Chief Executive Gave Fine Address Before Community Club.

One hundred twenty-nine enjoyed the banquet served by the Bethel church on Ladies' night of the Cass City Community club on Friday. Following the meal, the meeting was opened to the public and about 100 more came to hear the address by Gov. Wilbur M. Brucker.

At the short business meeting of the club, President L. D. Randall announced that it had been decided by the board of directors that present officers of the club would continue in office until Jan. 1, 1933, in order that the officials could be elected at the beginning of the year. Dues were reduced from $3.00 to $2.00 for the current year. There will be another reduction of $1.00 for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1933, making the amount of the dues $1.00 annually thereafter. A new program committee will be appointed soon to serve during the remainder of 1932. Representatives from several business groups will serve on this committee. After the business session, Mr. Randall turned the meeting over to Rev. P. J. Allured, chairman of the ministerial group, who was responsible for the evening's program. During the evening, the audience enjoyed several selections presented by the Ladies' band of Cass City and the Caro trumpeters.

Mrs. Kate V. English, Saginaw, secretary of the "Century of Progress" commission, which is in charge of Michigan's exhibit at the World's fair in Chicago in 1933, spoke on plans. She said that the fact that Michigan was the largest producer in the world of mint, celery and cherries would be emphasized in the exhibit. She described buildings being erected in Chicago.

State Senator Herbert P. Orr then introduced Gov. Wilbur M. Brucker. Responding to the introduction, Governor Brucker praised Senator Orr's work in the legislature, saying that Senator Orr had become a powerful influence there in his first term.

Governor Brucker commended the state legislature on its work in the special session, which he termed the most unusual in the history of the state because none of the 42 acts, passed at the session, added to the burden of the people but rather lifted existing burdens.

Governor Brucker spoke on the natural advantages of Michigan, which has the largest shore line of any state in the Union and pointed out that the greatest inland commerce is found on the Great Lakes. "See Michigan first," he said. "We have everything here that we can desire. We have the great outdoors. Michigan can stage a comeback. The tourist and resort industry is the second industry of Michigan and that industry is not down."

LARGE AUDIENCE AT BACCALAUREATE

Local Churches Unite for Service at Auditorium Sunday.

The high school auditorium held a large audience Sunday evening at the union service when the baccalaureate address was given by Rev. T. S. Bottrell, pastor of the M. E. church.

As Mrs. I. D. McCoy and Miss Geraldine L. Reed played "March Orchestrated" on two pianos, Joanna Sandham, a junior, ushered the graduates to seats at the front of the auditorium. The scripture lesson was read by Rev. P. J. Allured and prayer was offered by Rev. W. R. Curtis. The high school chorus sang two numbers during the service, "Onward Christian Soldiers" and "My Task."

Rev. Bottrell, in his address, said in part:

"Members of the graduation class of 1932 of the Cass City high school, I come to you representing the churches of Cass City and surrounding country. I have been chosen by the churches to bring to you the message of this hour. Let me offer our congratulations for your success in reaching your goal.

"I have selected a text from St. Matthew 11:29, the words of Jesus Christ. It is a text that is easy to remember with all the multiplicity of things that you have to remember, for there are only three words in my text, namely 'Learn of Me.' It is customary to select a theme for our subject and that which I have chosen for this text is 'The Game of Life.' If we put the words of this text together with the theme we will have a complete sentence, 'Learn of Me the game of life.'

"For the past twelve years you have been under the influence of trained leadership. Teachers who have spent years in training, specializing on certain subjects to teach you, have helped you to find the solution of many problems and because of their trained leadership you have been able to master many hard lessons. Consequently, they have been in the true sense of the word, your best friends. During these twelve years your school life has been a part of the very fibre of your being. But now a change is about to come. Turn to page two.

STATE PRES. TELLS OF DRY LAW BENEFIT

Mrs. Genie Martin Elected Co. W. C. T. U. President for 14th Time.

The fiftieth annual convention of the Tuscola County W. C. T. U. met in the M. E. church, Caro, on June 2 and 3, and as befitted a jubilee occasion, was well attended and enthusiastic.

The state president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Mrs. Dora B. Whitney, of Benton Harbor, was present Thursday evening and all day Friday. Her address Thursday night was the feature of the convention and in it she directed attention to the wonderful changes for the better, comparing the present with prohibition days.

Music at the convention was furnished by several Caro soloists and by Messrs. Elliott of Cass City with their Hawaiian guitars, all of which was highly appreciated.

Only by hearing the reports of the county president, the local presidents and the directors of departments did delegates realize the amount of work done in the year. In Mrs. Genie Martin of Deford, the county organization has an indefatigable worker, and as the reward for good work is usually more work, she was elected president for the fourteenth consecutive year. Other officers are: Vice-president-at-large, Mrs. Zuleika Stafford, Cass City; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. C. Schell, Cass City; recording secretary, Mrs. C. S. Bates, Kingston; treasurer, Mrs. H. Cody, Caro.

One unusually interesting number on the program was a brief review of the work from 1882 to 1932 by the county president, Mrs. Martin. The meeting place for 1933 is Vassar.

"Ignorance and prejudice are blinding the eyes of the wets and preventing them from seeing the benefits of the Eighteenth amendment," said Mrs. Whitney Thursday night, in addressing the convention. "The reason so many hear what they hear and see what they see is because of what they are. Anyone must be ignorant or prejudiced not to see the benefits of prohibition. There is so much misinformation and misunderstanding that we need to know where we stand. Because evil is entrenched is no reason why we should not attack it.

"We need a nation-wide and world-wide vision of the question of prohibition," Mrs. Whitney said. "Conditions vary according to place. Problems exist at the border of Canada that do not exist in the interior. If we were to take a survey of world-wide conditions and make a study of conditions where liquor is legal and where it is prohibited, we would find that far more favorable conditions exist in prohibited countries.

"In 1627 the colonies recognized the evil of liquor and forbade its sale to the Indians. 'Fire-water' made the Indians crazy and crazy

Youthful Musician Awarded Prize

For some weeks past, the Washington theatre at Bay City has featured what is called opportunity night. Each Friday evening at nine o'clock, any stunt may be presented by anybody and solo and team dancing, vocal or instrumental offerings of many sorts have been enjoyed by the audiences of this unique feature.

Delbert Henry, aged twelve, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Henry, was adjudged one of the winning performers in last Friday's program, having contributed two piano solos. The awards are made by the manager, Mr. Buchanan, from the volume of applause given the contestants.

There were about twenty participants in Friday's program and Delbert is to be congratulated on securing third money in so large a field.

RE-REGISTRATION IN ELKLAND TWP.

Town Board to Effect Up-to-date Records by This Requirement.

Municipalities with less than 5,000 population are not required to re-register for the fall election unless such communities have by resolution of the governing body adopted the provisions of the election law providing for such action.

While re-registration is mandatory only in communities of 5,000 population or greater, a number of the smaller communities have chosen to come under the re-registration provisions. Among these is Elkland township, the township board having by resolution at a meeting, decided to require all citizens to re-register if they desire to vote at the primary and general election this fall. The registration books now in use in Elkland township have served their purpose and a new set are required. In order that they may be made up-to-date and free from errors, the board has decided that the most satisfactory way to make them so, is to adopt the re-registration method.

A notice carried in the Chronicle this week gives the days and hours in which Clerk C. E. Patterson will be in his office to receive and enter the names of citizens of Elkland township upon the registration books.

CLASS OF 64 WERE GIVEN DIPLOMAS

Large Audiences Greeted H. S. Graduates on Three Nights This Week.

Prof. W. D. Henderson, director of the extension department of the University of Michigan, had the pleasure Tuesday night of giving the commencement address to the largest class ever graduated from the Cass City high school. The Class of '32, numbering 64 members, have this week occupied the center of the stage of local activities. The exercises of commencement week have been unusually attractive and filled with interest and the three programs were attended and enjoyed by large audiences in the high school auditorium.

J. Ivan Niergarth, principal of the high school, introduced Prof. Henderson to the audience Tuesday evening. Prefacing his address, the Ann Arbor educator said he has been giving addresses to graduates for 35 years during which time he had spoken to 400 graduating classes. His address on the "Golden Age of Tomorrow" was an optimistic one and his talk, flavored with plenty of humor, emphasized the responsibility of the individual for his own success in life and the need of continued study after the completion of a high school course.

"History teaches us that leadership and statesmanship come in days of trial," he said. "Man, never satisfied, has always desired to better his condition and all advances in the world have come when there is a need. The curve which represents civilization always points upward."

The commencement night program opened with a grand march played by Miss Geraldine Reed. The invocation was given by Rev. Paul J. Allured and Clinton Seeley of Caro sang two numbers, "The Soldier's Farewell" and "The Hills of Home." Mrs. Seeley served as accompanist. Members of the class were presented with diplomas by Supt. L. D. Randall. The evening's program was closed by the benediction pronounced by Rev. W. R. Curtis.

Married June 3, 30 Years After Parents

One of the loveliest of the season's weddings was that Friday afternoon, June 3, at the Bender home on West Grand Boulevard, Detroit, when Miss Ida Florence Crandell, daughter of Mrs. M. Crandell of St. Louis, Michigan, became the bride of Austin Traver Bender, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bender.

An altar, having a silver cloth background with palms and baskets of cut flowers, and double streamers of smilax and lily-of-the-valley leading from the stairway to the altar, formed a beautiful setting for the nuptial ceremony which was performed at 4:30 o'clock by Dr. Goodrich, professor of Bible in Albion college, in whose home the bride lived for some time. Fifty relatives and friends were present.

Miss Crandell was a charming bride in her gown of white satin with long net veil, bordered in lace and embroidered with sea pearls, clusters of orange blossoms holding the veil at the side. The bridal bouquet was Ophelia roses.

Miss Lotis Crandell, sister of the bride, who was maid of honor, was gowned in yellow silk net and carried tea roses.

Clark McKenzie Knapp of Cass City attended Mr. Bender as best man and both wore white flannel

ELLINGTON FARMER KILLED BY LIGHTNING

Donald O'Dell Stricken Three Days After Drowning of His Son.

Donald M. O'Dell, 21-year-old farmer of Ellington township, was instantly killed Saturday afternoon when struck by lightning while engaged in thinning sugar beets. Mark, Basil and Clinton O'Dell, brothers of the stricken man, and Joseph Phillips, his brother-in-law, all working in the same field, were knocked unconscious by the stroke. Basil O'Dell was in a daze for two hours before he fully recovered consciousness.

This is the second tragedy in the Donald M. O'Dell family within four days. On Wednesday of last week, Mr. O'Dell discovered his two-year-old son, Donald W., dead at the bottom of a tub filled with water. Unknown to his father the lad had followed Mr. O'Dell when he left the house to milk the cows. While playing around the water tub, used to water the livestock near the barn, the little boy evidently lost his balance. He was discovered when his father passed the receptacle on his way to the house with the evening's milk. The lad was buried the day before his father was killed.

Ellington Man to Start H. S. at 21

Arthur May, son of Ira May, in the Keilitz school district in Ellington township, left school several years ago before he had passed the eighth grade examination, but as he neared his 21st birthday he decided that he wanted a better education. He made his desire known to B. H. McComb, county school commissioner, who loaned him several school books during the past winter. Arthur made good use of them in "brushing up" on subjects covered by the eighth grade, and when the county examinations were held last month, Arthur wrote and was among those successful in passing the eighth grade. He intends to enter high school. On his next birthday he will be 22.

Unintentionally, the names of three honor students were omitted in the list of eighth grade pupils published last week in the Chronicle. Vera Weber of Richville received 100 in arithmetic and Harold Crawford, a pupil in the Wright school, northeast of Cass City, had a mark of 100 in civics. Eleanor Weber of Garner school, Denmark township, had an average of 96.4 and stood third among the girls writing on the eighth grade in Tuscola county.

If you buy a roof of permanent, fireproof, Johns-Manville Asbestos Shingles, it will last as long as your house. It will be as good in 1960 as the day it is put on.

But if you buy a roof that will rot, rust or burn, you may have to buy two or even THREE roofs in the next 30 years.

The beautiful gifts received at the pre-wedding events as well as the wedding gifts show the high esteem in which the young couple are held.

Poultry Ancestors

With the exception of the turkey, all of our farm poultry were imported from Europe. The probable ancestor of the hen was the jungle fowl, which is still to be found in the jungles of Burma, northern India, the Philippine islands and several other regions.

Country's Coldest Spots

The weather bureau admits that it cannot state the exact location of the coldest points in the United States, but it is believed that the northern portion of North Dakota and the eastern portion of Montana are the places, on the whole, having the greatest cold.

Dept. of State News Bulletin

The department of state has worked out a plan of staggered, part-time employment that will affect about 125 employees. On June 15, practically all typists and clerks employed by the department will start to work on a part-time basis. This plan will allow the department to retain 28 employees who would otherwise have been dropped. It also works to the advantage of the department because the employees of any division can immediately be returned to a full-time basis, whenever there is an unusual rush of work.

The governor and secretary of state are endeavoring to find some legal way in which automobile license plates can be sold at half price after July 1. The automobile weight tax law fixes Sept. 1 as the earliest day when license plates can be sold at the reduced figure. However, the officials are studying statutes regarding powers of the state administrative board to act in emergencies as a possible solution to the question. Sale of license plates at half-price after July 1, would allow owners of approximately 100,000 cars to secure licenses, and it would add hundreds of thousands of dollars to the state's revenue.

MEETINGS TO DISCUSS CONTROL OF BANG'S DISEASE

Bang's disease or infections abortion, as it is commonly known, is a disease of cattle which is very common in Michigan and which causes large losses annually to dairymen of the state.

Although the knowledge of this disease is relatively new yet much has been done in the way of control measure, in some parts of the United States. Michigan has only recently started such central campaign.

It is estimated that Tuscola county probably has as much of this disease among its cattle as any other county in Michigan but as yet practically nothing has been done in this county in the way of determining the extent of the disease by blood testing and very little clean up work started.

Meetings will be held in Tuscola county next week Tuesday and Wednesday to discuss with farmers of the county the latest information about the disease and control measures to be used. Dr. B. J. Kilham of Michigan State college will be present at four meetings to be held in the following places:

Tuesday at 3:00 p. m. at Dillman School, west of Cass City.

Tuesday evening at 8:30 at Graham School, 3 miles west and 1 north of Fairgrove.

Wednesday at 3 p. m. at Kingston.

Wednesday evening at 8:30 at high school at Vassar.

1931 Seal Sale Total Reported

Purchase of an average of 2.21 Christmas seals by Tuscola county residents sealed the county sixty-second in Michigan in the 1931 seal sale, a tabulation prepared by the Michigan Tuberculosis association shows. The average per capita sale for the eighty-three counties of the state was 3.42 cents. The total sale in Tuscola county to date, $729.71, is expected to be slightly increased by remittances for allotments of seals not yet accounted for.

"The loyalty Michigan people have shown to the Christmas seal sale in these times of exceptional stress challenges the Michigan Tuberculosis association to put to the very best use every penny entrusted to it," said T. J. Werle, executive secretary of the association, in commenting on the 1931 sale.

"As never before, particularly in our medical program to find early tuberculosis among school children, we can say that this challenge is being fairly met. We have never, at any time, done as significant work in the field of tuberculosis discovery. This work has been made possible by the recent advances in the technique for early discovery of tuberculosis, of which fortunately the Association has been able to take full advantage."

Summary of the medical work done by the Association during the past school year shows that 4,300 grade and high school children have received the tuberculin skin test, and that over 700 have been X-rayed. As a result of these tests, approximately 100 cases of the childhood and adult types of tuberculosis have been found.

Arrangements are being made at the present time with school superintendents and school boards for schools to be reached by the tuberculin testing and X-raying program in the school year beginning next fall. As many communities will be served as available Christmas seal funds permit.

COWL NECKLINE By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The craze for the hand crocheted blouse has spread to include street, sports and informal afternoon costumes. As it is getting a bit late for wool, a number of the Paris houses are making these blouses in mercerized crocheted for wear under the newer suits. Schiaparelli and other Paris designers are sponsoring them in sleeveless and cape versions, some little more than a gilet, perfectly plain except, perhaps, a tiny bow at the neckline, or with the round neckline built somewhat high and unornamented, or with a cowl neckline, as illustrated. This cowl neckline appears to be the latest, and a very soft, charming effect it gives when worn under the open jacket. These hand-crocheted sweaters or blouses are so easy to do, women everywhere are making them. They are lovely in pastel tones or in white.

WHITE BEACHWEAR By CHERIE NICHOLAS

This pajama ensemble of diagonal dune mesh answers the call of the mode for all-white beach wear. The shops are also showing it in pastel or brighter shades according to the demands of one's bent and complexion. However, white is a great favorite this season and most women find it very flattering and youthful looking. The beauty about the new and exceedingly popular cotton mesh is that not only is it good to look upon but it launders so easily and so perfectly. Particular attention is called to the styling of this model which features the fitted double-breasted blouse, flaring trousers, an Eton jacket together with a generous use of buttons. The most famous designers are using a great many buttons this year.

SAILOR HAT WITH SPRING STRETCH

A visit to the hat shops would indicate that Dame Fashion has decreed almost any kind of hat as long as some conditions are followed.

Right out in the spotlight is the sailor with its brim and hat band of ribbon or leather, sometimes of contrasting color. The colors are quite gay, the crowns are, on the whole, shallow, and the brims narrow. While the straws fairly blossom on the shelves there are popular arrays of knitted hats, some with straw brims, and some knitted of wool and straw. There is a natty little hat popular for sports that sits like a pancake on top of the head and comes in bright sports colors.

The hats sport any variety of small and striking ornaments of a contrasting color.

Hand-Woven Brown Wool Makes Attractive Frock

The Duchess de Nemours attended a recent fashionable luncheon in Paris wearing a hand-woven costume designed by Vera Borea. The frock, which was made along simple lines, was topped by a short waist-length jacket which buttoned close to the throat with brown and silver buttons. The collar, cuffs and belt were of brown knitted wool.

Being a gentleman is like being happy—if you have to try to be you aren't.

We have chick feeders and waterers for sale.

You want a starting ration that is a complete meal ticket—one that supplies a wide variety of proteins, minerals and vitamins needed by every chick.

An old darky was accused of chicken stealing but the evidence against him wasn't very clear.

"You're acquitted," said the judge.

"Acquitted?" asked the bewildered darky.

"Does that mean that I get to keep the chickens?"

Insures, Rapid Growth. Many chick raisers say that they market Wayne fed broilers from one to two weeks sooner than with other feeds.

June is the most profitable month for preachers. The lawyers have the other eleven.

All our Caro chicks are born free and equal. They're all strong and healthy — which explains why they thrive after you get them.

June 14th is Flag Day. We give you this advance information so you won't have to ask why all the flags are out.

NEWS OF THE NEARBY SECTIONS

Happenings Here and There
Garnered from the Chronicle's Exchanges.

Sanilac county farmers have received federal seed loans to the amount of $21,352, a final report of John D. Martin, agricultural agent, states. A total of 230 farmers had loans approved. The amount received by Sanilac county farmers is believed to have been a high record among Michigan counties, Mr. Martin said. Seed loans made in Sanilac range from $11 to $393. The maximum amount that could be borrowed was $400. The total loans average about $100. Loans are made on a short term note payable to the department of agriculture and bear interest of 5 1/2 per cent, payable in November. The note is secured by a mortgage on the entire year's crops. Seed loans were made possible by a fund allotted to the department of agriculture from the reconstruction finance appropriation.

Herbert Bitterling, farmer near Snover, reported that four purebred Holstein cows were killed by lightning Saturday afternoon, and Everett Goodwine, Marlette farmer, reported a horse and colt killed. The storm was streaky, some districts having no rainfall at the time.

Sanilac supervisors will meet for the regular June session Monday, June 20, for a one week session. Opening business of the session will be announcement of standing committees by Chairman John Jackson of Greenleaf. The important work of the June session is equalization.

Alex Dersi, Buel farmer, who asked to be jailed for rum law violation and was accommodated temporarily, was placed on two years' probation by Judge X. A. Boomhower in Sanilac county court last week. Dersi presented himself at the county jail recently and asked to be arrested for driving drunk and for possession of liquor. He had a gallon of moonshine in his car. Officers locked him up and charged him with possession. Arraigned in circuit court, Dersi said he wanted to go to jail to escape his wife's wrath at home. Judge Boomhower remanded Dersi to jail for a week until he decided how to dispose of the strange case. The probation sentence ordered by the judge carried with it a lecture in which Dersi was ordered to go to work and leave liquor alone.

The village of Forester will soon be without one of its oldest landmarks. Wrecking operations are under way on the schoolhouse built in 1871, also used as a town hall. Contractors are wrecking the structure to salvage any lumber that can be used and a new one-story school of two rooms will be built. The new building is expected to be ready about Aug. 20. The building is one of the oldest in that section and was of two-story construction. While much pioneer lore was woven about the building and many residents treasured the building as a landmark, its remodeling was necessary for safety purposes.

At the close of the commencement exercises at the Akron high school, the senior class will take a trip to Niagara Falls. Monday, June 13, is set for the start of the trip. The class of 17 members is the largest senior class to graduate from the Akron school. Class honors were won by Miss Jennie King. Miss Marie Davis will be the salutatorian at the commencement program.

The Class of '32 of the Vassar high school enjoys the distinction of being the largest in the history of the school, 18 boys and 22 girls.

August F. Baur, who was elected treasurer of the township of Winsor in April, has resigned that office and the township board has appointed Theodore Goebel of Pigeon, formerly of Sebawaing, to serve as treasurer for the balance of the term.

George Donaldson, old-time livestock commission man of Buffalo, N. Y., says that just 63 years ago he sold hogs on the Buffalo market for the same price they are today—three and one-half to three and three-fourths cents a pound. That wasn't bad before people had to have radios, autos, silk stockings, and children with expensive ideas. It's a tough price to have to swallow now.—Lapeer County Press.

Thieves broke into Schoenhals Bros. store at Brown City Wednesday night and besides robbing the cash register of $24, carried away a small amount of merchandise and a quantity of smoked meat. Entrance was gained by breaking the heavy plate glass window in a side door. The window probably was broken with a hammer or heavy piece of iron, as glass was strewn over the floor for a distance of 10 feet. Jimmie marks on another side door show that an effort had been made to force an entrance there.

Captain Arthur F. Mason, Port Huron, master of the steamer Brandon, carrying limestone from Port Inland, Mich., to Port Huron, rescued Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ludelfs, Harbor Beach, in a stalled gasoline launch in Lake Huron, 15 miles north of Harbor Beach, on the steamer's way south at 4 p.m. Thursday. Mr. and Mrs. Ludelfs had been floating hopelessly in the lake for more than 48 hours when sighted by Captain Mason. They had been without food since Tuesday night. The lake was fairly calm, but there was a heavy fog, they said. They were unable to see passing steamers.

At a surprise in their honor, celebrating the fiftieth wedding anniversary, the children of Mr. and Mrs. John Kamm assembled Sunday at their home on Saginaw street at Reese. Mr. and Mrs. Kamm are pioneer residents of Richville, having cleared the farm, one mile north of there and on which their son now resides. Mr. Kamm was one of the charter members of St. Michael's Lutheran church of Richville, having served as chairman and elder for more than 30 years. He has also been active in his township, serving various offices for several terms.

Joseph J. Murray, 43, Huron county's sheriff, was drowned at five o'clock Thursday afternoon, June 2, when he fell into the water from a small fish boat propelled by an outboard motor. Sheriff Murray and Deputy Wilson Smith, accompanied by Ray Carty, superintendent of the Port Crescent Sand company, had been searching for nets set illegally by two men now held in the Huron county jail. Late in the afternoon the officers decided to abandon the search and return to Oak Beach, where they had left their car. The boat was piloted to the sand company dock, where Carty was left, and was less than 100 yards from the dock on the return trip when the sheriff, who was standing up, lost his balance and fell overboard. Murray did not rise to the surface, Smith said. Sheriff Murray, a prominent member of the Knights of Columbus lodge, was the first democrat to hold the office in 20 years. He had announced his intention of seeking re-election. Surviving are his widow and four children, Marion, 8, Grace, 6, John Joseph, 3, and Joan, 6 months; three sisters and one brother, George, now attending school in Wisconsin.

A patent has been issued in Washington to Adolph Muellerweiss, Sebawaing, for a new type of an electric attachment plug receptacle. Mr. Muellerweiss' type of receptacles is so adjusted that the prongs of the plug may be placed in the two holes of the receptacle easily. The holes are grooved to allow the prongs to be inserted quickly.

SEE MICHIGAN FIRST IS ADVICE OF GOV.

Concluded from first page.

The governor pointed out that 10 cents of each tax dollar went for state purposes and 90 cents for local purposes. The legislature in its recent special session reduced the state budget from $29,000,000 to $23,500,000, a cut of $5,500,000.

A new law provides for the return of the entire automobile license tax for county road purposes, he said. The new legislation will build up again the confidence of the people of Michigan.

"What's the matter with America?" he asked. "Nothing. Our granaries are full and the money is still here. Some people have lost confidence momentarily. But we shall come out of it all right."

Governor Brucker defended himself against charges of political opponents that he was spending too much time out of his office. He said, "When you hear scalawags speak of the governor going out to make speeches, just remember I make up the time at my desk. When I may no longer go before the people and tell them of the affairs of the state, then I will no longer care to be the governor."

Governor Brucker conveyed the regards of Mrs. Brucker, who was unable to be present. Mrs. Brucker has passed final examinations for a master's degree at Michigan State college, he said.

platform, which was beautifully decorated with flowers and elegantly lighted, presented a charming scene.

Irene McComb as salutatorian welcomed the parents and patrons of the school. Bill Ruhl gave the president's address, and Irene Evans as class historian reviewed the events of school life and happenings relating particularly to the Class of '32. Walter Goodall predicted future activities of classmates in a prophecy, Richard Vankle bequeathed characteristics and idiosyncrasies of seniors to underclassmen in the class will, and Catherine Bailey, in the giftingatory, presented rewards to classmates. Bernita Taylor, who won class honors as valedictorian, expressed appreciation for the sacrifice of parents, teachers and friends who proved so loyal to class and school.

Two musical numbers were given by members of the class—a piano solo, "To the Summer," by Charlotte Warner, and a vocal solo, "Homing," by Irene Stafford.

Donald M. O'Dell

Donald Malcolm, son of Jesse and Charlotte O'Dell, was born in Wisner township, Tuscola county, Michigan, on Sept. 13, 1910. At the age of 13, he came with his parents to the Cass City community where he has since resided.

On June 8, 1929, he was united in marriage with Flora Cayton of Flint. To this union were born two sons: Donald William, who preceded his father in death by three days, and Emmet, seven months old.

Mr. O'Dell leaves to mourn his loss, his wife and infant son, his father and mother, two sisters, Marion, of Detroit, and Dorothy at home and eight brothers, Reader of Mikado, Arthur of Flint, and John, Harvey Mark, Basil, Quentin and Mack, at home. Besides the family he will be sadly missed by many other relatives, friends and neighbors.

Funeral services were conducted at the family residence on Tuesday by Rev. Mulkin of the Nazarene church. The body was laid to rest beside that of his son in Elmwood cemetery.

LIFE'S ALLUREMENT

Oh, let me live in expectation
Of better days that are to be—
And work in sweet anticipation
That Fate some day will smile on me!
And let me hold a fighting sector,
Where I must drive to reach my goal—
Where I, at times, may sip Life's nectar,
But not too often drain the bowl!

And when the day has left me weary,
And I have failed to touch the prize—
May I maintain an outlook cheery,
And never fail to realize
The finest part of Life's attraction,
Lies not in climbing every slope,
Nor in that thing called "Satisfaction"—
It lies in dreams, in faith, and hope!

excavations at the school grounds for the new addition. E. W. Keating is now engaged in drawing up the plans.

Cass City Lodge, I. O. O. F., held its election of officers last evening with the following result: N. G. Wm. Schwaderer; V. G., I. A. Fritz; rec. sec., G. Masselink; treas., J. L. Hitchcock; representative to grand lodge, Geo. E. Perkins.

Preparations are now under way for a Fourth of July celebration here. A meeting was held Tuesday evening and the following officers elected: Pres., J. D. Crosby; sec., J. B. McGillivray; treas., W. J. Campbell; executive committee, H. S. Wickware, C. W. Heller, W. I. Frost, E. A. McGeorge, W. D. Schooley and I. B. Auten.

Our school board has secured the following teachers for the coming year: First primary, Miss Allen; second primary, Miss Kuntz; first intermediate, Miss Dunham; second intermediate, Miss McNaughton. Miss MulQueen has been offered the grammar department but her acceptance has not yet been received. We believe that with Prof. G. W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The W. C. T. U. met at the comfortable home of Mrs. Alex Milligan Friday, May 27. Aside from routine business the following program was given: "Power of Votes," Mrs. Stanley Warner; "Has National Prohibition Increased Lawlessness," Mrs. W. Schell; "Sayings of Prominent Men," Mrs. McCrea; "Private Profit in Liquor," Mrs. Murray; "Getting Worse," Mrs. Ricker; "Enforcement," Mrs. Milligan; "Referendum," Mrs. Moore; song, "Win Them One by One," three young ladies; piano solo, "Do You Remember," Phyllis Koepfen; piano solo, "The Wooden Soldier and the China Doll," Eunice Schell; music, Marian Milligan.

Dainty refreshments were served and everyone so enjoyed herself, she wanted to come again.

And It's Getting Worse.

When the liquor trade, using even some churches and churchmen as their tools, overthrew the prohibition system in Canada, they made loud promises as to the speedy and effective way in which government control would create a new earth. Here are the facts: "Between the year 1922, when a government sale system was introduced, and the year 1930, indictable offenses in Canada rose from 15,720 to 23,457, while convictions for drunkenness increased from 25,048 to 35,789. Violations of Liquor Acts rose from 8,519 in 1922 to 18,132 in 1930. Reports of the prisons and reformatories of the province of Ontario for the year 1930 must give concern to all good citizens. They show that from 1926 to 1930 murder increased 81 per cent; manslaughter, 51 per cent; attempted suicide, 625 per cent; crime against persons, 65 per cent; crime against property, 86 per cent; liquor violations, 220 per cent." And yet there are some Canadian citizens who are actually helping the liquor trade of the world to overthrow the prohibition law in the United States! Don't be fooled, Uncle Sam.—The New Outlook.

The old 329th Field Artillery is going into action again and what a drive this time! The first annual reunion will be held in Detroit, June 11, 12, 13, and 14. Headquarters will be at the Fort Shelby Hotel. Every member of the regiment is requested to plan on being there during these days. An excellent program has been arranged for the entire time including a party in Windsor. Members may bring their wives and families. Members of the 329th returned from France on the Leviathan as part of 14,400 men returned on a single crossing—the greatest human cargo ever carried by any ship. They slept in the hold, in tiers six deep, between the decks, on deck—all over the ship. Officers occupied luxurious cabins, including the Kaiser's famous suite. The men had movies and other entertainment, and their first ice cream in many months. The movie was that classic of war days, Charlie Chaplin's "Shoulder Arms."

CHAPTER XIII

The Truth Crushes Its Enemy. SHERIDAN Morryson, now a distinguished lawyer, has written in a volume of reminiscences, not to be released for publication until he has been lying ten years in his grave, that a boy ought to be careful in making the memories that are to go with his up the road. He has given the historian a limited right of quoting from this record of his early life.

He writes: I see mostly darkness when I look back upon my young boyhood. It was the darkness of ignorance and oppression with which I could not be content. But as I look a light falls upon my way. It came from gentle friendly faces. Mostly it was the light that shone out of the big honest, blue eyes of a young girl. I began to feel the stir of a new life in me. In a little time the restless, daring, adventurous human being that I am was born. He knew his way. No task was too great for him. He had a strange faith in his heart that no undertaking was beyond his strength. If it was an illusion it was worth having.

I knew mean and sordid people. These I have almost forgotten. But I do not forget or underestimate the kindly help of Mrs. Smithers, in spite of her narrowness, or the gentle severity of Betsy Spellow, or the great heart of Bumpy Brown. Especially I remember the keen intellect, and fatherly counsel of the beloved doctor and the generosity of Mr. Converse and of Colonel and Mrs. Blake. Above all these forces that have helped to make me the man I am is that light which, long ago, shone upon me out of a girl's eyes.

I was a romantic young knight of the age of chivalry when, that day in December, elated by my success in Amity Dam I came to Colonel Blake's house. I sat down at the table with Ruth and her mother. Cautiously I tried to ease the fullness of my heart.

"Forgive me if I look at you too much," I said to the beautiful girl. "It is winter. There are no flowers. The trees are bare and my eyes long for something good to look at."

Mrs. Blake smiled, saying: "I suggest that you turn your eyes on that portrait of a lovely lady looking down at you from the wall."

"She is very grand but her eyes tell no secret. Her lips do not speak to me. My heart beats no faster when I look at her." These things I tell so that those who read may know that I had an active imagination and a spirit not quite fitted to my time. Extravagance in dress and speech was the keynote of my youth. The ladies liked me. Some men did not. Those who said that I was a born liar will have never understood me. They will not understand me now when I say that there is no one so uninteresting as a born truth teller whose veracity has the precision of mathematics. Mrs. Blake knew my heart. She faced me about with these words:

"Dear boy, I know that you mean what you say but you are on forbidden ground. Did I not warn you to keep off the grass?"

She was smiling. My ardor had amused her.

"True! But when you gave me that warning you thought that I was a child. Since Colonel Blake has told me that I have done the work of a man. He does not know it, but I have helped to solve the mystery which has baffled us so long. I present it to him."

She took my hand in hers—a gentle motherly gesture. She said: "You are a boy of a thousand—brave, thoughtful, keen-minded—a gentleman. I am proud of you. But you are only a boy in years, even if you are a man in accomplishment. You must be patient and wait a while before you can be engaged to marry."

"I can wait but the thought of it is like a knife in my heart. I shall have to go away where I can not see her. When I take her hand in mine, when I look into her eyes, my heart is telling her of my love. I should think that I might as well say it with my tongue. Why not?"

I wonder not that she laughed. "I think that you are a born pleader," she answered. "The judge decides against you, but you can take your case to a higher court. Why do you not appeal to the colonel?"

Ruth had been silent but amused by these proceedings. I turned to her and asked: "Have I your permission to appeal?"

I think that she never looked so beautiful as when she turned to me and answered quite seriously: "Of course we'll appeal. Mother knows how to bribe him." "I shall be scared. I know what he will do. He will remind me that he will shoot at young fellows who want to marry his daughter." Then Mrs. Blake offered a suggestion which betrayed her sympathy. It was this: "You will say that you are not the kind of man who finds discouragement at the cannon's mouth." I arose and went to her side and kissed her. I knew that my case was more than half won.

This much is taken directly from the memoirs of the accomplished lawyer and statesman. It accurately reflects the romantic fervor of his temperament, the forces that lifted him out of the slough of his boyhood and started him on his triumphant way, the pride he took in the approval of the friends who had done so much for him. The illuminating passage should be associated with the query which ends his review of an unusual and most happy career. It is:

"How, in any land save this, could a boy born as I was and bound for many years to a life of hard conditions, have won the friends, the peace, the plenty that have long been mine?"

Colonel Blake returned that evening from his journey in the West, bringing good news. He said: "Algyre has been convicted. I have in my pocket a sworn confession of his part in the crime at Amity Dam. The doctor's theory was correct. The plan was Algyre's. He planted the revolver and the cartridges on Bumpy Brown. He was to get a certain sum of money. He got only half of it."

"Did you learn who paid him?" Shad asked. "Yes. The name I am not quite ready to disclose. You and I must go tomorrow and make a careful survey of the premises of Robert Royce. Within twenty-four hours I think that we shall have our man in jail. Meanwhile we must keep still and step softly."

"I have some news for you," Shad began. "We are at the end of the mystery."

Shad told of the doctor's strategy with the unfortunate girl and of the taking of the photograph, with the help of magnesium and powder, at night. He recited the dialogue that he had overheard. He presented the sealed envelope to his friend, saying:

"There is the photograph. I have not seen it. The doctor says that it shows the murderer. He is sure of that."

Colonel Blake broke the seal of the envelope and looked at the photograph. "G—d!" he exclaimed as he put it back in the envelope.

He walked up and down thoughtfully, a serious look in his face. He resumed his seat.

"This is important," he said. "The talk you overheard and the photograph are the last links in the chain. It's a remarkable story, and there's a great hero in it."

The boy restrained his curiosity in the moment of silence that followed. It was broken by the colonel who said:

"My boy, in this whole matter you have rendered me a great service. It has been the work of a man and a brave man at heart. My rule is to keep decisive evidence to myself until the one it affects is under arrest, but I think that you are entitled to see that photograph if you wish to."

"I bow to your judgment, sir. I can wait."

"Well, you will not have long to wait. How did you get on with Blackstone?"

Shad took from his pocket the little essay that he had written on 'The Foundation of the Common Law. The colonel read it carefully.

"Again you have surprised me," he said. "It is excellent. I don't mean to say that it is above criticism, but your ideas are well expressed and your judgment of the value of the factors is singularly mature. It is like that of a man."

Shad was quick to take his cue. He said, "Colonel Blake, this compliment is very welcome. You told me once that I was brave. Well, I am going to be braver now than I have ever been."

The colonel turned toward the boy, whose face was red with embarrassment. He asked:

"Shad, what is it?"

"I am in love with your daughter. Some time I want to marry her if she will have me. I want to ask her to wait for me until I am old enough. If I have done anything worth doing, it is because I loved her and wanted to win her admiration."

The colonel laughed. "My boy, I know how you feel," he said. "It's a terribly serious feeling. I can only say now that the court reserves its decision. At present let us confine our thought to the main issue. I am weary with much travel and must have rest. I'll go to bed and you go to your lodgings. Tomorrow will be a busy day for both of us. I shall get a good team in the morning and call for you at eight o'clock."

Next morning Shad drove to Ashfield with Colonel Blake and the sheriff. They stabled their horses. The colonel asked Shad to telephone to Doctor Gorse and learn if he had any news to report.

The doctor answered: "Tell your chief that I must see him this morning, and that I will meet him at the Westminster hotel within the hour."

They waited in the hotel office until the doctor arrived.

Then the colonel, the sheriff and the boy proceeded to the shop of Robert Royce. The colonel addressed him in a serious tone.

"Royce, the time has come when I must have a frank talk with you," he said. "You will save yourself embarrassment if you lock your door and draw the shades. There can be no interruption of these proceedings."

Royce changed color. In a frightened voice he inquired, "What has happened?"

"I may have to arrest you. I have evidence enough to make you a lot of trouble. If you lie to me you shall suffer for it. What I want from you is the truth and the whole truth. I warn you not to conceal any part of it. Don't make a mistake and try to fool me. It won't work."

The sheriff had written on a sheet of paper. "Not open this morning." He hung it on the outer knob and locked the door. Royce, as white as the thin cover of snow that lay on the ground outside, turned up the lights and drew the window-shades.

"What have I done?" he asked. "That's exactly what I want to know," Blake answered. "You are in a critical position. I take it that you do not want to be tried for murder or for complicity in murder."

"Murder!" Royce exclaimed. "Yes. You cannot prove an alibi. Moreover you had a motive as the only heir of your mother. You were intimate with the crook Algyre who has made a confession of his part in the killing of Oscar Perry and the attempt to put it on Bumpy Brown."

Royce had risen to his feet with a distressful countenance.

"My G—d, sir!" he exclaimed. "I have been a fool but I had nothing to do with that crime. What can I tell you?"

Blake demanded: "Tell me all that you know about the girl Carrie Brown."

"That's like prodding me with a hot iron," he began. "But I'll tell you. Everything I know I'll tell you. She is a daughter of old Bumpy Brown. She came on to live with her father nearly two years ago. I was a friend of the old man. He lived in town and was drinking hard those days. She couldn't be happy with him and he was in no shape to take care of her. I fell in love with that girl."

Royce stopped. He leaned forward, his face in his hands. When he spoke again his voice showed signs of emotion.

"I never knew what it meant to be in love until I saw her," he went on. "My uncle gave her a job in his shop in Malone. The work was hard. She didn't like it. She was not very well. I got her a place in the store in South Bolton. It was a healthy country. She liked it. I went to see her once a week. I took her out riding."

Royce paused again. Colonel Blake asked: "Were you engaged to her?"

"Well, I had asked her to marry me. She had not promised to do it. I began to see she did not care as much for me as I did for her. I would have gone through hell for her. By and by I learned that she was keeping company with another man. I couldn't find out who it was. I was told that she would walk off in the woods alone Sunday evenings and meet him. I am sure that she was fond of him. He didn't love her as much as I did—that's certain."

Royce took out his handkerchief and wiped his eyes.

"He seduced her," the young man went on. "By and by she was in trouble. I had quit going to see her. Hubbard wrote me the truth and said that something would have to be done. The girl had no friends. I went up there. I couldn't stay away. I felt sorry. I loved her in spite of all she had done. She wanted to go to a midwife up in the woods. She wanted to hide the disgrace as much as possible. I took her there. She had a baby and came near dying. I stood by her. I took Doctor Gorse up there to see her. He saved her life."

Colonel Blake arose and went to Royce's side and took his hand, saying: "You have told the truth like a man. You see, I know the truth, but I wanted to hear it from you. I have only one more question to ask. When you missed your revolver, cartridges and overalls, had you no suspicion of the thief?"

"Algyre was in the shop the day of the murder. He told me that while I was out on an errand that day Bumpy Brown came in and went back to the office. I made up my mind Bumpy had done the stealing."

Colonel Blake answered: "I am satisfied."

The sheriff was speaking of the admirable attitude of the young harnessmaker toward the unfortunate girl when a loud rap shook the door. Immediately the rap was repeated.

"You may open the door and resume business," said Colonel Blake. "Pardon the interruption."

The door swung open revealing Cyrus Doolittle.

"Ask him to come in," said Blake. "He's just the man I want to see."

"I'm in a hurry," said Doolittle as he entered with a serious look in his face.

The colonel stepped behind him, closed the door, locked it and put the key in his pocket. He turned to the newcomer and said:

"Doolittle, if I were you I'd be in a hurry myself. I think that you've been in too much of a hurry all your life. The day has come when you must sit down and think it over."

Doolittle had turned pale. "I'm due in Griggsby in an hour," he said, looking at his watch. His dark eyes were troubled. He stroked his brown beard.

"You are overdue at the county seat," Blake answered.

"What do you mean?"

As if making a random remark about the weather the colonel answered:

"I mean that you are going to jail this morning for the murder of Oscar Perry."

There was a little convulsive movement in the figure of Doolittle. In a second his muscles tightened. He stood erect. A look of indignation, on a background of death-like pallor, masked his face.

"Me?" he demanded. "What do I

"What Do I Know About the Murder of Oscar Perry?"

know about the murder of Oscar Perry?"

Blake answered calmly: "Sit down, Doolittle. Don't try to make me believe that you've lost your memory. Why are you so excited? Pull yourself together and sit down and listen."

Doolittle slumped into a chair. He clasped his fingers around one knee and sat with his chin upon his breast, breathing deeply as he looked at Blake.

The colonel seemed to be touched with a sense of pity. He spoke in a gentle tone. "For years I have been your friend. I am still your friend. I know your story from beginning to end. I know every detail in it. I am not lying to you. I have the proofs in my possession. Some time ago you fell in love with a pretty girl. You made her believe that your wife would not live long. You gave her money and dressed her handsomely. She was young and unwise. You won her affection. You began to dally with passion. It is the most dangerous game which honest people can play. You lost your mental and moral balance. You staggered. Old Cyrus Doolittle fell dead. You had seduced the girl. You were soon between the devil and the deep sea. Your good judgment and your sense of honor had been burned out of you by the fire of lust."

"In desperation you made a plan. On the tenth of November you drove to Griggsby. You arrived in Ashfield soon after noon and put your horses in the stable of the Westminster hotel. About four-thirty that afternoon you came to this shop. You told your stepson that you were ill and wished to lie down. He took you into the little office built against the side of the shop in the rear where there was a desk and a lounge. You told Royce to let you sleep and not to call you. Then you closed the door and locked it. A loaded revolver and some shells to fit it lay on the desk. You had often seen it lying there. You put Royce's rubbers in your coat pocket to disguise your tracks. You knew that Bumpy Brown wore a pair the same size. You took the revolver. You put on Royce's overalls. At five-twenty or thereabouts Royce had closed the shop and gone upstairs where he lay reading a paper. You put the revolver in your pocket, opened the window and climbed through it. You crossed the bridge going west with a package under your arm walking fast. The package contained a broad-brimmed hat which you had borrowed from Algyre. A man I know saw you. You wore a cap on your head. You carried in your pocket the rubbers, the revolver and cartridges, a light-colored slouch hat and a colorful handkerchief.

"You hurried up the road in the darkness. You left the broad-brimmed hat at some point not far from the bridge in Amity Dam. You reached your home about seven. You covered your face with the handkerchief. You put on the light-colored slouch hat and the rubbers. You rapped at the door. Your son opened it. You had expected that your wife would be standing before you.

It was her habit to open the door. She was the one you had come to kill. You were facing not her but your son. You had to see it through now. You couldn't turn back. You entered, limping like Bumpy Brown, the boy fleeing before you. You began to shoot. You wounded your wife. You came close to her. Your weapon was pointed at her face. You did not shoot then. You were still pulling on the trigger. You did not know that you had to release the trigger to cock the weapon. Therefore your wife escaped. You had to kill her father to get away.

"Now the rats began to gnaw. They smelled blood. You fled in the darkness. You put on the broad-brimmed hat. You were seen at different points on the road hurrying through the darkness. You tucked the handkerchief and slouched hat into a wall-hole. Opposite Brown's cove you met the crook Algyre. He had helped to make the plan. He took the revolver and cartridge from your hands. He crossed the river and planted them on Bumpy Brown. He was to get a thousand dollars for helping you. He got only half of it because you were afraid to draw so much money out of the bank at that time. I have Algyre's confession in my pocket.

"You went on. You hid the broad-brimmed hat in a hollow stump and covered it with rotten wood. You put the cap on your head. You reached the Ashfield bridge about eight-thirty. You threw the rubbers and overalls into the west channel. You entered the open window of Royce's office. You unlocked the door and called him. He let you out of the front entrance. You crossed the east channel on your way to the hotel. A little beyond the bridge a man told you of the crime which had been committed at your home. You hurried to the stable and got your horses. You told different men around you that Bumpy Brown must have done the shooting—that you had put him off your place once and that he had sworn to get even. You drove rapidly up the road.

"Now when you got home you did not drop the reins and run to find your stricken wife as an honest man would have done. You went straight to the stable to see that the colts were properly cared for. That one circumstance was like a millstone tied to your neck. It set a man to thinking in your village, and his thinking has helped me to surround you with a chain of evidence that no power can break.

"You lived in a growing, blistering heat in that house of mourning with your good wife and son whose faith in you must have been like a crown of thorns. But the worst was to come. Here was the girl who must have been nearer to you than all else. Home and son and wife and honor and good repute were as shorn compared to her. She was in sore trouble yet you dared not lift a hand to help her. My G—d! What a thumbscrew that must have been!"

Doolittle was trembling. His mouth was open. He covered his face with his hands. Dumb with remorse and astonishment he was an abject and wretched figure.

"My story is near its end," the colonel went on. "When the girl was at Betsy Spellow's with her child you went by night to comfort and reassure her. When you were with her in the spruce thicket a witness of mine heard you say to her that you would kill anyone who came between you and her and that you would take her to Australia."

These words came in a hoarse whisper from the lips of the murderer: "It's a lie."

"No, it isn't. That instant we took a photograph of you and the girl. Here it is. Do you want to see it?"

The query was scarcely spoken when Doolittle pitched forward out of his chair. He lay sprawled, face downward on the floor, a limp, quivering, helpless, shrunken mass of ruined manhood.

Alfalfa Meal Used in Feeding Lambs

Ground alfalfa mixed with cracked corn is a very satisfactory ration for self-feeding lambs, according to the animal husbandry department at Michigan State college, where livestock men of the state will meet Friday, June 10, to get the yearly report of the livestock-feeding experiments.

The alfalfa ration for lambs was used in a trial to find a home grown product which could be used by Michigan feeders to replace by-products feeds which have been bought in the past to add bulk to the lamb's ration.

One of the college's feeding trials with hogs was planned to find the amount of protein supplement which can be profitably added to the pork producing ration. A test was also made to find if it is desirable to grind grain for hog feed.

The report given during Feeders' Day will include trials with all classes of livestock, and the animals used in the tests will be exhibited so visitors can judge the comparative merits of the different rations used. Members of the animal husbandry department will discuss the feeding methods.

Prominent livestock men will talk to the visitors during the afternoon program. A noon luncheon will be held in the meats laboratory at the college.

John Henry Waldon.
John Henry Waldon, son of the late John and Eleanor Waldon, passed on to his eternal rest on Thursday, June 2, at 7:25 a. m., after an illness of a week at his home, 2639 Lothrop Ave., Detroit.

Funeral services were held from the Brewster Pilgrim Congregational church, Detroit, in which church Mr. Waldon was serving as deacon. Burial was at the Elkland cemetery, one mile east of Cass City, on Saturday, June 4, at 3:00 p. m., under the Masonic order.

Mr. Waldon came to Cass City in the early pioneer days with his parents, a little chap two years old, and spent his childhood days helping to fell the trees in the big forests and blazing the trails. He saw the country develop into its present condition. He could tell many thrilling tales of the happenings of pioneer days. He moved to Detroit in 1890.

Mr. Waldon was a kindly, Christian man, making friends wherever he went, always ready to give a helping hand. The expressions of love and respect were many in the language of flowers, the floral offerings being many and very beautiful.

He leaves a wife, Fannie Waldon (nee Treadgold); a son, Elgin; two sisters and two brothers, Mrs. Ada Jones, Detroit, Mrs. Lena McPherson, Sandusky, Stanley Waldon, North Branch, and Alf Waldon, Rochester, New York; and a little grandson, Robt. Elgin.

WARNING SIGNS AT CURVES AND HILLS IN MICHIGAN

Petitioning the State Highway commission for better marking of state roads with warning signs at curves and hills, the safety and traffic committee of the Automobile Club of Michigan, at a meeting in the Hotel Statler at Detroit pointed to the sharp increase of traffic accidents and deaths as cause for immediate action.

In its petition, Thursday addressed to Highway Commissioner Grover C. Dilman, it was pointed out that passing cars on curves and hills is in violation of the state law, and the most unobserved of the state's motor vehicle laws. This is particularly evident along paved highways where yellow lines divide the roadway and prohibit the passing of vehicles, the committee said.

"Despite a decrease in automobile registration in Michigan, traffic fatalities and accidents continue on the highways of Michigan. Many of the most serious accidents on rural roads have been the direct result of motorists passing over cars on hills or at curves. This occurs even on paved roads where yellow lines indicate 'no passing'."

A communication was also addressed to Commissioner Oscar G. Olander of Michigan Department of Public Safety, urging more rigid enforcement of these two driving regulations and asking assistance from the state police to prevent accidents resulting from this violation.

Invite Home Owners for Landscape Day

Michigan home owners who are interested in the use of plants and shrubs to beautify their houses and lawns are invited to attend Landscape day at Michigan State college, Wednesday, June 15.

Landscape plantings at the Grand Rapids station at Grand Rapids have previously been used to demonstrate good methods of home beautification but the transferral of the event to East Lansing this year will give residents in a different section a chance to inspect this work.

Groups of people who register at the Horticultural building will be conducted about the campus, beginning at 9:00 a. m. Members of the landscape department will explain the purposes of the plantings and the varieties of shrubs best fitted for use under Michigan conditions.

One of the exhibits will be a series of plots on which different varieties of lawn grasses were planted. One of the first steps in home beautification is the obtaining of a presentable lawn and this is often difficult unless the home maker knows which varieties of grass to use on the type of soil where the plantings are to be made.

The College Botanical gardens contain specimens of thousands of plants, many of which will be in bloom June 15. A picnic dinner will be held at noon, and members of the college staff will speak during the afternoon program.
