STATE TAX IS LOWER THIS YEAR

Tuscola's Share Is $22,153.16 Less Than State Tax of 1931.

It costs Tuscola county $24,-909.69 in one mill tax for the support of the Michigan State College and the University of Michigan, according to a report which was sent by the auditor general to County Clerk Ormes this week for presentation to the board of supervisors when they meet in October session.

Nine items cover the amount of $104,909.76 which will be assessed against Tuscola county property to raise its share of the 1932 state tax. The items apportioned to the county under various acts of the legislature are:

|---|---|
| Advertising Michigan | $ 223.33 |
| Agriculture, Dept. of Tubercular Live Stock | 446.65 |
| Aid to School Districts | 8933.06 |
| Budget | 50281.42 |

| Total state tax | 104909.76 |

The amount of state tax that Tuscola county is required to raise for the year of 1932 is $22,153.16 less than last year. The county's apportionment this year is $104,-909.76 and that of 1931 was $127,-062.92.

This year's tax in Tuscola is based on a valuation of $29,543,000. Valuations of three nearby counties as fixed by the state board of equalization are: Huron, $32,322,-000; Sanilac, $30,357,000; Lapeer, $26,410,000.

Sanilac county's share of the state tax as announced by Auditor General O. B. Fuller is $22,000 less than a year ago. The total state tax is $107,800.43 in comparison to $130,581.78 in 1931. Deductions were made in practically every item of the state budget for which state taxes are raised. Following is the various funds for which the state tax in Sanilac is raised: Advertising Michigan, $229.48; Agriculture, Department of Tuberculin Livestock, $458.96; Aid to School Districts, $9,179.20; Budget, $51,666.86; Buildings, $6,-654.92; Deficiency, $12,955.14; Legislature, $1,059.83; Michigan State College Mill Tax, $6,399.01; University of Michigan, $19,197.03. ## P. T. A. Meets Monday Evening

The next meeting of the Parent Teachers' Association will be held Monday evening, October 3, at eight o'clock in the high school auditorium.

Dr. Rachell Stutsman from the Merril-Palmer school in Detroit will be the speaker and her subject will be "Mental Health and the Family." This talk will be a practical discussion of problems of discipline and habit forming in the home.

Arrangements are being made for special music.

Three Injured in Auto Crash

Richard Sohn, Sr., of Vassar and his two sons, Richard, Jr., 4, and Bobbie, 3, were all injured when Sohn drove his Ford car into the rear of a Dodge delivery truck parked on M-38 about 3 miles west of Tuscola village on Monday. Both little boys were severely hurt.

The delivery truck, parked on the side of the road directly in front of a driveway to a farm house, was shoved into a ditch and tipped over when hit by the Ford car. The Sohn car then caught fire as the gasoline tank was ripped open.

Joe Haddad and Geo. Ruhana, both of Detroit, were in the delivery truck but neither one suffered any serious injury.

Theft of Dog Cost Perpetrator $46.50

Adalaur McNinch was arrested in Flint on the charge of stealing a dog belonging to Joseph Cartwright of Mayville. Justice St. Mary ordered McNinch to pay the costs amounting to $46.50.

Herman Ponfield, charged with violating the provisions of a bond in Genessee county, was arrested in Tuscola county by officers of Sheriff Kirk's department and turned over to Flint officers Sept. 26.

Wm. Richardson of Lum, arrested early Monday morning by Deputy Sheriff Caldwell, was assessed $10.00 by Justice Imerson on a drunk and disorderly charge.

BEET SUGAR PASSES ALL QUALITY TESTS

Even Chemists Can Find no Reason for Discrimination Against Home Product.

Chemists and specialists in nutrition at Michigan State College are unable to understand where the mistaken idea originated that a difference exists between cane and beet sugar chemically or in actual use.

Experimental work in canning, preserve making, and in the preparation of jellies show that the edibles prepared with beet sugar and those in which cane sugar were used were identical in appearance, in taste, and in keeping qualities.

Chemical tests are unable to differentiate between beet and cane sugar, and the two are identical in appearance when properly refined.

These statements should help the market for the product of the 14,-000 Michigan farmers who are growing sugar beets this year. The crop will produce approximately 300,000,000 pounds of sugar but this amount is only three-fifths of the total sugar used by Michigan residents each year.

Michigan sugar factories and Michigan farmers who have produced the crop in previous years have passed through discouraging seasons. Cooperative effort by the two groups have permitted the opening of additional plants and the production of an increased acreage of beets this year.

The continuation of plant operation and the production of this cash crop will depend upon future markets. The use of Michigan sugar in Michigan homes will aid the marketing of the product.

LOCALS OUTPLAYED HARBOR BEACH

Bay City Cheers Tackling and Blocking of the Cass City Squad.

Unleashing a varied attack, the Cass City football team completely out-played Harbor Beach in the opening game here Friday. The only scoring by Harbor Beach was done while the Cass City reserves were holding the fort. By use of the old fooler (the sleeper), Harbor Beach scored two touchdowns making the final score 30 to 12.

The line play of the local squad showed much improvement, while the green back field showed flashes of real power. Harbor Beach put up a stubborn defense all through the first quarter, holding the first-stringers scoreless. At the beginning of the second quarter, however, the second squad finished the drive for a touchdown that the regulars had been making, with the use of just two plays, Knight going over for the first score. From then on scoring was more frequent with Rawson, Quick and Kosanke making touchdowns. Graham's promise of developing into a capable punter and passer, and the powerful line-smashing of Ballagh, gives an encouraging outlook for a well balanced back field.

Hold Bay City 12-0.

Playing purely defensive football, the fighting squad of Maroon and Gray held Bay City to a 12 to 0 score Saturday. The tackling and blocking of the entire squad during this game brought forth many praises from the Bay City cheering section.

The alumni will furnish the opposition for this Friday's game. The arrangement for a cheer leader has been changed. Professor Campbell will take over these duties.

MILLS ATTACKS "LOOSE CLAIMS"

State Republican Convention Hears Head of Treasury.

Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills, speaking before the Republican state convention at Detroit Thursday, launched a terrific attack upon the Democratic candidate for President, Franklin D. Roosevelt. Mr. Mills' speech was regarded by party leaders, as one of the most important in the present campaign.

Mr. Mills accused the New York governor of making loose, unfounded charges against the Finance Reconstruction Corporation in the assertion that it was designed to aid only banks, railroads and insurance companies. The contrary is true, Secretary Mills said, as records show that "A great majority of banks that have borrowed from the corporation are located in small towns. Specifically on August 31, seventy per cent of the banks to which loans had been authorized were in towns of less than 5,000 population."

"It was through no accident that after many months of unremitting storm breaks have begun to appear in the dark clouds that have overhung our financial horizon," he said. "We have faced fearful difficulties. We have sustained terrible shocks, but under wise and resourceful leadership our resources have been mobilized as to bring us through safely. President Hoover has earned the right to complete the task of reconstruction."

Cong. Joseph L. Hooper characterized President Hoover as "the one great constructive engineer" in his keynote speech while Governor Wilbur M. Brucker detailed the many economies that have been put into practice in Michigan and national government.

Later in the day the convention named the Republican candidates for secretary of state, state treasurer, attorney general and auditor general.

The following delegates were chosen at the county convention to represent Tuscola county at the state meet: D. Knox Hanna, W. H. Cook, G. F. Schultz, Conrad Mueller, Lyle Koepfgen, Ralph Freeland, M. L. Steele, R. O. Kern, W. H. Gildart, Guy N. Ormes, H. W. Owen, Geo. Freeland.

Rotarians Were "Sweetened Up"

Frederick Pinney is either a very observing chap or a good guesser. That is the opinion of fellow Rotary club members, for Mr. Pinney walked away from the club's Tuesday luncheon with two pounds of fine extracted honey as a reward for making the closest estimate to the number of miles a bee travels in gathering a pound of honey based on a mile trip for every visit to the hive. Guesses ranged all the way from 2,864 to 250,000 miles. Willis Campbell says the correct number of miles is around 80,000.

But Mr. Pinney wasn't the only man who was "sweetened up" Tuesday, for every Rotarian found a miniature square of comb honey and a small glass of extracted honey at his luncheon plate, all produced by a swarm of bees used for demonstration purposes in the agricultural department of the high school.

Mr. Campbell spoke on bee culture and told the average Rotarian more about bees than he had heard in any ten years before.

NEWS OF THE NEARBY SECTIONS

Happenings Here and There Garnered from the Chronicle's Exchanges.

Floyd Snider, of Flint, has rented the Schaaf store building in Pigeon in which he expects to open up a drug store about October 1. Mr. Snider formerly resided in Elkton.

The United States government is planning on building a new coast guard station in Harbor Beach in the very near future.

Mrs. Fritz Bollinger appeared to be an "exceptionally happy widow" when several Unionville people called at the Bollinger home in Saginaw and she met them with a smile. It had been reported in Unionville that Fritz Bollinger had died Thursday and the Unionville friends, confident that the funeral was scheduled for Sunday, were surprised at the reception they received at the door, until they were led into the room where Mr. Bollinger was reclining on the couch, very much alive. And did he laugh when he noticed one of the party carrying a most beautiful bouquet of white dahlias tied with a lovely big bow of white satin ribbon, a token for his bier. This was the second time friends had come to his home to pay their last respects. The first time was when the family lived in Unionville several years ago. At that time someone spread the report that "Fritz had been killed on the railroad."

But one arrest for being drunk and disorderly at the Croswell Fair this year. We can well remember one Croswell Fair during the good old days of the open saloon when every available lockup was filled with fighting drunks, and but a small percentage of them were arrested at that.—Croswell Jeff.

Campaign expense of Sanilac county candidates filed with County Clerk Joseph Dawe as provided by law are: George W. Paldi, $127.-84; Lovel C. Hagle, $102.26; Leonard J. Paterson, $223.98; William Robinson, $36; Clare Atkinson, $152.98; Arthur Meredith, $60; Alex Alexander, $111; Philip O'Connell, $102.25; James Greenan, $151.20; James N. Teets, $122.72; John W. Unless unseen difficulties arise, the pavement from Marlette village to Burnside village, will be open for traffic the last of this week. All the paving is laid with the exception of 500 feet traversing the Butler swamp, 5¼ miles south of Marlette. This has been filled in to an extra depth, and has been gradually sinking. It is reported that the top of this section will be levelled and a coat of gravel applied. The road will also be widened at this point.

Eldon Welch, of Brown City, is the possessor of an odd freak of nature. It is a pig, one of a litter of 13 born on his farm a week ago Wednesday. The strange animal, which lived nearly an hour after birth, has two heads, three eyes, two ears. The body is perfectly formed, normal in size and has four legs. The heads are grown together in such a way that the right eye and ear of one and the left eye and ear of the other are eliminated. The third is located in the center. There are also two perfectly formed snouts.

The Harbor Beach school board, at a recent session, opened up bids on the yearly supply of coal for the pubilc school and Community House buildings. About 500

FULLER EXPLAINS TAX RELIEF LAWS

New Laws Give Relief If Payment is Made Soon.

Delinquent taxpayers who wish to take full advantage of the relief afforded by the laws enacted by the special session of the legislature, must act before Oct. 1, it was pointed out today by O. B. Fuller, auditor general.

Persons delinquent for 1930 taxes, by paying 25 per cent of the tax before Oct. 1 and another 25 per cent before May 1, 1933, may postpone the time when their property will be sold for taxes by one year. The remaining 50 per cent may be paid at any time prior to May 1, 1934. Interest on both installments of 25 per cent will be computed at one-half of one per cent a month from Mar. 1, 1931, up to the time of payment. On the last 50 per cent the rate of interest will be three-fourths of one per cent monthly. However, if the entire 1931 tax is paid by Oct. 1, the reduced rate of interest is computed on the entire tax.

The $1 advertising fee for Oct. 1, 1932, may be saved by paying 50 per cent of the tax before Oct. 1. The maximum benefit under the act may be obtained by paying 75 per cent of the tax by Oct. 1, 1932, and the remaining 25 per cent by May 1, 1933. These and other measures for relief of delinquent taxpayers were passed by the legislature last spring as part of the emergency program sponsored by Gov. Wilber M. Brucker.

PARCEL POST RATES GO UP OCTOBER 1

Increases Hoped to Reduce Present Heavy Annual Deficit.

Increased rates on parcel post mail become effective October 1, according to notice received by Postmaster Hunter from the post office department.

This department, calling attention to the new rates which were approved in February by the interstate commerce commission, said that the increases were intended to cut into the annual deficit this class of mail has produced. Based on revenues and expenditures for 1930, the department figured parcel post was being handled at a net loss of $15,000,-000.

While there was a material loss of parcels in the first three zones, those beyond were handled at a profit. The new scales are designed to equalize the rates. No change is to be made on parcels for local delivery.

The increases will run from one to three cents, depending on weight and distance.

The new rates are: First and second zones—8 cents for the first pound or fraction of a pound and 1.1 cents for each additional pound or fraction: third zone—9 and 2 cents, respectively; fourth zone—10 and 3.5 cents; fifth zone—11 and 5.3 cents; sixth zone—12 and 7 cents: seventh zone—14 and 9 cents: eighth zone—15 and 11 cents.

Postage on parcels mailed on rural routes for local delivery will be 2 cents less than at these rates and 3 cents less when for other than local delivery.

The new regulations permit mailing matter up to 70 pounds in weight and as large as 100 inches in length and girth combined.

The primary department of the Methodist Sunday School enjoyed a weenie and marshmallow roast at the fair grounds Thursday afternoon.

WILMOT WOMAN DIED AT BALL GAME

Intense Excitement Fatal to Mrs. Chas. Clark Sunday Afternoon.

Mrs. Chas. Clark, 48, died suddenly from a heart attack caused by intense excitement while attending a ball game near Wilmot Sunday afternoon.

While the game was in progress, Clayton and Cletus Ryan of Evergreen township arrived in a drunken condition, according to attendants at the game, and made themselves objectionable by using foul language. The ball diamond is located on a part of the Clark farm, ½ mile south of Wilmot village, and Mrs. Clark, who objected to rowdyism, asked her son to go to the Ryan boys and request them to leave the grounds. This the son did and the result of the conference was that Clayton Ryan engaged in a fight with Mrs. Clark's son. Mrs. Clark, who was of an extremely nervous disposition, then requested the manager of the Wilmot team to put the Ryans off the lot. Following her talk with the team's manager, Mrs. Clark sat on the bumper of a car, and had been there but a few minutes, when she fell and expired within a very short time.

Clayton Ryan was placed under arrest by Tuscola county afficers, but his brother, Cletus, it is reported, has gone to New York state. It is expected that a "driving drunk" charge will be made against Clayton Ryan.

Spent Life in Kingston Township.

Lena Moyer was born in Kingston township and was united in marriage with Chas. Clark. She has resided near Wilmot all her life. Neighbors speak highly of her and her willingness to aid in worthy causes in the community. Besides her husband and four children, Freeman, Elery, Fay and Maxine, all at home, she leaves three brothers and one sister.

Funeral services were held at the Kingston Baptist church Tuesday and were attended by a large number of friends. Rev. Hazzard, pastor of the Free Methodist church of Wilmot, officiated. Interment was made in the Kingston cemetery.

Democrats for Bonus and Repeal

The principal planks adopted at the Democratic state convention at Lansing sponsored payment in cash of the soldiers' bonus; repeal of the State prohibition amendment as proposed by the Crusaders and the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, and abolishment of the state property tax.

Besides Wm. A. Comstock and Allen H. Stebbins, nominees for governor and lieutenant governor, who were chosen at the recent primary, the Democratic candidates for State offices are:

For Secretary of State—Burnett J. Abbott, of Saginaw, superintendent of the Chevrolet Iron Foundry.

For Attorney General — Patrick H. O'Brien, Circuit Judge of Houghton and Keweenaw Counties from 1912 to 1922 and an attorney thereafter in Detroit.

For State Treasurer—T. I. Fry, Fremont banker.

For Auditor General—John K. Stack, Escanaba lumberman.

WAGER-TAIT.

Ruth H., daughter of Mrs. Lillian Wager, 140 Harvard Street, Battle Creek, and William S. Tait of Flint were united in marriage in Angola, Ind., Aug. 25, 1932. They left for a trip in Northern Michigan and later will go to Miami Beach, Fla., for the winter.

Wisconsin Republicans Deal Blow to the La Follette Regime—Farmers' Strike Takes New Turn—Germany Out of Disarmament Parley.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

and in 1932 they hit a new low of $1,057,000,000.

Commenting on the "soak the rich" policy noted in congress at the last session Mr. Strawn declared it "hopelessly fallacious" and that there are few rich left to "soak" and because those who still retain a part of their fortunes will invest in tax exempt securities thereby defeating the very purpose of tax legislation aimed at the wealthy class.

To the conference on government Gordon L. Hostetter, director of the Chicago Employers' association, said that the racket, originally thought of as a temporary form of graft or extortion, has grown through alliances of business groups, union heads, politicians, and criminals until it annually costs the nation an "incalculable sum."

In Chicago alone, said Mr. Hostetter, racketeering costs more than $145,000,000 a year. Add to this the amount spent by the city to deal with racketeering, he said, and the total cost of Chicago's rackets equals the annual cost of the municipal government.

WHEN the disarmament conference resumed its sittings in Geneva the Germans were not in official attendance because their demand for equality of armament had been rejected by France. But they found they were facing also the united opposition of Great Britain and the United States, if not other of the great powers. The British foreign office memorandum said the German demand was at least untimely, since "attention and energy should be directed to economic rehabilitation of the world," and that anyhow Germany was not entitled to abrogate the part of the treaty of Versailles that limits her armament even if the other nations should fail to disarm or reduce their armaments.

M. Herriot

This view of the question apparently was pleasing to the United States government, and Ambassador Walter E. Edge and Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania, at a luncheon given by M. Herriot in Paris, told the premier that was the view of the American people. Their government, they said, stands for progressive disarmament and the sanctity of treaties.

M. Herriot laid before the foreign affairs commission of the chamber of deputies a full statement of his policy in this matter and defended it earnestly. He gave the commission certain details which had come into his possession regarding the alleged illicit manufacture of arms in Germany and indicated that he was ready when the opportune moment came to lay his information before the League of Nations and to demand an international inquiry into these alleged infractions of the treaty of Versailles.

The German press insisted that their government must not weaken, asserting that Great Britain had deceived Germany and that the British note treated Germany in intolerable fashion. Some papers declared Germany must withdraw from the League of Nations.

REPUBLICAN National Chairman Everett Sanders announced that President Hoover's first campaign speech would be made in Des Moines, Iowa, on October 4. He will make no addresses on the journey from Washington and back. In the heart of the agricultural region, where the farmers have been on strike against low prices, Mr. Hoover intends to expatriate on his program for relief of the farmer in reply to the recent address by his rival, Franklin D. Roosevelt. The speech in Des Moines will be broadcast over a nationwide radio hookup.

MAHATMA GANDHI, after a hearty meal of fruit and milk, began his protest fast, which he said he would keep up until he died of starvation unless the British government altered the terms of its settlement of the communal elections problem. The mahatma was still in Yeravda jail at Poona. The government said he was free to leave the prison, but he refused to go out of his cell unless he were forcibly removed.

Gandhi

So many friends and well wishers called at the jail that the aged leader was made ill from excitement, and thereafter visitors were excluded for the present. He received hundreds of telegrams and letters begging him not to undertake the death fast.

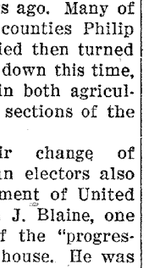
IN ONE of the most hotly contested primaries that Wisconsin ever has had, the conservative Republicans dealt the La Follette dynasty a severe blow. Philip La Follette, brother of the senator, was a candidate for renomination as governor, but was soundly beaten by Walter J. Kohler, former governor, whom La Follette defeated two years ago. Many of the counties Philip carried then turned him down this time, and he ran behind in both agricultural and industrial sections of the state.

W. J. Kohler

Emphasizing their change of heart, the Republican electors also voted for the retirement of United States Senator John J. Blaine, one of the staunchest of the "progressives" in the upper house. He was beaten by John B. Chapple, a young editor of Ashland who made a fierce campaign. Incomplete returns indicated the entire conservative state ticket had been carried to victory by Kohler and Chapple.

Kohler, a wealthy manufacturer whose home and large factories are in a village that bears his name, never held public office until he was elected governor in 1928. His supporters this year were known as "hatchet men," for their slogan was "Cut Costs With Kohler," and the high cost of state government and high taxes were the issues emphasized. Kohler called for a $16,000,000 reduction in taxes, and set forth as his doctrine that factories mean jobs, and that to build up private incomes by keeping the taxing system from chasing industries out of the state is more fundamental than to increase the income taxes. These arguments proved especially effective with the factory voters in Milwaukee county, Racine and other industrial regions.

This was the first time that a La Follette had been voted down since 1892, when the late Senator Robert M. La Follette was beaten in a congressional race. An interesting feature of this year's campaign was the presence of Burton K. Wheeler, Democratic senator from Montana, who made speeches trying to persuade the Democrats of Wisconsin to go into the Republican primary and vote for Blaine and La Follette. The state Democratic leaders hotly resented Wheeler's action and evidently it had little if any effect.



J. B. Chapple

Kohler's majority was in the neighborhood of 100,000. Chapple had a smaller majority—about 20,000—for the vote for Blaine was heavy in the industrial centers.

The Democrats at this writing appear to have nominated Mayor A. G. Schmedeman of Madison for governor over Leo P. Fox and William R. Rubin. For senator F. Ryan Duffy of Fond du Lac was unopposed.

THOSE farmers of the Middle West have entered on a new phase of their "holiday" strike which promises to be more effective than the movement that aimed to keep all farm produce from the cities and was marred by frequent violent deeds. The plan now evolved by their leaders contemplates the withholding from market of all grain and other non-perishable products, but the farmers are forbidden to picket the highways or block them in any way. Nearly two million farmers were asked to join in this nonselling movement.

Agriculturists in Minnesota, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Nebraska and Iowa, the "strike" leaders said, had given assurances they would participate. They added that farmers in Ohio, Wisconsin, South Dakota, Kansas and Illinois had "shown interest" in the movement.

SEVERAL important meetings were held in Washington during the week, among them being those of the National Municipal league and the national conference on government. Addressing the former, Silas H. Strawn, former chairman of the United States Chamber of Commerce, declared that taxes must be reduced because the nation has reached the end of its financial rope. In the sixteen years from 1913 to 1929, he said, the cost of all government increased by 400 per cent, while at the same time the national income had increased by only 148 per cent. In 1930, he said, income taxes amounted to $2,411,000,000; in 1931 they dropped to $1,860,000,000; It can neither be laughed off or damned off. The United States of America is still a solvent nation. It will REMAIN SO if Americans KEEP IT SO.

JUST as Bolivia and Paraguay are squabbling over the Gran Chaco, so Colombia and Peru are on the verge of war over the possession of the Amazon river port of Leticia and some surrounding territory ceded by Colombia to Peru in 1922. The Bogota government has refused to accept a Peruvian proposal for settlement of the controversy, and the people of both nations are seemingly eager for war and are raising big funds for the purchase of armaments.

Both Bolivia and Paraguay have been making offers to cease hostilities pending negotiations, but apparently neither feels it can trust the other to act in good faith. Meanwhile the fighting between their border forces, especially at Fort Boqueron, was continued, the Paraguayans claiming the advantage.

SENATOR JAMES J. DAVIS of Pennsylvania went on trial in New York on two federal indictments charging conspiracy, the prosecution alleging he was responsible for two lotteries totaling $3,000,000 conducted by the Loyal Order of Moose, of which the senator is the director general. It was charged that Davis personally profited from these lotteries, which were ostensibly for charitable purposes. Assistant United States Attorney Treadwell told the jury that checks totaling $172,300 from the proceeds of the drives went to pay off a note which was Mr. Davis' personal obligation, to his personal checking account, to a corporation controlled by him, and to an account from which he drew the profits of the organization department of the Moose.

Sen. Davis

In 1931 the lottery was more discreetly handled, Mr. Treadwell continued, and the drawing took place on the steamship Priscilla, outside the twelve-mile limit, after which all records were thrown overboard.

Counsel for the defense contended all the transactions were innocent.

THREE California citizens have undertaken to block the loan of $40,000,000 by the Reconstruction Finance corporation for the construction of the aqueduct from Boulder Dam to Los Angeles. The loan has been authorized by the corporation, but the suit filed in the District of Columbia Supreme court seeks to enjoin it, attacking the legality of the decision by which the corporation proposes to purchase two $20,000,000 lots of the $220,000,000 worth of water district bonds.

The corporation also heard opposition to the Los Angeles application for a loan of $32,000,000 for the construction of a power line from Boulder Dam to the coast, and to the proposed loan of $10,000,000 for a bridge across Chesapeake bay on the ground that this would mean the use of federal funds to finance a project to compete with going privately owned ferry lines.

AMERICA lost one of its most eminent physicians in the death of Dr. Frank Billings of Chicago at the age of seventy-eight. His name is linked with the history of medicine in this country and he had headed nearly every prominent organization of his profession. He was responsibile for the founding of numerous hospital clinics and research institutes and trained many great doctors, and himself was rated as one of the best diagnosticians and physicians in the world.

Speaker John N. Garner, Democratic candidate for the Vice Presidency, was called to his home in Detroit, Texas, by the illness of his aged mother, and a few days later she passed away. Mrs. Garner was eighty-one years old and was born and spent her entire life in northeastern Texas.

SEVERAL thousand feeble old men, remnants of the Grand Army of the Republic, gathered for their sixty-sixth annual encampment in Springfield, Ill., the city in which the organization was born. They had their usual business sessions; but much of their time was spent in visiting the tomb of Lincoln, their adored war commander, and other places connected with the life of the martyred President, and in attending services in the old prison Camp Butler, now a national cemetery. St. Paul, Minn., was selected for the 1933 encampment over Grand Rapids, Mich.

CHICAGO is jubilant, for the Cubs are now the champion team of the National league. The opening of the world's series with the New York Yankees, who won the American league pennant, was set for September 28 in New York: the games in Chicago will begin the following Saturday.

...writes of "THE MASTER EXECUTIVE"

Supplying a week-to-week inspiration for the heavy-burdened who will find every human trial paralleled in the experiences of "The Man Nobody Knows."

THE OUTDOOR MAN.

The air was filthy with the smell of animals and human beings herded together. Men and women trampled one another, crying aloud their imprecations. At one side of the court were the pens of the cattle; the dove cages at the other. In the foreground, hard-faced priests and money-changers sat behind long tables exacting the utmost farthing from those who came to buy. One would never imagine that this was a place of worship. Yet it was the Temple—the center of the religious life of the nation. And to the crowds who jammed its courts, the spectacle seemed perfectly normal. That was the tragedy of it.

Standing a little apart from the rest, Jesus, the young man from Nazareth watched in amazement which deepened gradually into anger. It was no familiar sight to him. He had not been in the Temple since his twelfth year, when Joseph and Mary took him up to be legally enrolled as a son of the law.

His chief memory of that previous visit was a long conversation with certain old men in a quiet room. He had not witnessed the turmoil in the outer courts, or, if he had, it made small impression on his youthful mind. But this day was different. For weeks he had looked forward to the visit to the Temple.

To be sure some of the older ones muttered about the extortions of the money-changers, at the Temple. A woman told how the lamb which she had raised with so much devotion the previous year, had been scornfully rejected by the priests, who directed her to buy from the dealers. An old man related his experience.

Today Jesus faced the sordid reality, his cheeks flushed. A woman's shrill tones pierced his revery like a knife; he turned to see a peasant mother protesting vainly against a ruthless exaction.

And suddenly, without a word of warning, he strode to the table where the fat money-changer sat, and hurled it violently across the court. The startled robber lurched forward, grasping at his gains, lost his balance and fell sprawling on the ground.

Another step and a second table was over-turned, and another, and another. The crowd which had melted back at the start began to catch a glimmering of what was up, and surged forward around the young man. He strode on, looking neither to right nor left. He reached the counters where the dove cages stood; with quick sure movements the cages were opened and the occupants released. Brushing aside the group of dealers who had taken their stand in front of the cattle pens, he threw down the bars and drove the bellowing animals out through the crowd and into the streets.

The whole thing happened so quickly that the priests were swept off their feet. Now, however, they collected themselves and bore down upon him in a body. Who was he that dared this act of defiance? Where had he come from? By what authority did he presume to interrupt their business?

"This is my authority," he cried. "It is written, 'My house shall be called a house of prayer for all nations,' but ye have made it a den of robbers."

Disgusted, and Fighting Mad.

From Clinton Co. Republican-News.

Many people are disgusted. Some are fighting mad. Others are in desperate circumstances and despondent. An election is approaching. There are some important decisions to be made. What happens in November is going to have a profound influence on this country—not only for the immediate present but for generations to come.

We have great faith in the sober judgment of the American people. They may make mistakes now and then. Generally, however, when they passed their judgment on issues and candidates, they are right. The thing that concerns this writer at this time is the present temper of America. Will it use its judgment—or will it vote its anger, disgust and fears. Sane judgment and wise decisions are not born of desperation.

Let us illustrate.

A momentous decision was made Apr. 6, 1917. United States declared war on Germany. That is history. It is too late to change it. Perhaps we would not change that decision if we could. We had ample reason for declaring war on Germany. Yet, today's conditions are an outgrowth of that decision, made deliberately April 6, 1917. What happened in the war and since are too recent to bear but brief repeating.

Certain fundamental facts stand out. Ten millions of people were killed or met death as a result of that war. Fifteen millions more were maimed. Property to the value of 200 billions was destroyed. The world was plunged into debt 50 billions of dollars. Eighteen governments of the world have fallen. WE ARE PAYING for that decision of April 6, 1917. We will be paying for it for generations to come. It was a decision made by a country inflamed by unwarranted attacks. We were mad. We were disgusted. We were desperate—even as we are mad, disgusted and desperate today.

Three years ago we came to the end of a financial orgy—that, too, an aftermath of the war. The money of the world had been dumped into this country—more money than we ever dreamed existed. With the end of this thing that we like to call "prosperity" but which was really unsound, ficticious and vicious, the people of the United States, the government of the United States, and the government of every individual state, county and township are facing cold realities. We must work ourselves out of this situation. If we are to live and enjoy America of which we are so proud and for which we have been so willing in the past to fight, we must fight and win another war—an economic war.

This war will not be won by talk. It will not be won by plunging further into debt. It cannot be corrected with promises. It will not be solved by the frenzy of anger, by denunciations or a series of strikes, demonstrations, sidestepping or whatnot. It must be met. It must have the understanding and support of the solid, straight-thinking American people.

Terms Failure to Enforce Dry Law Is Its Weakness.

Roy C. Gamble in Detroit Free Press.

Recently all Detroit newspapers carried a story illustrating the power and majesty of the law in this fair city and country.

A poor man, without funds or opportunity of earning them, had been declared to be a trespasser in the place he had been calling home, because of his failure to pay his rent and, when resisting legal eviction, he and a large number of sympathizers were trampled under foot by mounted police, and others were beaten into insensibility by policemen's clubs. This army of the executive branch of our government was dispatched to the scene of trouble on a moment's warning that an order issued by the judicial department was about to be resisted.

I am not blaming the police for enforcing the law in this instance. This incident, however, is a very apt illustration of the fact laws can be enforced if there is a will to do so, and I wish to register my utter disgust with the principal argument advanced against the Eighteenth Amendment, which is that it cannot be enforced.

Can anyone say, with a straight face, that there has even been any real effort at enforcement? If 300 policemen can be called out at a moment's warning to help enforce a writ of restitution, why can they not also be used to help enforce the greatest law ever on the statute books to promote sobriety and decent living among our people? Recount the benefits which have come from the Prohibition Law and subtract therefrom the so-called evils attributed thereto by those who, for selfish reasons, want to see it nullified, and the balance is greatly in favor of a continuance of the law. Prohibition at its worst is eminently better than state control or any other system at its very best. These selfish interests are willing to bring back an institution which will take from the workingman the few dollars he receives for his labor, and send his soul to hell, in order to save themselves a few dollars in taxes.

A very large percentage of our people are able to see through the specious arguments advanced by these selfish interests. They still sincerely believe in and insist on the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment. We will stand by any officials who honestly interpret and enforce all of our laws, and oppose with all of our power those who do not.

Despite the efforts of style designers to avoid exaggeration of fashion lines at the beginning of a new season, it is essential that new trends be emphasized so that their daring newness will not be overlooked. Again this has proven to be the case in the first flare for big sleeves, but already in second showings, bringing moderation in lines.

This turn to smaller sleeves had to be in dresses and frocks, because it was necessary to get sleeves under control, unless all coats were to be designed along swagger lines. Such not being the case, a distinctive turn in sleeve design is already noted, which perhaps makes for more graceful designing.

The new fall coat, shown in the sketch, is an example of moderation in the adaption of the new style lines. Full of sleeve, but not too full, the shoulder line is maintained, yet suggests newness and chickness right abreast the most popular styles. Even the fur refrains from over exaggeration, topping off a conservative styled coat which many women will choose because of its trimness. In color, it may be gay, although the darker tones appear to be favored. It is of course one of the new broadcloths—an old—yet a very new material for 1932.

The long promised action against the village trustees who voted to purchase the telephone system from the Cass City Telephone Co., and make it a municipal affair, was brought to an issue Friday when Deputy Sheriff Bostwick served papers on five trustees which instructed them to appear in circuit court within 15 days to answer the information in the nature of a quo warranto filed against them by eight taxpayers. The sum and substance of the writ is that the claim is made that the trustees, while financiallly interested in the telephone company, engaged as trustees of the village in the purchase of the telephone system for the village and therefore, by such action they have forfeited their office and are now required to show by what authority they claim to still hold such position.

FARMING IN KENTUCKY.

Our farmers have a hard row to hoe, we'll admit. But when we contrast our own situation with those of Kentucky, we pause to count our blessings.

We read in the Louisville Courier-Journal, a reprint from the News published at Tompkinsville, Ky. The editor of the latter is pointing out the large percentage of Kentuckians who asked for federal seed loans. Says the Courier-Journal:

"That 377 of the first 1,000 applicants had only one mule, or no mule at all says the News, might be due to adverse circumstances beyond the farmer's control, but 'that 101 of them possessed not a single chicken seems inexcusable.' Surely, adds the editor, 'not one in ten has been so destitute that he could not keep one hen through the winter to raise two or three broods this summer. It would not take many seasons for a pair of chickens to grow into a flock.'

"It is a sorry farm and a sorry farmer that have not a single hen to produce eggs and fryers for the market and for home consumption. But what is even more astonishing is the fact that 478 of these thousand applicants owned not a single hog. Even if hogs have been bringing a very low price up to this month, the practice still is widespread—almost universal in Kentucky—of killing hogs on the farm and smoking the family's winter meat supply. The News speaks of a farmer recently buying a pig for a quarter. Yet only 82 of these thousand applicants owned more than ten hogs."

Evidently the standard of living is higher in Michigan than it is in "old Kaintuck." Think what a shock it would be to be a Kentucky farmer without even "a pair of chickens to grow into a flock" if he could be given a glimpse of an average Michigan farm. Or any old farm in this great state, for that matter.

LIGHTS of NEW YORK

By WALTER TRUMBULL

Nothing so stirs the imagination of the human race as buried treasure. From childhood, man wants to dig for it. He never gets over wanting to dig for it. Expeditions constantly are being organized to unearth hidden hoards of silver and of gold. Old maps are still handed down in some families, showing the spot where buried riches are supposed to lie. Books which deal with treasure have to be carefully watched in the New York public library. Readers are constantly tearing out pages and illustrations. For example, Ralph D. Paine wrote a book on buried treasure and put an index in the back. It isn't there in the library copy. Somebody tore it out long ago. Probably the man who has it never has been east of the Battery or west of the Hudson, but he likes to feel that some day he will start out on a journey of rich adventure.

The New York aquarium probably holds the greatest collection of rare fish in the United States and possibly in the world. It is a notable exhibit. The other day the aquarium was almost empty. I doubt whether there was a dozen visitors in all that big building. About four blocks away is a sea food restaurant. In the window of this place is a glass box, about four feet long, filled with water. Swimming around in it was one lonely and very ordinary fish. Outside the window, watching the fish swim, was a crowd of perhaps forty persons. They blocked the sidewalk. That's New York.

A well-known woman painter in New York attended an exhibition of pictures. On her return home, she was telling her brother, who goes in for sport and knows surprisingly little about art, what an enjoyable afternoon she had experienced.

"I met the nicest young man," she said. "He was a big, handsome blond and he talked so intelligently about some of the pictures that I asked him if he was a painter himself, but he said he was not."

"What did the guy do?" asked her brother.

"I haven't the slightest idea," said the woman, "but I remember his name. It was Tunney."

My wife is urging me to move to Farmington, New Mexico, and go on a fruit diet. She contends that for a dollar you can buy there enough melons, peaches and grapes to support a family for a week and that the quality is far superior to anything found in a New York market. But, while I am fond of fruit in moderation, what I am looking for is some place where for a dollar one can buy enough beefsteak to live on for a week. In my case, that means a lot of beefsteak.

Walter Banks has been showing me some pictures of his truly lovely sisters. One of these harmony singers and dancers is a blond and the other a brunette. If they sing and dance as well as they photograph, it will not be long before they will be seen in some musical show on Broadway.

There is in Manhattan a club formed by a number of working newspaper women. It is a strictly utilitarian affair, consisting of a couple of rooms furnished mainly with a telephone and a few typewriting machines. Each of the members has a key to the outer door. Wishing to open an account at one of the large department stores, a member of the club gave her bank and some other references and then, thinking it sounded well, added the name of the club. A few days later she was all alone in the club rooms when the telephone rang. She answered it. On the wire was the credit department of the store. Information was requested as to whether the woman was a member of the club and whether she paid her dues. She gave herself a fine recommendation.

SPORTS COATS TO BE KNEE LENGTH

Features of Latest Designs on Parade.

A new brief sports coat cut short at milady's knees has stepped to the fore of the fashion parade.

Sloping raglan shoulders, an easy waistline and a three-quarter length flaring gently at the hem are the outstanding features of its design, while soft spongy woolen or firm tweed are the materials from which it is built.

The colors of the new three-quarter sports coats are generally brick. One unbelted model of rose red tweed is worn with a sleeveless sports frock of rose-red and white candy striped crinkly crepe, another of rich chocolate brown wool tops a sports frock of brown and orange striped wool and a third of soft green tweed is worn with a frock of green shantung.

The new three-quarter length also has been adopted for the coats of very late summer suits. Some of these are designed with a simple straightline skirt of the same fabric while others are worn with a wool frock to match.

HIGH NECKLINE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Designers are focusing their attention on necklines. The trend is toward high-up around the throat effects. All very new and different from what we have been wearing. It is just such unique necklines as the one which distinguishes the gown pictured which are varying the mode this season. Other details which accent the smartness of this black wool crepe frock are the wrist-length sleeves, the use of fagoting in designful groups throughout the material, and particularly the placement of large round metal buttons at neckline and sleeves, with a metal belt to harmonize. Not only will metal belts clank and click around slender waistlines, but metal costume jewelry is fashion's latest whim.

FLASHES FROM PARIS

Dark gray for daytime is sponsored.

Potter's clay is announced as a new color.

Emphasis is placed on button-closed frocks.

The high neckline is assured for coming modes.

Paris milliners predict the vogue of the fabric hat.

Lots of leather trimming appears on sports costumes.

Redfern collection features high-bust princess effects.

Smart Parisiennes are wearing ruby colored mesh veils.

Bows pose conspicuously at the front of the latest hats.

Metal buttons and belts enhance the smartest cloth frocks.

Broad shoulders, slender hips and straight skirts is the new formula.

Felt and Feathers Will Trim Fall Millinery

Some of the new felt hats are trimmed with felt, many are trimmed with velvet, and some feature feather trimming.

One of the latter group has an unusual bow placed on the edge of the brim over one eye, made of a bordeaux red leather the same shade as the hat.

Another has a crown entirely covered with feathers. Bows placed to the fore part of the hat, be it a brimmed hat or a turban, are noteworthy of the fall millinery.

Wool Lace Dresses

Wool lace evening dresses for summer. It sounds hot, but it is a fact. It is, of course, for resort wear, and in the cooler resorts will be quite appropriate. Moreover, the lacy quality counterbalances the woolly quality and makes of it a charmingly sheer fabric.

Dept. of State News Bulletin

The 1932 corporation privilege tax, thus far collected, amounts to $5,202,501. This represents the tax paid by 13,057 corporations.

At the same time last year, 14,482 corporations had paid a privilege tax amounting to $6,495,836.

Analysis of the comparative statements shows that for the number of corporations reporting, the average amount of individual tax remains about equal, but that 1,425 corporations less have made reports this year.

Many corporations have been granted extensions, permissible under law, while many more companies have allowed their corporate powers to lapse temporarily and have announced that they intend paying the tax and delinquency penalties later in the year.

AMENDMENT

to the Michigan Constitution

LIMITING THE POWERS OF THE GOVERNOR TO RELEASE CERTAIN PRISONERS GUILTY OF TREASON AND MURDER

(to be voted on at General Election in November)

Article VI, Section 9—

He may grant reprieves, commutations and pardons after convictions for all offenses, EXCEPT TREASON, FIRST DEGREE MURDER AND CASES OF IMPEACHMENT, upon such conditions and with such restrictions and limitations as he may think proper, subject to regulations provided by law relative to the manner applying for pardons. Upon conviction for treason, he may suspend the execution of the sentence until the case shall be reported to the legislature at its next session, when the legislature shall either pardon or commute the sentence, direct the execution of the sentence or grant a further reprieve. He shall communicate to the legislature at each session information of each case of reprieve, commutation or pardon granted and the reasons therefore: PROVIDED HOWEVER, that at any time upon the discovery of new evidence a person may move for a new trial in cases of conviction for first degree murder.

This ammendment limits the power of the governor of Michigan in granting reprieves, commutations and pardons in certain crimes.

It specifically removes treason, first degree murder and impeachment from his pardoning power.

The reader and the voter are best able to decide whether or not he believes the Governor should have power to pardon or shorten the sentence of any person convicted of these crimes.

A "yes" means that you favor the amendment and favor denying the governor power to pardon such criminals.

A "no" vote means that you do not favor the amendment and wish the governor to have power to pardon people convicted of these crimes.—Clinton Co. Republican-News.

Railroads Go to Sea: Good Ship "Seatrain" Will Carry a Mile of Loaded Freight Cars

THE railroads are going to sea. One day this coming October a big freight steamship will warp alongside her dock at Hoboken and immediately a huge crane on the dock will begin hoisting loaded and sealed freight cars aboard. On each of the ship's four decks will be a quarter-mile of railroad tracks to receive the cars, each of which will be locked securely in place. In ten hours 100 loaded freight cars will be put aboard; the ship will have swallowed a freight train a mile long, and be ready for sea.

Out of New York to Havana, at 16½ knots an hour, she will make faster time than any freighter afloat. At Havana another crane will lift the cars out to tracks on the dock, and immediately lift in another shipload of them. Within twenty-four hours the unloading and reloading will have been completed; the incoming cargo will be in process of distribution along the Cuban railways; and the ship will be off to sea with a new cargo of loaded cars for New Orleans, thence to be distributed among the railways of the United States.

Linking rail and ocean transportation in a unity of shipping facilities, the Seatrain system is the conception of Graham M. Brush, thirty-eight year old shipping expert. Already Mr. Brush has one ship of this type, Seatrain New Orleans, operating between New Orleans and Havana. Built in England because American capital was dubious, it proved a phenomenal success, and he determined that the system must be Americanized. The Shipping Board advanced a loan against two more ships and the Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, of Chester, Pa., a subsidiary of the Sun Oil Company, contracted to build them. They are now almost complete, and following their launching late in September will start a regular New York-Havana-New Orleans service.

"Seatrain" expands the freight container idea to the scale of the freight car. Eliminating packing expense, it also does away with loss and damage. It requires only one-fifth of its time in port as against half the time of the regular freighter. The savings in time, packing, handling and warehousing expense are vitally important because so much of American industry is located far inland while European industries are commonly close to the sea. Thus both railroads and industry will gain; the coke and lumber markets of Cuba, formerly well nigh closed to America, have already been substantially taken over by this country through the service of a single vessel of this type; as more are added the gains may be expected to continue.

Following their launching at Chester, Pa., Seatrains New York and Havana will begin in October weekly service to New York, Havana and New Orleans. For the launching of "Seatrain New York," members of the President's cabinet, the Shipping Board, Governors of states touching the Delaware, and other notables have been invited.

Plans Made for Class in Landscape

O. I. Gregg, extension landscape specialist from Michigan State College, will conduct a series of three lessons in Tuscola county this fall and winter. The lessons are open to a limited number for class work, but the lectures are open in the morning and lectures in the afternoon.

According to County Agent Hammond of Caro, there is still room for a few additional members who would care to take the lesson work and have assistance from the specialist in making planting plans of their home grounds. All applications for lesson work must be in the county agent's office by October 5 in order to prepare for the first lesson.

Lesson No. 1 of the series includes a lecture demonstration by Mr. Gregg which shows the purposes of landscape gardening and gives practical suggestions concerning driveways, plantings about the base of the house and the use of shrubs for border and screen plantings. This demonstration also shows where to plant perennials and when completed forms a picture of a well landscaped home grounds.

Lesson No. 1 will be given on October 21 in Caro.

The second lecture is composed of nearly 100 colored slides which show the practical ideas of landscape gardening put into effect as illustrated in the first lecture. These slides are made from pictures of homes in 32 counties that have been planted from plans made by Mr. Gregg.

The third lecture is an illustrated lecture on perennials and their uses.

WORMS IN CHICKENS.

Tuscola farmers will now be making preparation for confining their flock of pullets to the laying house and anticipating a goodly production of eggs during the winter months. At this time it is well to remember that many of these flocks of pullets although apparently in fairly good health may be heavily infested with worms and should be given a de-worming treatment before going to the laying house.

Although most poultrymen know it is good practice to raise young chickens on clean ground every year, yet the average flock of pullets on farms in Tuscola county run on ground which pullets have grazed in the past during the first six months of their life. Therefore it is good safe insurance to give the treatment to your flocks before putting them in the laying house.

Several good commercial treatments are now on the market which cost from two to four cents per chicken. If the chickens are confined in good clean house for the rest of the laying period after the treatment they will not need treatment during the laying year. Poultrymen needing further information call at the county agent's office.

HOSPITAL NOTES.

Mrs. Mary Anatowske was able to be taken to her home in Port Austin Sunday.

Inspiring Mountain Peak

In the Caucasus are no fewer than six peaks higher than Mount Blanc. Mount Elbruz, 18,465 feet, is the greatest of them all. The old tales tell that Prometheus was bound to his rock atop Mount Elbruz, and even today there is an air of awesome mystery about the lofty, cloud-draped peak.

Beautiful Words

The question as to which words are considered the most beautiful in the English language would be a matter of opinion. The following have been suggested: Melody, eloquence, modesty, honor, heaven, hope, purity, splendor, virtue, faith, nobility, love, harmony, liberty, adoration, innocence, joy, sympathy, divine, happiness.

Stop the Leaks

Water leaking from a faucet in a stream the size of a common pin wastes about 150 gallons a day, engineers of the United States Department of Agriculture found. Even a leak of only one drop a second makes about four gallons a day. This means a lot of water is often wasted in hot weather when the well or spring on the farm may be low.

Lesson to Tax Dodgers

Wealthy citizens of Seleucia, in Mesopotamia, dodged their taxes 2,000 years ago, research shows. And look at those wealthy citizens now. What has happened to them? Every one of them has lost his property, that's what has happened. Let that be a lesson to you.—Exchange.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

by Charles E. Dunn

The Christian's Devotional Life. Lesson for October 2nd. Matthew 6:5-15. Golden Text: 2nd Peter 3:18.

The heart of our lesson is the Lord's Prayer, a summary, simple and eloquent, of the entire Christian faith. All that we need to know about God and man is contained within its brief compass. It is indeed, more than a prayer. It is the creed of Jesus, and also a covenant binding men to God. Palmer, of Harvard, beautifully calls it "the love-song of the Christian world."

The first phrase, "Our Father, who art in heaven," which Prof. Palmer, regards as "the hush before prayer," introduces us to a characteristic doctrine of Jesus, the Fatherhood of God. This idea was not original with the Master, but under His creative touch it came to full flower.

Note that there six petitions in the prayer. The first three remind us of our obligations to God. The last three are concerned with our relations to one another.

"Hallowed be Thy Name," the first petition, assures us that reverence for God is basic. The modern world greatly needs this reminder, for our age, in certain respects, is shockingly vulgar, indecent, and bad-mannered.

"Thy Kingdom come." Jesus preached, as His major teaching, the gospel of the kingdom. This divine realm is both a present commonwealth, and a future hope.

"Thy will be done." This is an apt petition for dark days like those of the present. It was the Master's prayer in the garden of Gethsemane, and of Dr. Grenfell as he drifted out to sea, on an ice pan, with little hope of rescue.

"Give us this day our daily bread." This is a prayer for simple, modest living, a request for bread not cake.

"Forgive us our debts" is first a confession of sin. For honest contrition there is forgiveness, but it is conditional. Unless we forgive our debtors, God cannot forgive us.

The last petition, "Lead us not into temptation," is a practical reminder of the ever-present power of the tempter. We are to be watchful, beseeching God that He will not allow us to yield to temptation, and fall into its snare.

SAND VALLEY SCHOOL.

Eva Marble, teacher.

"Be Wise, Use Good English" is our aim for this year.

We planted hollyhocks along one side of our schoolhouse. They are just peeping above the ground.

We have a bulletin board placed in the front part of our room. Mrs. Marble puts reading material, art work, geography and agriculture work which we are to do outside of class on it. We must be very careful to read this board or we will not get a perfect mark for the day.

We are experimenting with mushrooms, trying to find the variety which is poisonous to flies.

Mrs. E. J. Surprenant visited our school on Thursday afternoon. We had school outdoors because the hornets were too thick in the schoolhouse.

The second and third grades are busy working in their Elson Silent Reading cards.

What Landis might have answered was lost in the limbo of things unsaid. As they rounded a "hairpin" curve and shot away down the succeeding tangent they could see the stopped car high above standing behind a row of great stones set up by the road builders to guard the down-mountain side of the highway. All at once one of the huge guard rocks heaved itself from its place to come tumbling over and down the declivity, timed as if by some calculating agency to reach the lower tangent coincidentally with the racing roadster.

Fortunately, Markham was one of those drivers whose reactions in an emergency are so instantaneous as to seem purely automatic. He did the only thing there was to do—released the brakes and jammed the foot throttle open to its limit.

It was all over in a moment. With only a fraction of a second to spare at the point of intersection, but that fraction on the side of safety, the flying car shot fairly under the hurtling menace and went racing on to the next doubling curve.

It was not until the car shot out upon the valley level that Landis relaxed, drawing a long breath and saying, "I'm handing it to you, Wally. You've a lot better nerve than I have. I should have tried to stop if I'd been at the wheel. How do you suppose it happened?"

"One guess is as good as another. Mine is that whoever was driving that stopped car had cramped his front wheel against the rock for safety. Natural thing to do on such a stiff grade."

Silence for a speeding mile, and then Landis fairly shouted.

"Say, Wally! We've been asleep at the switch—both of us! Think back a minute; didn't you notice that the rock didn't make any noise coming down?"

"What's that?" snapped Markham, braking the car to an abrupt stop. Then, "I knew there was something queer about the thing, but I was too busy just then to figure out what it was. But you've put your finger on it. That tumbling rock ought to have made racket enough to wake the dead—and there wasn't a sound!"

"Well, you know there is only one way to account for that, don't you?"

"You bet your life I do! That stopped car had your infernal machine in it—that's what. We're in luck at last." And he began to back the car for a turn.

"Hold on," Landis broke in. "What are you going to do?"

"Go back up the hill and have it out with that bunch, whoever they are!"

"Listen to reason a minute, Wally," Landis said quietly. "If they are the men we've been trying for three days to run down, how much chance would we have in a road scrap with a carload of yeggs most likely armed to the teeth? Besides, we haven't lost 'em. They can't go on to wherever they're going without passing us, and when they come along we can swing in and sit on their tail, can't we?"

"Ump! You're too d—d sensible for any use!" Markham grunted. "It gets me on the raw. I'm not used to being stood up as a mark for a bunch of murderers to throw stones at. Just before the thing came off I was asking you if the car wasn't a Nordyke. Was it? Or was it the Fleetwing?"

"I couldn't say. All I noticed was that it was a closed car."

"No matter; we'll find out in a few minutes what it was—or is."

They were entering Copah. Markham steered into the shadows and turned off the car lights.

They had not long to wait before the headlights of a following car appeared on the rearward road. "Spot it as it passes!" Markham rapped out; and so they did, both of them. What they saw was a mere thickening of the mysteries. For the passing car, slowing to town speed as it entered the town street, was no other than Canby's limousine, with Canby himself at the wheel.

"If I wasn't reasonably certain that we're both fairly sane and in our right minds," Markham began. Then, "You saw them, didn't you?"

"I saw Canby, yes."

"But he wasn't alone."

"No; there were two people in the back seat."

"Exactly. Betty and her father, of course."

"I suppose so; though I couldn't make them out very well."

"But, see here; Canby was an hour ahead of us at the last place we inquired, which was only a few miles back. His car couldn't have been the one we saw stopped up there on the mountain grade."

"Of course not. The people who were in that car pushed a rock over on us. Besides, Canby hasn't my black box."

"D—n!" gritted Markham impatiently; and then, "Owen, this thing is getting too many twists and tangles in it—altogether too many. I can't understand how Canby got behind us."

Landis shook his head. "Let's wait a bit and see if another car doesn't turn up," he suggested. "There must be another one, you know."

They waited for half an hour or more and nothing turned up. "It's no use," Markham said at last. "We may as well drive on and get something to eat."

They had eaten dinner in the dining room without seeing anybody they recognized, and were making inquiries at the desk for the Canby-Lawson party.

"Nobody of either name this evening," said the clerk, "but that doesn't necessarily spell anything. If they are merely motoring through, they may have taken dinner tickets at the cashier's window; in which case we'd have no record."

"I see," said Markham. Then he took from his pocketbook the slip upon which, in the St. Joseph hotel, he had copied the names of the three Louisville men, and handed it to the clerk. "Any of these gentlemen here?"

"Why, yes; all three of them. They came in this afternoon. There they are now—" pointing across the lobby.

"Thanks," said Markham, and the two crossed to the neighborhood of the three, Markham saying, "They don't know us, so we can take a good look at them, for whatever that may amount to," and accordingly they took a couple of chairs a short distance from the three where they could sit and smoke and observe.

For a time the espial went for nothing. One of the trio was reading a newspaper, and the others, the tall man and the sandy-haired one—the one who had bought the new Fleetwing in Chillicothe—were smoking. There was nothing suspicious in the appearance or actions of any of them.

"Well?" said Landis, "Where do we go from here?"

"I'm waiting for Canby to show up," was the low-toned reply. "I'd like to find out how he is linked up with these people."

"In that case won't it be better if we don't let him see us first?"

"You're right; we'll take the mezzanine. We can look on as well from there."

They had scarcely settled themselves when a surprised voice behind said, "Well—of all things! You two out here?"

"Well—of All Things! You Two Out Here?"

"Betty!" Landis exclaimed, springing to his feet.

Markham laughed and said, "Sure; and why not?"

"But you never said a word to me, either of you, before we left Carthage! How did you come—by train?"

"Part of the way," Markham qualified. "But again I ask, why not? Why shouldn't we take a few days off and—"

"I know; but it's perfectly wonderful that we should meet here this way."

Markham drew up a chair for her. "Sit down and we'll unravel it. Owen was needing a rest and a change of scene, so I took him by the neck and ran off with him. Where is your father? And how do you come to be breaking your journey in Copah?"

"Daddy is around, somewhere; and we're not breaking our journey We're leaving presently—going on to see the Red desert by moonlight."

"Oh; so you're driving?"

"Yes; with Bert, in his stuffy luxury car. At the last minute after we'd all bought our train tickets—Bert was going along, you know—he said he'd like to drive, if we would. So we took our tickets back and came in the car."

"Had a good trip this far?"

"Glorious."

"When did you reach Copah?"

"Oh, quite a little while ago; about five o'clock, I think it was. Anyhow, daddy and I had time to bathe and change and get to the solarium in time to see the sunset over the Red desert. It was simply gorgeous!"

"But you took a drive after that, didn't you?" Landis put in.

"Daddy and I? Oh, no; we just rested until dinner time. But when did you two leave Carthage?"

Markham named the date, and she said, "Why, we must have been right along the road together! Or no; you said you came by train, didn't you?"

"I said, 'part of the way.' We got tired of the train, so I bought a car, and we came on in that."

"But where are you going?"

"Ask Owen; I'm merely his chauffeur."

Thus dragged in Landis played up as best he could.

"I don't know—any more than the cat, Betty. We've just trundled along from one place to another never knowing where the next stop would be."

"It must be simply spiffy to drift about that way, with no responsibilities."

"It is," Landis agreed. "I'm—er—having the time of my life."

"Yet you don't look it," asserted the frank one, fixing him with an appraisive eye. "You look haggard and worried. You ought to stop over in the Timanyoni and go fossil hunting with daddy."

Markham had been keeping an eye on the group of three below, and now he stood up and turned to face the balustrade. For Canby had joined the three, and was giving one of them a folded paper.

Markham excused himself and caught a descending elevator, and when Canby and the three moved away toward a side exit he was able to follow without being seen. The chase was a short one, ending at the hotel garage, which the four men entered together. Markham, slipping in upon the heels of the four, was able to conceal himself.

In a few minutes a handsome Fleetwing Eight came rolling velvet-footed to pause with its front wheels on the threshold of the entrance. As the car came to a stand Canby got out.

"As I've told you, you'll have to use your head,' he was saying to the man at the wheel of the Eight. "The sketch-map layout I gave you is the best I could do. Your route book will show you where to turn off."

"No chance for a break on the date, is there?" came in low tones from the interior of the car.

"I don't make breaks," was the brittle retort. "You've got a monopoly in that field. Among you, you've balled things up beautifully! You had the whole thing in your hands three days ago; all you had to do was to sit down and wait until the flurry was over. And all you did was to yell for help! But that's a back number. Let it go and get out of here. And don't fall down on this business tonight. I'll meet you as arranged. Get a move!"

The big car rolled out across the sidewalk; and Canby walked quickly around to the side entrance of the hotel. Markham returned to the hotel lobby, where he found Landis waiting for him.

"What did you find out?" Landis demanded.

"Enough to warrant us in getting quick action. Get your dunnage and wait at the side entrance. I'll be there with the car inside of five minutes."

In rather less than five minutes Markham was placing the roadster at the side entrance to the hotel, and they shot out upon the broad, silent expanse of the Red desert.

Knitted Fashions Tune to Autumn

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

NATURE is glorifying the autumn landscape with no richer coloring than that which fashion is lavishing on the new knitted costumes. The browns, and by the way, special emphasis is being placed on brown in the knitted realm for early fall, the wine reds and greens and golden hues which radiate from the knitted mesh of the new sweaters, suits, frocks and ensembles are in very counterpart of the warm tones which grow in the setting of an autumnal sun or in the painting of the myriads of falling leaves which are even now carpeting the earth.

In making selection of the new knitted outfit, the important role which has been assigned to brown is a point well worth considering. So pronounced is this flair for brown that even the shoes one wears with the knitted costume are expected to be in harmonious brown. The girl seated in the picture is wearing new-model brown kid oxfords with her lacy-knit brown dress, the same being distinguished with clever cutout work at the sides.

The outstanding style points other than its color in regard to the dress are its long sleeves and, most important of all, its flattering yoke of white crochet, the buttoned collar of which stresses the high neckline which is so essential to chic this season.

The novelty of this yoke bespeaks the fact that it is not alone the color glory of the newer knitted costumes which is capturing all the honors for when it comes to "ideas" their name is legion. Here's citing a few of them, such as, for instance, the cunning detachable capes which top many of the recent incoming knitted frocks, sweaters which are made suspender fashion to wear with lingerie guimpes, and leg o'mutton sleeves, if you please, and square neck and all sorts of scarf manipulations.

You will be interested, too, in the perfectly lovely dresses which are knitted of thinnest zephyr, or silk, if you can afford it, done in Irish lace pattern.

And there's the sweater! Don't forget sweaters. Not that you could if you would, for sweaters feature most spectacularly throughout knitted sections this season. If you are up and doing, you will be wearing a "scrumptious" sweater blouse with your new tweed or suede-like cloth swagger suit this fall. Paris couturiers are creating stunning outfits consisting of jacket and skirt of cloth with hand-crocheted sweaters instead of the usual blouse. The three piece pictured to the right is typical. The suit is made of black velvety cloth, the jacket boasting a very gay lining. The jumper is hand crocheted and observes all the new rules of the fashion game, such as the square neck, the to-the-wrist sleeves with full top and the touch of bright color which enlivens black these days—the latter in this instance accomplished via embroidered designs done in multi-toned angora yarn.

FALL OUTFIT THAT HAS ITS "APPEAL"

Knitted things have a new importance this fall. Their materials are firmer and they have a more tailored quality than they have ever had in the past.

There is a new three-piece outfit that's stunning, with a skirt of uneven check of diamond pattern in black and white. The sweater is one of the most interesting weaves I've ever seen and you'd declared, as I did, that it was hand-done. It's white with a touch of black, and black-ribbed band at the hips and edging the elbow sleeves. The coat is seven-eighths length, semi-fitted, with tailored lapels and slit pockets fastening at the waist with link buttons. You couldn't have anything smarter for the street, as well as for the country, for early fall. It comes in other color combinations, too, if you want something brighter.

The tweedy-knit effects are especially good. One, in grayish tones, with diagonal ribbing, has a skirt with a bright green crush girdle of jersey that fastens with two buckles. A white sweater is knitted in self stripes and has the new high neckline.—Kansas City Times.

French Designers Seek Ultimate in Comfort

With an eye to the weather-vane and the other on a pocketbook, the French designers are managing to turn out, at this time of year, some of the most successful clothes.

Frocks that will get the ultimate of comfort in warm or cool weather, and will cause the least pain to check books seem to be their aims—with the result that many of the new dresses are greeted with louder cheers than the Paris dressmaking world has ever heard before.

Stripes of All Kinds

Paris has taken to stripes with more than a little enthusiasm and Roman stripes, candy stripes, pin stripes and bold zebra stripes are featured in bright colors or two-toned effects in summer clothes designed for the smart resorts.

BROWN AND WHITE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Work out your color scheme for your early fall coat or suit in brown and white if you would keep pace with fashion's step. The model pictured is a forerunner of coats to be for the crisp autumn months. It is of brown and white tweed and is trimmed with brown and white fur. The ensemble of this costume is perfect from a color standpoint. The little velvet toque is brown. The fact that it is velvet is significant, for most of the initial hats are just such clever velvet fantasies as this. The shoes also enter into the color alliance. These sturdy brown kid oxfords have a discreet design of lizard across the throat. The low cuban heels make the shoe practical for autumn walks. They also assure comfort during the shopping hours.

CEDAR RUN SCHOOL.

The first, second and third grades are learning the poems, "The Turtle" and "The Moon's the North Winds Cooky," in language class.

We have many pretty flowers and a patience plant in our schoolroom. The plant has two blossoms.

The fifth and sixth grade language class is writing friendly letters this week.

We have assigned duties for each week.

Miss Leishman brought a mount of insects to show to the seventh grade Nature Study class.

Dwight Turner brought his illustrated book, "Robin Hood," for supplementary reading.

We have current events every Tuesday afternoon.

We drew pictures of Indian teepees and fall scenes for drawing on Friday. The best pictures are up on the wall.

We enjoyed the book, "Jolly Nip and Uncle Rip," which Miss Leishman read to us.

adequate lighting at no greater COST—the Control is strictly in your hands.

Adequate lighting
does not mean increased cost—IT MEANS "HAVING CORRECT LIGHT AT THE POINT OR PLACE IN THE CORRECT INTENSITY To Adequately light the point or place sufficiently well to promote good work or conserve your eyes or keep you from falling."

For Instance:
You want light enough in your basement so you can find the strawberry jam, or the hammer or this or that.

You want light enough in your Coal Bin so that you will not stumble over lumps of coal that may have been left during day light.

You want enough light so you can read without eye strain.

You want enough light to thread the needle, etc.
