LAY CORNERSTONE OF COURTHOUSE MAY 27

Big Parade Starts at Two O'clock Followed by Ceremony and Address.

Cornerstone laying ceremonies for the new Tuscola county court house will be held at Caro on Friday afternoon, May 27. The rite will be in charge of Lewis E. Anderson of Omena, grand master of the Masonic Grand lodge of Michigan, and the following grand lodge officers have been invited to participate: Geo. Ferguson, deputy grand master; Frank Gould, senior grand warden; Harvey Sherman, junior grand warden; Neil Reid, senior grand deacon; Wm. H. Parker, junior grand deacon; Rev. Wm. H. Gallagher, grand chaplain. Justice Wm. W. Potter of the State Supreme court is the speaker of the day.

The parade, preceding the ceremony and address, will be in three divisions and will begin at two o'clock.

A reviewing stand will seat Masonic grand lodge officers, county supervisors, members of the cornerstone laying committee, 8 representatives of the American Legion, 17 county officials, state senator and Tuscola county representative in the legislature, 11 village presidents, and 7 newspaper men.

First Parade Division.

The first division of the parade will gather at the corner of Almer and Gibbs streets in the following formation: American Legion marshal and aides in automobiles; Vassar band; Masonic colors; Knight Templar Commandery of Saginaw; Masonic escort to grand lodge officers and distinguished guests; grand lodge officers and distinguished guests in autos.

Second Division.

The second division forms in front of the Wm. Wallace residence on Almer street in the following order: Drum and bugle corps of Lapeer American Legion post; American Legion colors; American Legion posts of the villages of the county as escorts to county officials; county officials in autos; municipal officials in autos; visiting officials in autos.

Third Division.

The third division of the parade starts from the Presbyterian church on Almer street in the following order: Caro band; Boy Scouts as escorts to school children; school children; school officials.

JR.-SR. BANQUET DELIGHTFUL EVENT

Students, Teachers and Board of Education Make Guest List of 150.

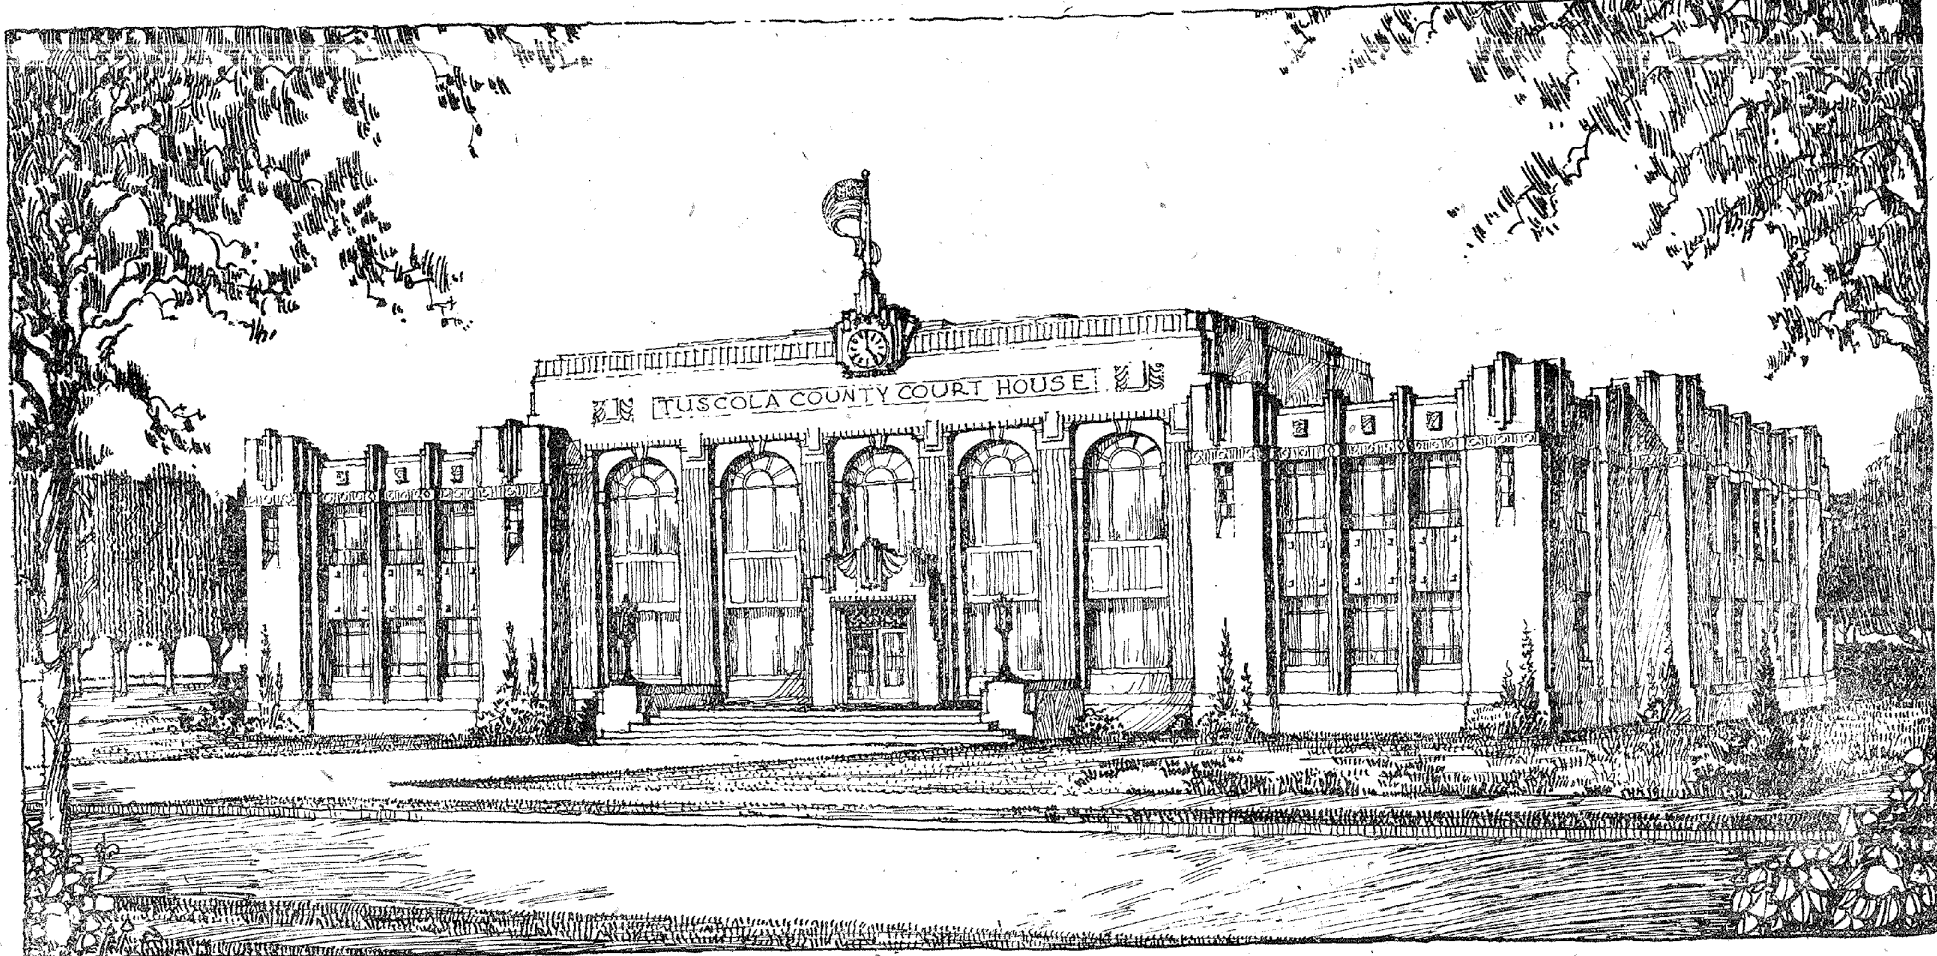

The Junior-Senior banquet, the first of the commencement activities, was held in the high school auditorium Saturday evening, May 14, and was a very enjoyable and delightful event.

The banquet room decorations were uniquely made to resemble an old-fashioned garden. Even the place cards and programs were fashioned with a garden effect.

A stone wall bordering the entire room, clusters of growing hollyhocks, climbing roses on various sized trellises and colored flood lights in the center of the ceiling from which streamers, of the rainbow colors, extended to all sides of the auditorium, gave one the impression of being within a real garden.

The banquet prepared by the ladies of the Methodist church was served at tables seating eight and four guests. The following menu was served by sophomore girls: fruit cocktail, creamed chicken, mashed potatoes, peas and carrots, vegetable salad, pickles, olives, rolls, coffee, ice cream and cake. Table covers, napkins and roses as

COUNTY ATHLETIC MEET ON JUNE 3

High Schools Will Compete for Honors in Field and Track Events.

Caro will be host at the annual field meet of the Tuscola County High School Athletic association which will be held on Friday, June 3, when athletes representing the several high schools in the county will compete in track and field events and for the championship in baseball.

Three events will be eliminated from the usual program of events this year for senior high school students, the javelin and discus throws and the 120-yard hurdles. In their place will be substituted 120-yard high hurdles and 220-yard low hurdles.

The team standing highest in Class C baseball at the end of the season will meet the leader of Class D schools at the county meet where they will compete for the county championship in that sport.

Individual awards will be ribbons instead of medals this year. The association has set a maximum of $125.00 to meet all expenses in the way of salaries of officials at the meet, awards, trophies, etc. M. J. Crawford, secretary of the association, says the society's officials expect to keep the expenses below $100.00.

In events of junior high pupils, there are seven contests as follows: 50-yard dash, 100-yard dash, high jump, broad jump, pole vault, 8-lb. shot put, and 440-yard relay. There are no events scheduled for competition for girls.

The commencement exercises for eighth graduates in Tuscola county will be held on the morning of field day, June 3. C. A. Rinehart, assistant superintendent of public instruction, will address the eighth graders.

Niergarth Heads Thumb Round Table

J. Ivan Niergarth, principal of the Cass City high school, was elected president of the Thumb Round Table at the meeting of that society at Bad Axe Monday evening. M. J. Crawford, superintendent of the Caro school, is vice president, and R. S. Brotherton, superintendent at Harbor Beach, is secretary-treasurer.

Prof. Waugh of the State Normal college at Ypsilanti, who recently returned from a trip through Russia, told members of the society of his observations in that country.

Cass City Wins In Track, Baseball

During the past week the athletes on the hill have added two more victories to their credit. The track team won the dual meet from Bad Axe 60-17. Cass City took first places in all but the pole vault, although no sensational records were established in any of the events. Warner's performance in the 100 yard dash was the most outstanding.

The baseball team won from Millington last Tuesday by a 7-2 score. The visitors collected only four hits off Shagena and two off Ruhl; while the locals gathered in a total of nine hits, four of which were robust doubles, three of these coming in the fifth inning after two men were out, scoring five runs. The offense was led by Ruhl and Shagena each getting two out of three hits.

Friday of this week the locals will journey to Crosswell for another encounter in the Upper Thumb League. Tuesday of next week Unionville will come to Cass City to meet the Cass City baseball team. The Maroon and Grey will be out for revenge for their defeat at the hands of the visitors last year.

Five Divorce Decrees Granted in Tuscola

David Aitchinson charged with assault, entered a plea of not guilty in circuit court in Tuscola county on Tuesday. The jury was waived and the case was tried before Judge Smith. It was ordered by the court that a plea of guilty as charged be entered against the respondent. Aitchinson is in the county jail awaiting sentence.

In the appeal case of Jess Stoddard vs. Guy McCoon and Edward D. Parish, Judge Samuel G. Houghton gave a directed verdict to be entered of no cause for action. Divorce decrees were granted in the following cases: Catherine E. Wills vs. Robt. J. Wills; Louise Reams vs. Johnnie Roy Reams; Myra Mills vs. Elmer Mills; Mary Munger Reynolds vs. Edward Reynolds; Grace J. Johnson vs. Ralph Johnson.

PLAN FOR MEMORIAL DAY PROGRAM HERE

Council Decides to Purchase Calcium Chloride for Village Streets.

Members of the village council on Monday evening, approved the appointment of the following officers and committees to arrange for the Memorial Day program at Cass City on May 30:

Chairman of the day—W. L. Mann.

Music—A. C. Atwell.

Program committee—L. I. Wood, J. A. Sandham.

Grave decoration committee—Clarence Burt, C. J. Striffler.

Parade and transportation committee—A. H. Kinnaird.

The members of the council decided to purchase calcium chloride for laying the dust on village streets this summer. The amount which will be ordered was left to the judgment of the street and sidewalk committee of which Trustees Bailey, Sandham and Atwell are members.

The Remington school of which Mrs. Samuel Blades is the teacher celebrated its last day of school Tuesday evening by entertaining the Parent-Teacher association of the district. The planting of a tree was a part of the program. Among the 200 people present were a number from Cass City.

H. I. VOELKER IS NEW PASTOR HERE

Will Succeed Rev. C. F. Smith as Minister at Evangelical Church.

The state conference of the Evangelical church held at Snover during the past week was closed Sunday afternoon, the final session being held at the school auditorium at Sandusky in order that a larger number could attend because of the greater seating capacity of the school building. The reading of appointments of the Bay City district, which includes in its territory the three Thumb counties, disclosed the fact that there were only seven changes of ministers in the 29 fields of labor.

C. F. Smith, pastor of the Evangelical church at Cass City, will be succeeded by H. I. Voelker. Rev. Voelker is concluding a pastorate at the Mack Ave. church in Detroit, the second largest in point of membership in the Michigan conference. He served his church as district superintendent for many years and is a fluent speaker and efficient and capable pastor. Because Mr. Voelker needed a rest from the arduous duties of a large city church, he sought a smaller congregation and Cass City has been fortunate in having him assigned to this place. Mr. and Mrs. Voelker have two children. A daughter will be graduated from North Central college at Naperville, Ill., next month and the son completed his studies at that institution a few years ago.

Rev. Chas. F. Smith, who completes his pastorate at the Cass City church next Sunday, is retiring from the ministry after having served as an Evangelical minister in the Michigan conference for 23 years. Previous to that time, he served in the conference of the Wesleyan church for 20 years, following his graduation from Albion college. Mr. Smith is the eldest minister in active work in the Evangelical state conference. His fellow ministers recognized his faithfulness and efficiency in a brief honorary service at the Saturday evening session of the conference at Snover when he was presented with a large basket of beautiful flowers. Mr. and Mrs. Smith will leave Cass City next week for Grand Rapids where they will live. They have three daughters residing in that city.

The following is a list of the appointments made at the conference:

Bay City District.
C. A. Wilkie, district superintendent; Bay City, G. A. Spittler; Brown City, S. Young; Caro, C. A. Turn to page 2

RAY S. McCULLOUGH RECEIVES DEGREE

The first four-year degrees ever given by Ferris Institute at Big Rapids in pharmacy were bestowed on five graduates Thursday evening at commencement exercises. There are 15 in the class. O. L. Smith, former assistant attorney general, gave the address and E. J. Parr, dean of the pharmacy department presented the diplomas.

The five to receive Bachelor of Science degrees are Ray S. McCullough, Cass City; Floyd C. Peterson, Newaygo; Floyd J. Pickett, Flint; Winfield S. Ensign and Ward Jackson, Battle Creek.

CASS CITY A WINNER IN SCHOLASTIC MEET

Placed Fourth in Class C; Akron Tied for Second in Class D.

Fifty out of the seventy high schools of the state entered in the seventh annual scholastic contest sponsored by Central State Teachers' college at Mt. Pleasant, May 13, produced individual winners and scored team points. Out of the 660 individual entrants a total of 153 high school students helped their team cause by scoring either a first, second or third in some event. Of these 90 were girls and 63 boys.

Class C schools led in the number of honors, with 24 scoring points. In Class D, 22 earned places while 4 Class AB schools had winners, all in the music division. East Grand Rapids in Class C academic was the only division winner to repeat. In the vocational unit in C Byron won, while in D vocational Byron triumphed. In Class D academic Hubbardston made a thrilling finish with 16 points to beat out Akron and Brighton with 15 apiece. Lansing Central romped through to take the class AB music plaque while Bellevue captured music honors in CD.

Team Points Scored.
Class C Academic—East Grand Rapids 31, East Lansing 22, Ithaca 18, Cass City 14, Grandville 12, Rogers City 9, Scottville 6, Sebawaing 6, Gladwin 5, Mariette 5. Turn to page 8.

RUTH MARK A GRADUATE AT HARPER HOSPITAL

Mrs. Edward Mark, daughter, Miss Estella, and son, Leitch, spent Thursday and Friday in Detroit and attended the graduation exercises at Harper hospital where their daughter and sister, Miss Ruth Mark, was one of 46 members of a class of nurses. Miss Mark was vice president. She will remain at the hospital for the present.

WARTIME RANGERS COST BIG SUMS

State Police Are Under Fire Wherever Taxes Are Discussed.

By V. J. Brown.

Whenever an irate citizen anywhere begins airing his opinions concerning the extravagance of state government he is almost certain, before he has finished, to express himself on the question of state police. There are reasons for this, of course. In the first place the average citizen thinks in terms of what he observes. There are a lot of hidden leaks concerning which he is entirely ignorant. But the state police is a mobile organization. Officers travel about in state cars, most of the personnel are in uniforms and frequently they make arrests. Quite as frequently their demeanor has brought down upon the department the odium of unmannerly arrogance in the performance of duty. Almost everyone has come in contact with the state police. Almost without exception the average citizen has little patience or charity for the force and little sympathy with the money it costs to cover its expense.

When this department was first proposed it was urged that one well organized department would take over the job of inspecting—a colossal one it seems. It has not. Troopers and detectives have multiplied in the department of public safety almost as rapidly as guinea-pigs at the state biological laboratory, but they have never taken over the job of inspecting. We know this because we find the utilities commission, the department of labor, the welfare department, the department of agriculture, the department of state and even the lamented securities commission each with its own private army of state inspectors. There are scores of other bureaus with their respective forces of inspectors too. But the state police multiply just the same. This standing army of Michigan, except it does not stand, riding in motor cars instead, now costs Mr. Taxpayer more than $600,000 annually. A commissioner and a few highly trained detectives to aid county sheriffs in cases of major crimes might be justified. The broadcasting station has probably had a salutary effect against crime also. A well conducted bureau of identification probably should be continued. But beyond this the state police has not yet convinced the general public of its importance and value.

Suppose we take the roster of

MRS. WM. PAUL KILLED SUNDAY

Sheriff Expresses Opinion That Fatality Was Accidental.

A belief that an accident caused the death of Mrs. Virginia Esta Paul, 26, found dead in a barn at her farm home, two miles south of Cass City Sunday morning, is expressed by Sheriff James Kirk of Caro. Officers are continuing the investigation.

An autopsy was ordered by Lee Huston, coroner, and was conducted Monday afternoon. Dr. I. D. McCoy of Cass City and Dr. L. L. Savage of Caro made the examination which revealed that the shotgun charge which had brought death to Mrs. Paul entered the head back of the right ear near the mastoid bone and took a downward course. The charge exploded after entering the skull and had not come out of the mouth as it was first believed. Officers present at the post-mortem examination were Sheriff Kirk, Prosecuting Attorney Maurice Ransford, Deputy Sheriffs Caldwell and Millikin and Coroner Lee Huston.

Mr. Paul left his home about 10:30 Sunday morning, he told Sheriff Kirk, to visit Walter McIntyre, a neighbor who lives across the highway from the Paul home. When he returned to his farm about a half hour later, he noticed one of his cows in an oat field and went to the field to return the animal to the pasture. Mrs. Paul was not in the house when he returned. Thinking she had gone out to the barn to feed the chickens, he went there and found her lying dead on the floor. He immediately told Mr. McIntyre of his wife's death. Deputy Sheriff John Caldwell of Cass City was notified and he in turn notified the sheriff and coroner at Caro. Mr. Paul said the shotgun found near the body was one he had been keeping in a manger of the barn with which to kill an animal that had been molesting the chickens.

The theory has been advanced that Mrs. Paul, on arriving at the barn, had noticed this animal, and while watching its movements, had reached back for the weapon when it was accidentally discharged. Relatives of Mrs. Paul told officers that she had often

CHOOSE 4H GROUP FOR NATIONAL CAMP

Michigan Boys and Girls Represent State as Reward for Success in Projects.

Lawan Churchhill, New Era; June Hungerford, Sault Ste. Marie; Ivan Cox, Coldwater; and Francis Schell will represent Michigan's 31,000 4H club members at Washington, D. C., June 15 to 21 as a reward for excellent work done during the past few years, according to A. G. Kettunen, state leader of boys' and girls' clubs.

The Washington Club encampment brings groups from each of the states and is held under the supervision of national leaders. The Michigan group will be accompanied to Washington by Mr. Kettunen and Miss Sylvia Wixon, assistant club leader.

The trip to Washington is the highest award made by Michigan leaders for club work and those who win the trip have long records of success in club projects. Francis Schell last year belonged to six clubs, made two articles for use on the farm, grew 200

AN OUTSTANDING MUSICAL EVENT

The musicale, presented by Emily Mutter Adams, violinist, and Gwendolyn Wilson Brooker, pianist, assisted by Harriett M. Chartiers, dancer, under the auspices of the Cass City Music club at the high school auditorium Wednesday evening, proved to be one of Cass City's outstanding musical events. The concert was enthusiastically received by an appreciative audience.

Mrs. Adams again proved herself a master of the violin in her repertoire, which included familiar melodies as well as a few heavier classical numbers. The instrument she used is valued at forty thousand dollars, being very old and possesses an exceptionally lovely tone.

Mrs. Brooker, in addition to Keep Cheerful

Optimism is good for those who radiate it and also those from whom it is reflected. It may have little foundation in fact, but it shows a glowing hope in the future. So quit moping. The world likes a man who can take it on the chin and still grin.—Grit.

Pottery Old Art
Proof of pottery's great antiquity is found in the fact that gracefully formed stoneware was produced in Egypt before the potter's wheel was known, some pieces being painted by hand. Over 7,000 years before Christ clay vessels were covered with hard glaze.

Hard to Catch Cuttlefish
The cuttlefish may not be much of a fighter, but it has an effective method of making a "getaway." When alarmed it expels an inkly substance that clouds the water and thus aids it to escape from its enemies. These fish are cultivated by the Chinese who use the excretion in making sepia paint.

AS A SALESMAN SEES IT.

A traveling salesman who during the past month has been all through the middle west and met hundreds of business people, says he is impressed with two thoughts after all these contacts.

First, the whole trouble with business is fear. It may be said that many people have no money, and when they have no money, they can't buy. But why have they no money? Is not the reason fear, that business people whom they usually supply are so oppressed by fears that they do not buy normally? And when employers are paralyzed by fear, they do not employ a normal amount of labor, and their employes can't buy a normal amount.

Second, as this gentleman of the road sees it, when business does revive, it is going to be simply wonderful, because all stocks of goods are so low. That situation has been noted by many others. They remark that if they go into a store and ask for anything, the dealer is quite likely to be out of some size or style he usually carries, so he has to send away and get it.

In ordinary times, merchants dislike to allow their stocks to run down so low. They fear that if they lack the right size or style, their customers may go across the street to their competitor. But it has been the general plan of business for two years to cut stocks to the limit, partly in hopes of buying for lower prices later, partly to get out of debt. When trade improves, it is the belief of our salesman friend, merchants in every city will be tearing their hair because they can't get their orders delivered immediately.

The prolonged decline in commodity prices keeps business slow. Business is never good on a falling market. It is inconceivable that these prices can go much lower. When they remain staple for a couple of months, look for a quick change.

WISHING THEY WERE HOME.

A lot of folks who a few years ago hiked down to the larger cities, longing for the white lights and dreaming of making fortunes, wish they were at home now. If they had stayed at home, they wouldn't have gotten rich, but they would have made a secure place for themselves.

A lot of these folks will gradually return to the small cities and country towns where they came from. If they can find something to do, the life of these towns will look a great deal better to them than it used to. They always make a place for any good worker. They don't have much jazz life, but there are plenty of friendliness and pleasant activities for all who wish social life.

THE LINDBERGH TRAGEDY.

The most shocking tragedy in American history since the assassination of President McKinley, thirty-one years ago, is the ruthless murder of the Lindbergh baby, by the fiends who stole the infant from its crib and, apparently, killed the little boy and hid his body in the woods when they found themselves pursued.

We can imagine no crime worse than this. Nothing could be more shocking, nothing could so move the hearts of the whole world to pity for the little one whose life had hardly begun, to tearful sympathy with his beloved young parents and to stern and righteous anger at the perpetrators of this foul deed.

To the gallant "Lone Eagle" and his no less heroic young wife, Anne, we can only say that we know that we speak for every one of our readers in trying inadequately to express our heartfelt sympathy. We know that they will bear up bravely, for both of them have proved that they are of the stuff of which heroes are made. It is the very irony of fate that to them, who merited nothing but happiness, should have occurred a tragedy so awful that for the rest of their lives they must live in its shadow. There is, perhaps, a small measure of consolation in the news that the little cradle will not long be empty, but the memory of their murdered firstborn will tug forever at their heartstrings.

But there is an aspect to this crime which touches not the Lindbergh family alone, but every one of us in these United States of America. This murder of a child is the crowning climax of the wave of lawlessness, of unpunished and reckless crime which has been sweeping over our country in a swelling flood since the war. It has aroused public indignation to a pitch to which it has never been before aroused, and we hope that this great outpouring of public indignation may find concrete expression in a stern determination to put an end once and for all to wholesale lawlessness and immunity for criminals.

It is a simple statement of fact that the responsibility for the kidnapping and murder of the Lindbergh baby lies at the door of every citizen who has permitted, without protest, the criminal element to defy the law, to corrupt public officials charged with the enforcement of law, and to mock at the law-abiding. It lies at the door of every lawyer who has connived to obtain the acquittal of a known criminal. It lies at the door of every judge who has given convicted offenders light sentences or has suspended sentence altogether. It lies at the door of every sheriff, every constable, every police officer who has fallen short in his duty of relentless pursuit of criminals and suppression of crime.

No more terrific indictment of an entire nation can be drawn than our indictment by the rest of the civilized world, which today looks upon the United States of America as the paradise of the criminal and upon our people as the most cowardly and supine race, in the face of outrageous lawlessness, to be found upon the face of the globe.

We hope that out of the death of a little child may spring a flaming spirit which will fire the American people, not to vengeance, but to relentless determination to set our house in order, to give known criminals no quarter, to bring before the bar of justice every one who has connived with criminals to evade and escape the law, and so put our country back into the list of civilized nations.

We call upon our public authorities, from the President of the United States to the most remote town constable, to make the suppression of crime and lawlessness the chief aim of their office from now on, and we promise them that, in taking the most drastic means at their command to clean the cesspools of crime, they will have the hearty and unhesitating support of every good citizen. And, at the same time, we warn them that unless speedy evidence is given that the long arm of the law has not yet in America lost its power, those responsible for its execution, who fail in their duty, will face an aroused popular indignation which will put a speedy and effective end to their careers.

We heartily approve and endorse the declaration by the President of the United States that this crime must be kept "a live and never-to-be-forgotten case, never to be relaxed until those criminals are implacably brought to justice." But it must not end there.

It will not suffice merely to find and to punish the murderers of little Charlie Lindbergh. The times and the temper of the American people, demand that the pursuit of criminals and the extirpation of crime, of defiant criminals and of organized crime, shall never be relaxed until none shall dare to affront the majesty of the law and to drag the fair name of America into the dust.

There should be no plea for mercy in this case. "Inasmuch as we have done it unto one of the least of these my children ye have done it unto Me." That is the stern denunciation of the Lindbergh murderers which has come down to us through the ages. And if, as a result of the indignant public feeling which is crime has aroused, there should be a restoration of our country to its historic state of law and order, then we may again quote from the same inspired and sacred source: "And a little child shall lead them."

Judging by the bathing suit pictures, human skin seems to be the most popular thing to wear on the beaches this summer.

If people can't remember to vote, they can't expect their public officials to remember to do anything for them.

The spring showers are said to bring forth the May flowers, but it also takes some spring showers of sweat to do it.

The finger of history would not have to write so many disgraceful episodes, if the toe of the citizens' boots had done its duty kicking the grafters out of public office.

Those three Neanderthal skeletons dating back 75,000 years which the Yale professor found, probably belonged to people who complained that times were so bad that the world would never recover.

CARO SENIOR NAMED TO MU PHI EPSILON

(From Centralight, State Teachers' College publication).
Grace Cumings, Caro senior at Central State Teachers' college, has been elected into membership in the Phi Eta chapter of Mu Phi Epsilon, national sorority at the Michigan Institute of Music and Allied Arts at East Lansing.

"Membership is based on outstanding musical ability and general high scholarship, and since there is no chapter on Central's campus, the Grand National Council of Mu Phi Epsilon granted Phi Eta chapter the special privilege of electing Miss Cummings," states Beatrice Brady, president of Phi Eta chapter in a special dispatch to Life.

Miss Cummings was a guest of honor at a formal initiation breakfast at the home of Mrs. Bailey in East Lansing April 24.

Mu Phi Epsilon is the musical auxiliary of Phi Beta Kappa. The Institute at East Lansing is attached to Michigan State College.

Miss Cummings, now in her fourth year at Central, has been among the most active of the music students, having taken a lead part in a number of music presentations. She is a deep contralto and has been taking voice lessons of Professor J. Harold Powers during her years at Central.

NEWS OF THE NEARBY SECTIONS

Happenings Here and There Garnered from the Chronicle's Exchanges.

Funeral services were held at Vassar Tuesday for Evelyn Blazier, seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Blazier, who died of burns suffered Apr. 20 when burning leaves set her clothing afire.

With $1,600 in the treasury, the village council of Gagetown has voted not to raise a village tax. The sum is expected to meet all expenses during the year.

The village of Marlette voted in special election Monday to retain their status as a village. The vote was 194 in favor of retaining a village to 41 in favor of becoming a fifth class city. The vote was asked after agitation was started in Marlette by Michigan Municipalities league.

Stewart Sweebe, 8, grandson of Mr. and Mrs. William Wilkie of Brown City was instantly killed Tuesday noon on Main street in Brown City, when he ran in front of a car driven by Miss Vanda Isles, 16, Brown City High school pupil. Dr. J. C. Webster, coroner, decided the death was accidental and unavoidable, and no inquest was held. Young Sweebe ran out of the postoffice to cross Main street. Miss Isles accompanied by five other school children in her car struck Sweebe as he dashed across the street. School authorities issued a warning to school children Tuesday urging caution in crossing streets.

Distribution of 380 barrels of flour to indigent persons of Sanilac county was started this week. Each supervisor is to receive some of the flour for distribution in their townships or cities. John H. Murphy, Sandusky, is in charge of the distribution. The flour was apportioned to Sanilac county from the surplus wheat turned over to the Red Cross by the federal farm board. The Sanilac county road commission co-operated in distributing the flour.

E. W. Cressey, Bay City, holder of an option for a lease on the Crosswell plant of the Michigan Sugar company, has announced that he has abandoned his plan to operate the Crosswell sugar plant this year. Lateness of the season and the uncertain conditions of the sugar market is cited as the reason for the Eastern correspondents of Mr. Cressey to have abandoned their plan this year. It is intimated that efforts will be made to operate the plant in 1933.

Barney F. McGary, supervisor of Argyle township for the last three years, and also for a period of 15 years some time ago, has resigned from the board, and Cyrus King, former Argyle supervisor, has been named. Mr. McGary retired because of ill health. King served on the board for four years.

Frank J. Beeton, Crosswell, has been recommended to the federal postoffice department as postmaster to succeed Miss Jean Jackson, whose term expired Jan. 9. Representative Jesse P. Wolcott made the recommendation. The appointment is expected to be confirmed within a few days. Mr. Beeton has been a resident of Crosswell for 17 years, and has been employed by the W. R. Roach company for 16 years.

DAILY VACATION CHURCH SCHOOL

At a meeting of the pastors of the village it was decided to hold a union daily church school which will begin the week following the dismissal of the public school. The place of the school is not decided as yet. The school is to last three weeks, and there will be three divisions carried forward, the beginners in charge of Rev. Bottrell; the primary in charge of Rev. Curtis; and the juniors in charge of Rev. Allured. Each pastor will have assistants. It is hoped that the new pastor of the Evangelical church will also have a part in the work. Rev. Curtis, who has held such a school for the last three years, will act as dean of the school. Last year there were 135 enrolled with an average attendance of 115, and seven teachers were employed.

Bees Help Farmers Produce Seed Crops

Clover and alfalfa seed growers can get cheap help to aid them in producing profitable crops, according to reports from Michigan State college, where recent tests have shown that honey bees can successfully pollinate all the common clovers and also alfalfa and that fields which are not visited regularly by honey bees will not regularly produce good seed crops. Bumblebees also aid in pollinating the flowers and help the seed crop but these bees are so scarce that they fail to visit many of the flowers. Small, native honey bees are also pollinators but these insects occur only in limited numbers and they will not fly in unfavorable weather.

The college tests were made with cages built to exclude all insects as large bees; and, then, bumblebees were placed in some cages and honey bees in others. Both types of bees greatly increased the amount of seed set on the plants in the cages, in comparison with the seed formed on caged plants where no bees were admitted. Observations made in fields also showed that the seed crops in fields near hives of bees were much larger than in fields located further away from apiaries. Some Upper Peninsula seed growers place colonies of bees in their clover and alfalfa fields.

Small insects, such as flies or leaf hoppers, do not pollinate the clovers or alfalfa.

Published in the interest of the People of Cass City and vicinity by the Elkland Roller Mills Edited by Roy John Atfield can tell you some interesting information on Wayne Broiler Ration. Ask him about it.

One thing that is absolutely necessary is a brooder stove that will give even, dependable heat.

Under-fed children are dull and backward. Under-fed pullets are lazy and not profitable.

Another thing we've often wondered is where these "girl bandits" are able to hide their revolvers.

Question: Do you think that young people are worse than they were when you were a boy?

John Marshall: "Gosh, I hope not!"

It's about time for everybody to start telling the high school seniors that these are the happiest days of their lives.

The motto of some ladies in the shoe store seems to be: if the shoe fits, take a size smaller.

We don't believe it, but they were telling us the other day about the husband here in Cass City who is so considerate of his wife he always oils the lawn mower for her before she goes to work.

Our forefathers used to wait a week for a stage coach. Now we holler if we miss the bus.

A painful moment it comes to a man when he realizes that he bought an inferior brand of Feeds when he could just as well have had Wayne.

Keep the chick feed boxes filled with Wayne All Mash Starter. Give 'em plenty of room, too. Close confinement is costly.

One sure way to find out what a good town Cass City is, is to drive through about three hundred other towns in Michigan.

The proof of the pudding is in the eating. Magistrate (to prisoner) "How big was your head?" Prisoner: "Yes, your honor, but not so thick."

BREEZY COMMENTS FROM THE HILL

Frederick Pinney spoke to the American history classes on "The Federal Reserve System."

Mr. Cammer of Lansing told the students about the prize awarded Cass City schools as a result of our having won second place in the TB Christmas stamp sale contest. This prize gives free TB examination to all students who care to take advantage of the opportunity.

The fifth hour World history class won the current event bulletin board contest. As a result, the third hour class will "party" the winners at a picnic dinner at Caseville on Saturday.

All but three people took the TB test in our room.

We are having a clean hand campaign. Someone stands by the door each morning and noon to inspect the hands of each person who enters and unless his hands are clean, he does not enter.

Each student gave a report on some small fur-bearing animal of the world. The talks were illustrated by samples of the fur and by pictures of the specie. Our attendance average has gone up a great deal since there are but few people out with illness.

Fourth Grade.
We are making books this week. We are using them for our language work.

We have finished our health books and are now spending some of our time learning about the brave men of history. The poems about birds are very interesting this week. The class is reading poems, of Robert Lincoln.

Betty Mark won the spelling contest Friday.

Third Grade.
We wrote letters to Sharlie VanWinkle in language class. In arithmetic, we are now taking up the study of division.

We had a party in the woods Friday afternoon after school.

Poor Marcella

A Story of Persistent Love

B. FANNIE HURST

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
(WNU Service)

WHEN she was eighteen, the only child of the Honorable Festus Martin had been painted by Delmar, presented at the court of St. James and introduced with formality to the official social life of Washington.

It was a quick transition from the busy, unremarkable life of Marcella Martin's childhood, as daughter of a prosperous manufacturer of radio parts, to the highly complex social plane achieved by Festus Martin after his growing wealth had enabled him to foster political ambitions, and after these ambitions had landed him in congress.

Undoubtedly it was the combination of Marcella's estate of only child, combined with the dotting ambition of parents who could have loved her more wisely, which was accountable for the six years of rigid social disciplining which were imposed upon the protesting Marcella.

It was said of the Martins, laughingly, in certain Washington circles, that the adoring parents of this girl had actually succeeded in making over her face. A rather plain face, too long, with overhanging brow and dull brown hair entirely lacking in lights. But so often had this and that artist idealized it, and so long and ardently had schools of massage, dentistry and hair-dressing, expended skill in improving it, that by the time she was eighteen, Marcella was indeed quite an improvement upon the lank, lusterless little girl of other days.

It can readily be imagined that the Martins spared neither time nor the most elaborate expenditures to launch successfully into an estate befitting her father's rank this idolized and only daughter.

This fact that she was diffident, frankly unsocial, unimpressed by wealth or station, unambitious along lines assiduously mapped out for her by her parents whose dreams of ultimate highest realization lay in this girl, only conspired to urge the elder Martins to maximum effort.

"Why, Marcella, another girl with your opportunities would be in her seventh heaven of delight. Doesn't it mean anything to you to have all the things your father's wealth and position can afford for you?"

"Of course it does, mother, only I want them my way. I'm no good at this social-round kind of thing. I don't like it chiefly, I guess, because I'm a failure at it. Don't force, mother. Can't you reconcile yourself to the fact that I'm not what you want me to be?"

No, neither of the parental Martins could. Festus Martin, as much as his more obvious wife, wanted this daughter a fitting complement to his achievements both official and social. His wife was that. A pretty, pampered-looking woman with small eager ways and deep gold eyes that were brighter than, if not as profound, as her daughter's.

"Emma," he confided to her once during one of their frequent controversies about this problem of their girl, "I actually believe you still have more youth and social charm than Marcella. What is it all the child? She's as fine a girl as you meet in a thousand years, and yet—and yet—no two ways about it—something's missing."

"It's her own fault, Festus. Marcella's heart isn't in living the life about her. That's what hurts me."

Marcella's reaction to these implications of her dotting parents was emotional and deeply sincere.

"Dears, don't you think it hurts me as much as it hurts you that I don't seem to live up to what you want of me? If only you could make up your minds that you're trying to make a silk purse out of—"

"Marcella Martin, nothing of the sort. You've ten times the sense and intelligence of the girls you compete with. Why, a man like Senator Morris wouldn't look at the swarms of silly girls who buzz around him, if you so much as took the trouble to exert yourself to interest him. That's what troubles us, dear. You have all the opportunities for success, including some very natural qualities of your own, and you won't use them."

The subject of Senator Morris was a mooted one in the Martin household. It seemed fitting to the parents of Marcella that the most eligible bachelor in Washington, one of the most outstanding members of the upper house, a man with much achievement behind him and obviously again as much ahead, should be potential timber for Marcella. After all, the only child of a millionaire many times over, personable, probably the most all round educated young woman in the capital, traveled, informed and by no means without a certain quality of distinction, had the right to cast her eyes high.

Anyway, the Martins felt that way about it, and spared neither time, effort nor expense to the bringing together of these two.

It must be admitted, however, that these somewhat ingenious and not always skillful efforts met with little success.

It is doubtful if in all the times he met Marcella, both in the Martin home and at public occasions, the beautifully gowned, jeweled, caparisoned little lady of longish face, bulging brow, deeply intent eyes and clear brown skin, ever more than passingly snagged his attention. Oh, yes, his reaction, if any, might have been: Martin's daughter! Said to be clever; but a solemn young lady with that dark brown look. Good enough fellow, Martin, if he knew enough to keep out of politics. Pretty little wife with soapuds for brains.

Marcella's reaction, secret as her own secretive-looking eyes, were not in line with the senator's. There resided in the makeup of this aggressive, massive-jawed, rough-haired member of the liberal wing of politics, qualities that were stirring within Marcella keen, new and exciting thrills.

The most interesting man in all Washington, the most interesting man she had ever met, was the senator. Secret as were these deep-seated emotions, and imperturbable as her own brown eyes continued to remain, that fact grew with the months. Secretly, Marcella was in love with Senator Morris.

That it was unrequited caused her neither bitterness nor undue pain. One just went on—alone—caring—hoping for the glimpse of him here and there, picking up crumbs of information of his comings and goings, and outwardly reconciled to defeat.

After a while even the Martins became half reconciled to it. At twenty-four, Marcella simply had not made her dent. Her generation of debutantes had come and gone. Practically all of the girls who had made their bows the winter that the Marcella Martin coming-out ball was the crowning event of an eventful social season, were married now—rightly.

At twenty-five something latent in Marcella rose and asserted itself. Against the resistance of her parents, which she wore down with a highhandedness uncharacteristic of her, she enrolled in a school of social research, and after two winters of intensive work became allied with a settlement house in New York known as Mulberry Center.

Then began the happiest, most interested years of her life. When she was twenty-eight, Marcella was first assistant head of this large institution and an outstanding figure in her chosen field.

The Martins, in their way, were proud of her success. Of course it was miles and miles removed from what had been their dreams for her, but, well, it takes all kinds of people to make a world. Poor Marcella. Of course, one appreciated her brains and her distinction, but just the same, the heart of the mother of this daughter seemed to beat to the rhythm: poor Marcella.

It was when she was thirty-two, considerably heavier, and with streaks of faint gray in her strong dark hair, that Marcella Martin, appointed by her government as the first woman member of an international conference on housing conditions to be held in Geneva, again encountered Edgar Morris, now Governor Morris. He, too, gray now, heavier now, found himself sitting beside her at a political luncheon at Geneva where he was in attendance at a conference.

Life, tides, affairs, had flowed swiftly for him in the years which had intervened since his previous meeting with her. It is doubtful if he recalled her at all. He only knew that suddenly he was meeting a woman whose talk, whose point of view, whose deeply quiet eyes and a certain unworldliness, were giving him the first serious pause he had ever in his life felt where the other sex was concerned.

It occurred to him even, as he sat there beside her in the first hour of that lunch in Geneva, that he seemed to be developing symptoms of a man on the verge of falling in love.

Strong Bond Between George V and Scotland

When the lord provost handed to King George the keys of Edinburgh, the ceremonial required his majesty to say, in returning them, that the key could not be in "better hands."

The British rulers were celebrating the thirty-eighth anniversary of their wedding in Edinburgh. This was fitting, because it is due to two weddings that the keys of the city were handed to them at all.

If the Tudor princess had not married a king of Scotland, James VI of that country could never have been Elizabeth's successor under the title of James I of the United Kingdom, of Ireland, and the Dominions Beyond the Seas. And if his daughter had not married the elector palatine the house of Hanover, from which George V is more directly descended, could not have come to the British throne after the death of Queen Anne.

Because of their marriages George V bears the blended blood of the royal house of England and Scotland. His Plantagenet ancestors (through John of Gaunt) were repeatedly chased out of Scotland. His Tudor ancestors didn't dare try to conquer the braw ilk of Caledon. His Stuart ancestors were the Scots' well-beloved. Because of that strain they forgive him his Hanoverian blood.—New York Times.

CHAPTER IX

The Doctor Makes a Discovery.

WHEN, after a drink of hot water and a good rubbing, Shad ceased to shiver and was lying comfortably in bed Colonel Blake went to the sheriff's room. Algryre, in the colonel's dry clothing, was sitting by the bed, his feet shackled. He was in a bitter mood. He greeted the district attorney with foul and profane words.

"Don't be nasty just because you've been outwitted," said Blake. "I'm going to treat you well as long as you're in my hands."

Algryre shouted angrily: "I'd rather be in hell than spend another day among the God-d—d Hicks in this part of the country."

"Well, sir, every one in your line of business feels the same way about it," Blake answered with a smile of good nature. "If a man has anything on him it's about the most dangerous part of God's earth to be in."

There was a moment of silence. The colonel went on: "I happen to know that you're an able chap. You oughtn't to be living the life of a fugitive. The best thing you can do is to clean your slate. Begin by telling what you know about the killing of Oscar Perry. If you'll do that I'll do what I can for you here and elsewhere."

The answer of the unfortunate man was rather decisive. "Go to hell," he said. "I know nothing about the Perry murder."

The district attorney gave up, knowing that no progress could be made while the criminal was in his present frame of mind.

The yacht had arrived at her dock in Ogdensburg. The party spent the remainder of the night aboard. Next day Shad, the colonel and the sheriff, took the train to Canton with their prisoner whose resentment had not abated. He was still sullen and abusive.

That day Shad returned with more provisions to the little house at Brown's cove.

"I knew you'd be a-comin'," Bumpy shouted. "This mornin' I see a white swan in the sky. It means that a friend is comin'. By Jeedix! I've got suthin' good for yer dinner an' don't you doubt it. The day you left I shot a wild goose on the marsh below here. I've been keepin' him. He's in prime shape."

"Keep him till tomorrow," Shad suggested. "It'll be Sunday. I'll go up and get Bony to come down."

"Exactly!" Bumpy exclaimed. "That's the caper. We don't really need the goose. You've brought some beef steak."

They had much to talk about. Shad told of his great adventure while they were at the table.

"By Jeedix! You ought to have fit at Gettysburg," said Bumpy. "I guess ye would if you'd 'a been born an' was old enough."

"This place beats the world for good eating," Shad remarked, as he took another helping of the grilled steak.

When they had washed and put away the dishes Bumpy said: "If you're goin' to be a lawyer you've got to study. I don't want to hear another word from you till night. I've got some wood to cut and I'll git out o' yer way."

That afternoon, sitting comfortably by a window in the warm room, Shad began the reading of Blackstone's "Commentaries."

The colonel had let him take the first volume of the famous classic with the notion that it was like hitching a goat to a plow.

"It will be interesting to see what he says about it," he remarked as he took the first volume from its case. "I wonder if the lad will surprise me again. I rather think that this will stump him."

Shad was a courageous goat. When the light began to fade Bumpy came in.

"How be ye gittin' along?" the old man asked.

"Good, but there's some words here that are not in my dictionary. What does 'contravention' mean?"

"I don't just exactly know," Bumpy answered as he put some wood on the fire. "I guess it has suthin' to do with politics. It's like a snag in the river. When I run on to one I push my boat off an' back up a little an' go 'round it."

"I've put down a list o' words that I've got to know about. I'll go up to the Dam early in the morning and see the doctor. He'll explain 'em to me."

Shad lighted the reading lamp. He heard the story in which he and Bumpy had become interested and said: "Let's see what Pip and old Joe are doing."

"By Jeedix! You wait till I draw my boot an' loosen my belt an' git my pipe lit. I want to be good an' ready."

He drew his boot and lighted his pipe with a sliver at the stove hearth and hauled his armchair near the table, saying: "Now let 'er go."

Shad began reading. Meanwhile the parrot stood holding his head down near the bars of his cage on the window-sill and saying in a low gentle voice: "Hello, darling. Hello. Are you happy? Praise the Lord!"

It was as if some unseen hand were petting him. Shad paused a moment, looking up at the bird with a smile of amusement.

"Cur'us ain't it?" said Bumpy. "Betsy Brown is there rubbin' his head just as she used to. He sees her plain. He can feel her hand. I guess parrots' eyes can see things that we can't."

"Do you mean that her ghost is here?" Shad asked with a tingle in his nerves.

"I don't call it that. It's a kind of mean word. It ain't friendly. I'd say angel was the word. Don't mind it. Go on with your readin's. She'll enjoy it as much as I do."

Soon they were both absorbed in the moving tale and smiling or laughing at its quaint humor. For more than two hours they sat entranced in that magic world of the great story-teller. The clock struck seven. The boy closed the book.

"I'm tired and hungry," he said. "Let's have a little snack of cold victuals."

"I could smash the clock," said Bumpy. "I didn't know book readin' could grab hold o' ye an' hang on so. Come to think of it, I'm hungry, too."

Bumpy brought a snack of cold meat, doughnuts and cheese and a pitcher of cider from his keg in the cellar under the floor. They finished their snack and read on until bedtime. Bumpy, as usual, put heavy sticks on the fire, turned the damper, covered his bird with a shawl and hung the cage on a hook fastened to one of the cross-beams. As Bumpy got into bed yawning the boy heard him saying to himself:

"And there lay round upon the ground great heaps of so'gers."

Always he was up before daylight in the morning, when he lighted his lamp, started his fire, washed, and dusted the furniture and swept the floor.

When he shook Shad's shoulder in the morning the grateful odor of coffee and buckwheat cakes and frying sausage was in the air.

"Come, ol' friend," he called. "It's the next day. Breakfast is ready an' I warn ye it's fit fer kings an' queens."

Shad needed no urging. He leaped out of bed and dressed in a hurry and washed at the river's edge.

"Hurry up an' comb yer hair," Bumpy sputtered as he brought the hot platters to the table. "It looks as if a mouse had made a nest in it."

The boy had a great liking for hot cakes and maple sirup and sausage. Bumpy seemed to find a sufficient reward for his work in Shad's enjoyment. He kept an eye on him in the fashion of an interested witness.

"Don't spill so much sirup on 'em," he was wont to say. "By Jeedix! You make 'em look like an island in a red pond. There ain't no sense in that. You don't take more'n two swallers fer a flapjack. Anybody would think ye was mad at 'em."

Bumpy's sputtering had a background of good nature. Shad enjoyed it. After breakfast he brought in two pails of water and filled the woodbox.

Soon after seven o'clock Shad set out for Amity Dam with a volume of Blackstone under his arm.

Even if he became a witness for the people, he could not escape life imprisonment or a long term for a crime so atrocious. He is a born gambler. He would rather take his chances in the West. But if they have a good case against him and he should be convicted we may expect help from him. We may not have long to wait. Meanwhile, my dear boy, you will, of course, get a share of the reward."

"I haven't thought of that. I wouldn't know what to do with it," Shad answered.

"But you would know what to do with an education."

"I'm getting educated. I'm learning something every day. I'd rather the reward would go to you and Colonel Blake."

The doctor smiled and said: "Well, boy, if I am entitled to any of it, which I question, it shall be yours. There is another matter of which I would speak. You are to mention it only to Colonel Blake. Be careful that no one overhears you. I recall your telling me once of the handsome young lady who worked in the store in South Bolton. You had seen her one day at Bumpy Brown's shack. I went to call on a patient in that village some ten days ago. I heard some gossip about her. It was interesting but unkind. I went to the store. The girl was there alone. The look of her confirmed the gossip. It grieved me to see a beautiful girl friendless and in her condition. I talked with her a little. She didn't seem to know what was the matter. It was a sad case. I gave her my telephone number and told her that when she needed help I would come."

"Familiar as I am with the process, I always feel when I help to deliver a child as if I had had a humble part in a miracle. The girl went to a lonely settlement away back in the woods. There she got the help of a midwife. The child was born. Something went wrong. She began to fail and asked them to send for me. I went and found her in a critical condition. She will probably die. Some rotten-hearted man who has no share in her trouble had brought her to that pass."

"I am not preaching to you, my boy. I tell you these things only because I suspect that the girl has some connection with our case. Robert Royce took her to the house of the midwife. He was often seen with her. Now, Royce is the heir of Mrs. Doolittle. The theory has come to my friend, Judge Swift, that Mrs. Doolittle did not like the girl; that she had threatened to disinherit the young man if he married her. There is a double motive for getting rid of his mother."

Shad smiled, saying: "I feel sure that Royce is the man and I think that Colonel Blake does."

"I do not feel sure, although there is much to indicate it," the doctor went on. "I know Royce well. I would say that he is not the type of man we are seeking. Still it is easy to be deceived."

Shad showed the volume he had been studying to the doctor and the queries in his notebook. The learned man answered them, and said:

"The time has come when you need a bigger dictionary. I will lend you mine. I will have my man bring it to you at Brown's Cove."

He looked through many pages of the Commentaries and noted down the meaning of the unusual words and Latin phrases. He gave the boy a book entitled "The Youth's History of England," and recommended that he read it carefully, before continuing his study of Blackstone. The doctor arose. His horse and buckboard were at the door.

"I must be going," he said. "Please go and see Miss Spenlow. She has a deep interest in you."

The doctor set out on his rounds and Shad went to the boarding house.

CHAPTER X

Miss Spenlow Expresses New Sentiments.

THE benevolent spirit of Miss Betsy Spenlow had entered upon a great sentimental adventure. Her face shone with a new enthusiasm. She arose and threw her arms around the boy and kissed him. Her affectionate greeting was a bore to him, but he took it with a cheerful countenance.

"You are growing so big and handsome!" she exclaimed. "Sit down. I want to tell you what has happened. I have got the sweetest, little, teeny, weenty baby that you ever saw."

Shad turned with a look of astonishment.

"The doctor brought it here so that I could take it to the Home for the Friendless," she went on. "The little thing has got hold of my heart. I don't know how I'm ever going to part with it. Just come into my bedroom and take a look at her. It's a little girl."

The boy had no interest in babies, but he went. The child lay asleep, with a nursing bottle beside it, in a swinging brass crib. Miss Spenlow lifted it in her arms and said:

"Did you ever see anything so cunning in your life? Look at that little hand."

To Shad the young child was red and smelly and unattractive, but he would not take issue with a lady in such a matter. He agreed with her like a gentleman.

"Look at these dainty baby clothes," she went on. "The doctor brought them and the crib and everything."

"Isn't it a great trouble to you?" Shad asked.

"Not a bit. The young girls come in and help me take care of it night and morning. He was never so happy in my life as I am with this baby."

She put it back in its crib and they returned to the sitting room.

"Had you heard that Deacon Plumb was dead?" she asked.

"Yes, I read of it in the Canton paper."

"What a pity!" she exclaimed. "If there ever was a good Christian man in this world, it was Deacon Plumb. He left five hundred dollars to the Home for the Friendless."

Shad remembered how fussy the deacon had been about his mail. When told that there was none for him he was wont to stare sternly at the boy as if he didn't believe it, and go away muttering.

Miss Spenlow added: "I have written a poem which was read at the church sociable the other evening. Some said that it ought to be published. I will read it to you."

She went to her room and fetched the poem and read it in a tender voice. How appropriate was its title: "Lurking Perils!" The keynote of her life was caution—a zeal for safety. There were those who said it was in part responsible for her continued maidenhood. She loved the people of Amity Dam young and old. The chairman of the infant committee of the Home for the Friendless had a deep solicitude for the welfare of her neighbors. Indeed it was impossible for any respectable person to be quite friendless in this community.

Shad was never to forget the poem. There was no magic in its lines. It was a plain-spoken herald and avatar of the new science of bacteriology to which the good lady had given her faith. Thus it ran:

LURKING PERILS
Demetrius Lorenzo Plumb
Ran a sliver in his thumb
And sought it with a pin.

His hand and arm began to swell,
A fever on his system fell,
Blood poisoning set in.

He died, O friends! beware, I pray,
Of lurking perils in your way,
While you can draw life's breath,
Wood shavers, pins and rusty nails,
Sharp edges on old pans and pails,
May hold the sting of death.

"Lurking perils!" she exclaimed in a tender tone. "They are constantly taking their toll of precious lives. The people should be warned."

She enlarged the list of them, necessarily limited in the poem, for Shad's benefit.

At this point Shad was rescued by the arrival of Bony, who had been mending his canoe.

Shad wrote a letter to Colonel Blake, in which he reported the news which had come out in his interview with the doctor. This done, he and Bony talked a while. The doctor's hired girl came in to sit with the baby while Miss Spenlow went to Sunday school. She was its superintendent. Soon the boys set out afoot for Brown's cove.

As they passed the basement of the little church they could hear the Sunday school children singing while Miss Spenlow stood beating time with a ruler:

Around the throne of God in Heaven
Ten thousand children stand,
Children whose sins are all forgiven,
A holy, happy band,
Singing glory, glory,
Glory be to God on high.

"Hear that holy, happy band of little devils," said the cynical Bony. "She's now after the sveltled thumbs an' rusty nails of sin. I'm glad that I don't git so scared about safety. I don't believe that God would like me any better if I stood on a crack in the floor an' sang them silly songs. Gosh! The ol' maid gits worse an' worse. She's got that baby an' expects me to hold it while she's airin' out the bedroom for the night an' monkeying around fetchin' the milk from the kitchen. If I git a scratch on my finger it has to be doctored an' fussed with an' done up. Sometimes she'll collar me an' make me set down while she reads p'try to me or the sermon o' some ol' minister. It's awful. She reads the Sunday newspapers an' believes everything that's in 'em. Sets and tells how the world is goin' to freeze up an' kill everybody or how it's in danger o' bein' run into an' smashed by a comet. I don't know what a comet is, but it's one of her turkin' perils. They're killin' me. I can't stan' it. One o' these days I'm a-goin' to light out."

"Don't do it. She's an awful good woman."

"I know it, but I git sick o' bein' sniffed over an' doctored an' read to an' prayed for, an' I hate babies."

"It is awful but it might be worse," Shad answered. "Stick to it. I have hopes of amounting to something and if I succeed I'm going to take you along with me. That's what I'm going to do. I never forget a friend. You wait and see."

Shad swore Bony to secrecy and told him of the late phases in the remarkable problem of the People and of the capture of Algryre.

"It's wonderful what you've done," said Bony. "I heard 'em tellin' in the store that the district attorney thought you was the most promisin' boy that he had ever seen."

Shad smiled and was silent for a little time. The words had quickened the beating of his heart. They were bread to his soul.

"I don't know what he thinks," Shad answered. "He's never told me. I'm going to do my best to please him. That's all I can do."

"I feel sorry for poor ol' Bumpy."

He was up at the Dam while you was away to see if there was any letter for him. Ol' Doran was in the store an' abused him shameful—called him a liar an' a thief an' a murderer. Bumpy walked away an' never said a word. When that ol' pup Doran got out o' the store I called him every name I could lay my tongue to."

Shad answered: "The poor old man never said a word to me about it. He must have a heavy heart in him, but he keeps cheerful. There's something kind o' wonderful about him. I know a lot I couldn't tell—not yet."

"There ain't one o' them pin heads that does so much talkin' that's fit to black his shoes."

They were nearing the little house in Brown's cove. Bumpy, who had been watching the trail through a window as he worked, hustled out of the front door to greet them.

"Hurry up, you pair of young ganders," he shouted. "The old goose is ready an' smokin' hot. Come on."

It was then that Shad gave the little house a name which passed into history. It was suggested by like names in the novels of Reade and Dickens.

"Let's Call It the House of the Three Ganders."

"Let's call it The House of the Three Ganders," he proposed.

"I agree, an' that makes a majority," said Bumpy. "Hurry now an' git washed up an' yer hairs combed."

All enjoyed the occasion and wished the ladies many more happy birthdays.

Caesar's Early Years

Little is known definitely concerning the childhood of Julius Caesar. It is said of his mother that she formed her son for the duties of a soldier and statesman. The tutor of Julius Caesar was M. Antonius Gripho. When only three years Caesar assumed the toga virilis, a token of manhood.

Lamented Loss

At the end of an examination the teacher gathered up all the papers. Among them he discovered one sheet which, instead of being covered with historical names and dates, bore merely a crude drawing of a tombstone on which was written: "Sacred to the memory which always deserts me on occasions like this."

New State Park Near Vassar

The May tax sale, just closed in Tuscola county, reached a total of $4,435.61, County Treasurer McDurmon says. Last year, the sale reached $4,229.10 and the year before that, $3,579.61.

Mr. McDurmon has received a check of $18,223.79 which represents the amount Tuscola county schools get from the Turner fund.

Amounts taken from the court house sinking fund and invested in bonds are being gradually returned to the court house fund through the sale of the bonds. Recent sale or payment of the following bonds have been made: Richville Drain, $3,016.38; A. D. Road No. 18 bond, $10,475.00; Allen Drain Bond, $13,900.00; Sheboygan, Drain bonds, $1,045.00. Interest as well as principal is included in some of these amounts.

A thirty-acre farm adjoining the Vassar-Mayville highway, in section 15, Vassar, has been purchased by the state for a state park. It has a sand soil and the county treasury is enriched by $7.50 through the transaction, a matter of 25 cents an acre. This was included in the May tax sale.

Crippled Children Clinic Here Today

Dr. Frank H. Purcell, orthopedic surgeon at the Grace hospital and St. Joseph's Mercy hospital, Detroit, Harry H. Howett of Lansing, secretary-treasurer of the Michigan Crippled Children Commission, and Miss Neva Fumfrey, staff nurse, will be in Cass City today (Friday) to conduct a clinic for crippled children of four counties—Tuscola, Sanilac, Huron and Lapeer. They will be assisted by several local people who have responded willingly to a call for aid in the clinic. It is expected that about 75 will be examined here today. Members of Rotary clubs and similar organizations in the four counties will look after the transportation of many of the children to this point.

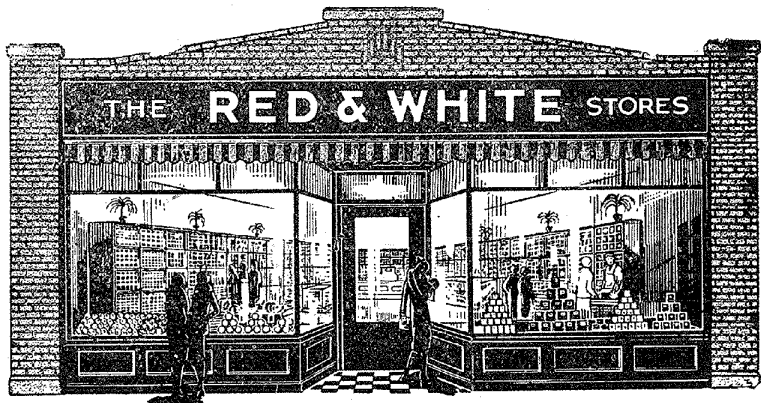

Circuit Court in Sauiac County

Circuit court opened the trial of jury criminal cases this week before Judge X. A. Boomhower, in Sanilac county.

Clare Fox, 52, Snover, was found guilty by a circuit court jury Tuesday of statutory rape. The jury recommended mercy. Judge Boomhower remanded Fox to jail to await sentence.

Claud and William Haigler, both of Melvin, charged with rape went on trial following the Fox case. Damage cases before a jury were scheduled for trial late this week and next week.

W. C. HYATT TO OPEN NEW RED & WHITE STORE AT CASS CITY

TYPICAL RED & WHITE STORE

Saturday, May 21, W. C. Hyatt will open his newly remodeled and furnished grocery store under the Red & White plan, as announced in a large advertisement elsewhere in the Chronicle.

Mr. Hyatt has been busy rearranging the store and installing new fixtures as outlined for a Red & White store. Mr. Hyatt comes from Kingston where he operated a store for several years. He has a wide experience in grocery merchandising and will prove a valuable asset to our community.

Mr. Hyatt says that he has made a thorough investigation of the Red & White plan of merchandising and gives the following statement:

The Red & White is a co-operative plan of merchandising which had its beginning in Buffalo over twelve years ago. It is the original movement of its kind, bringing together thousands upon thousands of independent merchants in the United States and Canada with hundreds of independent manufacturers and special supply houses. The buying plan is the most economical, efficient and practical that has yet been devised. Each member owns his own store and does not buy any stock in any company or pay any membership. It is "voluntary" to the fullest measure of the term. Store arrangement is considered most essential to the progress of the movement and each store is scienti-

Mrs. Lavina Walsh, 41, Grand Rapids, formerly of Evergreen township, was arraigned in circuit court Tuesday on a charge of inducing her nephew Alma Pangman, 11, to burn a barn on her unoccupied Evergreen farm. She said she would plead guilty to writing a letter asking her sister-in-law to burn the building, but refused to admit asking her nephew. Letters were produced in court as proof of the charge, but a not guilty plea was ordered entered by Judge Boomhower, and Mrs. Walsh was remanded to jail. She admitted she had sought to burn the barn to collect insurance money to pay taxes.

According to Pangman's statement to officers, he said, he set the barn on fire on his aunt's request. The damage suits of William Wahosky and children against Rev. Fr. Leo Zindler of Crosswell were settled out of court Tuesday. Wahosky filed five separate suits asking $70,000 damages for personal injuries he and his wife and three children received when their car was in collision with Rev. Fr. Zindler's car on the Lapeer road Dec. 24, 1931.

Mr. and Mrs. Wahosky's suit was settled by stipulation, and the sum was not made public. Two of the injured children received $250 each, and the third, $400 under the settlement.

"Twister" Caused $15,000 Damage

Damage in excess of $15,000 was caused by a cyclone "twister" which struck various parts of Sanilac county Monday shortly after noon. Barns were leveled, many damaged, farm buildings moved from foundations, trees uprooted, and cattle injured. One person was injured.

The "twister" struck most severely in a district east and north of Deckerville, where more than a score of buildings were demolished or damaged. Another section of the "twister" leveled two barns in Watertown township, southeast of Sandusky. The storm was general throughout Sanilac county, and was accompanied by high wind, rain and an electrical storm. Scattered damage was slight throughout the county.

Mrs. Thomas Pattullo, living 5 1/2 miles east of Deckerville, received a fractured left leg, when she was blown off the porch of her home during the storm.

Telephone lines of rural subscribers east of Deckerville were blown down and poles leveled.

Among the barns and farm buildings blown down or damaged to any extent in the district east and north of Deckerville were the following: Earl, Ernest farm, Will Burgess farm, Leslie Sweet farm, Mrs. Anna Harris farm, Calvin Ernest farm, Frank Lee farm, A. A. Pattullo farm, Willis Clemens farm, James McCormick farm, Wesley Hooper farm, Thos. Hooper farm, Harold Pattullo farm. Orchards of James McVettie and Wm. Moshure were uprooted. In Watertown township barns were wrecked on the farms of Pearl Wedge and on the Bentley and Stearns farm.

The storm swept over Sanilac in approximately 15 minutes.

Dept. of State News Bulletin

As the result of acts adopted by the special session of the legislature, between 4,000 and 5,000 nonprofit corporations in Michigan can secure a new legal corporate entity by making proper reports and paying requisite fees to the corporation division of the department of state before Sept. 1, 1933.

Several years ago, through confusion of laws a great many nonprofit corporations had their corporation papers voided through failure to make reports. In many instances officials of the corporations did not discover what had happened until the corporations no longer legally existed. In numerous instances the corporations held considerable property.

The law did not vest any discretionary power in the secretary of state when charters of nonprofit corporations were rendered void and this defect was remedied by the special session. But the new law specifies that proper reports and fees must be filed with the department of state before Sept. 1, 1933.

A similar situation existed with regard to rural cemetery associations, and these organizations were given an opportunity to secure a renewal of their charters in the same manner.

Gagetown

The Gagetown P. T. A. held its last meeting until September on Monday evening. After the business session, a two-act play was given by high school girls. Miss Irene Dupree gave a talk on "How Girls Should Spend Their Leisure Time." C. Davenport talked on "How Boys Should Spend Their Leisure Time." Eight members of the Woman's Study club gave a short play. This was followed by a box social. The proceeds are to be applied on purchasing a piano for the intermediate room.

AN OUTSTANDING MUSICAL EVENT

Concluded from first page. skilfully accompanying Mrs. Adams and Miss Charters, played a group of two numbers in her own captivating style, the audience demanding an encore. She responded with an artistically interpreted selection from Bach.

Miss Charters and her three graceful proteges added a delightful spice to the program in their clever solo and group dances. Miss Charters' final number "Valse Brillante" was singularly beautiful and formed a fitting close to an entirely charming program.

handled a gun and was familiar with its use. A check for fingerprints on the shotgun failed to reveal any that might be compared with those of the dead woman. Mr. Kirk says that the kick of the gun after it was fired might have smeared the marks so as to make them imperceptible.

Mrs. Paul, the oldest daughter of Robt. and Florida Mills, was born July 9, 1905, at Midkiff, West Virginia. She was united in marriage with Wm. Paul at Caro on Nov. 7, 1931. Besides her husband she leaves her mother, two brothers and two sisters. Funeral services were conducted at the Douglas funeral home Tuesday afternoon, by Rev. Paul J. Allured, pastor of the Presbyterian church, of which Mrs. Paul was a member. Interment was made in Elkland cemetery.

bushels of potatoes to the acre, raised 63 quarts of strawberries and 40,000 strawberry plants, had beans which averaged 20 bushels to the acre, planted 1,250 trees, and produced corn and vegetables.

Each of the girls has had training in canning foods, making clothing, and in preparing meals for the family table. One of the girls has canned over 400 quarts of food since she has been in club work.

That the club boys and girls receive business training as well as vocational guidance is shown by the statement of each that they have a bank account and other property acquired in their club work. One boy estimates the financial profit from his club work at $1,600.

nut cups were in colors of the rainbow. Wild flowers decorated the tables.

Miss Johanna Sandham presided efficiently as toastmistress and the toasts were given by speakers representing the seniors, juniors and faculty of the Cass City high school. While wit and humor predominated, there was a touch which bespoke wholesome and helpful suggestions in life's gardening in the following toasts: "Garden Planting," Wm. Ruhl; "Garden Growth," Bernard Ross; and "Garden Harvest," Mr. Campbell. Vocal numbers included "Just a Memory" and "The Wooden Soldier and the China Doll," sung by Wauwetta Warner and "My Mom" and "Can't Yo' Heah Me Callin' Caroline?" by Irene Stafford. Eleanor McCallum played "Fantasia in C Minor" by Mozart.

Guests numbered about 150 and included seniors, juniors, members of the board of education and their wives and teachers of the Cass City school. Dancing was enjoyed after the program. Music was furnished by Gunsell's orchestra.

416 PUPILS TESTED FOR TB INFECTION

Four hundred sixteen Cass City grade and high school students, representing 79 percent of the total enrollment, were skin tested for tuberculosis infection on Monday by Dr. J. W. Toan, Michigan Tuberculosis Association staff physician.

On Thursday the arms were to appear in from twenty to thirty percent of the students examined. X-ray pictures of the chests of reacting students were then to be taken in the school building with a portable X-ray machine, by Mrs. Ethel Langenberg, R. N.

After the films have been examined at Herman Kiefer hospital, Detroit, by Dr. Henry D. Chadwick, and a definite diagnosis made upon the evidence they present, physical examinations of students with suspicious cases will be made in the presence of their parents by Dr. Toan.

The testing and X-raying program is being conducted locally in recognition of the excellent record made in the 1931 Christmas sale by the Cass City school.
