The election of members of the Tuscola County Board of Road Commissioners will be left to the people of the county hereafter. For many years, the commissioners were selected by the board of supervisors. The supervisors, at their June session this week, were presented with two sets of petitions. One set of petitions, signed by 3,039 voters, asked the supervisors to change the procedure and have commissioners elected by the people at the regular election, while another set of petitions signed by 828 requested that choice be made by the board of supervisors as in the past. The supervisors settled the matter Wednesday afternoon by a secret ballot when 15 voted for a change and 8 supervisors registered themselves as favoring a continuance of selection by the board.

On Monday, the opening day of the June session, Road Commissioner G. F. Schulz presented the request of the Michigan Bureau of

New House on Old Wall-

Fitting a new house to an old foundation wall may have its difficulties, but how it may be accomplished successfully was demonstrated on the farm of John A Pringle, township clerk of Evergreen, who resides in section 10. Mr. and Mrs. Pringle lost their home by fire several months ago. The walls of the burned house were intact after the blaze and appeared good enough to hold a new structure so they were utilized. While they made their temporary home in manure treatment improved the a garage, the new residence was erected and was near enough to completion so that the family were able to move into it late last fall The inside woodwork of yellow pine was put on almost entirely by Mr. Pringle in his spare time.

The house is 26 by 40 feet in size. On the first floor are living room dining room, kitchen, three sleep ing rooms with closets and a bath The second story, now used as a store room, is large enough to divide into two sleeping rooms.

The Misses Helen and Nellie Pringle, and Phoebe McKee, Mrs George Caister and Maurice Caister enjoyed the sights at the Cen tury of Progress exposition at Chi cago from Wednesday to Saturday

By C. J. Badger, College of Agriculture, University of lilinois,-WNU Service. "Believe it or not," soy beans which are often spoken of as an acid tolerant crop will produce from two to five times as much hay to the acre, when given the benefit of limestone on some of the light-colored soils.

Evidence showing the value of an upplication of the "soil sweetener" s revealed in the results of four years of tests at two soil experiment fields of rather low productive levels maintained by the state university.

At one field, where the soil is a light gray silt loam, the ues of manure gave a yield of 340 pounds of soy bean hay to the acre, but when limestone was applied in addition to manure, the yield of bean hay was 1,700 pounds an acre. The field that received no treatment returned about the same as where manure had been spread. The increase resulting from limestone, when it was applied in addition to manure, amounted to 1,360 pounds, or more than a half ton to the acre. Another experiment field consistng of a yellow-gray silt loam gave somewhat better yields. Soil with no treatment returned 1,040 pounds of soy bean hay to the acre; the yield to an average of 1,420 pounds, and applications of both manure and limestone jumped the harvest to 2,980 pounds, or practically a ton and a half of hay to the acre.

The response to manure over no treatment amounted to 380 pounds, while the response to manure and limestone over manure alone was 1,560 pounds an acre. However, manure and limestone gave returns of 1.940, or nearly a ton to the acre. over the plot which did not receive any treatment.

Crested Wheatgrass Gets Good Start, Lasts Longer One reason why forage specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture are enthusiastic over the merits of crested wheatgrass for planting the drier lands taken out of wheat production this year is the fact that this grass is able to grow at lower temperature than most grasses. Because of this, crest-

Plumpness in Oats

How much hull there is in a sample of oats cannot be judged by the plumpness of the kernels. This was shown by tests made by the Minnesota agricultural experiment station, which in 1930, '31 and '32. tested several recommended varieties of oats to determine hull percentages. There was very close agreement between results from tests at University farm and at Crookston, the average of all tests showing the following hull percent-Lard ages: Rainbow, 25.1 per cent; Minrus, 26.1; Gopher, 26.6; Iogold, 27, and Anthony, 30.2. The studies were made because of common opinion among farmers that varieties with plump-appearing grains, such Graham as Anthony and Gopher, have less hull than those like Minrus and Minota with grains of thinner appearance. The NATION'S GREATEST PICNIC DAY

NDEPENDENCE day for every loval American stands out pre-eminently as the one great national holiday among all the holidays of the year. It is observed by every state in the Union and by the District of Columbia.

Since the signing of the Declaration of Independence this greatest of all picnic days has not wanted for popularity with people in all walks of life, from the farmer and his family to the business man and his family from the great city.

What with the preparations that have been going on and are still in progress, principal of which is the collection of a great feast that will appeal to all in the party, thousands upon thousands of mothers are "chairmen of committees of arrangements"-especially the food supply. That they are doing their duty in a most wonderful manner is attested by the grocer, the butcher, the canned goods shops, and all other places that deal in the type of "eats" that will be suitable for such a great celebration.

As is mother's usual custom on such an occasion she is stocking the special picnic larder with various kinds of canned meats and vegetables that call for little or no attention when time comes for serving. Anticipating that the family will not care to return home until late in the evening, she is planning on two picnic meals instead of only the noon feast; "supper" is to be served at the picnic grounds, where there is to be a Thus the day fireworks display. will be given over entirely to the few days at the Taylor cottage at Independence celebration as never before-judging from the plans, including the food supply. As the evening meal will come mostly from the splendid variety of canned meats, fruits, vegetables and such, as well as from attractive packages of foods that are prepared for just such affairs-all now is anticipation like never before, for an old-time celebration of the "grand and glorious Fourth.'

but petitions that crossed the Atlantic were of no avail. Later it was followed by import duties on glass, paper, paints and tea. Because of protests, all finally were repealed except the tax on tea. Colonists refused to buy tea, but shiploads of it were sent away to New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Charleston. It appeared that Britain was attempting to force Americans both to buy tea and to pay a tax on it. Boston rallied to the occasion with the celebrated "Boston Tea Party," a midnight festivity in which men disguised as Indians boarded a ship and threw the tea cargo into the harbor. To discipline Boston for this, the British then closed the port to all shipping and sent soldiers to occupy the city.

There were other measures of reprisal also. Believing that Massachusetts was the fountainhead of resistance, parliament passed another act revising the charter of Massachusetts and providing for the transportation to England of certain offenders for trial. Massachusetts rebelled, the other colonies stood behind her. There were hurried activities which savored of preparation for war. Minutemen were organized and quantities of ammunition were collected and stored at Concord. General Gage, occupying Boston, determined to destroy these stores and sent 800 men from Boston to do the work.

When they reached Lexington on the morning of April 19, 1775, they found about 50 minutemen in their way. They fired on the "embattled farmers," killing eight and wounding ten, and proceeded to Concord. On their way back to Boston they were attacked by gathering militia forces and all but annihilated. The war had begun. A few weeks later followed the siege of Boston, the Battle of Bunker Hill and that great day when Washington took command of the Continental army.

THE war went on with a ven-geance and on May 15, 1776, a convention, held at Williamsburg, Va., adopted resolutions in which the delegates in the general congress were instructed "to propose to that respectable body to declare the United Colonies free and independent states." Three weeks later, Richard Henry Lee, in behalf of the Virginia delegates, introduced the resolution in congress. It passed and a committee was appoint-

((THE biggest lemon as ever ran on a race-track." Portly "Zippy" Tanner, the Sunrise stable's trainer, indicated a chestnut gelding breezing along the rail on Latonia race track. "Yea," grinned Pat Calhoun, the stable's contract jock, "and with Corky Milam on his back it's a lemon rode by a jinx."

"Jinx nothing," Zippy shook his head sadly. "Corky can ride. But his guts went in a spill and now he needs an opening big enough for a cavalry troop."

The trainer was right, and no one knew it better or more bitterly than Emil Milam, otherwise Corky, a nickname holding over from the days before the spill which his cry, "Pull over or I'll cork you," did not prevent.

Three months later doctors assured him he was again like new. But the old Corky was gone. Tolerant horsemen expected him to snap out of it, but when his riding showed no improvement, mounts became few and far between for Corky.

The "winner's circle" had once known Corky but that territory was unknown to Caesarian, the fouryear-old which Corky's friend, Slim Sanders, had acquired for $75 in the paddock sale of two weeks ago. The chestnut gelding Caesarian, by Trumpeter, dam, Golden Bells, on workouts should have won many a race, but finished out of the money in each. Six furlongs in 1:11 or a mile in 1:38 was nothing unusual for the gelding in the morning; but the races which pay off are run in the afternoon.

Corky, trainer and jock of Slim's one-horse racing stable, sat on a bale of straw by a stall door in poverty row; stables where the owners of one or two selling platers found quarters. In his hand was a telegram.

Genial Doctor Wird, the jockey club's official veterinarian, ambled slowly down the shed row to make a call farther down the line, when Corky's yell halted his steps.

"Oh, Doc; read this, will you?" Old Doc, towering above the rider's small form, took the message and stepping toward the light read its contents. Then came his deep-throated laugh. "My congratulations, Corky," he boomed. "There is nothing to worry about in this." "But it says they had to perform some kind of operation." "What of that? Doesn't it say also the operation was successful? 'Mother and child doing fine.' If there was any danger the hospital staff would surely inform you."

He turned to go, but stopped once more. "Slim's gelding is entered in tomorrow's stake, the Quickstep, isn't he?" he asked.

Caesarian, startled by Corky's screech and feeling the sting of the lash, shot ahead. Corky's left foot scraped against the top rail of the infield fence; but they were through, and . . . The roar of the stands was like far-away thunder in Corky's ears as three horses and their riders flashed MOVABLE BROODER under the wire with a last musclestraining effort. Had he won? Corky didn't know, it was close,

"You son-of-a-gun," said Slim, "you sure did it, but, boy, you blame near gave me heart failure when you went through that knothole on the rail.' "It was close," chuckled Corky,

'but the old screech startled 'Dunk' into giving us room."

Two hours later the bale of straw in front of Caesarian's stall was supporting the forms of Corky and Slim. The gelding had cooled out nicely and was now contentedly munching hay out of a rack in a corner of his stall, while the drone of a voice he knew came to his sensitive, twitching ears.

"As near as I can figure it out," said Corky, "Caesarian is under the impression a race must be run close to the rail. And working him out in the mornings I noticed whenever I was pulling him up enough to make him change his stride, he took that to mean work was done for the day. Seems funny no one noticed it," Corky grinned, "but most exercise-

Moon Farming Moon farming, says the United States Department of Agriculture, has no support from any scientific point of view. Most of the beliefs associated with moon farming are not based on the assumption that direct moonlight is especially potent, but rather that the moon exercises some mysterious and occult power over mundane affairs. Even the light and heat from the moon are not sufficient to affect plant growth materially. The moon does not govern agriculture because it has no appreciable influence on any of the major conditions affecting the growth of plants.

"He is," affirmed Corky. "But-" "Well, you at least should make an effort to win that race after this." Old Doc tapped the paper in Corky's fingers. "I don't believe the horse is good enough, but there is no harm in your trying."

Latonia, dressed in green and white, entertained the usual Saturday throng of devotees. The horses entered in the fifth race, the Quickstep handicap, three-year-olds and in front of the grandstand at the post.

Then-they're off!

The horses shot for the clubhouse turn urged on by bootheels and whips, each jockey trying for a contending position.

"Sure enough, going for the rail. That's you, boy," Corky's chuckling voice and a very light pull on the reins steadied the chestnut. "Fast Mail's in front; Traffic Light's secon' and we're third. No, we're not; here comes Blue White. That's the baby," Corky, crouching way up on Caesarian's withers, crooned into the twitching ears of his mount, "Let known. His work was discovered 'im go. Those saps'll run themselves dizzy: that half was run in .59, or I'm a Dutchman, and something's going to crack."

And if that happened-Corky nodded grimly to himself-he was been finished, and on another rock sure to find tight quarters next to the rail, unless he took out while there was still time. But this was supposed to be the gelding's daythe rythmic play of muscles against his legs told Corky the horse was all there-and Corky swore profane oaths he'd not show the white feather.

At Corky's right was a thunder of the canals, he says, offers concluhoofs, and a sorrel head, Fieldlark's, sive proof that they are artificial, nodded into view and came on. Fast and for works to be constructed Mail in front was all in and coming back. Traffic Light, "Dunk" up, the earth would suggest a race of urged on by his rider's whip, was squeezing through on the rail and Caesarian, Corky gritted his teeth and forced himself into sitting still, the doggone old fool, followed him like a pup-and-the rider's chokedin breath sighed relief-made it.

Then-was there a sign of faltering in Traffic Light's running? There was. Traffic Light was bearing out and Corky hunkering closer to his mount's neck inched over toward the rail.

"Yeeeeeaaahh! Pull over, Dunk, islands bare. or I'll cork you." called Corky.
