THE OLYMPIC GAMES.

The young athletes of all nations and both sexes who are competing at Los Angeles for world championships constitute, beyond doubt, the finest aggregation of physically perfect humanity that and place in the history of the world.

There is no question whatever day. that the modern athlete is far sutive races, but in every contest home. primitives, the victory has fallen to the modern.

We venture the belief that the Flint. Olympic Games have done more than any other influence to spread the gospel of physical training and outdoor sports throughout the civilized world. As we get older we realize that physical health is the most valuable asset the individual can have. Given sound health, and the controlling intelligence which enables its possessor to engage in physical sports, any young man or young woman need not worry about such immaterial things as riches. Youth does not always realize it, but all the money in the world is worth nothing to one who has not the health to enjoy the things it will buy.

Another great benefit, which is none the less real because it is intangible, is the spirit of international sportmanship which the Olympic games engender. Let J. A. TWO MONTHS' WORK FOR NOTHING

How would the average citizen like to work 61 days without any pay whatever?

The answer is that he wouldn't like it at all. But that, in effect, is what he is doing. Sixty-one days' to pay the cost of government. In about 25 days.

The ratio is constantly rising. Carried to the inevitable conclusion, it means that in the not-too distant future, the taxpayers will be working for the tax-eaters all the time, and for themselves not at all. Every time a new bureau is ment comes into existence, a little its way into the Treasury.

As President Hoover has said, to continue on the tax road we are traveling is to impoverish the nation. In the last 16 years the cost secretary, were in Dearborn Monof government has increased nearly day and Tuesday to attend the 23rd in hoarding of capital, industrial secretaries, and chairmen of comretrenchment, unemployment. Farms for Sale

Opportunities like the present for a man to start farming only come once in a life time. It has been a great many years since one could buy farms and stock them as cheaply as he can today.

We have eighty acres nine miles east of Cass City which have been well cared for. The buildings are average farm buildings and the land is in good shape to produce. We can sell this farm for $1,800.

We have eighty acres one mile north of Old Greenleaf with good house, barn and chicken-coop. The Federal Land Bank once offered to loan $4,000 on this farm. We offer the farm for sale at $3,200.

We have 160 acres of land, one mile east and one mile north of Bad Axe. The land is unusually good; the buildings are unusually large—two barns; the farm has many weeds on it and the buildings need fixing up. It will take some work and money to fix the place up, but it is a farm that is well worth $12,000 when fixed up. We offer it for $5,000.

THOUGH the members of congress during the recently ended session gave up a vast amount of time to political scheming, quarreling and useless talk, they actually did enact considerable legislation of moment, often under pressure from the Chief Executive.

They passed a series of measures that began with the moratorium for inter-governmental debts, that included the creation of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, and that ended with the passage of the $2,122,000,000 relief bill and the home loan bank bill with its currency inflation provision.

They put through a new revenue measure designed to raise more than a billion dollars in additional taxes, and an economy bill saving perhaps $150,000,000 in government expenditures. They passed all the necessary department supply bills, but refused to make most of the promised economies in these.

Two measures long advocated by Senator Norris were passed. These were the "lame duck" resolution to change the constitutional dates for inauguration of the President, and the anti-injunction bill relating to labor disputes.

The growing national discontent with prohibition was reflected in congress by two test votes in the house and several votes on the legalization of beer in the senate. On March 14, voting to bring the Beck-Linthicum repeal resolution to the floor, the house cast 187 wet votes, the largest of its kind since prohibition, as against 227 dry ballots. Two weeks later a similar vote on the O'Conner-Hull beer bill was 132 work for the electo 216.

Senate wets pinned their hopes to various bills to legalize beer, and measures by Senator Hiram Bingham and Millard E. Tydings were offered as amendments to the tax bill, and in a final effort to gain modification and increase federal revenues as a rider to the home loan bank bill. The various attempts met failure.

THIS WEEK IN

Washington, D. C. (Autocaster) -With the end of the first session thirty years. of the seventy-second Congress Washington is surveying the wreckage and preparing plans for the presidential campaign.

Unprejudiced observers here are a unit in calling the work of this Congress a good deal of a mess. The session started out harmoniously, with leaders and members of both parties working shoulder to shoulder to try to enact legislation which would tend to stimulate business and industry. But as the political situation grew more intense the session developed into a cat-and-dog fight. Neither party had a large enough majority in either house to force its party measures through.

The Hoover Notification

There has been some talk of making the occasion of Mr. Hoover's acceptance of the Presidential nomination a big celebration, with tens of thousands of Republicans coming to Washington from all parts of the country and having, as it were, a mass-meeting on the Capitol Plaza. The indications are, however, that it will be a rather simple ceremony with only a few party leaders present, in the White House or on the White House grounds.

During the campaign Mr. Hoover does not plan to make more than six or seven speeches. The principal speechmaker for the administration will probably be Ogden L. Mills, secretary of the treasury, who fired the first gun in his Boston speech on the eleventh

Debts And Power

It may safely be said that the administration is not in the least worried over the apparent consolidation of European opinion on the subject of war debts, which has been interpreted in some quarters as a threat to the United States. Nobody, from the president down, conceives even the possibility of a cancellation of these debts, no matter what united Europe says or does.

It would not surprise anybody here, however, if the president should call the representatives of the nations which owe us money into a new conference, to be held in America and not in Europe, to cise ability to pay. Not so many years ago a shopping expedition was a task calling for the expenditure of a great deal of time and energy. Roads were poor, particularly in the country. And, after having toiled to the market places, the shopper had to use unusual discrimination to be sure of getting the things that best suited the family needs.

All that is changed. Paved roads in city and country make transportation swift, safe and easy. And advertising is like one of those highways, leading straight to the mark, permitting speedy economical buying. Giving information. Enabling choices to be made at home. Reducing shopping to the easy selection of brands of known quality. Eliminating buying puzzlement and doubts. Saving your minutes and hours for other things—amusements, reading, culture, family duties. Reducing wear and tear on mind and body and money.

It pays to travel this new modern road this broad highway paved with Read the advertisements in printers' ink. the Chronicle today.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—In concern over the disappearance of the young and beautiful wife of his wealthy friend, Crandall White, Aaron Glaenzer engages Motherwell, private investigator, to find her. A note from the missing woman warns her husband not to call in the police, saying she "hoped to come back."

CHAPTER II.—Mrs. White is younger than her husband, and his devotion has been the talk of New York. Her leaving him is unexplainable. She is known to have with her a remarkable jewel, the "Medusa's Head," but her maid, Coggeshall, thinks she had little else of value. Glaenzer and Motherwell consider the idea of kidnaping, but there has been no demand for ransom.

CHAPTER III.—It is found that Mrs. White has all her jewelry with her. Coggeshall talks mysteriously of her mistress being "worried," but insists she knows nothing of her whereabouts.

CHAPTER IV.—Through an a vertisement Motherwell secures t Medusa's head, which, he is told, "old woman" had thrown out of cab. From the finder he gets a clew cab. From the finder he gets a clew which sends him to the office of Doctor Wentzel, consulting chemist. Wentzel is away, but from a clerk Motherwell secures a package which he recognizes as coming from the White home. In it are all Mrs. White's jewels. Glaenzer is convinced Mrs. White has left her husband for another man.

Sitting an hour later in his club in front of a chop and a baked apple he was called to the telephone booth and surprised to find himself talking to Mr. Glaenzer himself. No, he had not gone to his old friend, who had begged him to stay in New York. The doctor was with him, and a nurse. Had Mr. Motherwell any further ideas as to the business they had been discussing?

Mr. Motherwell had, and would send Mr. Wells around to see him shortly.

And soon the young man with his bag and shell-rimmed spectacles was in the library of Mr. Glaenzer's city house, and the torn box was on Mr. Glaenzer's knees, and the Medusa in his olive hand.

"You know, you're rather extraordinary, Motherwell!" said the jewel-

"Only lucky, sir," the young man answered frankly, "really! A child would have followed up that ad in the Herald. The rest just broke my

"I was told that things often broke your way," said Mr. Glaenzer. "It seems they do. Who is this Wentzel?"

"Perfectly all right, sir, as far as I can find. He's a Swiss. Alsatian. rubies flaming on his trouser leg. Stands very high. He's a member of the Chemical Engineers club and has lectured at Columbia. Has a gasped. laboratory in Jersey. They've got his whole record."

"You're sure she went there?" tied up, sir. The paper fits absolutely. I think she wrote it there.' "And left this for Coggeshall?"

"Probably. Only she seemed to want a message, not a package. Didn't even take it."

"You think she was 'Mrs. Gray'?" Motherwell shrugged. "Maybe. But-who is the older woman? She's the one we want, sir. She didn't get enough pay, you see. And she was alone. Mrs. White was with some one some one who was hurrying her."

"And telling her what to say, you think?" "Absolutely, sir. And making her

"You still stick to that, don't you?"

"Yes, sir, I do."

"And yet, Motherwell, what was the hurry? The jewels were all out of the way, before; a very quiet, plain dress was arranged; a taxicab was called, not to use her own car. What is there sudden in all that?"

"Something turned up," said Motherwell. "Or somebody," said the jeweler.

Motherwell turned on him impatiently. "There you are, sir!" he cried,

"there you are! You see, you've got this all clear in your mind-I know you can't help it, but you have. And you can't really think, you see. You've got a complete picture." "What do you mean?" the older man asked shortly. Motherwell sighed impatiently.

"See here," he said. "Here's a girl. Married at what-twenty-two -twenty-one? That's near enough. All accounted for since then, and, perhaps, from when she got to Paris. Perhaps before. But a lot can happen to a girl before she's twenty-one. Suppose it's happened, thing going her way. And thenthe old story. It turns up. Or, of course, he turns up. A lover? Perhaps. A husband? Maybe. Maybe she thought he was dead. Maybein prison. Oh, yes-it happens, you now!

"Now, in that case, it's blackmail, or it's just plain principle-principle and conscience—or it's sheer funk. Of course, everything she has she'll give up. But maybe that's not enough. Maybe he just wants her, and there's no bribe at all."

The jeweler's mobile face stopped him. "I tell you, yes!" the young man cried, "men are that way about women! It's happened! Anyway, she went. And didn't want to. Because she hoped to come back. That is, according to you, she wants to eat her cake and have it, too! And all you want to know, now, is how much he'll take? Isn't that so?"

Glaenzer threw up his hanls. "I'm afraid it is," he said softly, "I'm afraid it is! And can you see any other picture, you extraordinary boy?" "I can't see any picture at all," said Motherwell slowly, "none at all There's one, the obvious one. And of course it may be the actual one You think Coggeshall knows all about it. Now, I don't. I think she knows something, a little, a lead, a clew. But she's afraid to tell it. Why? I think she had no idea that her mistress had gone. I think she hasn't any idea where she has gone, but believes she can find something out from Wentzel. I believe if she knew, she'd tell me.' Mr. Glaenzer shook his head.

"Well," he said heavily, "my head is too old a head to make a new picture, perhaps. But Clelia would never have parted willingly with this," and he stared, half bitterly, half delightedly, at the frozen smile on the wonderful lips encircled by the tiny tossing serpents. "Whoever took that from her, took the thing she loved the best, Motherwell."

He sighed. "I'll put this away," he added and opened the box.. Lifting out the heavy, opalescent half-globe of onyx, he shook it free from the tissue wrappings.

"I gave her that last Christmas." "See, the frame has he said.

man. "What's this?" he asked and shook it free.

A dark blue flashed from the paper, and as something slipped from his hand he seized another roll of it and shook it out. A three-strand pearl necklace fell on his lap. "What?" cried Motherwell, and falling on the rest they unrolled them: cool emerald and bleeding ruby, and lace work of platinum and spray of icy diamonds.

The great jeweler stared at him, pearls in his limp hand, a collar of "And I left them in the checkroom at the club!" the young man

"And she left them in a halfwrapped pasteboard box, on an office table!" said Mr. Glaenzer slow-"Here's the onyx thing Coggeshall ly. "Poor Crandall! My poor old boy!"

CHAPTER V

A T TWENTY minutes after six, a slim young man on a side-car motorcycle chugged up to the front entrance of Brucca's, parked his machine around the corner, and hailed a lounging, lanky boy to watch it for him.

"No nonsense, now," he said, "no fussing with her, mind! And give me the horn five times if he, or anybody like him, gets out ahead of

"Yes, sir. I'll look after it all right, sir. Thank you, sir." The young man strolled into the restaurant and peered about among the tables

Dissatisfied, apparently, he returned to the street, and lounged about near the entrance. At six twenty-five, a stocky little German-American with a sandy mustache hurried in, and the cyclist entered a' moment after. "Anybody for Hunter, yet?" he asked the head waiter.

"No, sir, would you want a table?" "If Doctor Schaffner is wanted, I am in the corner," the sandy mus-"Schaffnertache interrupted.

don't forget." The cyclist, refusing several tables in the center of the room, ended by sitting next to the sandy mustache, his back turned squarely on him. Slipping out of his heavy coat, he pulled a newspaper from his pocket and began to read. "If anybody's for Hunter, I'm here," he said loudly. "I'll order when my friend comes."

Doctor Schaffner drummed impatiently on the table, and ordered cigarettes.

After a little he dashed out to the entrance again, returning triumphantly with a tall, dark man.

"You see," he explained as they seated themselves, "I have so little time. Have you any good news for me? Could you get any?"

"It's my belief, doctor, there's not a gram in the country-not a centigram," the dark man replied.

"I wired to Pittsburgh, and they referred me to Baltimore, butnothing doing. You might as well ask for radium-"

"Ach! Radium! I can get all the radium I want!" fumed the little man. "What a country! What a country!"

He played with the menu. "Bring me some ham and eggs," the cyclist commanded loudly, "I can't wait any longer."

The two lowered their voices and the cyclist shifted his shoulders slightly but gained little by it.

"He's nearly crazy-it's incomprehensible—in-com-pre-hen-si-ble!" the German's voice emerged in bursts. 'After all these years-to have come on us so suddenly-no warning-not a hint!"

The other murmured uninteligibly. "It's not the money-we would give it all back-my G-d, Hennike, she keeps offering-"

Again the murmur. "It's the reputation! His reputation! What is a settled income, even, to that-for him! And the awkwardness-du Liebe, see what she threatens! And she means it, too. Of course, death, that is all very well. That is easy. But where does it leave us?" The dark man talked for some time. "And so I say!" the doctor cried. 'So I tell him. These things cannot be done! Simply not. He is as crazy as she is. I am sorryit is awful. But—there are limits to human power, Hennike. It will have to be explained. It will have to come some time, I suppose? After all—a person's death is his own affair. But if we are not careful, it will be ours!"

Silence, and hasty eating. "You couldn't possibly get White even now?" the dark man asked. Sandy mustache cackled into irrepressible nervous laughter. "White?" he mimicked, White! That's good! Man, if you could get White, it would be worth a million to us—a million. He'd make his fortune. Do you suppose he hasn't tried?"

More eating. "I have to telephone at quarter past seven." Schaffner began suddenly. "I'm getting some one out there. We've only an old woman there, you know, and she's worn out. I'll be back."

The cyclist beckoned his waiter and paid quickly.

"Is there a telephone booth here?" he inquired, and made his way to the front of the restaurant. When Schaffner slipped into the not very long!" The young man made a sympathetic little noise in his throat.

"I asked if he wanted to see you, and he said no. As a matter of fact, he has nothing to tell us. He says she was particularly bright and cheery-a little nervous, perhaps, and changeable, but very bright."

"Coggeshall admits she's been worried for a month." "So you said. I told him that. He's not very fond of Coggeshall, By Edson R. Waite, but is quite sure she's devoted to Mrs. White. You think you'll go out

"You think she didn't love him, then?"

She started nervously and caught his eye for a moment, then averted her own. "Oh." she said.

Stop Codling Moth With Another Spray

Warnings for the spray to be applied to control the final brood of codling moth on Michigan apples are being sent to many counties by the entomology department at Michigan State College.

The date upon which this spray is to be applied is very important as the protective poison coat has larvae enter the apple. spray cannot be used on summer or early fall varieties of apples.

For late fall or winter apples which are not to be washed before used as food, the spray should be 2 pounds of arsenate of lead in 100 gallons of water. This should be the final arsenical spray on fruit which is not to be washed.

Where apples will go through a washer, 3 pounds of arsenate of lead can be used and the spray can be repeated once or more.

Dilute lime sulphur may be used with either strength of spray or it can be omitted at the option of the orchard owner.

Dates recommended for the application of this spray in the different counties are: July 25, Cass; July 26, Berrien, St. Joseph, Lenawee and Monroe; July 27, Branch, Hillsdale, Calhoun, Jackson, Washtenaw and Wayne; July 28, Van Buren, Kalamazoo, Barry, Eaton, Ingham, Livingston, Oakland, Macomb, and Kent; July 29, Allegan, Ottawa, Ionia, Clinton, Shiawassee, Genesee, Lapeer, and St. Clair; July 30, Muskegon, Montcalm, Gratiot and Saginaw.

Rise in Farm Products Hailed

(Detroit News)

Prospects of improved purchasng power in the agricultural disricts because of the recent steady rise in livestock prices and general indication of favorable harvests furnished the most important business factor of the week. Beginning two months ago livestock prices nave displayed a steady upward trend with gains becoming more pronounced in the last few weeks. Although hogs have been in the spotlight, cattle and other livestock for food have shown substantial gains. The livestock situation is said to be the biggest ray of hope the farmers of the country have

Frown on County's Cut for Services

Members of the Tuscola County Medical Society decided at a meeting Monday evening at Caro Community Hospital, that $2,500 is insufficient pay for their services in caring for the indigents of the county. At the June session of the board of supervisors, a resolution was adopted fixing $2,500 as the total amount which the county would pay annually for physicians services in caring for the poor.

About 20 physicians were present at the meeting, which was in charge of Dr. C. N. Race, president. The president produced figures regarding the costs, or rather the amounts paid physicians in one year for caring for indigents. The figures were taken from records in the office of the county clerk, President Race said, and were as
