41 CENTS A POUNDBidding Lively as Community Club Members Vie for Choice Meat.

Herman Charter, James Malady, R. A. McNamee, Frank Hall, Ivan Niergarth, J. Turner and Dugald Krug were elected Tuesday night to serve with local ministers and Superintendent of Schools C. W. Price as members of the board of directors of the Cass City Community Club. Officers of the club will be chosen from this group. The selection of directors was made at the November meeting of the club held Tuesday evening when the farmers' group with Bruce Brown as chairman sponsored the program.

George A. Brown, professor of animal husbandry at Michigan State College, was the speaker of the evening, who was introduced by County Agricultural Agent Hammond. Mr. Brown said that live stock produced 60% of the national farm income and stressed the importance of that industry which is the greatest employer in the United States when one considers the number of people engaged in raising, processing and distributing. Meat, he said, is perhaps the most important article of diet of the American people.

The committee purchased a purebred Aberdeen Angus steer weighing about 800 pounds from Elmore Caister. One-half of the dressed animal was made into retail cuts by Mr. Brown, who explained the various cuts of meat as he worked at the block. The meat was then auctioned off to the highest bidders and prices went way over local retail quotations. Perhaps Willis Campbell missed his calling and should have chosen a career as an auctioneer for his persuasive voice sold steak as high as 41 cents a pound. The other half of this fine animal was purchased by the Young & Maier market where it is being retailed but, of course, no such high prices as Mr. Campbell produced are in vogue there.

James Milligan and Albert Gallagher guessed 488 pounds, the exact weight that the steer dressed, the former winning a ham as a prize on the toss of a coin. The amount of grain fed to the steer was 1,566 pounds. Grant Brown made the nearest estimate, 1,657 pounds, and was awarded a bushel of apples as a prize.

Herbert Maharg, vice president of the club, presided during the business session. C. W. Price spoke on local Y. M. C. A. activities and Frederick Pinney on the American Red Cross.

Preceding the program, a fine chicken dinner was served by ladies of the Catholic church.

The December program is sponsored by the garage and oil men group of which G. A. Tindale is chairman.

Miss Moore, Bride of John Tuckey

About 50 relatives and friends witnessed the marriage of Miss Bernice Wanda Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Moore, Sr., and Mr. John Edison Tuckey, son of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Tuckey, which took place Saturday afternoon, Nov. 11, at two-thirty o'clock, in the Riverside M. B. C. church. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. D. Clink, pastor of that church.

The wedding march, "The Chapel in the Forest," was played by Miss Geraldine Gingrich. The couple were attended by Miss Wilma Kennedy and Mr. Steven Moore, Jr., brother of the bride.

The bride was lovely in a black velvet chiffon gown trimmed in white, with velvet hat and pumps to match. The bridesmaid wore wine colored canteen with hat to match. Both carried white gloves and arm bouquets. The bride's bouquet consisted of white chrysanthemums, sweet peas and roses, and the bridesmaid's of yellow and white chrysanthemums and roses.

Immediately after the ceremony, the guests went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Tuckey where a bountiful wedding dinner was served. The tables were beautiful with yellow, white and pink chrysanthemums. The wedding party's table held lighted candles, a large wedding cake made by the bride and a lovely bride's cake made by Mrs. Stephen Moore, the bride's mother. Six Sunday School classmates acted as waitresses.

The happy couple received many lovely and useful gifts.

The newly-weds accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Clair Tuckey, left Monday morning for Bliss, Mich., to hunt deer.

THUMB CROWN WON
BY HILLTOPPERSRus Quick Leads Attack in
25-0 Victory Over Pigeon
Eleven.

By Lewis Pinney.

Although the Maroon and Grey fighting eleven have yet to play Bad Axe today, neither a tie nor a defeat can deprive them of the Upper Thumb championship for 1933. The team is by far the best offensive and defensive one seen in this district in many years. They have already rolled up 207 points in seven games, while the opposition has scored only 12 points, and it must be remembered that six of these twelve points were scored against the third team. Russell Quick leads the team with 91 points. Not very far behind him are Dave Knight and Clare Ballaugh. Ward, Kosanke, Severence, McCallum and Graham have also added to the point total. However, it took the whole eleven players on the field to hold the opposition to the scant total this year. Too much can not be said in regard to the players and coaches who have brought the football championship of the Thumb back to Cass City after an absence of three years.

At Pigeon last week the field was covered by a blanket of snow six inches deep. A strong wind was blowing from the northwest. Captain John Kelley of Cass City won the toss and elected to defend the north goal, so the wind would be at the back of the Maroon and Grey players throughout the first and final quarters. Hammill of Pigeon kicked off to the Cass City ten yard line where it was picked up by Russell Quick. He allowed his interference to form ahead of him—then he was off. Twice he stopped to reverse his field, but again he was away. He dodged the last Pigeon tackler on the 40 yard line and traveled the remaining distance for a touchdown. It was a great run of 90 yards featured by the blocking of the entire Cass City team. Ballaugh added the extra point on a plunge. Cass City received the kick off, but Pigeon was tackling this time. The game then turned into a punting duel, with Graham getting from 5 to 10 yards better than Pigeon on each boot. Many of his kicks went out of bounds, but also some went over the goal line, giving Pigeon the ball on the 20 yard line. The quarter ended after a series of punts with Cass City leading 7-0.

With the advantage of the wind, Pigeon started to out punt Cass City. However, Knight twice circled end for gains of 15 yards. A Cass City fumble was recovered by Donnelly after a short gain, and then Graham punted out of bounds on the 14 yard line. Pigeon lost eight yards on two plays and were forced to punt. The punter was rushed and fumbled the ball. McCallum recovered for Cass City for a touchdown. A bad pass from center kept Ballaugh from adding the extra point. Cass City received and Quick was loose for 25 yards to the Pigeon 45 yard line. A pass just slipped out of Kosanke's finger tips when he had a clear field ahead of him. Pigeon soon had the ball on their 35 yard line, and Kosanke broke through to tackle. He did so, but received a cut between his nose and left eye and was replaced by Don Withey. The half ended a few minutes later with Cass City in possession of the ball and leading Pigeon 13-0.

Pigeon again kicked off to Cass City and Knight returned the ball to the 30 yard line. Quick circled right end for 35 yards before he slipped to the ground. Knight was loose on the next play, but Cass City was holding and received a 15 yard penalty instead of a touchdown. The game then turned into a punting duel between Graham, and Hammill of Pigeon, with the honors being about even. On a quarterback sneak Quick gained 30 yards. Three plays later Quick

BUTTER IN STORAGE
WARMS NO CHILDRENAmericans Fail to Credit Dairy
Products With Proper Food
Values When Marketing.

Butter in cold storage adds no heat to the youngster's body, according to the dairy industry of Michigan, which has called a meeting at East Lansing, Nov. 21, to discuss ways of reducing the stocks now awaiting consumption.

Michigan's stake in the meeting is represented by an annual production of 76,000,000 pounds of butter and by the purchase of an additional 18,000,000 pounds. Piling up storage butter affects the price of all dairy products, milk, ice cream, and cheese. Drops in price travel back to the dairy farms of the state, and also cut the amount in the pay envelopes of thousands of people who manufacture or handle dairy products.

Consumption of butter has dropped during the past few years. This is in many cases a mistaken economy because this food product has fuel, energy, and health values which should be included on the daily menu for every family. People in the United States eat only 17 pounds of butter while Canadians are eating 25 pounds and while many Europeans consume even greater amounts. Economic conditions in foreign countries are not enough better than here to account for the difference in food habits. Citizens of other nations have a better knowledge of the special food values of dairy products.

Speakers at the East Lansing meeting will be N. P. Hull, Lansing and M. G. Van Buskirk, Chicago. Mr. Hull is president of the Michigan Milk Producers Association and the Chicago speaker is assisting in a national campaign to increase butter consumption.

Sandusky—Miss Eloise Pichette, R. N., arrived Tuesday to carry on the Red Cross Public Health Nursing Service in Sanilac county. Miss Pichette has been engaged in public health work in Houghton and Menominee counties and comes highly endorsed by the National Red Cross.

Bad Axe—Deputy State Fire Marshall Murray A. McKenna of Lansing, after inspecting the county infirmary here, pronounced the building as unsafe and termed it a fire trap. The infirmary was built 57 years ago. Originally built to house 25 to 30 people, the infirmary is now sheltering 65 county wards, eight of whom are being quartered in the attic in direct violation of the state housing code. Mr. McKenna ordered the installation of equipment totalling $4,056 in cost. This includes a fire escape from the second floor, a fire retarding roof, extra fire extinguishers, conduit wiring throughout the building, a fire alarm system and the building of a new wing to house the eight men now sleeping in the attic. Alex Guyeau, superintendent of the poor, says the cost for repairs and upkeep in the old building has averaged $1,000 per year for the last four years.

North Branch—A company from Bannister, Mich., has been wrecking the pickle sheds and preparing to move them to Bannister. They also are taking the steam boiler from the wreckage of the old creamery on Mill street west. Sebewaing—Despite the inclement weather, about 1,600 people attended the special Lutheran services at Bay Shore Park Sunday afternoon in commemoration of the 450th anniversary of the birth of Dr. Martin Luther. The tabernacle was filled to capacity as was also the dining hall, while many others listened to the services while seated in their automobiles, loud speaking arrangements having made this possible. Less severe weather would have undoubtedly swelled the attendance to more than 2,000. Rev. L. Nuechterlein of St. Joseph, Mich., gave a stirring address on "Luther as Our Spiritual Leader," and Prof. Otto J. Hoenecke of the Lutheran Seminary, Saginaw, spoke on Luther's chief aim to spread the everlasting gospel.—Blade.

JAMES TUCKEY FAMILY MOVED HERE THIS WEEK

Mr. and Mrs. James D. Tuckey and daughter, Miss Gladys, have moved this week to their residence on West Pine street, recently purchased, after spending the greater part of their lives on farms in this community. John Tuckey, who married Miss Bernice W. Moore on Nov. 11, will reside with his bride in the farm home in Sec. 32, Elkland, just vacated by his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. James D. Tuckey, while not classed as early pioneers, nevertheless, know much of the arduous work done by early settlers. When they moved to an 80-acre farm in Sec. 32 thirty-three years ago, only four acres of that tract of land had been cleared. Of the 300 acres of Tuckey land in Elkland township, over 200 acres have been cleared and made ready for cultivation by Mr. Tuckey and his family.

Congratulated by a Host of Friends

Many friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Striffler made that worthy couple happy by calling at their residence on Leach St. on Wednesday to offer congratulations on their 50th wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Striffler were the recipients of many beautiful gifts. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Buehly, who attended the couple as groomsmen and bridesmaid a half century ago and who will also celebrate their golden wedding within the next two years. All callers were served cake and coffee and presented with favors of cigars or boxes of candy.

Out of town visitors included Mr. and Mrs. Ira Clapper, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Blakeley, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gooden, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Benson, Mrs. Florence Gooden, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Striffler, and Louis and Miss Gertrude Striffler, all of Detroit. This group together with Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Striffler and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Buehly were guests at a dinner party at the Gordon Hotel on Wednesday evening.

PROGRESS IS EASIER
ON THE BETTER ROADAdoption of Lower Standards for Farm Life Leads Away from Success.

True friends of the farmer should remember when agriculture, as now, comes to the fork in the road that progress is always easier on the better highway and that the chance for improvement in farm conditions is much greater with better acres, better live stock, or better methods, according to Dean E. L. Anthony, Michigan State College.

Members of the agricultural extension staff in their annual meeting were warned by Dean Anthony that distress does not change natural laws, only the people who try to read the laws. When any choice is possible in a farm operation, extension people were told to counsel the use of materials or methods of the best quality.

Conditions now indicate that a marked change in farm practices must take place, either a program of controlled production combined with better marketing or a descent to a lower level of rural life. America does not want to accept the second alternative and need not unless farmers are stamped into accepting visionary doctrines, the Dean stated.

Criticism of agricultural agents for recommending better farming methods is unwarranted, he continued, because, even now those farmers who have used the best methods and the best materials are less affected by present conditions. Loud talk does not cure squeaks in the economic machine but only drowns out the machinery's protest and often postpones repair until it becomes impossible to make the needed adjustment in time.

High School Pupils
Look for Work

Several high school students, both boys and girls, who drive long distances to school here, desire to secure places in town to room and board during the winter months. For this they are willing to work in payment or part payment.

Supt. C. W. Price says he has several substantial pupils desiring to enter into such arrangements and he will be glad to give anyone interested more particulars.

$1909 DAMAGES SET
IN AUTO ACCIDENTCourt Ruled that Driver Was Responsible for Control of Car.

In an opinion filed in Tuscola county circuit court by Judge Henry H. Smith within the past week, the court has ruled that Walter N. Hunter as plaintiff is entitled to recover from Eber Baldwin and others, damages to the amount of $1,909.00 because of injuries suffered in an automobile accident at Kingston on Sept. 9, 1930. The damages are computed as follows: Total loss of earnings, $175.00; partial loss of earnings, $300.00; medical bills paid, $134.00; pain and suffering, $1,300.00.

Walter N. Hunter and Eber Baldwin are neighbors on farms southeast of Kingston. On Sept. 9, 1930, election day, Anna Baldwin, who owned an automobile, and her stepson, Eber Baldwin, drove to Kingston with Walter N. Hunter riding in the machine as a guest. The car was parked on the Main street at an angle to the curb. When the party made ready to go home, Eber Baldwin entered the car but could not start the engine because the starter failed to work. Baldwin then handed the crank to Hunter and requested him to crank the car. The car was equipped with a front bumper and Hunter placed one foot inside the bumper to be in position to use the crank. When the engine started, the car shot forward carrying Hunter across the sidewalk and into a store front. The car bounded back and came on again pinning Hunter between the car and building, inflicting severe injuries.

Hunter claimed he knew nothing about gear shift or operation of a car, and in the opinion rendered, the court says the defendant's negligence is clearly shown and that the plaintiff had a right to rely on the driver having his car under control.

Fine Examples of Country Newspapers

Two notable newspaper anniversary editions came to the Chronicle's exchange table last week—the Crowell Jeffersonian and the Yale Expositor.

The Jeffersonian, founded in 1858 when Sanilac county had been organized but ten years, celebrated its 75th anniversary with a 24-page edition replete with early history of the county and nicely printed halftones.

The Expositor printed 16 pages giving the early history of Yale on the occasion of a celebration given in honor of Geo. Gough, undertaker, and Dr. Benj. Clyne, who have been in business in that town for 50 years. The Expositor printed many halftones of early citizens and buildings.

Publishers of both newspapers may well be proud of their historical editions.

MRS. MCKENZIE IS
CHAMPION WINDOW WASHER

The November meeting of the Cass City Home Management Class was held at the home of Miss Lura DeWitt on Thursday, Nov. 9. Twenty members and two visitors were present.

Lesson one, on "How to Make Housecleaning Easier" was finished by Miss DeWitt. The new lesson, "Modern Laundry Methods," was begun by Mrs. Gillies and Miss Lura DeWitt completed the lesson by discussing water softeners, soaps, and stain removers.

Mrs. McKenzie, Mrs. W. Wood, and Mrs. H. Doerr took part in a window washing contest to determine the best method. Mrs. McKenzie won with vinegar and water.

Miss DeWitt gave a talk on Farm Women's week held at Michigan State College last July.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Frederick Pinney sometime after New Years.

MINISTERS MEET IN SUTTON CHURCH

A round table discussion, "Responsibility of the Church to Children and Youths," featured the monthly meeting of the Tuscola County Ministerial association on Monday in the Sutton Methodist Protestant church.

The association adopted a new plan of meeting. The ministerial meeting was held in the afternoon and a chicken supper was served at 6 p. m. A religious service was held at 7:30 p. m., with Rev. G. A. Spitzer of Cass City as speaker.

This plan will be followed in future meetings of the association.

CHAPTER I

The Cary House.

"THIS must be the house!" Geoff Ensloe thought, alighting from the taxi and stopping before the gate.

Here was the double-pointed iron fence enclosing the large yard. Here were the two stone lions guarding the front steps; lions on whose broad backs Geoff's mother and little Nona Cary had ridden some thirty years ago. There at the left was the garden with the antlered deer, one kneeling on delicate forelegs, the other standing haughtily erect. Time had been at work upon the impressive length of their antlers, but otherwise they were just as Mrs. Ensloe had described them.

"By George! There's the identical marble lady pouring water from the two-handled jug on her shoulder! How I loved to hear about that fountain when I was six and had scarlet fever!"

He had reason to remember that illness since it gave him more of his mother's attention than he had enjoyed before or since. Mrs. Ensloe was not, as she herself frankly admitted, the maternal type of woman. She loved her clever husband with all her heart and soul, and as his profession of chemical engineer carried him to all parts of the world, she had gone with him, leaving Geoff at first in the care of his grandmother, then, as he grew older, at various schools and summer camps.

John Ensloe was dead now, and Geoff was following in his father's professional footsteps. Mrs. Ensloe, however, did not suggest accompanying him to Denver where he was to spend a year in laboratory work before returning to take his father's place in the New York firm. Instead, she settled down to finish the book "Properties and Uses of Hydrofluoric Acid" which her husband had begun and which his publishers considered could be completed satisfactorily by his widow.

"You must look up the Carys in Denver," she told Geoff. "The Aylesburys, I suppose I should call them now. Only Captain Cary is left. I used to visit Nona Cary every summer when I was a child. Her father had large mining interests there and my father had business with him."

"I know," said Geoff. "Have you forgotten how you used to tell me about the big house and the lions and the lady in the garden? I even know that there was a blackheart cherry tree back of the house and you and Nona made yourselves sick one year eating them."

His mother looked amused. "I'd forgotten I'd told you all that! I always intended to get back and see Nona after I married, or have her come here. I always remember to send Cynthia a birthday gift each year," she added hastily.

Geoff grinned at her. "You remember! Who was it reminded you last month and went down with you to select the gift? A corking good dinner ring it was! As a godmother," he reproached her, "you leave something to be desired."

"As a mother, too, perhaps," she said quietly, "though I must say you've rather thriven under neglect. Nona Cary, now—Nona Aylesbury, I mean—will fulfill all your dreams of an adoring maternal parent. She'll fuss over you, pet you, worry about you if your little finger aches—she was a perfect little mother even when we were children together."

"You talk as if you expected me to live with her?" Geoff, interested in this implication, did not heed the faint bitterness in his mother's tone. "It might be a good thing for everybody concerned," she answered. "I rather imagine the Aylesburys are having a hard time financially. Captain Cary was never a business man—he inherited his wealth from his father, who came from Virginia and made a fortune in his old age. I believe Nona's husband put his own money in with the Captain's, and when he died—Mr. Aylesbury, I mean—it seems to me there was some sort of financial crash. Your father and I were in Spain—" She stopped abruptly, her eyes dark with memories.

Geoff, however, was very much occupied with the present. "I hope you haven't committed me to living with them?" There was alarm in his voice, the alarm of a young man who has had rueful experience with ambitious mothers of pretty young daughters.

She shrugged. "Think it likely? You've managed your own affairs for a great many years now. But I know you hate hotels and boarding houses, and the Cary place used to be delightful."

"Mrs. Aylesbury went back to it when her husband died?"

"Oh, she never left it. Her father insisted that she and Mr. Aylesbury move right in with him—Mrs. Cary had been dead for years—and the house is big enough to hold several families. Nona has two children; a son about your age, and Cynthia, Cynthia's younger."

"What's she like?"

His mother lifted her heavy eyebrows. "Ware Cynthia! If she's like her mother, she's pretty and appealing, and learned to flirt in her cradle. How long did you say you'll be in Denver?"

Geoff's eyebrows lifted in imitation of her own. He had caught the trick from her when he was an adoring small boy, and had never lost it. "I told you," he said mildly. "A year; perhaps longer. It depends on how well I stick to business and learn what I'm there for."

"Less than a year, then," she said with some dryness. "You work like a tiger. I wonder why?"

The idle question betrayed how little understanding she had of the fierce ambition which had whipped him along for years. To be as brilliantly successful as his father had been; to command his mother's respect, her admiration; to stand at least on an even footing with her who had been the idol of his boy's heart! This had been the goal toward which he had been working through long months and years of study.

And now that he was within sight of that goal, now that he had met his mother as an adult instead of a child, he asked himself uneasily if it had been worth while after all. His clear young eyes saw her now as she was: a woman suddenly deprived of all that had made life worth while to her, getting through the rest of her days as best she could, having an affectionate interest in her son, but never rising to those heights of companionship and understanding of which he had dreamed so long.

He was remembering this conversation now as he stood outside the Carys' yard. There was a little girl in there, he saw, jumping rope. She had heavy dark hair cut in an Egyptian bob, big black eyes, a thin little heart-shaped face, and long thin arms and legs. She wore a handsome linen frock which was none too clean, a pair of blue silk socks and patent leather slippers. Her bare knees were scratched and grimy.

As Geoff laid his hand on the gate she came toward him, still jumping. "Hello!" he said with his friendly grin. "Does Mrs. Aylesbury live here?"

The child nodded. "And Cynthia and Cap'n and Marguerite—"

Geoff shook his head reprovingly. "Never give any more information than you have to," he instructed her. "It's extravagant, and besides, in these days of kidnappers—"

She skipped closer and regarded him with interest.

"Are you a kidnaper?"

"I don't know yet. I'll tell you later, when I'm better acquainted with you. Is Mrs. Aylesbury at home?"

"It's—Not—the—House!" She Panted. "It's—Cynthia!"

with you. Is Mrs. Aylesbury at home?"

She nodded, never ceasing her rhythmic motion.

"You can unlatch the gate yourself, can't you? I have to jump all the way up to the front steps, and I have to be careful about cracks. Step on a crack and you'll break your mother's back! Only I haven't got any mother," she said cheerfully.

"That's too bad!"

"No—it isn't!" She was growing short of breath and her words came with short spaces between. "If I—did—have—I'd—have to live—with her!"

Geoff was quick to catch her meaning. "You like it so well here? Well, I rather like the looks of the house myself."

The child shook her head and the dark mop of her hair swung forward, to be impatiently swung back again. Geoff watched her a little anxiously. It seemed a long time for her to keep up that jumping.

"It's—not—the—house!" she panted. "It's—Cynthia!"

"Look here!" He put an arresting hand on her small shoulder. "Don't jump any more now. We've come to the foot of the steps."

"I'm going—to—jump up them! It's easy!" She essayed the first one, missed the rope and stumbled. Geoff caught her in his arms. She laughed and rested against him contentedly. "Cynthia said not to try them when I was tired. She said to wait and take 'em when I was fresh."

"Cynthia was right. You may tell her I said so," he remarked affably.

"Cynthia's always right."

"You don't tell me, Miss Jumping Jill!"

She laughed joyously. "Jumping Jill! That's a lovely name. I'll tell Cynthia. Now watch me jump the steps!"

The rope flashed in a quick arc, the child's slippers rose and fell. Geoff, to be out of her way, went up the eight steps which led to the porch and stood waiting for her there. Near the door stood a table, and he had an opportunity for a quick survey of what it held. A bit of dainty sewing, the needle quitted carefully into the filmy stuff; a book on amateur photography, its pages held open by a half-eaten apple; a sample budget book issued by a national firm, a line drawn through the printed figures and penciled ones substituted; a roller skate with its strap broken; a pair of tortoise-rimmed spectacles; a fountain pen with its cap off; and a handkerchief on which someone recently and very copiously had had nose-bleed.

"The spectacles belong to Captain Cary," Geoff mused. "The skate and the handkerchief—cause and effect!—are the child's. The sewing done by a pretty girl—and the book indicates a camera complex on young Cary's part. The budget book and the apple—"

Miss Jumping Jill interrupted this exercise of his deductive powers. She flung herself upon him again, gasping but triumphant.

"I did it! I didn't miss a single one!"

"Good for you!" Geoff took out his handkerchief and mopped her hot face. "What'd you say we call it a day on this jumping business? Run—no, walk, won't you?—in and tell Mrs. Aylesbury that Geoff Ensloe's come to call."

"That's a funny name," she said impersonally. "Mine's Tenny."

"Tenny?"

"He held out his hand and she slipped her own small one in it. 'Mighty glad to know you, Tenny!'"

"So'm I. I mean I'm glad to know you. I'll go and tell Miss Nona now. You better wait here."

She flashed into the house. Geoff could hear her slippers feet crossing the parquet floor inside, then dying away into silence.

Geoff, waiting for Tenny to return, lost himself in admiration of the glorious view. It was his first visit to Colorado and he found its heady air, its dreamlike vistas, its sharp contrasts interesting. So enthralled was he with what he saw that it was with a start he realized that nearly ten minutes had elapsed since the child disappeared.

He rang the bell and though he could hear its tinkle far in the back of the house, no one appeared to answer it. At last he walked boldly around the porch to where the veranda ceased with two shallow steps down to the grass.

At a little distance a group of people were clustered beneath an apple tree. The tall, sweet-faced, gray-haired woman must be Nona Aylesbury, his mother's friend, Geoff thought. The old man with the beautifully brushed white hair and the mustache and imperial was Captain Cary. Tenny was there; also a negro woman. They were all bending over something that lay on the ground. Geoff's foot-falls were inaudible on the grass and he cleared his throat to make his presence known.

Everybody turned in his direction and Tenny ran forward remorsefully.

"I forgot! I went to find Miss Nona and she was out here—"

Geoff interrupted her. "I'm Geoff Ensloe, Mrs. Aylesbury. My mother—"

He saw that there were tears in her eyes. She brushed them away quite unaffectedly, and smiled at him.

"Eunice Hampton's son! My dear boy, welcome!" Both her hands were held out to him and when Geoff took them she held up her face very simply for his kiss. As he stooped his tall head, a little glow warmed his heart. Here was a welcome indeed! "Father, this is Eunice Hampton's boy. You remember Eunice?"

Captain Cary was equally cordial. "Glad to see you, boy! Remember your mother? I should think I'd remember her! Loved her almost as much as I did my own daughter here! What good fortune brings you to Denver?"

Before he could explain, Mrs. Aylesbury touched his arm, her eyes again filling with tears.

"Geoff, see! Do you think you could do anything for him?"

On the ground and partly hidden by the stooping colored woman lay a cocker spaniel. The dog's throat was badly torn and Geoff's experienced eyes told him that the little animal was near its end. He knelt and made a quick examination.

"Done for, I'm afraid," he said regretfully. "It's a shame to let him suffer like this. Have you a gun in the house?"

She paled and hid her face in her hands. Geoff heard a stifled murmur of "Cynthia!" Captain Cary turned away, blowing his nose loudly on the white silk handkerchief he pulled from his pocket. It was Tenny, her black eyes enormous in her white face, who answered Geoff.

"Cary's got a gun! Up in his room. I'll get it—"

"Not, by a long shot," he told her. "Show me where it is and I'll get it." He paused to say significantly over his shoulder to the Captain: "If you'll take her around by the front, sir—"

So Geoff Ensloe found himself entering the Cary house for the first time by way of the kitchen; following Tenny through a maze of pantries and halls and up the wide staircase to the second floor.

"Here's Cary's room," his guide said, flinging open a door. "He keeps it in his dresser drawer. I'll show you it."

Geoff pocketed the gun. "Stay up here for a little while, Tenny."

She nodded, and putting her hands to her ears, ran away to her own room.

A few minutes later when the little dog's troubles were over and Geoff was digging beneath the apple tree with a spade with which the cook had supplied him, Tenny, red-eyed but quiet, appeared, a handsome silk shawl hung over her arm.

"Miss Nona wants you to wrap Hadji up in this," she said, keeping her eyes averted from the tangle of black hair on the ground. "She says Cynthia's dog mustn't be buried without something to wrap him in."

"Is it Cynthia's shawl?" Geoff took the heavily fringed thing in his hands. "It seems rather a shame—"

"No, it's Miss Nona's. You see, she thinks it's her fault Hadji got hurt. There's a new police dog next door and Cynthia said to keep Hadji shut up while that dog was out. And Miss Nona forgot and let Hadji out. She says she's afraid of what Cynthia will say when she comes home—"

"Your Cynthia appears to have the entire household pretty well in subjection," was Geoff's comment. "All right, Tenny! Run back into the house and I'll be with you in a few minutes."

Ten minutes later, having washed his hands in the old-fashioned bathroom to which the cook showed him, Geoff joined the others in one of the double parlors below.

"I'm so grateful to you about Hadji," Mrs. Aylesbury said softly. "I dread to have Cynthia know. She was so fond of the dog—she'll think we were careless with him—"

She touched a wisp of handkerchief to her eyes, then tucked it away and patted the couch beside her. "Sit down, my dear boy, and tell me about your mother—about your self!"

Geoff, beginning with the hesitancy such an invitation usually engenders, presently found himself launched in an enthusiastic description of his new work, of what he had done and what he hoped to do. He heard his own voice going on and on in eager talk while Mrs. Aylesbury listened attentively.

"And you'll be in Denver a year!" she exclaimed when he paused for breath and realized rather sheepishly his own loquacity. "Geoff, I can't tell you how happy that makes me. Your mother was my dearest friend when we were girls. It has been a great grief to me that we've been separated so long."

"But next to having Eunice with me, we'll love having her son. You'll live with us, Geoff, of course. Oh, yes," she went on as he protested, "you can see for yourself what a big house this is. You can have your choice of rooms—several rooms, if you like."

"But—your own family—"

"It will be pure joy for Cary to have another man—a man of his own age—here. My father will enjoy it. Cynthia—over her face, so expressive of affectionate welcome, flitted a look of apprehension—"

"Cynthia will . . . You mustn't mind if—just at first—Cynthia seems a little—cold. She's the dearest of girls, you know. How we'd get along without her, I don't know. But she's not like Cary and me. She . . . she's businesslike. She runs a shop—a little gift shop—"

Inwardly Geoff shuddered. Gift shops were his pet abomination. Every girl he knew, he said, sooner or later engaged in the sale of picture frames and crepe-paper futilities, and polychrome candlesticks and bridge sets and gilt edged booklets whose pages stuck together; and not only did they set up these shops but they expected Geoff to patronize them lavishly. And now it appeared Cynthia, about whose name was beginning to cluster adjectives which did not express a passionate desire, on Geoff's part to meet the daughter of his mother's friend, herself engaged in this fashionable form of piracy. "And I'll bet she spells it with two p's and an e," he told himself gloomily. He resolved not only to refuse Mrs. Aylesbury's invitation to make his home with them but to select a boarding house as far away from the Cary house as possible.

But he reckoned without his hostess. Miss Nona took it for granted that Geoff was to stay with them. She waved away his protests; she made light of his vague murmurs about uncertain hours; she told him that he must stay on to dinner, now that he was here, and afterward Cary would drive him down to his hotel to pack his bags and have his luggage sent out.

"You should have come directly to us," she reproached him. "Eunice's son in a hotel! It's utterly out of the question. We have oceans of room. That's one reason we were able to take Tenny in with us. Poor mite, she was in a boarding school and she hated it—"

"I know!" Geoff said involuntarily.

"You know what they're like? And of course it's worse for a little girl than for a boy. Anyway"—she smiled—"Tenny's father was an old beau of mine and when his wife died I wrote and asked him to let us have Tenny—"

"That was good of you!"

"For our own pleasure," she finished. "Her father tried the boarding school first, then yielded and let her come to us. And you," she said with a trace of coquetry, "might as well yield in the beginning, for I don't mean to take no for an answer."

He looked embarrassed. "Nothing would please me more, Mrs. Aylesbury, if—if you would let me make some financial arrangement? I couldn't visit here indefinitely, you know—"

"Why not?" It was the Captain who spoke. He had entered from the hall in time to hear Geoff's protest. "We had your mother for—how many years was it, Nona?—and there was no foolish talk about financial arrangements in connection with her visits. Also Nona went to New York and spent a winter with the Hamptons and I don't remember that I offered to pay her board! Come upstairs with me, young man, and pick out your room. I thought—the hunting room?" he asked his daughter.

Geoff, helpless in these determined hands, followed meekly. The "hunting room" opened on one of the foolish little balconies in the front and from it Geoff had a superb view of the mountain range.

Cary Aylesbury had arrived when the two came downstairs again. He sprang up to meet Geoff, cordial hand outstretched, handsome young face alight with welcome.

"Miss Nona tells me she's persuaded you to cast your lot in with us," he began; then as Geoff looked puzzled at the boy's designation of his mother, he laughed and slung an arm around her shoulders. "I ask you: does she look old enough to be 'mothered' by a hunking fellow like me? We've called her Miss Nona—Cynthia and I—ever since we were children. Picked it up from the servants. I suppose, in the beginning, you know Grandfather brought a lot of his Kaintuck darkies up with him." He flung a gay glance at the Captain. "The fascinating southern accent has sort of petered out in this generation, but you notice it's still going strong in the two preceding us."

"I Ask You: Does She Look Old Enough to Be 'Mothered' by a Hunking Fellow Like Me?"

"Cary, you bad boy!" Miss Nona rested her head for a moment against her son's broad shoulder. The sight of those two gave Geoff a little pang. It exemplified so exactly the sort of relationship he had longed for with his own mother: the understanding, the comradeship, the sympathy between them. Cary's eyes were brown like Miss Nona's. He had her fine profile, the crease in the cheek which was not a dimple but gave the effect of one. Geoff liked him at first glance.

"When's dinner?" Cary demanded. "I'm starved! Are we waiting for Cynthia tonight?"

"No, it's her day to stay until closing time. I thought perhaps you'd pick her up, Cary, when you take Geoff down to his hotel for his bags."

Cary nodded. "Poor old Cyn! I wish she'd ditch that infernal shop. She works too hard."

"So do I," sighed his mother. "I hate to think of her down town all day in this heat. I'm always hoping that some time she'll listen to our protests and give it up."

The Captain added a disapproving comment. "An expensive toy—that gift shop!"

Geoff had found this scrap of conversation enlightening. Cynthia, it appeared, had not been driven into the realm of commerce by necessity but by her own desire. Another one of those females who craves self-expression, he thought disgustedly, though God alone knew what they expressed by means of Cape Cod lighters and snow-storm paperweights.

BREEZES FROM THE HILL

By Elaine Turner.

There is lots of snow up here on the hill top. How is it down your way?

All kinds of posters are covering the walls of the school in keeping with National Book Week and our general assembly program will be very interesting. The sophomores will be mostly responsible for the representation of various book characters. The high school orchestra will furnish the music for the program.

Rev. Mr. Bayless gave the school a very impressive talk on "Peace" at our general assembly program last Thursday. Because the high school students all over the United States are making peace their goal, this talk reached us at a most opportune time. We students wish to thank Mr. Bayless for giving us this valuable lesson.

Indian talk seems to pervade the whole first floor for the kindergarten children are making a study of Indian life. In opposite corners of the room, they built wigwams which they gaily decorated while Indian figures and hats with real feathers in them adorn the remainder of the room.

During the past two weeks, the economics class has been studying the banking and money problems.

Even though the boys did have to play Pigeon in the snow at the Pigeon game Friday, they got a good score of 25 to 0.

CEDAR RUN SCHOOL.

Last week Clayton Turner was absent from school.

On Thursday night, our teacher gave a party for the boys from the fourth grade.

We had a taffy pull, popcorn, apples and cocoa.

The fourth and fifth grades are starting North America in geography.

The sixth and seventh grades are starting the Plateau States.

Lesson for November 19

PAUL IN ATHENS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 17:16-34.
GOLDEN TEXT—For in him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said, For we are also his offspring. Acts 17:28.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Worshiping God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Preaching in a Famous City.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Do We Worship?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Seeking and Finding God.

I. Athens Full of Idols (v. 16). Athens was the intellectual metropolis of the world at that time, the home of the world's greatest eloquence and philosophy. In spite of this fact the city was given wholly to idolatry, which so stirred Paul's spirit that he was there moved to preach the gospel. He knew that despite wealth and learning the Athenians needed the gospel as much as did also the poor and the ignorant.

II. The Parties Concerned in the Controversy (vv. 17-21).

1. The Jews (v. 17). True to his usual custom, Paul went into the synagogue and entered into earnest argument with the Jews.

2. The devout persons (v. 17). This doubtless included proselytes to the Jewish faith.

3. The philosophers (v. 18). From the Jews and devout persons he turned to such as were found in the market place. Here, he came into touch with Epicurean and Stoic philosophers. When these philosophers heard his preaching they desired to know what new doctrine he preached, so they invited him to Areopagus where he might speak to them. They inquired as to what this "babbler" might say. The word "babbler" means literally "seed-picker." They conceived Paul as a globe-trotter who had gathered up seeds of truth or error here and there over the world and that he was somewhat like themselves, interested in talking about that which he had seen and heard.

III. Paul's Address on Mars' Hill (vv. 22-31).

1. The introduction (vv. 22, 23). He introduced his discourse in a courteous manner, stating that he perceived that they were very religious. He did not accuse them of superstition as the A. V. would have it, but as the A. R. V., "very religious." He declared that as he was viewing their city he beheld an altar with an inscription, "To the unknown God." He proceeded at once to connect it with the idea of the true God, implying that their altar had been erected to him.

2. The body of his discourse (vv. 24-31).

a. A declaration concerning God (vv. 24, 25).

(1) The true God created the material universe (v. 24). This was a direct blow at the philosophy of both the Epicureans and the Stoics.

(2) God's spirituality and immensity (vv. 24, 25). Being essentially spiritual he demands heart-service, and being transcendent above all he is not confined to earthly temples.

(3) His active providence (v. 25). He gives existence to all things. He bestows needed gifts upon

FALL HATS FEATURE CURIOUS WHATNOTS

Various Oddities Used to Give Touch of Artistic.

The new millinery creations for autumn and winter show a great number of oddities in embroideries material, or in buckles, fasteners, pins, etc., which hold the drapings in place or are used to give a touch of the artistic with a bow or a flower.

There is just anything and everything in the way of shapes, drapes and whatnots to hats this season. Caroline Reboux takes some Lyon velvet and puckers it all up in little thumb and finger pinches, stitching each in place so that it doesn't slip, and makes a hat out of it that dips over the right eye, hiding said eye completely, curving up over the bridge of the nose and swerving around the left eyebrow and shooting up over the forehead and way up and over the left ear to the back of the head.

More the shape of a visor than anything else, and in the back there are some bigger pinches of velvet which stand up across the back of the head. The velvet is in two shades, yellow and black, and there is a cravat of the yellow over a black velvet suit.

LARGE FLAT MUFFS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Comes the news that large flat muff will be carried this winter. For the well-dressed American woman Schiaparelli designs a coat of heavy beige tulle, collared in her new fur, Labrador. A huge flat muff to match the collar accompanies the coat. Schiaparelli selects sturdy American-made ghillies as appropriate footwear for this costume.

Skirts and Blouses Are Delight to College Girl

The separate blouse and skirt, or sweater and skirt, is the delight of the college girl, for it allows of all sorts of swapping around, not only within the confines of her own wardrobe, but also with the next-door neighbor.

The newest skirts are of hairy kempy tweeds, or homespun effect. There are also some nice ones of soft rabbit's hair wool. A holdover from the summer is the simple wrap-around skirt, with a row of big buttons and buttonholes down the front. This was smart in linen and flannel, and is equally good in heavier tweeds, with dark bone or wooden buttons. The straight-cut skirt with kick pleats is another popular and practical model.

STYLE NOTES

The metal note is accented. Wider brims are noted in sports felts. Dressy fur-trimmed suits join in the autumn parade. Rhinestone buttons glitter throughout the mode. Tunics and peplums are given prominence in new styling. Neat-looking frocks of swanky wools are smart for daytime. Body-fitting a la princess and then a sudden flare is the new silhouette.

Fall Styles in Footwear Favor Spat-Like Effects

Fall styles in footwear, as displayed by metropolitan fashion houses, add several new notes for millady's shoes.

Spat is one; simulated spat, that is—not the old-fashioned gaiter. In some of the new spat shoes the bottom part is of black or brown kid with the upper part, which gives the spat effect, in a contrasting color—gray or taupe, for instance.

A NOBLE PHILANTHROPY.
The annual roll call of the American Red Cross, November 11-30, is a reminder of the marvelous results this society has achieved in relieving distress.
Not merely does the Red Cross supply the medical care and nursing that are so necessary after great disasters, but it is a wonderful preventive and educational agency. It shows people how they can live so as to become healthy and efficient.
When there is some great job of welfare work to be performed, this nation wide organization has the system that can put it over. One example was its recent service in converting the wheat and cotton provided by the farm board into food and clothing for the needy. This great organization is not merely a noble philanthropy, but it is a business investment to keep it on the job of relieving poverty and disease. Let us give this society, in this year when its aid is needed so much, more generous support than it ever had before.

NEED YOUR HELP.
We have just finished reading an appeal for assistance sent out by a western orphanage home. The petition, which was a worthy one, found its way into many Michigan newspapers. No doubt but that many charitable Michigan people will respond. We have no fault to find with those who may desire to help orphan children in this, or any other state. That kind of giving is Christlike in its Christian helpfulness. But we are wondering if all of our Michigan people, whose hearts beat in sympathy for children in distress, are acquainted with the work being done by the Starr Commonwealth, Albion, Michigan? This institution is caring for nearly a hundred boys, all of whom have been salvaged from the most depressing social conditions conceivable. They are being given a chance in life. The Starr Commonwealth is God's conception of "suffer little children." Right now they are facing a bitter winter. They need your help. Even a little piece of silver given them will ring just as true as did the widow's mite long centuries ago. Send a quarter, send a half dollar or a dollar to the Starr Commonwealth. You will be helping some little youngster along the road to a better life. Your gift, however small, will add to human happiness.

MY FAIR LADY.
In y e olden days, "when Knight-hood was in flower," men were quite exclusive. A gentleman was never heard to swear in the presence of ladies; he did his drinking in the seclusion of the village inn; had the sole franchise for robbing stage coaches and mail trains, and never dreamed of stealing a horse if any of the fair sex happened to be present. The old boys may have been bad, but they disdained female assistance. But conditions have changed, and we now find the girls mixing in all sorts of questionable adventures. Modernity seems to have projected them into many underworld activities. Today it is not unusual to read about young women taking part in wild night club orgies, in abductions, in bank and highway robberies, and in many other dubious and outlawed enterprises. This is no reflection upon the good women of this day and generation, who are just as fine and noble in character as their sisters of the past. What we had in mind, was to call attention to those females of the species who have evidently embraced equal rights for women in a big way. They are insisting upon sharing life with their mates, even if the trail leads into strange and dangerous places. Generally such an existence ends in disillusionment and disaster. The way downward is swift and for them life is filled with bitter disappointments. Teaching our young girls the folly of the primrose path of dare-devilry should be the first duty of society. The secluded cloister of the home is still the best safeguard for womanhood.

This Week Starts Annual "Y" Canvass

The annual Y. M. C. A. canvass starts in Cass City this week. President Guy Landon of the Community Club appointed the following committee: Rev. Paul Allured, Arthur Atwell, Rev. George Bayless, Fred Bigelow, Alex Henry, Guy Landon, H. F. Lenzner, Walter Mann, Fred Pinney, Wayne Price, Frank Reid and Rev. G. A. Spitzer. A report meeting will be held next Thursday evening at eight-thirty at the council rooms. A chart of the activities of the Y. M. C. A. in the Tuscola-Saginaw area shows that during the past year Cass City had a Friendly Indian Club for boys of the fifth and sixth grades, a Hi-Y Club for high school boys, and a young men's club. Outside speakers were brought in for school assemblies and club meetings and Cass City was represented at the Older Boys' Conference and on the World's Fair trip. Rev. Paul Allured led a stamp club for boys and girls. The soft ball league sponsored by the "Y" had over ninety enrolled on its teams and Cass City won the championship and the Consolation area soft ball tournament as well as finishing first in horseshoe, reaching the finals in the tennis tournament and second in the golf competition. Other activities listed were regular visits by the area secretary, use of the Saginaw Y. M. C. A. building and leadership training conferences. The State Older Boys' Conference will be held at Kalamazoo this year on Dec. 1, 2 and 3. Rev. A. W. Beaven, president of the Federal Council of Churches, Max Yergan, winner of the Harmon award for distinguished service to the colored race, Samuel Wyer, a consulting engineer from Columbus, Ohio, and Prof. Royal G. Hall of Albion College are the principal speakers. Over 1,200 boys from Michigan are expected for this gathering and Cass City will be represented.

TUSCOLA RESIDENTS SEEK NEW GUN PERMITS

Gun permits securing the right of citizens of Tuscola county to carry concealed weapons are now being sought for in large numbers at the present time, according to S. W. Morrison, county clerk. Whether the ever increasing number of permits sought is an indication of an expected crime wave in this county or the people have just the desire to handle firearms, is not known. Those given gun permits recently are as follows: A. W. Lewis, Vassar; William J. Richardson, Fostoria; Clayton Atkins, Vassar; O. G. Spohn, Pinnebog; Harry E. Rowland, Vassar; C. A. Sanders, Caro; Robert C. Day, Vassar; Thomas VanTine, Caro; Guy G. Hill, Caro; Allah Schrader, Caro; Ray Baldwin, Millington; Burton Elliott, Cass City; Andrew A. Barnes, Cass City; William Grant, Vassar; William G. Hurley, Fairgrove; Carl Renner, Vassar; Pierre Terry, Akron; E. W. Lewis, Vassar, and Cecil M. Kelley, Caro.

THUMB CROWN WON BY HILLTOPPERS

Concluded from first page. Again attempted a sneak and this time he ran the 12 yards across the goal line without being touched. A low kick failed to produce the extra point. Pigeon kicked to the Maroon and Grey and on the second play they recovered a fumble on the Hilltopper's 40 yard line. The tables were reversed when Karr recovered a Pigeon fumble. Quick went around right end for 30 yards. Knight and Quick failed to make a first down and the ball went to Pigeon on their 20 yard line as the quarter ended. Cass City was leading 19-0. Pigeon tried an off tackle smash on the first play. Jean fumbled—the ball going into the air and into the arms of Fred Ward. Ahead of Fred was the whole Pigeon team, but he pivoted beautifully and out-distanced four tacklers to the goal line. The pass from center was wide, but Graham picked up the ball and tried to drop kick, but the kick was blocked. Ward and Graham were the only regulars left in the line-up as Cass City made numerous substitutions at this time. Pigeon blocked a Cass City kick on the Maroon and Grey 30 yard line, but Graham recovered and punted far down the field on the next try. Graham then recovered a Pigeon fumble, but the Pigeon team held. They then started a great drive for the Cass City goal line. They reached the Maroon and Grey 13 yard line, but a pass over the goal line stopped the threat. Another drive, in which Pigeon made three first downs, carried them to the local's seven yard line in the closing minutes of play. For three plays the Cass City line held, and before the fourth play could get under way the game was over. Again the 1933 Thumb champs not scored upon.

Touchdowns—R. Quick, 2; McCallum, Ward. Points after touchdown—Ballough (plunge). Referee—LeCronier (Bad Axe). Umpire and Timer—Doepfer (Pigeon). Time of periods—12 minutes.

The work of the Quick brothers, McCallum, Ward and Ballough was the best for Cass City, while Murdoch was exceptionally good in the line and Hammill in the backfield for Pigeon.

The game with Bad Axe scheduled for today (Friday) has been postponed until some day next week. Bad Axe has reversed the tables from the first of the year—when they lost four very close games. They have defeated Marlette and Crosswell and held the high powered Harbor Beach team to a scoreless tie on Armistice day. If the field is dry, Cass City should have no trouble, but if it is wet, covered with snow, or if it is a cold day, the closest game played in Cass City this year will be presented to you. In fact, with adverse conditions, it may even be another scoreless tie for Bad Axe, which would mean a great moral victory for them.

CRIMINAL'S QUICK START.

One of the baffling features of modern crime, is the speed with which the perpetrators of such a deed get away. Frequently they have an automobile parked near by the engine of which is kept running. In one recent crime, it was thought that the gunmen had some kind of electrical device by which a car could at once be started at high speed. If a crook after committing a deed of evil can save a few seconds in getting away, the difference may mean that his escape is not noticed. The people who see such deeds must show equal alertness in reporting what they have seen, and getting the numbers of fleeing cars.

Buyers Want Turkey To Be Well Dressed

Probably the turkey does not care how well it is dressed when sent to market but the woman who is going to cook the bird takes a paying interest in that detail, according to the poultry department at Michigan State College, which has planned a series of meetings to show how to dress birds to bring the best prices.

Turkeys are one of the products often personally marketed by their producer so any increase in price which can be obtained by offering better quality poultry is a direct addition to the profit in growing the bird. Methods of dressing turkeys so they make an excellent appearance at the market are no harder than haphazard ways of getting the birds ready for the table.

The meetings are placed so that growers from nearly every county in the state can reach one of them easily. Members of the poultry department will show how the birds should be dressed, and will also discuss other phases of the poultry business. Chickens will be slaughtered at the demonstrations as well as turkeys.

Detailed directions for reaching the farms where meetings are to be held can be obtained from county agricultural agents.

Dates and places for the meetings are Nov. 16, College Experimental Farm, Lake City; Nov. 17, Stanley Thorpe Farm, Ionia county; Nov. 21, Eau Claire Farmers Exchange, Eau Claire; Nov. 22, Mrs. G. Johnson Farm, near Merrill in Midland county; Nov. 23, Brown's Garage, Sandusky; and Nov. 24, Ed Heck farm, Monroe county.

Chicago Stock Show Excels Past Records

Through eight big days and nights, the International Live Stock Exposition will celebrate its 34th anniversary in Chicago from December 2 to 9.

Earlier predictions that this largest of the continent's live stock shows would exceed its own past records in the number of animals that would be exhibited have been realized, reports B. H. Heide, secretary-manager of the exhibition. There is an increase of several hundred entries over last year, which broke the record up to that time, he says.

Huge though the big plant is, that houses this mammoth display of live stock and crops, at the entrance to the Chicago live stock market, officials of the show will be taxed to find stall room for the many thousands of farm animals, the finest the world produces, that will be on view.

The international aspect of the exposition may be more impressively stated, the management points out, with a listing of entries by the states from which exhibition herds and flocks will be coming. Sheep will be sent from 14 states and Canada; draft horses from 11 states and two Canadian provinces, Shorthorn cattle from 19 states and Ontario; Hereford cattle from 14 states and Ontario; and Aberdeen-Angus cattle from 12 states and the Dominion.

Thirteen states, the District of Columbia, Canada, and Scotland will contribute the judging talent who will place the ribbons in the competitions for the 29 different breeds of live stock that will be represented at the International Live Stock Show this year.

PIGEON BANK TO OPEN ON 50 PER CENT PLAN

According to Ernest Clabuesch, conservator for the Pigeon State Bank, that institution will not open on a 25 per cent pay-off as reported last week. In a statement given the Pigeon Progress Mr. Clabuesch said he had received no official confirmation regarding the bank's opening on that basis. His statement said: "The plan as worked out with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Federal and State departments, calls for a complete release of 50 per cent of all deposits and which I feel confident will be carried out."

WHAT HOG TAX MEANS TO CHESANING FIRM

From Chesaning Argus.

The government processing tax on hogs, of 50 cents a hundred-weight, went into effect at the Peet Packing company Monday and with an average weekly kill of 1,500 hogs, averaging in weight about 200 pounds means, that, if this tax is continued and increased, as is the program at this time, the Peet company will pay the government in the course of the next year upwards of $200,000 in tax money.

Dec. 1 the tax goes to $1 per 100, January 1, it is increased to $1.50 and Feb. 1 to $2 a hundred weight. Also last week the Peet company took stock on what is known as the floor tax, a sort of a processing tax on meat products on hand before this Monday. This cost about $2,000 in tax money.

All this money, not only from the Peet company but packers all over the U. S. is to go into the federal fund to compensate farmers for decreasing hog production and to pay for the 6,000,000 hogs the government bought up a few weeks ago to give away, 25 per cent to the needy and the rest in tankage.

Just so that the farmers in Chesaning territory will be absolutely clear on what this processing tax on hogs means let it be known that any farmer bringing hogs to a packing company for sale does not pay the tax—the company does.

But if a farmer has a hog slaughtered or does it himself for resale in any form or to a neighbor, then he must pay the processing tax to the nearest internal revenue agent.

A farmer killing a hog for his own domestic use is not subject to this tax.

HARBOR BEACH TO HAVE SALT WATER POOL

A salt water swimming pool is being built at the Harbor Beach Resort, south of Harbor Beach. The pool will be 75 feet long by 30 feet wide and will have a water depth of 9 feet at one end and three and one-half feet at the other. It will be fed by water from the brine well of the Huron Milling Company. The brine contains 20 per cent salt and it will be diluted with city water to bring its salt content down to three and one-half per cent.

NOTICE OF FARM ALLOTMENTS AND OF MAXIMUM
ACREAGES OF WHEAT FOR 1934 UNDER CON-TRACTS FOR MEMBERS OF THE WHEAT PRODUC-TION CONTROL ASSOCIATION OF TUSCOLA COUN-TY, STATE OF MICHIGAN.

Listed below are statements of the allotments which have been determined for members of the Tuscola County Wheat Production Control Association from Columbia, Elmwood, Ellington, Novesta, Kingston, Koylton, Elkland, Dayton. These allotments are to hold for the duration of the present wheat contracts, and they are the basis upon which adjustment payments are to be made. They have been determined by the County Allotment Committee after careful consideration of the application statements. Every effort has been made to have these allotments as accurate as possible. The maximum acreage which may be sown to wheat for the 1934 crop on each farm, under the reduction requirements of the contract, is also listed.

The Tuscola County Allotment, which has been calculated from records of the United States Department of Agriculture, is 285,314 bushels. This is the total number of bushels allotted to the county under the wheat plan. The total of the individual allotments, including those allotments which could have been assigned to farms which are not participating under the wheat program, must be in line with the county allotment figure.

AUDLEY RAWSON,
Chairman County Allotment Committee.

Mr. and Mrs. Durward Heron spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Heron.

Mrs. Duncan McAlpine is still a patient at Pleasant Home hospital. Her friends are wishing her a speedy recovery.

T. H. Wallace spent a few days in Cass City last week.

The W. H. M. S. planned to entertain the Cass City and Elkton auxiliaries Tuesday at the home of Mrs. T. J. Heron. The severe weather made it impossible for either of the guest auxiliaries to be present but the ladies of the home auxiliary decided they would have a good time anyway so those that were present are sure they will never forget Nov. 14. A most delicious luncheon was served to those present and although we were sorry that we didn't have the pleasure of the ladies' company from Cass City and Elkton we did the best we could.

C. E. Hartsell and Alva MacAlpine attended church at Elkton on Sunday evening and listened to Rev. Buerkle of Pigeon talk on "Hitler of Germany."

A large crowd attended the Father and Son banquet held at the Grant church Friday evening. After a delightful supper was served, Rev. Bayless of Cass City led the group in several choruses after which the toastmaster, Willard Ellicott, announced that the male quartette would sing a selection entitled "Faith of Our Fathers." The speaker of the evening was Rev. Bayless and his topic was "There is a Lad Among Us." Everyone enjoyed Rev. Bayless' talk and hope to have the pleasure of hearing him again.

Personality Counts

A noted speaker says: "The problem of getting along in life is very largely the problem of personality; for where we get in life is due far more to personality than to training. The inner self has much to do with our lives and therefore we ought not to neglect it."

A tantalizing
A satisfying
A mystifying
Romance
Oh
Cynthia!

By Norma Knight

It was time the greedy little grabber bumped head-on into some one who didn't care two pennies for her displeasure. Geoff Ensloe felt himself appointed to the task of taming the slim young shrew. The collision was head-on. Was it to be heart-on too? Or is the altitude of Colorado too high for sentiment, the air too rare for love? ... What was the matter with Cynthia, anyhow? Did she think he liked turning himself into a combination of petty book-keeper and housewife? Had she no realization that it was for her sake he studied loathly cuts of meat and juggled the light and gas bills at the end of the month? He who had hardly ever been in a kitchen was now nauseatingly familiar with double boilers and sugar-sack dish towels. Geoff remembered longingly the hotel life he had once despised.

That paragraph gives you just a peep into this tantalizing, satisfying, mystifying story that will appear serially in these columns. You will enjoy every line of it and be sorry that it could not be longer than it is.

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS.

A man was expressing some quite caustic thoughts the other day, about the constant succession of agents and canvassers who come to his door, teasing him to buy things he doesn't want. He was weary with having to turn them down, and he berated many of them for being too persistent, or discourteous.

"You are too hard on them," said his wife. She was sorry for their long tramping of streets, and the poor results which the majority of them seem to have. It hurt her sympathies to have to send them away.

Sales by such agents take business away from the stores, many of which may need the money just as much. Yet you can't help being sorry for many fellows who are trying to sell goods to the homes because they can't find anything else to do.

It is better, to try to earn an honest dollar by selling a useful article, than it is to lie down and wait for someone to help you.

If people are determined to try the selling game from door to door, some advice should be given them. Don't think you can make sales by long winded orations. Put the heart of your proposition into one or two sentences, and if the householder or the "missus" shows no interest, don't exasperate them by talking and talking. And don't call people stupid or foolish if they don't buy.

There are many more people trying this way of earning money than can make a success at it. The college boys trying to work their way in this manner, might have done it in boom times, but it's fishing in a dry brook now. Any kind of work which people want done, whether digging in the dirt or what not, would seem more hopeful, if one has physical strength.

The boy who kicks the football through the kitchen window instead of over the back yard goal posts, will not probably have his expenses paid through any college for some time yet.

FIRST CHAPTER TODAY IN

The CHRONICLE

Thousands have Ended their Bowel Worries

by taking this advice!

Can constipation actually be overcome? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" say the many thousands who have followed their advice and know.

You are not likely to cure your constipation with salts, pills, tablets, or any of the habit-forming cathartics. But you can correct this condition by gentle regulation with a suitable liquid laxative.

An approved liquid laxative (one which is most widely used for both adults and children) is syrup pepsin. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription, and is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna—a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help, as in the case of mineral drugs.

Hospitals and doctors have always used liquid laxatives. The dose can be measured, and the action controlled. Pills and tablets containing drugs of violent action are hard on the bowels.

If there are children in your household, don't give them any form of laxative, but use a healthful, helpful preparation like syrup pepsin. Its very taste will tell you it is wholesome, and agreeable to the stomach. Delightful taste, and delightful action; there is no discomfort at the time, or after. Ask your druggist for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, all ready to take.

THE LIQUID TEST:

This is the way many men and women have made their bowels as regular as clockwork in a very short time.

First: select a properly prepared liquid laxative. Second: take the dose you find suited to your system. Third: gradually reduce the dose until bowels are moving of their own accord.

Simple, isn't it? And it works! The right liquid laxative brings thorough bowel action without using force.

News Review of Current Events the World OverLaGuardia Elected Mayor of New York, Tammany
Being "Destroyed" Again—Prohibition Voted
Out of the Constitution.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

F. H. LaGuardia

FIORIELLO H. LA GUARDIA, dynamic and radical Republican, is the mayor-elect of New York, and Tammany has been "smashed" once more—for how long no one knows. The fusion candidate easily defeated Joseph V. McKee, recovery nominee, and Mayor John P. O'Brien, Tammany Democrat, who ran in that order. Because McKee had the open and vigorous backing of Postmaster James Farley, who is both national and New York state Democratic chairman, the Republicans claimed that the result was a great victory for their party and a slap at the Roosevelt administration. The truth is that it was rather a slap at Farley and machine politics in general as well as representing a revolt against the Tammany regime.

Tammany Hall is furious and an internecine war has broken out in the organization. Boss John F. Curry, it was expected, would be asked to relinquish his leadership, and he anticipated this with a demand that Farley be replaced as state chairman, accusing him of disrupting the Democratic party in the city. His attack was directed, also, against Edward J. Flynn, secretary of state and Bronx Democratic boss, and inferentially against Alfred E. Smith, who had declined to speak for O'Brien.

Municipal elections were held in many other cities, and some of them were almost as interesting as that in the metropolis. The Republicans and Democrats broke about even, and one city, Bridgeport, Conn., elected a Socialist mayor.

Democrats made striking gains in upstate New York. Buffalo elected a Democratic mayor for the first time since 1914; Rochester went Democratic for the first time in 30 years; Poughkeepsie, nearest city to the home of President Roosevelt, named a Democrat for the first time in four years; Cortland went Democratic for the first time since its incorporation 33 years ago; Lockport also went Democratic for the first time in 16 years. In Jamestown, a thirty-four-year-old newspaper reporter, Leon F. Roberts, unseated Samuel A. Carlson, who has been mayor 24 years.

Pittsburgh, Pa., upset the Mellon Republican machine, electing William McNair, a youthful newcomer in politics who was backed by the Roosevelt Democrats. Frank Couzens, Republican, son of Senator James Couzens, won the mayoralty of Detroit. The Republicans also won in Cleveland, electing former Gov. Harry L. Davis. In Boston a Democrat, Frederick W. Mansfield, was chosen mayor.

THIRTY-SEVEN states—more than necessary—having voted for prohibition repeal, the Eighteenth amendment is knocked out of the Constitution. The dry regime comes to an end on December 5, when the thirty-sixth state convention, that of Maine, meets to ratify the action of the voters. The latest states to go on record for repeal were Ohio, Pennsylvania, Utah and Kentucky. On the same day North and South Carolina rejected the repeal amendment, being the first commonwealths to do so. This result was ascribed to the fact that the prohibitionists made a lively campaign, while the repealists were inactive. The vote of Utah was somewhat of a surprise, for the Mormon church had urged all its members to vote for retention of the Eighteenth amendment. Obviously, many of them disregarded this monition.

"NEVER again will we call off this strike until our demands are met by the federal government," declared Milo Reno, president of the National Farmers' Holiday association. Whereupon the "embattled farmers" of the Middle West resumed their picketing with renewed vigor, determined to prevent the moving of produce to the markets of the leading cities. Reno and his followers were enraged because President Roosevelt, on the advice of George N. Peek, head of the agricultural adjustment administration, and Secretary Wallace, had rejected the price fixing plan offered by Governors Herring, Olson, Langer, Schmiedeman and Berry. And those governors were no less irate when they left the White House. They declared their attempt to bring about complete regimentation of agriculture was a complete failure and that they were disappointed and disgusted. They freely predicted "a great deal of disturbance" unless market prices go up on this year's crops, and the farm strikers saw to it that this prediction was justified.

Mr. Roosevelt, in a written opinion based on Mr. Peek's advice, said that the governor's plan amounted substantially "to the licensing of every plowed field, and the marketing by a ticket punch system of all grain and live stock; and he then went on to denounce severely such a scheme of regimentation. The effect of the adoption of the plan, he said, "even if successful in the Midwest, might be that the very states the governors are trying to help might be left holding the bag while other states expanded production."

"These questions are wholly aside from grave problems of legality under existing law and questions as to raising the necessary funds."

The governors were called upon, instead, to give full co-operation to the program of benefits and curtailed production already under way.

REFUSAL of the Greek Court of Appeals to permit the extradition of Samuel Insull is held by the United States government to be "utterly untenable and a clear violation of the American-Hellenic treaty of extradition signed at Athens on May 6, 1931."

Lincoln MacVeagh

note denouncing the treaty. The document expressed the "astonishment" of the government in Washington at the news that the Greek authorities had again declined to honor the request for Insull's extradition, and continued that this made it apparent that the treaty is now entirely useless.

The Greek government could get out of the embarrassing situation, if it so desired, by inviting Insull to leave the country within a stipulated time. By law the minister of the interior may deport any person "if undesirable for social or public reasons." However, Insull's lawyers told the fugitive the government could not remove him without casting a slur on the Greek judiciary. Then, too, the Venizelists, opponents of the present regime, would attack it and probably overthrow it if Insull were deported.

HENRY FORD has started to lay off his men to bring their working hours under the 35-hour code maximum, according to his announced plan. His plants had been operating on a 40-hour basis. The recovery officials were astonished by this move, and General Johnson tried to avert it by offering to "consider an exception" in Ford's case, without avail.

Observers watched this renewal of the prolonged NRA-Ford controversy with keen interest. They said the Ford statement that the layoff was solely to meet NRA requirements was another indication that the manufacturer intends to comply with the letter of the law while at variance with the spirit of the program.

The real showdown will come later, it was predicted, over the collective bargaining provisions of the code.

The striking tool and die makers of the Detroit area were returning to work in large numbers under agreements with employers that were negotiated by the regional labor board. The terms were not made public. The strike started in Flint and was marked by violence and sabotage.

WORK for 4,000,000 persons now on the relief rolls, through the immediate expenditure of $400,000,000 of public works money is contemplated in a new program announced by President Roosevelt. Through a new "civil works administration" under Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, the President announced, the government will provide the financial backing for new federal, state and local projects of a "non-competitive" nature.

Mr. Hopkins asked governors, mayors and other officials to make their suggestions for projects at once. At his headquarters it was explained that the projects might include levees, the landscaping and beautifying of highways, destruction of breeding grounds for germ-carrying insects, sanitation projects and similar "useful" works.

CHICAGO'S wonderful exposition, A Century of Progress, has come to an end, but it will be reopened on June 1, 1934, bigger and better than ever. This welcome news was announced by President Rufus C. Dawes, who said the managers were acting in harmony with the requests of President Roosevelt and of many individuals and organizations. The fair next year will have more exhibitors and concessionaires, and the lighting and decorative scheme will be revamped. All the comfort facilities will be free, and stricter control will be kept over shows and concessions.

IN A new effort to relieve the hog farmers of the corn belt, the government announced the prospective expenditure of another $5,000,000 in the open market purchase of pork products for distribution to needy families.

The program will supplement the $350,000,000 corn-hog production control campaign recently inaugurated.

In all some 200,000,000 pounds of pork products are to be purchased, the administration stated. The poundage of finished products will represent approximately 3,000,000 live hogs, it was said, and together with reductions expected under the corn-hog program and those actually effected in the previous emergency hog buying campaigns will bring the total reductions in hog marketings for regular commercial disposal during the current year to about 10,000,000 head.

THE Philippines legislature has given the women of the islands the right to vote, this being the first instance of the extension of the franchise to women in an Oriental country. The measure was recommended by Gov. Gen. Frank Murphy.

WHEN GEN. ITALO BALBO was preparing to lead his epochal mass flight of Italian planes from Rome to Chicago friends warned him that its success would mean his own relegation to obscurity, because of Mussolini's determination to keep others out of the limelight. This has now come to pass. Balbo, who was air minister, has resigned and has been made governor of Libya, the colony on the north coast of Africa.

There has been mystery almost ever since Balbo returned from his triumphant flight concerning his standing with Mussolini. He was received as a hero at Rome and made air marshal. Then he dropped out of the news completely and it was rumored he was in disfavor. The duke has reorganized his cabinet according to a plan formed long ago. He has himself assumed the portfolio of the navy and aviation, in addition to the five offices he already held.

REBELLION flared again in Cuba, part of the army and the A B C secret organization undertaking to oust President Ramon Grau San Martin. Military planes attacked the presidential palace with machine gun fire and troops in the various barracks in Havana revolted. The fighting in the capital was bloody and lasted for many hours. Loyal troops under Col. Fulgencio Batista, chief of staff, recaptured some of the strong points from the rebels, and the colonel negotiated a brief armistice.

The rebellion started immediately after President Grau announced that he would not consider the demands of the opposition faction that he resign.

MAXIM LITVINOV, Soviet envoy, enjoyed several days of pleasant and profitable conversation in Washington with President Roosevelt, Secretary of State Hull and other officials. It was expected that the President would announce very soon that ambassadors were to be exchanged between the United States and Russia, for the negotiations were proceeding smoothly. Some of the questions to be settled may be taken up after recognition of the Soviet republic.

NADIR SHAH GHAZI, king of Afghanistan, was assassinated by a traitor, according to a formal announcement, and was succeeded on the throne by his son, Mohammed Zahir Shah. Nadir Shah was fifty-three years old, and became king in 1929 when he drove from the throne the bandit leader, Bacho Sachao, who had ousted King Amanullah.

CHANCELLOR DOLLFUSS is all out of patience with the intrigues of Austrian officials and government employees who are in sympathy with the Nazi movement and has decided to get rid of those persons immediately. He has a "federal commissar for personnel reform" whose duty it is to discover the offenders and eliminate them.

The philosophers discuss what we shall do "when the world crashes at our feet." Well, best thing to do under those trying circumstances, is to hunt around among the pieces, find something in the dust that the people want, and then put an ad in the paper about it.

Education costs high, but anyway the sophomores are willing to put the freshmen under the pump without charge.

SIMPLE VIRTUES
COMMUNITY CLUB TALK
From Bad Axe Tribune.
Rev. George Spitzer, pastor of the Evangelical church, of Cass City, was the guest speaker at the Community Club Wednesday noon. His topic was "Vision" and it was from a text in Proverbs which says, "Where there is no vision the people perish." "But we are not going to perish," Rev. Spitzer said, "for God is in His heaven and all is right with the world," and the depression cannot always last.

Fitting a word to each letter of his topic, Rev. Spitzer made of it virtue, inspiration, silence, idealism, optimism and nobleness—all attributes of more useful and well spent lives.
The talk was well delivered, well received and it is no wonder, as reported, that Rev. Spitzer is building up a strong church in Cass City.

YOUTHFUL STYLES COPY ADULT MODE

New Clothes for Girls Are Very Smart and Practical.

Designers of youthful fashions have shown great skill in adapting the best points of the more adult mode to clothes which are practical and smart for their small clientele.

The vogue for twin sweater sets, which has been such a feature of sportswear, is being shown in excellent school costumes for Miss Seven to Fourteen. A powder blue slipover, and matching cardigan faced with grosgrain ribbon, are smart with the pleated skirt of navy blue serge which should be in every well-regulated school wardrobe. Rust color and bright red also are good with navy.

A one-piece dress of a new linen weave wool, in beige flecked with brown, is buttoned up the front with wooden buttons, and made with a circular yoke extending over the shoulders in the best grown-up manner. The little collar is of white linen finished with hand fagoting.

The double-breasted topcoat on reefer lines which is a favorite with smart women for town and country wear is copied in an excellent school coat of sturdy dark blue tweed with a diagonal weave. A stitched brimmed hat of tweed with a bright feather at the side and a colorful plaid scarf complete the outfit.

Many versions of the popular middy fashions are seen in classroom frocks.

FUR EPAULETS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Many of the most successful autumn costumes are developed in tones of brown and beige. The ensemble in the picture carries out this color scheme even down to the shoes milady wears. The swagger afternoon dress with its matching jacket is fashioned of handsome ribbed silk in a very deep brown tone. The necessary shoulder breadth is gained via the use of wide flaring epaulets of brown fur. The open-throat oxford of brown kid have a contrasting beige trim which matches the beige gloves and the buckle and buttons of the dress.

FLASHES FROM PARIS

Jewelry regains its importance. Blackberry is a much-exploited color. Scintillating trimming adorns the dinner frock. Allover embroidered tunics endorse the Chinese theme. The lace blouse in pullover fashion is a new evening theme. Tricot de soi is an entirely new knitted silk for evening dresses. Luxurious fabrics and stately silhouette add to the dignity of the mode.

Unique New Fabrics for Shoes Entered for Fall

A thrilling new material has just been produced by the man who launched the pin-tucked kid which was such a success in the spring. It is kid, stitched and stitched every which way, so that the finished effect is oddly reptilian. It has the advantage of combining practicality with great beauty and chic. Patent leather is a newcomer in the form of a low-heeled oxford. Alligator is our hardest perennial. It holds its well deserved place in the sun along with its less utilitarian cousin, lizard.

Deaths

Mrs. Alfred E. Vader.

Funeral services for Mrs. Alfred Eugene Vader were held Saturday afternoon from the Vader home on West Pine street. Rev. Bayless, pastor of the local Methodist Episcopal church, officiated and burial was in Elkland cemetery.

Elizabeth Jane Smith was born May 18, 1866, in Kingston, Ontario, and came with her parents to a farm nine miles west of Cass City in 1877. She was united in marriage with Alfred Eugene Vader on May 3, 1883, and they have made their home in and near Cass City since that time, the last thirty-two years in town.

Mrs. Vader has been in very poor health for many years and has been unable to do any work for twenty years. She passed away Wednesday evening, November 8, at Wah-jamega.

She is survived by her husband, one son, Ivan Vader, of Cass City; three daughters, Mrs. Ersel Andrews and Mrs. Myrtle Corpron, both of California, and Mrs. Milton Huffman of Cass City.

Miss Leafa Terry.

Word has been received here of the death of Mrs. Leafa Terry, who passed away Sunday, October 29, at the home of her mother, Mrs. Max Terry, at Alpena. Her father preceded her in death three years and her grandfather, Frank L. Terry, died October 7 of this year. Leafa was seventeen years of age and spent all her life in Alpena except a year with her aunt, Mrs. Frank Agar, in Ann Arbor. She was of a kind and loving disposition and a very patient sufferer. She leaves to mourn, her mother and one sister, Iris, and many relatives besides a host of friends. Rev. R. N. Mulholland.

From Michigan Christian Advocate.
Rev. Robert N. Mulholland, a retired member of the Detroit Conference, passed to his heavenly home from his earthly home at Waterville, Ohio, on Thursday, October 26, 1933, in the eighty-sixth year of his age. His daughter writes the Advocate that up to a tone or so ago he had been very active in mind and body, taking long walks every day, enjoying his radio, books and magazines, but above all his Michigan Christian Advocate.

Robert N. Mulholland was born near Trafalgar, Ontario, on February 23, 1848, on a farm which was a part of a grant of land to his grandfather's family by King George in recognition of their loyalty during the Revolution. He knew a great deal about manual labor, for during his early boyhood he assisted his father in clearing forests and in milling lumber which was shipped to New York. Later the family moved to Michigan and settled on a farm near Memphis.

He was educated in the public schools and in Adrian College. While attending the latter he preached at Palmyra, where he met Alice Ostrander, whom he married in 1872. To them were born seven children, three of whom died in infancy; Clarence, the oldest son, died in 1898; Frank, of Toledo, Ohio; Ralph, of Eustis, Fla., and a daughter, now Mrs. H. W. Squire, of Waterville, Ohio.

After preaching a number of years in the Methodist Protestant Conference, he united with the Detroit Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in 1888, being received on his credentials. He was in the active pastorate in this Conference for about twenty-six years, serving these charges: Gaylord, 1888; Oscoda, 1889, 1890, 1891, 1892; Mt. Clemens 1893; Orion 1894, 1895, 1896; Vassar 1897, 1898, 1899, 1900; Morenci 1901, 1902, 1903; Cass City 1904, 1905, 1906, 1907; Algonac 1908, 1909, 1910, 1911.

In 1912 he retired, and removed to Waterville, Ohio. Mrs. Mulholland died in 1922, one week after the celebration of their golden wedding anniversary, which was attended by one hundred and twenty-five relatives, and friends from charges where they had served.

Brother Mulholland was a sincere, diligent preacher of the Word, efficient as a preacher and faithful in pastoral work. He was keenly interested in the temperance and missionary movements.

Rev. Mr. Wagon, pastor of the Methodist church at Waterville, had charge of the funeral services.
