Proper Fences Mean Much to the Farm

Owner Who Neglects Is Called Unwise.

Good fences are an asset to the farm. There is satisfaction in knowing that live stock is going to stay where it is put, and that strays will be kept out. This assurance means money in the pocket, as well as avoiding the nuisance of chasing after animals that are out of place. A well-fenced farm also offers added inducement if sale is desired. There is nothing more discouraging to a prospective buyer than ramshackle fences. Even though the land may be good, he immediately sees a lot of troublesome and expensive work in getting it fenced. Formerly our chestnut woods supplied plenty of durable material for rails and posts, but the chestnut is gone, and the labor to get it out too expensive anyway. In place of the rail fence we now find increasing use of woven wire and steel posts, quickly put up, holding the stock and doing away with the old fence harbor for weeds and bushes. Defects in the wire making of a score or more years ago have been overcome, so that present-day wire fence is lasting.—Rural New-Yorker.

Unthriftiness in Pigs May Be Due to Rickets

Each year we get some inquiries concerning the cure for lameness, soreness, unthriftiness in fall pigs. Right away we suspect these pigs as having rickets. Their owners should be more concerned about the cause of this condition than about its cure.

The cause of rickets is improper feeding, by which we mean not enough of the right kind of minerals and vitamins in the ration—too much corn, barley, oats, middlings, and such like, and not enough skim-milk and alfalfa or clover hay for their meals. A pig will stand an improperly constituted ration for awhile without apparent ill effects, but sooner or later his assimilating function goes wrong and he gets stiff in the legs or sore in the feet and he does not gain in weight as he should. Pigs that have been carried thus far through the winter mainly on cereal grains should, by all means, now have some leafy alfalfa or clover hay.—Exchange

Windmills Compared

In construction and consequent amount of work it will perform, the windmill of today is indeed far superior to its early ancestor. That is probably one of the fundamental factors which allows it to remain on our list of modern equipment.

Many of the general objections to the old windmill have been removed of late years and we find this machine capable of filling power needs where it was heretofore incapable. Newer windmills do not have to be oiled as frequently as did old ones. They run smoother, furnishing a smoother power to the pumps or other machines they drive.

It took a great deal more wind to operate the old type machines, and they were consequently incapable of operating in many places where we have machines operating successfully today.

Made $27.58 an Acre!

A net profit of $27.58 an acre was earned last year by Charles Green of Monrovia. Total expenses to the acre for his year's operations amounted to $10. Money received grossed $38.27 an acre. The difference of $27.58 was left to pay for Mr. Green's work, and interest on the investment, which is a good record for a tough year. Of the 80 acres Mr. Green farms, 27 acres are in alfalfa, with small amounts of other legumes. Sweet clover is used for pasture. Here is a dairyman who produces quality cream that is sold on a steady price basis, and all of his crops are fed to his herd of nine Jersey cows, some chickens, hogs and sheep.—Kansas Farmer.

His Tank Didn't Crack

Frank Moore was planning a saucer shape concrete horse tank for the farm he operates in Foster county, North Dakota. Fastening down a heater in such a tank presented a problem, for Mr. Moore was told that wood set in the concrete would swell and crack the tank. He soaked two by fours two weeks and set them in the concrete as a base for the heater. They have served for several years and have caused no trouble.—Capper's Farmer.

Agricultural Squibs

At present prices for corn and tankage, skim milk is worth about 25 cents a 100 pounds, to feed hogs.

In the Middle West soy bean hay is a substitute for alfalfa has worked well in wintering ewes with lamb.

It is estimated that the American farmer is at least four times as efficient as any other farmer in the world.

Marshall county (Tennessee) farmers this year harvested 4,150 acres of alfalfa. Five years ago the crop covered less than 100 acres.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Learning to Put on the Brakes.

That we have been going through the most disastrous times in years no one will deny and yet out of its ruins we have at least learned one lesson. How to put on the brakes. Of course a lot of us hadn't used them for so long we had about forgotten where to look, but listen, brother, when you are going down hill at full speed, overloaded with self-confidence, and geared for a non-stop run; then look up only to see the bridge gone before it's time to take your foot off the accelerator and reach for the emergency brake before you're lost in the maelstrom of disaster.

Yes, truly, we have progressed, and at a rapid rate. Speed has been our watchword and final goal below and no one cared very much about what was to happen above. In fact, everybody had time to think. It simply wasn't being done in the speediest families. Then what was the use of bothering about thinking, anyhow. Let the other fellow do it.

Wasn't your broker investing your money for you at a 20 per cent yield, which could never get lower? Were not motor cars getting cheaper and gas stations more plentiful? Didn't we have a two billion dollar Congress? Why, said the wise boys of industry, we hadn't started to go yet. Just wait until the farmers get speeded up and then things will happen—and they did.

Everybody with as much as thirteen acres bought one tractor, two automobiles and a dozen mortgage blanks, and started out to multiply and replenish the earth, and all that's left now to multiply is mortgages.

But at last we are, through necessity, slowing down and beginning to really think for ourselves, and when men and women begin thinking right, then will right plans be formulated and this old sphere move along in a safe and sane manner. Yes, brother, it's been a pretty hard lesson and a very expensive one, but we have at least learned where the brake pedal is—Paris, Mo., Mercury.

Putting Our Dollars to Work.

A few years ago the secretary of a commercial organization in Columbus, Mississippi, began to wonder how many times a dollar changed hands in his community in a single year; so he took a number of dollars, pasted a slip of paper on the back of each, and started them out through the regular channels of trade. On these slips appeared instructions to pass the dollar along in the usual way, and check it when it went on to the next party.

At the end of the year each of these dollars was returned to the secretary by the local bank, and it was found that on an average each dollar had passed through 200 different hands during the course of twelve months.

If one could have interviewed one of these dollars he would have received about such a travelogue as this:

"After I left you I went directly to the grocer's till. My visit there was brief, however, for a farmer entered the store with a crate of eggs, and the grocer turned me over in exchange. I thought I was going to get a little trip into the country, but I never left the town, for my farmer friend took me down the street a short distance and turned me over to the shoe dealer.

"Well I couldn't take the time to tell you about all of the fine people I visited during the year, but I remember that one was a minister, another a workman helping to build a new pavement through the city, another a school teacher, who received me in exchange for instruction given children. I also visited a doctor, a lawyer, and a man working on the new community house, I spent some time in the bank and earned a little money while there for some of my friends.

"I feel that I have brought a considerable amount of happiness to the people of this community during the year, and I am ready to go out now and put in another strenuous year helping to build up worth while things here."

That is what happens to a dollar that is kept in circulation. And it seems to us that the big problem confronting this nation is not so much the shortage of money but keeping what money we have circulating in a normal manner. How can that be done? Well we would naturally suggest that advertising is one of the most essential elements.—Fairbury, (Neb.) News.

What price— ROOF PERMANENCE?

SOME people spend, in repairs, far more than the cost of a permanent roof. The home owner who does this knows that such a roof is not a bargain at any price.

J-M Asbestos Shingles cost slightly more than ordinary roofing materials—but they give you freedom from repairs. You will have the double assurance of safety and permanent protection. Fire cannot burn these sturdy shingles. Time and weather will not harm them. Better still, you can choose the very style and color blend needed to give your home charm and distinction. No need to disturb the present roof. Just put the new shingles on right over the old ones.

One of our roofing experts will give you complete information. Just phone and ask him to call. No obligation, of course.

Questions:

1. Is there really a tree called the arched?
2. Can a fly hear?
3. How many legs has a centipede?
4. Why are these little white cups on telegraph poles?
5. Does a diver have lead on his boots?
6. Can silk, made by a spider, be made into cloth?

ANSWERS:

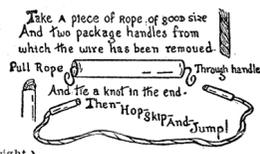

1. Yes, indeed. It is a mountain tree and sometimes grows as high as one hundred and fifty feet. The wood is excellent for telegraph poles.
2. No. Most of the smaller insects are deaf. Many experiments have been made with all kinds of sounds but apparently the insects do not notice them.
3. Some have only fifteen pairs, some over a hundred. The number of pairs, however, is never even. Always odd like fifteen, twenty-three, ninety-nine or one hundred and one.

4. These keep the electric current from escaping down the poles into the earth. They are made of earthenware and are called insulators.

5. Yes, he does. This is so that he will be certain to sink feet down. The metal on his helmet might otherwise make him sink head first.

6. Yes, but spiders are very expensive and hard to raise. Because they eat each other up, they have to be kept in separate enclosures and besides that it is difficult to harvest the silk from the tangled web.

to get by these days. First of all, he's got to keep his back to the wall and his ear to the ground. He's expected to put his shoulder to the wheel, his nose to the grindstone, keep a level head, and both feet on the ground. And at the same time look for a silver lining with his head in the clouds.

In spite of the shape he's in, the farmer will find it necessary to sow some cloverseed and we have just what you want.

M. H. Quick Recalls Boyhood Days

From Mansfield, Ohio, Journal. M. H. Quick is 83 years old today—but this is his first birthday in Mansfield.

It is also the anniversary of his wedding day, although his wife has been dead for a long time, and he remembers that day, 62 years ago, with a flash of merry wit.

"I never was my own boss for a minute in my life—because I got married the very day I came of age," he said. "M. H."—his first name is Michael, but he dislikes it so much that he has always been called "M. H."—was one of the young men that "went west to grow up with the country."

He was born in Jasper, Stuben county, New York, the year of the great gold rush ("But don't interview me on that," he said, "for I don't remember much about it,") and when he was about 18 years old he was bitten by the "go west" bug.

"I'll give you $50," he told his father, "if you'll release my services so that I can go west." His father agreed and young "M. H." worked for $12 a month until he had saved his release money, and then he continued to work until he had saved the price of a new suit of clothes, and $40 for a nest egg.

He donned the new suit, and packed all of his other clothes in a trunk and started for Cass City, Michigan. He arrived, but the trunk never did, so that he had to work in his brand new $8 suit until he earned enough to buy other clothes.

The $40 nest egg he still has, for with it he bought 40 acres of government land, and as the years rolled on the 40 grew into a farm of 400 acres. "Every time a baby was born in the family, I went out and bought 40 more acres, just to celebrate," he confided.

He lived on that farm for 63 years. But it is only natural for "M. H." to stick to a proposition, for away back in 1775 his grandfather, George Norton, left his home in Bennington, Va., to follow Ethan Allen and the Green Mountain boys' ploughed their way through the main gate at Fort Ticconderoga and planted the flag of the 13 colonies where the English Jack had waved.

Mr. Quick came to Mansfield last December to make his home with his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bryant, East Mansfield. He has, besides Mrs. Bryant, three sons.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Martus were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. McDonald. The card party that was to be held at Mrs. A. J. Burdon's home Tuesday for St. Agatha's church was postponed on account of the weather.

Teacher, Leta O'Dell. Motto: "A merry heart doeth good like medicine." We started practicing for the health day program. Billie Jackson is still in the lead in receiving stamps for reading. Teddy Burzynski has finished his primer book. The fifth grade geography have completed their book and are now reviewing. Our new curtains make our school look brighter and more home-like. Bluebirds and robins have been flying around our bird houses and we think some have started their nests. Reporters, Loraine Moss and Elenore Dybilas.

PAUL SCHOOL.

Teacher, Mrs. Clara Korte. We are all glad to have Gerald Silson back with us again. The second grade have made some drawings of bluebirds. The fourth and fifth grades made some flags of different nations of the world. The seventh grade are reading "Tales of Courage." We like it very much. We have already seen 18 different kinds of birds this spring. Some of us have seen and heard frogs and that is a sure sign of spring. Reporters, Maxine Delong and Audrey Hower.

SHABBONA SCHOOL.

Motto: "The world is such a happy place that children, whether big or small, should always have a smiling face, and never, never, sulk at all." We are glad spring is here. We enjoy playing in the fresh air. We are looking forward to the health day for all rural schools in the county. The program for the day consists of athletic events. We wish to thank Geo. Phetteplace and Forest Hyatt for helping the boys make an apparatus for high and broad jumps and marking off a place for the dashes. Miss Jackson has been reading pioneer stories for morning exercises. We like "Willie and Eagle" best. We are glad that the McLarty children are in school. They were quarantined for scarlet fever. We are sorry that Maurice and Earl Bigham moved to Berkley. Francis Townsend made our room more attractive by bringing a bouquet of pussy willows. The primary folks are drawing and coloring pictures of the spring birds as they see them coming back. We realize that it is getting near the end of the term because so many have finished our books. The Evergreen Stitches have been working hard on their stories.

April 19, 1907.

Will it be necessary to raise any village taxes this year? The question has been asked on the streets of late and Monday evening it was discussed quite thoroughly at the regular meeting of the council. The sum of money in the hands of the village treasurer at the beginning of the year, Mar. 1, was $5885.90 which is more than the amount raised for village taxes last year. It is thought by some that this amount together with the usual income of the village will be sufficient to care for the expenditures of the village and they are in favor of giving the village assessor a vacation this year and skipping one tax receipt. The sentiment expressed by a majority of the trustees and the citizens present at the council meeting Monday was in favor of raising a tax this year.

The board of education has made contracts with the following instructors for the next school year: F. A. Tiedgen, Miss Helen Hunter, Mrs. F. A. Tiedgen, Miss Etta M. The Faeroes Deaths

It Takes Two Months to Dry a Codfish in the Faeroes.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.) (WNU Service.)

THE bleak, wind-swept Faeroes soon will hear the drone of regular mail planes, for a new landing field is planned for accommodation of planes which will fly the proposed America-Denmark air mail route.

The Faeroes, numbering 21 small islands sprinkled over a small area about 250 miles off the northern tip of Scotland have remained practically unchanged since Viking days. Modern civilization can find no foothold on their windy cliffs; there life can exist only when modeled on ancient, primitive patterns. And so the islanders, forever wrestling with waves and winds, have little time for the tourist or his money.

Each of the islands rises from the sea with flanks as sheer as a ship's sides and with a plateau top, flat like a ship's deck. In all the Faeroes there is only one small sandy beach of a hundred feet or so, a beach which is considered such a remarkable gift of nature that the big island of Sando takes its name from the tiny strand.

Videro is probably the bleakest island of them all and therefore visitors seldom land there. But the effort pays, for there the dwellings are of the most ancient type, customs have been handed down unmodified, and it is such a colony as Lief Ericsson might have planted. There is no town; not even a store. Low stone farmhouses, half sunk in the ground and girded by outer stone walls to escape the violent winds, cling to the barrens. Sheep graze at will.

Live in "Smoke Rooms."
So poor is Videro that only one house, that belonging to the schoolmaster, a very great man indeed, has a "glass room." Such an extravagance is not for the average Videro dweller, who lives with his family in a "smoke room," or a converted smoke room. The smoke room, which was once typical of all rural homes in the Faeroes and still survives in many, harks back to the feast halls of the Vikings. Usually it is large, since it is often the only room in the house, except the stable below it for horses and cows, and must serve for the entertainment of the neighbors as well as for all family uses. Around the room there are no windows; only the entrance door and those that open on the original "pullman beds," which may be single- or double-deck.

In the center of the room stands a low stone forge on which burns peat or, rarely, brown coal, and above the fire hangs a wooden chimney, which carries some, but not all, of the smoke to the outside air. While the schoolmaster has his "stove room" and is the only man of Videro with a glass room, nearly all the farmhouses on Stromo Island have glass rooms, and in Thorshavn, the capital itself, the communal stove room has been left out in the new concrete houses.

A glass room is an appendage of the smoke or stove room, having glass windows. Usually it is a parlor and, like parlors of an earlier day, can be used only on state occasions—for a funeral, for a marriage, or a reception of a special guest. Generally the unusual parlor contains the family's only furniture, such as a table, a few chairs, a vase with paper flowers, and religious pictures on the wall. Frequently the glass room is opened for travelers, but the stranger usually prefers the family living room, with its warm stove, to these parlors, which give forth the cold musty odor of a cellar closed for many years. Like Their Food "High."

food, however, receives different treatment. Newly caught fish are cleaned and dried and dried and dried—until they become so hard that one's teeth can make no impression. But with a stout hammer the islander will powder his durable codfish on a stone and eat its dust, so to speak.

No one goes to Myggenaes, the westernmost island of the Faeroes, unless the trip is necessary, for it has the most violent surf. Myggenaes consists of a main island, supporting about 125 inhabitants who raise sheep and catch fish. Cursed it is by winds and waves, for the storms that leave Newfoundland and Greenland gather all their forces and loose them here. The rest of the Faeroes and Europe get the storms later; Myggenaes gets them first and worst.

At the very western end of the island is a holm, or islet, separated from the main block by a crevice 75 feet wide. At the outer point of the detached piece stands the westernmost lighthouse of the Faeroes. Its beacon blazes out 413 feet above the sea. At the foot of the lighthouse cliff, their foundations melting year by year in the tossing waters, are two pinnacles of rock on which in summer the gannets rest.

Life in the Lighthouse.
The lighthouse is operated by a Dane, who lives with his family in a house sheltered behind the lighthouse rock. The keeper tells of the awesome storms of winter, when a screaming, whistling blackness descends on the island and the sea lifts up higher, higher, and higher on their rock; when the suffocating blast of stinging salt spray that no living creature can stand against rages mercilessly.

But more telling even than his description is the kerosene lamp which hangs from the ceiling of his living room. It has a large globe with a hole on either side, as if a shot had passed through. During one winter storm a wave that rose up the cliff dashed over the precipice a pebble, which broke his window, passed through his lamp, and struck against the wall. He shows visitors the water-worn stone, which he retains as a keepsake.

The farmer-fishermen of the north islands like Myggenaes and Videro are self-supporting, living on the fish of the sea and the sheep on their barrens, almost independent of what the world has to tell or wishes to buy. Different conditions obtain, however, in the southern and more populous islands, where extensive fisheries have long been operated. A decline in this major industry has been occasioned by many factors. The modern equipment used by steam trawlers elsewhere, newer and quicker methods of packing used in Newfoundland and Norway, and a reduced world demand necessitated a recent extensive program of aid by the Danish government. Figures show a tragic loss of trade; but to a newcomer, Sydero appears to have all the fish any island could possibly wish. On bright days the rocky shore is white with the codfish, which is Sydero's chief stock in trade.

Acres of fish lie everywhere, soaking up the fitful Faeroe sunshine. Fish follow the shore line as if they had been cast up by the sea. They cover a slope like slates on a roof, thousands of oval slabs of white fish meat—a thirsty sight! A line, two hooks, and some fish or bird intestines for bait, are all the gear a native needs. When his boat has been anchored, over go the lines, and in come the fish. For the novice, there is a thrill in pulling in a five-to-twenty-five pound fish, but it is an old story to the islander.

Fish are cleaned at once and salted down. Often a ship will return to port with 250,000 pounds of hand-caught fish. Again it will go out and never return at all. These are brave men who go to sea for cod. Each year numbers of island fishermen lose their lives at their trade. Each grim cliff is the tombstone of some schooner and her crew.

Once safely back in port, the schooners unload their fish, which are passed on to women out on the piers, who bend over huge vats of water, scrubbing the cod clean. Pictures of these arduous workers are obtained only with great difficulty, for in the Faeroes, as elsewhere, women do not want their pictures taken unless they are dressed in their best clothes.

Deaths

Grant McConnell.
Funeral services for Grant McConnell, who passed away Friday, April 8, at 6:00 p. m., at his home 2 1/4 miles east of Cass City, were held Monday afternoon at two o'clock from the Evangelical church. Rev. C. F. Smith officiated and burial was in Elkland cemetery.

General Grant McConnell was born July 25, 1864, on a farm one-half mile south of the McConnell school. He was united in marriage with Miss Hattie Helwig April 21, 1872. The last ten years have been spent on the farm where Mr. McConnell passed away.

He has been in poor health for several years and the last two months has been quite ill. He leaves his widow, one daughter, Mrs. Jacob Hiller, one sister, Mrs. Robert Charlton and two grandchildren, all of Cass City. Mr. McConnell was a faithful worker in the Evangelical church and Sunday School of which he was a member. His faith was strong in his Lord and he remained cheerful through all of his suffering.

Mrs. Minnie Barnes.
Mrs. Minnie Barnes, widow of the late John H. Barnes, passed away Saturday, April 9, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Clyde Peterson, in Flint.

Minnie Thompson was born Jan. 10, 1867, in Lapeer county and was married to John H. Barnes November 24, 1883, in Cass City. Mr. Barnes died June 5, 1929, at their home on Pine street in this village. Since the death of Mr. Barnes, Mrs. Barnes has made her home with her son, Andrew, in Cass City and with her daughter, Mrs. Clyde Peterson, in Flint.

Seven years ago she suffered a stroke and has been in poor health since that time. Saturday morning, she had a third stroke and passed away that same day. The body was brought to the home of her son here where funeral services were held Monday afternoon. Rev. T. S. Bottrell, pastor of the local Methodist church, officiated and interment was in Elkland cemetery. Members of Venus Rebekah
