VILLAGES TO ENFORCE LIQUOR LAW RULES

State Commission Says Municipalities Have Full Control of Licensees.

The Michigan Liquor Control Commission in a letter which was sent out a few days ago to prosecuting attorneys, sheriffs, and chiefs of police of the state, points out that municipalities have full control over the enforcement of licensees within their jurisdiction.

"Eighty-five per cent of the money received for licenses," the letter reads, "is returned to the municipality. We believe that every municipality ought to have a special force to see that the provisions, rules and regulations of the Liquor Act are enforced. The Liquor Con-trol Commission will cooperate with you 100%, but the enforcement is as much a part of the duties of your police force as the detection and prevention of other crimes.

"We are furnishing under separate cover, to be used by the enforcing departments, reports which should be made direct to this office upon which the commission will not hesitate to act. It is apparent that it was the intention of the legislature that municipalities were to assume a burden in this enforcement. Some municipalities have Turn to page 5, please.

Freshman College May Be Established at Cass City; No Tuition Fees for Students.

FERA FUNDS WILL PAY SALARIES OF TEACHERS

Cass City may be selected for the establishment of a freshman college in the coming school year, it was announced Wednesday. This proposed college project will enable students to procure a freshman college course while living at home. The plan provides that three instructors' salaries be paid by FERA funds and that there will be no tuition charges to the college freshmen. The main expenses for students can be limited to books and clothes. Requirements for the establishment of a freshman college in a community include a minimum enrollment of 40 students who must certify that they are financially unable to attend college elsewhere, with building accommodations to be furnished by the local school board.

A preliminary meeting of students interested in a freshman college here will be held tomorrow (Saturday) in the Cass City high High school graduates of need, school auditorium at 10:00 a. m. character and ability to do college work will be aided by the new student job program scheduled for Sept. 1, says Chas. LESSON TEXT-Micah 2:1-3; 3:1. GOLDEN TEXT-He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, and to walk humbly with thy God?

PRIMARY TOPIC-Micah Tells How to Please God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—What God Requires of Us.
INTERMEDIATE AND TOPIC—What God Expects of Us. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADUI

I. Evil Workers Denounced (2:1

1. How they worked (v. 1). Their returning them, relief measures pulse, but of deliberate purpose. a. They gave themselves to the devising of wicked schemes. ning ways of accomplishing their wicked schemes.

c. They executed their plans in the morning light. They did what their wicked minds devised.

2. What they did (v. 2). a. They coveted fields (v. 2). In this they violated the tenth commandment.

b. They violently took away fields and houses (v. 2). A noteworthy example is found in the case of Ahab taking Naboth's vineyard. This in turn is an apt picture of the monopolists of today taking possession of land, oil, gold, silver, and other commodities. c. They oppressed men and their houses (v. 2). By house here is meant a man's descendants, that is, the inheritors of his property.

3. Their punishment (v. 3). Against such evil-doers righteous retribution is being devised and shall fall upon the wicked with such weight as to humble them.

II. Upon Whom Judgment Shall Fall (3:1-8). 1. The unfaithful rulers (vv. 1-4). Because of love for the evil and a hatred for the good, the rulers mercilessly destroyed the people. 2. The false prophets (vv. 5-8). They served for hire. As long as supplied with food, they prophesied to please the people. II. The Judgment Which Was to Fall (vv. 9-12). Jerusalem was destroyed because of the sins of the people. Just as the righteous retribution then fell. we are assured that there will be no escape from the coming judgpeople. IV. God's Controversy With His People (6:1-13).

Wicked men may go on to a certain time with their schemes, but eventually they will be obliged to give an account to God.

1. The hills and mountains are called to bear witness against Israel (v. 21). The people had turned a deaf ear to God, so that the inanimate creation was called to witness against them. The whole realm of nature bears witness to the fact of God's being and his goodness.

2. The guilty to be left to state the case (v. 3). Through the prophet, God, the King of the Universe, abdicates his rights and allows his sinning people to make charges against him. The one who has right on his side fears no argu-

3. God recounts his mercies unto the people (vv. 4, 5). Having called for the charge and none having been brought, the Lord thrusts home upon their conscience the memory of his great mercies unto

a. He brought them out of Egyptian bondage (v. 4). He has done even more for us who were under bondage to sin and Satan.

b. He sent before them a trio of leaders (v. 4). Moses the lawgiver, Aaron the high priest, and Miriam the prophetess were sent as his wit-

c. Turned Balak's curse into a blessing through Balaam (v. 5). 4. God's requirements (vv. 6-13).

a. The great question, "Wherewith shall I come before the Lord?" (v. 6). The Jews could not deny the charge brought against them by the Almighty. They could make no plea for justification.

b. The complete answer (v. 8). (1) "to do justly." Strict equity was to characterize all their dealings with their fellowmen. (2) "To love mercy." The heart is to be diligently set to do good to our fellows, especially the needy and dependent. (3) "To walk humbly with thy God." To recognize that they were sinners before God, that they had no claim upon him except his pardoning love.

STANDARD

When you buy Iso=Vis "D" you get the very latest development in fine, sturdy lubrication for automobile engines—a motor oil treated by the patented Propane Dewaxing and Chlorex Extraction process. That gives it a unique quality-it will not sludge even under the hardest, hottest driving! Furthermore, it deposits almost no carbon, and its "body" doesn't thin out dangerously under heat or thicken greatly in cold. All these advantages go to make up the most

The Tuscola County Fair presented one of the best entertainment programs in its history. No expense was spared in procuring feature acts and the people attending the exposition were well pleased with the amusment program. Three other events the same week probably cut the attendance considerably-the Centennial celebration at Sandusky, the home-coming at Lapeer and the big circus at Saginaw and Bay City. Cool weather, officers say, cut down the grandstand receipts several evenings. Special entertainment features this year were procured at a larger expense than in 1933.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I .- Ruined, financially, CHAPTER I.—Ruined, financially, by the stock market crash, James Nelson, Boston merchant, breaks the news to his household. Nance is on the verge of her introduction to society, the date of her debut having been set. A short time before, an elderly cousin of Nelson's, Columbine, had written suggesting that Nance come to her at Pine Ridge, Colo., as a paid companion. The offer had been regarded by the family as a joke.

CHAPTER II.—Jack urges Nancy o accept Cousin Columbine's prop-sition, thus relieving their father f a certain financial burden, and offering to go with her so that she will not feel too lonely. The girl is at first appalled by the idea, but agrees that Jack write to Cousin Columbine, and they will await her answer. Columbine wires welcome to both of them, and despite their parents' apprehension of Nance's re-action to the situation they know must face, it is arranged that the two shall go.

CHAPTER III.—At the railroad station the youngsters are welcomed by Cousin Columbine. They are somewhat dismayed by her unconventional attire and mannerisms, but realize she has character and a certain charm. The driver of their car is a young man, Mark Adam, son of a close friend of the old lady. The desolation (to Nance's city ideas) of Pine Ridge appalls the girl.

CHAPTER IV.—The newcomers meet Aurora Tubbs, Cousin Calumbine's cook and housekeeper, and Matthew Adam, Mark's older brother. The old-fashioned furnishings of her bedroom further depress Nance. Cousin Columbine explains her reasons for desiring Nance to come to her, and tells some experiences of her 73 years of life on the plains.

After an afternoon of Christmas shopping with Matthew Adam Nance arrives home to find the house brilliantly illuminated. Evidently something out of the ordinary is at hand.

CHAPTER IX

TT WAS at Christmas dinner that Nancy divulged her plan for the Aladdin library, a proposition which met with instant enthusiasm. John Adam readily agreed to supply the sign: and one day in January Mark brought it in from the ranch.

"Dad's been so temperamental you'd think he was painting a picture for the art museum." he declared. "Honestly, Nance, since you wished this job on him that man's neglected his cooking shamefully; but the sign's a corker."

"I'll say it is!" Nance spoke almost with awe. "I never expected anything so-so professional; and those Aladdin lamps at either end are stunning. Your father must have spent a lot of time on this sign, Mark. Can you put it up if we go over to the schoolhouse now?

"I came prepared, lady; and there's a box of books at the station which our sweet young Denver cousin collected for you. Matt'll be down to finish the shelves this afternoon, and-Hi there, Aurora Tybbs! Come see this sign."

Aurora emerged from the kitchen, and stood, arms akimbo, admiring eyes on John Adam's handiwork.

"If it don't look exactly like boughten one!" she exclaimed. "Your father's a regular artist, ain't he? I wonder would he letter me some callin' cards. I've hankered for some o' the silly things ever since Victor's cousin Ella had some writ by a one-armed soldier who was doin' 'em in a doorway in

ones.

Cousin Columbine came briskly down the steps.

"It's a beauty, isn't it?" said Nancy, her face glowing.

"It surely is. Are you going to put it up today, Mark?"

"Soon as I swipe a ladder out of your barn. You'll have to come along, Nancy, and boss the job." Those days were full of interest, for Aunt Louise and the girls at school had responded generously to Nancy's plea for books. Mother and Dad had doubled the number; Phil had collected twenty more; and Aunt Judy, immediately on hearing about the scheme, had sent a check for the purchase of new

No check had ever looked so big to Nancy Nelson, or been so welcome: and one day Mark drove her at this point in his address, Jack haven't gone yet, feller; and don't whole lot. That's straight, Matt.

to the Springs to purchase this important addition to her library. He also improved the occasion considerably by taking her to lunch at the Antlers coffee room, and to a movie. It was dark when they reached Pine Ridge again, to find Aurora declaring that their mangled bodies were doubtless at the bottom of some ravine. In fact, as Mark said later, she looked a trifle disappointed when they arrived safe and sound in her shining kitchen! "Didn't I say you were demented, Aurora Tubbs?" observed Miss Columbine triumphantly. Despite the tone, her face looked noticeably relieved; and Nance exclaimed: "Oh, dear! we only went to a movie."

"And me, worryin' myself sick for nothin'," grumbled Aurora. "A movie! Not even a flat tire; and us wonderin' if your necks was brok-

That day seemed long ago to Nancy when on an afternoon in February she went down the unkempt street, turned at the filling station and ascended a low hill on which stood the abandoned schoolhouse, "erected in 1902," Cousin Columbine had told her, to replace the one destroyed by fire. It was a small frame building with no pretense at beauty; but the girl paused for a moment to admire John Adam's handiwork before she unlocked the door. The air outside was warmer than within, and Nance opened a window before proceeding with what Jack called her "janitorial duties," The airtight stove must be lighted, and the whole place dusted before the first arrival should appear. These tasks completed, Nancy sat down behind the kitchen table which served as librarian's desk, and looked about with satisfaction.

Perhaps the girl didn't wholly realize that this satisfaction which was like nothing she had ever experienced before, was the result of having achieved somethingsomething really worthwhile. She had had help, of course; but the idea had been her own and Nance had put it through triumphantly. "I couldn't have done it without the others," she told herself, "but at least, they wouldn't have done it without me. It had never occurred to them; and Cousin Columbine was doubtful that the plan would work." Yet, being no wet-blanket, the old lady had done her bit by arranging for the use of the schoolhouse, and writing to the Oklahoma family who came to Pine Ridge summers. This proved an inspiration, for they responded with a box of books and a beautiful Navajo rug in gray and scarlet which covered the center of the floor, giving the place a homey look. To the natives of Pine Ridge the Aladdin library seemed wonderful enough as it was. "And how every one of those blessed Adams had worked!" thought Nance with gratitude. Father Adam's neat lettering adorned more than three hundred books which Juanita and Mary Taylor had helped her cover with brown paper. They had had fun over it, too.

Mother Adam made and donated cretonne hangings for the windows. Matthew and Mark had built the shelves: low shelves which girdled the whole room, made from lumber they "just found lying around the place," and stained dark brown. Even John, busy at school, appeared one week-end with a dozen books; and Luke painted four chairs found in the school house. Transformed a cheerful Chinese red, these proved such a success that he insisted on painting Nancy's "desk' as well, and a table for magazines found in Aurora's cellar; while his mother sacrificed a wicker porch chair, cushioned to match the hangings at the window. "This place would be almost cozy if it weren't for the bare walls." said Mary Taylor. "But don't you mention the lack of pictures be fore Juanita. No knowing what impossible contribution she might bring in!" 1.11

Nance smiled, and answered: "I'll forage in Cousin Columbine's attic. I saw an old engraving of Lincoln up there the other day."

There was also one of George Washington; and Mary appeared that afternoon with what she said her mother called "a yard of authors," photographs of the New England poets framed in oak.

Eve Adam laughed when she saw this offering.

"It brings things back, Nancy. Stored in our attic is a yard of roses; and we had a yard of kittens in the nursery. That idea used to be all the rage."

No wonder Nancy felt a thrill of pride at the result of her planning! Out of what a few short weeks before had been a bare and useless room, had blossomed this cheery little place: and already the people of the village were asking if it couldn't be opened every night. Ten days ago they had had their "housewarming," with hot chocolate and doughnuts for refreshments - a party which even Victor Tubbs had roused himself sufficiently to attend! This had been on a Saturday, and the minister who conducted servcheerful time of year, you know; ices in the Pine Ridge church twice, and she's getting old." every month, arrived in time to make a speech. Nance hadn't counted on that; but it was a good speech and she liked the minister despite the fact that he referred to her as in Pine Ridge, folks." "our dear young benefactor." Indeed, had been stricken with an attack of choking, and at least four Adams had winked in her direction: while the sophisticated Nance Nelson had felt her ears grow scarlet with confusion.

Nance smiled at the memory. She was feeling particularly happy this afternoon, for good news had arrived from home. Dad was making a new start with a splendid firm, and had been offered an unexpectedly good price for the city house.

"In some ways it's a wrench to give it up," wrote her mother, "but we can't lose this chance; and in any çase we shall stay in Edgemere for several years. It's such a joy to see your father his cheerful self once more. These anxious months have brought some gray hairs; but he's happy and interested now, and wondering if you're not almost ready to come home. . . ."

Home! The girl drew a long, long breath. It would be wonderful to see Dad and Mother and Phil and the aunts, and all the old crowd, of course; but Cousin Columbine was going to miss her frightfully. And she couldn't leave until the library was running smoothly and she found somebody to fill her place.

Nancy leaned forward, lifting a child's bank which was placed on her desk for voluntary contributions, and smiled as a reassuring rattle met her ears. The first donation had come from a small girl who said, as she dropped in a shining penny: "It's to help your library, Miss Aladdin." Nothing had ever pleased Nance half so much as this innocent mistake in her identity. Matthew Adam, who overheard it, had thrown her a smile of appreciative understanding: while his father was so delighted with the appellation that he'd addressed her as Miss Aladdin ever since.

The bank had flourished. Yesterday Juanita had contributed the price of three confession magazines, and was really enjoying some decent novels. Two boys from a nearby ranch whom Nance had supposed little better than morons, were deyouring good travel books: and the wife of a health-seeker two miles back of the village, told Nancy with tears in her eyes that it seemed "like heaven" to have something to read again.

"And to think." said Cousin Columbine when the girl recounted this pathetic incident, "that I've been too thoughtless to look up those people and see their needs. But so many sick folks come and go that we take them too much for granted. I'm ashamed of myself. No wonder they call you Miss Aladdin!"

Steps sounded without, and Nance glanced up. It was not yet two o'clock, but someone was coming. Then the door swung back to admit her brother and Matthew Adam. Luke was about again now; and Jack was job hunting.

"Any luck?" asked Nancy, as the boy drew up two gay red chairs. Matthew nodded.

"Your kid brother seems to profit by the misfortunes of others. Luke breaks a leg, and Jack gets his job. And now my Uncle Tom (Mother's brother, who has a ranch out on the plains) is down with flu along with two of his men, and has sent an S O S for one of us fellers to help them out. Mark's drawn the unlucky number, and Jack's going back to the ranch again to take his place.

"Well!" said Nance. "I'm sorry to have Mark go, of course, but it's marvelous for Jack; and sometimes there are complications after flu!' "A lot of sympathy you have for Uncle Tom!" grinned Matthew.

Nancy laughed. "I was merely wondering how long the job would last. Time goes so rapidly: and some day we've got to turn our faces to the East, you know."

Jack said nothing; and suddenly Matt's color rose. "Why-you're not leaving us this spring, are you? I-I mean Miss Columbine said vou'd stay a year!' "I know: but such a thought never entered our heads. Matt. And now Dad's made another start I'm pretty sure they'll want us to come home. Not that I don't dread leaving Cousin Columbine. I'm awfully afraid she's going to miss us."

Jack, still silent, arose and went over to a window. Matthew sat looking into space. "Some-some of the rest of us will miss you, too, he said surprisingly Nancy." "There's Mother and-and-"

Nance laughed outright, and asked, eyes lighted with merriment: "Why spoil a pretty speech like that. Matt?"

"Spoil it?" Jack came back, grinning, and slumped into the cushioned chair. "She means, old man, that this was no time to mention Mother! Honest, Nance, have we got to go home this spring?"

"You don't want to?" questioned his sister.

"Do you?" he countered. The girl was silent, looking down at the toe of Matthew's boot. "I don't know, exactly," she said at last. "I'm crazy to see every one at home, of course; though I'd rath- you're going East?" er stay here through the summer. But I wonder if Cousin Columbine

Nance went to the door to watch moment the girl asked, her eyes on that undulating vista: "Does your uncle live right on the prairie, Matt?"

The young man nodded. "Sixty miles out, in a big rambling ranch house surrounded by cottonwoods-bully place. Those plains are wonderful, Nancy, and sometimes treacherous, too. We'll take you out after the weather's settled. No knowing what thrilling adventures we may have!" Light words. . . . Matt little thought that only a few weeks later they would come back to him during long, tragic hours which none of them was ever to forget.

March "came in like a lamb," and continued lamb-like for so long that Nancy hung her fur coat at the very back of her closet, and concluded that spring had come. It was on one of these rare days when Aurora, deep in an orgy of housecleaning, ordered the girl emphatically to "clear out," that Nance decided to test the woodland trail to the hilltop where she had gone with Matthew three months before; and reaching the summit, dropped breathless at the foot of the old pine.

She had wanted to go out to the Adam ranch that morning, but it in Mother that she'd dyed that aw was "library day," and Mary Taylor, | ful evening dress dark blue." who would have taken her place behind the desk, was visiting in Pueblo. "Come on home with me, marvelous picture, with Pike's Peak Matt, and I'll smuggle you an apple looking only about a mile away.

Suddenly it struck the girl as this wonderful old tree could talk! Mr. Adam. Why, it had stood here in silence and watched that Indian and his boy approach the lonely cabin he?" questioned John Adam. where a small Colorado Columbine was rapturously enjoying her first Christmas tree! Did it tug at its forth a warning? mused Nance whimsically; and then said aloud:

"But I'd never have had these thoughts if Matt hadn't put them bine. into my head, perhaps. He's a queer boy—Matt Adam—so awfully shy most of the time, and such a riot when he forgets himself. I never saw anyone just like him; but there are days when I like his brother even more. Somehow Matt makes you want to protect him, he's so sensitive. And in that Tux the night of my-" Nance started, blushing as red as ever the approaching Matthew had. He smiled and apologized: "Sorry I scared you. Thought maybe you saw the truck bumping along the road down there. I caught a glimpse of an orange tam and made a guess that you'd be under it. Mother wants you for supper; and Dad has promised to fry chickens if you'll beside her. "Of course. You can ride back with Luke when he gets the milk working a tunnel with no success. cans this afternoon."

"That's grand," smiled Nance. "How did your mother know that I was crazy to go out to the ranch

"He did?" Matthew nodded.

Nance pondered that. "I knew Jack was fond of me, of course: but when I hesitated about coming to Colorado he-he called me a parlor ornament, and -"

Jack nodded; and the old lady continued: "Those buildings, and that wayside cemetery, are all that remain to tell the tale of a prodigious hoax which was planned and carried out sucessfully by old Marsh Pemperton, You Adams have heard the story many times."

"Never from you," Eve Adam re-Columbine. You saw the place in its heyday, I suppose."

"I surely did: and to one of my age it's not even ancient history. The Pemperton hoax was started in 1894 soon after the boom at Crinple Creek. I dare say that as a child, Eve, you heard your people mention it, for the news must have spread much farther than Denver. You see, the general feeling in those days was that all these mountains were lined with gold, and that any one could take a pick and dig it out; but old man Pemperton had been and I dare say he got impatient." "How much of the land 'round there did he own, Miss Columbine?'

For that hillside cemetery with its pathetic graves is the direct result of this fraudulent scheme of his. It was easy enough to start a gold excitement. The news spread rapidly, as such news always does; and it wasn't long before the stampede began. There was pandemonium in that lovely valley. People staking out claims - starting tunnels - buying 'town lots' which Pemperton himself marked out and sold at sky high prices. One fortunate woman who had paid twenty-five dollars for a strip of land in that locality a year before, sold it during that hectic time for ten thousand! That sounds incredible now, but it's the way things go in boom days. I've seen it happen. "More than a thousand people, possibly twice that number, came pouring in. The town was incor-there were no less than a dozen saloons-three general stores-a long street of frame houses or tents, and even two ore-crushing machines, though not one ounce of precious metal was ever discovered in the vicinity."

"What became of the people when the bubble burst?"

"Drifted away, poor souls, leaving their dead behind them-their high hopes crushed. I recall one family stopping at our house for water, and Father bringing them in to be fed and warmed. They were a pitiful sight; the young mother frail and worn by hardships, the father in ragged shirt and trousers and an ailing baby. They promised to let us know how things went with them but we never heard" "'Ships that pass in the night' said Matthew softly; and Luke broke in:

"But will you tell us how old Pemperton escaped being tarred and feathered when the hoax was discovered?"

"For the very good reason," re plied Miss Columbine, "that the scamp was nowhere to be found! When the boom was at its height he disappeared; and now all that is left of the 'ghost city' which bore his name, are those tumble-down buildings (one of which cost a woman five thousand dollars, I was told), and that small burying ground where lie the bodies of those who were too frail to survive the rigors of frontier life." "I'd like to see that place," said Nancy, as Cousin Columbine ceased

"You shall, my dear; and we'll make an excursion out on the plains as well. They can be so beautiful, our western prairies, that I hate to think how cruel they sometimes are;

"Cruel?" Nance questioned, a lit tle puzzled, "You mean those sud den blizzards when the grazing cattle have no shelter? Well, this winter's over, Cousin Columbine. and if you've no objection I'll start getting acquainted with the plains tomorrow. I've got a marvelous idea. Why can't I ride to Prairie ranch with Jack and Matthew? It would be a lark."

"You're a new woman, Nancy Nelson," remarked her brother, "if you regard as anything like a lark the necessity of piling out of bed along with the robins! We'll pass your tower at five a. m., young lady. Do you think you can make it?" "Of course she'll make it," put in Matthew eagerly. "We'll get lunch at Uncle Tom's, Nance. It'll be bully having you along." (To be continued).

DEAR Mrs. Post: We are invited out a great deal, and why, I don't know, because we have so far not been able to return anything. minded her. "Tell it again, Miss We do send candy, or sometimes their dinners, week-end and theater right one half block. invitations. Ought we to stop accepting these? Oh, if only we had more money!

> Answer: One need never return invitation for invitation. The only thing that matters is to show our appreciation of the kindness shown us in the best way we can. In other words, by the book, candy, flowers, or by things costing time and thought and heart, which are often more valuable than things costing merely money. Nor is it at all necessary to feel that you are unable to give a party. Remember that a young couple living in a single room. which has a folding sofa-bed, so that the room can be made into the semblance of a sitting room, can perfectly well ask friends they care for (after all, others are of small importance) to come to their "homein-a-room."

When people do things with modest hospitality, and fail, it is not because of their stinted means, but because they entirely overlook the fundamental fact that the success of a party is far more dependent upon the spirit of hospitality-actually the spirit of friendliness-than it is upon lavishness of provision.

Would you know the real secret of successful party-giving? It has not a thing in the world to do with money. It is simply the gift of never outgrowing a child's imagination. In other words, the spirit of "let's pretend" that enters into the play of all children.

Unless you can enter into the spirit of this hospitality, unless you can delight to have the friends you like share your festival, your party -even though it be given in a palace with rows of lackeys and a ton of choicest viands-will be but a heavy procession of over-richly laden minutes. Whereas, if the enthusiasm of your welcome springs from innate friendliness-from joy in furthering the delight of good fellowship beneath your own roofyou need never doubt that those who have accepted your hospitality once will not eagerly look forward to doing so again and again.

Primaries Sept. 11

TO THE VOTERS:

As a candidate for the nomination for Circuit Judge in the Republican primaries to be held in September, any support given me for that high honor will be greatly appreciated. If nominated and elected, I pledge my every effort to discharge the very important responsibilities of that position to the best of my ability.

LOUIS C. CRAMTON.

Mr. Cramton was born on a farm in Lapeer County 58 years ago, and graduated from the University of Michigan Law School in 1899. He served Lapeer County as Circuit Court Commissioner and as Assistant Prosecuting Attorney. After serving as Representative in Congress in this district for several terms he was for two years Special Attorney to the Secretary of Interior. He is now engaged in the practice of law at Lapeer. He has proven his ability and has had a is not merely an occasion for favoring anyone by conferring upon him. It is an select the one that, in their judgment, can best serve them in that important post. His integrity, his fairness, will be the great safeguard of the rights of person and property for every citizen. His courage, his public spirit, his devotion to public duty, will mean much to the public welfare. His experience with men and affairs should be broad. He should stand for observance and enforcement of law. His public record and his private life should be a guarantee of these things. He should be old enough to have matured judgment and young enough to work and to bear heavy responsibilities.

Lou Cramton measures up to these requirements in a high degree. He has made good in important public service so notably as to attract national attention. He stood by his convictions even when that must mean defeat. Neither influence nor position were ever needed to stir him to action when he could render service. His public record has been a credit to his home town and his district. In a field of five well trained men, Lou Cramton is a safe choice.

CASS CITY HIGH SCHOOL LIBRARY

Twenty years from now the world will be in the hands of you boys and girls who are now ready to enter high school. You are all looking forward to the time when you will be active and successful in the affairs of your chosen field. Those of you who act promptly and wisely will realize your dreams; those who neglect your opportunity may find hopes shattered and dreams of success dissipated.

Just received at the school office

-Mich., Aug. 23, 1934

Supt. of Schools, Cass City, Mich., Dear Sir-

May I request you to mail me a complete list of the subjects studied, and for which I received credit, during my recent training in the Cass

City Schools. I am greatly interested in completing my high school work and going as far as possible toward a broader education. Much do I regret the fact that I so willingly consented to discontinue my school work when the golden opportunity presented itself, but I still feel that it is not too late to go out and work for the thing that seems so well worth going after.

My one ambition is to fit myself for the field of professional activities to which I am best adapted.

Sincerely, A former student of C. C. H. S.

The above letter is convincing proof that NOW is YOUR golden opportunity for an education in Cass City High School.
