

DIPLOMAS GIVEN TO 59 GRADUATES

Large Audiences at Three Graduation Functions This Week.

We start fighting the minute we are born and we continue to battle throughout life for worthwhile things, Dr. Paul Voelker, superintendent of public instruction-elect, told members of the Class of 1933, Cass City high school, in his commencement address Tuesday evening on the subject of "Fighting the Good Fight."

Dr. Voelker stressed the importance of the graduate taking up the fight against war, to take a stand against poverty, to battle for health, and to fight ignorance.

The next war, if there be one, will be no kitchen affair, he said. Gigantic airplanes capable of blotting out the whole population of a city may be guided in their death course by a man in an office thousands of miles away. There is no excuse for war in a modern civilization.

In a land rich with wheat, corn, sugar, coal, oil and every needful thing, there are few who have enough of everything. The poor man of today has hardly a chance and there is need for fighters for the right. The battle against disease is important because half of the people are ill or have some ailment, and cancer and heart disease are gradually increasing their inroads on mankind, while the fight against ignorance is as needful now as in the past. Schools must go on no matter what the times.

We will never have clean politics until clean men get in the field and clean business likewise requires honorable men. Christ was a "he man"; would that we had more men like Him to clean up the mess of today.

The best defense is a strong offense, said the speaker. The blue devils will get you if you don't fight, and you're never licked until you quit. Be not overcome of evil but overcome evil with good. A quitter never wins; a winner never quits.

Tuesday evening's audience filled the high school auditorium as did those of the two previous nights of

CARO H. S. WON CO. TRACK MEET

C. McDurmon Broke 100-yd. Dash Record of 23 Years' Standing.

Caro high school, with 50½ points, won the 27th annual track and field meet of Tuscola county schools on Friday. Cass City, with 37 points, was second. Scores of other schools follow: Millington, 16½; Vassar, 16; and Fairgrove, 11. Mayville baseball team defeated Reese, 12 to 9, in an added sidelight to the program.

Clare McDurmon ran the 100 yard dash in 10 seconds to break a record of 23 years' standing of 10.2 seconds, set by Fred Striffler in

Huron Farmer Confesses Murder

Calmly admitting that he shot and killed his father in their home near Bad Axe after a quarrel Sunday night, Victor Egert, 22, waived examination on a second degree murder charge when arraigned before Justice Dow at Bad Axe Monday.

Victor Egert said his father had been drinking when they quarreled. "I was afraid of him and knew that he would choke me if he got his hands on me. I warned him and then shot when he came toward me," the youth told officers.

Officers brought Victor from Detroit Monday where he had gone following the slaying. He went to Detroit to give his car, his wrist watch and other belongings to his brother, he said. He then drove to the Davison police station, about a mile, and gave himself up.

INJURIES FATAL TO UNDERSHERIFF

Arthur L. Hoagg, Victim of Auto Accident, Died Saturday.

Arthur L. Hoagg, 35, of Sandusky, undersheriff in Sanilac county, died Saturday afternoon in the Redford branch of the Receiving hospital of Detroit, from injuries received in an automobile collision in Detroit on Friday. Jas. Loree of Carsonville, son-in-law of Sheriff Jas. A. Grenman, received a fractured skull and a fractured left arm in the accident.

Hoagg and Loree were on their way home from Jackson prison where they had taken Oliver Ames, 17, to serve four years on an arson charge.

Mr. Hoagg was driving off Grand River Ave. onto Braille Ave. when his car and one driven Local Students Win Awards in Track at C. S. T. C.

Albert Warner, Cass City freshman at Central State Teachers' college, was named as a numeral winner by Coach George Van Bibber at the conclusion of the freshmen track season. Warner looked good in the dashes all season and led the squad in total points for the three meets collecting 26 points.

Caswell Hunter, Cass City sophomore at Central State Teachers' college, was one of 16 men selected by Athletic Director Wallace G. Parker to receive varsity "C" awards for participation on the Bearcat track squad this spring. This is the second track award that Caswell has received during his two years at Central as he received his numerals last year. He was a consistent performer in the quarter mile and a member of the crack mile relay quartet that lost but one race in dual competition. In the Alma meet, he had his best day running his quarter mile leg of the relay in 50 seconds from a standing start.

Plan Masonic Picnic for Aug. 10

At a meeting of the masters of the various Masonic lodges of the district held at Mayville Tuesday evening, June 6, plans were discussed for holding a Masonic picnic at North Lake on Thursday, August 10. G. A. Striffler and Alex Henry represented Tyler lodge of Cass City. The activities of the day were assigned to the various lodges as follows: dancing, Millington Lodge; baseball game, Caro Lodge; boating and bathing, Kingston Lodge; children's entertainment, Mayville and Vassar Lodges; horse-shoe contest, Cass City Lodge; band, North Branch Lodge; speaking, Otisville Lodge. General picnic committee are: chairman, M. C. Mount of Mayville; secretary, M. Ransford of Caro; assistant secretary, O. B. Kitzinger of Millington.

Further arrangements will be made at a meeting to be held in Kingston on June 20.

Bible School Opens Monday

The pastors of the cooperating churches met Monday afternoon at the home of Rev. T. S. Bottrell to lay more complete plans for the daily vacation Bible school which will open Monday morning, June 19, at 9 o'clock. Students and teachers will meet at their own churches where automobiles will be provided and all join in the parade.

EVERYONE HAS VOICE IN MILK PRICE RAISE

To Consider Rights of Producers, Sellers and Consumers in Hearings.

Michigan dairymen, city residents who buy milk, and distributors who handle milk can rest assured that decisions on milk prices made by Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, will be made only after thorough investigations of the rights of each class of people, as has been done in the recent hearings on milk prices for the city of Chicago.

A similar investigation of the market problems in Detroit has been requested by the Michigan Milk Producers' Association and representatives of the association have appeared in Washington asking for a formal hearing of their case. Michigan dairymen in areas selling milk to condensing plants will ask for an investigation of their market prices.

City milk buyers will not be asked to carry the whole burden of any price increase. Secretary Wallace has power to invoke trade agreements among the distributors which will reduce the costs of placing milk in the homes and which, therefore, will enable the distributors to pay the farmers more for milk without making equal changes in their retail prices.

Detroit milk buyers will be invited to send representatives to the Washington hearings on Detroit milk prices. At the hearings on Chicago prices, Mrs. W. F. Fribley, president of the Chicago housewives' league, appeared in Washington to give evidence on the consumer's side of the case. Detroit residents will have equal opportunities to state their case.

Decisions made after the Detroit milk price hearing undoubtedly will have an indirect effect upon milk prices for other Michigan cities, but no regulations made for Detroit will be binding in other Michigan cities until such cities have had a proper chance to present evidence of any peculiar conditions which might effect prices in that area.

LEGISLATURE ON THE FINAL LAP

This Week Will See End of the Longest Session Ever Held.

By Elton R. Eaton.

Probably Saturday, June 17, the members of the Michigan legislature will go home to tell the folks that voted for them what they have done for the people of Michigan during the longest legislative session in the history of the state.

They will go home to answer questions about legislative inquiries, grand jury investigations, rumors and charges of graft and a score and one other interrogations that really should be directed to only a scattering few. Possibly the few might not be entitled to the suspicion that now seems to hang over a fairly large group.

In these closing days of a legislative session that should have written into Michigan history one of its most interesting chapters, it seems that members of both the house and senate are devoting the greater portion of their time either denying some of these ugly rumors or trying to find out the truth about them.

Michigan should not misunderstand—there are many senators and many representatives who are sincerely trying to find out the facts about these rumors. They are trying to find out if money has really been used to buy legislative votes. It is difficult for old time legislative observers to believe that there is a man in the house or senate who would permit himself to be sold for a mess of pottage. There are many, many high type men in the legislature, men that the districts that elected them can be proud of.

But in a legislature that was so completely over-turned by the voters as was done last fall, it is true that possibly some came into the legislature not schooled in the high ethics that have and should prevail in that body. Some point out that possibly they did not have the real conception of the responsibility the voters had placed upon them.

This is true in some cases, with-

AUTOMOBILE SALES IN MICH. SHOW GAINS

Improved Business Conditions Credited with Increase in Purchases.

More new automobiles will be sold in Michigan during the present month than were sold during June, 1932. This prediction is based upon a study of records of the Department of State. Sale of new cars in Michigan reached a low ebb in February, 1933, when approximately 175 automobiles a day were registered. Since then there has been a steady increase. During the first week of June, 3,729 new automobiles were registered as compared with 2,891 for the same period in 1932.

Improved business conditions also are credited with the increase in the number of motor vehicle operators' licenses that are being issued daily from the department. In the past two months the average number of licenses issued daily has increased from 900 to 1,500.

Fairgrove Girl Drowns at Caro

While swimming in the Cass river near the Michigan Sugar Co. factory at Caro, Miss Anna Lenger, 20, of Fairgrove met death Sunday. She dropped off a ledge and was drowned. Coroner Lee Huston pronounced the death accidental. The body was recovered nearly two hours after the accident by Adelbert Clark, deputy sheriff. There were seven young people in the swimming party, two of whom were brothers of Miss Lenger.

Miss Lenger is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Adolf Lenger, and two brothers. Funeral services were held Tuesday from the Sacred Heart church, Caro, the Rev. Fr. John Parker officiating.

Miss Judd Bride of Arthur Randall

White peonies, snow balls and lilies banked the altar of St. Michael's church in Pontiac Saturday morning when Miss Mary Agnes Judd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Byron Judd, and Arthur S. Randall of Cass City, spoke their marriage vows. The ceremony, at 10:30 o'clock, was performed by Rev. Father Crowley.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was

RECEPTION AT HARTT COUNTRY HOME MONDAY

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Mitchell (Flossie Merchant) of Detroit, a bride and groom of a week, were honored at a reception given at the pretty country home of Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Hartt, one mile west of town, Monday evening.

The rooms were decorated with large baskets of pink and white peonies and pink and white roses, the color scheme being carried out throughout.

Music was the main feature of the evening. There were over ninety guests present. A dainty luncheon was served at twelve o'clock by the hostess. The young couple were presented with many beautiful gifts from their friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell left the next day for their new home in Detroit.

SANILAC HAS 493 8TH GRADE GRADS

Alice MacLachlan, with Mark of 98.6, Has Highest Standings.

Four hundred ninety-three 8th grade pupils wrote on the regular state examination in Sanilac county on May 19 and of this number 392 or 79½% were successful.

The honor of having the highest standings goes to Alice MacLachlan of District No. 4, Lexington township, with an average of 98.6.

The second place honors are divided between Margaret Nevill of Minden No. 1 and Casper Repp of Lexington No. 4, both having an average of 98.2. Donald Stapleton is teacher of Lexington No. 4 and Fred Klaus is teacher of Minden No. 1.

Following is a list of those students having an average of 95 or better and the name of their teacher.

Merle Mortimer, Dist. No. 1, Buel, Miss Mary Shrapnell, teacher.

Gordon Wagner, Buel 4, Miss Grace Coon.

Distributed 30 Bouquets to Shut-ins

Shut-ins throughout the United States and Canada were cheered Saturday, June 10, by gifts of flowers as florists observed the first annual National Flower Shut-in Day. H. L. Hunt, local florist, distributed thirty bouquets to shut-ins at the hospitals and in homes in Cass City. This project is sponsored by the Florists Telegraph Delivery Association. Messages of cheer and hope were sent with the flower gifts.

M. S. C. Graduates Receive Diplomas

Among the 609 students who received degrees at the Michigan State College seventy-fifth annual commencement in Demonstration Hall on June 12 were the following local young people:

Clifton Wallace Heller, B. S. in Agriculture; Lucile Knight, A. B. in Liberal Arts; Mrs. Helen Knight Hickok, A. B. in Liberal Arts; Esther Lucile Schell, A. B. in Liberal Arts; Virginia Janet Day, A. B. in Public School Music; Pauline Ahr Sandham, A. B. in Public School Music; Harriet Elizabeth Tindale, A. B. in Public School Music; Catherine Marie Hunt, B. S. in Home Economics; Stuart Vaughan Wilsey, M. S.; Mabel Marie Crandell, A. B. in Liberal Arts.

The commencement exercises, at which Dr. W. D. Henderson, director of Extension at the University of Michigan gave the address, marked the end of a long series of Senior activities during the preceding week.

FINE ADVICE TO H. S. GRADUATES

Youth Told to Face Life's Difficult Problems Courageously.

The high school auditorium was crowded Sunday night at the union church services when Rev. H. I. Voelker, for the past year pastor of the Evangelical church here, gave the baccalaureate address. Members of the Class of 1933 marched to the front of the auditorium as Mrs. J. Ivan Niergarth played the "Processional Grand March" by Mollison. The invocation was given by Rev. P. J. Alured, the prayer by Rev. W. R. Curtis, the Scripture reading by Rev. G. A. Spittler, and the benediction by Rev. T. S. Bottrell. The Girls' Glee Club sang two numbers "All Through the Night" and "Now the Day Is Over."

Rev. Voelker's subject was "The Glory of Going On" and his text was taken from the 84th Psalm, "They go from strength to strength." Mr. Voelker said:

"It was a happy moment when a person has come to the end of his course and can say, 'I have finished my course.' Graduation is a happy hour for the class, for the parents who have sacrificed, and for the faithful teaching staff.

"They go from strength to strength," appeals to youth because it contains no anti-climax. Life is not like a flashing meteor that soon is lost in darkness. It does not end in dust and ashes. The best lies not in the past but in the future. They go from strength to strength.

"Life has its defeats but to be defeated is not tragedy. It's tragic when a person in the hour of defeat gives up and allows his life to become embittered. There is a certain glory in defeat if the individual does not give up but lays hold of the available resources and turns defeat into victory. Columbus was an example of this type, who

Rotarians Honor Supt. of Schools

Original poetry is a forte of M. B. Auten that is known to his Rotary friends, as on a few occasions of the club's gatherings he has broken out and spread rhyme and meter to his heart's content. Tuesday was an occasion of this character when Mr. Auten introduced a short speech with an original poetical sketch. The poem took the form of a take-off, but the talk following was of a serious nature and was a testimonial to the worth of L. D. Randall, superintendent of schools, as a Rotarian, citizen and educator. Mr. Auten voiced the club's appreciation of Mr. Randall's value to the community in the four years he has resided here, and presented him with a floor lamp from his Rotarian friends. Mr. Randall in responding said their residence in Cass City were the most pleasant years he and Mrs. Randall had experienced.

Carl Martin of Los Angeles, a former resident of Cass City, told club members his experience during the recent earthquake in California.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Economic and Monetary Conference Opens in London; Illinois and Indiana for Prohibition Repeal; Varied Doings in Congress.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SIXTY-SIX nations were represented by some of their best financial and economic authorities when King George formally opened the world economic and monetary conference in London. It was a momentous occasion, for on the results obtained from the conference depends in great measure the welfare of the world at least in the immediate future. The delegates will be in session for many weeks, and the success of their deliberations rests on the mutual concessions that may be made, for no one nation or group of nations can expect to obtain any advantages.

Most vital of the problems to be tackled is admittedly the stabilization of currencies, which involves the return of all nations to the gold standard or at least to a metallic standard; and this return must be a synchronous movement so that all countries will be on the same level at all times. In the debate on this question leading parts will be taken by Senator Key Pittman of Nevada and Ralph W. Morrison, retired banker of Texas, the member of the American delegation to whom the monetary problem was especially given for formulation of the policy of the United States.

Senator Pittman before the conference opened told something of a plan he had devised by which the nations could use silver as a certain percentage of their currency reserves, thereby economizing on gold and stabilizing the price of silver. He insisted this would not constitute bimetallism as gold would still be the standard. The nations appear to be in agreement, Mr. Pittman said, that the currency reserve of gold should be lowered below the 40 per cent now required in the United States. Twenty-five per cent gold coverage was mentioned for purposes of illustration by the senator, who said that one-fifth of this reserve should be silver.

When the price of silver was low the governments would buy and maintain reserves of the metal, which they could sell when the price was up, the senator said.

The other major aims of the conference are the raising of the world price level, and the lowering of international trade barriers. Of course the three are inextricably intertwined, and they affect all other problems that will come up. Back of it all is the matter of the ten billions odd owed by European nations to the United States. War debts were excluded from the agenda by Washington, but they will be continually in the minds of many of the delegates and eventually something must be done about them.

ILLINOIS and Indiana by popular vote added themselves to the list of states that assure their ratification of the amendment repealing prohibition. In the former state the vote was about 4 to 1 in favor of the wets, and the Hoosiers voted for repeal by approximately 2 to 1. There had been no doubt as to the result in Illinois, but Indiana, long one of the driest of states and the very center of the Anti-Saloon league's power, was counted on by the prohibitionists to stand against ratification. One of their leaders, L. E. York, explained their defeat by saying:

"The repealists had ample funds supplied by the breweries and distillers and the state organization had paid workers at the polls."

SENATOR PAT HARRISON'S plan to finance the public works industry control measure was adopted by the senate finance committee, which then reported on the bill for debate. The backbone of the Harrison program, which is calculated to raise $227,000,000, is a capital stock tax of one-tenth of 1 per cent on the net worth of corporations. This tax is expected to raise $80,000,000. Corporations are to be allowed to declare their own valuation, and as check on the provision a penalty tax is provided of 5 per cent on surplus profits of more than 12 1/2 per cent.

Second feature of the Harrison program is the imposition, in lieu of normal tax rates levied on the individual as the house bill contemplated, of a 5 per cent tax on corporation dividends to be levied at the source. This is expected to bring in $73,000,000.

Third is an additional one-half cent tax on gasoline, calculated to raise $62,000,000, instead of the three-fourths of a cent tax proposed by the house.

The railroad reorganization bill and the $2,000,000,000 home mortgage measure were among the important bills in conference. The latter was passed by the senate without a record vote.

DEMOCRATIC revolt against some of President Roosevelt's measures created discord in both the house and the senate and the administration's program for national recovery was not having a smooth road. The first upset had been the senate's action in voting a 25 per cent limitation on reductions in compensation payments to war veterans, which added about $170,000,000 to the independent offices appropriation bill before it was sent to conference. Mr. Roosevelt, accepting his first defeat, sought peace by compromise. At his direction new regulations were prepared governing the payments to disabled war veterans and to the dependents of deceased soldiers, under which the veterans would receive an additional $50,000,000 or $60,000,000 over that which was contemplated in the President's original orders.

The reduction in payments under the new orders would be about $400,000,000 instead of the $450,000,000 originally contemplated. The veterans' bloc in congress was not at all enthusiastic over this compromise.

CYRUS H. K. CURTIS of Philadelphia, one of the oldest and best known of American newspaper and magazine publishers, died at his home at the age of eighty-three years. He had been ill since May of last year when he was stricken with heart disease while on his yacht near New York. The Ladies Home Journal, the Saturday Evening Post and the Country Gentleman were Mr. Curtis' magazines, and he was also president of the Curtis-Martin Newspapers, Inc., publishing the Philadelphia Inquirer, the Public Ledger, and the Evening Public Ledger in Philadelphia, and the New York Evening Post. His gifts to charitable and educational institutions totaled many millions.

WHY the government should have paid Richard B. BeVier $1.40 apiece for 200,000 toilet kits for men in the conservation corps—a price that the war department said was 55 cents too high—was a question that the senate military committee found hard to answer.

Louis McHenry Howe, secretary to the President, talked with BeVier 15 minutes before the signing of the contract by Robert Fechner, director of the conservation corps, but Mr. Howe told the committee he never directly or indirectly attempted to influence any decision as to the purchase. He said he transferred the whole matter to E. W. Lowery, assistant to Budget Director Douglas. Then Mr. Lowery took the stand and declared he never had any responsibility in the matter, simply making a recommendation to Mr. Fechner. This Mr. Fechner testified he construed as an order.

There was no least intimation of improper motives on the part of any of the gentlemen involved, but the senators seemed agreed that Mr. BeVier was a "supersalesman." When Mr. Howe was on the stand Senator Dickinson of Iowa asked him why he did not turn the matter over to the War department instead of "starting up all this new purchasing machinery."

"Well," Mr. Howe replied, "this seemed to be a complaint against the War department itself. I was told the War department was about to make a purchase that would be disadvantageous to the government."

"Who said it would be disadvantageous?" asked Senator Robert D. Carey of Wyoming.

"Mr. BeVier," responded the White House secretary.

CREDIT must be given the council of the League of Nations for inducing the Hitler government of Germany to abandon part of its warfare on the Jews. The council, acting on the petition of a resident of upper Silesia, unanimously adopted a report declaring that the boycott of Jewish shops in the territory and some regulations affecting doctors, lawyers and notaries were in conflict with the Polish-German minorities convention. Thereupon Friedrich von Kellar, spokesman for the reich, told the council the German government would restore Jews in German upper Silesia to positions they had lost since the beginning of the Nazi regime.

CONVENTIONS by the dozens and scores are being held in Chicago this year, numerous especially because of the World's fair. Most of them are commercial or professional, but among them was one, just held, that exhaled a delightful perfume. It was the annual meeting of the Garden Clubs of America, held in the Drake hotel, which overlooks Grant park and the lake front. The organization is a federation of local garden clubs whose members are for the most part women of position and means in their various communities. Their interests are especially in the conservation of wild flowers, the preservation of the redwoods of California and the elimination of the billboard along highways. Mrs. Jonathan Bulkley of New York city was re-elected national president. Mrs. Oakley Thorne of Millbrook, N. Y., is the honorary vice president. The hostess clubs were the organizations in Lake Forest, Kenilworth and Evanston.

A feature of the convention was a supper held in the Shedd aquarium, where the ladies gave evidence that their interest in gardening included an interest in the culture of gold fish in rock garden pools.

FERDINAND PECORA, counsel for the senate committee that has been investigating the doings of J. P. Morgan Co., undertook to bring to light the details of the operations by which the Van Sweringen brothers of Cleveland financed their extensive railroad expansion. He said he intended to show that those men, with associates, "purchase railroads with money paid by the public, but always they sit in the saddle." O. P. Van Sweringen was the chief witness, and he was the "forgettingest" witness yet to appear before the committee. To almost all Mr. Pecora's questions he replied, "I don't recall," or "I don't remember," until he drew a sharp rebuke from Senator Barkley, who was presiding.

"It seems incredible that a man of as large affairs as yours could have so little information about them," the Kentucky senator said sharply.

"I don't want to depend on guesswork," Van Sweringen replied.

About all he remembered was that he and his associates received from the Morgan firm two loans totaling almost $40,000,000 on October 21, 1930.

Persistently, however, Mr. Pecora drove at two matters—first, to show that the Van Sweringens had built up their railroad holdings, not through investment of their own money, but through borrowings, the pyramiding of holding companies, and the sale of holding company securities to the public; second, to show the rise of the Morgan interest in the Van Sweringen holdings, beginning with equipment loans which were used in several instances to buy from companies doing business with the Morgans, and ending, as future evidence is meant to show, by Morgan & Co. acquiring control over the Van Sweringen interests.

WHEN Princeton's scholastic year opens in the fall the old university will have a new president, its fifteenth. He is Dr. Harold Willis Dodds, who has been professor of politics in the university and chairman of the administrative board of the school of public and international affairs.

Professor Dodds, who is not quite forty-four years old, is the youngest man to be chosen for the presidency of Princeton in 173 years. He is recognized as an international expert on electoral methods, and is regarded as an authority on municipal government.

RUSSELL T. SHERWOOD, that elusive gentleman who was reputedly the financial and business agent of Jimmy Walker while the latter was mayor of New York, and who disappeared when he was wanted as a witness during the Seabury inquiry into Walker's affairs, came back from hiding and was promptly called before the federal grand jury in New York that was investigating the former mayor's income tax returns. His attorney, Michael F. Dee, was in an anteroom but Sherwood did not call on him for advice, which was taken as an indication that he answered fully and freely all questions put to him. When dismissed Sherwood hurried to his temporary residence in New Jersey so that he would not be arrested on the state charges pending since he fled during the Seabury inquiry. At that time he was fined $50,000.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT nominated South Trimble, Jr., of Kentucky to be solicitor for the Department of Commerce.

He also sent to the senate the following nominations for United States attorneys: John A. Garver for Idaho, William J. Barker for New Mexico, Carl C. Donough for Oregon, and William McClanahan for western Tennessee.

LOW PRICE CARS VS. CHEAP CARS

We do not build a low-price car: the cost to us of building our car is pretty high.

But we do sell a high quality car at a low price.

Almost every new Ford V-8 car we have built so far this year, has cost more to manufacture than its selling price was. As you buy them at only $490 to $610, we have to depend on increasing volume to make up the difference.

The reason for this is simple:—a manufacturer who gives good value must expect to lose money on the first cars he sells because he cannot charge all his costs to the people who are first to buy.

But with the purchaser it is different—he cannot afford to lose anything on a car. It must give him full value from the first, and keep on giving him full value for years.

Two things make possible our combination of low prices and high cost quality:

1. Volume Production
2. Taking only one profit

First, we set our price at what would be fair to the public on the basis of economies we enjoy in volume production. Then, in order to justify and maintain our low price we must get volume sales.

Thus it comes that a car which is really high-cost to make, is also low-cost to buy.

There is a difference between a cheap car and a low-priced high quality car.

Ford prices are always fixed at a point which makes it profitable for a customer to buy.

Good and lasting business must produce profit to the buyer as well as to the seller. And of the two, the buyer's profit must be, comparatively, the larger one.

It pays us to sell the Ford V-8 because it pays you to buy it.

Two girls, who tied for high scholastic honors in a class of 140 seniors, are the valedictorians of the Royal Oak high school class, which was graduated Thursday night. They are Dorothy Wentworth, daughter of Benjamin Wentworth, of Decker, and Irma Cathryn Crabb, daughter of James W. Crabb, 8580 Hendrie boulevard, Huntington Woods. They delivered addresses at the Class Night program. Both are members of the National Honor Society and finished their scholastic work with averages of 3.298 out of a possible four points.

The old Sebewaing brewery, owned by the Sebewaing Beverage company, has been sold to William B. Wreford and associates of Detroit. A new company to be known as the Sebewaing Brewing company, will be formed with a capital of $150,000, of which $20,000 will be held in reserve for future development of the plant. Most of the stockholders of the Sebewaing Beverage company will be associated with the new company. The plant will be outfitted with all modern equipment with an initial capacity of 20,000 barrels a year.

Tampering with the switch and lights on the Pere Marquette right-of-way in Brown City is likely to get, some thoughtless, mischievous or malicious person or persons into trouble. The situation was revealed Saturday by John Lawson, special agent for the P. M., who is conducting an investigation. The meddling nearly resulted in a serious accident in May, when the through early morning freight, pounding into Brown City at 50 miles an hour, ran into an open switch and onto the siding alongside the old creamery, east of town. The engineer saw the situation too late to be able to stop without danger of wrecking his train so he took a chance on the side track being clear. Luck was with him and a wreck was averted. If there had been cars on the siding, the engineer and fireman would probably have been killed in the crash. The train consisted of 100 cars, heavily laden with inter-state goods, some consigned to European countries. A wreck have meant a heavy loss.—Banner.

Nineteen Tuscola county farmers have been granted seed loans by the federal government this spring, according to data in the office of E. L. Hammond, county agricultural agent. The loans averaged slightly less than 100 each, totaling $8,285. All loans are secured by crop mortgages and are due and payable late this year. Last year the total of the loans was $14,000, and were made to 114 farmers. At last report, Mr. Hammond said, more than 85 per cent of the borrowed money had been repaid.

John Morelock, Pigeon, died in Hubbard Memorial Hospital at Bad Axe Wednesday after being under observation four days for derangement. He was brought to the hospital Saturday night by the Pigeon night watchman after he had become unbalanced and shot at his wife. Mrs. Morelock was in her room when her husband fired. She ran out of the house and Morelock fired several shots into the ceiling. He had suffered a stroke last December, which is thought to have affected his mind. He also was affected with heart trouble.

Pat Flannery of Bad Axe has been appointed as one of the four liquor inspectors of the 7th district. The other members are: James Reid, Port Huron; Louis Priebs, Mt. Clemens, and Louis Klemmer. Flannery was the Democratic candidate for sheriff in Huron county last fall and his appointment is a popular one.

Indiana Cuts Costs $3,000,000 a Year.

How Indiana's governmental house-cleaning is saving the state $3,000,000 this year is revealed in a signed article in the June Rotarian Magazine, by Paul V. McNutt, governor of Indiana and former commander of the American Legion.

Last January, Indiana had 169 boards, bureaus and departments. Spurred by the depression, the legislature gave Governor McNutt what critics call dictatorial powers.

One result is that to date, more than a thousand employees have been dropped from the state payroll. Salaries have been reduced or equalized. The state highway department's overhead, alone, was reduced $51,000 a month. And by combining the Division of Health with the State University School of Medicine, additional health services were added at a budget saving of $80,000. In another department, one man now does the work for which nine men had been paid to do. In still another, 11 replace 38.

"The whole plan," says the governor, "is designed to meet the emergencies of the present day. But in the background is the more far-reaching ideal of injecting efficiency in the operation of the state's business."

Across Friendly Counters

No doubt you can remember the general store-keeper in some country village. A call on him was an experience in pleasant human relationship, in honesty and neighborliness. He discussed politics and crops with vigor and shrewdness. He told the truth about groceries and dress goods. His was a friendly counter, a comfortable place to trade.

But the fact is that today in towns and villages and cities everywhere hundreds of thousands of counters are honest and friendly in a way his could never be. They offer advertised merchandise! A manufacturer stands sponsor for this merchandise. On it he has put his name and brand. So sure is he of its usefulness, its purity and correct weight, or size, or strength, or delicacy, that he talks to you about it on the pages of the newspapers.

From coast to coast you can buy his product with confidence. Wherever you find it, and whoever sells it, you have the assurance that its quality will be what you expect and that the price you pay is fair.

In your home town and wherever you travel on business or pleasure, you may trade at friendly counters! You may buy advertised merchandise!

For a directory of the "friendly counters" in this community read the advertisements in this newspaper.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Mrs. Wm. Krause. Mrs. William Krause, highly esteemed resident of Argyle, passed away Thursday, June 8, at the home of her son, Frank, near Uby, at the age of 72 years, 5 months and 28 days.

Augusta Gottschalk was born in Germany, January 11, 1861. She was united in marriage October 17, 1879, to William Krause in Germany. He passed away July 4, 1932.

Shortly after their marriage, they came to America and settled in Detroit. In 1890 she moved with her husband and family to a farm in Argyle township, where they lived until 1920 when they moved to Argyle.

Mrs. Krause was a woman of fine character and was highly respected by her many friends who knew her as a good neighbor and companion. She was a life long member of the Lutheran church.

Mrs. Krause is survived by nine sons, John, Albert, Herman and August of Pontiac; Charles and William of Detroit; Fred of Port Huron; Frank of Uby and Edward of Sandusky. She also leaves 12 grandchildren, one great grandchild and one brother, William Gottschalk, of Detroit. A daughter, Mrs. Lee Doen, preceded her mother in death. She died September 25, 1925.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon from the German Lutheran church near Argyle, Rev. Keineth officiating, and burial was in Greenwood cemetery at Sandusky.

Elected President of Co. W. C. T. U. for 15th Term

While the attendance was not large, the annual convention of the Tuscola County Woman's Christian Temperance Union held at Vassar, June 7 and 8, was marked with a deep interest. Every union in the county was represented.

Kingston union won the county banner having secured the largest percentage of increase in membership and Mayville will entertain the 1934 convention.

Five girls from Vassar participated in the silver medal contest. The judge awarded the medal to Miss Eleanor Thomas.

Short addresses were made by six ministers of the county, Rev. H. W. Kuhlman of Caro, Rev. H. A. Buell of Mayville, and Rev. J. F. Priestly, Rev. J. W. Jacobus, Rev. W. L. Lindsay and Rev. Chatman, all of Vassar. Three girls and two boys were dedicated to temperance and purity at a consecration meeting.

Musical selections during the convention included vocal solos by Mrs. Victor Lumley of Caro, selections by the Vassar high school orchestra and musical saw numbers by Rev. H. A. Buell.

Mrs. Genie Martin of Deford, who has been president of the county organization for 14 years, was elected to succeed herself. Other officers were also re-elected: Mrs. Zuleika Stafford of Cass City as vice president, and Mrs. W. G. Schell as corresponding secretary.

FISHERMAN'S LICENSE.

Dept. of Conservation Press Service. The Michigan State Legislature has given immediate effect to the general rod license. This action, coming after the signing of the law by the governor, was based upon an opinion of the attorney general.

Previously, the Department of Conservation had been instructed to apply the new license fee of 50 cents only to trout fishermen during the 1933 season. However, under the present ruling every resident of the state over 18 years of age must possess a license to fish for any species in the inland waters.

However, according to Director George R. Hogarth, it will take several days to get the license forms in the hands of the department's 1,800 dealers and it will be some time before the new requirements will become generally known.

The opening of the general fishing season June 25 has been set as the tentative date when strict enforcement of the general rod license provisions will go into effect.

"The department intends to be as considerate as possible," Director Hogarth said, "but we expect that everyone will have purchased his or her license before the fishing season opens in earnest June 25. We consider this policy only fair since in spite of much publicity it will take several weeks to have the new provisions of this law generally familiar to the hundreds of thousands of fishermen in this state."

Under the General Rod License Law now in effect all residents of the state over 18 years of age are required to buy a license—costing 50 cents and good for the calendar year, to fish in the inland waters for any species in the manner and seasons provided by law. However, the wife of a resident licensee will be issued a permit entitling her to fish without additional charge.

All trout licenses purchased this year may also be used as a general fishing license, and holders of these licenses do not need to obtain any additional permit to fish for any species during the year 1933.

The owners, lessees or occupants of any enclosed land or any member of their family actually living there may fish without a license from waters wholly within the limits of the land at any time during the open seasons.

All non-residents are now being charged the new rate for fishing in Michigan's inland waters. No license is necessary for either residents or non-residents for fishing in Great Lakes waters adjoining this state.

A non-resident is classed as any one who has not resided in the state for six consecutive months immediately preceding his application for a fishing license. The fee for a non-resident annual fishing license is $2 but the wife of such a license holder may obtain a similar license for 50 cents by exhibiting her husband's unexpired license. Non-residents under the new law, may obtain a temporary fishing license good for ten days from date of issue for $1 and wives of such licensees may obtain a similar license for 50 cents. Non-resident licensees will be permitted to take or ship out of the state one day's legal catch of fish.

Judge X. A. Boomhower has ruled that the village council of Carsonville acted without authority in voting to purchase the opera house as a community center in March, 1932, and that their action is void. An opinion was filed in circuit court Wednesday in the suit brought by several village taxpayers against the council to prevent the transaction. The opinion said that the council had no authority to bind the village in the future as was attempted to be done without authorization from the people. The council voted to buy the building in March, 1932. Village orders amounting to $600 a year for five years were to pay for the building. An injunction was issued May, 1932, to prevent the transaction. Suit was brought by Frank Williams, Willard Kinde, L. O. Wentworth and Archie McPherson, against the council. Williams is now village president, having won his office for his stand on the matter a year ago.

NEITHER TARDY NOR ABSENT FOR NINE YEARS

Carlyle Everett, son of Vernon Everett, graduated from the Kingston high school last week and has an enviable record in that he has been neither tardy nor absent at school during the past nine years. During his high school days, he lived two miles from the school building.

This record involves not only sacrifice on the part of the student, but probably greater ones on the part of his parents. Both Mr. and Mrs. Everett were school instructors before their marriage.

"Between Devil and Deep Sea"

Erasmus, who lived from 1463 to 1536 quotes the phrase from the Greek in "Adagia." It means that there is not much to choose between two courses, one being about as bad as the other, and that the person is at loss as to what to do. The phrase has since been used, with several slight variations, by many writers.

F. H. LaTourette, Genesee county agricultural agent and club leader, will come to Cass City with a group of club boys and their parents next Tuesday and view club livestock exhibits in this community. The party will leave Flint Tuesday at 9:00 a. m. in eight or ten autos and will stop at the Vernor Farm at Lapeer, and at Cass City and Bad Axe, spending the night at Pointe Aux Barques. The two-day tour will be completed on Wednesday when other places will be visited.

FINE ADVICE TO H. S. GRADUATES

Concluded from first page. being defeated at one court, turned to another. It was that spirit of determination that helped him to stand the gaff of his day and made him the great adventurer who found a new world.

"The text is a call to mental development. To think is not an easy matter. It's much easier to let some one do your thinking for you. It's a real tragedy when youth becomes too lazy to think hard and straight, when they die mentally.

"Youth is challenged today by the existing difficult problems. To face these problems courageously; to get all the facts; not to be prejudiced by propaganda; not to be swayed by emotion; but to find a solution is the task of youth.

"The text is a call to moral development. Simple honesty is fundamental in a moral character. One of the reasons of Abraham Lincoln's majestic height was the element of honesty. Honesty should be the foundation of the moral life. Trustworthiness the cornerstone of personality. To think own self be honest and the issue will be honesty in relation to others.

"The man who believes that everything is a racket and acts on that statement is a fool. He discovers sooner or later that his life is messed up and others are made to suffer because of his dishonesty. Cowardice sits in his heart to plague him through the years. But he who weaves honesty in his moral fibre is courageous and has a passion for righteousness and justice.

"The text is a call to spiritual development. The best thing we have is life. The best anyone knows is Jesus Christ. It is the Lord Jesus, who earnestly pleads that we invest our lives in His purpose, which is the building of the Kingdom of God within the heart and in the world. And he who accepts the invitation of Christ will find that investment yielding a life, purposeful, satisfying, courageous, noble and undying. Such a life increases in value as the spiritual capacities are used and developed.

"There are many thrills in life but the greatest thrill any soul can have is when he finds God through Christ Jesus. The conviction of God is the stabilizing force of the soul, and the stimulating element of the spirit.

"It is this life that has the hope of the future. The best is yet to be. No heart can imagine the strength, beauty and glory of this life. They go from strength to strength."

The speaker's prayer in conclusion was that the class of 1933 would realize the entire implications of the text.

"Cotton Is King" The expression "Cotton Is King" was first used by Senator James H. Hammond of South Carolina, in the United States senate, in a speech in March, 1858.

STEAMSHIPS SLOWLY GIVE UP TO MOTORS

Crisis Facing Merchant Marine Is Increasing.

Washington.—"The Decline and Fall of American Shipping" might well be the secondary title for a volume just issued by the bureau of navigation and steamboat inspection of the Department of Commerce which traces the entire shipping industry from 1787 to 1932.

The rapid increase in sailing vessels and their decline, giving way to similar increase and decline in the number of steam vessels which are now giving way gradually to motor vessels, is a picturesque feature of the book.

Half-Million-Ton Start.
When Washington became President there were fewer than a half-million tons of merchant sailing vessels flying the American flag.

When Robert Fulton sent his Clermont flying up the Hudson by steam power in 1807 at an astounding speed which almost any boy today can duplicate on a velocipede, these half-million tons had increased to one and a quarter million. Then began in earnest the conflict between sail and steam, but sail held its own so that when the war with Mexico broke out in 1846-1847 sailing tonnage under the American flag was nearly two and a half million tons, or six times the steam total.

The clipper ship reached its proud peak in the '50s, when sailing tonnage afloat reached four and a half million tons, compared to three-quarters of a million steam tons.

The sailing ship began facing its defeat in earnest as the southern states yielded at Appomattox, and from then on the supremacy of sail over steam was definitely over.

The first commercial motor vessels appeared in 1893, the Aztec, and the Richard K. Fox. There are 12,000 today, but they are so small they do not increase the total tonnage.

Sailing Tonnage Drops.
When the World war began, the sailing tonnage had dropped to one and a quarter million tons, its status in 1807, with steam tonnage up to seven million tons. New ships authorized by congress during the war period doubled the steam tonnage, while sailing ships and motor vessels barely maintained their strength.

Today the merchant marine situation faces a crisis which has increased in recent years. Except for freight carrying transoceanic airships, or electrically-driven ships obtaining their current by wireless from land dynamos, modern ships see no competitor ahead offering the menace they did to the picturesque sailing vessels, but modern developments and economic conditions have brought about just as serious a situation as faced the clippers when the Clermont's wood-burning boilers fumed their smoky challenge above the Hudson's palisades.

Legendary Vineta City Found in German Town

Berlin.—The legendary city of Vineta, which for centuries was believed to exist only in fiction, now has been located by a German professor.

Prof. Dr. Adolf Hofmeister of the University of Griefswald claims to have discovered the mysterious city of Vineta, once the thriving port of a mighty Baltic kingdom.

The little town of Wollin in Pomerania, the German professor states, is the spot where the ancient legendary city once was located. He bases his assertion on old chronicles, just discovered by him.
According to these, Vineta once was ruled by an old Viking king. In 1100 it was destroyed by the Danes, against whom the Vikings were carrying on a bloody war. The city was famous for its marvelous architecture and streets. It even is said to have possessed a lighthouse, the only one believed to have been in existence in the Eleventh century. The real name of the city was Jummeta. By the mistake of a chronicler who wrote its history, the name was changed to Vineta.

Professor Hofmeister is firmly convinced he has found the remains of the legendary city in Wollin. An expedition now has gone there to carry out excavation works.

Never Want to See Their Sons Again

Detroit.—Ordering prosecution of their two young sons to the limit of the law, Mr. and Mrs. Paul L. Paul told authorities they never wanted to see the boys again.

The youths, William, eighteen, and Frank, fourteen, confessed faking a $35,000 holdup off Paul's jewelry store with two other boys, William and Clarence Ray, also brothers.

"I have no sympathy left for them," Paul told police. "I'll help you."

"They are both bad boys and we never want to see them again. We only are afraid they will return to harm us when they get out of jail. Fifteen years would not be too much for them."

LEGISLATURE ON THE FINAL LAP

out question. A member of the legislature sat at his desk the other day reading letters and telegrams that had come in. One happened to be from a high official of one of the great municipalities of the state. It pertained to important legislation. He barely scanned it before dropping it into his waste basket. To a friend standing close by, he commented that he didn't care to take time to read letters about pending bills.

There are many senators and many representatives who have really and sincerely tried to do something for the good of Michigan—but seemingly it has been impossible for them to get anywhere.

A sales tax bill, the one method left by the state to raise revenue that the state must have, seems satisfactory to no one.

Governor Comstock has let it be known that he is utterly opposed to the action of the senate in having made as a part of the sales tax bill the measure that sets aside $15,000,000 for the education of the boys and girls of Michigan. Originally it was a house bill that provided funds to take place of the primary school fund. The senate thought it best to incorporate it in the revenue producing bill. But the governor thinks welfare is much more important just now than education and he is fearful that the setting aside of so much money for education might not leave as much as he thinks necessary for welfare.

Representative Vernon J. Brown the other day warned the legislature when it was considering the creation of a new commission to handle welfare funds that if they didn't look out they would be setting up an organization with the right to spend $12,000,000 or $15,000,000 without a string of any kind tied to the members or the money.

Seemingly the whole session has been more or less of a hodge-podge affair. Priceless time has been given to the discussion of a vicious dog racing bill—and around this thing centers some of the graft talk.

Then there has been a bitter fight made by loan sharks and loan companies to kill a bill that would cut the interest rate on short term loans from three per cent a month to one per cent.

Some members of the legislature feel that 35 per cent interest per year for the little fellow to pay is altogether too much. The Democrats had pledged themselves to support a bill cutting the rate to at least one per cent a month. Such a bill passed the house before the lobby could get in its work. In the senate there was a bitter fight made to keep the interest rate high and here it was that graft charges were first hinted.

One senator accused another who was fighting for the loan shark high rate of interest of being a "lobby louse."

So bitter and so serious have been some of the charges made in the senate, that the senate itself voted for a grand jury investigation of the entire legislature. The resolution was passed, with the request that Judge Howard Wiest of the supreme bench act as presiding judge and the prosecuting attorney of Ingham county conduct the questioning.

Not only has the senate asked for an investigation of the graft charges made involving the opposition to the cutting of the interest on the small loan bill, but the house has had a committee busy during several days trying to find out if there is any truth to these charges.

Representative Jarvis of Berrien county was a member of the house who had charged that he was sure money had been used in the senate on the small loan bill, but when pinned down to provide any information he said, he could not do so.

There was an interesting sidelight during a portion of the Jarvis inquiry. There was supposed to have been made an accurate stenographic report of what he had said during the house debate about graft in the legislature. When this report was read before the committee veteran newspaper men like Gilbert Shilson of the Associated Press, Donald McGowan of the Detroit News and Carl Mueller of the Detroit Times immediately declared that portions of the statements were missing. When these correspondents say something is wrong, you can bet the last penny you have got that they are right. Barely had they made this comment when a member of the committee asked the stenographer to read a question of possibly some 18 or 20 words. He asked Jarvis "if he would now state UNDER OATH 'that so and so was true.'"

When the stenographer read the question back the two words "under oath" were missing.

This little incident reflects in a way the entire hurly-burly carelessness system that has prevailed from the beginning of the session. Democratic members of the senate and house late last week received from somewhere a list of something like 100 bills that the powers are demanding be passed before adjournment. The vast majority of them are political bills, bills that would create jobs, either new jobs or by changing laws so that present office holders could be thrown out and some one else put in. They were told to pass these bills, irrespective of whether they believed they had any merit or not or whether they believed that it would be doing the state any good. They were also told that if they did not pass them that there would be no jobs for any one from their district. Well, the average legislator has been pestered to death with job seekers. Most of them have told friends back home that they would do all they could to secure jobs for them. Now the law makers are told that if these bills are not passed, there will be no jobs for anyone in their districts. So it is pretty probable that this week will see many bills enacted into law that the legislature does not believe should be passed. But jobs are jobs these days.

If taxpayers who have a desire to keep the property they now hold in their name, they should immediately pay their 1932 tax and thereby secure the benefit of the greatly repaired and improved Moore delinquent tax bill that is now law. If the tax for 1932 is paid before July 1, all of the other back taxes are made future obligations. In this way the land owner will have many years to pay his back taxes in, giving him an opportunity to retain his land if he desires to keep it.

There is going to be a grand rush of legislation this week. The legislature is going home Saturday no matter what happens. It is going to be an interesting week in Lansing.

A slight cut in the gas tax is on the way, but that may be all that can be said at present. The senate has passed a bill cutting off one-half a cent from the present three cent gas tax. The house has the bill this week. Governor Comstock has indicated that he is not for reduced gas or weight taxes. What he will do with the bill if it gets by the house no one knows.

Young, but They Run a Real Business

Citizens of Allentown, Pa., boast that their city has the youngest executives of a manufacturing business. They are William, eleven, and Robert, nine, the sons of Dr. Walter A. Snelling, an explosive expert for the government during the war. The boys manufacture a fine grade of blue-black ink, and know all about the process. William is the president and the treasurer of the firm and Robert is vice president. Their mother is secretary and types their business letters but the boys dictate them and always read them over.

"Don't break the speed laws—but use an oil that can"

"TAKE my advice and stay under the speed limit. Take it easy. Don't try to be a mile-a-minute man . . .
"But use the oil that can do 100-miles-an-hour—Gulf Supreme! Why? That's simple . . .
"For the oil that is good at 100-miles-an-hour is doubly good at lower speeds! It's a better, safer oil. It has extra resistance . . . extra richness . . . extra ability to halt wear and keep repair bills down!"
Why do we call Gulf Supreme the "100-mile-an-hour motor oil?" Here's why . . .
Tests in Gulf laboratories showed that Gulf Supreme could stand almost twice the heat of the normal speeding motor.

So on August 8, 1932, Supreme was put to a stiffer test than it could get in any car on the roads! Under Official AAA supervision, it successfully lubricated a roaring Duesenberg racer—flashing around the Indianapolis Speedway at speeds which reached almost two miles a minute! An average for the one-hour, non-stop run of more than 100-miles-an-hour!
Switch to Gulf Supreme now. There's a grade for every climate. It can take super-punishment. Give better lubrication. Cut oil costs. And minimize repairs!

CHAPTER X

THEY spoke briefly to the dean and left the building together. Below them was the Bowl; long concrete stand on either side, cinder path circling the diamond; men in track suits loping easily around the oval or practicing field sports; the regulars indulging in a practice game against the freshman baseball team. Under the trees were a half hundred cars; some empty, some occupied by youthful couples; the stands held perhaps a hundred students and through the woods one could glimpse couples—usually of mixed gender—walking slowly and talking earnestly.

They slowly descended the hill toward the Psi Tau Theta fraternity house where Reagan's car was parked. Students eyed them curiously and buzzed with conjecture. Hanvey was relaxed. He was thinking—and Reagan was bitterly disappointed because he didn't seem more excited about his disclosure regarding the ownership of the knife which had been used to kill Paterson Thayer. He was even a trifle hurt, though he wouldn't say so. He attempted to elicit a comment from Hanvey—and went at his task circuitously.

"You and the kid seemed to get along fine, Jim."

"Ivy Welch? Say, she's a regular, John."

"Darn little cat, if you ask me. Did everything but scratch my eyes out."

"You don't say. I reckon she must have a weak spot for a poor old fat feller like me."

"Ten to one she didn't tell you anything."

"Gimme the ten, John. She told me plenty."

"What?" Doubtfully.

"We-ell, she said that she, and Pat Thayer were engaged. Thayer and Max Vernon quarreled just before Thayer was killed. Thayer and Miss Peyton had a run-in because he was shinin' up to Ivy Welch. Then Ivy and her brother had a row, and he left her with the intention of seeing Thayer and ordering him to lay off."

"She knew we had all that dope already."

"Maybe she did, John—and then, again, maybe she didn't. Anyway, it was refreshing to get it from somebody who ain't accused of this killing. Allowin' for the fact that she'd maybe try to shield her brother, I don't think she's got a thought in the world except to help us catch the person who really killed Thayer." His eyes closed slowly. "She sure was in love with the guy."

"Kid stuff!"

Hanvey turned slowly and regarded Reagan for a minute.

"I think that's the same mistake everybody made when they thought of her in connection with Thayer. All they said was: Kid stuff."

Reagan's eyes narrowed.

"What you driving at, Jim?"

"Nothin' special. Just ramblin' in my speech as usual. Only remember this, John—when a girl of seventeen falls in love, it ain't kid stuff to her, no matter what it seems like to other folks. I think maybe everybody would have done better to realize that Ivy Welch was a woman grown. Get me?"

"No," exploded Reagan. "I don't. What do you mean?"

Hanvey shrugged. "Durned if I know."

Then: "So Max Vernon admitted that was his knife, eh, John?"

"Yes."

"Did he see the blood on it before he made that admission?"

"H—l, no, Chief. I ain't that dumb. I had the blade covered when I showed it to him. I asked him if he'd ever seen it before and he said, sure, it was his. I said: 'You couldn't be mistaken about that, could you?' and he said he certainly could not. Then I told him he'd put his foot in it, because that was the knife that killed Pat Thayer and I showed him the bloody blade."

"And what did he say?"

Reagan shook his head. "He said he didn't give a d—n if it had killed Thayer or not, he didn't have anything to do with it. He's a darn fresh kid, Jim—and hasn't told the truth about anything since I first stuck him in the hoosegaw. Let's go over and have a talk with him. What say?"

"Not yet, John. Let's go to the undertaker who's got Thayer's body. I want to take a look at it."

"Come ahead," Reagan stepped into his car and Jim crawled in on the other side.

"Any of Thayer's family down here?" asked Hanvey.

"A sister. Seems to be a pretty nice sort, but she won't talk much. I got a hunch that he was always a sort of bad egg, Jim. And, of course, a feller can't press that kind of an investigation too strong with a man's sister when he's lying dead in the next room."

"Gosh, no." They turned into Marland road and sped along under the spreading shade trees which lined the paving on both sides.

"John," asked Hanvey suddenly, "when you searched Thayer's room did you find any jewelry?"

"Nothing but a watch and chain."

"No diamond ring?"

"Sure not. What gave you the idea? Just because I overlooked Max Vernon's knife you haven't got any right to think I'd miss that sort of stuff everywhere."

"Aw, now, John—don't you gettin' peeved at me. I just asked you a question friendly-like, and—"

"I ain't peeved, Jim. But dog-gone it! You seem to have more ideas and less words than anybody I ever saw."

Jim chuckled. "Don't mind me, Kid. I'm just dumb, and the less I say the smaller chance there is of anyone finding it out."

John Reagan laughed.

"Kid yourself, Jim—if you want to," he said. "But don't try to kid me."

At their destination, the undertaker conducted them into the cubicle where Thayer's body was being held under police orders. Hanvey was frankly frightened by the sight of death, and didn't even look at the body as Reagan gave a clinical dissertation on the killing.

"... right in the neck," he was saying and the voice came to Hanvey as though from a distance.

"The doc says it severed the jugular vein which is why there was so much blood. I asked him would it need to have been struck by a person with any strength and he said no, in that spot the slightest shove of a keen knife would do the work. I asked him if a woman could have done it, and he said, sure, a child could have. Then I asked the doc—"

"Tell me that later," suggested Hanvey hastily. "I want to get out of this place quick."

"Good Lord, Jim—if you didn't want to look things over, what did you come here for?"

"To find that diamond ring. You see, John—at the time Pat Thayer was killed, he was wearing a diamond ring which Ivy Welch had given him. I want to see if he's still wearing it."

Reagan bent over the body. When he straightened his expression was one of complete bewilderment.

"You sure you got your dope straight, Jim?"

"Yeh."

"Then there's something darn funny—because Thayer ain't got anything on his fingers except a signet ring with some foreign letters on it."

Hanvey turned reluctant eyes on the body.

"It's gone all right, John."

"I'll say it has." Reagan's forehead was creased with intensive thought. Suddenly he smashed his right fist into the palm of his other hand. "And you know what it means, Jim—that diamond ring being gone?"

"What does it mean, John?"

"Just this: Thayer was alive when Larry Welch went to see him. Larry saw the ring and knew what it meant. He had it out with Thayer and killed him. Then he took his sister's ring off Thayer's finger, because he knew if he left it there it could be traced back to her. Am I right?"

"Durned if I know, John. But whether you are or not, you sure sound reasonable."

The Marland jail bulked forbiddingly against the full moon of a perfect May night. Citizens of Marland were proud of their jail; of its staunch concrete walls, of its marble portico, of the heavy iron bars which proclaimed to an erring world that it would do well not to err here.

Jim Hanvey stood at the curb and commented in complimentary fashion on the building, thereby bringing a thrill to the heart of the local detective. Then they walked through the big gates and thence to the warden's office. The big man was to have access to the prisoners at any time. The warden conducted the two men to the little room which was occupied by Antoinette Peyton.

She rose as they entered; a trim, womanly figure in a dark blue dress. She showed signs of the strain; there were faint circles under the eyes and it was plain that she was making an effort to remain calm. Reagan introduced Hanvey and all three seated themselves.

"You understand, Miss Peyton," said Hanvey quietly, "you don't have to talk if you don't want to."

"I have no objections to talking," she answered calmly.

"Good. I shall have to ask questions which might be kind of well—direct. Is that all right?"

"Yes."

He liked her cool, quiet, straightforward manner. It was as though she had nothing to hide and nothing to fear.

The big man reached for the golden toothpick and clicked it open. It seemed impossible for him to talk unless his pudgy fingers were busy with that ghastrly instrument.

"I'm not going to waste your time with a lot of silly questions, Miss Peyton. I reckon I could start at the beginning and check up with you on all the things I know already just to see if you'd tell me the same story. But I won't."

"Thank you," said Tony gratefully.

"I'm only going to ask you about those things that nobody else can tell me." A broad, engaging grin split Jim's lips. "That's fair enough, ain't it?"

"Yes. . . ." She found herself warming to this big man. He seemed honest; genuinely, deeply honest.

"I know," continued Jim softly, "that you overheard a sort of love scene between Mr. Thayer and Ivy Welch. You butted in, and a general row followed. It don't matter just what was said. The point is that you and Thayer and Ivy were all sore, weren't you?"

"Now the first important thing I've got to find out is this, Miss Peyton: What was your relationship to Pat Thayer? What I mean is: What right had you bawling him out for making love to another girl?"

Tony's face flushed, and, for an instant, her eyes flashed. She answered rather coldly:

"I think you're presuming a good deal, aren't you, Mr. Hanvey?"

"No, ma'am. Honest, I ain't as dumb as I look. I know there was something between you and Thayer. Maybe it was jealousy—maybe something else. But it's awful important that I find out."

"Why?"

"Because if I don't know the truth, I've got to figure things my own way. You see, there's a sort of link in the chain that's got to be welded . . . and one of the most important things is what there was between you and Thayer."

"I don't see. . . ."

"I'm sorry if you don't," pleaded Hanvey, "because it ain't helping nobody for you not to tell me the truth. Even if I know the truth it couldn't hurt you any worse than having me think things. That is, unless you really killed him yourself—"

"Good G—d!"

"I didn't say you did. But listen, Miss Peyton: Put yourself in my place. What do I find out: You run across Thayer making love to a pretty little blond. You give him thunders—and it's clear there's something between you. At the end of that interview you're threatening each other. Then a little later you walk straight up to Thayer's room in the fraternity house and a little while after you leave they find him dead. Could the real truth hurt you much worse than that?"

Tony rose and walked the length of her cell. Then she stood in front of Jim Hanvey and gazed intently into his round face and kindly gray eyes.

"I feel that I should speak frankly. I—I have a hunch that you're not trying to trick me."

"Thank you kindly, ma'am. And you've got me right; I swear you have."

She bit her lip, then spoke sharply. "You are wondering how I dared to go to Mr. Thayer's room in the fraternity house when I knew it would start the whole campus gossiping, aren't you. Therefore you know I had a good reason for going there?"

What Right Had You Bawling Him Out for Making Love to Another Girl?

"That's it, Miss Peyton. Because no matter what you went for, or what happened after you got there, it was a clutch that you were going to start the whole campus talking."

"That," announced Tony bravely, "is precisely why I went there."

"To start gossip?"

"Just that."

"Why?"

"So the truth would come out, and when it did, Pat would be forced to let Ivy Welch alone."

"The truth? What is the truth, Miss Peyton?"

Tony did not evade. Her answer came in a firm, cool voice:

"I was Pat Thayer's wife!"

Jim blinked and fumbled for his toothpick. There was an audible gasp from John Reagan. And then, as they listened in stupefied silence, Tony told—in a level, emotionless tone—of how she had happened to marry Pat Thayer and of what had occurred since that time. When she finished she seated herself, limp and frightened. Suppose she had done the wrong thing? Suppose . . . her eyes quested hungrily for Jim Hanvey. He seemed so comfortably friendly. There was something in his stolid calmness which compelled one to avoid evasion.

One gathered that he instinctively knew truth from falsehood; that he respected the former and despised the latter. The girl took a deep breath. Her brain told her that she had erred; instinct said that she had done the best thing.

"And so you see," she said, after a long pause, "I had to protect Ivy. I knew Pat Thayer was married—but she didn't."

"I see. . . . And, of course, you were not jealous, were you?"

"Of him?" She gave a short, bitter laugh. "He is dead now—and this may not sound well: but I despised him."

"That explains a good deal. . . . It was as though Hanvey was talking to himself. "Of course, no one could be expected to guess that you were Thayer's wife. And nobody else knew it, did they, Miss Peyton?"

"No. . . ." The color flooded her cheeks.

"You mean: Not then?" prompted Hanvey.

Reagan's head jerked up sharply. He saw the girl start with surprise. He saw her cheeks blanch. Then he looked curiously at Hanvey. The big man seemed totally disinterested. He was gazing fondly at the gleaming toothpick—apparently unmindful of the vital question he had asked. Reagan had just concluded that Jim didn't even know what he had stumbled upon when Hanvey repeated his question in a quiet, conversational tone:

"Even Larry Welch didn't know then that you were Thayer's wife, did he?"

And now Tony Peyton was defiantly on guard. Her tiny fists were clenched and she was sitting forward tensely.

"No," she said sharply. "He didn't know."

"But," suggested Jim, "you told him a few minutes later, didn't you?"

"Who says I did?"

"Gosh! Miss Peyton—I didn't say anybody said so. I was just asking; that's all. And please don't get all worked up. You'd think I was trying to trap you. I ain't; honest, I ain't."

"But you said—"

"I just suggested that you went straight to Larry Welch and told him the truth. Ain't that a fact?"

"I think I'd rather not discuss it any more, Mr. Hanvey. I'm afraid I've already said entirely too much."

Jim didn't argue. He rose ponderously and bowed with a queer courtliness.

"That's all right, Miss Peyton. I promised you I wouldn't try any police tricks on you, and I won't. I'm trying to help, not hurt, and I can't help unless I get the truth. But I ain't advising you to tell me a thing you don't want. So me and Mr. Reagan will say much obliged—and good night."

He moved toward the door. Reagan, inwardly seething at Hanvey's stupidity, followed reluctantly.

As Jim opened the door, the girl spoke.

"Wait, please."

She faced them bravely. "I suppose I'm a fool," she said. "But I believe I can trust you. If you don't mind staying a little longer, I'll be glad to tell you the whole truth."

Even yet Hanvey did not press his advantage. Reagan was fighting to restrain his own impatience—and meeting with little success. Here was the big chance; an opportunity to gather important facts from a woman who had been locked up for two days and was willing to talk.

But Reagan was a good sport. If he didn't understand Hanvey's slow, friendly, ponderous methods, he could at least follow them since he himself had offered the case to the fat man.

They seated themselves once more and Tony spoke in a brittle voice.

"What is it first, Mr. Hanvey?"

"We-ell, suppose we start with your visit to Larry Welch. What did he say when you told him you were married to Thayer? Was he sore?"

"No-o. I wouldn't say that exactly? The thing seemed to shock him."

"Did he say anything about seeing Thayer?"

"Yes. He wanted to go right over, but I begged him not to."

"Why?"

"Because I wanted to see Pat first."

"For what reason, Miss Peyton?"

"Because . . . well, there's another detail we left out. Larry was quite determined that Pat should not go with Ivy any more. I had a right to seal his lips about my marriage to Pat, but I had no right to say that he shouldn't keep him from going with Ivy. So I asked him not to go over until I had seen Pat myself."

"Why?"

"She met Jim's kindly eyes levelly. "I was afraid."

"Of what?"

"A fight. Pat Thayer was a big man. Larry is perhaps more powerful. So far as I know, Mr. Thayer was not a coward, and no man can very well permit another to order him away from a girl without—well, without resenting it."

"I see. . . . And why were you afraid of a fight?"

"Because of the scandal," she answered promptly. "Larry is an instructor here. He is about to earn his Master's degree. It wouldn't have been nice. . . ."

"You weren't afraid of any serious results—that is, physical results?"

"No. Of course my sympathies were all with Larry, and I knew he could handle Mr. Thayer."

Jim focused his eyes on the toothpick. "You are in love with Larry Welch?"

Her cheek grew white, but she did not evade.

"Yes."

"Does he know it?"

"Yes."

"How long has he known it?"

"I think he has known it for a long time, but I didn't put it into words until—until day before yesterday."

"I see. . . . Day before yesterday Larry learned that a married man was fooling with his kid sister. He learned that you could not marry him because you were married to another man—the same man. He learned of the petty blackmail which Thayer had practiced on you. It makes a rather damning lineup, doesn't it, Miss Peyton?"

"Yes. And I've told it to you straight because I believe Larry is innocent."

"I hope so. . . . Now would you mind telling me what happened when you went to see Thayer at the fraternity house?"

"I went there with a definite object in mind, Mr. Hanvey. A girl cannot visit a man's room in a fraternity house without starting all kinds of gossip. I told him that I had done that so I would have no choice but to announce our marriage. You see, I felt that I could spike his guns that way."

"For what?"

"So that he'd have to drop Ivy Welch—or else she would drop him. And that would make it unnecessary for Larry to interfere."

"You were still afraid of what might happen between Larry and Thayer?"

"Yes—and I regretted having told Larry. But things happened so fast and I had been under such a strain for so long a time. . . . I—I just wanted someone to talk to."

"While you were in Thayer's room . . . ?"

"He was furious, of course. We quarreled bitterly. I suppose I was as angry as he was. And then I left."

"Where was he when you left, Miss Peyton?"

"Standing near the dresser."

"Alive?"

She caught her breath sharply. "Of course. . . . Surely you don't think . . . ?"

"I had to ask you that. I'm sorry. Did you know that Larry Welch has been arrested?"

"Yes. . . ." She spoke almost in a whisper.

"Do you realize that everything you have told me serves to incriminate him?"

"Yes." She flung her head back. "I don't believe the truth can hurt anybody. I know Larry didn't do it, just as I know that I didn't. I've told the plain, straight truth, and that's all. It's what Larry would have me do."

"It isn't what he has done," said Jim softly. "He hasn't been honest with us."

"He couldn't be. He gave me his word that he wouldn't tell anybody I was Pat Thayer's wife."

"He didn't tell us any untruths about that, Miss Peyton; he simply kept his mouth shut. It was on something more important. He says that when he left the fraternity house, Pat Thayer was alive."

"And why isn't that the truth?"

"I can't tell you why, Miss Peyton, but I am saying that I am sure it is a lie. I'll bet my right hand that when Larry Welch left that fraternity house, Pat Thayer was dead. And Larry knew it!"

She did not indulge in dramatics. She merely sat very still and her body seemed to get cold as ice.

She stared at the huge figure opposite.

Hanvey met look for look. And she, searching the moonlike face for a vestige of reassurance, saw nothing but grim honesty.

"Then," she gasped, "you think Larry killed him?"

"I can't say that. Miss Peyton," he amended gently. "I do believe that he lied when he said Thayer was alive when he left. And now I know why."

"Why, then?"

"To shield you. He had just learned your secret. He knew—probably—that you had been to see Thayer. And if he didn't kill Thayer, then he found the body when he got there and thought you had done it. It's a situation as old as romance. But at any rate, it was a pretty fine thing for him to do, because by his own admission Thayer was alive while he was there, which makes it certain that he must have done the killing."

"Larry didn't do it, Mr. Hanvey. I feel that."

"So do I. But if he didn't—who did?"

She shook her head. "I don't know. . . ."

"It wasn't Larry, you say."

"He couldn't do a thing like that—even in a fight."

"It wasn't you."

"Is that—is that a question, Mr. Hanvey—or a statement?"

The big man smiled slightly. "I don't know. Do you?"

"I didn't kill him."

Hanvey rose and shook his head. "This ain't any cinch, Miss Peyton. If I'm to believe what I hear: you didn't kill him and neither did Larry Welch. It almost looks like if I carry the investigation far enough I'll find out he ain't

PAID KIDNAPERS

BOY SCOUTS GO CAMPING JULY 10

Monday morning, July 10, the large truck belonging to the S. Champion Bill Posting Co. will drive up to the Baptist church, and load in eighteen or twenty boys, with their camp equipment, several boxes of eats, fishing tackle, etc., and start for Lake Pleasant, forty miles south.

The lake is well named, as the surroundings, and folks are surely an incentive for a good time. There is a lot of bathing equipment, with high dives, and water wheel, excellent fishing right in front of the tents, which will be about three rods from the water's edge. A good long picnic table will be well filled with good eats. There will be three good boats at the dock for ready use in rowing or fishing. A splendid ball diamond, with picnics most every day, bring groups of boys that want to play ball.

Miniature golf, ice cream stands, etc., and lots of friends.
Forty tests were taken last year and it is hoped to make real progress in passing life-saving tests this year. Daily training in morals and Scouting. We can go as cheap as we can stay at home. By doing our own work, we save our money, and will stay the ten days for not more than $2.00 per boy. If you are twelve years old you can be a Boy Scout. Ask the Scoutmaster. W. R. Curtis, Scoutmaster.

TELLER—READER.

Miss Mildred L. Reader, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Reader of Cass City, became the wife of Lloyd E. Teller, son of Mrs. Myrtle Teller, of Gageton, Saturday, June 10, at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride was attended by Miss Jennie Stauffer and Harlan Andrews acted as best man for the groom.

The bride was beautifully attired in a gown of white net trimmed with organdie, while the bridesmaid wore yellow georgette. Both carried bouquets of carnations and snapdragons.

Rev. W. O. Trask of Carsonville officiated and read the ring ceremony after which a delicious wedding dinner was served to immediate relatives and a few friends.

After June 12, Mr. and Mrs. Teller will reside at Gageton, where Mr. Teller has charge of his mother's farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Teller are very well known young people of the community, and they have the best wishes of their many friends for a happy and successful married life.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts.

Stone of Destiny

The name Stone of Destiny has been applied to the Stone of Scone or the Coronation Stone which rests beneath the chair or throne occupied by a new king of England on the occasion of his coronation. It dates far back into Anglo-Scottish history, and is reputed to have been the very stone which Jacob used as a pillow. (Gen. 28:11).

SUGAR QUEEN TO BE SELECTED AT CO. FAIR

sugar beet festival at Caro, the center of the big industry?

Tentative plans outlined by Mr. Ayre call for the selection of local queens in each city, village and community of the Thumb and Valley, probably at home-comings, or at some occasion designated by the local committee. These young ladies will be brought to Caro for the contest and the "sugar queen" chosen from the candidates by competent judges.

Present plans call for special emphasis on the culture of beets, the manufacture of sugar, and the general use of the Michigan-made product. Each queen entered in the contest will be expected to be with a float furnished by her community, and the parade of the various floats will be a big feature of the festival. The fair officials have tentatively designated Friday evening of the 1933 fair as the time when the sugar queen will be crowned.

All communities who wish to enter a queen in the contest may secure further information by writing Secretary W. R. Ayre at Caro.

HOSPITAL NOTES.

Mrs. Jacob Messman of Decker-ville underwent a second operation Saturday morning.

Little Miss Anna Le Veque was able to leave the hospital Thursday morning.

Mrs. Ralph Partridge of Cass City entered Tuesday and underwent an operation Wednesday. Mrs. Partridge and little son were taken to their home on East Third street Sunday.

Charles Frank of Sandusky was admitted Monday and underwent an operation Wednesday. He was taken home Saturday afternoon.

George Molascan of Port Austin entered Monday for medical treatment and left that night.

Mrs. William Grimes of Lapeer was brought to the hospital Thursday and will undergo an operation the last of the week.

Mrs. Donald Livingston of Cass City was admitted Thursday for treatment. She left the hospital Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Norman Kritzman of Shabbona was admitted Saturday evening and submitted to an operation Sunday. She expects to go home the last of the week.

Martha and Mildred Osborn, eight year old twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William Osborn of Perry, underwent tonsil operations Monday morning.

Bernard Freiburger of Argyle entered the hospital Saturday afternoon with head injuries received when an automobile in which he was riding went into a ditch. He left the same evening. Clare, son of Dwight Barnes, was operated on for removal of tonsils Tuesday morning.

David Allen of Snover entered Saturday for medical treatment.

August Young of Tyre entered Tuesday for treatment.

Mrs. Lewis Travis and Mrs. Doris Passow are doing special duty.

CHOICE OF SIX ELECTIVES.

Choice of six electives will be offered women attending the annual Farm Women's week at Michigan State College, July 23 to 28 inclusive. These divisions are clothing, foods and nutrition, home furnishings, poultry, landscape and vegetable gardening, and dramatics.

The program has been arranged so that the morning meetings will be given over to instruction and demonstration in the above topics, and the afternoons and evenings to lectures, recreation and social entertainment.

The morning arrangements have been planned so that one may follow through one or two topics during the whole week, or may attend one meeting of each division.

Miss Edna V. Smith, state leader of home demonstration agents, and in charge of plans for the week, announces that a large number of women are expected to attend.

During the past year, groups enrolled in home economics extension work have arranged to send at least one representative to the meeting.

General headquarters for the week will be in the Woman's building. Board and room costs will be low.

Camel Is Treacherous
The camel has the reputation of being the most generally ill-tempered and treacherous of all animals domesticated by man. It is said to be quite as natural for the camel to gnaw the hand or arm of its master as for an intelligent horse to whinny with pleasure at his approach, and kind treatment and abundant feeding apparently have little effect on its disposition.

Do You Remember?

The Cass City Chronicle has through the years stored away pictures of local people and buildings, some of which date back many years. The Chronicle will reprint some of these from time to time. No names or stories will appear under any picture and it will be left for the readers to think back through the years and search their memories for identification.
