COUNCIL VOTES TO EXTEND WATER MAINS

Improved Fire Protection Is Made Possible by Added Mains.

The village council voted Monday evening to extend the water mains from the power house north to Main St. with 6-inch pipes, and from Main St. north to Sanilac St., near the plant of the Nestle's Milk Products, Inc., with 4-inch

Men have been employed the past week in the extension of water mains on East Third St., from Ale to Segar Streets.

With 3,300 man hours being furnished to the village without cost, village trustees figure that the water main extensions will never be made at less cost than at the present time. Nine hundred hours of labor were consumed on this project up to Monday night.

Better fire protection is given to village property because of the increased pressure made possible by the elimination of dead ends in the water mains and the addition of a fire hydrant.

The council also voted to lease the fair grounds to promoters of the fair scheduled here for July 4 with the provision that the plans and program meet with the approval of village trustees.

COLWOOD MAN BURNED TO DEATH

Wife Escaped Down Back Stairway; Hair Burned from Her Head.

Uriah Barnhart, 85, was burned to death in his home over a garage at Colwood, nine miles west and one mile north of Cass City, on Wednesday. The fire was caused by the explosion of a kerosene range. Mrs. Barnhart's hair was burned from her head and she was seriously burned on one arm. She ran screaming down a back outside stairway, the only exit.

Barnhart, who had been ill, was cut off from escape when the fire spread quickly through the rooms and set fire to an adjacent house. Neighbors unable to get up the stairs tried to rescue him with ladders put up to the windows but the fire drove them back. Arthur Barnhart, who operated the garage and supported his elderly parents, had driven into Unionville in the afternoon and returned when the fire was at its height. The building was a mass of flames when he was told that his father had been trapped, and although an old injury left him so crippled that he walks with a cane, he had to be restrained from try-when Arthur took over the garage.

The fire departments from Caro and Unionville fought the fire. An adjacent house, owned by Mrs. Katherine Miller and occupied by Eldon Smith and his family was almost a total loss.

KAHN AND IMERMAN ACQUITTED THURSDAY IN CONSPIRACY TRIAL

Circuit Judge Fred W. George rendered a verdict Thursday morning acquitting Abe Imerman of Detroit and Moses Kahn of Saginaw of the charge of burglary conspiracy. Arguments in the case were concluded in the Tuscola county circuit court on Wednesday afternoon before Judge George without a jury.

Adolph Lee and Joseph Mauro, who had pleaded guilty and had been sentenced, were returned from prison to be state's witnesses.

The convicts accused Kahn and Imerman of inciting them to rob the C. E. Morton store at Akron, Jan. 28, by promising that they 'stood ready to buy up a million dollars worth of stolen goods."

Do You Remember?

The Cass City Chronicle has through the years stored away pictures of local people and buildings, some of which date back many years. The Chronicle will reprint some of these from time to time. No names or stories will appear under any picture and it will be left for the readers to think back through the years and search their memories for identification.

IS there a difference in gasolines? READ THIS

Tests on famous American hills—from Massachusetts to South Carolina—prove that the power of gasolines selling at the same price vary widely!

In each of these tests, gasolines bought from local service stations competed to see which could propel a car and heavy load up hill farthest before the motor stalled. Results?... GULF WON MORE HILL TESTS

THAN 32 OTHER GASOLINES COMBINED! Study the chart below! Then go to any Gulf station and test That Good Gulf Gasoline for yourself!

SLUDGE, the OIL-EATER, ON HIS WAY!

Continuing to Drive With Winter Oil Costs You Money Daily

• It's high time you changed to a heavier motor oil—as an economy move! Lighter oils are subject to facter and faster consumption as the mercury continues to rise.

Besides, if you have been using ordinary oil the chances are that there is trouble-making sludge in your crankcase right now.

You know how the ugly mess called Sludge fouls the oil filter and lines - makes piston rings stick and causes costly pumping of oil-slows down valve action, bringing wasteful loss of gasoline power.

So get rid of sludge, once and for all, by having your erankcase drained at a Standard Oil station—then refill with Iso=Vis "D", the anti-sludge motor oil. You'll have an economical, sludge-less summer and a clean, lively, efficient engine.

SNAKES HIS HOBBY

When Kenneth Johnson wakes up, looks at the foot of his bed, and sees snakes all over the place, it isn't what you think. In fact, it's quite all right. Because Kenneth, a student at the University of California, is in a fair way toward being an expert herpetologist. Johnson, who graduates from the university soon, has an ambition to be a zoo director. He's starting with snakes, and in cages along the foot of his bed he has two king snakes. a six-foot indigo snake, a small boa constrictor, a moccasin snake from Florida, two chicken snakes from Texas, and a gila monster. He had seven rattlesnakes, but they developed something and died. He also has a black widow spider, reputedly fatal when it bites. He calls it Eliza and keeps it in a mayonnaise

The Navy's Beginning

The beginning of the permanent American navy was made on March 27, 1794, when George Washington signed an act providing for six frigates to protect American commerce from the Algerian pirates. The act was carefully worded to declare that there was no intention of inaugurating a permanent navy.

Sheep Parasites

Internal parasites of sheep which reduce the vitality of the animal and, in some cases, cause death can be safely and cheaply controlled by drenching, according to the animal husbandry department at Michigan State College.

Lambs one month old can be given this treatment. Parasites can be controlled best if the flock is drenched before being turned on pasture and additional treatments given at proper intervals. Michigan shepherds recommend treating the flock at least three times dur-Mrs. C. L. Robinson, Mrs. Roy | ing the pasture season. Some flocks are drenched every month.

Emphasis is placed on treatments while the sheep are on pasture because infected sheep contaminate the ground, and the parasites pass one cycle of their life in the soil. Sheep which follow the infected flock on the contaminated ground pick up the parasites.

The treatment recommended by the college department is a solution of copper sulphate and nicotine sulphate. tI is prepared by dissolving one ounce of copper sulphate in both ill at their home on South Se- three quarts of warm, soft water. gar street. One liquid ounce of nicotine sulphate is added to the mixture after the copper sulphate has dissolved. The solution should be stirred before it is used.

The solution should be prepared just before it is to be used and any that is left over should be destroyed. Sheep on dry feed should not be fed for from 12 to 18 hours before drenching. It is desirable but not necessary to keep sheep Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Klinkman which are on pasture off feed before treating.

To Build Community Sheep Dipping Vat

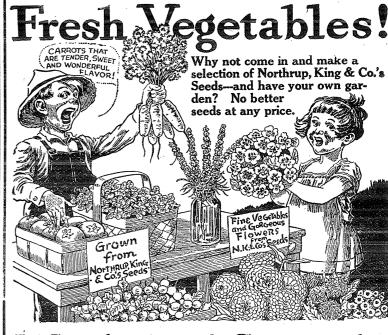

A concrete sheep dipping vat will be constructed as a co-operative community project at the farm of Joe Wells near Vassar on Tuesday, May 29.

This work will be supervised by the Agricultural Extension Division of the Michigan State College a discussion of the procedure will be given in the afternoon at 1:30 p. m. Persons interested in constructing concrete dipping tanks are encouraged to attend. Information on other types of concrete work will also be made available. This demonstration will be followed by the actual dipping and drenching work at a later date at which a representative of the Animal Husbandry Extension Department will be present.

The concrete vat to be constructed is suitable for use in dipping the farm flock. It is also large enough to handle a number of flocks in one day. These tanks are properly dimensioned and constructed so that the handling of sheep is made much easier. These vats are four feet deep, five feet long at the bottom and twelve feet long at the top; and are two feet wide at the top and one foot wide at the bottom A two foot slope is constructed at one end of the tank to make it easier to slide the sheep in.

Any size sheep can be easily handled and can be thoroughly submerged in the tank without having their feet touch the bottom. The head is also ducked under by holding the hand over the mouth and nose. A concrete drain board is also laid and this saves the extra solution which drips off the sheep after they are dipped.

THE STORY

CHAPTER 1.—Mary, daughter of David Brown, self made millionaire, obsessed with the idea that her personality is obscured by the fact that she is the child of the "rich David Brown," determines to make her own way in life, discarding her father's wealth, and her own. She has a million dollars, legacy from her mother, which she insists her father invest in the "wildest dream" imaginable, and about which she must know nothing. She is a graduate of a college of engineering. Her father, secretly admiring her courage, humors her.

CHAPTER II.—As "M. Brown" Mary applies for a position as engineer with the Paradise Valley Project, a California development concern, and is engaged, by letter. On the train, on her way to her job, she meets Denis Craig, who immediately antagonizes her, but excites her interest.

CHAPTER III.—Alighting from the train, Mary is left at a way station, practically penniless, her purse, which she had laid down, having disappeared, and the train gone on without her. Craig, coming to her assistance, is also left behind. He befriends her, despite her coldness toward him, enabling her to continue her journey. She is grateful, but nevertheless has a feeling of humiliation. Arriving at the Project, she is accused by John Stark, chief engineer, of deception in concealing her sex, and again meets Craig, who she learns is the promoter of the development project.

CHAPTER IV.—Insisting she can do "anything a man can do," in the engineering line, Mary is given a position. Craig's engaging personality makes an impression on her, but she cannot make up her mind as to whether he is an honest visionary or a "slicker."

CHAPTER V.—Mary "makes good" on her job, winning the friendship and esteem of her fellow engineers, though having an uneasy feeling that Stark, annoyed at having a woman engineer in the field would be glad of an excuse to discharge her. Among her fellow workers is a young engineer, Neil Goodenough, with whom she has a more or less friendly rivalry. friendly rivalry.

CHAPTER VI. In an accident Mary, at the risk of her life, saves a valuable instrument, and, through the incident, is drawn closer to Craig.

CHAPTER VII.—Mary discovers that she has misjudged John Stark, and that he is really her friend and well wisher. A feeling much resembling love creeps into her heart concerning Denis Craig. though she hesitates to admit it.

CHAPTER VIII .- Mary learns, inadvertently, that it is her money which is financing the Paradise Valley Project, her father having loaned it to Craig for the "wild dream" she had insisted it must be.

CHAPTER IX.—Piqued at actions of Goodenough, in a matter of their mutual work, Mary tenders her resignation. Stark tactfully handles the situation, reconciling the pair. The Project attracts purchasers of home sites, and the future looks rosy. Mary feels she has accomplished her manners and a position for herpurpose, made a position for her-self, unaided, and is jubilant. She is increasingly attracted to Denis.

They went up the hill toward the lighted office of the chief engineer, and entered.

John Stark looked up from his writing.

"Oh, you two!" His keen eyes probed, and as theirs met his understandingly-and a little sheepishly—a smile softened his severe face. "Evidently you found the volumes I picked up for you in the city. That's all, then. Back to your jobs in the morning." Having demonstrated his own leadership by his recognition of individual natural assets, and by placing those assets where they would bring in the greatest return to society, John Stark turned back to his desk.

Mary and Neil went down the path, at first like two awed children who miraculously had escaped punishment. But when they reached the deserted camp-fire, exuberance welled up overwhelmingly in Mary Brown. She not only had her job; she was the recipient of the chief's solicitude. He had gone out of his way to teach her and Wait-a-Minute a lesson in the ethics and the technique of the profession!

"I'm-sorry I messed up your pretty field book, Wait-a-Minute,' Mary said.

'That goes double, Mary. The sorry part. You'd be half-way across the Pacific by now, if you'd been running that reconnaissance."

"Progress is not entirely a matter of speed," Mary informed him as she turned toward the hotel.

"Wait a minute." He overtook her. "You don't suppose, do you, Mary, that I could have worked beside you day by day for a year, and have any real animosity for you in my heart?

"Why-yes. I thought-I thought-"Then think again." His slow smile was more significant than his words. "Look in your thesaurus for an antonym for animosity, will you, Mary?"

· "Oh—oh—Wait-a-Minute!" Mary Brown ran.

Yet, her optimism notwithstanding, it was scarcely two weeks before Mary again was in John Stark's office—by command—listening to his brusque orders; "Turn over your survey party to Anderson tomorrow morning, M. Brown."

"Yes, sir," Mary managed. The chief engineer non-committally was consulting his notes. To all appearances the conversation was ended. What did this portend? She swallowed hard. "And where-if anywhere-shall I

Mary heard his incredible answer then: "Department of design, M. Brown.' Stark looked up at her, a twinkle coming into the deep-set eyes, the ferocity of his bristling little mustache ousted by a smile. "I capitulate, M. Brown, Long ago I capitulated. I have no quarrel with a girl on the job. At least, this girl. I congratulate you, not only for efficiency in your work but for your level-headedness, your balance. You never have been masculine, but you never have used your sex as an alibi. Moreover, you never have let the patent admiration of young engineers interfere with business. With," he chuckled. "progress."

Mary Brown drew in her breath, opened her mouth and closed it, flung out her hands and walked to the window. "I-can't-I can't say anything, sir! Can't—thank you—"

"Don't bother. Design was your aspiration, wasn't it. Mary?" "Oh, yes!"

Mary's head was reeling. Thisthis was realization! She was on her way to success definitely nowby virtue of merit alone. She had put behind her the days of apprenticeship - without pull; without money.

"I want to get our reorganization to functioning," Stark was saying, "by the time Denis stages his coup d'etat."

"Reorganization?" Mary questioned. "I'm leaving the project, except in a consulting capacity—" Mary involuntarily made a cry of protest.

"In the cause of efficiency. The project can do without me from this point. Hilt will have a fine chance to try his wings as chief engineer. Leigh still will be superintendent. I want to see things lined up as I have planned them. And-I want you settled at design before go.'

Mary reached out to take his hands impulsively. "You never can appreciate what you have done for me, sir!"

As he looked down at her he was the John Stark who had fathered her the night of the storm. Her warm outburst touched him.

"Will you always come to me when you need help, Mary?" She nodded.

"That's a promise?" "Yes."

She rushed from his office, her own elation quite transcended by the sense of personal loss felt by all his associates for the executive rejoining his firm in San Francisco, thence to look after the practical end of making some other dreamer's dream come true.

Denis Craig's coup d'etat, through the virgin streets of which-with their scent of fresh pine floors and canvas-Mary now passed, was that dreamer's argument that seeing is believing.

The Paradise Valley project was about to hold open house, and purchasers and prospective purchasers not only were invited to standing in her heart. drop in for a week or two, but, with transported from all parts of the trumpeted wonderland where they would be offered the opportunity of becoming pioneers de luxe on this vast estate which Mary Brown's flouted million had purchased.

Upon the appointed day crowded trains began to roll into the station a mile from the embryonic civic center, the tent city. The great land sales convention was on. Hospitality was rampant.

And the contracts signed were amounting to millions of dollars. Mary Brown, busy from early morning until late at night, was a mixture of emotions.

There was elation. She had made good. There was the thrill of a new adventure, one to which she as the daughter of the rich David Brown had been a stranger. She was playing around with boys of her own age just as she had watched girls unencumbered with millions do. She was popular with them, and one of them had assured her that the feeling he held for her was not called animosity. With the coming of the visitors to Paradise Valley, Mary experienced her first "rush." She was a romantic figure, the girl-engineer in her riding breeches and nutts. She danced and dined and rode and flirted a little with young men blown in by the four winds, and told herself that she was having a grand and glorious time. But there was a little sting behind her joy. No one, of course, admirer or scoffer, could watch Denis Craig in this environment and not be in a conflict of mind about him. His charm, his magnetism, his appeal to all classes of visitors were approached only by one other thing the compelling beauty of the foothills country. The two made a dangerously intriguing combination.

People hung upon his words. They believed. They scrambled to They hailed him as a super buy. man, as a Moses. They talked of his divine inspiration, as he pictured for them an Elysium. There was a stampede for reservations. Could he, would he, build this Elysium. Mary asked herself persistently as she tried to analyze whether this universal adoration provoked or pleased her. Accustomed to daily contacts, if no more than sitting beside him in the dining room, she now saw him from afar, surrounded by his satellites. She saw him riding on horse-

And Mary, watching, felt like a poor working girl, worlds removed from this hero-worshiped monarch of all he surveyed. For all he knew, she was just a poor working girl; she belonged in a different class from him and the moneyed and distinguished clientele he was attract-

Her lips curled-scornfully. Her head went up. If she felt like it, she could buy him out, couldn't she? Him and his million-dollar projectyes, and this girl with her aura of wealth?

Suppose-just suppose-she were to walk up and tell him that it was her million which had bought his expensive plaything? Would he go on solicitously adjusting the rich girl's stirrup? The girl with her air of possession because the world's most popular man—oh, obviously the world's most popular man !-was adjusting her stirrup! What was a stirrup? Had not this beguiling young god handed over his very shoes to her, Mary Brown? Were they not at this moment in an especial sanctuary in her closet? Yea, had she not slept in the paragon's pajamas? What was a stirrup?

She turned to Neil Goodenough. "Let's not go to the boosters' meeting tonight! Instead of listening to more bunk and hooey, let's run over and hear June Leigh tell bedtime stories to her flock!"

Neil accepted with alacrity. That evening a message was delivered at Mary's door from Denis Craig: would she be so kind as to meet him in the morning at sunrise -for a business trip?

CHAPTER X

Hope of Heaven. M ARY looked askance at Denis when she met him, waiting beside his roadster, just as pink routed gray the following morning.

Denis smiled down at her contritely as they started. "It had to be at this unholy hour. My days are packed full. I can just about get back in time for the first thing on my regular schedule." "What has to be done-and

"I'll show you what. 'And why?'" The car sped onward through an exquisite valley, at the end of which they came to the descent into the last canyon.

Before starting down Craig stopped in a jungle of bracken. To their left, upon a rough and isolated eminence commanding a view of all the valley and the canyon below, stood an old vaquero's cabin. "I'd rather own that cabin than all the rest of your project!" Mary burst out impulsively. But when Denis made no answer, she looked from the cabin to him-and then quickly away again with a sudden mist in her eyes, a tightening in her throat, and a quick rush of something that hinted of under-

For Denis-Denis Craig was glorified hospitality, were being touched-was deeply moved, really deenly moved by beguty United States, expenses paid, to this | heard it with her ears before. Now she saw it with her eyes. That meant something-much-as yet intangible to her.

It was becoming tangible. She almost-she quite-had it now. Was it not this? The man beside her might be a dreamer, but he believed in his dreams. That made him sincere, did it not? Mary Brown's mind was made up about Denis Craig, at last.

Swiftly they descended until gray wall advancing toward gray wall left room for the creek and no more, and in the bed of this they traveled until they came out of the

At the head of the canyon, 'There's a fireplace in that cabin, Mary," Craig suggested.

"Don't I know it? I've lunched in there every time we've been within walking distance. Once when it was rainy and I was dogtired, I made the party go on without me, and I spent the night there. The miner's wife, from up that little draw, brought me milk and eggs and mountain lore. It was a heavenly night!"

Denis smiled quietly. Then, "Apropos of the fireplace, and the sustenance—there are bacon and eggs in the back of the car. What would you say to a bit of break-

They ran into the old cabin, hastily built their fire of crackling twigs, and set the coffee pot on to They made toast together, holding it to the coals on the ends of sticks. They ate youthfully.

When they had finished, Mary crossed to the window and stood looking out dreamily.

"So you find romance in this old cabin, do you. Mary?" Denis broke in upon her reverie, coming to her side. "I've always thought it was my own particular sanctuary."

"I'd give my hope of heaven to be able to buy it." "I'll credit you with that pay-

"When I'd squandered my one asset, I'd have to default." "Then I'd take over your equity -just as a gamble."

"A--gamble?" He looked, at her. "That it might be the heaven, the hope of which you spoke of signing away." Mary's eyes followed the sunlight discovering the canyon.

"Mary!" insistently.

"Don't you ever let your dreams run away with you?"

Didn't she? What if Denis could know that her doubts of him had gone scurrying off, sheepish-tailed, like an ashamed little dog that has barked at a make-believe cat? What if he could read the dreams she was dreaming now? This retreat, remodeled to preserve all its rustic romance, shared by the two of them? This project-seeing the thing through together, her funds, his management-

Hastily she attempted a light answer. "I'm-always a little mad when I'm with you, Denny!"

"That's the sweetest thing you ever said to me, Mary. It means things. Just as it meant things when you said you loved this old cabin. I love it, too. I want it. You want it."

He was very close to her. His hair brushed hers as he bent to ask, "Has it ever occurred to you, dear, that maybe we want the same things of life, you and I-all through?

She looked up at him quickly. Teasing had come into his eyes. Teasing-and tenderness, and his arm went about her shoulder. "That we want the same things of life—even though the first words you heard me utter convinced you -just the contrary?"

"Money talks." It shricked, even at this moment. Ah, but it no longer shricked that money was his god. His dreams were that. His dreams-which might run away with him occasionally-but in which he believed.

Still, money was obtruding now. Ominously. Terrifyingly. Wanting to tell him the truth of herself, wanting to shout her silent partnership from the housetops-fear tied her tongue. If she told himshe'd lose him! A millionaire in her own name, until he had spent her inheritance. An heir to millions! That made men run—the ones you might love.

"Mary!" He turned her face up to his. "You have to tell me this! Do you love young Goodenough?" "Oh, no!" quickly. "That is-of course, I love him. But I love Holt and Don and John and the chief

"Darling, don't you dare put me in that pigeon-hole!"

"You don't belong," tremulously, "in that one." "And just where do I belong?" His face—his eyes—his lips—so glose! And she had imagined he was putting her aside these days!

An arm closed about her. His cheek touched her forehead. Unsteadily, "At least, you aren't putting me from you any more,

Putting him from her? If only he'd never let her go! If they could forget everything but this sweet isolation!

She raised her face, stood back from him radiant, both tangible and elusive. "You're-sweet. Denny!" "That's a lot. Just how long."

whimsically, "do you think it will be until you discover I'm the nicest man there is, in every way?" Mary made a dash to their littered table, gathering up dishes.

"It-oughtn't to be so very long, I should say." Just until he made his little wad. so that his pride would stand the shock of a sweetheart in golden shackles. Money was pouring in

Lesson for May 27 THE LAST JUDGMENT

LESSON TEXT-Matthew 25:31-46. GOLDEN TEXT—For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it e good or bad. II Cor. 5:10.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Doing Things

JUNIOR TOPIC-The King's Test INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC-Serving Christ by Serving Others. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

TOPIC-Christ Our Judge.

A more correct topic for today's lesson would be The Judgment of the Nations. According to the legitimate textual and contextual signification it is the judgment of the living nations, which still lies in the future. The idea of a general judgment is a fundamental error. Doctor Pentecost well says, "It is a mischievous habit that has led the Christian world to speak of the judgment as being one great event when all human beings, saints and sinners, Jew and Gentiles, the living and the dead, shall stand up before the great white throne and more wide of the Scriptures." The Bible speaks of several judgments, differing in respect to the subjects to be judged, the place of judgment, the time and result of the judgment. The judgment which we are considering today is not that one set forth in Revelation 20:11-14. It precedes that one by at least 1,000 years. A definite analysis of this lesson will show how entirely distinct this judgment is from the final judgment.

there be judged. Nothing can be

1. The Judge (v. 31).

He is the Son of man, the one who came and died to redeem the human race. At this time he is seen clothed with majesty and power sitting upon his throne acting as judge. There is no judgment, so far as sin is concerned, for those who now accept Jesus Christ as their Saviour (John 5:24).

II. The Time of Judgment (v. 31). This judgment will take place when the Lord comes in his glory accompanied by a retinue of glorious angels, and after he has gathered the elect remnant of Israel. There will be no resurrection in connection with this judgment.

III. The Place of Judgment (v. 31). The prophecies of Joel (2:1-17) and Zechariah (14:1-5) show that it will be in or near Jerusalem. The angel said to Mary, "Thou shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David. And he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end" eral place, there shall be at that time a literal judge occupying a literal place of judgment. IV. The People Judged (vv.32-45). It is expressly declared "before him shall be gathered all nations." They will be the nations left upon the earth after the church has been translated (I Thess. 4:16, 17). These are the nations to whom the gospel of the kingdom shall be preached just prior to the coming of the end of this age. "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come" (Matt. 24:14). This gospel is distinct from the grace of God which is now being preached. The preachers of this gospel will be the Jews (Rev. 7 and Rom. 11). They will move among the nations of the earth with the startling news of the Lord's approaching kingdom.

V. The Issue of the Judgment Some of the nations will gladly receive the message of the kingdom and most kindly receive the King's messengers. Others will persecute them, thrusting them into prison. Here those who receive the message will visit the messengers of the King and provide for their wants. At this time the judge will separate the nations, placing the sheep on the right hand and the goats on the left. The sheep are those who give proper treatment to Christ's brethren, the messengers of the gospel of the kingdom. The goats are those who reject the message and maltreat the messengers. If these three classes, the sheep, the goats, and the brethren be kept separate in our thinking all confusion will be avoided. The sheep will enter upon the inheritance of a prepared kingdom. The goats will go into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels (v. 46).

In the third, they went out Martin and Mrs. Howard Malcolm in order but in the fourth they got were in attendance at the W. C. T. to Dorman for five runs. Ward opened the fourth by singling to right and when the ball got by Lashbrook, Fred went all the way eft Wednesday morning to spend to third. Karr then singled and Graham doubled. Frederick beat a hit to short and Retherford came through with a double to center. Reagh kept the rally going by singling to center and coming home on an overthrow. From then on Dorman kept matters well in hand, allowing but three safeties.

In the ninth, after Sandusky had scored one run and Hastings was on second with the tying run, it began to look like a repetition of the game with Caro. However, Hastings was left stranded when Reiner popped and Lashbrook looked at athird strike.

The local keystone combination of Vader and Donnelly worked very smoothly, Vader accepting eight chances without a slip.

Tuesday's victory marked the third consecutive victory over Sandusky teams this year.

Summer Dental Relief Program in Sanilac County

Dr. Charles Kelly, county chairman, announces that word has been received from Dr. K. R. Gibson, D. D. S., director of Dental Division of the Couzen's Children's Fund of Michigan, that Sanilac county has been chosen as one to receive the summer dental relief program for 1934. This work is to be in conjunction with the county nursing work, of which Eloise Pichette is the Red Cross county nurse and can only be given in a county where there is a full time nurse.

As Sanilac county proved very co-operative and grateful for the program of last summer, the program will be again conducted for a term of 12 weeks starting June 25 and continuing to Sept. 15. The program is an attempt to render the largest amount of excellent operative treatment possible in a hort period of time.

Dental treatment will be given to indigent children regardless of race or creed. Only indigent children of pre-school or grade school age (not over 16 years nor beyond the 8th grade) will be admitted to the clinic. Indigent children are those whose parents cannot pay for dental treatment by the family dentist.

A minimum of 12 and a maximum of 18 children shall be sent to the clinic daily. A day will be giv-will not have an opportunity like by the chairman in the near future.
