

FARMERS OF THREE COUNTIES MEET HERE

Farm Bureaus of Tuscola, Huron and Sanilac Gather April 6.

Representatives of the Farm Bureau organizations of Huron, Tuscola and Sanilac counties met here Friday afternoon making preliminary plans for a tri-county Farm Bureau meeting at Cass City on Friday, April 6. It is planned to have a two-session program for the day. The morning session will be held at the Presbyterian church and the afternoon program in the high school auditorium.

Clark L. Brody, executive secretary of the Michigan State Farm Bureau, is to be the principal speaker at the three-county meeting here. He will speak on the Farm Bureau activities in Michigan today. Mr. Brody will be speaking of an organization which touches the daily lives of some 75,000 farmers in Michigan through its many activities. The Farm Bureau has a membership department active in 45 counties in lower Michigan. John Sims, former county agricultural agent of Tuscola county, will be a speaker at this rally and his many friends will be pleased to listen to him again.

Another speaker is Mrs. Charles W. Sewell of Otterbein, Ind., woman member of the American Farm Bureau board and chairman of the national Farm Bureau's home and community work. Feb. 23, Mrs. Sewell came to the Lapeer County Farmer's Day and spoke to several hundred women. She is considered a most remarkable speaker and during the past 10 years has spoken to Farm Bureau women in nearly every state in the union.

A reception was given Monday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. King at the home of the groom's parents in Argyle where they will make their home for the present.

The groom is a graduate of Cass City High School of the Class of 1933.

W. L. MANN NEW ROTARY HEAD HERE

Farmers Will Entertain Rotarians at Luncheon Here Next Tuesday.

W. L. Mann will be the new president of the Rotary Club who will take office at the July 3rd meeting of the society. Mr. Mann and candidates for other offices of the club, presented by the nominating committee on Tuesday, were made the unanimous choice of the members. Frank Reid is vice president; Earl W. Douglas, secretary; A. J. Knapp, treasurer; and J. A. Sandham and Dr. P. A. Schenck, directors. All are new officers in these positions.

Rev. P. J. Allured, pastor of the local Presbyterian church, gave a Lenten message at the club luncheon Tuesday, on the subject, "What the Cross of Christ Should Mean to Men of Today."

Albert C. Dunham of Royal Oak, lieutenant governor of Division No. 1, Michigan District, Kiwanis International, who was scheduled to speak here Tuesday, was prevented from filling the date by the snow blocked roads on that day.

Farmers of this community will be hosts at a luncheon at the Hotel Gordon next Tuesday to which they invited Cass City Rotarians. Scott Campbell, manager of the county farm near Caro, will be the entertainer for this occasion. Mr. Campbell has won a remarkable reputation in recent years as a magician and crayon sketch artist.

Achievement Days in Tuscola County

Achievement day for home management groups will be held at Caro on Friday, April 20. Two hundred sixty women in Tuscola county are members of the several home management societies in the county.

Achievement day for 4-H club members will be held on April 23, 24 and 25. On the first two days, meetings will be held at different points in Tuscola county and on the last day at the county seat.

Twp. Treasurers Make Settlements

The last three township treasurers in Tuscola county to reach Caro to settle with County Treasurer Whittenburg were from Akron, Denmark and Elmwood. Out of a total tax assessment of $27,035.05, Akron returned $4,329.68 unpaid. Denmark, with a total tax of $24,135.95, returned $3,047.40 uncollected, and Elmwood township, with a total tax of $29,921.22, returned $13,028.07. Of the last named amount, $5,513.03 was for tax on the Sebewaing drain.

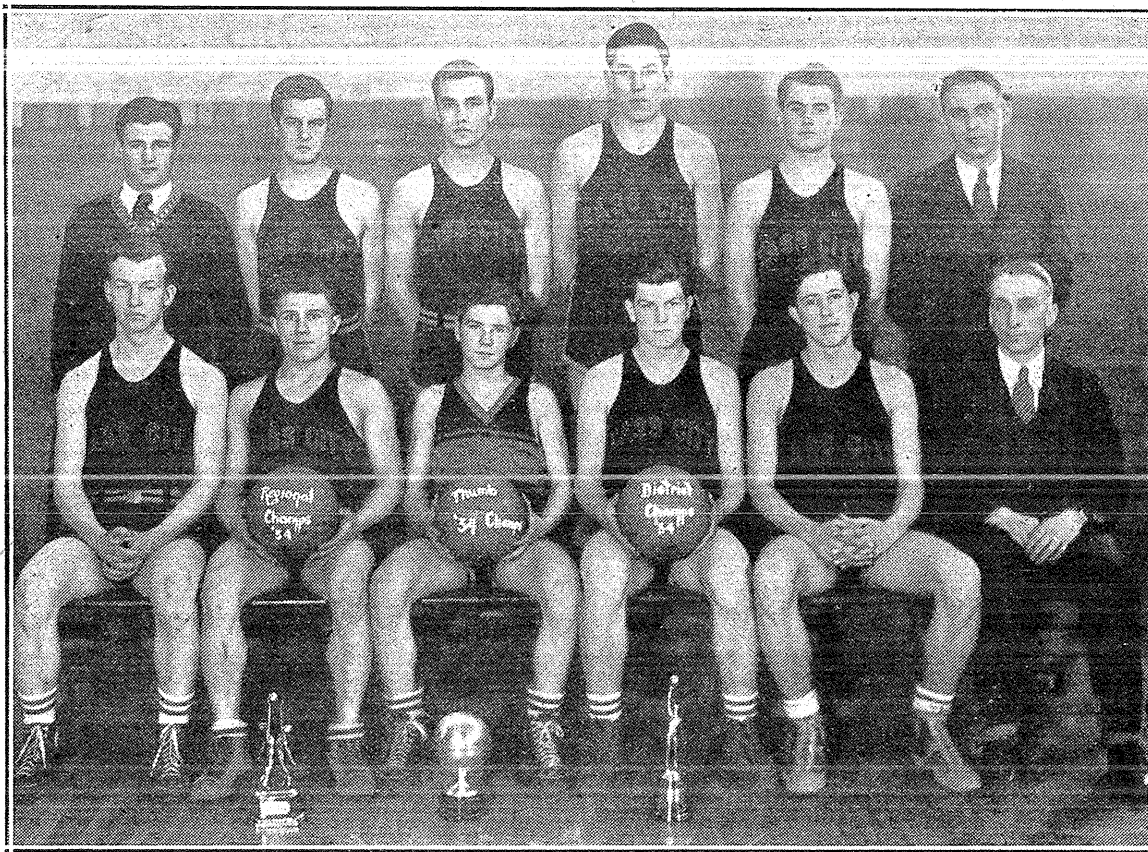

The amounts of total taxes and taxes returned unpaid in the other 20 townships in Tuscola county were printed in the Chronicle last week.

INSTALL NEW MACHINE.

Heller's Bakery has installed a new bread slicer and bread wrapping machine. This equipment replaces units of smaller sizes. In manufacturing and placing bread on the market, each loaf must be handled seven times. These new units help expedite the work at the bakery. Modern equipment has long been a policy observed by this factory.

John Kliebusch of Saginaw Victim of Accident Sunday.

John Kliebusch, 31, of Saginaw was killed and another young man and a young woman injured late Sunday afternoon when a Saginaw floral company's truck left the road near Watrousville and crashed against a roadside tree. All three were employees of the floral company and were returning from Caro where they had gone with flowers for the funeral of Circuit Judge Henry H. Smith. The two persons injured are: Frederick W. Schulz, driver of the truck, and Miss Ruth Wolter, a designer for the floral company. Both are Saginaw residents. Schulz has a broken right arm and numerous bruises, and Miss Wolter's injuries consist of a sprained ankle and bruises.

Officials report the accident occurred when the truck got off the edge of the pavement about a mile east of Watrousville, struck deep ruts in the shoulder of the road and struck its right side against a tree.

NO ONE-PARTY ELECTION BOARDS HEREAFTER

A new Michigan law provides that of the three inspectors appointed on an election board, not more than two may be members of the same political party.

Some townships, in recent years, have permitted more than one political party to be represented on their election boards. Such action now is a legal requirement.

Easter Sunrise Service Planned

A sunrise devotional meeting will be held at 6:30 next Sunday morning at the Presbyterian church by all the young people's societies of local churches in a combined group. OFFER DAIRYMEN PAY TO CUT PRODUCTION

Secretary Wallace Announces Plan to Benefit 90,000 Michigan Dairymen.

The plan now announced for the reduction of surplus stocks of dairy products by Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, means that 90,000 Michigan dairymen are offered federal benefit payments for adopting practices which will make their business more profitable.

Dairy products are the seventh basic crop for which a reduction plan has been initiated. Michigan has been concerned only with wheat and corn-hogs until Secretary Wallace's statement that the dairy plan is ready. The two other plans have been of minor interest in this state as compared with the one concerning dairymen.

Michigan is a leader in the dairy business and always has been in the first rank in adopting any practice which was for the best interests of dairymen.

Michigan dairymen are offered benefit payments for reducing the amount of dairy products produced this year as compared with the amounts produced in the base period of 1932-33. The reduction asked for is from 10 to 20 per cent. The payment offered is approximately 40 cents per pound of butterfat on the number of pounds reduced below the base production.

Payments will be made from a fund created by a tax of one cent per pound of butterfat in dairy products. This tax can be increased by Secretary Wallace as the plans get under way. An equivalent tax is placed upon oleomargarine to compensate for the one on butterfat.

Any Michigan dairyman is eligible for a contract. The contract payments will be made in two installments, one when the contract is made and the other when the contract is completed.

BETHEL GROUP HELD THEIR LAST MEETING

The members of the Bethel Group of Home Extension Work held their last meeting of this year's program with Mrs. Herbert Maharg, Thursday, March 22.

Eighteen of the twenty-two members were present and seven visitors—three ladies and four gentlemen.

The "tardy" contest ended three and four in favor of Mrs. John Profit's side. In the record kept by the captains in this contest, the losing side had only two members absent during the year's work.

The morning was spent in the usual business meeting and the leaders finished taking records and helping the ladies fill out their "requirement sheets" of the year's work.

In the afternoon, the ladies took up the last lesson on the subject of "Goals in Home Making."

The new lesson was the comparison of the different lives led by the women as "home makers" in the five books the class was expected to read, in this year's work. The books are: "Grandmother Brown's Hundred Years," by Harriet Connor Brown; "The Log Cabin in Lady," anonymous; "The Home-maker," Dorothy Canfield; "Life of Mrs. Richard," Ellen H. Richards; and "A Lantern in Her Hand," Bess Streeter Aldrich.

HIGH SCHOOL CHORUS COMING FOR GUEST PROGRAM

The Deckerville High School Chorus and Children's Carol Group, totalling seventy voices, is to be heard here in a recital of sacred music on Sunday evening, April 8, at 7:45 o'clock. The program is under the combined auspices of the Methodist, Presbyterian, Evangelical, and Baptist churches, and will be open to the public. Plans are tentatively made to hold the program at the Cass City High School building. The chorus numbers will be interpreted by a continuity of Scripture readings and by stereopticon slides of religious art. Details will be printed next week. Meantime, save the date, April 8, for this unique event.

SANILAC BUTTER CAMPAIGN A SUCCESS

89 Stores and Markets Are Merchant Members of 100% Dairy Club.

Secretary Marshall Miller reports the following facts: "The Sanilac County 100% Dairy Club campaign is another of those movements that go into history as 'more successful than its sponsors dared hope that it might be.'"

"On March 26 no less than 25 of Sanilac's towns and cities are 100 per cent butter towns. Eighty-nine grocery stores and meat markets within our boundaries are merchant members of the 100% Dairy Club selling butter exclusively. All the cities and larger towns have been on the 'Butter Only' list for several weeks. Only a few roadside stores and two small towns of consequence are still on the 'outside' and in none of these places is there more than one grocer who has as yet not promised to join the club. However, the membership is rising every day and the club hopes to have a truly 100% Butter County by early April.

"This campaign differs from others in that it touched practically every farm home, grocery store, and meat market in the county. At least 95% of all farmers solicited joined the club. The larger towns and the more prominent merchants joined first and the others followed along almost in exact order of their importance and at no time has there been as much as one single dollar in the treasury or sinking fund. All the work was done without any hope of receiving any direct payment. However, the job was done so well and finished so soon that the results were apparent in less than two weeks.

"The object of the campaign has been to have a truly 100% Butter County by early April.

CWA Labor in Tuscola Rec'd $107,000 in Four Months

From Nov. 23, 1933, to March 23, 1934, 18 payrolls of the Civil Works Administration in Tuscola county have distributed approximately $107,000 for labor by men, trucks and teams and for the administration purposes. Outlay for material on CWA projects are in addition to the above amount.

Three hundred seventy persons are included in the payroll for the week ending last night. About 300 will be employed in the county on Friday and Saturday of this week. CWA work ends Saturday night. After April 1, work of this kind will come under the control of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

While officials and engineers, as well as the unemployed men and their families of Tuscola county await details of the new plan that is intended to take up part of the welfare burden, local emergency relief commission administrators from all parts of the state will meet in Lansing Monday noon to hear the plans for the new scheme and receive instructions for the local problems. It is believed that the workmen will be drawn from county welfare lists and that they will be given work to meet their immediate necessities.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Gain in Industrial Employment Reported; Steel Industry Accused of Price Boosting and Fixing; Japan and U. S. Exchange Good Will Notes; Navy Bill Passes.

SECRETARY OF LABOR FRANCES PERKINS announces a jump of 345,000 in industrial employment and a gain of $12,000,000 in weekly pay rolls between January 15 and February 15.

"Factory employment increased 6.1 per cent while pay rolls rose 12.6 per cent," Secretary Perkins said in summing up the developments. She added that since March of last year 2,400,000 workers have returned to industrial jobs and $67,000,000 added to the weekly pay rolls.

Secretary Perkins pointed out that her survey of industrial employment covers only a small part of the total business field.

"The manufacturing and non-manufacturing industries covered," she explained, "normally employ only 20,000,000 of the 49,000,000 gainful workers of the country and therefore these totals do not indicate all changes in employment. To them should be added 10,000 workers that were reported by the interstate commerce commission to have been taken on during the last month by Class 1 steam railroads, and gains in agricultural employment which normally take place at this time with the beginning of farming activities in the southern states."

"The increases in employment and pay roll in the automobile industry were the outstanding gains of the month. The agricultural implement industry reported employment gains of 14.9 per cent and machine tools a rise of 15 per cent, continuing the gains which have marked every month since last May and June."

"Industries allied with building construction showed increased operations."

PRICE fixing and price boosting, tending to discriminate against small enterprises, are current practices in the steel industry under its NRA code, the federal trade commission declares in the report to the senate.

That there has been price fixing as well as increases in prices of steel products during the period covered by the inquiry, the commission declares, are conclusions warranted by ample facts. Under the provisions of the code and the methods of its application prices for any given product at any point of delivery are uniform. This is a direct violation of the order to desist from the Pittsburgh plus practice.

The steel code, according to the trade commission, is devised to lodge control of the industry with the United States Steel corporation and other large producers, to take business away from little manufacturers, to discriminate against certain fabricators and producing centers and to discriminate in favor of powerful customers like the automobile industry.

At a press conference at the White House the President indicated that he was not satisfied with the way the steel code is operating. There were signs the Executive might reopen the code and call for drastic revisions to protect consumers and independent manufacturers from price fixing and increased costs.

ASSURANCES of cordial regard and pledges of a desire for the settlement of any differences by amicable means were expressed in an exchange of notes between Secretary of State Hull and Koki Hirota, Japanese foreign minister. The exchange of notes was the outcome of interchanges initiated by Japan in furtherance of a foreign policy the general purpose of which is to conciliate the United States. Japan is intent upon persuading the United States to abandon the policy of obstruction of Japanese occupation of Manchuria and to recognize the Japanese dominated state of Manchukuo.

Hirota expressed the firm belief that "no question exists between our two countries that is fundamentally incapable of amicable solution."

Hull, in concurring with that statement, said he would be glad to receive "any suggestion calculated to maintain and to increase that friendliness and cordiality which have constantly marked, since the conclusion of our first treaty, the relations between our two countries."

Japan let it be known unofficially recently that it desires an increase in its naval ratio with the United States and Great Britain under the Washington and London naval treaties and would like to enter preliminary discussions.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, in a letter to the senate and house banking committees, asked congress to set up twelve industrial credit banks which he had been told would safeguard the jobs of 346,000 persons and create work for 378,000 more. Immediately after the President's wishes were known legislation was introduced in both houses giving the federal reserve system authority to create the banks, financing them by selling $140,000,000 of stock to the treasury.

The plight of the "small or medium size" industrialist was stressed by the President, and he cited results of a survey indicating that such industry was badly in need of $700,000,000 working capital.

A RAY of hope for unpaid school teachers appeared when a house subcommittee was ordered to draft legislation authorizing direct federal grants to needy school systems throughout the country. The primary purpose of the proposed grants would be to insure the operation of schools for a minimum term each year.

A serious curtailment of the educational facilities in many sections of the country has been forced by lack of funds, according to the committee, with consequent result that thousands of children are not receiving the proper amount of instruction. An inability to pay teachers is the most pressing problem.

A large part of the proposed federal grants will be available for the payment of salaries to unpaid teachers and for the re-employment of many who have been discharged because of lack of funds.

Under the direct grant measure proposed by the education committee, it was understood, the necessary funds would be supplied either by the federal Emergency Relief administration or the Public Works administration.

SPEAKING before an assembly of 5,000 cheering chief Fascists Premier Mussolini outlined a 60-year program of internal and external expansion which, he predicted, would in the Twenty-first century give Italy the "primacy of the world." That century, he said, will be a "black shirt era."

"In this age of plans," Il Duce declared, "I want to lay before you a plan not for five years or ten years but for 60 years carrying on to the Twenty-first century, at which time Italy will have the primacy of the world."

"Italy has no future in the West and North. Her future lies to the East and South in Asia and Africa. The vast resources of Africa must be valorized and Africa brought within the civilized circle."

"I do not refer to conquest of territory but to natural expansion. We demand that nations which have already arrived in Africa do not block at every step Italian expansion."

Here, it was said, he was referring particularly to France.

Internally, Mussolini said, immediate objectives of completion of swamp reclamation by 1940, new aqueducts and highways, plans to recreate Italian municipalities, complete rebuilding of 500,000 rural houses and repairs to 930,000 rural houses, a work of 30 years.

"Every rural person will have a clean and healthy house," he asserted. "Only in this way can the rush to the city be combated."

In the midst of a pandemonium of applause Mussolini said Fascism "became universal in 1929."

"But in this phenomenon," he continued, "it is necessary to distinguish positive from negative Fascism. Positive Fascism knows how to destroy the old and rebuild the new, whereas negative Fascism knows only how to destroy."

EXPANSION of the navy to treaty limitations is now assured with the passage by congress of the Vinson-Trammell bill. The bill calls for the construction of 102 warships and an increase of 1,184 in the naval airplane strength at a cost estimated at between $570,000,000 and $700,000,000 spread over five years.

The bill merely "authorizes" a treaty navy. Appropriations must follow in order to translate the action into ships and planes.

Private builders of ships and planes for the navy are limited in the bill to a 10 per cent profit on the "contract price," excepting on contracts involving $10,000 or less.

Alternate warships must be built in government navy yards, unless the President determines that emergency conditions require change of that schedule.

A BROAD national program for reducing the nation's supply of milk from 10 to 20 per cent in return for federal cash payments to the individual milk producer was proposed to the dairy industry of the country by the Agricultural Adjustment administration. The program was evolved after months of effort by AAA experts.

The plan suggested by the administration would involve some $165,000,000 at the outset, it was said, with prospects that the cost might rise as high as $300,000,000. It would be financed by a processing tax of a cent per pound on butter fat, gradually increasing as the program advanced, to a peak of 5 cents per pound.

THE man who works for a living will get a break if amendments to the income tax law proposed by the senate finance committee are finally adopted. These amendments would take more taxes from big estates and reduce the tax on smaller incomes.

Chairman Harrison estimated that the net result of the changes proposed would add $50,000,000 of annual revenue to the bill.

The committee voted unanimously for a proposal to continue the one-tenth of 1 per cent corporation capital stock and 5 per cent excess profits tax levy, which were repealed when repeal put liquor taxes into effect.

These taxes would have expired July 1. Under the new proposal they would become effective again July 1, 1935. Experts estimated the revenue from these taxes at $95,000,000.

The reduction in income taxes would come in the form of a 10 per cent credit to be allowed on earned income up to $20,000.

The estate amendment would increase taxes on such property to a maximum of 50 per cent as against the present 45 per cent, the raises ranging from 1 per cent on estates valued between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000 to 5 per cent on those over $10,000,000.

TRACTS urging the public to donate cash to promote the sport of flying in Germany were circulated in Berlin Sunday. Under the Versailles treaty public funds are not permitted to be used to stimulate aviation, but the leaflet points out that the treaty does not refer to private initiative, and adds:

"We are unable to construct military planes, but the development of the sport of flying and training German people as flyers is entirely dependent upon ourselves and our readiness to make sacrifices."

The demand for a German air force was also emphasized by Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, premier of Prussia and reichminister of aviation, in speaking at a flying exhibition at the Essen airport. Goering declared that Germany can enjoy no security, no peace, no equality until she is granted the right to defend herself in the air. This demand cannot be altered, the air minister proclaimed.

"If other countries are permitted the heaviest weapons of attack in the air, Germany at least must be given the right of defense," he said.

ANOTHER step forward in developing trade between the United States and Austria was taken with the recent decision of the Austro-American commercial interests in Vienna to found an American Chamber of Commerce in Vienna. Later a cognate institution is also to be established in Washington.

The decision to open up a chamber of commerce here is the result of lengthy study by a committee appointed some time ago "for founding a special organization to develop trade and tourist traffic between Austria and America."

SECRETARY MORGENTHAU reported to President Roosevelt that income tax receipts for the first quarter of the year were well above estimates and far more than a year ago.

Payments to the close of business March 15, the day when all returns were due, were $147,794,000. In announcing this figure on the basis of telegraphic reports from collectors, the treasury said corresponding collections last year were $99,847,000.

In 1933, however, the date for filing returns was extended from March 15 to March 31, after the bank holiday.

Treasury estimates of income tax payments for March are $250,000,000 as compared with $174,000,000 last March.

A NEW and serious controversy has arisen in the railroad industry. Unexpectedly, representatives of the railroad brotherhoods flatly rejected a compromise wage settlement suggested by President Roosevelt, calling for a continuation of their 10 per cent pay reduction temporarily, and demanded an immediate restoration of predepression wages for all railroad workers.

The action, taken by the Railway Labor Executives' association, threw negotiations looking to an amicable settlement of the rail wage situation into a virtual uproar.

Improved Uniform International LESSON

Lesson for April 1

THE CHRIST RISEN

(Easter Lesson.)
LESSON TEXT—John 20:1-29.
GOLDEN TEXT—If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God.—Col. 3:1.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Living With the Living Christ.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Reality of the Resurrection.

The resurrection of Christ is one of the foundation truths of Christianity. It is the grand proof that Christ was what he claimed to be, the Messiah, the Son of God (Matt. 12:29-40; John 2:19-21).

I. The Empty Tomb (vv. 1-10).

John does not enter into a description of the resurrection of Christ, or give any proof other than the empty tomb and that Jesus had repeatedly manifested himself afterward. To see the body of Christ disfigured with a spear thrust and nails prints, and the empty tomb, was all that faith needed. In this lesson John describes the processes of his own conviction touching Christ's resurrection.

1. The testimony of Mary Magdalene (vv. 1, 2). This woman, out of whom Jesus had cast seven demons (Mark 16:9; Luke 8:2), announced the fact of the empty tomb to Peter and John. Prompted by great love to him for his kindness to her, she went early to the tomb "even when it was yet dark." She had realized great good at his hand, therefore she could not rest until she had done her utmost for him. The measure of one's service for Christ is the degree in which he realizes the benefits conferred.

2. Personal investigation by Peter and John (vv. 3-10). The news of the empty tomb which Mary brought so moved John and Peter that they both ran to investigate. Their investigation assured them of the reality of the resurrection. The removal of the stone from the sepulcher, and the arrangement of the grave clothes, convinced them that this would not have been done by an enemy.

II. The Manifestations of the Risen Lord (vv. 11-29).

1. To Mary Magdalene (vv. 11-18). a. Mary weeping at the empty tomb (v. 11). Peter and John went home but Mary could not. She stood there weeping. She really should have been rejoicing that the grave was empty. Had the Lord's body been there she would have had real cause for weeping.

b. Mary questioned by the angels (vv. 12, 13). Through her tears she saw angels at the tomb who inquired as to the cause of her sorrow.

c. Jesus revealed himself to Mary (v. 14-16). She first saw the angels and then her eyes lighted upon the Lord. She did not recognize him in his resurrection body but his voice was familiar to her. As soon as he called her by name she recognized him and fell at his feet weeping.

d. Jesus forbade her to touch him (v. 17). This showed that she was now coming into a new relationship to him. Besides this, the disciples were still in doubt and sorrow. "Go tell my brethren" was the message she must carry.

e. Mary's testimony (v. 18). She told the disciples that she had seen the Lord.

2. To the disciples (vv. 19-29). This is the first appearance to the disciples as a body. For fear of the Jews they met in a private room and barred the door. While they were discussing the strange happenings of the day the Lord mysteriously appeared among them.

a. When Thomas was absent (vv. 19-23). 1. His message of peace (v. 19). He did not come with censure for their failure and desertion. Their conduct merited censure, but his consideration was too tender for that.

(2) He showed his hands and his side (v. 20). Having calmed their fears he gave them unmistakable evidence of his resurrection.

(3) He commissioned them (v. 21). "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you." This commission was not simply to the eleven but to all the believers (Luke 24:33).

4. He bestowed the Holy Spirit upon them (v. 22). He breathed on them and said unto them, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost." Only as empowered by the Holy Ghost can a disciple go forward as a successful witness for his Lord.

(5) The disciples' authority (v. 23). This authority was not by virtue of office but by virtue of having the Holy Ghost.

b. When Thomas was present (vv. 24-29). His absence deprived him of a vision of the Lord.

(1) The victory of sight and touch (vv. 24-28). Jesus graciously supplied the evidence which Thomas needed.

THROUGH A
Woman's Eyes
By JEAN NEWTON
ON HATRED AT 64

AFTER an exile of nearly fifteen years, Emma Goldman, the Anarchist, came back to the United States the other day under a temporary permit as a visitor.

The political convictions for which she was deported, she claims, have not changed. However, the impression of one who interviewed and observed her is that "at sixty-four her hatred of capitalism is less intense than in her youth," when she made the world aware of it.

We need know little about this particular woman to believe that. For at sixty-four any hatred is less intense; frequently it has completely burned itself out. And in its place is understanding.

At sixty-four another thing is likely to waver: that is self-assurance. It is much easier for the very young to be sure that they are right. One who has lived and experienced and hoped and dreamed and tried and succeeded and failed is more likely to make allowances for the other's viewpoint and question oneself.

There is the old saying: "If youth but knew, if age but could!" That is nowhere more significant than in its application to clash of ideas, one's relations with other people.

If youth but knew—that what it takes so for granted is not at all a cosmic certainty! "If youth but knew"—that what seems to us so burningly right, is from another viewpoint, no less burningly wrong. "If youth but knew"—that the world is not divided into the good and the bad, the right and the wrong, the sincere and the self-seeking, the honest and the corrupt—but instead that it is composed of many different-seeming humans who at heart are experiencing very similar hopes and fears and dreams, whose motives are more likely to be honest than otherwise, whose greatest crime may be making a mistake! How much energy that is wasted in conflict might be saved for constructive effort, how much struggle and heartache the human race might be saved. Boiled down, it might almost be possible for all of us to work together for a common good.

Early Garden Book

Charles Evelyn's "Lady Recreation," 1707, was the only English book written during the Eighteenth century for women gardeners.

Story of Silver

Mexican Bank Runner Carrying 2,000 Pesos in Silver.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

SILVER has been in the spotlight with gold, during recent months in which money standards, commodity prices, and international debts have been the leading topics of discussion among the world's financial experts.

Through its long, glittering career silver has swayed the destiny of men and nations.

In the romance and adventure of mining, man's bold quest for silver led to war, to daring exploration, and to conquest of savage lands.

First of metals widely used as money, silver slowly turned promiscuous barter into buying and selling, and in the rise of civilization, made it easier and simpler to enjoy fixed wages and prices.

Steadily, through the ages, man has used more and more silver in his arts and trades, till today it is seen in endless things, from sterling punchbells to motion-picture film.

Again today, as in the Free Silver frenzy of 1893, this pale, chaste metal looms large in the world's eye. How to raise its buying power, how to stabilize it, were some of the riddles for the World Monetary and Economic congress, assembled in London, last summer. Already Great Britain has paid us part of her debt in silver, and various nations urge its wider use in monetary systems.

Repeatedly in financial history men have sought cures for money maladies in some appeal to silver. For more than 2,000 years it was the world's chief medium of exchange. Listen today to native gossip in any bazaar of the Orient, and in tireless repetition you hear the local words for silver coins—kran, rupee, anna, piaster, peso, yen. Over and over you hear them, like a theme song of commerce.

In Far East bazaars silver still forms the fluent common coin of daily use; for our own convenience we still circulate dimes, quarters, half dollars, and, in the West, big cartwheel dollars, though silver was officially demonetized in 1873.

The Drama of Silver.

Trace the strange, checkered drama of silver through the centuries, and you see how vividly it parallels man's own dramatic quest of nature and his rise to higher standards of life.

Tradition says the world's first silver mine lay somewhere around the Mediterranean. The ancients linked silver with Luna; its symbol was a crescent moon. "Lunar caustic," or silver nitrate, is so derived. Man's search for it, according to Greek myths, was a moon-madness.

As early as 500 B. C. taxes from silver mines figured in the Athenian budget. Both Xenophon and Aristotle told of their wealth, and Strabo, writing about 30 B. C., tells of their being exhausted, as all mines eventually are.

For more than two centuries Mexico has been the world's greatest source of silver, mining in that time more than five billion dollars' worth. In 1932 she mined nearly half of all the world's output of new silver.

When his daughter married, a Mexican of the Alamos district lined the bridal chamber with silver plates and paved the path to the chapel with the same pale metal.

There is an oft-told tale in Mexico of a Spanish widow who owned the famous Dona Maria mine. She packed 40 mules with about four tons of gold and silver and set out for the coast, planning to spend the rest of her life in Spain. She disappeared mysteriously and so did her vast treasure.

Countless tunnels honeycomb the silver-laden hills about Pachuca, first worked by Spaniards in 1534. Here the Real del Monte rivals its neighbor, the Santa Gertrudis, as the world's leading silver mine. From it, in early days, a mulletier named Pedro Torrores grew so rich that he presented the king of Spain with several warships, and was given the title "Count of Santa Maria de Regia."

In Peru, as in Mexico, the ancients worked the mines and made exquisite figures of silver and gold.

The Incas are credited with having made gardens in which trees and plants were imitated in precious metals; the flowers and fruits were made in gold, the rest of the plant in silver.

Mines in the West.

In our western states, where we now mine the bulk of our silver, most of it is found mixed with other metals.

Our greatest straight silver mine is the Sunshine, near Kellogg, Idaho.

Our richest silver producer, however, is the Anaconda Copper Mining company; it obtains most of its silver from its copper-zinc-silver mines at Butte, Mont.

Accidental discovery, in 1859, of the colossal Comstock Silver Lode, on the eastern slope of Mount Davidson in Nevada, excited the whole world. The stupendous wealth it was to yield wrote a lurid chapter in the history of our West.

One mine, the Gould and Curry, bought for a bottle of whisky, an old horse, some blankets and $2,500 in cash, was valued at more than $7,500,000 four years later!

The singular tale of how this Comstock Lode was found never grows old. Lured west after the California gold rush of '49 came two Irishmen, O'Riley and McLaughlin. Working for gold on their claim by the Carson river, they threw aside some odd-looking, heavy blue rock as worthless.

Then along came Henry Comstock, a restless trapper and fur trader. Smarter than the others, he recognized the blue rock, staked a claim adjacent to theirs, and "by pure bluff induced them to waive their rights to the rock and be content with the surface gold they found."

That blue rock, rich silver ore, assayed nearly $4,000 a ton.

News of this epoch-making find spread like prairie fire, and fortune hunters scrambled for claims.

Silver Rush to Nevada.

As in the gold rush, so once more city merchants shut up shop, sailors deserted their ships, and clerks quit their desks, swelling the army that rushed pell-mell to Nevada, where new towns bloomed like mushrooms, with the saloons, quick-lunch stands, dance halls, and dives that made life lurid in the hectic, roaring camps.

Later, men struck that giant ore body, the Big Bonanza. No single silver ore body has ever poured forth wealth at such an astounding rate; in a single month ore valued at $6,000,000 was mined.

So vast was this underground quest for treasure that by 1880 the length of shafts and tunnels exceeded 150 miles. Often houses among surface camps tottered or collapsed where the undermined earth was sinking. In the Yellow Jacket shaft, 3,065 feet down, a flow of hot water was struck the temperature of which was 170 degrees Fahrenheit.

One discovery followed another, till Utah, Idaho, Montana, Colorado and other western states took rank as silver regions. Hostile Indians, death from cold, thirst, and hunger, duels to death over disputed claims, cold-blooded murder and the dynamiting of mills, as in the Coeur d'Alene strikes—all are warp and woof of our silver saga when the West was wild.

Their shafts only 100 feet apart, the Golden Chariot and Ida Elmore mines, near Eagle Mountain, Idaho, became the stage of a conflict that for novelty is without parallel in mining history. Far underground, where rival tunnels intercepted, men with guns fought to death over disputed silver. Hired gunmen patrolled the mines till, in 1893, United States soldiers came, and only martial law kept order.

Silver is so much a part of world trade that its changing price figures in the daily news, is quoted on the National Metal exchange in New York, and affects the prices of life's necessities among the hordes of the Orient. Because China retains the silver standard in her money, silver's price per ounce is of vital interest to all merchants everywhere who buy and sell in China.

JUDGE H. H. SMITH
DIED IN FLORIDA

Concluded from first page. Gates. He was admitted to the bar, Jan. 11, 1892. He was a circuit commissioner of Lapeer county for 10 years, city attorney of Caro six years and prosecutor of Tuscola county six years. His judicial district comprised Lapeer and Tuscola counties.

Judge Smith was married June 26, 1895, to Mary Gohs, of Mayville. They had four children, Mrs. C. G. Predmore, Detroit; Mrs. D. H. Smith, Grand Blanc; Eleanor C. and Maynard H. Smith.

He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and of the Masons, Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias.

Mr. Smith refused an appointment as circuit judge in 1927 when it was offered him by former Gov. Fred W. Green.

"There's a friend of mine here who deserves the appointment more than I do and I wish you would give it to him," Mr. Smith wrote the governor, so the appointment went to the late Judge Walter S. Wixon.

A year later Judge Wixon died. Mr. Smith was in Florida at that time also but Green sent him a message asking, "Now will you take the job?" He did.

Oldest Irish School Found
The search for the oldest school in the Irish Free State is believed to have ended with the inspection of the records of St. John's college, Kilkenny, which was founded by Piers, earl of Ormonde, in 1538.

Gasoline Consumption
An automobile running a certain distance at a speed of 60 miles per hour will consume approximately 20 per cent more gasoline than the same car going the same distance at a speed of 30 miles per hour.

Leaning Tower Due to Mishap
The leaning tower of Pisa was meant to rise straight from the ground, but sank on one side when only thirty-six feet high, so its builders just finished it that way.

With that thought cropping up I stopped at mother's in Saginaw Saturday and after proper greeting I asked, "Where is the Chronicle?"

She Was the Best Dog in the Show

during a dull moment in the evening (at a banquet) in Detroit, I hauled it forth and had a good read. A fellow sitting beside me, by name of Walton, stertypier for the Detroit News, became interested in the Chronicle and frankly stated that it was a very, very credible edition for a weekly.

What I liked best was the report of the council, which stated no tax for '34. And as always Elklund was first in returns for taxes to the county. Surely Cass City is the same old leader.

My sincere thanks to you for your thoughtfulness.

Last Friday night when the audience looked on the stage, they found juniors transformed into college boys and girls, all in a terrible tangle concerning a pretty girl named Delight (Lorraine Hoffman). All of the boys, Pinky (Bill Hyatt), Earl (Howard Taylor), Walter (Carlos Vader), Roy (Everett Leishman), and Polly (Arthur Battel), pursued her wherever she went, begging for a chance to escort her to some college event. But because she was waiting to go with Ramon Cortez (Curtis McNaughton), nephew of Mrs. Halliston (Eunice Schell), Delight succeeded in getting the boys to take some of her friends—Cynthia (Mary Mark), Jane (Pauline Dodge), and Minnie (Marian Milligan), in her place and the boys began to find out that some one besides Delight was good company. When she finally turned down all their invitations for Ramon, they planned to get the cook's dishwasher to portray the part of Ramon, thus greatly embarrassing Delight. The cook, Mrs. Brink (Genevieve Garety), was to identify the boy as her dishwasher at a certain time during the evening, but somehow the wires were crossed and the joke was on the boys and Mrs. Brink. It was the real Ramon they found at the party and the real Ramon who had fallen deeply in love with Delight.

The Junior class is to be congratulated on the success of their play. A great deal of the credit must go to Miss Perrin and Mr. Price, who directed the play, giving their time that it might come through as it did.

The first baseball and track conference was held Monday night to get a line-up on the material usable this year. By the looks of the number out, we will have plenty to pull Cass City High through a winning season again.

Summer School Plans Announced

Selected courses of study, taken from the regular list of college courses, which meet the demands for summer study will be offered in the Michigan State Summer School, June 18 to July 27.

Both undergraduates and graduate students, teachers, and students from other institutions will find the list of courses offered this year well adapted to their needs. Although the length of the summer term is only half that of the regular term, full credit is obtained in each course by spending twice the usual amount of time per day.

Fees for undergraduate students will be $16.00 and, for graduate students, $6.00. Students continuing graduate work after the close of the regular summer school may reenroll for a $5.00 fee. The total number of credits shall not exceed eight except by special permission of the summer school director. Ten credits is the maximum.

A limited number of rooms are available in campus dormitories for women students at $2.00 per person for double rooms and $3.00 for single rooms. Application for these rooms must be made through the office of Dean Elisabeth Conrad.

Complete information on the courses offered in the summer school will be found in the special Summer Session Catalog which may be obtained by request from Prof. A. H. Nelson, Director of Summer School.

PALM SUNDAY SERVICE WAS SUCCESSFUL

The all-parish observance of Palm Sunday at the Bethel M. E. church on March 25 was enthusiastically carried out by a large visiting delegation from the Cass City church, and a large local attendance which combined to make a capacity crowd. Chairs were placed in the center aisle, and several were seated on the pulpit platform.

Herbert Maharg welcomed the guests in behalf of the Bethel society. The Bethel choir, with Mrs. Wm. Profit, pianist, and directed by Mrs. Audley Rawson, sang an appropriate selection. An instrumental trio composed of two violins and piano furnished an offertory number. The violinists were Harland Charter and Delbert Rawson, with Retta Charter at the piano.

Deloris Sandham, as guest-soloist, sang "The Palms" in an effective and pleasing manner. Miss Pauline Sandham accompanied her. A stirring sermon on the meaning of Palm Sunday in Jesus' time and in the modern world was well received by the congregation. Several requests for another combined service at Bethel have been registered.

Next Sunday at 11:30 a. m., the Bethel congregation comes to the Cass City M. E. church for a combined service of Easter. Both Sunday schools of the parish meet at 10:30 a. m.

State Farms Need More Young Horses

Future scarcity of good work horses on Michigan farms was predicted by the animal husbandry department at Michigan State College and that time has now arrived.

Forty-six horses sold at a consignment sale at East Lansing by the Michigan Horse Breeders' Association brought an average price of $194.35. The horses ranged in age from weanlings to 12 years old.

Top price for mares was $245. A stallion sold for $410. Four matched teams averaged $355. Ten geldings averaged $159.

The probable future condition of the horse market was apparent two years ago when the college farm management department completed a survey of several hundred farms that proved horses in the state were dying faster than they were being replaced by colts. Another proof of the scarcity of desirable horses has been the large sums of money paid in the last three years by Michigan farmers for Western horses.

The study made by the farm management men showed that, on farms owning 1,517 horses in 1929, 39 colts were born and 71 horses died. In 1932, farms owning 2,480 horses had 136 losses by death and replaced only 78 with colts born.

Farmers owning the farms on which the surveys were made bought 207 horses in 1929 and 258 in 1932. The horses purchased averaged more than eight years old in 1929 and those in 1932 nearly eight. Horses of these ages do not improve with added years.

The average age of all horses owned on these farms in 1932 was 12.14 years. Seventeen per cent more horses died in 1932 than in 1929, as was to be expected when the ages increased and mature horses were bought for replacement.

Extension Bulletin No. 128, published by the college, give information on colt raising and is sent free to those requesting it from the Bulletin Clerk at East Lansing.

OFFER DAIRYMEN PAY TO CUT PRODUCTION

is signed and the second six months later. Contracts are made for a period of one year.

The method of reducing the output from their dairies is left to the option of each farmer. He can cull out part of his cows, change his feeding methods, or use any other means which will be the most financial benefit to himself.

Local men will be in charge of obtaining signatures on the contracts, and cooperation in the reduction plan is entirely voluntary. Local and county committees will be chosen as soon as the plan gets under way. This plan does not replace marketing agreements adopted under federal supervision for the selling of milk in cities. Such agreements operate independently from the contract agreements to reduce the total amounts of dairy products.

A fund has been created to finance the distribution of milk to underfed children in cities. Consumers' interests will be protected against unwarranted changes in the prices of dairy goods.

There are now in the United States 26,000,000 cows, the greatest number ever present, and enough young stock is now owned so that this number is sure to increase unless some control measures are adopted. The index price received by dairymen is now 69 as compared with 140 in 1923. The index price is computed by comparing the amount of basic commodities one pound of butterfat will buy now with the amount a pound of fat would buy in any selected year. The purchasing power of farm products is usually used in computing the index.

This outline of the dairy reduction plan is based upon the original announcement made by the Secretary of Agriculture. Changes in the regulations may be made before the contracts are ready for signature. Probably, several weeks will elapse before the contracts will be ready for distribution.

County agricultural agents will be kept informed of progress in the plans and announcements will be made through the newspapers.

Muscovy Duck Believed Native of South America

The Muscovy duck is found wild in South America, and this is believed to be its original source of habitat. Experiments made by cross mating proved them to be a distinct breed, as the offspring of such matings proved to be sterile. They were formerly known as wild musk ducks and, occasionally, are called Brazilian ducks. They feed in marshes and low lands, but nest in high locations. The females are kind and tractable, and the males, under two years old, can be controlled, but when older they are cross with children. During the breeding season they will attack animals and even persons who may trespass on their territory or disturb their mates.

There are colored and white Muscovys. The males are slightly larger than the females. The breeders require that the colored variety shall have pink bills shaded with dark or horn color; brown eyes; yellow shanks and toes, shaded with dark—sometimes almost black; body plumage is lustrous black. The white Muscovy has a pinkish white bill, blue eyes, orange or yellow shanks and toes, and pure white plumage.

About the head and face of the Muscovy ducks is a distinctive mark like the carbuncle on the head of the turkey. This is most pronounced in the mature males. They have a growth of feathers on the top of the head, which they can elevate at will. It is said that they will continue to breed for twelve years or more.

Chalk Cliffs in Denmark Rise Straight From Sea

Geologically speaking Denmark owes its existence to the mountains of Norway. Every stone in Denmark once was a tourist from Norway, arriving with the glaciers on a submarine reef of chalk and lime, until in a manner similar to the building of the Newfoundland sandbanks by the icebergs from Greenland, Denmark emerged.

This fact explains one of the most beautiful sights in the country—coasts of fantastic chalk formation in many places. The grandest of these formations is Moens Klint, and described as "the gem of Denmark." This is a range of white chalk cliffs 400 feet high and about five miles in length rising straight from the sea. The top is forest clad and extends in places to deep gorges which split up the masses of chalk, making points and pinnacles of weird loveliness, everywhere.

The union of the white chalk, green trees and vegetation and blue sea is most picturesque, especially if you view the whole from a passing steamship, at the hour of the setting sun.

It has now stood for thousands of years, but from time to time large masses go back to the sea, as when the well-known "Queen's Chair" formation fell in 1868, making a temporary island off the coast about 700 feet long, which has since disappeared.

Smallest Fly Biggest Enemy

Of the insect pests that have proven themselves enemies of man some are remarkably small for the damage they do. Such is the case of the chalcid fly, which, although the full grown insect is smaller than a single seed of clover or alfalfa, can cause serious trouble in a field of either of these crop plants.

For each chalcid fly egg is deposited in a seed of clover or alfalfa while the seed is still soft and green and the grub hatching from one of these eggs eats all of the soft juicy tissues with which it finds itself surrounded. It then uses the hollow shell of the seed as a shelter in which to pupate and does not emerge therefrom until it has gone through all the changes necessary for it to become a fully developed fly. This means that as soon as it leaves the seed in which it was hatched it is ready to start at once propagating its kind to the ruin of more seeds.

The Word "Turkey"

The root word "turk," meaning "power" or "to arrive at maturity," is found in many languages from the Caucasus to China. The term "Turki" was used to designate those tribes speaking the Turkic languages. Chinese history records these warlike tribes as existing from 1400 B. C. onward. They united and became independent about 550 A. D. The spelling "Turkey" is merely a corruption of "Turki." The fowl known as a turkey was so called because it was erroneously thought to have come from Turkey, although it was introduced into Europe from America in 1530.—Pathfinder Magazine.

The Black Watch

The origin of the Black Watch dates from 1720. They wore the dress of their country, a tartan of dark color, which gained for them the Gaelic appellation of Freeland Du, which translated is Black Watch, in contradistinction to the regular troops, who wore scarlet coats and were called Red soldiers. They engaged mostly in police work until 1740, when they were regularly organized into the Forty-second Regiment of the Line. Their war history began at the Battle of Waterloo.

been to increase the sale and use of dairy products especially butter. The Sandusky groceries report their March butter sales to be 143% of their December sales. Other 100% towns report similar increases. In less than two months butterfat doubled in price and the huge butter surplus in our large cities that was on New Years four times larger than usual has now faded down to normal, and none too soon for the spring flush of dairy production is already coming upon us. This increased sale of butter was caused mainly by the increased use of butter by farmers themselves. And the increases in the price of butterfat followed so promptly and mounted so high that the farmers' extra income was enough to pay for all the butter he used and still leave him considerable money in his pockets. But those extra dollars didn't stay in the country long. They soon walked right back to those 100% butter towns and the 100% grocers reaped their harvest and rewards in larger sales. This extra money and extra business has benefited every person in Sanilac county and it is only fair and proper that those individuals and concerns who co-operated in this great movement should be given their credit for the services that they rendered so freely and earnestly. The Michigan State College furnished literature for the essay test in the schools. The school teachers promoted the essay contest and marked and judged the essays. And about 1000 school children wrote those essays. About 150 farmers canvassed their school districts. The Michigan Milk Producers' Association furnished the window cards. The county agent and all his equipment and office help were at my service daily. Several business men and farmers contributed merchandise and money for the essay contest prizes and the 100% groceries large and small kindly did their bit to make the campaign results prominent and complete. To these grocers the dairymen of Sanilac county owe a tremendous debt. The newspapers with their efforts made the work easier. The ministers have added their support, and no less than 10,000 fathers and mothers, realizing that dairy products are our main source of income and also our best source of the essential food elements, have come to the front and saved the dairy market by supplying their tables with real butter and may they continue. It is hoped that no Sanilac county grocer will feel obliged in the future to pay out $6.00 for a license to deal in a product that undermines the market for Sanilac's own.

GRAPHIC GOLF

IN THE correct backswing the left hand should push the club back. This in itself makes the left hand extend itself, keeping it traveling back and up almost straight. The desired "slow back" will then be more or less automatic for this motion itself requires a slower motion than would be the case if the right hand lifted the clubhead back. The extended left arm thus also insures a wider arc than would be the case if it were bent or broken at the elbow. It is this wide arc that adds considerable momentum to the clubhead as the speed is gradually increased on the downswing. Golfers should force the left arm to do the greater part of the swinging to insure a full extension of the left arm and the subsequent arc that means distance.

Fire Destroys Farm House—

A fire, the cause of which is unknown, completely destroyed the farm house belonging to Miss Bridget Phelan, 1 1/4 miles west of town, last Thursday noon. Nearby neighbors first discovered that the roof of the house was ablaze and notified the occupants, Miss Bridget Phelan, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Wald and sons, George and Joseph, that their house was afire. Help arrived immediately but due to the high wind and the lack of water and long ladders, the flames could not be subdued. Most of the contents of the house were saved except Miss Phelan's clothing which was all burned. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

Why Children Need a Liquid Laxative

The temporary relief children get from some synthetic, habit-forming cathartic may cause bowel strain, and even set-up irritation in the kidneys. A properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement. There is no discomfort at the time and no weakness after. You don't have to give the child "a double dose" a day or two later.

Can constipation be corrected in children? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" say many mothers who have followed this sensible medical advice: 1. Select a good liquid laxative. 2. Give the dose you find suited to the system. 3. Gradually reduce the dose until the bowels are moving regularly without aid.

An approved liquid laxative (one that is widely used for children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. The mild laxative action of this excellent preparation is the best form of help for children—and grown-ups, too. The dose can be regulated for any age or need.

Your druggist has Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Member N. R. A.

CHAPTER III

Stranded Without Funds.
"A YOU step over to the depot and get me some postcards to send the children."

"Now, Ma, why didn't you speak of it when the train first stopped? They ain't time now. Besides, what do the girls care for a collection of post offices—"

"Pa, this is a border town. You might pick up something wild!" "I'll go!" offered Mary Brown, breaking away from the couple with whom she had been strolling, the next morning, up and down the station platform in El Paso.

She hurried to the booth where souvenir cards were on exhibition. Yes, here was a wild one. A gory bull-fight in Juarez.

"B-o-a-r-d!" Vaguely at first the call tapped on Mary's consciousness. Gradually she realized what she was hearing, and dashed toward the nearest gate. She pushed at it, almost knocking herself down. It did not open. She looked for a fastening; found none. The train was moving. She pulled at the gate, pushed at the gate, yanked at the gate. It would not budge. She made frantic gestures at the departing train.

Now some one was leaping over the railing of the observation car, running toward her.

"This is an exit, not an entrance," Denis Craig was explaining. "It opens only from the outside in. Here—" and he pushed it open, seized Mary by the arm, and together they ran across the intervening tracks—to stop shortly with that sense of foolishness one experiences only after he has set off down the rails after a departed train.

"We're—we're left!" "Does sort of look that way, doesn't it?" smiled the engaging young man. "But don't look so dismayed. There's another train in a few hours. I'll wire the conductor to put off our luggage at the next stop. Then we'll take a taxi and go to the town. Be rather fun to go across the border and prowl around Juarez, don't you think?"

She wanted ridiculously, overwhelmingly, to say yes. But an unusual perversity seized her. The intriguing young man was so cocksure! He took it absolutely for granted that she'd trust herself to him. Let him discover there was one person in the world immune to that engaging personality.

Cool as a long slim icicle she informed him, "I wouldn't think of troubling you further. And—I can send my own telegram—"

She gave a startled cry. In her hands were three souvenir postcards—nothing else.

"My bag!" she gasped. "I—I must have left it at the magazine stall!" She was off on the run, Denis Craig beside her.

But the bag was not there. "Some one has picked it up, of course," said Craig when the clerk had made a thorough search.

"But—my money! My ticket! Everything! If I was at sea before—I'm sunk now!"

"And just where do I come in, anyway?" whimsically. "Won't you believe it is my pleasure to see you through this emergency? I'll send this wire. Then we'll go to a bank where I can have a traveler's check cashed, and advance you money—"

"Oh, no!" she protested.

"Loan it to you I mean. Don't be silly. Do I look like a crook? It certainly would hurt my ego a lot to feel you wouldn't trust me enough to let me help you through this minor dilemma."

"Minor! When I've just lost every cent I have in the world—and maybe my job, too? I was due to report at once—and now there are two thousand miles between me and it!"

"We'll get you there on time."

"If you'll be so good as to include mention of my bag, also, in your wire," Mary capitulated. "After that I can manage."

"How?" she inquired.

Just how did a stranded girl in a strange town manage?

Mary watched Denis Craig's hands as he dashed off the wire. Slim sensitive fingers that she liked. But there wasn't a thing about the looks or manners of this man which did not coax her to like him. In a minute now, when he'd look up with that teasing, questioning smile, she must tell him how she was going to manage without his help. How, indeed?

Suddenly Mary knew. It came to her in an instant. How stupid she had been.

"I shall wire my father for funds. And you may go forth and do the town, and Mexico, with a free mind."

"May I ask just what you intend to do?"

In her most sophisticated manner, "Why, go to a hotel, wire my father for a loan, and, when it comes, resume my journey."

"It sounds simple enough. See here, Miss Brown, why do you treat me as if I were an octopus, trying to kidnap you with all eight arms at once? Why did you dislike me the minute you laid eyes on me?"

"You were handing your enthralled audience rather a hard-boiled line about money, if I remember correctly."

"Oh, that!" He puckered his forehead, his keen eyes studying her. "You—you have rather a money-complex, surely you must concede, in the present circumstances, that money does come in handy—upon occasion."

She flushed furiously.

They had been walking slowly toward the door of the station. Denis Craig signaled a taxi.

"Let me tell you again how sorry I am to have delayed you. Good luck, and good-by."

He made an impatient gesture, and piloted her toward the taxi.

"I believe I declined your kind invitation to see the town."

"Oh, I understood perfectly when you dashed cold water on the plan. I'm taking you to a hotel, which," turning to the driver, "is your best hotel?"

Without waiting to hear the answer, he said, "Take us there."

"But why should you bother to come with me—"

Craig straightened, and halted the foot about to enter the taxi. "Do you really want to insult me?" he demanded seriously, and compunction swept Mary.

"Of course I don't. I'm sorry. I'm not usually such a disagreeable person. Good-by—and thank you." She held out her hand.

He took it without animosity. "If you should decide to take a chance on my integrity, meet me here for that next train."

He placed the driver, conferred with him briefly, and went forward, himself to enter another taxi, one which was not so jammed in traffic. So Mary returned his cordial wave as he departed first. And then perversely felt lonely as she watched him whizz around the corner. Well, what did it matter? Probably their trails never would cross again.

By a somewhat meandering route, it seemed to her, the taxi reached the Orendorff hotel. Mary alighted and went inside.

At the desk she asked for a room with all the assurance of the rich David Brown's daughter.

"Your room has been reserved, Miss Brown."

"You must be mistaken. It couldn't have been."

"Yes'm. By a young man named Craig."

"Indeed!" He had sent her by a meandering route, then.

"Yes'm. He explained the circumstances of your being left and all. Said you evidently hadn't traveled a lot, Miss Brown, and didn't realize that a young woman without luggage, without even a hat or coat or pocketbook, couldn't walk into a hotel and register for a room. He paid for two days, and left a little extra. I think he said something about telegrams and things. The boy is waiting to show you up, Miss Brown."

Mary followed, as embarrassed as if she really hadn't traveled at all. Denis Craig had scored, after all. Her fury against him mounted unreasonably considering that he had handled the situation with no little delicacy and tact.

But after a time of thinking things over with her analytical mind, fury waned. What did Denis Craig, per se, matter?

With a snap of her fingers she dismissed him, and gave her attention to business affairs. She didn't like this notion of having to call upon her father for aid almost before she was out of his sight. But she could think of no other plausible solution. So she dispatched her wire.

The only person to step off the train at Foggy Gulch was Mary Brown. She stood for a moment and surveyed the town. Close inspection would have shown all houses in Foggy Gulch to be divided into three classes: those which were painted; those which were whitewashed; and the one which had a bathroom with running water in it.

Leaving her bags, Mary crossed the dusty street.

A city father stirred his hat awkwardly and grunted a "Do." He was dressed in a faded shirt and baggy old trousers. Little beady eyes set far back in his head surveyed Mary critically.

"Lookin' for somebody?" he asked crisply. "I c'n tell you where to find 'em."

"Can you direct me to the offices of the Paradise Valley Project?" "Yes, ma'am! Take that road and follow it for six miles—"

"Six miles. And you come to the boundaries of the old James Ranch these newcomers have decorated with the hifalutin' name of Paradise Valley. Then you go on about an eighth of a mile, till you come to a driveway. Turn up the driveway a spell, and there you are, at the old ranch house. You can't miss it. It's the only house on twenty-five thousand acres—ceptin' the one the kingpin's havin' built for himself with his proceeds from suckers."

"Can I get a taxi somewhere?" "Ain't no taxi service here. What need of it in a town of two hundred, an' no one wantin' to go any place nohow?"

"Can you direct me to some one who owns a car?"

"Well," hitching up his suspenders importantly, "I own one."

"You do?"

"Yes, ma'am!"

"I was wondering, Mr.—Mr.—"

"Johnson. Hank Johnson."

"And my name is Mary Brown. Mr. Johnson, couldn't I engage you to drive me out to the project?"

"No!" he shot out at her. "I ain't runnin' no taxi service." He turned away abruptly, disappearing down an alley.

But before Mary had recovered her breath this amazing person called back over his shoulder, "You wait over there by your baggage and I'll pick you up. But I'll charge you a plenty."

A group of children manifested their interest in such a vagary as Mary Brown in Foggy Gulch, furtively to contemplate intriguing details—gay belt, buckle, gleaming wrist watch, and the perky little feather in her hat.

Surrounded, Mary was chatting with them when Hank Johnson drove up in a shiny motor car.

The road led out through the hills, crookedly, mysteriously rounding curves, climbing small eminences, crossing clear little mountain streams.

"Beautiful!" Mary cried.

"What's beauty?" demanded her companion. "No money in it!"

Another person whose god was money!

"You must 'a' been readin' the kingpin's blarney! Here," as they turned off the road into a private drive, "is the old James ranch house. The offices," contemptuously, "of the Paradise Valley Project. Where," facing her belligerently, "are you calculatin' on livin', young lady?"

He sounded like a crabbed old bachelor. Mary asked, curiously, "Have you a family, Mr. Johnson?"

"My wife's dead!" shortly. "You haven't told me where you figure you can live."

"Where do the engineers live?" "Single ones live in camps on the ranch. You can't live there, the only girl. Married ones live in Foggy Gulch, since the kingpin won't have no woman in his paradise."

"Then I shall live in Foggy Gulch."

"How would you get back and forth?"

"Have cars."

Mary hadn't thought of this. She didn't intend to think of it now. That was a mere detail to be taken up later. Now, just before her, lay a crucial moment. She flung up her head, straightened her shoulders to bolster up her courage, and stepped from the car.

"Wait, please, Mr. Johnson."

"Mebbe I will. Mebbe not. If I do, I'll charge you plenty."

With this comforting assurance, Mary left her traveling taxi man parked under a live oak, and went across the veranda of the veteran ranch house.

She paused in the hallway and looked about her. Over their drawings or blue-prints or estimates leaned khaki-clad, putteed engineers. One of them came quickly forward.

"Something I can do for you?" "May I see Mr. Stark?" "This way."

Mary ran the gamut of curious eyes through two rooms toward a smaller one at the rear. She didn't mind the curiosity. These boys would get used to a girl in the profession just as her classmates had done. But she walked among them threatened to be overcome with inner disturbance. It had seemed such a trivial thing at home—the bit of information about this job she had withheld from her father. It did not seem trivial now. It loomed, even though her father had assured her John Stark was the right sort.

Her guide tapped at the door which bore the sign in important letters: John Stark, Chief Engineer.

"Come!" came the command so sharp and brusque as to make Mary jump.

She entered.

A large rugged man with gray hair, ominous gray brows and a bristling stub of mustache sprang to his feet in a soldierly fashion and regarded her with his piercing eyes.

Mary produced his letter and handed it to him silently. The chief glanced it through and looked at her with inquiry. "What," his unspoken question, "have you to do with this letter I wrote to one M. Brown?"

"I," said Mary unfalteringly, "am M. Brown. I have reported for work, according to orders."

"Work! A girl! A girl-engineer? A girl—on this man's job?" He laughed at the sheer monstrosity. It was in the days before girls generally had discovered that they can do other things than teach school and pound typewriters.

"As I told you in my application, I am a graduate of a technical school."

"And you thought you'd get yourself a man's job by signing merely your initial?"

"An engineering job," Mary corrected.

"Deliberately you deceived me? What good did you think it could possibly do you?"

"Just what it did. It got me a job. I'd tried in vain for one, divulging that I was a girl. I was just an interesting anomaly. So I tried this scheme. It worked. You hired me, you know, Mr. Stark."

"All right," he answered crisply. "Have it so, if you will. But remember this. I can hire, and I can fire. And—you're dismissed, M. Brown."

Mary paled. She shifted. She hadn't—oh, she hadn't expected this! Hadn't thought he really would do this! Her eyes roamed the room desperately. She wasn't used to cutting inconsideration! She was used—

A little smile came to her lips. Why, she could make this towering man right-about-face in a second! All she needed to do was to tell him that she was the daughter of his old friend, David Brown. That annihilated all defenses, always. She opened her lips—And closed them, suddenly, fearfully. Just in time she remembered that she no longer was using that sesame. The fire came back to her eyes.

"You wouldn't do that, Mr. Stark! You couldn't be so unfair as to dismiss me without notice! I—have to have a job! I need the money. You can—give me a trial. Why condemn me without a hearing? Maybe I really do know my stuff."

"You must know, too, that this," sternly, "is no place for a girl."

"I've worked with male engineers all through school."

"School! Mere child's play. This is a job. He laughed. "I suppose you figure on some soft berth in the office. Well, my pink ears have to be ready to go into the field whenever they're sent."

"My specialty," said Mary quietly, "is design. But I don't mind going into the field. I can do anything a man can do. I'm big. Strong. My health is perfect."

He motioned her to desist. "That is beside the point, Miss Brown. You don't understand. It's against my precedent to have a girl on the job. My word! The complications a girl could introduce! We have plenty of grief without the upsetting influence of the fair sex."

"The promoter of this estate," he now thought to argue, "won't so much as let an engineer's wife live on the job, until the travail chaos is over. What do you think he'd say to you?"

"Tell him," placidly, "that I'm here, not in the capacity of an engineer's wife, but of an engineer."

"Suppose," with a triumphant narrowing of his eyes at her, "you tell him that. He's coming down the path now."

An outside door opened. Mary turned toward it; gasped.

Denis Craig had waited in surprise upon the threshold.
