

YOUNG JUDGES AT THE FAIR

Former Club Boys Award Prizes on Live Stock Exhibits.

A unique feature at the Cass City Fair this week is the youthful appearance of the live stock judges. Though young in years, these officials have had valuable experience in that they have been members of the Cass City Live Stock Club and have watched for several years the work of well known judges at the state fair. Their decisions will undoubtedly be taken with as much satisfaction as those at the Detroit fair. Clarence Merchant is judging the dairy cattle; Jim Milligan the beef cattle; and Chas. Bigelow, the sheep.

Members of the 4-H clubs are showing fine exhibits at the fair this week in Holstein, Jersey, Ayreshire, Shorthorn, Hereford and Aberdeen Angus cattle, Spotted Poland China, Chester White and Berkshire swine, and Shropshire, Oxford and Southdown sheep.

The fair opened Wednesday morning, and like many opening days in seasons past, the first day crowd was small. Officers were looking forward to larger crowds for Thursday and Friday.

The horse race program was eliminated this season for the first time. This was done in the interest of economy and every possible saving was effected by the management to make the fair expenses come within the receipts. The platform acts are said to be of a high class and ball games for the last two days will add to the features of the entertainment program.

"Who Killed Earl Wright?"

A dramatic trial, "Who Killed Earl Wright," is a reproduction of part of the actual trial of a young man in Iowa, for the murder of his best friend, while intoxicated, which will be enacted at the M. The following is the cast of characters:

NEW HOSPITAL IS DEDICATED

Governor Brucker Spoke at Ceremony at Wahjamega on Thursday.

Another step in the fight of science to curb the ravages of epilepsy was completed at Wahjamega on Thursday, Aug. 11, when the new receiving hospital at the Michigan Farm Colony for Epileptics was dedicated by Governor Wilbur M. Brucker to the use of humanity. The services were held at Murray hall, the community center at Wahjamega.

Following the invocation by Rev. H. I. Voelker, pastor of the Cass City Evangelical church, R. G. Ferguson, chairman of the state hospital commission, outlined the history of Wahjamega since the first cottage was built in 1914. Touching on the costs of state institutions, he said that the per capita costs of caring for the 14,000 patients in Michigan state hospitals had been reduced 10 cents a day since July 1.

Fred M. Butzel, Detroit, referred to the hospital as the actual center of research and regretted that it could not have been constructed closer to the University of Michigan. It was his hope, he said, that the officials of the hospital would cooperate with the research department of the university institution for the discovery of a cure for epilepsy.

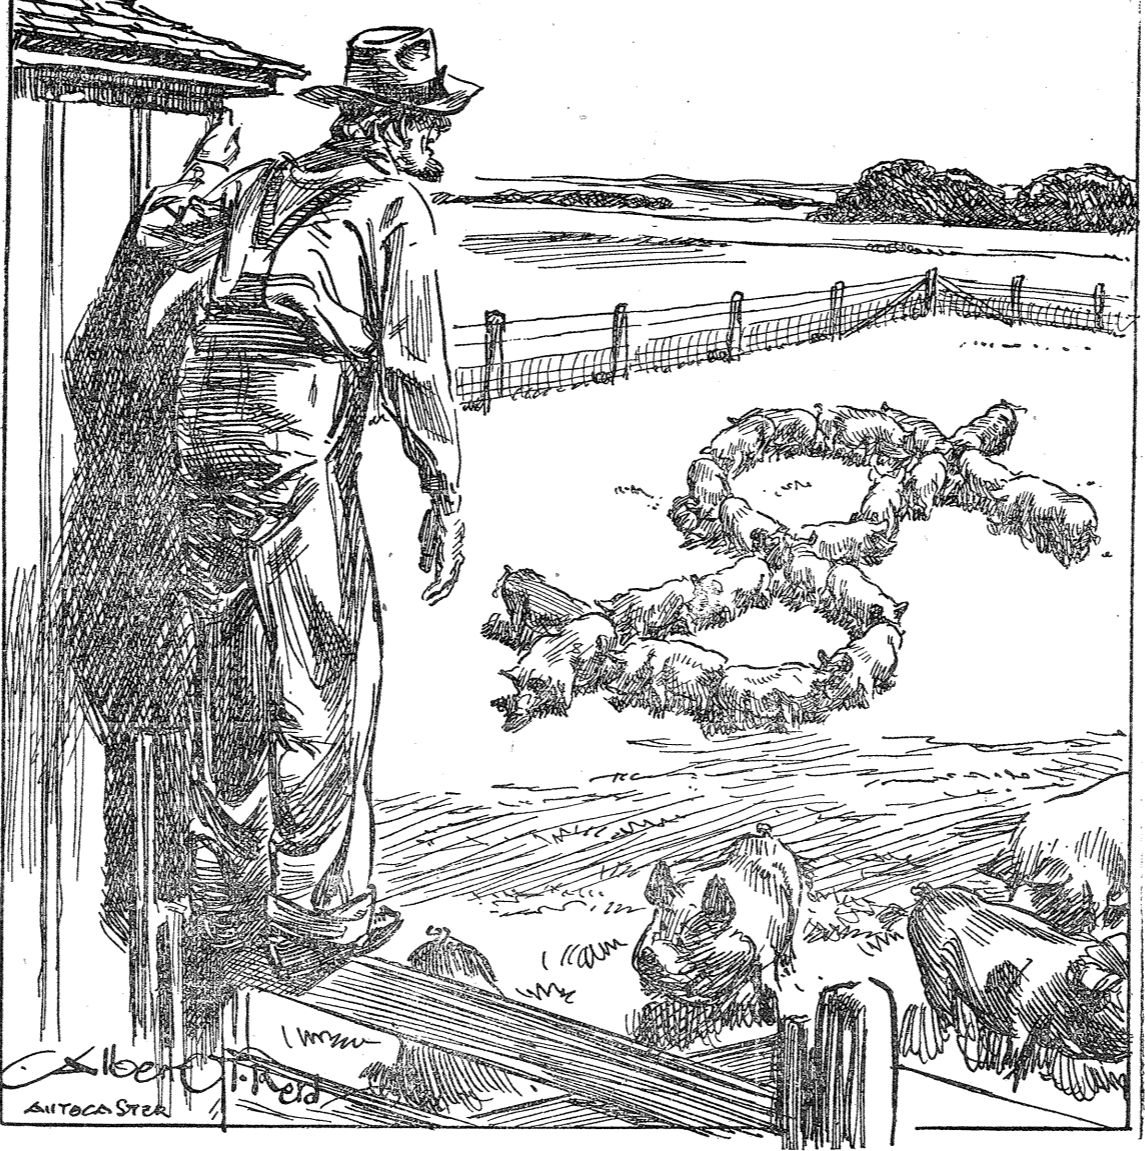

Dr. R. L. Dixon, medical superintendent of the Michigan Home and Training School at Lapeer, formerly superintendent of the Wahjamega institution until two years ago, described the dedication of the new hospital as an epoch in the history of social welfare.

Dr. Robert H. Hascall, head of the Wayne County Home and Training school at Northville, spoke on the program in place of William S. Carpenter, director of the state welfare department, who was delayed by motor trouble in reaching Wahjamega from Flint. Dr. Hascall described the duties of the state hospital commission, declaring that the commission was forced to act as a buffer between the institutions, the people and the state legislature whenever agitation was begun for the construction of a new hospital unit in the state.

The governor stressed three points in his talk dealing with the continual battle of science in searching for truths about little known diseases. Patience, persistence and patriotism is needed, he said.

Y Area Play Off at Vassar Aug. 30

The Saginaw-Tuscola Area Y. M. C. A. will sponsor at Vassar a play off to determine the champions in soft ball, horseshoe pitching and tennis, for the participating counties. Teams are expected from St. Charles, Chesaning, Cass City, Vassar, Birch Run, Fairgrove and Akron on Aug. 30. Play begins at 1:00 p. m. and will be completed by 5:30 p. m. There have been thirty soft ball teams and over four hundred and fifty people participating in the various leagues sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. this summer. Where there has been no soft ball league one team may be entered. It will be possible to play four games at one time at Vassar and there are two tennis courts as well as facilities for horseshoe pitching on the new high school athletic field.

Local committee chairmen are being appointed by the area secretary, T. A. Rowe, to have charge of the team from each community. L. D. Randall will be in charge of the Cass City soft ball players, Horace Pinney of the tennis players, and John May of the horseshoe pitchers.

FAMILY REUNIONS.

A reunion of the Hall families was held Sunday at Lake Pleasant. Fifty-seven enjoyed a delightful picnic dinner after which the time was spent in visiting and swimming. Officers elected were: President, Harold Hall of Imlay City; vice president, Hazen Patterson of Pontiac; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Hazen MacLachlan of Detroit. It was decided to hold the reunion in 1933 at the same place and on the same Sunday in August.

Thirty-eight members of the Chambers family attended the annual reunion held Sunday at the John Paul farm, south of Cass City, where Miss Rosella Chambd's makes her home. Relatives were present from Saginaw, Pontiac, Orion, Richmond, Flint and Cass City. The oldest person present was Robt. Craig, who is 77 years old, and the youngest was the four weeks old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Williams of Flint. A dinner was served at noon and various games enjoyed.

Several from Cass City attended the Wright-Rondo reunion at Bay Port Sunday when 128 relatives met to spend the day. A short business meeting was held at which time officers were elected and it was decided to hold the next year's reunion on the same day and at the same place.

NEWS OF THE NEARBY TOWNS

Happenings Here and There Garnered from the Chronicle's Exchanges.

Mrs. Fedilia Weaver, 94, widow of R. S. Weaver, pioneer farmer and merchant at the time when Watrousville was the largest village in Tuscola county, died at her home in that village Friday. Mrs. Weaver, who had been ill three months, had lived at Watrousville since she was a child. Funeral services were held Sunday. Survivors include four sons and one daughter.

Frank D. Fitzgerald, secretary of state, speaking before the weekly meeting of the Bad Axe Community club held at the Irwin House, stated that three miles will be paved on M-29 near Port Austin and the remainder of the route to Oak Beach graded this year. Right of way difficulties delaying the construction of the road were settled last week when the route was changed to comply to demands of landowners.

William H. Sparling, County School Commissioner, reports that 22 graduates of the Huron County Normal so far have not been engaged to teach this year.

A doll buggy parade will be one of the features in the Pigeon home coming celebration. Little girls are registering for the event at the millinery store of Mrs. Perle Hess. There will be a prize for every one that enters the contest.

Funeral services for Mrs. Wesley Medcalf, 40, wife of Wesley Medcalf, Caro oil and gas dealer, who died at her home Thursday night were held Sunday at the home. Surviving are her mother, Mrs. Ann Adams, one brother, Daniel Adams, both of Caro, and one son, George Parker, Jackson.

Rev. Frank S. Henningway has been invited to return as pastor of the First Methodist church at Lapeer for his 15th year of service by the unanimous vote of his congregation. This minister's work has been of a civic as well as spiritual nature in Lapeer. Perhaps his greatest contribution to the city is radio station WMPC which he founded in December of 1926. This broadcasting project, known to its listeners as "The Gospel Radio Station," sends its programs to radio owners through Michigan and neighboring states.

The celebration will be held in Auslander's grove and there will be a basket dinner at noon. A large number of former residents are expected to attend. Athletic sports will be a feature of the afternoon's program.

MICHIGAN CROP OUTLOOK GOOD

Better at This Time Than in Similar Period in 1930 or 1931.

That Michigan crop prospects on August 1 were considerably better than on the corresponding date in either 1930 or 1931 is reported by V. H. Church, U. S. agricultural statistician of the Michigan Cooperative Crop Reporting Service, in his monthly statement issued Aug. 11. While the western half of the Lower Peninsula, some southern counties, and local areas elsewhere were much too dry during the greater portion of July, good rains during the latter part of the month brought the July precipitation up to normal and restored crops in most sections to a good growing condition. Much of the wheat and rye in the southern half of the state has been threshed. The yield of wheat is around 23.5 bushels per acre, 2.5 bushels less than last year which broke all previous records, but 5.0 bushels above the ten-year average. The state's rye yield is estimated at 13.5 bushels, the same as last year and slightly above average.

Oats and barley are considerably below average; the former is expected to fall 2.5 bushels per acre and the latter, 6.0 bushels below last year as the result of heat and drought in June. The condition of corn varies greatly between fields and localities but the color is generally good and there are many fine fields throughout the state. Recent rains and moderate temperatures are favorable and the crop promises to be about two bushels above average. Should the remainder of the season be favorable, another two or three bushels per acre might easily be added to present estimates.

Field beans are looking exceptionally well in most of the principal producing counties, and the ample moisture and moderate temperature conditions at the present blooming stage are more favorable than they have been in any recent year. Present indications point to a yield of 11.5 bushels per acre.

Governor Praised Rotarians for High Type of Service

Emmet Richards of Alpena, governor of the 23rd Rotary district, appeared as the speaker at the Rotary Club luncheon Tuesday noon and in his address told of the far-reaching possibilities for peace and international understanding exerted through the influence of Rotary clubs of many nations.

Governor Richards complimented President S. B. Young and members of the local club on the high type of community service rendered by the Cass City club.

Van P. Philp of Bad Axe, candidate for the Democratic nomination for congressman, will speak before the club next Tuesday, and the week following the speaker will be Congressman Wolcott of Port Huron.

Four Teachers Are Principals in Two of Season's Nuptial Events

Andrews-Bailey.

Reed-Niergarth.

One of the loveliest of the season's weddings was that of Monday, August 15, in Deer Park United church at Toronto, Ontario, when Miss Gwendolyn B. Andrews, daughter of Mrs. A. T. Mundy of Toronto, became the bride of Darwin L. Bailey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Bailey of Cass City.

The ceremony was performed at 3:00 p. m. by Rev. Elgin Turnbull in the presence of the immediate families and a few relatives.

Miss Andrews was a charming bride in her gown of matelot blue transparent velvet with close fitting hat to match. She carried an arm bouquet of butterfly rosebuds and lilies-of-the-valley. She was given in marriage by her stepfather, Mr. A. T. Mundy.

Miss Mary Marjorie Andrews of Albion, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, wore pumice grey satin with hat to match and carried yellow roses. Mr. Edwin James Griffin of Albion attended Mr. Bailey as best man. Miss Edith Andrews played Lohengrin's Wedding March.

Immediately after the ceremony at the church, a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother and a dinner served. The rooms were beautifully decorated in an array of summer flowers and the table with large bowls of rosebuds and white flowers.

Companies That Increased Ads Did Well in 1931 says A. N. P. A.

Comparative earnings of twenty-five companies that maintained or increased newspaper advertising in 1931 and twenty-five companies in corresponding trade groups that decreased their newspaper advertising show that the net earnings of the year for the former group were only seven per cent below the year preceding, while the earnings of the latter group dropped seventy-three per cent, according to a study made by the bureau of advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association.

The study shows that earnings of many companies have been maintained or increased by consistent newspaper advertising, and that several concerns have reached new highs during the depression through the ability to concentrate on profitable markets and realize immediate sales with newspaper advertising.

Of four leading tobacco manufacturers who increased newspaper advertising in 1931, three showed an increase in earnings, and one a slight decline from the high net of the year preceding. Aggregate expenditures of these four companies in newspaper advertising increased by thirty per cent, from $20,000,000 in 1930 to $26,000,000 in 1931, while aggregate earnings increased from $105,200,000 to $111,300,000.

On the other hand, the bureau report points out that four tobacco companies that decreased their aggregate investment in newspaper space in 1931 showed a forty-five per cent decline in combined net earnings.

New products, successfully promoted in newspapers, have helped to expand the sales of many companies, the survey shows. One drug concern that increased its newspaper expenditures from $200,000 to $300,000 and popularized two new products in 1931, reported the best year in its history. "Not only," states the report, "did sales of the new product help to increase net earnings, but sales of the company's regular brands were also increased by 3.5 per cent."

A review of the opening months of 1932 shows that many national advertisers are making a good start with increased newspaper budgets.

...writes of "THE MASTER EXECUTIVE"

Supplying a week-to-week inspiration for the heavy-burdened who will find every human trial paralleled in the experiences of "The Man Nobody Knows."

THE ETERNAL MIRACLE.

We are quite unmindful of chronology in writing this story. We are not bound by the familiar outline which begins with the song of the angels at Bethlehem and ends with the weeping of the women at the cross.

We shall thread our way back and forth through the rich variety of Jesus' life, picking up this incident and that bit of conversation, this dramatic contact and that audacious decision, and bringing them together as best to illustrate our purpose. For that purpose is not to write a biography but to paint a portrait. We pass quickly over 30 years of Jesus' life, noting only that somehow, somewhere there occurred in those years the eternal miracle—the awakening of the inner consciousness of power. The eternal miracle!

In New York one day a luncheon was tendered by a gathering of distinguished gentlemen to David Lloyd George. There were perhaps 200 at the tables. The food was good and the speeches were impressive. But what stirred one's imagination was a study of the men at the speakers' table. There they were—some of the most influential citizens of the present-day world; and who were they?

At one end of the table an international financier—the son of a poor country parson. Beside him a great newspaper proprietor—he came from a tiny town in Maine and landed in New York with less than a hundred dollars. A little farther along the president of a world-wide press association—a copy boy in a country newspaper office. And, in the center, the boy who grew up in the poverty of an obscure Welsh village, and became the commanding statesman of the British Empire in the greatest crisis of history.

When and how and where did the eternal miracle occur in the lives of those men? At what hour, in the morning, in the afternoon, in the long quiet evenings, did the audacious thought enter the mind of each of them that he was larger than the limits of a country town, that his life might be bigger than his father's?

Likewise, when did the thought come to Jesus? Was it one morning when he stood at the carpenter's bench, the sun streaming in across the hills? Was it late in the night, after the family had retired, and he had slipped out to walk and wonder under the stars? Nobody knows. All we can be sure of is this—that the consciousness of his divinity must have come to him in a time of solitude, of awe in the presence of Nature.

The western hemisphere has been fertile in material progress, but the great religions have all come out of the East. The deserts are a symbol of the infinite; the vast spaces that divide men from the stars fill the human soul with wonder. Somewhere, at some unforgettable hour, the daring filled Jesus' heart. He knew that he was bigger than Nazareth. Copyright Bobbs-Merrill Co.

by the Oil and Gas Journal of Tulsa, Oklahoma.

During the first six months of this year, Michigan's wells produced 2,950,000 barrels, most of which came from the recently developed field in Midland County. During a similar period in 1931, 1,511,000 barrels were produced.

While Michigan completed fewer wells from January to July of this year, production far exceeded that recorded for Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio, and eastern fields. Sixty-six wells were completed during the first half of the year with an initial production of 41,655 barrels and an average initial production of 1,125.81 barrels a day.

Optimism in Michigan's oil fields is not only reflected by the high production records for the first half of the year, according to the report, but is being gained through a slow but certain rise in the prices paid for crude oil. The price is now the highest in more than a year. January 1, oil producers in Midland County were receiving 55c a barrel. By the middle of May it had jumped to 65c. July 1, it was 75c and by the end of the month it had risen to 85c.

"The Midland Field in Michigan was one of the most interesting and prolific of the new fields recently developed," the Journal report says. "Out of 66 wells completed in Michigan in the first half of the year, 44 were in Midland County and of these, 33 were oil wells averaging 1,250 barrels per well in initial production. Some of the wells in the field yielded as high as 3,000 barrels the first 24 hours. The field was under curtailment all of the first half of the year, in line with the general policy of conservation of oil in flush pools in the United States."

PRINTED SILKS IN LEAD FOR SUMMER

Designs Especially Lovely This Season

Printed silks are especially lovely this year, but need the simplest of cut and some small additions of plain colors to enhance the pattern. Spots were the foremost among the printed designs, and flowered and sprigged fabrics have joined them.

A novel effect arises from the combination of materials of the same pattern in different colors—for example, a dress of navy blue sprigged with the same green sprigs on it, and with an undercape of green un-patterned material, which makes all the difference between a bewildering and a pleasing dress.

A plain dress of spotted silk is completely transformed by a little coattee with epaulettes, made of flannel the same color as the spots.

For evening materials with very little sheen are being used, and to meet this demand, there are a number of fabrics in extremely fine wool. Bright surfaced materials are used in dark shades only; and especially in the new shade called "aubergine," which is a purplish brown shade, reminiscent of the dark hollyhock.

Contribute Service to Welfare Workers

A movement for all engaged in home economics extension work or interested in it to contribute service to the welfare groups in their community is being backed by the state advisory council, under the direction of Miss Edna V. Smith, state leader of home demonstration agents and chairman of the committee.

The service will be contributed by means of clothing clinics and through supervising the canning of surplus garden products. The council at its last meeting also voted to recommend that home economics groups cooperate with the better home movement in all counties possible.

The advisability of an executive committee in each county carrying on home economics extension work was favorably discussed by the group. The purpose of the committees will be to divide the responsibility of the work equally each member to be placed in charge of certain definite phases of the work. There will be further discussion of the project in the various counties under Miss Smith's direction.

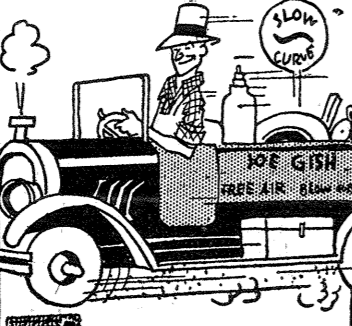

Attention is to be directed to the recently proposed scholarship fund which the committee plans to sponsor, so that the fund will be available for use next year.

The council is comprised of seven members and includes representatives from the various districts in which home economics extension work is carried on. The purpose of its organization was to assist Miss Smith in the furtherance of extension work and interests in the state. There are two regular meetings of the council each year, with as many additional as the chairman considers necessary.

CHIFFON BLOUSE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Women of discriminating taste who ever will regard the suit as the ideal costume for daytime wear welcome the innovation which has brought into fashion for these summer days the blouse which is made of sheerest all-silk chiffon printed in a tone to match the color of the suit. Smartest prints for this purpose pattern a single color on a white or eggshell background, that is, with a navy suit the print is brown on eggshell and so on. The print which fashions the blouse pictured is one of the newest types, which accounts for the stripe effect suggested in its motif, for in Paris as well as here, stripes are the rage. Note the clever twin belt which simulates a high waistline which is in keeping with the latest style dictates. The soft-tipped bows also reflect a significant style trend. The wee sketch shows the blouse as it appears when topped with the suit-jacket.

FLASHES FROM PARIS

Black-and-white gains for formal occasions.

Fashion points to flower-printed satin for formal gowns.

Shallow crowns and versatile brims bring in era of new "lines."

The beltless princess silhouette gains in favor.

The new direttore coiffure sponsored in Paris calls for "bangs."

Girdles either separate or encased in the dress widen into corselet effects.

Covered shoulders and low-cut backs feature in evening modes.

Style Dictates Cotton for the Summer Frock

Fashionable summer frocks will be of cotton, undoubtedly the smartest fabric for sports dresses, day-time dresses, beach clothes, for garden parties, and even evening wear. Rough weaves, lace effects, nubby meshes, printed colorful volles, and cotton laces will be seen everywhere from dawn till dusk.

Capes

Formal afternoon and informal evening dresses of chiffon have capes reaching to the elbow, by way of sleeves, that are edged with thick ruches of chiffon flowers.

The Choice in Life

There is a solemn choice in life. Life and death, light and darkness, truth and lies, are set before us. At every instant the cry comes for us to choose one or the other, and the choice of one involves the putting away of the other. And we must choose. That is one of the certainties of life.—Stopford A. Brooke.

HAT AND SCARF ALIKE By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Polka dots continue to flourish in the mode. Their latest move is to invade the realm of millinery, especially in the sports section where hat-and-scarf sets of dotted fabrics pose as a chief attraction. The dots are either white on a dark background or the order is reversed. Navy and white, brown and beige, red and white or green with white are outstanding combinations. Either the beret or the brimmed hat of polka-dot material is good style and the scarf is emphasized because unusual importance is attached not only to the scarf itself but particularly to smart and original ways of wearing it.

Beige Bags

A fashion that as yet is still "a fashion" is the beige bag. It may be velvet, calf, that new suede-like leather; it may be pin seal or cross grain calf or it may be the finest sharkskin, but it is always chic.

Meaning of "Leviathan"

Leviathan is a Hebrew word which, with praiseworthy caution the translators left in the original in our Authorized Version of the Bible. One root of the word undoubtedly means jointed, and the whole noun conveys the meaning of a creeping serpent-like animal.

"Rest-Cures"

Dr. W. S. Weir Mitchell is credited with the idea of the "rest-cure." As early as 1875 he advocated a rest-cure for cases of nervous prostration and conditions characterized by poor blood and lack of muscular and nervous tone.

World's Greatest Canyon

The Grand canyon proper begins shortly after the Colorado river enters the state of Arizona and is entirely within this state. It has a length of over 100 miles. In some places, as at the little town of Grand Canyon, where the well-known resort is, the canyon is fully 15 miles broad from rim to rim.

Lost 20 Lbs. of Fat in Just 4 Weeks

Mrs. Mae West of St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I'm only 28 years old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 lbs. I also have more energy and furthermore I've never had a hungry moment." Fat folks should take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—it's the SAFE, harmless way to reduce as tens of thousands of men and women know. For your health's sake ask for and get Kruschen at any drug store—the cost for a bottle that lasts 4 weeks is but a trifle and if after the first bottle you are not joyfully satisfied with results—money back.—Advertisement 1-1.

Farms for Sale

Opportunities like the present for a man to start farming only come once in a life time. It has been a great many years since one could buy farms and stock them as cheaply as he can today.

We have eighty acres one mile north of New Greenleaf with good house, barn and chicken-coop. The Federal Land Bank once offered to loan $4,000 on this farm. We offer the farm for sale at $3,200.

We have 160 acres of land, one mile east and one mile north of Bad Axe. The land is unusually good; the buildings are unusually large—two barns; the farm has many weeds on it and the buildings need fixing up. It will take some work and money to fix the place up, but it is a farm that is well worth $12,000 when fixed up. We offer it for $5,000.

Lace Gown With a Tailored Look

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SOMEHOW at the mention of a lace gown it seems the natural thing to vision a sort of fluffy-ruffle affair which is prettily and utterly feminine down to the last detail. Well, it may be all that, and many adorable types are filmy and fanciful as ever, for the lace gown in any and every interpretation remains the idol of fashion.

However, there has crept into the mode a feeling for clothes which have a tailored look. The part of the story which is real "news" is that this tailored-mindedness extends to evening and dinner gowns to such an extent that designers take keen delight in tailoring the sheerest of chiffons, and the latest member to yield to the tailored influence is lace.

One of the outstanding features of the tailored effects which give distinction to the evening modes is the intricate seaming such as dress-makers years ago would hesitate to attempt in handling laces and thin gauzy materials. Note how the art of seaming has been brought to a point of perfection in the fashioning of the handsome lace dinner gown pictured to the left. Here you have a little jacket which effects, by means of seaming—and seaming, too, for that matter—a very high line, but a moment later contrives a medium waistline. A priceless piece of compromise this for when the fashion news came along that the 1932 waistline would be high we sighed heavily for the many women who find high waistlines most unflattering. This indeed is a frock desirable not only for the woman who has a perfect figure but is an excellent model for the woman who has to cross off potatoes, puddings and pies from her menu.

The handsome and new-this-year dune lace of which this gown is made is, as you see, particularly adaptable to tailored treatment. Both Ireland and Venice have had a hand in designing this dune lace and you will find, as the season advances, that the smartest laces belong exclusively neither to the Emerald Isle or to the City of Islands—but to both.

A dinner gown that makes no pretense of being essentially either for debutant or dowager, but is really a gown for all ages, is worn by the lady seated. It has a pleasing low back artfully trimmed with the cut-out edging of the soft dune lace. Here also seaming, this time in diagonal movement, is employed thus molding the gown to the figure in those snug-fitting lines which are so universal in fashion's realm this season. One can imagine the effectiveness of a lace gown such as this in wine red or Van Dyke brown which is one of the very new names on the color card or perhaps in a smart navy blue—in fact in any of the dark colorings which have entered the evening mode.

The call for classic gowns of slender silhouette made very simply of lace such as pictured is being heard more and more as summer advances. For afternoon wear the pastel shades are very much liked and usually there is a matching jacket.

SUMMER HATS ARE GAY AND COLORFUL

The hats of this year are enough to lift anybody's spirits. Maybe it's to take our minds off our troubles that they are so defiantly gay, so casually frivolous.

For street and sports wear this summer, the little brimmed vagabond straw—of millan, leghorn, rough straws and Panama—are going to be away out in front. And they ought to be.

They're so smart and practical and tailored, with their impudent little dips over the right eye, their necktie-ribbon bands, their simplicity.

One of the most popular straws for this kind of hat is exactly like that used in men's straws—rough and shiny and correct.

Newest Pajamas Follow Lines of Evening Dress

Ever since the first hostess pajamas came into town via the beach a few years ago, women have been discovering the joys of the pajama. The new 1932 version of the pajama is taking on disguises and appears as wholly appropriate for the woman who entertains in her own home.

The Paris version of the evening pajama sometimes looks like a pajama at the front but like a dress at the back. Sometimes its trouser lines are completely invisible. Many of the newer ones are so full at the hem that there is not the slightest suggestion of a divided skirt at all.

Collar of Old Dobbins Suggests New Fashion

Fashion has borrowed the design of Dobbins' collar for new spring frocks. Big, soft hoop collars of velvet or crepe falling halfway to the waist are worn with simple dark dresses.

Most of them are caught on one side with two large artificial flowers.

NEW ROUGH CREPE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

We are hearing so much in regard to navy blue and in fact of the whole range of blues, it seems only fair that a word be said in behalf of brown, for brown remains a great favorite with the smart set, especially touches of brown on light costumes. The ensemble in the picture adopts brown and orange for its color scheme. The frock which is made of one of the popular new rough-surfaced crepes is in burnt orange. It has a wide girde-belt of brown velveteen which sets a new high when it comes to waistlines. The large ball buttons are brown and the youthful jacket is of brown velveteen in the delightful light weight which is characteristic of this season's weaves.

The reproduction of the actual trial of a young man in Iowa, for the murder of his best friend, while intoxicated. Hear the clash of witnesses and attorneys. This trial will powerfully impress you. Come early. There is always difficulty in finding room enough to hold the crowds where this trial is presented. Hundreds are turned away.

11:00 a. m., "The Doctrine of the Lord."
 8:00 p. m., "The Gospel That Paul Preached."

The evening song service will be furnished by the young people from Shabbona. A full house is desired.
 The Bible school will sponsor an all-day picnic in Randall's Grove, Friday, Aug. 26. Everybody is invited, but we are particularly interested in having all the children in the surrounding neighborhood present. Prohibition Facts

THE BRITISH CRIME WAVE

By Dr. Thomas N. Carver
 Professor of Economics
 Harvard University

England, the home of law and order, is having its crime wave. There has been a veritable outbreak of smash and grab raids. They have increased 300 per cent in Greater London. They are carried on mainly by young criminals who make their getaway in automobiles. Moreover, these young desperadoes are ready and willing to use violence.

All sorts of reasons are given for this crime wave. The automobile, the depression, the breakdown of family discipline, and even the humane methods of dealing with criminals are all blamed. England does not have prohibition to blame for the conditions. She does, however, have very stringent regulations of the drink trade, such as high licenses, a reduction of the number of public houses. But an Englishman's sense of humor will not permit him to blame these regulations for the crime wave. American wets, however, are not thus handicapped. They have no difficulty in accounting not only for crime, but also for poverty and the depression, on the ground of prohibition.—Christian Science Monitor.

at present is attending the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich. He is principal of the high school at Cass City, Mich.

After a two weeks' motor trip through the north, Mr. and Mrs. Niergarth will return to Cass City, where they will be at home to friends after September 1.

Out of town guests present at the wedding were Virgil Logan, Battle Creek, Mich.; Grant Patterson, Cass City, Mich.; Miss Mildred Kriewall, of Bay City, Mich.; Miss Ernestine Manigold, of Snover, Mich., and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Kelly, of Cass City, Mich.

Mrs. Cynthia Reed gave a dinner Monday evening at the Old Stone House to members of the bridal party.

SHERIFF CALLED TO ARBITRATE DIFFERENCES

(Harbor Beach Times.)

An incident that amused the people about town last Saturday afternoon was the plight of one by the name of Hajjor, an oriental rug salesman, so he said, of Chicago.

It seems that in his travels through Detroit he found a woman who wanted to get a lift to Harbor Beach and as he was coming to this city he said, oke.

They arrived here Friday evening via auto. The next morning the auto was missing, by the time he got out of the feathers, and so was his passenger of the previous day.

At one o'clock that afternoon he found his late passenger and gentleman friend riding around town in his car. Mr. rug peddler waved them to the curb and the lady was asked to get out of the car as he wanted to return to the dynamic city and did not want her to think she had a return ticket. The gentleman friend, in question, did not have to receive an invitation to unload as he beat it in short order and was not seen the rest of the day.

But the aforementioned passenger failed to respond to the gentle hint and was sitting pretty, as they say.

The truth of the matter was she was so far gone from tipping the bottle, so it appeared, she would not have been able to walk ten feet, to say nothing of hoofing it back to the big town.

She absolutely refused to take the hint and the owner of the car sent in a call for the sheriff to see if he had any persuasive powers.

Under-sheriff Tucker arrived in a short time and he got the low-down from both parties. After much debating Mr. Hajjor was induced to take her back from whence she came and the last seen of them was from the lower end of Huron Avenue, South.

It is said that the woman is not a stranger to this city, having been here about two weeks ago.

MICHIGAN CROP OUTLOOK GOOD

per acre which, if realized, is not only above average but more than obtained in any other season since 1926. This would amount to a crop of 6,210,00 bushels or 3,726,000 bags, on the 540,000 acres planted this year. With a drastic cut in the acreage of Great Northern beans in the west, a moderate reduction in the acreage of pea beans in Michigan and other eastern states, and a prospective production of only 9,645,000 bags which is 24 per cent less than harvested last year, the 1932 situation would appear to be greatly improved for the Michigan bean industry.

Potato prospects range from poor to very good. There are many fine stands throughout the State which, under the present favorable moisture and temperature conditions, should produce a good setting of tubers and, if later weather conditions should likewise be favorable, an excellent yield. On the other hand, poor stands are in evidence in many sections. These are particularly numerous in the area within a radius of 40 miles around Cadillac, where poor stands predominate as a result of the prevalence of the disease known as yellow dwarf. The present outlook is for an average yield of 95 bushels per acre and a total production of 25,175,000 bushels as compared with 23,750,000 bushels in 1931. As the September weather is an important factor in the yield of late potatoes, the final out-turn will be greater or less than this figure to the extent that September weather departs from normal.

Sugar beets are in generally good condition, being 85 per cent of normal which is three points higher than on the same date last year and 3.6 points above the 10-year average. Stands are mostly good, the beets are growing thrifty and an excellent yield is in prospect.

The Michigan hay crop is of good quality and at least 17 per cent larger than that of 1931.

Fruit prospects, except for apples, are decidedly above the ten-year average. Winter apples, especially Baldwins and Spies, are generally light, while summer and fall varieties are more plentiful. Only 42 per cent of a full crop of all varieties is expected as compared with 76 per cent of a full crop last year. Peaches and pears promise 80 per cent of a full production in comparison with 90 per cent and 53 per cent respectively a year ago. The Michigan cherry crop proved to be of greater volume than expected earlier in the season being 67 per cent of a full yield. The present condition of grapes indicates 85 per cent of a full crop, a better prospect at this date than in any year since 1922.

Save Peach Trees by Simple Method

Injuries caused by the peach tree borer, which is the most serious insect enemy of Michigan peaches, could be entirely prevented if growers would use paradichlorobenzene to kill the borers in the trees, according to the department of entomology at Michigan State College.

The treatment is most effective if given about September 1 after the eggs of the borer have all hatched and while the weather is still warm enough to volatilize the chemical used to kill the insect. The presence of borers in the trees is indicated by exuding gum.

Trees less than four years old should not be treated. The average-sized four year old tree will require three-fourths of an ounce of the paradichlorobenzene, and larger trees will require a little more.

The crushed crystals of chemical should be placed in a ring around the tree and from one to three inches from the bark. Weeds and grass should be removed from about the base of the tree before the chemical is applied. Cover the paradichlorobenzene with a few shovelfuls of earth.

If the trees are on very heavy soil, the material should be taken from about the tree after three weeks, but this is not necessary on most of the lighter soils where peaches are commonly grown.

CHAPTER VII

MOTHERWELL lit a cigarette and stared at the empty chair in front of him, shaking his head, unconsciously. He had seen some strange sights, this young man, but never anything quite like this. Tragedy he could understand, comedy he could appreciate—but what was this? A grim little jest, perhaps—but there was a flavor of death in it, all the same. He smelt it in the air.

That strong sense of the infinite and bazaar in life, that realization of its wild possibilities of permutation and combination which had peculiarly thrilled him from his early boyhood, and led him into adventures like this, welled up fresh within him.

"D—n it," he muttered, "it's queer!"

It might have been an hour before he heard any sound in the house beside the soft, dull thud of the pump in the cellar. Then came a hurrying woman's step, and Coggeshall, strange because of her dark, flushed face and tight, pressed lips, ran past him into the room, returning with an armful of clothes.

"Hairpins! hairpins!" he heard her muttering to herself. "Lord, I must have hairpins!"

He caught her as she bustled out. "Is it all right?" he asked.

She looked at him stupidly, with an odd effect of trying to remember who he was.

"Just to think of it," she said slowly, "to think of it!"

She hurried down the hall and ten minutes passed.

As soon as he heard the sound of shuffling feet Motherwell threw away his cigarette, trod it carefully into ashes, stood up, and waited for them. They came back in the same order in which they left him; the slim, leaning woman between Schaffner and the maid, the professor walking behind. The two men looked positively cheerful; relief from the worst had cleared their drowsiness away. As for the woman, she was more like a life-size ivory statue than anything else Motherwell could imagine.

Her colorless face was set in soft waves of hair as white as the white silk fringe that dripped from the waist and shoulders of her dress, a sort of classic robe of creamy wrinkled crepe. Its texture was curiously like her skin, which, soft and fine as a child's, was at the same time delicately, amazingly wrinkled, from the "widow's peak" on her low forehead down to the base of her throat, where milky laces hid it. Her lips were barely pink, like the inner leaves of a tearose; her eyes, wide open and fixed far ahead of her, a pale hazel with not a hint of the color that he had seen in her portrait. She was like a snow woman, with milk instead of blood in her veins.

She stopped at sight of him and turned to Coggeshall.

"When did this doctor come?" she asked in a soft broken voice. "Have I seen him?"

"My name is Wells, Mrs. White," said Motherwell, stepping forward with a slight bow. "I came down to see if I could be of any use."

"Oh! And you brought Coggeshall?"

He bowed again.

"I am glad to see you looking so well," he ventured, meeting her eyes frankly.

Her lips quivered a little.

"I shall never look well," she answered simply. "You know that, Doctor Wells."

"Oh, madam, you're lovely!" Coggeshall cried bravely. "And all in white, like that!"

"It doesn't matter," she said quietly, "really. Never mind it, please. How many other things did you bring me, Coggeshall?"

"Only a few, madam, but you have everything at home, you know—"

She looked at the maid, smiling slightly, and at that smile the woman's eyes widened and filled with tears.

"Oh, Mrs. White! Oh, no!" she cried, and Motherwell, watching that pale, remote creature, felt as if a little cold wind had blown over his heart.

She passed into the room and sat in a low-backed chair. Her head in her hand, she seemed to slip away from them all into the deep gulch of her thoughts. . . . They watched her doubtfully.

But Motherwell roused himself and looked warningly at them.

"Can't you find some tea and—something to eat for Mrs. White?" he asked the maid. "I'm certain it would do her good, after this strain."

She nodded and hurried away. The two doctors glanced at each other, then at Motherwell, and stepped out, on a common impulse. He drew a chair near hers, and leaning forward, took her hand in his.

"Mrs. White," he said, "listen to me. I know what you are thinking, but you should not. Can't you pity that poor man, whose heart you are going to break? Can't you think of your husband?"

She smiled again, and again he felt that little chill.

"You don't understand, quite, Doctor Wells," she answered, and said no more.

"But I do," he persisted. "I do understand. It's you who don't understand. Just because you don't feel the love for him that he feels for you, you don't understand how you will hurt him. If you did—"

"If I did?" she interrupted, in that sweet quivering voice, "if I did? How foolish you are. I love him more than anybody and everything in the world put together! I would black his boots—if I could live near him. I would shovel the snow off his steps in winter—if he would be kind to me when he walked down them! Love him!"

She looked scornfully at the man in front of her.

"You couldn't understand," she said. "I love him too much to break his heart. Mine doesn't matter."

Motherwell studied her a moment. His eyes snapped with excitement. He drew his hand back with a careless movement.

"I—I didn't understand," he began. "You are right. I supposed, somehow—"

"Yes. Everybody did," she said gently. "But it wasn't true. He is the only thing in the world I have ever loved. And so I know—"

She stopped.

"Of course," said Motherwell slowly, eyeing her, "that is different. If you feel that way to him, it might be better not to see him, for he has changed a great deal. He's been ill, and that, and the anxiety about you, has aged him, I hear. It might be a shock to you—he was such a young-looking man."

She looked wonderingly at him.

"Ill?" she said. "Poor Cran! Yes, he would be."

Then her pale lips drew down scornfully.

"It is quite plain that you never loved anybody, Doctor Wells," she said. "A shock to me! And do you really think that I loved my husband for the way he looked? You must be a fool!"

Her voice was very quiet.

"I loved him for what he was," she said, "not for what he looked like!"

Motherwell rose and put a strong, browned hand on each of her shoulders.

"And did you never know that a man can feel the same?" he said sternly. "If you didn't, then it is time you learned, Mrs. White, for you are the fool!"

She could not grow paler, but her face seemed to turn cold and wan and her mouth drooped, as she stared at him.

"You—you—mean—"

"I mean that it's not your hair—it's not pink cheeks—it's not—good heavens, it's you he loves! It's you!"

She seemed not to breathe. Two large tears rolled down her cheeks, but her eyes never left his.

He shook her slightly.

"Lord!" he said sharply, "if I were a woman, I wouldn't dare insult a man so! I'd be ashamed—"

She shuddered a little, then dropped her face on his hand and cried. After a moment he leaned down to her.

"You'll go to him?" he said softly.

"I'll—I'll go—and see!" she whispered, sobbing.

Coggeshall's cup and spoon clinked in the hall and he beckoned her in.

"That's good," he said, appreciating her filled tray, "see that she takes plenty. And get a heavy coat from the doctor. We ought to be leaving soon. I'll do a little telephoning."

Buried in fur, she sat between them in the curtained car. Hanson and one of the other men disappeared and their chauffeur did not speak beyond a brief "Yes, sir," to his orders.

Motherwell talked easily, with comfortable pauses, during the journey; the two women made but brief answers. "Why did you frighten us so with those jewels?" he asked quietly. "Didn't you realize we would naturally suppose you had—"

would gone away with them?"

"Jewels?" she repeated vaguely. "Oh, yes! Why—I had them with me—I was taking them to Glen. I had only one key to the safe. I thought it would be better. I didn't mean to stay at the doctor's—"

Her voice sank.

"You shouldn't have thrown the Medusa away, you know," he said suddenly, after another silence.

"I threw it as far as I could," she answered quickly. "Into the mud! Under the wheels! A hideous, cruel thing!"

"And yet she was beautiful," he said quietly.

She caught her breath and looked up at him so touchingly that he found her hand and gave it an assuring, friendly grip.

When they drew up at the great portico of the hotel, she shrank back and would not or could not rise. Half lifted to her feet, however, she straightened herself and walked out and across the hall, barely touching the maid's offered arm. Down the long corridor they went and through a door at which Motherwell knocked, opening it himself.

No one was in the parlor of the suite and, motioning the woman to a sofa, he knocked on another door at the left. It was opened and he stood alone with Mr. Glaenzler.

To him the young man spoke rapidly for a moment, checking with a quick gesture his cry of incredulous amazement.

"I think you had better tell him very quickly," he said. "He mustn't be shocked—and hurt her."

Glaenzler passed through a further door and a low sound of murmuring talk followed his entrance. He came out before the young man had time to be impatient and seized his hands, shaking them heartily.

"I can't understand it," he muttered. "It simply doesn't seem credible, what you've told me! By and by, perhaps I shall—but what does it matter? Where is she?"

He followed Motherwell into the parlor, crossed quickly to where the white figure sat stiff, as if frozen there, and bending, kissed her lightly on each cheek.

"Thank God, you're back, Clelia," he said. "You've driven us nearly crazy, my dear. Why, you look like a marquisette at a fancy ball! Do you want to break our hearts over again?"

He smiled warmly at her. Not a muscle of his face betrayed him. But she did not smile back.

"I never broke yours, Glen," she answered hardly above a whisper. "I knew that, always."

She turned to Motherwell.

"Come," she said, taking his hand like a child, and they went in together, the jeweler behind them.

She walked a few steps into the room, and stood in the full afternoon sunlight. Her lips parted and she drew a deep breath to speak, but her husband cried out before she could begin. There was no such calmness as Glaenzler had shown; his whole face spoke his wonder and delight.

"Clelia!" he said. "Oh, Clelia! How beautiful you are!"

He opened his arms wide and with two long, smooth steps she was wrapped in them, kneeling by his chair, her hair against his cheek.

He pressed his hand tenderly against that soft white fleece.

"I am sorry that this should have happened, if it worried and frightened my dear," he said, and his voice trembled, "but why, why could you not let me know, so that I could help you?"

She raised her face and held it close to his, her hands against his shoulders.

"You haven't seen me, Cranny," she said, "look at me, now! I am forty-six years old—I am not what you have thought—I never have been."

He held her face in his hands and looked long at it.

"No, you are never what I thought," he said softly, "for you are always sweeter and more beautiful, my dear."

A slow, faint flush, like a tea-rose in autumn, grew in her cheek. She threw her arms round his neck and cried so gently that they hardly heard.

"And for your age," he went on, his voice shaken with love, "it gives me the one comfort you could not give before, my beautiful, and takes away my own terror that I could never tell you."

She drew back, staring at his moved face.

"Now we can grow old together, my dear!" he said.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

President Hoover Declares Himself for Change in Prohibition Amendment—Roosevelt Hears Mayor Walker's Defense—Sec. Stimson Angers Japan.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT HOOVER opened the campaign for his re-election with his acceptance speech, and told the nation that, in regard to the liquor question, he stood not exactly on the Republican platform but a considerable step ahead of it. He said the administration's efforts to enforce national prohibition had been of no avail, because the Eighteenth amendment itself was a failure except in states where the majority sentiment was actually dry. He declared he could not consent either to the restoration of the saloon or to the continuance of such grave abuses as the speakeasy and the bootlegger which flourish under the amendment. Therefore, he proposed such modification of the prohibition amendment as would return liquor control to the states under federal control that would guarantee the dry states federal aid in keeping out liquor and prevent the restoration of the saloon in the wet states.

In substance the position taken by Mr. Hoover on this prohibition problem is very close to that of Alfred E. Smith in 1928. It was warmly indorsed by the Republican senators who consented to talk about it, even by such veteran drys as Fess and Borah. The Republican press generally commended it, and Democratic newspapers praised the President for "bravery greater than that of his party platform."

The President's address of course covered practically all the subjects that appear in the Republican platform and was written with skill. In it he reiterated his stand for freedom in industry and commerce as opposed to radical and revolutionary proposals, for a protective tariff, for noncancellation of foreign debts, and pledged himself to work for restoration of prosperity.

The notification ceremony took place in Constitution hall and the speech was heard by 4,000 persons gathered there and by countless millions who listened in by radio. The affair was preceded by a garden party and buffet luncheon on the White House grounds, to which 700 men and women had been invited.

Former President Calvin Coolidge was not there because, as he said, he feared the trip would aggravate the hay fever from which he was suffering.

MAYOR JAMES WALKER of New York, appearing before Governor Roosevelt in the latter's office in Albany, made an impassioned plea for the right to face and question the witnesses who have accused him and whose testimony before the Seabury committee resulted in the demand that the governor remove him from office.

Mr. Roosevelt ruled that the mayor might present any witnesses or evidence that would contribute to the governor's examination of the case. He did not require the proof of Mr. Walker's guilt to be shown by witnesses, but he did go at once into a cross-examination of the mayor himself.

Mayor Walker's answers followed closely his previous defense as given in his formal answer to the Seabury charges and in his testimony before the legislative committee. He admitted taking the $26,000 gift from J. A. Sisto, banker interested in taxicab legislation, but denied he had given of his influence as mayor to obtain the legislation.

Answering the charge that he owned securities in a company doing business with the city, in violation of a state law, Walker asserted he knew nothing about its connection with city contracts.

In succeeding sessions of the hearing he continued along the same line, denying all charges of misconduct and defending the acts on which those charges were based.

JAPAN, continually on the defensive concerning her course in Manchuria, and extremely sensitive to criticism, whether direct or implied, has been aroused to great indignation by Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson in an address before the council on foreign relations. New York the cabinet officer asserted that consultation among signatory nations to mobilize "moral disapproval" of acts of aggression is implicit in the British-Kellogg treaty outlawing war and that a definite pact providing for such consultation is unnecessary. As an example, the secretary of state referred to the American protest to Japan against hostilities in China. Such a protest would have had far less weight, he pointed out, had it not been supported by "the entire group of civilized nations."

Later in his address Mr. Stimson said:

"As it stands, the only limitation to the broad covenant against war is the right of self-defense. This right is so inherent and universal that it was deemed unnecessary even to insert it expressly in the treaty. It exists in the case of the individual under domestic law, as well as in the case of the nation and its citizens under the law of nations. Its limits have been clearly defined by countless precedents.

"A nation which sought to mask imperialistic policy under the guise of the defense of its nationals would soon be unmasked. It could not long hope to confuse or mislead public opinion on a subject so well understood or in a world in which facts can be so easily ascertained and appraised as they can be under the journalistic conditions of today."

The Japanese foreign office took Mr. Stimson's remarks as an attack on Japan's acts in Manchuria and cabled the embassy in Washington for a detailed report of the speech. It was believed that formal protest might be made to the United States government.

ROY D. CHAPIN, the Detroit automobile manufacturer, was sworn in as secretary of commerce to succeed Robert P. Lamont, who resigned to become president of the American Iron and Steel institute. As he took office Mr. Chapin gave expression to his optimism, saying: "Naturally, like every other American, I am gratified by the unmistakably better tone that now prevails in our industries and marts of trade. Concerning the future trend, I will not be so bold as to venture prediction now, but one thing is certain—we must all exert ourselves to the utmost striving to strengthen all favorable factors and to make the inevitable turn come as soon and with as much security as possible."

Secretary Chapin is already encouraging the railroads to go ahead with repair and replacement work and finding money to help them do it; and in co-operation with Secretary of Labor Doak he is working on the plans for spreading employment by decreasing the individual hours of work.

FOR about twenty-four hours there was a spectacular attempt at revolution in Spain by the monarchists who hoped to restore the Bourbons to the throne. The movement was led by Gen. Jose Sanjurjo, known as "the lion of Morocco," and for a time he and his helpers were in control of Seville. But the republican government was apprised of his plans in advance and the revolt was speedily squelched mainly by the police. Sanjurjo himself was arrested as he fled from Seville and was taken to Madrid for trial by court-martial, and various others of the former king's military commanders also were apprehended. In Madrid there was little fighting when revolutionists sought to occupy government buildings.

The whole affair was a mixture of comedy and tragedy and the net result was the burning of many royalists clubs, homes and residences by the Republicans in several cities, and the prospect of death at the hands of firing squads for the royalist leaders. Former King Alfonso denied having any part in the uprising.

REWARD for his uniformly successful prosecutions of gangsters and politicians for evasion of the federal income tax has come to George E. Q. Johnson, United States attorney in Chicago. He has been appointed to the federal District bench by President Hoover, and probably will be confirmed by the senate in December with little opposition. As successor to Mr. Johnson, the President named Johnson's able assistant in the tax cases, Dwight H. Green, who has been solicitor for the bureau of internal revenue and has conducted many of the trials instituted by Johnson. Both the appointments were urged by Senators Glenn and Lewis of Illinois.

Johnson began his drive against hoodlums and crooked politicians in the fall of 1929, first indicting Ralph Capone and Terry Druggan and Frankie Lake. Other indictments followed, and trials, and Mr. Johnson was successful in sending the following persons to the penitentiary for evading income taxes: Al Capone, Ralph Capone, Druggan, Lake, Jack Guzik, Sam Guzik, Frank Nitti, former County Assessor Gene G. Oliver, and former State Representative Lawrence C. O'Brien. Christian P. Paschen, building commissioner in the last Republican Chicago municipal administration, is now under sentence, but has appealed his conviction.

CHANCELLOR VON PAPAN and his cabinet acted to stop terrorism among the political factions of Germany by decreeing the death penalty for all persons convicted of acts of political violence, including rioting, treason, arson, instigation of explosions or floods or damaging railways or railway equipment. Despite this rigorous action, the acts of violence did not cease. Adolf Hitler issued a proclamation to his storm troops to curb their disorderly enthusiasm.

Von Papan invited both Hitler's Nationalist Socialists and Hugenberg's Nationalists to share in the government which he will submit to the reichstag when it convenes August 30. But the monocoed chancellor is determined to keep the office of chancellor and to maintain the government on the "no-party" basis. The Hitlerites continue to claim full governmental control, one of their organs saying: "If we are not allowed to direct the government we will fight to the finish." It is the aged President, Paul von Hindenburg, who must make the final decision.

WHEN the field and track events of the Olympic games came to a close it was found the United States had won first place by a tremendous margin; Finland was second and Great Britain third. The climax of this part of the program was the marathon race, which was won by Juan Zabalza of Argentina in record-breaking time. The second week was given over to all kinds of events, mainly in the water, and Helene Madison, the premier woman swimmer of the United States, distinguished herself again by winning the 100 meters free-style race in the new Olympic time of 1:38. She was first in the fastest field of girl swimmers ever assembled, and every one of them beat the old Olympic record.

In other water events the flags of Japan, Holland, Australia and other nations were raised.

ALL the neutral nations of Central and South America joined with the United States in calling on Bolivia to lay down her arms and accept arbitration of the dispute with Paraguay over the Gran Chaco. They even set a definite time for such submission, but Bolivia's reply was not especially satisfactory. President Daniel Salamanca's government said it was willing to suspend hostilities pending arbitration, if Paraguay and the neutral powers would consent to the present positions in the Gran Chaco as the basis of negotiations. Instead of the position of the troops on June 1, as stipulated by Paraguay. After June 15 Bolivian patrols captured three Paraguayan outposts.

Facists in La Paz, Bolivia, who opposed war with Paraguay, were court-martialed and eight of them were condemned and shot.

GEN. CHANG KAI-SHEK, it appears likely, will be the supreme dictator of China. This results from the controversy between Wang Ching-wei, premier, and Marshal Chang Hsiao-liang, Peiping warlord. Chang refused to obey Wang's order to make war on the Japanese forces that were operating in Jehol province, and offered to resign. Soon after Wang and his entire cabinet submitted their resignations, the last to step out being Finance Minister T. V. Soong.

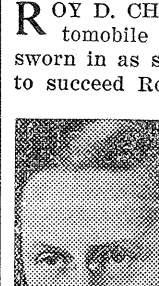

Chiang Kai-shek, unlike Wang, still thinks the Sino-Japanese dispute can be settled by direct negotiations and therefore refuses to take any warlike steps likely to antagonize Tokyo. Under the terms of the Chinese constitution, General Chiang as permanent chairman of the military council is untouchable and is in full control of the armies.

TWO Democratic senators were successful during the week in obtaining renominations. They were Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, key-noter in the recent national convention, who defeated former Senator George B. Martin and others; and Mrs. Hattie W. Caraway of Arkansas, the only woman member of the upper house. Mrs. Caraway had six male rivals for the nomination, but easily distanced them all.

By ED KRESSY

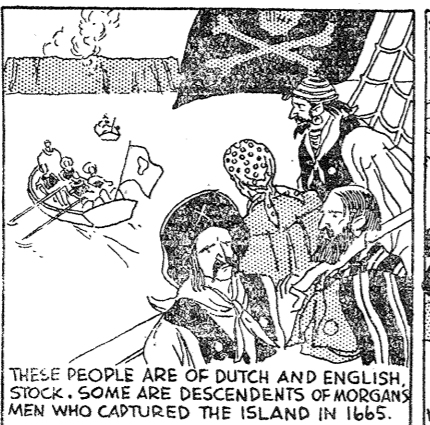

WELL—WE'VE BEEN UNDER WAY JUST TEN MINUTES. HERE'S SABA POKING UP 2000 FEET ABOVE SEA-LEVEL. THE VIRGIN ISLANDS ARE TO THE RIGHT...

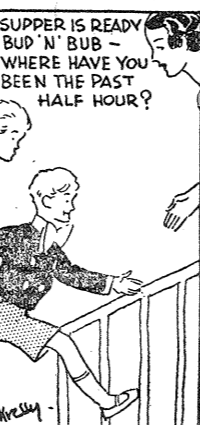

SABA IS AN EXTINCT VOLCANO—ABOUT 2000 PEOPLE INHABIT THE TOP OF THIS CONE. THE VILLAGE IS 1/2 MILES IN DIAMETER. A ROCK LEDGE 300 FEET HIGH FORMS A BOWL IN WHICH THE VILLAGE NESTLES.

THE HOUSES ARE PAINTED WHITE WITH RED ROOFS. BOAT BUILDING AT ONE TIME WAS CHIEF ACTIVITY. BOATS WERE LOWERED 2000 FEET TO THE SEA BY ROPES. NOW, HOWEVER, THE INHABITANTS FIND IT CHEAPER TO BUY CRAFT.

THESE PEOPLE ARE OF DUTCH AND ENGLISH STOCK. SOME ARE DESCENDENTS OF MORGAN'S MEN WHO CAPTURED THE ISLAND IN 1665.

SUPPER IS READY. BUD 'n' BUB—WHERE HAVE YOU BEEN THE PAST HALF HOUR?

Name Hunting Dates for Michigan

Upper Peninsula hunters will have their first opportunity in years to shoot Ruffed Grouse next October since the Conservation Commission did not renew the closing order. The Commission, at its July meeting, also approved regulations conforming with the federal regulations for migratory bird seasons, bag limits and minor rules.

The open season for Ruffed Grouse in the upper peninsula this fall will be October 1 to 12 inclusive. The lower peninsula season will be the same as last year, October 15 to 26 inclusive. The bag limit of five in one day and ten in a season remains unchanged.

Among the more important changes in the waterfowl regulations to be effective during the coming fall include the lengthening of the duck season to two months, from noon, Oct. 1, to sunset, Nov. 30; limiting the number of certain species which may be taken in a day; and limiting the number of live duck decoys that may be shot over at one gunning stand to 25. There will be no open season on woodducks, ruddy ducks, buffheads, Ross' geese, and cackling geese to conform with federal regulations.

The game bird and waterfowl seasons to be effective this year are:

Chinese Ring-Necked Pheasants (male): Oct. 15-26 incl., in lower peninsula. Closed season in upper peninsula. Bag limit: 2 in one day, 4 in possession and 4 in season.

Ruffed Grouse: Oct. 1-12 incl., in upper peninsula and Oct. 15-26 in lower peninsula. Bag limit: 5 in one day, 10 in possession, and 10 in season.

Prairie Chicken: Upper peninsula, Oct. 1-12 incl. Lower peninsula, Oct. 15-26 incl., north of the north line of VanBuren, Kalamazoo, Calhoun, Jackson, Washtenaw, and Wayne Counties. Bag limit: 5 in one day; 10 in possession; 10 in season.

Waterfowl (except woodducks, eiders, ruddy ducks, buffheads, Ross' geese, and cackling geese): Noon, Oct. 1, E. S. T. to sunset, Nov. 30. Bag limit: In one day 15 in aggregate of all species of which not more than 10 in the aggregate may be taken of following: canvasback, redhead, greater and lesser scaup, ring neck, blue-wing, greenwing, and cinnamon teal, shoveller, and gadwall. Two days bag limit may be in possession at one time; 100 in season.

Geese and Brant: Noon, Oct. 1, E. S. T., to sunset, Nov. 30. Bag limit: 4 in one day (combined) and 5 (combined) in possession at one time.

Jacksnipe and Coot: Noon, Oct. 1, to sunset, December 15. Bag limit: 10 in one day; 20 in possession; 50 in season.

Woodcock: Sunrise, Oct. 15 to Oct. 26 in lower peninsula. Closed season in upper peninsula. Bag limit: 4 in one day; 8 in possession at one time; 16 in season.

Florida Gallinules and Rails: Noon, September 1, to sunset, Nov. 30. Bag limit: 10 in one day; 20 in possession and 50 in season (combined).

Under the federal regulations the season on woodcocks is closed for the upper peninsula. The Department of Conservation sought a change in the federal ruling so as to permit hunting the bird north of the Straits but the request was not granted.

Dept. of State News Bulletin

Before Sept. 1, approximately 17,750 Michigan corporations will be required to file annual reports and pay the 1932 privilege fee.

This fee is based upon the corporation's paid up capital and surplus as shown by the company's books at the close of business Dec. 31, 1931, or at the close of the corporation's fiscal year preceding the filing date of the report.

All corporation privilege fees are payable Sept. 1 but a period of 10 days is granted before the corporate powers are suspended. Once its legal right to do business is suspended, a corporation cannot legally transact business until the proper fees have been paid and the suspension lifted. If the fees are not paid within two years, the corporation's charter is revoked.

Michigan corporations were circularized several weeks ago by certain accountants who offered to reduce corporation privilege fees, in many instances, the reports prepared by them did not show the true condition of the corporation's books and the reports have been held in abeyance until proper balance sheets have been obtained. Changes in balance sheets after Dec. 31 would result in a false report which is in violation of the corporation law and is punishable by a $1,000 fine and imprisonment for the officers signing the report.

Advertisements prepared by the accountants also intimated that free and easy access to annual reports of corporations was allowed by the Department of State. Under Michigan laws, reports filed with the department are available only for "reasonable examination" by other than state employes and persons without valid reasons are not given access to department records.

NEWS OF THE NEARBY TOWNS

The Hotel Middleton dining room was a merry place on Monday evening when between 60 and 70 Crosswell citizens gathered to do honor to Roy Davidson, who recently received the medal of the Order of the Purple Heart from the United States war department for meritorious service in the World war. Congressman Wolcott was called upon to give remarks and was very congratulatory and praising of Mr. Davidson's war record. The Congressman also stated how very rare a gift the Order of the Purple Heart medal was, and how it was created by George Washington as a distinguished honor of the Revolutionary war. Only three of the medals were issued to soldiers of the Revolution, and until this year none have been given out since that time. Mr. Davidson has a distinguished record, receiving three wounds and other injuries in the war, and was able to return to his native country and home worthy of all honors that have been made his, said Mr. Wolcott. Colonel Leroy Pearson, of Lansing, and a former Sanilac county man, was present and made the presentation talk. His message was very interesting for this occasion. He too paid Mr. Davidson a great tribute on his war record.—Crosswell Jeff.

Of what benefit is the soft ball league to the community?

Frank Reid—The soft ball league has created a splendid fellowship feeling among the men of this community and also promotes good sportsmanship. It has helped a great many old men like Willis Campbell and M. B. Auten to loosen up their rusty joints.

E. A. Corpron—Due to his activity in the league, Stanley Asher can now wear a suit several sizes smaller than a year ago. Reductions in weight and more handsome men are the result of the work of the softball players of which Stanley is a notable example.

A. C. Atwell—It increases lung expansion and the vocabulary, promotes Charlie horses, straightens crooked fingers and puts crooks in the straight ones, makes better men of the umpires, keeps the women home (?) content in the knowledge of where the men folks are. Seriously, it stimulates civic cooperation.

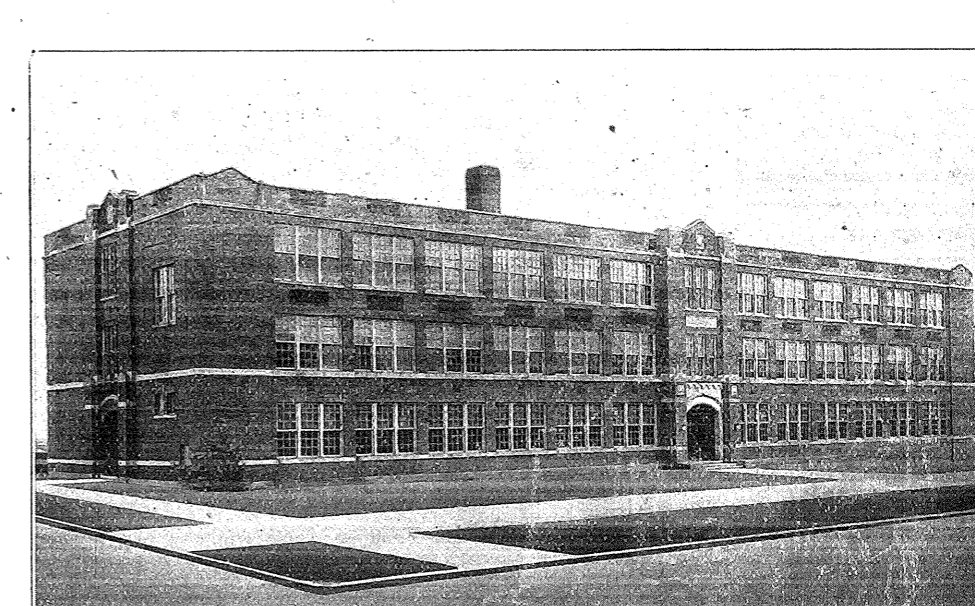

"Toby Jugs"

The word "toby" is derived from the Christian name Tobia. Toby jugs are in the form of a stout old man wearing the long, full-skirted coat and three-cornered hat, which were Eighteenth century costume in England. The origin of the appellation "toby" to that particular kind of jug seems to be obscure.

Nothing in Old Belief
There is no foundation for the popular belief that fence posts rot less quickly if the lumber is set upside down from the way it grew; in fact, forest service tests indicate just the opposite.

Wheelwrights Chair Makers
Windsor chairs, originally, were not made by furniture artisans, but by wheelwrights. A surviving reminder of this is the wheel often seen in the back splat of a certain type of Windsor.

Cass City High School Opens September 6

Again we invite the boys and girls of this territory to this modern educational institution, an institution which because of its facilities and location, attracted more rural boys and girls during the past year, than any other high school in Sanilac, Huron or Tuscola counties.

and terms made easy; the living costs in Cass City are the lowest in years; text books are cheap (few changes have been made the last few years and many used books are available); everything is in your favor to get that high school education now. Be ready and prepared for those better times when we get around the corner.

We have tried to meet the needs of a rural community by offering courses in the following fields: Home Economics, College Preparatory, Agriculture and Commercial. The records of these departments speaks for themselves and in spite of the times, the work offered this year will be of a larger scope and, we believe, still better. The teaching staff is an experienced one, each teacher having from one to ten years in this school. All are college graduates trained in their respective fields.

If you are interested in attending school and are bothered about a place to stay, the matter of your tuition, or getting necessary books and supplies, call and see the superintendent. Perhaps any one of a number of arrangements can be made. The principal and superintendent will be in the high school office Saturday, Sept. 3, to aid those who wish to arrange their course of study. School opens Tuesday, Sept. 6, at 8:30 a. m.

Address all inquiries to L. D. Randall, Superintendent.

The Black Box of Silence

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Here Francis Lynde has taken a modern invention as the "hub" of his narrative and done a brilliant bit of story telling. From the opening, when Owen Landis, designer of the "Black Box of Silence," dreamer and enthusiast, confides his secret and his fears as to what ignoble usage his invention may be put, to his chum, Walter Markham, until the cleverly worked out and altogether satisfying ending, even to the most modern reader will be fed to pleasurable excess on action and dialogue.

Not altogether a new idea in its conception, the author has most convincingly shown the possibilities for harm in a device which can impose silence on an extended radius, if in the hands of a clever criminal such as Mr. Lynde has drawn in the person of Bert Canby. Virtue of course has its triumph in the end. The ultimate frustration of Canby's schemes, after a series of successful crimes due to his possession of the "Black Box," mysteriously stolen from its inventor, is worked out logically, though thrillingly, in a manner calculated to keep the appreciative peruser "on the edge of his chair."

As the story develops, incomplete, naturally without its "love affair," the author convincingly brings out in sequence the incidents that finally are instrumental in bringing permanent happiness to Betty Lawson and her somewhat diffident lover, Owen Landis, and to "Wally" Markham, devoted chum, the satisfaction of having helped his friends.

A well told story which will be laid down after a pleasurable period with gratitude to Mr. Lynde for an excellent American novel.

First Chapters of This Story Will appear in the Chronicle Soon.
