, availability and effectiveness the best treatment is raw linseed oil. Boiled or refined linseed oil is likely to injure the skin and should not be used. The oil may be applied with a handbrush or in the case of short-haired animals, with a wash of cloth. A brush having uneven bristles is best adapted to this work. A second treatment should be given two weeks following the first and then monthly applications should be made until spring. The oil should not be applied too vigorously but enough should be put on to reach the skin. It is a good plan to keep treated animals out of the sun for a day.

Time and Work Saved by Use of Milking Machine

The man labor used in caring for dairy cows in Nevada varies all the way from 81 hours to 280 hours a year for each cow, as indicated by detailed farm records secured by the experiment station of that state. The average chore time for herds which were machine milked was 106 hours as against 141 hours for all herds of 15 or more cows, milked by hand. The average time required in all hand-milked herds—which on the whole had fewer cows than the machine-milked herds—was 151 hours, which showed that where labor-saving equipment was not available labor costs were higher. For a 25-cow herd, a milking machine will make a net saving in labor of $290 each year according to this experiment station. This calculation assumes that labor is valued at 40 cents an hour and allows an expense of $60 annually for the machine.

Fall Calving

Fall calving is here. It brings certain problems that need unrelenting attention. The act of bearing young requires great sacrifices on the part of mothers. It brings about rapid and extreme changes in the physical body of the mother. Instinctively the mother is willing to make extreme sacrifice for her young. She is not always physically fit or capable of doing so.

Helpers calving for the first time should be watched carefully as they approach calving. Breeding dates are essential. Most helpers will bring their calves along without help. What they need is clean, sanitary surroundings, the right feeding before and after calving, and some attention to their udders. Helpers that need help in calving should not be denied the advantage of the help of one who understands what to do and how best to do it.

Warm the Drinking Water

Water which has had the chill removed from it will be consumed more readily by dairy cows in winter and will cause heavier milk production, according to C. A. Smith, Colorado State college.

"Every 100 pounds of milk contains 87 pounds water. In order to produce the maximum quantity of milk a cow must consume large amounts of water," Smith says. "It has been found that producing cows consume much more water than dry cows. They will not drink much water when they have to break the ice, but drink large quantities of water if the chill is removed. A small tank heater will do the work at a very small cost."

DAIRY NOTES

Whole milk will be delivered daily or twice a day while cream will likely be delivered just two or three times a week. Every 48 hours is better unless conditions for holding are very good.

Continuous testing for production in dairy herds provides the only means of intelligently weeding out poor cows and improving the milking ability of the herd. This is especially important when prices are low.

By culling and breeding stock, dairymen of California increased butterfat production from 186 to 265 pounds a year.

Only comfortable cows can do justice to themselves at the milk pail. As far as possible flies must be controlled.

It has been found that cows that have the individual water cups in their stalls produce more milk than those that just get their water morning and evening.

USES OF CRANBERRIES

Fresh Cranberry Conserve.
The cranberry keeps better than any other berry because it has in its own composition an acid which is a preservative—sallylic acid. As this acid acts upon metals care should be taken to cook the berries in porcelain-lined or aluminum dishes—never in tin.

Cranberry Conserve.
Take two cupsful each of cranberries put through the meat chopper, add the same amount of apples, one cupful of sugar and one-fourth cupful of pecan meats slightly broken. Let stand until the next day to season. This will keep for weeks in a cool place.

Wash five pounds of carefully picked over berries, chop them coarsely. Put two pounds of seeded raisins through the food chopper, mix with the berries. Boil the thin yellow rind of four large oranges in water to cover until the rind is tender, then chop fine. Put all the ingredients into a saucepan with ten cupfuls of sugar, the pulp and juice of five large oranges. Heat slowly and cook until reduced to a jam.

Cranberry Frappe.
Boil one quart of berries (add two cupfuls of water) for ten minutes. Strain through a coarse cloth, add two cupfuls of sugar, stirring until it is well dissolved. Add the strained juice of two lemons and freeze to a mush.

Cranberry Drink.
Put one cupful of cranberries on to cook with a little water. Boil two quarts of water with three tablespoonfuls of oatmeal and the peel of half a lemon for ten minutes. Now add the strained cranberry juice and sweeten to taste, boil twenty minutes, then cool and add one cupful of orange juice, strain and serve.

Cranberry Bavarian Cream.
Whip a pint of double cream until stiff, add one cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of gelatin which has been softened in water and liquified over hot water. Mix with the cranberries, strained and sweetened, to which four tablespoonfuls of marshmallow strap has been added. Fill the molds and pack in ice and salt for four hours.

BOGUS REDUCING

MRS. JONES is twenty-six and she weighs ten pounds more than she ought to weigh, according to the table of averages, and no less than twenty pounds more than she ought to weigh according to her own standards. "But I am reducing," she tells you. "I have been reducing all summer and I don't see why I don't lose weight. I get along without breakfast entirely, and all I eat for luncheon is a little fruit or lettuce."

I have known other women like Mrs. Jones—active, hard working young women who do almost all of their housework, who according to all the rules of the reducing game ought to be losing weight at the rate of four or five pounds a month. I have always been puzzled about them—

Until I chanced to spend a few days with Mrs. Jones. She ate no breakfast—not even a cup of coffee, but sat heroically drinking a glass of water while we broke our fast on coffee, fruit and rolls. At ten we were ready for a mid-morning walk for reducing purposes. In the kitchen just before she started Mrs. Jones paused and blithely ate a well buttered roll with a large piece of cheese, and brought with her for the walk a tin of peanut brittle. We paused on the way back for an ice cream soda. Mrs. Jones said that if we did this we would have no appetite for luncheon. So luncheon passed and Mrs. Jones managed on a plate of salad—generously laden with mayonnaise. As dinner approached, the edge of Mrs. Jones' appetite began to grow sharp, so to keep up the good work of spoiling her dinner appetite she visited the pantry—and after her visit, there were two crullers, a banana and a piece of cake left in the larder than before she went in.

That I suppose is an extreme case, but it did suggest the possibility that the reason why so many hard-working housewives don't lose as much weight as they think they ought to is because they count calories only at meal times and don't count the calories they consume between meals for the sake of spoiling their appetites.
