60 WANTITO ENTER FRESHWAN COLLEGE

English and History Are the Only Subjects that Are Required.

At a meeting held at the Cass City school on Monday, of students who were interested in the establishment of a freshman college here, 42 filled out application blanks as required for entrance. This number has since grown to approximately 60, according to Chas. Duffield, Tuscola County Emergency Welfare Relief administrator.

C. W. Price, superintendent of the Cass City schools, was in Lansing Thursday attending a meeting of superintendents in whose schools it is expected that the freshman colleges of the state will be located. At this meeting at the Olds hotel, information was disseminated by officials in charge regarding instructions for students, text books and courses of study.

English and history, it is said, will be the only required subjects in the freshman college course. Other studies are college mathematics, Spanish, economics or sociology. An effort will be made to secure a teacher here who will also teach free hand art and another who can give instruction in music, possibly vocal. It is expected that four teachers will be required for a freshman college here.

Assignments of these characters to representative members of the class should be made the week before, so that they may come prepared to present the vital characteristics of these men.

II. The Application of the Prophetic Messages to Modern Life.

Assignments should be made the preceding Sunday, so that the mem bers of the class may come prepared to make application of the vital messages of the prophets to the affairs of modern life. The following questions may be considered as representative:

1. What application can be made of the prophets' teachings as to the land question in the United States? 2. What bearing do the prophets' teachings have upon the problem of pauperism? Do they offer a cure

3. What bearing do the messages of the prophets have upon the problem of capital and labor?

4. Do the prophets throw light upon the theological controversies

National Recognition Day for Sunday School Teachers.

It is a simple, obvious and timely idea, this one of setting aside a day-Oct. 6, 1934-to be nationally observed, in recognition of the great work that has been done for Christianity and for the Country by the more than two million Sunday School teachers. Leaders of the denominations, and Sunday School workers generally, have given hearty support to the project. Many bodies have acted officially, and are at work in co-operation. Most Americans are beneficiaries of the unsalaried devotion of Sunday School teachers. The generous spirit which dwells in everybody's breast responds heartily to the thought of paying public tribute to these nomen and women; who, at a cost of self-sacrifice and unremitting labor difficult to compute, have given priceless service to the boys and girls, men and women, of the land. The part that the Sunday School teacher has played in shaping the character and ideals of the nation has never before been formally and publicly recog-

Dear Mrs. Post: I have a new daughter just three days old. My husband was killed two months ago. Under these tragic circumstances shall I announce my baby's birth by sending out cards as we would have done, or do I simply do nothing about it at all? If any announcement were sent to the newspaper, how would it be worded?

Answer: Sending announcements of a child's birth is entirely a matter of personal inclination. In your case it would be best to telephone or write to your intimate friends; they in turn tell others. I mean, of course, that a member of your family will do this for you. To send a baby card tied to your own black bordered one would emphasize the tragedy very painfully. I wouldn't do it if I were you. The announcement in the newspaper would read: "Daughter of Mrs. John Jones and the late Mr. Jones."

Why China Has Little Milk

There are practically no dairy products or meat in China, and the country knows nothing about stock raising. This is because it is so thickly populated that every available area is given over to cultivation, leaving no ground for grazing purposes. A limited amount of poultry, and a few pigs, are raised in door yards.

IMPROPER CARE OF EGGS MEANS LOSS

Cool Storage Room Needed in Summer Time.

By H. H. Alp, Politry Extension Specialist, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.—WNU Service. Complaints of consumers about the low quality of eggs sometimes offered for sale during summer months can often be traced to careless management on the part of people handling the eggs after they leave the farm. Poor quality eggs tend to reduce purchases by housewives, and this in turn lowers the prices and profits received by both farmers and dealers. Thus with the arrival of warm weather, greater care should be taken in handling eggs as a truly perishable product.

Too commonly eggs are held in the back room of a store which also serves as storage space for various items, some of which should never be in the same room with eggs. This room during the summer months will frequently have a tembeen in business in Kingston for a perature high enough to start the incubation of fertile eggs. Another criticism in this connection is that often the small country buying stations do not have satisservator since the bank holiday. factory places to hold a product as perishable as eggs.

In one instance last summer, when the prevailing temperature the deposits will be guaranteed by was about 90 degrees Fahrenheit, there was a produce house consisting of a large room covered by a sheet-metal roof. In this room poultry was being fed and eggs stored until time for delivery to the next buyer. Regardles of how good the quality of those eggs when originally received by this dealer, they would quickly deteriorate under such conditions.

The level of egg prices depends a good deal on consumer demand, and this fact makes it important to maintain quality if the maximum returns are to be gained by both the farmer who cares for the flock and the dealer and merchant who handle the eggs between producer and consumer.

Sun Porch Will Benefit

Growing Young Chicks A sun porch attached to the brooder house is a most valuable improvement to have. For the little chicks to have a clean place, one absolutely free from disease germs and parasites, to roam during fair weather, is invaluable, says a poultryman in Wallaces' Farmer. When such precautions are taken and fresh, clean range is supplied each year, loss from disease and parasites will be reduced to a minimum.

Table Scraps as Food Poultry keepers, who have small flocks in confinement to provide eggs for the table, can profitably use scraps from the table if these materials are handled in the right way. No salty foods should be given, nor any moldy food of any kind. Bread or crusts are often dangerous to poultry unless first baked crisp in a hot oven to break down the starch cells which set up waste vegetables, may be boiled

The proper feed for broilers, or any other variety of fowl is corn meal, 40 parts; oat meal, 30 parts; shorts, 10 parts; beef meal, 15 parts; charcoal, 5 parts. This should be made into a moist mixture, at least six to eight hours before feeding to allow it to soak. If corn meal is not available barley meal could be used instead, or if desirable barley and corn meal could be made half and half for the corn meal side of the ration .-- Montreal Herald.

Teach Turkeys to Eat

Many little turkeys starve to death the first week they are under the brooder stove and it is up to the feeder to prevent this by seeing that they all learn to eat, states a commercial poultryman. Some turkey raisers put a few older poults with the baby turkeys for a few days to help them learn. Another means of teaching all the flock to eat is the use of a moist mash. A moist mash composed of ground alfalfa 6 and turkey mash should be used.

HIDE TRIBAL DANCES FROM WHITES' GAZE

Pueblos Guard Area for Colorful Ceremonial.

Salt Lake City .- Many queer but colorful dances and ceremonies of the ancient tribes still are held annually, free of the curious gaze of the white man, Mrs. Marina La-Juan Hopkins, full-blooded Pueblo Indian princess, told a group here. Dear to the heart of the Pueblo Indian is the secret of the Blue lake dance, a ten-day ceremonial yet unobserved by white men. Strangers are not allowed within a radius of 25 miles when the dance, staged annually to the staccato pounding of tom-toms, is being held, Mrs. Hopkins, daughter of an Indian clan chieftain, said. To her tribesmen she is known only as Princess Popshales.

Must Marry Out of Clan.

Indian maidens of the numerous clans in the Pueblo tribe are expected to marry a member of another clan, the princess explained. She never marries a member of her own circle. This custom tends to keep a closer unity among the tribesmen.

Each spring tribal dances and weird chants are held as prayers are given to the gods to bring success to the crops of the coming season. In the fall every man of the tribe arms himself with clubs and other primitive weapons-guns being taboo-for the annual drive on rabbits. The meat from the animals is hung on lines to dry, she explained. During the winter the Indians eat the dried meat.

No Razors Are Used.

Indians, known for their smooth, whiskerless faces, pluck the hairs from their skin, Mrs. Hopkins said. Razors or sharp instruments never are put to their faces.

Another peculiar ceremony conducted annually by her tribe is the "dance of the three bridges." Mrs. Hopkins admitted there was not exactly much dancing to the ceremony, but described construction of three bridges over a deep canyon. On one sits the elder Indian men, the younger bucks on the second and youths who had not married on the third. Songs and prayers are sung back and forth, chasing evil spirits MR. Movement of Earth Is Revealed at Institute

Philadelphia .-- Visual proof that the earth rotates is given by a device now on display at the Franklin institute.

The machine, made by Leopold Pessel, Philadelphia, was donated to the institute by Mr. and Mrs Richard L. Binder, Philadelphia. It consists of a thin steel cable 85 feet long, weighing but nine pounds, and a pendulum. Dr. Howard Mc-Clenahan, director of the institute, said that the device, known as a Foutalt pendulum, is the only means dirt should be removed from the rotation can be actually demon-

A steel shell, also contributed by the Binders, was attached to the bob of the pendulum, which hangs from the roof skylight to the base

Actual evidence of the earth's movement is shown in the "pull" influenced on the pendulum after it is set in motion in a north-south swing at right angles to the spinning of the earth. The bob moves east and west, or parallel with globular rotation. Then, with no more "pull" being exerted, the machine continues to swing. This process requires about nine hours and proceeds at the rate of about ten degrees an hour.

Routine Jobs Held Boosting Suicides

Washington.-The ever-increasing suicide rate can be, at least partially, attributed to routine jobs which are unsatisfactory and wearisome, according to Dr. William A. White, professor of psychiatry at George Washington university and superintendent of St. Elizabeth's hospital

The dreary side of industrial civilization, he asserts, turns humans into mere cogs in a gigantic machine from which condition they derive no sense of satisfaction.

Doctor White contrasts the pride of workmanship and the sense of fulfillment of the skilled artisan of old and the position of the present-day industrial worker who has no fundamental interest in his work.

He declares that society must change its methods in preparing individuals to meet these new conditions and urges that in the course of his lifetime each indidividual develop a "vital interest" to keep him going in the face of bitter discouragement.

About Eagles

Lethal Talons of the American Bald Eagle

AGLES usually nest in out-ofthe-way places. But recently two American eagles were discovered housekeeping only 30 miles from Baltimore. Accustomed to living in the vicinity of water, they selected a tall pine tree near the Magothy river as the site for an immense nest.

Building a huge structure of sticks at considerable height from the ground, several large white eggs were laid, and the two birds took turns remaining on the nest for the month's period of incubation. An ornithologist who, risking attack, scaled the tree numerous times was fortunate enough to observe the two young eaglets from the time they were hatched until they flew away eleven weeks later.

Eagles and their many relatives among the hawks and vultures are distributed throughout the world, except over the open seas, the barren Antarctic continent, and the smallest and most isolated of oceanic islands. Wherever found, they appeal even to the novice in knowledge of things outdoors because of their manner of life and predatory habits. Robust of form and strong in flight, they are remarked at every appearance.

The emblem of the Sumerian city of Lagash, in the third millennium before the Christian Era, was an eagle, which was engraved on the tablets and seals of the leaders and was carried as a military standard by the army. An eagle also appeared on the seal of the King of Ur, and continued in double-headed form in Hittite art, on certain coins of the Mohammedans, on the flags of Turkoman princes, and so on

The eagle symbol is probably dethat type are found in the regions mentioned.

Messenger of Zeus.

To early Greeks the eagle was the messenger of Zeus and the only bird that dwelt in heaven—a fancy based, perhaps, on the highflying powers of these birds. A silver eagle standing on a spear was placed on the military standards of the legions of Rome, and this emblem has been used widely as a conventional badge of military power. Today it is a common decoration on flagstaffs in many countries.

An American species of this group, the bald eagle, is found in the design of the coat of arms of the United States, which appears on the Great Seal. A representation of it is blazoned on many of our coins and decorations. It also appears on the President's flag, and on the President's seal in the bronze plate on the floor of the vestibule of the White House.

The fierce harpy eagle, a bird of dauntless courage, called by the Aztecs "the winged wolf," is engraved on the official coat of arms and seal of Mexico and appears on the flag of that country. It is distinguishable from our species by its prominently crested head.

The eagles and their kin form the group of birds of the order of Falconiformes, which includes about 288 distinct species, with many additional geographic races, so that in all there are recognized somewhat more than 700 living forms. The order is divided into four principal families. The eagles, hawks, kites, and their relatives, forming the family Accipitridae, include the largest number of forms. They are mainly birds of medium to large size, with broad wings, strong legs, feet armed with sharp claws, and strongly hooked bills. Many possess lightcolored eyes, which, with their active interest in any movement that might indicate possible prey, give them a fierce and aggressive appearance.

Their Methods of Flight. Flight in the hawklike birds va-Old worlds have broad wings which they flap slowly. Frequently they soar with set wings, utilizing air currents rising from the heated from the feathers of hawks.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Surface of the earth or currents generated by winds. These birds frequently soar for hours with scarcely a wing beat, turning and wheeling in the sky, often at such altitudes that they appear as mere specks against the blue. The turkey vulture is a wellknown species that is particularly adept in this art. In fact, it finds this method of progression so adapted to its needs that frequently it remains in its roost through the day when the air is heavy and still.

The falcons have longer, more pointed wings that enable them to fly with great speed, and, though they may enjoy soaring, they do not practice this so constantly as the other hawks. The larger species can capture the swiftest flying sandpipers and ducks on the wing without the slightest difficulty.

The food of birds of the hawk group is highly varied, though it is taken entirely from the animal kingdom. The larger species of falcons subsist mainly on various kinds of birds and small mammals, but the smaller kind, such as sparrow hawks and falconets, eat lizzards, grasshoppers and other insects, and mice. The bearded vultures of the Old world are said to carry turtles and .large bones from the carcasses of dead animals to a great height, in order to drop them on rocks, where they break open so that the bird can eat the

Some species of hawks, particularly certain forms that range in the tropics, eat snakes as their principal food. There is one group of species found in India and adjacent regions in which this habit is so constant that the birds are known as "serpent eagles." The osprey and some of the sea eagles confine their attention mainly to rived from forms similar to our fish, which they capture alive by golden eagles or closely allied to plunging after them as they apthat species, as several species of proach the surface of the water. The powerful harpy eagle feeds regularly on monkeys.

The golden eagle, one of the most powerful of American birds of prey, has a varied menu. Where prairie dogs are present in large numbers, these are favored food; a pair of eagles will destroy several hundred in the course of a season. At times they turn to sharp-tailed grouse when these are abundant, proving a scourge to the flocks. Jack rabbits, cottontails, marmots, and ground squirrels are killed in large numbers.

They also attack lambs and fawns on occasion, and one observer records that three golden eagles working together pulled down and killed a prong-horn antelope during severe winter weather when other food was scarce. They will kill and eat coyotes caught in traps, and will also steal the bait when wolf traps are baited with meat. Snakes and wild ducks, and an occasional goose, also may figure in their diet.

Hawk Tribe Always Hunted. The hand of civilized man has been raised universally against the hawk tribe, and birds of this group are shot or otherwise destroyed at every opportunity. It is rare. indeed, for hawks to come within gun range of a hunter without receiving a charge of shot, and they are killed in many localities by setting steel traps on the tops of posts or poles that the birds utilize as perches.

The majestic bald eagle, our national bird, has fallen under the displeasure of some farmers and has been rather relentlessly hunted.

Bird lovers have taken up the fight on behalf of this great bird of freedom, declaring that he has been misrepresented and that his occasional thefts of poultry are more than offset by services in keeping our beaches clear of dead fish. The flight and appearance of hawks and other birds, and certain of their anatomical features, were used by the augurs of ancient Rome in their prophecies of the future. A more practical use of these birds was found among the North American Indians, particularly of the Plains ries considerably, according to the and Pueblo groups, when beautiful kind. Eagles, the large hawks, and headdresses were made from the the vultures, both of the New and large feathers of the golden eagle, and other ornaments and decorations were fashioned from the smaller feathers of this bird and

So the banker, confronted as he always had been, with the responsibility of keeping his depositors' money safe, began to shift his holdings to the most liquid securities, viz., government bonds, to a large degree. The result has been that the banker has been loaning his depositors' money to the government and the government has been re-loaning it back to distressed property owners. The banker had only his own resources to fall back on. The government has power to tax every person living within its boundaries for its losses,

CHAPTER XIII

TT WAS on the Fourth of July when Jack announced at breakfast that with their departure only two days away, the time had come to tackle the sagging gate posts.

"You can't put me off another hour," he insisted (when the old lady said: "Bother those posts, Jack. Don't waste your strength on 'em"), "I'm two pounds heavier than before the blizzard, Cousin Columbine, thanks to these lazy days and Aurora's cooking; and these posts give me the heebiejeebies. If there were time I'd paint the house for you, too."

"You may have that to look forward to when you come again!" she responded, endeavoring to speak briskly. "I hope your father will consider John Adam's offer of a job for the winter, Jack, and send you back to us. As for Nancy-I don't dare think how still the house will seem without her. I felt like a lost soul the days you stayed at Prairie ranch.'

For the visit to "Uncle Tom's" was over-three days that had softened the memory of those crue! wind-swept plains, leaving instead a vision of flower-dappled prairie.

"If it weren't for this stack of newspapers and letters," Nancy confessed the day she stowed them in her trunk, "that whole ghastly experience would seem a dream."

"'A nightmare,' I'd call it," corrected Aurora. "Victor Tubbs says I lost ten pounds durin' that blizzard; and as for Miss Columbine, she'll never be the same woman again. It's my opinion that if Eve and John Adam hadn't took their lives in their hands and drove down here to keep her company, she'd have lost her mind."

"And it's my opinion," retorted Miss Columbine, who had come in unobserved, "that you were in a lot more danger of losing yours! Don't talk nonsense, Aurora Tubbs."

Nance laughed at the time, even though something told her that in a measure Aurora was right. One pays toll for hours like those, and Cousin Columbine had not escaped. The old lady was a shade less brisk, less energetic; and Nance hated to think how lonely she would be when left with only Aurora Tubbs for company,

The days passed with Cousin Columbine looking a bit grim when she thought no one noticed, and Matthew Adam losing his appetite to an extent that alarmed his troubled mother. And now tickets and reservations were ordered. Mary Taylor had promised (with Luke's assistance!) to watch over the Aladdin library; and Nancy was conscious of a new sensation, something she described to herself as "a sinking feeling down inside," each time she caught a glimpse of the unasked question hovering mutely, hopelessly, in Matthew's expres-

So she was relieved when Jack mentioned the neglected gate posts. The task would occupy both time and thoughts till afternoon, when they were to have a farewell supper at the Adam ranch.

"Don't worry about Jack," she said to Cousin Columbine. "I'll help with the digging. Let's get to work before the sun's too hot."

The girl rather enjoyed the novelty of the task for a little while, but at last she paused, complaining: "I've struck a rock, Jack."

"In this place? More likely it's a bone some dog has buried."

Nancy laughed.

"It was an energetic dog then, or a prehistoric one! Perhaps there's enough of a hole here now; but I want to see what this thing is. She lifted the spade, digging for a moment viciously. "It certainly feels like a rock, but-'

Nance ceased abruptly, and dropping flat onto the ground, reached into the new-made hole while her brother watched, a smile of amusement lighting his eyes.

"For the land's sake what are you doin' flat on your stummick in all that dirt?" cried out Aurora, who had drawn near to superintend

"Hunting for buried treasure," Jack answered, grinning. "Pieces of eight, you know. She thinks she's

"I have!" cried Nancy, scrambling up in great excitement. "Give me that crowbar, Jack. I have!" "What's all this commotion?" demanded Cousin Columbine, who, hearing Nancy's elated voice, had hurried out. "Mercy, child! have you been digging that hole with your two hands?" Nance laughed, and answered: "It'll all come out in the wash, Cousin Columbine! You see, I've uncovered something down there -something that's evidently been peering into the hole, replied: "Not that I know of. Pry the thing out with your crowbar, Jack, but go gently. It's your sister's property, you know.'

"Šo 'tis," affirmed Aurora. "Findin's keepin's; but if it turns out to be a human skull don't let me see it. I never could abide the sight of bones, Jack Nelson. Even a good fresh soup bone goes against me.' No one paid any attention to this warning, for Jack cried out: "Great most disintegrated by rust and time. Nance shook it cautiously, then with small difficulty raised the cover, disclosing what proved to be a maltese cross of solid brass suspended from a crucifix carved from some dark stone.

The old lady reached out, touching the crucifix with reverent fingers.

"It may have lain here more than a century. Oh perhaps it was captured by hostile Indians, buried for safety and then forgotten. If we find an inscription-even a date, Nancy, it will shed some light on this strange mystery. Carry box and all into the house and we'll examine them."

In this absorbing interest the gate posts were forgotten for an hour; but no clue as to the origin of the sacred relic was discovered. and though Jack dug deeper in the hope that other treasures were buried nearby, his efforts were fruit-

"What stone is the crucifix carved in?" questioned Nancy, when, the gate posts properly erect at last. the subject was resumed at the dinner table.

"Chalcedony, I think," said Cousin Columbine, "And did you notice the hammer marks and filed edges on the Maltese cross? Hand work, and very, very ancient, if I'm any judge. These things are of real historical value, Nancy. They should be in some museum; but surely you have the right to keep them for the present. In my own mind there's not a doubt that they came from one of the Spanish expeditions. Dear me! what a story we shall have to tell to the Adams! Did Mark say what time they would send down for us?"

"Not before five. I have some things to do at the library this afternoon; and I must finish packing so that tomorrow will be free. It gives me a-a terrible feeling, Cousin Columbine, to think how soon we're going to leave you."

"And I bet it gives Miss Columbine a worse one," declared Aurora as she thumped an apple pie down on the table. "Pine Ridge won't never be the same again, if you ask me-not that it won't be nicer'n before you came, with the Aladdin library an' everything. You've had an awful good influence on Juanita, Nancy Nelson, even if you have got her so she wants her dresses darker'n I like on a young girl, or an old one either, for that matter."

That afternoon when all but the last-minute packing was accomplished, Nancy slipped into the white sport silk she was to wear at the Adams', and sought the library. Not wishing to be interrupted. she closed the door. Nance worked slowly, pausing every now and then to look about with that pleasurable sense of accomplishment the little library always gave her; wondering why, when these months in Pine Ridge had gone so well and she was eager to see the family, this horrid homesickness kept creeping over her.

"It must be because Edgemere's so far away," she mused, "and Cousin Columbine hates so to have us go. And there are the Adams! It would be queer. . . ." Nance closed her eyes as if to call up some picture, and her color rose as she said impatiently: "Why don't you face the truth, Nancy Nelson? You just can't bear to leave because . . ." The door pushed open.

"Do you mind if I interrupt you for a moment?"

Nance started, smiling as she recognized the wife of the healthseeker on the back road, one of the library's most faithful visitors.

"Come in," she welcomed. "I'm leaving day after tomorrow and am glad of this chance to say good-by." The woman said, as she sat down in the cushioned chair: "That's why I came. I meant to stop at Miss Nelson's, but when I saw these open windows I knew you'd be here. I want to thank you for what you've done for—well, for every one in Pine Ridge, Miss Aladdin." She glanced up, her worn face lighted hv a smile. while Nance realized with something of a shock that this faded woman was quite young, probably not ten years older than herself. "Do you mind my saying Miss Aladdin?" she questioned a bit shyly. "Sometimes I've almost wondered if that's what you are—a—a sort of magician who has worked miracles." Nancy laughed, flushing a little,

"It wasn't a miracle at all, if you mean this library. It was only common sense and a bit of elbow grease!"

"No," answered her caller, wisely, "it was more than that. It was thinking how you could make life happier for other folks. It's made all the difference between exile and -and home to us!" she added. "My husband's better now, really better; and it's due to nothing in the world but having good books to readsomething to take his mind away from himself and all our worries. Is it any wonder we think of you as Miss Aladdin?"

When she was gone Nance sat there feeling strangely humble, a lump in her throat that threatened to grow bigger.

"I ought to have gone to see those people," she said regretfully. "PH ask Matt to drop in on them some day. Why, the first time that woman came for books I thought she was older than Aunt Judy! Oh, why does life hurt some of us so cruelly?"

Nance closed the windows. "I'll sneak up back of the houses," she planned, locking the door. "If Jack sees me he'll want to go along, and somehow I'd rather be alone. I can stay a half hour and get back before the Adams send for us. I do hope Matt will have cheered up by evening. I just can't stand the way his eves look."

By skirting the village it was possible to gain the hilltop unobserved, but it was a steep ascent, and Nancy was breathless when, emerging from the woods, she started toward the ancient landmark. Then, as an animal will stop when suddenly alarmed, the girl stood still. Some one was there, half hidden by the gigantic tree-trunk. How disappointing! Her tryst on this wonderful spot must be foregone. She ventured one cautious backward step, but a twig snapped under her foot, and the intruder, almost as startled as herself, turned quickly.

"Oh!" exclaimed Nance. Her heart was thudding. "I didn't dream- I mean, Matt, I-I thought

She paused, for Matthew had sprung up, an unsmiling Matthew, who said, curiously, she noticed, as he came toward her: "Is it you, Nancy, or-or am I dreaming? No, I'm not crazy!" (He smiled a little.) "But I've been lying here for an hour or more wishing I had the power of Aladdin, so I could rub my lamp and—and make you appear before me just like this! Is—is it really you?"

Nance thought, her mouth curving in a smile: "What other fellow in the world would say a thing like that?" Then with a sudden impulse she stretched out both hands

"Touch me, and see!"

When Should an Old Man Stop Work

LEONARD A. BARRETT

The retirement of Dr. William Holland Wilmer by Johns Hopkins university has furnished the metropolitan press with an interesting subject for debate. The question at issue seems to be, Was the university justified in thus retiring the ablest eye clinician in America? Dr. Wilmer was born August 26, 1863, which would indicate that a man should be retired at seventy regardless of his mental or physical fitness. Doubtless retirement affords relief from detail duties and routine work incident to a professional career. The question still arises, however, should one be refired from active service when there still remains the unquestionably efficient service of many future years? Or, to put it in another way, should the public be deprived of professional service at just the age when experience would make that service all the more valuable? In other words, just when should an old man stop work?

Let us remember that much of the finest work in art and literature as well as in medicine has been accomplished by those who labored most effectively far beyond the age of seventy. Some business concerns have a rule that a man must stop work at sixty-five, others at seventy. The reason advanced is that room must be made for the younger men. Other business concerns refuse to employ a man who is over forty-five years of age. In one case, known to the .. "iter, a member of a certain firm was thus retired and went to England, where he established a rival business, which proved a great financial success. The better part of wisdom would have been for that American firm to have kept that man on its pay-

Is it not true that no organization is competent to say just when a man. should stop work? Does it not depend entirely upon the man himself? Some men are old at forty, others young at seventy. Should not efficiency decide the issue? A man without a job is not only unhappy, he is miserable. Many a man has "passed out" shortly after relinquishing active work.

The man, himself, however, is not the only one concerned. Public health demands the best judgment that experience can afford.
