

TUSCOLA OPPOSED

BONDING, 13 TO 1

Only One County in Lower Peninsula Favored the Proposition.

The Thumb of Michigan registered a decided "no" vote on the state's $38,000,000 Public Works bonding program at the special election on Monday. The proposition lost out in the state by a vote of five to one.

The only lower peninsula county to support the proposal was Otsego. A majority of the upper peninsula counties supported the measure.

Early returns in 17 of the 23 townships of Tuscola county indicate that Tuscola county defeated the bonding proposition by a 13 to one vote. Here's how they voted:

Almer	142	6
Columbia	261	3
Dayton	125	3
Denmark	191	10

Large institutional building programs contemplated for seven counties apparently failed to influence the votes in those regions. It had been proposed to spend $1,729,000 in Kalamazoo county, $1,493,000 in Lapeer, $1,191,000 in Luce, $2,157,000 in Oakland, $2,570,000 in Tuscola, $3,655,000 in Washtenaw and $1,660,000 in Wayne.

County Dairy Meeting at Caro to Discuss Several Important Questions

A county-wide dairy meeting to be held in the court room in Caro Tuesday evening, May 8, will take up several questions which are of importance to the dairymen of Tuscola at this time among which is the government's dairy program. What is this dairy program, how far will it go, and what will it do? Will there be any processing tax on dairy products? Farmers are invited to come to the meeting and hear these discussed. The second problem which dairymen in Tuscola county will be interested in is the question of 4-H club building for the county fair grounds to house 4-H club live stock. Holstein and Jersey breeders alike will want to consider a

Youth Group to Present Drama at Cass City on Saturday Afternoon

A one-act play entitled "What Price Revenue?" will be presented at Cass City Saturday afternoon, May 5, at 4:00 p. m. in the Methodist church as a part of the District Epworth League convention program. The drama-hour from four until five o'clock is open to the public and a good attendance is solicited. The talent which is available on the convention basis would probably not be secured locally, and the people of the Cass City community are cordially urged to take advantage of this treat.

The play is based on an actual life happening. Dorothy Day was run down and killed as she was standing in a safety zone with her mother. A drunken driver was the offender, and the play sets forth the conclusion of the court trial in the case. The drama has been shown over southern Michigan in more than 30 performances in the past six months, and has been received enthusiastically wherever shown.

BROOKFIELD FARMER KILLED IN RUNAWAY

Jay R. Crawford Met Instant Death in Trying to Stop Team Saturday.

Jay R. Crawford, a Brookfield township farmer, residing south of Owendale, was instantly killed Saturday noon when he was run over by the wheel of a wagon while trying to stop a runaway team. His skull was crushed and he received other head injuries.

Mr. Crawford's team became frightened while his son, Hugh, 16, was picking up rubbish near the team and a small daughter was on the back end of the wagon. Fearful of injuries to the children, Mr. Crawford attempted to stop the horses and was knocked down and instantly killed. The team was stopped by a neighbor a mile away. The little girl was still in the wagon after travelling that distance, but was unhurt.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at two o'clock from the Brookfield church. Rev. Ray Wilson officiated and burial was in the Williamson cemetery beside Mr. Crawford's wife, who passed away in December, 1933.

Mr. Crawford was born in Brookfield township and has always made his home there. He would have celebrated his 42nd birthday had he lived until Sunday.

On August 5, 1914, he was united in marriage with Miss Gertrude Ross. Mr. Crawford was a member of the Grange and the Orangemen fraternity.

He is survived by four children, Inez, Hugh, Eunice and Vera, all at home; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Crawford, of Brookfield; two brothers, Allen Crawford of Flint and Percy Crawford of Pontiac; and two sisters, Mrs. Ernal Lloyd of Pontiac and Mrs. Homer Muntz of Cass City.

Relatives and friends from a distance in attendance at the funeral included Mr. and Mrs. James Vorhes, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ballagh, and Mr. and Mrs. Ernal Lloyd, all of Pontiac; Mr. and Mrs. Allen Crawford, Mrs. Susan Dobson, and Mr. and Mrs. James Murry, all of Flint; Mr. and Mrs. Percy Crawford of Twining; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Harrison of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Jay Lishness and Mr. and Mrs. George Smith, all of Lapeer; Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Joynt and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Joynt, all of Midland.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

George W. DesJardines, Candidate for Circuit Judge.

Upon the death of our late Judge, The Hon. Henry H. Smith, a large number of the practicing lawyers, many public officials and numerous persons in all walks of life, voluntarily recommended to the Governor my appointment to fill the vacancy. Also they have indicated to me that my candidacy for this office would be acceptable to the citizens of this circuit. For this I am deeply grateful. Frankly, I have steadfastly looked forward to the time when this honor might be mine. I believe I am entirely consistent in seeking election.

The circuit judgeship is not a political plum, and it should not be disposed of on that basis. Political considerations should be cast aside. The selections should be based solely upon qualification and experience, and ability to perform the duties of this high office. As to biography, I am 39 years of age and have practiced law since January, 1916, except for a period of 20 months in the army. My policy as a practicing lawyer has been to honestly serve my clients, discourage useless and costly litigation and I have always believed that "a fair compromise was better than a great victory."

Judge Williams in announcing his candidacy in 1917, said: "Following the custom of my predecessors, and I think of persons generally in seeking judicial office, I shall not make a personal canvass—I think this is a very proper custom and it doubtlessly grows out of the fact that it is better that a judge should not know whether a litigant in his court voted for him or not."

This is a dignified and intelligent doctrine and will serve as my guide. Personalities will have no part in my campaign. If you are interested in my success, I must have your assistance. Respectfully yours, GEORGE W. DESJARDINES.—Advertisement.

IMPROVED BUSINESS CONDITIONS IN MICHIGAN

Improved business conditions are reflected in a survey of statistics of the corporation division of the Department of State for the first two weeks of April 1934 as compared with the same period in 1933.

During the first two weeks of April this year 26 corporations operating under charters from other states, requested permission to do business in Michigan. During the same period last year, but nine such requests were received. This year 192 new corporations were enfranchised or three more than during the same period in 1933 while 34 corporations this year were allowed to increase their capitalization as compared with 18 in the first two weeks of April, 1933. In one instance a company's capitalization was increased $1,000,000.

DAIRY PLAN DELAYED, PRODUCERS DISAGREE

Rep. at Regional Meetings See Production Control from Different Viewpoints.

No program involving the payment of benefits for the reduction of dairy products will be undertaken, at present, is the announcement made by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration at Washington to R. J. Baldwin, director of extension work in Michigan.

This decision has been made after Washington officials studied the reports of regional meetings at which the proposed plan was explained to representatives of the dairy business. Michigan men attended the meeting held at Indianapolis.

At these meetings, it became apparent that opposition to the plan would develop from producers of some dairy products. Most of the objections to the plan, as presented, came from representatives of fluid milk interests.

Officials of fluid milk producers' organizations stated that their members had already taken the steps to reduce production that the federal men now asked everyone to take. The plan, therefore, would compel these men to further reduce their production which had already

May 15 Is Last Date to Apply for Government Seed Loans

Word has been received at the county agricultural agent's office at Caro from the Farm Credit Administration at Washington to the effect that May 15 is the last day on which farmers can make application for Government seed loans. These loans have been written in the county agricultural agent's office as in previous years and to date approximately 90 applications have been sent to Washington for about $10,000.

Only the smaller loans have been written through this agency this year due to the fact that a cooperative loan association has been set up in Lapeer, Tuscola and Genesee counties called the Lapeer Production Credit Association. This new

YOUNG MAN LOSES LEG IN AUTO CRASH

Indianfields Twp. Resident Hurt While Taking Flat Tire from Car.

Chester Wilk, a young man of Indianfields township, is in an Ann Arbor hospital with an amputated leg as the result of an automobile accident which occurred ½ mile south and 2¼ miles west of Wilmot Saturday at midnight. Infection placed the young man in a very serious condition, but he was reported somewhat improved on Wednesday to Robert Brown of Caro, who was in Ann Arbor that day.

Chester Wilk was a passenger with three others in the Ford coach of Carl Smith of Kingston that stopped on the highway west of Wilmot with a flat tire. The car was on the right side of the road. The young men stopped a car coming from the east in order to get a rim wrench. This car stopped in the middle of the road with bright lights shining. Harold Chapin, driving west toward Wilmot, came along at this time. Blinded by the bright lights of the car headed towards the west, Chapin did not see the Smith car, which carried no illuminated tail light, until within a short distance of the Ford. He applied the brakes but could not stop his car before he hit Chester Wilk, who was standing near the left fender of the Smith car trying to get the tire off the automobile. Wilk's leg was fractured.

Harold Chapin's car, officers said, didn't hit the Smith car hard enough to throw Chapin's wife and two children out of the front seat of the Chapin car. The car with the bright lights left as soon as the accident occurred and occupants of the two cars that collided did not learn the name of the driver or occupants.

Musical Groups Are Busy Here

Fifty members of the Boys' and Girls' Glee Clubs of the Cass City High School left here Thursday afternoon to participate in the musical festival at Bad Axe that afternoon and evening. Similar clubs from several high schools in the Thumb of Michigan were present and gave numbers on the program.

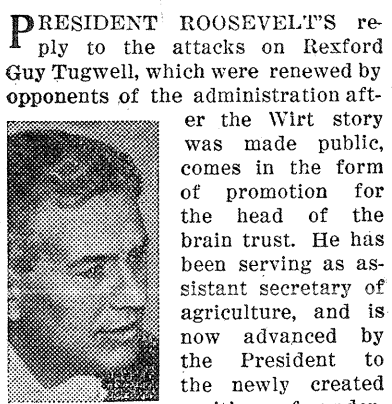

Members of the Cass City Ladies' Band have been practicing during the winter and spring months getting ready for the summer season. The public is awaiting the first appearance of the band in the open air concerts this summer. Their programs last season were much enjoyed.

The glee clubs and the band combined in presenting a Sunday evening concert in the Evangelical church on April 22. The program was greatly appreciated and many expressed the wish that more of these entertainments would be presented before the year ends.

President Shows Confidence in Tugwell by Promoting Him—High Tax Senators Win a Victory—National Milk Control Program Withdrawn.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

R. G. Tugwell

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S reply to the attacks on Rexford Guy Tugwell, which were renewed by opponents of the administration after the Wirt story was made public, comes in the form of promotion for the head of the brain trust. He has been serving as assistant secretary of agriculture, and is now advanced by the President to the newly created position of undersecretary of agriculture, his salary being increased from $7,000 to $10,000 a year. A new assistant secretary can now be appointed who will relieve Mr. Wallace and Mr. Tugwell of some of their heavy duties. The department has been considered understaffed. The post of undersecretary was created by a recent act of congress.

Tugwell's appointment will have to be confirmed in the senate, and it was considered certain the Republicans would take advantage of the opportunity to make fresh attacks on him and his theories of government.

The President also advanced Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, a Boston banker, from assistant secretary to undersecretary of the treasury, which position has been vacant since Raymond Moley stepped out. The higher personnel of that department is now being placed on a permanent basis for the first time since Henry Morgenthau, Jr., became his head.

MEMBERS of the American Society of Newspaper Editors assembled in Washington heard a warm and elaborate defense of the New Deal delivered by Prof. Rexford G. Tugwell, assistant secretary of agriculture, who is in part responsible for most of the recovery measures adopted by the present administration. Denying that those who are advising the President seek to bring about radical changes in the life and economic policies of the American people, Professor Tugwell described himself as a "thorough conservative."

"We have a saving irreverence of authority," said Professor Tugwell in speaking of the characteristics of the American people, "which gets us out of holes. These basic traits determine the structure of our laws and of our government. No one, with the slightest sense of history, would try to fit such a people into a regimented scheme, would try to think for them instead of getting them to think for themselves."

"The New Deal is not something which can establish itself in the mind of a dictator or a small governing group. That was the fatal theory of the system from which we are turning away. Its base has to be as broad as the economy which has to be brought under control and as deep as the minds and the hearts of the people whom it affects."

VICTORY in the conference was won by the senate high tax bloc, for the house conferees accepted virtually all the senate increases in senate and gift taxes, the capital stock and excess profits taxes and liberal compromises over income-tax publicity and consolidated returns.

The conference agreement was complete except for the Couzens amendment, adding 10 per cent to all individual income-tax returns next year. The house will take a separate vote on this, and it was believed the senate would not insist on it if it were rejected by the house.

With the revenue bill thus disposed of, the senate finance committee began public hearings on the administration's reciprocal tariff bill, which the house has passed.

SENATORS who urge the re-monetization of silver held a conference with President Roosevelt, but received from him no encouragement for silver legislation, though no conclusion was reached. The possibility of silver purchases was discussed and the President indicated a disposition to give this matter consideration, but on the whole there was no indication the government will embark on such a policy.

The silver senators were not at all satisfied with the President's attitude and held a meeting at which eight voted to support mandatory legislation for the benefit of silver.

Later it was reliably stated that the President was maturing a plan for international stabilization of currencies and also that silver figures prominently in it. Mr. Roosevelt, it was revealed, favors the inclusion of silver in the metal base of currency issues to the extent of 30 per cent, the remaining 70 per cent to be gold. This change can be safely made, however, the President points out, only by international agreement whereby all the signatory nations would admit silver to their reserves against which paper money is issued.

In the London economic and monetary conference Senator Key Pittman offered such a plan, proposing that central banks keep 20 per cent, or one-fifth, of their metal cover or reserve for currency in silver. The proposal was not acted on at the conference.

CHESTER C. DAVIS, head of the Farm Adjustment administration, announced that the national milk control program designed to help dairy farmers had been withdrawn "because we do not feel that it has sufficient support from the farmers." If sentiment changes it may be revived later, but for the present, only minor features are to be carried out. These include dairy purchases for relief purposes and reduction in the number of diseased cattle.

The program, worked out after months of study and argument, called for benefit payments of from $165,000,000 to $300,000,000 to dairy-men who joined in the plan. In return, the producers were to reduce their milk flow 10 per cent below the peak months of the 1932-1933 period.

As in the case of other farm programs, the funds for benefit payments were to come from a processing tax. This was to be one cent a pound on butterfat and the figure was to be raised gradually to five cents a pound.

A statement issued by the farm administration said the milk decision "is in accord with the administration's fixed policy to attempt no adjustment program which does not have the support of a substantial majority of those engaged in the industry."

CUBA asked for the extradition of Gerardo Machado, deposed president of the island republic, so a general police alarm was sent out from Washington for his arrest. United States marshals went first to the apartment he had been occupying in New York, and were told by his secretary, Julio Fernandez, that he had left for parts unknown. Federal port authorities and border officials were told to watch for the fugitive. If they can get him back, the Cuban authorities intend to try Machado on charges of murder based on wholesale shootings which occurred a few days before he fled from the island. They also plan to ask extradition of Gen. Alberto Herrera, Machado's former chief of staff, who like his master took refuge in the United States.

Gerardo Machado

Machado has lived in seclusion with members of his family in the Bahamas, Canada and this country since his flight from Cuba. He established his New York residence about six months ago.

WITH unexpected celerity the railway executives and rail union chiefs reached an accord in the wage dispute, and the danger of a strike was averted for another year. At the instance of President Roosevelt but without government interference they worked out their own settlement after the federal negotiators had failed to get results and Co-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman had withdrawn as mediator.

Under the arrangement decided upon the 10 per cent wage cut which had prevailed in the railroads during the last two years is to be gradually wiped out in the next twelve months. Two and a half per cent of the existing wage cut is to be restored July 1, another 2 1/2 per cent on January 1, and the remaining 5 per cent on April 1, 1935.

In other words, instead of a 10 per cent cut rail workers will have only a 7 1/2 per cent cut prevailing between July 1 and January 1, a 5 per cent cut prevailing between January 1 and April 1, and full pay restoration after April 1. These terms worked out by the employers and employees are actually more favorable to the workers than the terms which President Roosevelt twice asked them to accept.

When informed of the settlement, Mr. Roosevelt said: "I am very glad that the railroads and their employees have been able to settle their wage dispute by mutual agreement. The country should be, and will be, grateful to them for this disposition of what might have developed into a troublesome controversy. I congratulate both sides on the wisdom and restraint which they have exhibited. They have set a good example."

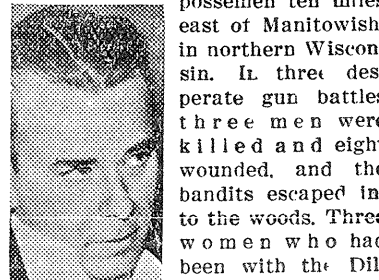

PASSAGE through the Panama canal of the American fleet of 111 vessels, on the way from the Pacific to the Atlantic, was carried out successfully, but not in the hoped-for 24 hours. The time consumed was almost double that, which led the Tokyo press to declare the movement was a "failure." The delay was caused largely by a heavy rain.

JOHN DILLINGER, the notorious outlaw, and several members of his gang fought their way out of a trap laid by federal agents and possesmen ten miles east of Manitowish, in northern Wisconsin. In three desperate gun battles three men were killed and eight wounded, and the bandits escaped into the woods. Three women who had been with the Dillinger gang were arrested. Two others were believed to have fled with the desperadoes. These two came from Minneapolis and were thought to have warned Dillinger of the impending raid on the camp where he had been for several days. Some hours after the battles in Wisconsin three members of the gang were seen by three deputy sheriffs in a suburb of St. Paul, Minn. A running gun fight ensued and one of the gangsters apparently was wounded, but the trio escaped and stole an automobile in which they headed for the bridge across the Mississippi river. Federal and local officials throughout all that region were on the lookout for the Dillinger gang with the tacit understanding that the desperadoes would be shot on sight.

OPEN hearings will begin May 2 by the senate committee on privileges and elections on petitions for the removal from office of Huey P. Long, senator from Louisiana. Walter P. George of Georgia gave out notice that "only charges sufficient in substance and form" and which were not considered by the special campaign expenditures committee last year would be investigated. Notices were sent to Mrs. Iliada Phelps Hammond, Mrs. Rufin G. Pleasant and former Governor of Louisiana John M. Parker, all of whom have filed petitions seeking removal of the "kingfish."

In the run-off Democratic primary in the Sixth Louisiana district to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Representative Bolivar E. Kemp, Senator Long's candidate, Harry D. Wilson, was decisively beaten by Jared Y. Sanders. Nomination in the primary is equivalent to election.

AMERICAN Federation of Labor chiefs have begun a drive to unionize the telephone workers of the country. They charge the American Telephone and Telegraph company is violating the NRA laws through its company unions. It is also asserted that financiers are buying up small telephone companies in the Middle West and Chicago and at unreasonable prices and then forcing the stock on their employees at fat profits for themselves.

Besides demanding that stock sales to employees be outlawed under the pending NRA code for the telephone industry, the A. F. of L. workers told Deputy Administrator L. H. Peoples that the NRA should force the telephone companies to stop expansion of dial telephone systems until such a time as employment conditions become normal.

OFFICIALS of the Department of Agriculture believe the wheat carry-over into 1935 may amount to 340,000,000 bushels, and are studying the export markets to find a possible outlet for part of it. But they cannot develop an export policy until the work of the international wheat conference at Rome is completed. The wheat carry-over on July 1 this year is expected to be about 265,000,000 bushels, to which may be added 75,000,000 bushels surplus from this year's prospective crop of 700,000,000 bushels.

Secretary Wallace has suggested that processing taxes on wheat might be increased and that the amount of the tax earmarked to promote exports might be raised from 2 to 4 or even 5 cents. A 5-cent tax on the 400,000,000 bushels yearly processing of taxable wheat would return approximately $20,000,000, compared with the $7,000,000 to be spent in exporting wheat this year. This total would be sufficient to export about the 90,000,000-bushel quota given the United States under the international agreement on the basis of the differential of 22 1/2 cents between the domestic and world prices.

OSCAR DE PRIEST, negro congressman from Chicago, won a victory in his fight to remove the house restaurant bar against members of his race. He obtained adoption of his resolution for investigation of the right of Lindsay Warren of North Carolina to fix the rules and regulations for the restaurant—which of course doesn't mean that negroes will be served in that dining room. The vote was 237 to 114, and the balloting followed the Mason and Dixon line almost without exception.

Antarctic Coal

Beds of coal, second only to those of the United States, lie beneath the ice and snow fields of the Antarctic continent, according to a geologist of the first Byrd expedition to that region. Not only are there great coal deposits but most likely other mineral wealth also. As coal consists of the hardened remains of plant life that existed many ages ago, its discovery would indicate that the climate of this portion of the world was vastly different at some past period. These beds of coal will not have any effect on industry at present because of their distance from markets.

DRAIN OUT OIL-EATING SLUDGE NOW

Change to anti-sludge Iso-Vis "D"—keep sludge out—save oil

It is time to change to a heavier grade of motor oil. And when you change, remember this: The greatest cause of high oil consumption in automobile engines is sludge—sludge that fouls filters, makes valves sluggish so you lose gasoline power and mileage, and causes rings to stick and pump oil.

Also remember this: You can keep sludge out of your motor by using Iso-Vis "D", the anti-sludge motor oil. Because it does not sludge, Iso-Vis "D" keeps rings lively and free, reducing oil consumption to the minimum. That's why Iso-Vis "D" users use less oil—add fewer quarts between drains. It's the most economical, fine lubrication you can buy.

ISO-VIS "D" 25c a qt.
 PLUS FEDERAL TAX 1c a qt.
 TOTAL 26c a qt.

Drive into your closest Standard Oil Station. Your Standard Serviceman will drain and change to the proper grade of Iso-Vis "D" in 8 minutes or less. Then you'll be rid of sludge and you'll keep your oil cost to the minimum.

LET'S MAKE OUR TOWN CLEANER AND SAFER.

Right now spring is in the air, and nature, in her annual awakening, is doing her utmost to beautify this old world of ours.

In the winter many things are neglected. Vacant lots, yards and even streets become unsightly.

Such a clean-up campaign is a splendid activity. Streets should be cleaned. Vacant lots, cleared of rubbish, can be made into beautiful playgrounds, parks or gardens.

When a movement to clean-up, paint-up and beautify sweeps through a community, it leaves in its wake a healthier, safer and more sanitary town than it found.

From the angle of fire safety alone, it is worthwhile. In this connection it is interesting to note that the National Board of Fire Underwriters reported that during the year 1932, rubbish and litter caused a fire loss of almost $1,200,000 throughout the United States.

A BUGGY WANTED. A call for an American-made buggy in good condition and at least 100 years old has been made by the Smithsonian Institution at Washington.

This call will bring back to older Thumb of Michigan citizens memories of the horse-and-buggy days, when travel was slow, yet when people took as much pride and satisfaction in the ownership of a fine horse and rig as people now get from ownership of autos.

Trades and customs of the old days have gone the way of the world, but the memory of them still lingers with people who are impressed more and more by the changes of time.

That's why he wants to put a buggy in his great national museum for future generations to gaze upon, and marvel at.

NEARING THE END. A dramatic battle is being waged against the nation's most famous outlaw, the elusive, quick-shooting John Dillinger, once a peaceful, hardworking country boy down in Indiana.

In the hide-and-seek game he has been playing with state and federal officers he has twice elected to seek refuge in Michigan, escaping each time just as the top of the net was being drawn shut.

But there will come a morning, and who knows but what it will happen before this appears in print, when the newspapers of the nation will broadcast the news that Public Enemy No. 1 has paid for his spectacular crime career with his life.

Federal agents have lost their lives in the pursuit and the Department of Justice has taken a solemn oath to keep on his trail to the bitter end.

Right now more than 1,000 department agents have been thrown into this greatest manhunt in history. They are confident that the final curtain will be rung down almost any hour.

Bakelite. Bakelite was named for its Belgian inventor, Dr. Leo Hendrik Baekland.

Washnetaw, Ingham, Sanilac, St. Joseph and Lenawee are leaders in this movement. There is also a growing demand for an organization of Future Farmers who have graduated from high school. These will undoubtedly be represented at the Kansas City convention next November.

The Congregational church at Port Sanilac was destroyed by fire recently with the loss placed at about $3,000 partly covered by insurance. The church organ, a few chairs and books were saved. A fire in the grass along the road fired the church sheds in the rear of the church. Sparks from the sheds ignited the church roof. The building was of brick construction.

Peace—At a Price.

(An editorial from the Rotarian Magazine).

Anyone who believes that from the beginning of time the World War was fated to come, is in an illogical position even to hope for a warless world. But he who regards all wars as a direct consumption of policies of participating nations can build an optimism around a conviction that men, being thinking animals, need not forever blunder into bloodshed but some day will consciously choose courses of action that prolong peace.

Wars do not happen suddenly. They are made in time of peace. Then popular desires are shaped into national policies which conflict and eventually clash with those of other countries.

It is interesting to conjecture what might have happened if, say in 1900, peoples of the twenty-seven nations that were drawn into the holocaust of 1914-18 had clearly realized that the policies then being born would lead to that conflict. Perhaps, in considering, whether the national aims should be pursued unmodified, far-seeing leaders might have stated the case thus:

"These policies will lead to war. That war will take 30 million lives, cost 400 billion dollars, snap the morals of civilization, precipitate a world-wide depression.

"If these policies are not pursued, 30 million lives will be saved, civilization will proceed without interruption. And with the 400 billions we shall be able to give a $2,500 house, furnished with $1,000 worth of furniture, and five 100-acres to every family in the United States, Canada, Australia, Great Britain, Ireland, France, Belgium, Germany and Russia; to put a $5,000,000 library and a $10,000,000 university in every city over 20,000 population in the countries named; and, furthermore, establish a fund which at five percent interest will for all time pay a $1,000 annual salary to 125,000 teachers and 125,000 nurses."

With the question so posed, it would seem to us certain that the nations of 1900 would have been willing to sacrifice even cherished national aims for the benefits of peace. But would they? With thousands of maimed men yet living and fleets of merchant vessels rusting in harbors to remind us of the cost of the last war, we of 1934 persist in desires which are crystallizing into national aims that can but lead to conflict. Realistic newspaper correspondents each morning scan dispatches, ready to hasten to the cradle of "the next war"—a war that will admittedly bankrupt civilization.

It can, of course, be avoided—at a price. The price is that nations learn how to live and to let live, even though it involves relinquishing of what in an early day of relations between individuals was called "rights." Men of goodwill will continue to believe that some day governments, having weighed the case, will elect to do this.

Improved Uniform International SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for May 6 JESUS ACCLAIMED KING LESSON TEXT—Matthew 21:1-46. GOLDEN TEXT—Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name.—Phil. 2:9. PRIMARY TOPIC—When Children Sang to Jesus. JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Saviour-King. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Loyalty to Jesus, Our King. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Acknowledging the Lordship of Jesus. The picture presented in this chapter is a very dark one. The common designation "Triumphal Entry" is most unfortunate, for it was only such in appearance. Back of the cry "Hosanna" was being formed the awful cry "Crucify him." It may be possible that the awful word "Crucify" was uttered by some of the same persons who cried "Hosanna."

Death of L. J. Bartholomy—The funeral of L. J. Bartholomy was held at St. Agatha's church on Wednesday morning, May 2, the services being conducted by Rev. Fr. John McCullough. Today the farm consists of 740 acres, all under cultivation, and is one of the best farms in the country. Mr. Bartholomy was a member of the Catholic church and the Knights of Columbus. MORE THAN 50% LONGER NON-SKID MILEAGE in the NEW Firestone HIGH SPEED TIRE FOR 1934

THE new Firestone High Speed Tire for 1934 is the greatest tire Firestone has ever built. With its wider, flatter tread, greater thickness, deeper non-skid, more and tougher rubber, and greater non-skid contact with the road, you get more than 50% longer non-skid mileage.

This new development is made possible by the Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping, whereby the cotton fibers inside the high-stretch cords are soaked and coated with pure liquid rubber. This provides greater strength, safety and blowout protection.

Firestone engineers pioneered and developed the first successful balloon tire in 1923, and it is only natural that Firestone would lead in the further development of tire construction to meet the demands of the high-powered high-speed cars of today.

The new Firestone High Speed Tires for 1934, have already proved their worth by constant testing on the Firestone fleet of test cars over all kinds of roads and highways throughout the United States.

Firestone High Speed Tires are further subjected to the most severe tests known on the greatest proving ground in the world—the Indianapolis Speedway. In fact, Firestone Tires have been on the winning cars in the annual 500-Mile Indianapolis Race for fourteen consecutive years—conclusive evidence of Firestone's outstanding leadership in tire development and construction.

GULF WINS MORE "HILL TESTS" THAN 32 GASOLINES COMBINED

Will your car have more power on any one gasoline? HERE'S YOUR ANSWER..

Gulf tested a total of 33 gasolines on famous American hills—12 hills in localities from Massachusetts to Georgia—and here is what they found...

The power of different gasolines varies widely! And of all 33 gasolines, Gulf is uniformly best. 7 out of 12 times, it propelled a car and load up mountain grades farther than any other gasoline tested!

It won more hill tests than 32 other gasolines combined! Prove it! Drive into a Gulf station, fill up, and test the power of That Good Gulf for yourself!

A BORROWED FORD tests 12 competing gasolines on Muldrough Hill, near West Point, Ky., to see which gas can pull the car and 3500-lb. load farthest up hill in high gear.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Mary, daughter of David Brown, self made millionaire, obsessed with the idea that her personality is obscured by the fact that she is the child of the "rich David Brown," determines to make her own way in life, disregarding her father's wealth, and her own. She has a million dollars, legacy from her mother, which she insists her father invest in the "wildest dream" imaginable, and about which she must know nothing. She is a graduate of a college of engineering. Her father secretly admiring her courage, humors her.

CHAPTER II—As "M. Brown" Mary applies for a position as engineer with the Paradise Valley Project, a California development concern, and is engaged, by letter. On the train, on her way to her job, she meets Denis Craig, who immediately antagonizes her, but excites her interest.

CHAPTER III—Alighting from the train, Mary is left at a way station, practically penniless, her purse, which she had laid down, having disappeared, and the train gone on without her. Denis Craig, who is her assistance, is also left behind. His benefactor, her, despite her coldness toward him, enabling her to continue her journey. She is grateful, but nevertheless has a feeling of humiliation. Arriving at the project, she is accused by John Stark, chief engineer, of deception in concealing her sex, and again meets Denis Craig, who she learns is the promoter of the development project.

CHAPTER IV—Insisting she can do "anything a man can do" in the engineering line, Mary is given a position. Craig's engaging personality makes an uneasy feeling on her, but she cannot make up her mind as to whether he is an honest visionary or a "sleeker."

CHAPTER V—Mary "makes good" on her job, winning the friendship and esteem of her fellow engineers, though having an uneasy feeling that Stark, annoyed at having a woman engineer in the field, would be glad of an excuse to discharge her. Among her fellow workers is a young engineer, Neil Goodenough, with whom she has a more or less friendly rivalry.

CHAPTER VI

A "Gully-Washer."

UPON the night before Thanksgiving day, Mary's sisters, Eve and Diane, helped their father and three secretaries until midnight, taking care of last-minute pleas for charity. Then they went on with a gay crowd to look in on two or three parties, and amusedly wondered, as they separated at 4 a. m., how that young iconoclast, Mary, would be spending Thanksgiving.

At that precise moment, 4 a. m., Mary was reaching out of bed to throw an imperious alarm clock. A cold rub, a quick dressing in woolen shirt, woolen riding breeches and high heavy boots, and she went forth, lantern in hand, out through the back yard, across a lonely alley and into a spooky old barn where the sole occupant—she hoped—looked at her mournfully with disillusioned eyes.

"Again?" the decrepit gray horse seemed to demand.

"It has to be done, Belinda!" said Mary, as she took a saddle from a hook, swung it across a swayed back, and added fatalistically, "All because we didn't choose a lady-like profession, or weren't a boy!"

The winter rains had set in, making the road to the project impassable for motor cars. The men engineers with homes in Foggy Gulch had gone into quarters in camp. Since the laws of convention made it impossible for Mary thus to lessen the grief of the day's work, she had rented Belinda, and spent four extra hours a day traveling back and forth.

It was Thanksgiving day, Mary remembered ironically. Well, she had her job to be thankful for. John Stark apparently belonged to the old school which conceded only Christmas and the Fourth of July as holidays. His men worked six days of the week, rain or shine, and seven in an emergency. Progress was the thing!

Gray of dawn was breaking through gray of fog and mist by the time Mary reached the boundaries of the project. But her mood was not in harmony with leaden skies. How could her spirit be leader with the caressing softness of fog and mist on her cheeks and the rain-washed earth sending its clean dank scent to her nostrils; with herself, Mary Brown, post and parcel of this great development project; with those dancing classes, successful as Lucretia had prophesied, making it possible for her to enclose fifty dollars in that letter to her father? It was to sing indeed!

There was a comradely "Lo, Mary!" that was very warming as she slid into her place at the breakfast table in camp. Just the relationship she had coveted had sprung up between her and these male engineers. She was their pal; their co-worker. They never "ragged" her as they did each other, but they never failed in respect. They recognized her ability generously.

They did. Some day—Mary broke a doughnut with an effort—some day John Stark would. She felt it in her bones that he would. This was one of her optimistic days.

"A change in plans today, folks," Dorsey announced. "Mr. Craig wants a reconnaissance of the road he contemplates building to the beach, and wants it right now. So I'll let you take the gun and enough of a party to finish that survey we were on, Goodenough, and the rest of us will go over the grade on that rush work. And you take the transit on our party, will you Mary?"

"Will it?" Mary made a dash for the tent where the instruments were kept, and the atmosphere of her soul cleared. "It is not raining rain to me!" she nummed with abandon.

"It's raining lucky breaks," completed Wait-a-Minute. "Well, the race seems to be neck to neck so far. Promoted to the gun simultaneously." He shouldered a tripod, handed one to Mary, and picked up an instrument. "I'll carry yours out to the wagon for you."

"No, thank you, Wait-a-Minute!" as she reached greedily for the twenty-pound "gun." "I ache to carry it! I shall hang on to it like grim death, while the hanging is good!"

Little she realized how truly she prophesied.

The joy of handling a transit once more! Of feeling herself a person of importance on this survey party!

Hour after hour the work went on in the drizzle. At noon the party lunched in a weathered old cabin, a cabin filled for Mary with color and romance.

"See, M. Brown?" Hilt strode about the room as he finished his lunch. "It's built of three-inch planks. Protection for the cowpunchers against cattle thieves in the old days. Thundering Jove!" as the drizzle turned against roof and windows. "We'd better get back over the grade while the getting is good. This is turning into what the natives call a gully-washer."

They hurried out to the wagon. The rain fell in great drops, pelted them like bullets, and obscured the landscape. The trail became heavy. In crossing a rapidly rising stream the four mules and whiffletrees went on up the bank, leaving wagon and passengers atilt in the angry torrent. The men were out in the stream then. Dorsey lifted Mary to shore, and brawny arms brought the wagon up to its locomotive power.

So they came to Mistletoe canyon where the converging hillsides lifted their great bunches of mistletoe gratefully to the rain. Here the trail began a ragged and perilous descent into the canyon into which water from the enclosing hills was pouring as if from burst reservoirs. They came to the creek, this morning a clear singing trout stream up to the knees of the mules, now a murky river out of its banks.

The skinner spoke to the mules, and they stepped into the waters. Mary clutched the seat with one hand, her transit with the other. Now the lead mules were almost amidstream, the wheelers gallantly following. But neither driver nor mules had counted on the unexpected swiftness of the current amidstream, nor the depth of the water. Now the mules had lost their footing. They were swimming, struggling valiantly with all their strength—but their strength was no match against the current. The lead mules were being carried downstream; the wheelers struggled to hold them back, but were forced to follow. The wagon rocked helplessly; overturned.

Mary, thrown into these seething waters with the others of the party, had but one thought; this was a three-hundred-dollar instrument she was carrying. She was responsible for it. She must save it. Down, down, down she went. Would she never reach bottom? There! Now, would she ever reach the surface again, fighting her way, one-armed, weighted down by this twenty-pound instrument, heavy boots, woolen clothing? It seemed to her that she scarcely moved. Her breath was becoming exhausted.

She reached the surface at last, clear. She struck out for the bank, and the seething waters seemed to laugh at her puny efforts. She seemed to make no headway, one-armed. Had she hung onto this precious burden only to have to drop it a few feet from the shore? Not while that left arm would wiggle! She looked about for her comrades. They were on down the stream, pulling to shore—two mules! Saints above! They could save the mules. But a girl—But this was a girl supposed to be able to do anything a man could do! And the men had saved themselves when dumped into a inconsequential stream. They hadn't even missed her! The men would have saved this instrument. But she—she couldn't!

"Mary! Thank God!"

A strong arm had gripped her. She half-sensed being helped ashore and laid upon the sand. After a while she opened her eyes. Hilt's blessed old face, all furrowed with worry—

"I saw you come up beside me. Never dreamed you were struggling with this infernal thing in your arm. Great jumping grasshoppers, why didn't you drop the bally gun and take care of yourself?"

Like a drowned little rat, Mary sat up, shaking herself. She thrust back the dripping hair that hung over her face, and grinned at him.

"Yes, Why didn't I drop it? A man might have got by, dropping it. But couldn't I just bear the chief snorting. That's what comes of having a girl on the job! A man would have saved his instrument in such an accident!"

"But—who knows?" preening her wet self. "Maybe now his highness will pin a medal on me! Denis Craig's Thunderbolt will carry a thrilling story: 'Girl-Engineer Saves Transit at the Cost of Her Life! I feel promotion in my bones, Hilt Dorsey! I see myself a Pinkie, with a desk in the Department of Design—'"

"Oh! Mary broke off, limply. She blinked. Was this the apparition? Had she, too, been kicked in the head? Or was this really John Stark, in person, coming toward them on horseback, very close, too close—and Denis Craig beside him? Very suddenly Mary Brown ceased feeling promotion in her bones. Her bones? She had none. Her framework was made of cooked spaghetti! And her spirits as suddenly had become as starchless as her physical quiescence.

"Plucky little idiot!"

Mary was sure she heard the words. Or was it just the ringing of water in her ears? Certainly no one was paying enough attention to her to call her plucky, or even an idiot. John Stark was asking crisply of Hilt Dorsey, "Everybody all right?" Denis Craig was snapping off his raincoat, something of a bulldog set to his face.

Mary had sprung to her feet, shivering as the raw November wind blew through her wet clothes, yet burning with chagrin at her words which Stark must have overheard.

"Put this on!"

There was flattering solicitude in Denis Craig's face and tone, something pleasant about his officiousness, and promise of comforting warmth in the closely-woven coat he was offering. But Mary jerked away from it, and stamped a soggy foot at the promoter of the Paradise Valley project.

"Certainly not. Why should I?"

"Why shouldn't you?"

She gave him a withering glance and turned her back on him. Couldn't the man understand anything? Nobody was trying to bundle up Hilt Dorsey. Nobody was worrying about those boys up to their necks in the stream. Why must he add to her chagrin by singling her out for coddling—because she was a girl?

Now John Stark turned and looked at her. "What progress today?" he asked brusquely.

Since Hilt had gone down-stream to signal the men to shore, Mary answered.

"About five miles, through Devil's gap and up over the divide."

But her jaw set ironically. Progress—at a moment like this!

"We lost two mules, Mr. Stark," Hilt, returning, announced. Stark shrugged deprecatorily. What were two mules—if the progress report was creditable?

"You'd better go to camp," he advised tersely.

"We'll freeze if we don't!" agreed Hilt.

Mary sprang forward beside Dorsey, but John Stark stopped her summarily.

"I'd offer you my horse, Miss Brown, but you must exercise to keep warm. Suppose you make for headquarters house. We can take care of you there."

"Thank you," Mary answered with a dignity contrasting ludicrously with her bedraggled state. "But I need no looking after. I shall be quite warm by the time I reach Camp C."

"Miss Brown!" commanded the soldierly John Stark. "Report at headquarters at once. How about walking over with her, Craig?"

"I was about to suggest it," He placed a peremptory hand under Mary's elbow.

"That's the dope," seconded Hilt Dorsey. "Trot along, Mary. I'll phone Creesh so she won't worry." Mary could have murdered Hilt as well as other members of the group as she doggedly set out to obey orders.

"In other words," she summarized the situation to Craig as they struggled up a steep slippery slope, "this is what comes of having a girl on the job!"

"If you were a kitten and we wanted to drown you, the time-honored method of bricks in a gunny-sack would be no good!" exploded Craig irrelevantly. "When I think of you going down in that pool! The weight of your clothes and boots was hazard enough. And then—to hang on to that confounded transit—A man would have let the thing go!"

"A man would have hung on to the thing without bragging about it, even to be facetious."

"Don't worry," laughed Craig. "You were plucky, all right." (Ah, she had heard those words, then!) "I'll write the article for my Thunderbolt, as you call it. And you'll get your medal from Stark."

"Medal!" she scoffed. "From John Stark! You go to the bottom of the sea with his old transit, and as soon as your head shows above water he shouts at you—lest you carry the secret to a watery grave—'How much progress?'"

Craig threw back his head and laughed. "You'll be surprised, M. Brown!"

"Not I. But John Stark may be."

"How so?"

"If he thinks this is his golden opportunity to prove a girl a nuisance on the job."

"Designs on him?" looking down at her quizzically through the slanting rain. Not all girls can be drenched little rats and still be good to look at.

"You'll be surprised, too!" mischief mixing with the maliciousness as she kept the tail of her eye on the camp and meekly followed up the rugged slope. Several times Craig had offered an assisting hand, only to have it grandly waved aside.

They came to the top of the slope, and waiting for her to come up with him, Denis Craig looked about. Mary Brown, who had been following him with such surprising docility, was nowhere to be seen. His questioning eye caught sight of the camp, and he understood her inferences about surprises. A moment later he discovered her half-way down the slope, running madly, leaping over small clumps of underbrush, and dodging overhanging boughs.

Craig started in pursuit, but he did not gain on her in any flattering way. It was only when, turning to look back, she ran into a dangling branch of white oak and was knocked to the ground, that Craig overtook her.

When Mary opened her eyes, her head was pillowed upon a wet knee. The rain was bathing her upturned face, and Denis Craig was cursing as much rainfall as possible in his palm to bathe a black welt on her temple.

"Dear!" he said.

He looked—and sounded—like a despairing mother reproaching a wayward child.

Mary sprang to her feet. "I'm going to camp—and home as usual. I haven't the slightest intention of going to headquarters—and proving Mr. Stark's point," she announced coolly. "I knew you'd argue if I told you—so I ran."

Denis Craig swept his cap from his blond head, stepping widely aside.

"Go. I didn't come along to do police duty, Miss Brown. Use your own judgment. But permit me to say that I think it darned rotten judgment to ride half a dozen miles at a snail's pace in your condition, or utterly fatigue yourself by walking that distance, when hospitality is proffered you. And, of course, stated in technical terms, a case of pneumonia is not commensurate with progress. But—it's your own funeral!"

Mary, who had been staring in amazement at the cool, angered insolence of the man, broke suddenly into laughter. "It might be my funeral, I concede. You win, Mr. Craig. I give up, for the sake of the progress to which I am so indispensable. Lead on to the slaughter!"

Her frankness was to Denis Craig's anger like sunshine to an icicle. They went on together through the next draw and up the side of a second young mountain. A mile, two miles, they covered. Conversation lagged; and, Craig gradually discovered, Mary Brown did, too.

Every step became more excruciating to Mary. She was in absolute torture as to her feet, cold, and nastily wet all over, nervous from the day's harrowing work and accident, apprehensive of what lay ahead.

Before she realized it, she was feeling overwhelmingly sorry for herself. It was hard sledding, this life! That's what it was! She thought of her sheltered home back east—her own home—with a great wave of homesickness. Two big tears rolled down her cheeks. In just a little while now John Stark would make quick work of her!

Denis Craig, looking down, differentiated tears from raindrops. "See here, now, girl! Suppose you use the sense you were born with! He put a steady arm about her. "Now put your hand across up onto my shoulder. That's the way. Helps somewhat, doesn't it?"

"Oh, a lot!" as she gratefully shifted part of the weight from her feet to him. In fact it would have been rather nice—if it hadn't been for her heels.

"I wasn't crying about my heels," she assured him presently.

"What then?"

"Oh, just sort of—sort of—crying. Thinking about my father—"

"Homesick. I don't wonder. My hat's off to you. You're a good little sport, Mary Brown. But I don't like the idea of the stiff fight you're having to put up—"

"I'm having—just what I want!"

He Removed the Soggy Boots.

she broke in hastily. "I wouldn't change a thing if I could!"

But presently she made an amendment. "Yes, I would change one thing. My shoes." She stopped. "It's no use, Mr. Craig. I can't stand this, even with you practically carrying me. I'm going to take off my boots and go barefoot."

"Let me." He removed the soggy boots. Through the chewed-out holes in her socks together they looked upon the great blisters of the heels of her red silk feet.

Craig whistled. "Ever go barefoot, young lady?"

"No."

"Well, if you were no horny-handed—or footed—son of toll, I was."

He began unlacing his own boots. "I beg of you—"

"And I of you," he interrupted quietly. "I'm aching to feel the squash of mud through my toes again—and the rest of our journey is through the bottoms. Here, stick a foot in. Now—how's that?"

Mary experimented. "They're heaven to my heels! They don't touch them, and yet aren't loose enough to rub!"

"Let's go, then, pilgrim!"

So they came to the headquarters house. But Mary's mirth petered out suddenly at the sight of John Stark in the doorway. It was no longer to laugh! It was—on to the slaughter!

And then, miracle of miracles! She noticed that John Stark was laughing, too!

Whisky Hill Still There

Prohibition may be voted in and out again, but Whisky Hill remains the same forever. An attempt to change the name of Whisky Hill school, near Salem, Ore., to something more generally pleasing and less suggestive was voted down.

MAKING SCHOOL AND GROUNDS SPICK AND SPAN

The annual cleaning at the school is on again. Mr. McMahon at the windows, and the agricultural class pruning shrubs indicate that spring is here for certain.

Even the back yard at the school comes in for a cleaning. The pupils of the 5th and 6th grades have done their bit in collecting all refuse from the play ground, thus giving it a much neater appearance.

FINE PUBLIC SPIRIT OF THE SCHWADERERS

May Day was ushered in to Cass City Schools in a day of work. The kindness of Eugene and Ernest Schwaderer in donating gravel and a big truck has made it possible to cover a large area of the rear parking space. For some time the bare clay ground on the playground has been a source of vexation to many a mother as well as our janitor and teachers. The fine public spirit of the Schwaderers, the work of the high school boys and the kindness of Cecil Brown and Geo.

Glaspie for use of trucks, has made this project possible. It is not yet completed and other citizens have offered their aid in finishing the job.

MUSIC CLASSES AT BAD AXE.

THE SCHOOL LIBRARY.

The school library is greatly in need of good books. Old ones being worn badly make it necessary to build up frequently. The past few years have taken heavy toll on the amount of up-to-date reference material to be added because of depletion of the state library fund. Cass City received this year only $12.00 for its library. All other expenditures have come from direct appropriations.

The school can use some good healthy barberry, forsythia, or spiraea. Call the school if you are separating any of these shrubs and have some to donate to a good cause.

Caro Village Has Record for Planting Trees

An all-time record was established by the village of Caro for planting a large number of seedling pine trees in a short time. Last Thursday afternoon at the tree planting day when the business men, Boy Scouts and future farmers turned out to help the committee plant 16,000 trees between 1:00 and 4:00 in the afternoon. This together with the 1,000 which were planted before noon to get the project started made a total of 17,000 planted for the one day. The committee in charge think this is a record which will stand for some time.

The planting committee of Russell Hill, Ed Hammond and Roscoe Black are very grateful for the splendid cooperation which the business people of the town displayed in this project and it is expected that in the next five or six years when the entire 80 acres is to be completed, additional interest will be displayed each year as the trees that are planted now will begin to show signs of growth.

Use Homestead Plan as Swindler's Mask

Swindlers are masking their schemes behind claims that land which they have to sell is being utilized in the government's subsistence homestead projects, according to a warning received at Michigan State College from M. L. Wilson, Washington, director for this phase of the federal relief program.

Residents of cities and villages are the most numerous victims of these schemes, which have been reported from several sections. The frauds may be worked by the promoters in one of several ways.

One plan is to organize a cooperative company to buy land and to complete all details necessary to have the land accepted by the government as a homestead project. This is, of course, a fraud because the government's homestead work is handled only through established local officials or appointed by city, state, or national. It is unnecessary for any one to pay any unknown person fees to handle any homestead project.

The promotions in some cases are attempts at the outright sale of land actually owned by the promoter but of such character that any homesteader would almost be certain to lose whatever investment was made. Such swindles are very tragic as they are perpetrated upon people who are making every struggle to help themselves and are defrauded of the last barrier between themselves and charity.

Michigan cities have in some cases established gardens where citizens may grow a part of their food. Where any subsistence homestead projects have been undertaken in the United States, local men properly accredited are in charge. People are warned not to pay any one any money for subsistence homesteads without investigating the sellers and the land to be sold.

Offer Record Book to State Farmers

Any Michigan farmer now can obtain free a farm record book which will give him a great help in proving compliance with the terms of wheat or corn-hog reduction contracts or in obtaining any federal loans, according to the farm management department at Michigan State College.

These books are distributed by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration through county agricultural agents or through Michigan State College. Books can be obtained by Michigan farmers from either place.

Books furnished by the A. A. do not replace the farm account books published and sold at cost to cooperators by the college farm management departments. The government record books are designed primarily to help those who have crop contracts or who wish to apply for federal loans. However, any farmer who is not already keeping crop records will find the books valuable.

Farmers who have contracts will find these record books almost indispensable. Final checks on contracts will be paid only after the farmer has proved that he has fulfilled the requirements, and this

In Circuit Court in Tuscola County

Judge Clarence Brown of Saginaw county presided at the session of the Tuscola county circuit court held at Caro Tuesday. He granted $7.00 a week alimony until further order from the court is received in the divorce case of Mabel Lucy Beyette vs. Joseph L. Beyette.

In the divorce case of Anna Taylor vs. Earl Taylor, a reduction in payment of alimony was requested. The judge fixed the amount at $3.00 a week for the next six months and ordered the back payments of $2.00 a week should be made up as conditions improve.

A trust account was allowed, an order was issued confirming sale and the administrator discharged in the settlement in the divorce case of Jessie B. Meacham vs. Lucius A. Meacham. Earl Fallahay was the trustee of the divorce settlement.

A motion to dismiss the case of Mathews & Mathews vs. the Township Board of Almer was granted. The refusal of the township board to grant a beer license to Carl and Joe Mathews, who have leased the Standpipe resort property at Caro, started the suit. Judge Brown said that the case was not properly started, and that the plaintiffs should have presented a petition for a writ of mandamus.

Judge Fred W. George of Port Huron will preside at the May term of circuit court in Tuscola county which commences on Monday, May 14, and he will remain on duty until that work is finished.

The promotions in some cases are attempts at the outright sale of land actually owned by the promoter but of such character that any homesteader would almost be certain to lose whatever investment was made. Such swindles are very tragic as they are perpetrated upon people who are making every struggle to help themselves and are defrauded of the last barrier between themselves and charity.

Michigan cities have in some cases established gardens where citizens may grow a part of their food. Where any subsistence homestead projects have been undertaken in the United States, local men properly accredited are in charge. People are warned not to pay any one any money for subsistence homesteads without investigating the sellers and the land to be sold.

Offer Record Book to State Farmers

Any Michigan farmer now can obtain free a farm record book which will give him a great help in proving compliance with the terms of wheat or corn-hog reduction contracts or in obtaining any federal loans, according to the farm management department at Michigan State College.

These books are distributed by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration through county agricultural agents or through Michigan State College. Books can be obtained by Michigan farmers from either place.

Books furnished by the A. A. do not replace the farm account books published and sold at cost to cooperators by the college farm management departments. The government record books are designed primarily to help those who have crop contracts or who wish to apply for federal loans. However, any farmer who is not already keeping crop records will find the books valuable.

Farmers who have contracts will find these record books almost indispensable. Final checks on contracts will be paid only after the farmer has proved that he has fulfilled the requirements, and this will be difficult without some form of written records.

Such records will be valuable also in obtaining contracts if the government offers them later for other crops than those now designated as basic.

been brought down to the amount needed to supply their market. This second reduction, they contended, would reduce their incomes from milk more than the benefit payments would add to their receipts.

All federal benefit payment reduction plans for basic crops are entirely voluntary. No plan is begun unless the great majority of the producers of that crop are agreed that the plan will help them. No such agreement appeared at the regional dairy meetings and the dairy program will be postponed until such time as the producers can reach an agreement among themselves.

The government will continue to assist the dairy industry by aiding measures to reduce the numbers of diseased cattle and to bring about permanent control of the two most serious bovine diseases. Federal purchases of dairy products to be distributed to welfare agencies also will be continued. These purchases will increase consumption as the products are used by those who are unable to purchase these goods at present.

The postponement of the dairy program leaves the industry facing serious problems. The number of dairy cattle is the greatest in history and the purchasing power of consumers is below normal.

Milk marketing agreements in the fluid milk shed will be continued. These agreements are not affected by the proposed plan and would have been retained had the plan been used.

Further study of the dairy situation will be continued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture which stands ready to assist dairymen at any time they can approve a national plan for production control.

Why a Community Newspaper?

Contest Sponsored by Adrian Van Koevering of Zealand, Mich.

By Howard Peckham, Lowell, Mich. (Fifth Place)

A newspaper is not a thing of beauty. It exists because it is useful, because it performs certain services indispensable to the community. Since all those functions are not obvious and their effects often subtle, we propose to examine them.

The first purpose of a newspaper is, of course, to inform the community of past and coming events. This information is what people refer to when they ask, "Have you heard the news?" News of general nature provides the readers with a common fund of knowledge, drawing them into a unified group. News of a personal nature makes them aware of one another's name, occupation, location, movements, sickness, honors, bereavements, and good fortune, and binds them together in a family-like relationship.

Here we might ask what effect does this distribution of news have on the people of the community? On the surface, it satisfies their desire for knowledge. But a newspaper sets other forces in motion at the same time. As successfully as any church or lodge, it encourages mutual acquaintance. It inspires the feeling—and more than that, the practice—of neighborliness, that trait peculiar to small towns. This warm feeling of oneness, this sense of "belonging" and of sharing the same environment as the rest of one's group is at the root of all civic enterprise and progress.

Which brings us to the newspaper's second service. It makes news—that is, it initiates and organizes public action. What better method or agency is there for exerting pressure on the village council or county supervisors, the school board, chamber of commerce, power company, Legion post, or private individuals to consider the desires of the majority or of a progressive minority? Anyone can start a ball rolling, but its momentum and direction are usually dependent on the attitude of the local newspaper.

A paper with a reputation for clarifying confusing situations, fathoming motives, pushing worthy activities, exposing dishonesty, and generally aiding its readers to think rightly on problems of community interest—such a newspaper does more than accomplish the immediate ends just mentioned. It determines where the local citizens, and those in surrounding townships, shall look for intelligent leadership. It resolves the town in which it is published into the focal point, the hub around which thousands of people will integrate themselves. Briefly it makes the town.

Lastly, the community paper publishes the advertising appeals of local merchants, and by these reminders week after week keeps its readers aware of their own

Main Street stores. The appeal of goods in a nearby city is often due simply to ignorance on the part of villages as to the variety and quality of goods handled by their own stores. Yet, this mutual service amounts to more than an effort to persuade people to trade at home and stimulate their own prosperity. The paper is also promoting healthy home-town loyalty, which will bear fruit of increased resourcefulness and self-sufficiency. After all, this fact alone, and not the separate political identity, is what distinguishes the small town from the city suburb. In the latter, having no community newspaper, the residents run to the city stores for their chief purchases and use the neighborhood stores only for convenience's sake. Further, being subscribers to a city daily, in which local news is highly selected and information about their neighbors usually lacking, these people are slow to make one another's acquaintance, slow to develop unity of action on matters affecting their welfare, and are likely never to develop a social consciousness.

No district can progress when its citizens have only their bodies in that place, and their minds and pocketbooks in another. But brought together by some agent, and thrown "on their own" as it were, they begin to realize their capacities. It is the community newspaper that carries on the work of making these physical neighbors conscious of having similar desires and interests, as well as the means to satisfy them. Most important of all, it makes them aware of what may be accomplished through united effort for mutual improvement.

Feed Mermash

Mermash 16% protein is a starting, growing and laying mash for chickens, ducks and turkeys. It provides in ocean kelp and fish meal a food iodine and other essential minerals which are lacking in Michigan crops and soils. Poultry responds to Mermash with splendid growth and production. Mermash is a complete mash, ready to be fed with scratch grains for high egg production.

Grow Better Chicks at Lowest Cost with Mermash.

Nothing mysterious about it. Michigan soils and crops are very deficient in iodine. Chicks raised on Mermash simply walk away from those raised on other rations. They're healthier, grow faster, feather better. Chick losses are lower. Cost per chick is lower.

Yes, all costs are lower because Mermash is undoubtedly the lowest priced, good chick starter-growing mash on the market.
