CHILD, HIT BY AUTO, FATALLY INJURED

Inexperienced Driver Lost Control of Car in Ellington Township Sunday.

A girl, learning to drive an automobile, lost control of the machine, striking Wanda Martha, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Hollatz, of Ellington township Sunday evening, fatally injuring her. The child died in the Caro hospital the following night.

A company of young people assembled at the Hollatz farm home, six miles west of Deford, Sunday evening with the intention of playing a game of ball. While waiting for a few more to come, one of the girls of the community was learning to drive an auto. On returning to the farm after a short drive, the inexperienced driver attempted to park the car near the house, and lost control, driving the car up the cement walls which enclosed an outside cellarway. Wanda and her little brother were seated in front of the cellarway playing together. Mr. Hollatz snatched the boy from in front of the approaching car which hit the little girl, the impact throwing her down the cellar steps with such force that the little body opened the closed door to the basement. A deep wound was opened in the child's hip, a leg was cut and she suffered internal injuries. Mr. Hollatz and his little son were bruised by the fenders of the car.

Martha Wanda, who was two years old on Oct. 22, regained consciousness Sunday night at the hospital and recognized and spoke to her mother. She passed away Monday evening. Funeral services were held at the Caro Lutheran church Thursday afternoon.

Besides her parents, Martha leaves eight brothers and sisters, Ernest, Rhiney, Irvin, Matilda, Margaret, Dorothy, Herta and Harold. Mr. Hollatz, who is married a second time, has lost eleven children by death.

3,449 Tuscola Sheep Take Dipping

Three thousand four hundred forty-nine sheep in Tuscola county were dipped and drenched last month at 11 community bees at which flocks of 62 farmers were treated for control of ticks and internal parasites.

A portable dipping tank has visited Watertown, Millington, Arbel, Vassar, Denmark, Dayton, Ellington, Fairgrove and Akron townships and 11 demonstrations were held. Two more are on the program of E. L. Hammond, county agricultural agent.

Many flock owners in Tuscola county have lost a number of lambs and yearlings from internal parasites and it is expected that these community demonstrations will save a great deal for those whose flocks have been treated. A method of treating sheep for worms is new to most flock owners in the county and it is expected the practice will become general in the next year or two.

Directions for treating sheep for internal parasites may be obtained at the county agent's office on request.

FRANCIS FAMILY HELD REUNION HERE SUNDAY

Forty members of the Francis family and a few friends held their first reunion at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Omar Glaspie, on South Segar street, Sunday, June 18. All the brothers and sisters were present but one brother, Charles Francis, of Grand Rapids. A potluck dinner was served at noon. The oldest present was Mrs. Joe Wendt of Capac, who was 73, and the youngest was Tommie Eastman, eight months old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Eastman of Lamotte Corners. The 1934 reunion will be held in Grand Rapids about the same time next year.

Those present Sunday were Edward Francis, Mr. and Mrs. William Francis and son of Grand Rapids, Mr. and Mrs. Vern Francis and family of Comstock Park, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Francis and family and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Francis and son of Kingston, Mrs. Joe Wendt and Mr. and Mrs. Melvin D'Arcy and family of Capac, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Francis and two children of Flint, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Eastman and son, Tommie, Gordon and Ray Ferguson of Lamotte Corners, Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Zapfe and family and Mr. and Mrs. H. ## WAHJAMEGA SCHOOL GETS SPECIAL STATE AID

The Wahjamega school in Dist. No. 1, Indianfields, is the only one-room school in Tuscola county that will receive special aid for this type of school this year. In previous years, five or more schools in the county received appropriations of $200 each from the state treasury.

One-room schools are entitled to this aid if the school cost of the district on each one thousand dollars assessed valuation for seven months' school is $12 or more for maintenance. Cost of school sites, school buildings and alterations of school buildings or amounts paid on indebtedness are not to be included in cost of maintenance, the law states.

NOVESTA PIONEERS HELD REUNION

Enjoyed Dinner and Program at Church of Christ Thursday.

The 21st annual reunion of the early settlers of Novesta township and the surrounding communities was held Thursday, June 15, at the Church of Christ, three miles south of Cass City. Owing to the inclemency of the weather and conflicting dates, the crowd was not as large as usual. There were about 100 present and all enjoyed the social time.

At noon, a bounteous dinner was served after which a short business meeting was held.

After singing "America," prayer was offered by A. R. Bruce. Address of welcome was given by Howard Retherford and Robert Brown responded. The following program was given: Duet "Don't Get Blue," Velma and Elaine Pratt, accompanied by their mother, Mrs. Thelma Pratt, at the piano; trombone solo, James Smetek; talk, Dr. George Bates; remarks, Mrs. Bates; violin solo, W. A. Bruce, with Mrs. Bruce at the piano. Mrs. P. E. Smith gave a short talk on their trip from Ontario to Michigan in 1877. Prayer was offered by M. H. Quick.

The place of meeting for next year was left with the officers. During the business meeting, officers were re-elected for the coming year. They are: President, A. H. Henderson; vice president, Howard Retherford; secretary, Mrs. Thomas Colwell; treasurer, Chas. Kilgore.

Of this number 22 are in the kindergarten department, 22 in the primary, 32 in the intermediate, and 30 in the junior. Although the attendance is not quite as large as that of last year, the school is better organized and managed more efficiently than in former years.

The daily program includes periods for worship, music, Bible study, recreation, story, drama and handiwork and the school sessions are held from 9 to 12 o'clock every forenoon for five days a week.

Rev. T. S. Bottrell of the Methodist Episcopal church has supervision of the kindergarten division and is assisted by Lucile Bailey, Eunice Schell and Virginia Rawson.

The primary department is supervised by Rev. G. A. Spitzer of the Evangelical church and his assistants are Ruth Schenck and Phyllis and Shirley Lenzer.

The same day, the freshmen and sophomore classes motored to the Huron County Park at Caseville for a picnic. A ball game was played, the sophomores proving themselves the better players.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION ENDS; CHAOS FEARED

No Money for Public Schools, but Food and Clothing Taxed.

By Elton R. Eaton.

Lansing, Michigan—The regular session of the state legislature is at an end. The members have returned to their homes to condemn, praise, or explain the administration in power. They have gone home to face the boys and girls of their neighborhood whose educational opportunities have been snatched from them. They have gone home to tell the fathers and mothers of these boys and girls that the state government from now on is going to demand a tax on the food they are required to eat to maintain life, that the state government is going to tax even the clothing they wear to protect themselves from the elements and to maintain some sort of decency.

Michigan—Michigan the mighty—Michigan the beautiful—has for the first time since its discovery in 1610—turned its face backward. Its educational system has been wrecked. While legislation has been passed that provides care for the crooked, the insane, and the idle hands of the shiftless and unemployed, not one penny has been raised or provided for the public schools of Michigan.

Down through all the days of statehood, Michigan has maintained a jealous watchful attitude over its public schools. It has fostered them and pampered them as its most sacred asset.

Almost overnight it has junked the whole system. One of the inconsistencies of the whole mess is the fact that appropriations have been made to support and maintain the normal schools of the state where young men and women are trained to be school teachers—but unless the people interested in the public school system of Michigan can devise some way to keep the schools open, there will be no schools for these instructors to conduct.

A last minute desperate effort by Senator Leon Case of Watervliet to save the schools was made. He caused to be written into the sales bill a clause appropriating $15,000,000 for the primary school fund, the money to be paid out of the general fund. But this, it is feared, means little, as the schools Turn to page 2 please.

INFLATION NO CURE FOR FARM TROUBLES

Sec. Wallace Says Michigan Farmers Should Weigh Evidence.

Michigan farmers should not be deceived by a present rise in farm prices partly due to inflation into a belief that inflation is the correct solution of farm problems, according to Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, who points out that, while the farmers get an initial benefit from rises in prices of raw materials, this benefit is nullified later by increases on goods which must be bought.

The 100 per cent increase in the price of wheat and of cotton between the early days of May and the middle of June are in a measure due to inflation and are partly due to faith in the government's plan to make adjustments in the production of basic crops. The benefits from inflation vanish if the dollar gained in the rise of wheat has to be paid for a dollar rise in manufactured goods, but price gains obtained from crop adjustments will not be wiped out by increased expenses.

Michigan farmers are adding to the surplus of basic crops when unrestricted acreages of wheat are planted and when uncontrolled numbers of hogs are marketed. No steps are being taken to limit this year's wheat crop but hearings have been held in Washington to work out plans to adjust the next crop to the visible supply and to the world's needs.

Potato growers in Michigan who remember the 1924 and 1925 crops know that big crops and increased acreages are not a sure source of adding to farm incomes. The total value of the 1924 potato crop was $180,960,000 and the price per bushel was 78 cents. The 1925 crop was 88 million bushels smaller, sold at $1.83 a bushel, and had a total value of $327,750,000.

Potato growers in the United States paid $146,610,000 for the surplus of potatoes which no one wanted and which could not be sold.

Mistakes of this kind, whether in the production of potatoes, wheat, milk, or pork, can not be cured by inflation. Crop adjustments are the correct answers, says Secretary Wallace, and these adjustments on the basic crops will be made under the Farm Act if farmers will cooperate with administrators of the act in carrying out its provisions.

No Michigan farmer will be urged to join with his neighbors in obtaining relief for all agriculture. The plans will be explained through newspapers and by extension workers and each farmer will judge his own willingness to work with his neighbors in the proposed plan.

Sprays Aid Profits from Potato Crop

Adequate protection of potatoes by spraying or dusting results in a profitable increase of U. S. No. 1 potatoes, as shown by years of experimental work by the crops department at Michigan State College.

In the college trials, spraying with Bordeaux mixture has given better results than dusting with copper-lime dusts but the latter treatment has some advantage. Gains obtained from spraying or dusting are not markedly affected by weather conditions but the profits do increase greatly when leafhoppers are numerous. Apparently, the hoppers are the chief factor in cutting down the potato crop, in a series of years.

Bad attacks of blight, of course, seriously injure potato crops, but the outbreaks of blight are not as common as the damage by leafhoppers and the aggregate loss is less. Blight also is controlled by spray or dust applications if the treatments are given at the proper times.

While high pressure sprayers with nozzles set to send spray to all parts of the leaf surfaces are best, the college tests show that pressures can be too high as well as too low. A pressure of 300 pounds gave better results than pressures either at 150 pounds or 450 pounds.

Complete directions on spraying and dusting potatoes will be available in a bulletin now being published by Michigan State College. The bulletin is Special No. 234 and can be obtained free by writing to the bulletin clerk at the college. It will be off the press before July 1.

Mr. Whittenburg received this payment in two 10% remittances a few days apart from the state treasurer. He had previously sent schools a 10% payment so this week's remittance will bring the amount up to 30% of this year's appropriation.

LINERS PAY.

"Put in a liner advertising little pigs," came G. A. Tindale's cheery voice over the phone to the Chronicle Monday. "I had a similar liner in a few weeks ago and sold the pigs right after the paper was printed. This is another lot and I'm sure they won't last long."

PINNEY STATE BANK TO REOPEN MONDAY

Is Among First Seven Federal Reserve Member Banks to Secure License.

The Pinney State Bank will resume its regular business on Monday, having been licensed to reopen by approval of the State Banking Department and receiving a similar permit from the Federal Reserve Board. Frederick Pinney, conservator of the bank for the past three months, was in Lansing Wednesday where the set-up for the re-organized bank was approved by state and federal authorities.

From among over 200 closed banks in Michigan, four Federal Reserve member banks have been licensed to reopen for regular banking business since the nationwide banking holiday was declared. The first was at Fremont on June 12 and the three following that date were at Adrian, Flint and Midland. Three more member banks will be reopened next Monday—the Pinney State Bank at Cass City, the Farmers' and Merchants' State Bank at Sebewing and another bank at Adrian. The public, at points where banks have reopened, have welcomed a return of regular banking facilities and the business of those towns has naturally been increased because of that fact.

The plan of reorganization as outlined by the State Banking Department and the Federal Reserve Board provides that stockholders be assessed 100% on their bank stock and that all assets of a depreciated present value or of a doubtful value be segregated in a Trust Fund and placed under the management of trustees. As these segregated assets are liquidated, they will be paid from time to time to depositors. The three trustees appointed by the State Banking Department for the local Trust Fund are Solomon Striffler, Fred Maier and Dorus W. Benkelman. The requirements were that two of the trustees be selected from among the depositors who were not otherwise formerly connected with the bank as either an officer or a stockholder. The third trustee was to be an officer of the bank. All are well known, reputable citizens and men of affairs.

With Federal Reserve and other requirements exceedingly rigid for a reorganized bank, the local institution will open with a high state of liquidity and with unquestionable soundness, as the federal and state licenses indicate.

War Debts Injected in World Conference—Britain Pays Installment of Ten Millions—Final Doings of Congress Before Adjournment.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Ramsay MacDonald

RAMSAY MACDONALD threw a fair-sized monkey wrench into the London economic conference machinery in his opening speech, but the wheels hadn't really begun to revolve, so the mechanism was not wrecked immediately.

Whether it is ultimately to operate successfully depends on diplomatic skill or on the compliance of Uncle Sam. In the middle of an otherwise well-ordered address, the British prime minister suddenly interjected the war debt issue, despite the fact that it was not on the agenda of the conference.

Delegates from all parts of the British empire and possibly those from France were not surprised by MacDonald's action, but Secretary Hull and his brother delegates from the United States did not attempt to conceal their displeasure with what they considered at least a display of poor taste.

Mr. Roosevelt advised the British that as soon as possible they should make whatever representations for a revision of the debt they desire to offer, and in Washington. He said he had no power to reduce or cancel the debt but would submit the results of the negotiation to congress.

Under the new inflation bill the President is authorized to accept silver in payment of debt installments at the value of 50 cents an ounce. So the British paid in silver obtained from India.

WAR debts, as much as discord over the matter of war veterans' benefits, caused delay in the adjournment of congress, though the latter question was the ostensible reason.

When Secretary Hull arose, the third day, to make his speech, it was expected he would make some sort of reply to the war debts demand. But he was silent on that subject, devoting much of his speech to argument for a renewal of the tariff truce promulgated by President Roosevelt.

POSSIBLY more threatening to the success of the conference than the injection of the war debts issue was the demand of the French, represented by Premier Daladier, that the dollar be stabilized before the matter of tariff reductions and removal of other trade barriers be taken up.

America's hope for success of the conference was built upon a world tariff truce, and the French believe they have blocked this for the present at least. They assert this would mean nothing so long as currencies are fluctuating. Only 15 of the nations represented in the conference adhered to the temporary tariff truce which was to last during the life of the parley, and one of these, France, now refuses to renew its pledge under existing circumstances.

While this sort of talk was going on in the conference hall, Great Britain and Italy were planning to evade payment of the greater part of the installments due the United States on June 15, and France was calmly ignoring the fact that she also was due to make a payment on that date, her government being determined to do nothing about it.

President Roosevelt's reply to the British offer, eagerly awaited, was that the United States would accept the partial payment only with the explicit understanding that the money was just an installment on the sum due and that such action should in no way invalidate America's claim to the unpaid remainder.

Arbitration would likely extend over a long period. Should this fail, the law provides for the declaration of a state of emergency, under which the President of the United States appoints a fact finding commission, which must study the issues involved and report within thirty days.

MRS. ROOSEVELT returned home from her air trip to California in the course of which she announced the coming divorce of her son Elliott. To the Washington correspondents she explained the incident at the Dallas airport when Gov. "Ma" Ferguson and her husband failed to get into a photograph with the First Lady.

Secretary of Labor Perkins announced the appointment of President Robert Hutchins of the University of Chicago as chairman of the advisory committee to be set up in connection with the new federal employment service. Senator R. F. Wagner of New York and President William Green of the American Federation of Labor and President Henry I. Harman of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States also have been invited.

ONE of the last acts of the house of representatives was the adoption of a resolution for congressional investigation of all acts of judges and other federal court agents in receiver-ship cases, the sponsors being Sabbath of Chicago and Celler of New York. Representative Hatton Summers, Texas, Democratic prosecutor and chairman of the house judiciary committee, said Chicago would be one of the first courts to be the subject of inquiry, because of the Chicago Bar association report condemning the actions of Judge Frederick E. Woodward in allowing nearly a quarter of a million in fees to his son's law firm as receivers' counsel.

CHANCELLOR ENGLEBERT DOLFUSS is determined that Austria shall not be infected with Hitlerism, and the government is carrying on a determined war against the Nazis, who are accused of plotting to inaugurate a reign of terror there to be followed by a coup to seize control of the country. All known Nazis in the country are being arrested for questioning by the police, who assert more than 10 per cent of them are Germans.

The industry control bill did not get through without fierce opposition from 15 of the more radical Democrats and 23 Republicans, all led by Senator Borah, who especially denounced the giving of vast power to Gen. Hugh Johnson, the man selected as the administrator. The senate rather ignored the executive order which President Roosevelt had transmitted, providing for regroupings, consolidations, transfers and abolitions of certain executive agencies and functions.

more than $25,000,000. Many other changes, he said, were in contemplation, and he had selected only those he believed should be put into effect as quickly as possible.

NOW Massachusetts is in line for repeal of prohibition, the tenth state to decide the matter. The electors voted about 4 to 1 wet in selecting 45 delegates to a constitutional convention that will ratify the repeal amendment. In Boston the vote was approximately 10 to 1, and one of that city's delegates will be James Roosevelt, son of President Roosevelt.

JOSEPH B. EASTMAN, a member of the interstate commerce commission, was selected by President Roosevelt to be federal coordinator of transportation under the terms of the emergency railway act. Eastman doesn't like the labor clauses in the measure which prevent the reduction of operating forces, but believes that much can be accomplished in spite of them.

The railroad executives themselves have decided there must be savings effected in labor and decided to request organized labor to accept a 22 1/2 per cent reduction in the basic wage scale. Their committee of nine is empowered to negotiate with the unions to a conclusion. If the negotiations fail, there would still be a long period before a strike call. Under the terms of the railway labor act, if direct negotiations fail, the federal mediation board would offer the services of a conciliator who might spend several months in bringing the parties together.

Arbitration would likely extend over a long period. Should this fail, the law provides for the declaration of a state of emergency, under which the President of the United States appoints a fact finding commission, which must study the issues involved and report within thirty days.

MRS. ROOSEVELT returned home from her air trip to California in the course of which she announced the coming divorce of her son Elliott. To the Washington correspondents she explained the incident at the Dallas airport when Gov. "Ma" Ferguson and her husband failed to get into a photograph with the First Lady.

Secretary of Labor Perkins announced the appointment of President Robert Hutchins of the University of Chicago as chairman of the advisory committee to be set up in connection with the new federal employment service. Senator R. F. Wagner of New York and President William Green of the American Federation of Labor and President Henry I. Harman of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States also have been invited.

ONE of the last acts of the house of representatives was the adoption of a resolution for congressional investigation of all acts of judges and other federal court agents in receiver-ship cases, the sponsors being Sabbath of Chicago and Celler of New York.

Representative Hatton Summers, Texas, Democratic prosecutor and chairman of the house judiciary committee, said Chicago would be one of the first courts to be the subject of inquiry, because of the Chicago Bar association report condemning the actions of Judge Frederick E. Woodward in allowing nearly a quarter of a million in fees to his son's law firm as receivers' counsel. The bar association did not reflect on the integrity of the judge or the law firm, but condemned the practice.

CHANCELLOR ENGLEBERT DOLFUSS is determined that Austria shall not be infected with Hitlerism, and the government is carrying on a determined war against the Nazis, who are accused of plotting to inaugurate a reign of terror there to be followed by a coup to seize control of the country. All known Nazis in the country are being arrested for questioning by the police, who assert more than 10 per cent of them are Germans.

The industry control bill did not get through without fierce opposition from 15 of the more radical Democrats and 23 Republicans, all led by Senator Borah, who especially denounced the giving of vast power to Gen. Hugh Johnson, the man selected as the administrator. The senate rather ignored the executive order which President Roosevelt had transmitted, providing for regroupings, consolidations, transfers and abolitions of certain executive agencies and functions.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION ENDS; CHAOS FEARED

Concluded from first page. can have only what is left out of the $31,000,000 the sales tax is expected to raise after all the state departments and institutions have taken their dip into the fund. If the sales tax does not raise this amount of money, there will be no funds for the public schools. By chance if the amount secured from the sales tax should be more, then of course the schools will profit. But the schools have had each year from the state anywhere from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000. Even the most hopeful can see little in sight during the next year.

There is some talk that Governor William Comstock will call a special session of the legislature during the next few weeks to provide support for the public schools, but unless he does, hundreds of the little district school houses that dot the hillsides of the state, the grade schools and the high schools will be unable to open next fall. If they do, possibly through some local taxation support, they will be able to run but a few months of the year.

It was the vote of the people last fall, the vote that wrote into the state constitution an amendment which took away from the state a right to tax real estate, coupled with the failure of the legislature to provide new revenues for the support of the schools that has led to the collapse of the public school system of Michigan.

Condemned by members of the legislature as a bad piece of legislation, legislation that "shifted the tax burden from the rich man to the backs of the poor man," as Representative William Connelly declared, nevertheless the sales tax bill has passed and Governor Comstock is going to approve it. It is effective immediately and from now on the people of Michigan are going to pay a three per cent tax on everything they buy. The bill was condemned by both the senate and house as being entirely unfit for passage, but it was necessary that the state be provided with some revenues to maintain some semblance of an organized government; therefore dozens of representatives and senators voted for a bill they knew to be unfair and declared to be bad in many of its features. The bill is expected to raise some $31,000,000 for the support of the state. An exemption was placed in the bill that provides a bit of aid for the farmers. There will be no sales tax collected on gross sales of less than $600 per year. This will make it possible for farmers who conduct little roadside stands to sell the products of their orchards and gardens without the payment of a tax. The sales tax bill creates scores of new jobs and the bill carries an original appropriation of $100,000 for the boys to play with.

One piece of worthy legislation was enacted into law, due to the exposure of the newspapers of attempted bribery in an effort to kill the measure. Small loan companies and loan sharks were unsuccessful in their effort to prevent the passage of a bill cutting the interest rate on small loans. During the Brucker administration when small loan companies, finance companies and others ran away with legislation they wanted, the state empowered these concerns to collect three and one-half per cent interest per month on small loans. Early in the present session Senator Francis Kulp of Battle Creek and two or three other members introduced bills to cut this rate to one per cent per month. But before members of the legislature had reached Lansing, these loan outfits had established lobbyists in Lansing to kill the agitation to cut this confiscatory interest rate. They succeeded in keeping the bills tied up in senate committee, even though the house had passed one bill cutting the rate to one per cent per month. Then it was that newspaper correspondents smoked out the power of the loan shark lobbyists over some members of the senate. The house demanded a legislation inquiry of lobby activities and it came to light that attempted bribery had been resorted to, that fake telegrams had flooded the legislature and that every conceivable plan had been resorted to, to kill the bill cutting the interest rate on small loans. In the face of the publicity and the disappearance of the lobbyists, members of the senate committee did not keep up their fight to kill the measure. It was reported out and passed, putting the interest rate that these outfits can charge legally to one and a half per cent per month. It's another case where the men and women of a riddle means are forced to pay a ransom in order to get the thing that the more fortunate secure for less.

Representative Vernon J. Brown of Ingham county, veteran fighter in the house for economy in state affairs who broke with ex-Governor Brucker two years ago because Brucker ignored Brown in his efforts to force a reduction of state expenses, has gone home only fairly satisfied with the work of the legislature. Economy bills that he had sailed successfully through the house went on the rocks in the senate. As an example of the way the thing was done, the Brown bill cutting the appropriation of the University of Michigan down to a point that would have enabled the school to function, but on a retrenched basis, was increased in the senate by a million, one hundred thousand dollars. Dozens and dozens of other appropriation bills he sponsored in cooperation with Representative Gus Hartman of Houghton, met the same fate. The ten million dollar saving that Representative Brown declared the state could make and function just as well as ever, faded to a mere few millions due to the tremendous institutional and departmental lobby system that flourishes in Lansing.

In this connection it might be said that the bill Senator Kulp introduced which would have made it illegal for public officials of any kind to do lobbying in behalf of any pending legislation, died without a mere wink from the committee to which it had been assigned.

While around the legislature halls in Lansing one can hear nothing but criticism and condemnation of the work of the legislature; there are those old time legislative observers who are frank to declare that the failure is in no way due to the legislature itself. There has not been a single state official with knowledge enough or interest enough, except in the bi-monthly payroll checks, to try to work out a legislative program of any kind for troubled Michigan. Early in the session it was apparent that the governor and the attorney general were hostile to each other. Then came a break between the governor and some of the senate leaders. So it has gone from worse to worse, with no one looking out for the taxpayer back home.

A financial chart has been prepared that shows that Michigan for six years has been running in the "red." It was soon after Governor Green assumed office that that state's finances, according to this chart, plunged below the red line, to remain there to this very day. Not once during all of these six years has the state been out of the "red." Each year it has sunk lower and lower until the present administration was faced with a deficit of something like $12,000,000. Even the sinking funds that were created during the Sleeper, Groesbeck administrations have evaporated. The taxpayers' program for a reduction of governmental expense and a decent tax of some kind has been forgotten. The demand for political jobs has had to be met. To pay office holders takes money, and to get the money taxes and licenses are necessary. The political jobs are being filled and new tax laws have been enacted, with open charges that legislative votes have been swapped for paroles and job promises, in order to get the votes necessary to put over the program of the politicians. The session is ended. Some say maybe it would have been better if it had never been started.

A COMPANY THIRTY YEARS OLD

Last Friday the Ford Motor Company completed 30 years of automobile making.

It is also my fortieth year at the same job. I made my first engine in 1893, and it still runs. This is the engine that won the Selden Patent Suit—which took the motor car out of the exclusive class, and opened the automobile industry to hundreds of manufacturers who started during the last 30 years.

Some of the men who began with me that June day in 1903, are working here yet. All of the principles we laid down then, are still operative; we find that they have great survival value for the future. To date they have produced and sold over 21,000,000 Ford cars.

Although we created the automobile market we have never thought it was good for anyone to monopolize it. We have always believed that before business could be good for one, it must be good for all. Our discoveries and improvements have always been open to other manufacturers without patent restrictions.

Of course, there is one thing we cannot share—everyone must get it for himself—and that is experience. Money could duplicate our buildings and machines, but it cannot duplicate 40 years of experience. And it is experience that makes a motor car.

But the past does not especially concern me; it has all been a preparation for the future. For myself, I feel that I have just been gathering the tools to do something worth while, and that my real task is still ahead.

Great changes are upon the world. False ideas of every kind are vanishing in the general upheaval. Those who built truly on principle will survive—their service will carry over. Business integrity and commodity honor will be fully justified. And newer and better ways of living will appear.

That is the outlook for this young thirty-year old Company of ours.

PRICE PARITY FOR FARMERS.

"Parity," or fair exchange value of farm prices, is a situation in which the prices of farm products will enable the farmer to buy on the average the same amount of goods and services with the same amount of farm products that he could buy in the pre-war period. The base period which is fixed by the Farm Act is in general the pre-war period August, 1909, to July, 1914, (for tobacco, August, 1919, to July, 1929).

Since that 1909-1914 period, farm prices were above "parity" for only two years during the World War. In the depression of 1920 farm prices dropped so much lower and quicker than prices of other products that a 25% disparity resulted. It has continued ever since, and in intensified form in the past three years.

In order that farm products be on a parity with goods that farmers buy, prices of farm products must be doubled even if the prices of other products do not rise. As prices of non-agricultural goods rise, farm prices must rise even more to come to a parity level. It is not the plan of the administrators of the act to accomplish complete parity at once.

A parity price is not necessarily a stable price at any particular level but merely bears a certain definite relation to other prices. Parity between farm products and things farmers buy can be maintained either on a high or low price level but farm prices tend to decline to lower points and more quickly than other prices in periods of depression.

Although farm prices were above the pre-war level during the period 1920 to 1930 a constant disparity continued. This disparity was smallest in 1925, due to small crops. Then the ratio of prices received to prices-paid by farmers was 92. A decline in farm prices then followed, making this ratio as low as 48 in February, 1933, the lowest point on record.

The long continued disparity since 1920 has prevented farmers making repairs and replacements to such an extent that the condition of their buildings and machinery has seriously declined. Prices must continue for some time at a parity level at least in order to make up for the losses of the post-war years and to restore agriculture to the same condition relative to that it held during the 5 years 1910 to 1914.

When Steel Pens Were Costly
The 1830 steel pens cost a shilling each in London, and in those days a shilling was a shilling. Though a quill could be bought for a halfpenny, the steel pen soon ousted it because of its longer life. The steel pen is now being shelved for the fountain pen.

Our Government —How It Operates

By William Bruckart

OUR POSTAL SERVICE

IT IS possible that you felt you had some complaint to make last July when you had to place a three-cent stamp on your letters instead of the red two-center that sufficed prior to that time, but I will wager you did not make much noise about it after all. I think that I can tell you the reasons why you complained so little about that increase of one-third in the postal rates; there is nothing that gives you so much for so little as does the postal service. Had the landlord increased your rent a third you would have moved right out; had the grocer raised any price that much, you would have gone immediately to his competitor, and had you been told by your bank that the interest rate you were paying was to be raised 33 1/2 per cent, you would have sworn vengeance. I have wondered since that rate increase went into effect whether possibly it was not a good thing from the standpoint of patrons of the postal service as well as assuring to the federal government something near the amount of funds it has to have to pay operating expenses. The fact that there was an increase in rates, especially on letters, brought to the attention of all of us the benefits we had been enjoying through years and years of that service which we accept as a matter of course. It costs between $600,000,000 and $700,000,000 to operate that farflung system known as the postal service each 12 months. The principle was inculcated in our governmental structure when the nation was formed; that this service should be self-sustaining, though it is run by the federal government. It never has been quite able to pay its own way. The reason postal rates never have quite succeeded in producing sufficient revenue to pay all expenses of the great organization that serves, is that fundamental belief that it should not be an agency for profit. In other words, congress always has clung to the idea of having the postal service do its job just as cheaply (for the people) as it can, and that it is better for it to fall just a little short of making expenses than to take from those who use that service more than is needed. If there is a deficit at the end of the year, as there nearly always has been, congress has been willing to take care of it with an appropriation from funds received by general taxation. But in the last several years when the volume of letters fell off as it always does when there is not much business, the amount of the deficit grew to a size which congress decided was a little too large. So it turned to the increase in the postage rate on letters to make up part of the loss. That one-cent increase probably will not be enough to offset the anticipated deficit completely, but it will reduce the difference between the income and the expenses to a comparatively small sum. If there had been no rate increase, I am told that the deficit from last July to the end of next June would have approached $200,000,000. And that brings another thought. As a people, Americans have always stood against the government engaging in business. Of course there are exceptions, yet that has been our general conception. We have always said that government was not created for any other purpose than to govern. It was not a business institution as we know business. Yet, there are not many greater businesses than the postal service, and it is not an agency that governs our conduct or our relations with our neighbors except indirectly. Why, then, should not private capital and private industry perform the service and enjoy the profits therefrom? The answer is simple. The reason is that those who conceived our form of government and envisioned the magnitude of our nation, at the same time, saw the necessity of a uniform system of handling its written communications. Those men recognized more than a century and a half ago that the individual states must not be allowed to control the means of communication; that when a letter was once started on its way, it must go on, and that only one agency could be made responsible if success were to be attained. The postmaster general occupies the post of head of the Post Office department. Embodied in it are dozens of supervisory agencies, filled for the most part by men and women who have moved up through the ranks of workers who gained appointment in the service only after meeting civil service tests. They were promoted on merit. What I have said relative to the machinery of the postal service does not apply, however, to several thousand postmasters who gained jobs by appointment from the President, not after an examination of their qualifications, but after they have qualified with the politicians. Fortunately for patrons of the mails, however, the machinery runs on without squeak.

CANADA SAW WHITE MEN 600 YEARS AGO

Engraved Stone Indicates Presence of Norsemen.

Winnipeg.—The mythology of Manitoba's white man's history goes back 571 years, Dr. D. A. Stewart, president of the Manitoba Historical society, announced in Winnipeg. "There is a good deal of reason to believe that white men traveled along the Red river 571 years ago," Mr. Stewart said. His belief is based on the fact that in 1899 a stone was found along the upper waters of the Red river on which were described in Runic characters the hardships and adventures of a party of Goths and Norsemen who had left their ship and journeyed from Hudson bay and up the Red river into North Dakota and Minnesota as they are now known. The surmise was, said Doctor Stewart, that these were members of an expedition known to have left Norway in 1328, in search of settlers missing from Greenland, said to have gone to that land about 1354. The authentic, documental history of the white man in Manitoba, Doctor Stewart continued, dates back to 1612, when Manitoba was discovered as a by-product of the search for the Northwest passage, Thomas Button, leading an expedition of two ships, having landed near the mouth of the Nelson river during that year. The subsequent history of Manitoba after that was divided into five periods by Doctor Stewart. These he classified as the period of discovery, the period of trade monopoly, ushered in by the chartering of Prince Rupert's Company of Gentleman Adventurers, the period of fur trade rivalry, the most romantic period of the five, the colonial period, opened by the arrival of the Selkirk settlers, and the period of provincial life.

Miners Rush to Great Bear in Search of Gold

Cameron Bay, Alberta.—Conditions reminiscent of the Yukon gold rushes and early California mining booms are being re-enacted in the Great Bear Lake district, close to the Arctic circle. Meals cost an average of $2 each. Housing facilities are crude. The only fast transportation is by plane, and few can afford such travel. Hundreds of prospectors, willing to bear the rigorous weather, flocked to the region after hearing reports of the discovery of rich gold, silver, and radium bearing deposits. Forty-seven different minerals have been discovered in the district, a majority of them occurring in such quantities that even cautious mining experts have described the find as "extraordinary." Large deposits of pitch blende have proved among the most profitable discoveries to date. Eight to ten tons of the material are required to produce one gram of radium, but one gram is worth $50,000. A radium recovery plant to treat the ore has been opened at Port Hope, Ontario.

Man Advertises That His Checks Are "Rubber"

Towanda, Pa.—Convinced he was spending too much time in jail on charges of passing "bad" checks, William English decided to reform, and took steps to make the reform lasting. "I want to advertise myself," he said, and requested that the following be printed: "I hereby forbid anyone hereafter cashing any checks for me unless they are government checks. The government checks are O. K. I receive them for fighting for the United States in the World war." His "advertisement" was printed.

Kill Turkey With 6 Gold Nuggets in Its Gizzard

Toronto, Ontario.—A turkey which might have laid a golden egg was killed here before it had a chance to do so. George Smith, preparing a large meal, bought a turkey. He took it home and was in the act of cleaning it when he found six gold nuggets in the gizzard. He says that he took them to a mineralogist, who claimed they were the real thing and worth a substantial sum.

Shoe Mixup Foils a Would-Be Hero

Bluffton, Ind.—The fact that Tom Miller, druggist, got his shoes on the wrong feet is all that kept him from being a hero. Miller had just sat down in his favorite chair and pulled off his shoes to give his feet a rest when a piercing scream from a neighbor woman reached his ears. Thrusting his feet into his shoes, Miller dashed out the back door and caught sight of a trespasser running across the yard. Through the gate and down the alley went the two men, Miller, the pursuer, gaining a little, until his feet started to hurt. Finally he looked down and discovered that his shoes were on the wrong feet. By the time he had changed them the man he was chasing had disappeared.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Charles E. Dunn

Jesus Our Lord and Saviour.

Lesson for June 25. Peter 1:3-9. Golden Text: Matt. 23:18-20.

This is a review lesson, where we pause to summarize the meaning of the lessons of the Second Quarter, dealing with the drama of the life of Jesus from the middle of His ministry to His death and resurrection.

At the beginning we saw the Master, with His disciples, pushing into Syria. There He met the Greek woman who sought and found His healing touch for her afflicted daughter. Note the absence here of either sex or race prejudice.

Then we studied one of the most critical episodes in the career of Jesus, the conference at Caesarea Philippi, where the Master, apparently for the first time, openly acknowledged that He was the Messiah, and demanded of His disciples sacrificial obedience after the pattern of the Cross.

There followed the thrilling episode of the Transfiguration. In the darkness of the night, Jesus, with His three most intimate disciples, trudged up a mountain and there, at its summit, was He transformed, His whole person assuming an unearthly splendor.

Then we watched the Saviour rebuke the self-seeking of His ambitious followers by placing a little child in their midst; we studied the exceedingly suggestive story of the rich young ruler; we walked with our Lord as He journeyed toward Jerusalem to face His Cross; we shared in the enthusiasm of the crowd as they hailed Him, upon His entrance into the city so close to His heart, as King; we delighted in His skill in confounding those who tried to entrap Him with their captious questions; we rejoiced in the devotion of the woman who poured costly ointment upon His head; and we noticed the startled look upon the faces of the twelve, and heard their nervous query, "Is it I?", as He announced His betrayal.

Finally we saw our King on His Cross, crucified at Calvary. It is a bitter but glorious Cross, a throne fit for a matchless Master. And soon we saw the grip of death released, and a risen Lord who reigns forever in the hearts of all who love Him.

TO BE UNDERSTOOD.

Finally Jesus knew the necessity for repetition and practiced it. One of the sons of President Garfield was traveling with him through Ohio, when the president was addressing county fairs. At the close of the day, he asked his boy what he thought of his speeches. The boy was embarrassed by the question.

"Why . . . why they were fine, dad," he stammered, "but I felt awfully uncomfortable part of the time. You repeated yourself so often; once you said the very same thing in different words four times over."

Garfield slapped the boy's shoulder with a hearty laugh.

"So you thought your old dad was running out of ideas, did you?" he cried. "Well, I don't blame you; but there's a method in his madness. Tomorrow when I reach that passage in my talk, you watch the audience. The first time I make the point, you'll see by their faces that a few folks near the platform get it. But further back there will be noise and commotion; people will be turning their heads to find out who has just driven up, or what sort of a hat Mrs. Jones has on and they won't hear me at all. When I repeat it the first time a few faces in the middle of the crowd will show a response; on the third go, I'll make still more converts, and on the fourth trial they will all have a notion of what I am talking about. But it takes four shots to land them all; experience with all sorts of audiences has made me sure of that."

It has been said that "reputation is repetition." No important truth can be impressed upon the minds of any large number of people by being said only once. The thoughts which Jesus had to give

What Makes a Safe Tire? ... I KNOW!

ARE YOU WILLING TO RISK YOUR LIFE ON ADVERTISING STATEMENTS CLAIMING BLOWOUT-PROOF AND UNBLOWABLE TIRES? ONE MANUFACTURER GIVES AS THE REASON FOR CLAIMING BLOWOUT-PROOF TIRES—THE USE OF ONE PLY OF ANOTHER COLOR—ANOTHER, A PATENTED "NO BREAKER" CONSTRUCTION—a mail order house, high stretch "elastic" cords, etc., etc. Actually the fundamental cause of a tire blowout is the flexing of the tire which causes friction of the fibers in the cord, resulting in heat and causing the rubber to soften and the cords to deteriorate.

There is a reason why Firestone Tires have won the 500-mile Indianapolis race for 14 consecutive years, the most grueling tire test. The reason is the Firestone patented extra process of Gum-Dipping which saturates every fiber and insulates every cord with pure rubber—which gives strength to the cords and prevents friction and heat in the fibers. This year 42 drivers in this race equipped their cars with Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires and not a single driver had any tire trouble.

Race drivers know why Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires are safer and not subject to blowout and will not risk their lives on ordinary tires. Your life and the lives of your family are often in danger at the high road speeds of today and you should not take greater risks than the race drivers who make sure that they have the best and safest tires they can buy—Firestone. Come in today. We will give you a liberal trade-in allowance for your old tires on new Firestone High Speed Tires—the safest tires in the world.

Stanley Asher, Manager. Telephone No. 25

Ada, was born, who became the wife of D. L. Rule. She preceded her father in death five years ago.

In 1877, he was united in marriage to Miss Cynthia Stroop of Lapeer. They came to Kingston township, Tuscola county, in 1882, and settled on a farm where he has since lived. His wife passed away July 15, 1920. To this union two daughters were born, Mrs. Ella Harrington, who resides at the home, and Mrs. Blanche Hanna, in Detroit. He also leaves two grandchildren, Donald and Eileen Hanna of Detroit.

Mr. Lumbard was converted when sixteen years of age and joined the M. E. church at Lapeer.

When he came to Kingston township, he joined the M. E. church at the Leek appointment by letter where he was an earnest worker, serving as Sunday School superintendent and class leader for a number of years. When the Leek appointment was discontinued his membership was transferred to Detroit M. E. church.

Funeral was held at Kingston M. E. church Sunday afternoon, June 19. Rev. W. L. Jones, pastor of the church, officiated and burial took place in Kingston cemetery. It can be said of Mr. Lumbard that he lived a good life, and was a friend to all. The daughters have the sympathy of the community.

CHAPTER XI

HANVEY gazed at the gray walls of the jail and nodded as though having reached a startling conclusion.

"I believe our next move, John, is to have a talk with Mister Maxwell Vernon."

"Good Lord! Has it taken you all this time to think of that?"

"Uh-huh. My brain was never strong on speed."

Reagan was earnest. "Quit kidding, Jim. Why did you leave this palooka for the last?"

"Because I wanted to hear what everybody else had to say. From what you tell me, Vernon is lying high, wide and handsome, and I wanted to form some idea about what was truth and what wasn't."

"Sensible enough. Let's go."

Back into the brilliance of the warden's office, and thence down the dimly lighted corridor on which were the rooms used for those prisoners who seemed entitled to something better than the ordinary cells. The turnkey admitted them to a room identical with the ones occupied by Tony Peyton and Larry Welch.

They stood in the doorway and Hanvey regarded the occupant through sleepy, half-closed eyes.

Vernon was seated on his cot. He had doffed coat and tie, and his shirt was open at the throat.

His long black hair was somewhat tousled and his chubby face wore an expression of belligerence. His whole manner—even before a word was spoken—was combative.

Jim seated himself and smiled lazily at the prisoner. He felt rather sorry for the boy, fat, good-natured, easy-going . . . and now suddenly enmeshed in a tragedy which he couldn't quite understand. Jim's voice came soothingly.

"Things been happening pretty fast, ain't they, Son?"

Vernon looked up sharply. "What things?"

"Oh, plenty."

"I don't know what you mean."

"Shuh! Sure you do."

Max rose and tried to look dignified. He succeeded only in appearing somewhat ludicrous and entirely pitiful.

"I haven't anything to say, Mr. Hanvey."

"Well, what do you know about that? I haven't asked you anything, have I?"

"No, but—"

"Listen to me, Son: answer me one question."

"What is it?"
"Did you kill Pat Thayer?"
Vernon's eyes closed. He pulled himself together with a visible effort.
"No."
"Then I think you better talk to me plain and honest. Of course, if you did kill him, the best thing you can do is keep your mouth shut. Now—what say you?"
"Nothing. I'm not going to talk."
"A right. I ain't gonna argue with you." He reached inevitably for the golden toothpick. "Swell new car you got, Son."

Vernon was stonily silent.
"Swell car," repeated Hanvey. "Sure wish I could own one like that. But I wouldn't go buy one like that. I'd had a row with another man."

"I didn't row with anybody."
"No? Not even Pat Thayer?"
Max was trembling. Boyishly, he was struggling to keep actual tears from his eyes. "You're trying to trap me! I know! And I'm not going to say anything. Not anything at all!"

"That's up to you, Son. But suppose you tell me this: What happened between you and Thayer in the fraternity house day before yesterday somewhere about one o'clock in the afternoon?"

"In the fraternity house? Nothing happened."

"You went to his room, didn't you?"

"No."

"Aw, Son! You know dog-gone good and well you went to Pat Thayer's room. Now why don't you tell us what happened?"

"I didn't go near his room," cried Vernon harshly. "I went to my own room and changed my clothes and then I left the house. I never saw Thayer for a moment all the time I was in there."

Jim shook his big head. "I hate to see you fighting me, Son, when I'm trying to help—"

"Like h—l you are! You're trying to mix me up in Pat Thayer's murder."

"I'm trying to get the truth. Does that mix you up?"

"No, but—"

"Just before you went to the fraternity house, you and Thayer had a big row on the campus, didn't you?"

"Who says so?"

"Several people. And also there ain't much question that you were pretty sore at him. Now I ask you this: Why?"

"I had reason enough. I thought he was my friend. I've been buddies with him for two years. He's been winning all my money at cards. I guess I would have been a dumb-bell all my life if I hadn't got sore at him over something else."

"Stealing your girl for instance?"

Max looked up sharply, and became boyishly dignified. "I—'d really rather not talk about that angle of it, Mr. Hanvey," he said gently.

"As you say, Vernon. But when this other thing happened—you getting sore—what then?"

"I started thinking—for the first time. And I began to suspect that it wasn't all just accident that Thayer had been nice to me so long as I had money; but the minute I went broke he lost interest in me and started going with . . . that is, doing things to make me sore. And it struck me that it was queer he had always won at cards. Oh! I was stupid enough, but I waked up all at once."

"And you got about as mad as you ever had been in your life. You went to Thayer's room in the fraternity house—"

"I did not! I told you before I never went near his room."

"So you did. I thought maybe you'd remembered that you were mistaken. Anyway, you were in the house at the same time he was. After awhile you left there hurriedly with a bundle under your arm, didn't you? What was in that bundle, Vernon?"

Max was nervous; his pudgy hands were twisted together and his eyes roved helplessly around the little room.

"A—suit of clothes. The one I said I changed. I was taking it to the Marland Tailoring company for alteration and cleaning."

"Good. Now we're clearing up parts of the mystery." Jim turned to Reagan. "Suppose you check up on that, John. Just phone that company and make sure they have the suit, will you?"

"Sure." Reagan started to rise, but Max Vernon stopped him.

The boy's eyes were round with fear and beads of perspiration stood out on his forehead.

"Never mind," he said hoarsely. "The clothes are not there."

"You didn't take them?"

"N-n-no."
"Where are they?"
"I—I don't know. I guess I—I—lost them."

"You sure are an unfortunate young man," murmured Jim. "Losing a good suit of clothes that way. Well, anyway, after losing that suit, you drove on up to Steel City, didn't you?"

Vernon hesitated. Then he nodded.

"Yes."
"Alone?"
Max's cheeks were pasty. "Yes. Alone."

"And when you got there you traded in your car on a new one, didn't you? And paid the difference of twelve hundred dollars in cash. Where did you get the money?"

"I have plenty of money."

"But you just said a minute ago that Thayer laid off you because you were broke. How could you be broke and also have plenty of money?"

"I had it. . . . I got it from Thayer. He owed it to me."

"I see." Jim beamed approval. "That clears up another mystery. You and Thayer were really friends, after all. He loaned you the twelve hundred dollars just like it was nothing, eh?"

"He gave it to me. He owed it."

"When did he give it to you, Vernon? When you went to his room?"

"I told you I didn't go to his room."

"I see. I guess he sent it to you by special messenger or something. Never mind that, though. But there is one thing I want to know: How did it happen that there wasn't any floor rug in the car you traded when you got to Steel City?"

Again that hunted, haunted light in Max's eyes.

"I don't know anything about any floor rug."

"Wasn't there one in your old car?"

"I don't know."

"Gee! You sure are a forgetful guy. Now what about that knife Mr. Reagan showed you an hour or so ago? That is yours, isn't it?"

"Yes."

"Where did you get it?"

"In Sicily. I've traveled a lot and I've always collected queer weapons."

"Did you have it in your hand at all day before yesterday?"

"No."

"Do you know it is the very knife with which Thayer was killed?"

"I know that's what Mr. Reagan said."

"You knew it wasn't on your wall where you always kept it, didn't you?"

"No! How was I to notice that one of the things was gone? And I didn't kill Pat Thayer, Mr. Hanvey. I swear I didn't."

Hanvey spoke softly. "Admitting that, Vernon: Why did you get mixed up in the robbery of the Marland National bank?"

Max stood rigid for a moment, then sank down on the cot. He buried his face in his hands. "I didn't have anything to do with that, either, Mr. Hanvey: honest I didn't."

* * * * *

The two detectives faced each other solemnly in the warden's office.

"Will you tell me why," Reagan asked—"when you had Vernon on the run, you didn't chase him? You knew he was lying, didn't you?"

"Sure, John—sure. And the more questions I asked the more lies he was gonna tell."

"Well, I'll say this for you, Jim Hanvey: You seem to rock along with all the delicacy of an elephant—but d—d if you haven't learned a heap about this case."

"What, for instance?" inquired Hanvey interestedly.

"In the first place, it's a cinch that Max Vernon killed Pat Thayer."

"You think so?"

"Sure. Don't you?"

"Durned if I know, John. I couldn't say for sure, anyway. There's still a lot of loose ends."

"There always are on a case like this," snapped Reagan. "Whenever a big crime happens we run out and grab all the facts we can. They all look important because we don't know which from what. But after we look into it we see that some of the things we thought were important really don't mean anything—and so we forget 'em. That's the way in this case: we've got Max Vernon dead to rights. Any jury would convict him."

Jim nodded heavily. "They certainly would. That's what makes it so tough on the kid—provided he's innocent."

Reagan changed his tactics. He pointed an accusing finger at Hanvey. "Anyway, Jim—you think he was mixed up in that bank robbery, don't you?"

The fat man reflected for a moment, then nodded.

"Yeh—I do."

"And that," exulted Reagan, "is the first definite admission I've got ten out of you yet."

Jim smiled. "I am dumb, ain't I, John? Suppose you tell me just how you think this murder happened. Just sketch things over, will you, so they'll take their proper places in my mind."

"Good enough." Reagan whipped out his notebook and consulted it.

"May first; eleven-thirty: Tony Peyton runs across her husband making love to the kid sister of the man she's crazy about. Big row. Thayer sore and Tony desperate. Fifteen minutes later, after she's gone, Ivy Welch and Pat Thayer meet Max Vernon. Thayer has been trimming Vernon for two years and the kid has just got good and wise because Thayer went too far when he copped Max's girl. Another quarrel. While that is happening, Tony Peyton is warning Larry Welch that his sister is in trouble, and telling him why."

"At half-past twelve Pat Thayer goes to the fraternity house and gets to his room. Five minutes later Max Vernon comes in. He's sore as a goat and when the two kids on the veranda tell him Thayer's in his room, he says he don't give a d—n. Maybe he didn't then, Jim—but don't forget that he had found out where Thayer was, and he had just quarreled with the man over a girl."

"Vernon goes to his room. He has been broke and worried. Some way—Lord knows now—he's entered into a deal with somebody to rob the Marland National bank. He's nervous and desperate. He decides to go and have it out with Thayer right there. Thayer is a bigger man and stronger, and so Vernon grabs that stiletto off the wall to have it handy in case trouble comes."

"Meanwhile Tony Peyton has come in to warn Pat he must lay off Ivy Welch. I believe every word of her story of the visit. She beats it, and right after she does, Vernon goes into Thayer's room and talks cold turkey to Thayer. Thayer probably starts at him and the knife cuts his jugular vein. Vernon's cock-eyed scared. He beats it back to his room and pitches the knife into the corner of his clothes closet. Then he changes his clothes because the suit he had on when he killed Thayer was all covered with blood—which is why he never went to that tailor at all."

"Then he beats it to take part in that bank robbery. He gets to the bank corner just about two o'clock. During the robbery the stick-up man is shot. While Max is driving him he bleeds all over the back of the car, so Vernon gets rid of his bloody suit and the floor rug. Then he takes his share of the hundred thousand berries that they've copped from the bank."

"He trades in his old car and is fool enough to think he's got a good alibi. But a couple of minutes after he sets foot in his room at the fraternity house, the man on duty grabs him and calls me. Ain't that a good case, Jim?"

The big man nodded slow approval.

"Durn near perfect," he applauded. "Only, how come Thayer was alive when Larry Welch got there at two o'clock?"

"H—l!" snapped Reagan. "He wasn't. Thayer was dead then. But Larry knew Tony had been there and he didn't know anything about Max Vernon. So he thinks Tony Peyton killed Thayer and shields her. Cinch, ain't it?"

"It seems so. . . . And the ring Ivy had given Pat Thayer?"

"Larry Welch took it. Didn't want his sister mixed up in the mess. Don't you see how clear everything is? I'm sorry for Max Vernon, of course. There ain't anything bad about the kid. Just weak."

Hanvey was silent for a moment, then looked up brightly. "What'd you do with all the stuff Vernon had in his pockets when he was arrested?"

"Right here. Want to see it?"

"Yeh. . . ."

Five minutes later Reagan returned to the room. He spread out on the table the contents of Vernon's pockets: a handkerchief, a fountain pen, a notebook, several visiting cards, a fraternity pin, a bunch of keys, less than two dollars in silver, a packet of cigarettes and a box of matches.

Hanvey fumbled with the collection. "This all, John? Didn't he have a wallet?"

"Yeh." Reagan flushed. "It's in a special box in the warden's safe. Nothing in it but some money."

"How much?"

"Two hundred and ten dollars. I'll get it—"

"Never mind." Jim was holding the bunch of keys in his hand. "Doesn't this look like a new key, John?"

Reagan nodded.

"Sure does."

"Bank box, I'll bet," observed Hanvey, as though talking to himself. "Uh-huh, new bank box key. When's the next train for Steel City?"

Reagan consulted his watch. "Midnight."

"I wonder if you'd run up there tomorrow alone?"

"Sure I will. I can be back tomorrow evening. What's the big idea?"

Jim detached the key from the ring. "Take this with you, John. I've got a hunch that Max Vernon rented a box at some big Steel City bank. Take some samples of his handwriting with you, because he'd use an assumed name, of course. You can check up on all boxes rented in the last couple of days—then compare the handwriting."

"And if I find the box shall I take a look inside?"

"No-o. We'll just take it for granted that if he rented a box there the Marland bank money is in it—or, anyway, Vernon's share. What say?"

Reagan rose. "I'm on my way, Chief." At the door he turned. "And if we do find that cash, Jim—and it turns out to be Vernon who had it—will you admit then that I was right?"

Jim smiled broadly. "Maybe," he said. "I'll sure think you were pretty near right, anyway."

Mary Lou Goes Shopping

She is only eight, but, even at this tender age Mary Lou is a daily customer at the neighborhood stores. Perhaps it is a package of crackers, and a pound of coffee at the grocer's. Perhaps it is some tooth-paste or toilet soap at the drug store.

Of course Mary Lou doesn't decide on what she is going to buy. Her mother writes a list—this brand of crackers, this brand of coffee, this make of tooth-paste, this kind of soap. She knows the prices, and gives Mary Lou just enough money, with an extra penny or two, to spend for herself.

Buying is just as simple and easy as that because of just one thing—Advertising.

Advertising has given all of us a lot to be thankful for.

Because of advertising, people in Texas know about and buy Michigan motor cars. People in New Hampshire buy oranges raised in Florida and California. Because of advertising, merchants and manufacturers are forced to improve their products. It has standardized quality. It has increased consumption and thereby lowered costs. It promotes competition and thereby keeps dealers and merchants wide awake to secure for you the most for your money.

But best of all it writes "Finis" on the business career of any merchant or manufacturer who attempts to fool the public or give them less than value received.

No Money Is Saved by Trucking Stock

Reasons why shipments of livestock by truck have been increasing rapidly in the past few years in spite of greater transportation costs than shipments by rail are presented in a bulletin just published by the economics department at Michigan State College.

Farmers ship livestock by truck because it is more convenient even when it costs more money and when the shrinkage of stock on long hauls is greater. However, livestock shrinkage on short hauls is less on truck shipments than on those sent by rail.

Of the livestock receipts at the Detroit yards, shipments by truck have increased from 4 per cent of the total in 1920 to 73 per cent in 1932. Owners truck only 15 per cent of that amount of stock themselves, 35 per cent is hauled in by truckers who buy the stock direct from the farmers, and 50 per cent is hauled for hire and consigned for sale in the yards.

The college bulletin, Special No. 235, shows that trucking is not a wholly ideal method of transportation of livestock. In addition to the increased costs and to the larger shrinkage on long hauls, trucking increases the difficulty of estimating probable receipts on the market and, at times, affects the prices of stock adversely.

Railroad service changes suggested by the bulletin author for making rail shipments more attractive to livestock owners are lower carlot and l. c. l. rates, more flexibility on regulations for loading l. c. l. shipments, and faster schedules on stock trains.

INFORMATION ABOUT NEW HOME LOAN ACT

vided the mortgagee will accept the bonds for his mortgage. These bonds bear 4% interest, mature in not more than 18 years, and are tax exempt. The Federal Government guarantees the interest on the bonds but not the principal.

3. When the corporation acquires the mortgage, the corporation becomes the mortgagee. Fifteen years is given the home owner to pay the government. The rate of interest is 5%. During the first 3 years no payment on the principal need be made. Extensions for the payment of principal or interest may be made if the corporation feels the circumstances justify.

4. The exchange of bonds for mortgages may not be made in an amount higher than 80% of the property's value, or total more than $14,000, whichever is the smaller. Homes must not be valued at more than $20,000 and must not have been built for more than 4 families. Borrowers must be residing in their homes or only temporarily residing elsewhere.

5. The corporation is authorized to make cash loans on property up to 50% of its value for payment of taxes and assessments, and necessary maintenance and repairs.

6. If the mortgagee will not accept bonds for his mortgage—and this is entirely up to him—the corporation may loan the home owner cash up to 40% of the property's value so that the mortgage can be taken up in cash. The interest rate on these cash loans is 6%. The amortization plan is otherwise the same as that used when bonds are accepted.

7. The corporation is able, under conditions which will be explained by the agency, to provide exchange of bonds and cash advances to persons who have lost their homes through foreclosure to enable such persons to redeem their homes. The loss must have occurred within two years prior to such exchange or advance by the corporation.

8. It should be remembered that this relief is intended only for those who actually need it. The holder of the mortgage must be pressing for payment and threatening to foreclose and the applicant for a loan must be unable to raise the money elsewhere. The merits of each case will be individually considered and investigated as to these considerations by the agency to which application is made.

BLACKS AND BOHUNKS MET IN BATTLE ROYAL

The "Black Plague" ball team of the Evangelical Sunday School lost a fast and furious ball game to the Bethel "Bohunks," to the tune of 6-5. The Bethel aggregation was greatly aided by the services of a couple of fellows, strangers in town, who passed by the name of Kelly. One of these played a good game at 2nd until he was removed to a position behind the pitcher where he performed in the role of umpire in a very satisfying manner. The other Kelly looked very weak in his first trip to the plate going down with the gun on his shoulder. When Otie Greenleaf stirred this Kelly's Irish up in the next trip he took revenge in the form of a clean triple. The crowd roared.

Joos performed exceptionally well for a "Greeny" on the mound for the "Black Plague" and Reagh on the receiving end looked like a million dollars. Maharg and Rawson went the length for the Bohunks.

Joos allowed 8 hits and no walks. Maharg allowed 8 hits, some errors and dished out 6 walks. The Black Plague team wants week-day games.

No other damage was done.
