Oscar Coalbuyer was unmarried, timid and bashful. He lived with his Mama and Papa. His life was filled with embarrassing moments. He'd be dancing with a girl and his garter would come unclasped and she was sure to step on it. If he spoke of Love, the color left her cheeks — and stayed on Oscar's coat for weeks.

Once he joined the navy to "see the world" and then spent four years in a submarine. He was graduated from Grammar school with an injunction. The family parrot told him he should get into the cigar business and learn the ropes.

One day Oscar was caught in a revolving door, and that was the turning point of his career. He decided to do today all the things he'd been in the habit of doing tomorrow.

He bought his coal early and from the Farm Produce Company and felt so good that he got to the office on time and met the Boss's daughter, who'd been out to a dance. It was Love at first sight, and now Oscar is what you might call "SIT-TING PRETTY."

The Name "Raven"

The name raven is now generally believed to have its source in the ancient verb to raven, tear, despoil, thus identifying this ominous bird with the scenes of battle, rapine and death with which our ancestors were sadly familiar not so many centuries ago.

"The Devil's Advocate" "The Devil's advocate" is any

carping or adverse critic. The advocatus diaboli is a person appointed to contest the claims of a candidate for canonization before a papal court. He presents what he can against the candidate, while the advocatus dei says all he can in favor of the proposal.

The Spanish Main

Cartagena (correctly pronounced Kar-ta-hay-na, accent on the third syllable), the South American city, was at one time the most important city on the Spanish Main, writes G. R. Turner in the Kansas City Times. In this connection it should be remembered that "Main" is merely a contraction of "mainland" and is improperly applied to the Caribbean sea in such expressions as "sail the Spanish Main." The original use of the term was to distinguish the Spanish possessions on the northern coast of the South Caribbean sea.

Eating and Learning

Teachers are in a position to know. And this is what they say about the school lunch: that pupils are made physically and mentally alert by the warm uncheon; that afternoon work shows a marked improvement; that behavior problems decrease while genuine interest in school activities grows; that a better spirit, a more wholesome social atmosphere prevails.

Even the simplest type of school lunch, where one hot dish and warm milk are prepared to supplement the cold food brought from home, is said to be an immeasurably valuable aid to good teaching. Refreshing, stimulating, cheering, it makes the job easier, not to mention the benefits derived by the children. The appetite is sharpened, so that more of the lunch is eaten. Also, it is eaten more slowly and the digestive processes are improved. Isn't it obvious that the childmachine will function efficiently (and, we should add, happily) to the extent that its fuel is proper in quality and adequate in amount? To be a good pupil, a well-behaved pupil, with powers of attention and concentration, the child must be well nourished and refreshed.

Cacao Beans Are Cleaned by Shuffling Feet in Brazil.

O YOU like hot chocolate candy? Chocolate cake? Or chocolate ice cream sodas? Then you'll be interested in the where he received treatment from Mrs. Harry Kanner returned to an eye specialist. The eye is get- her home at New York City after termined fight to save the famous cacao plantations of Trinidad, an island in the West Indies, from a destructive plant disease.

Trinidad is one of the principal sources of the bean which furnishes "the makings" for a hot beverage surpassed in world importance only by coffee and tea, as well as for candies, sweetmeats, etc. Chocolate was a gift to man's palate from the western hemisphere. Like tobacco, the potato, and a number of other plant products, it was taken back to Europe by explorers soon after Columbus opened the road to the new world, and launched on the way that has led to world markets.

In trade circles today three terms are used: chocolate, cocoa and cacao. The tropical tree which is the source of chocolate is called the cacao. In its leathery, cucumberlike fruit are cacao pods which contain cacao beans. But when the beans are roasted and ground, and much of the fat is pressed out, the remaining brown substance (ground to a dry powder), is cocoa. If the fat is not pressed out, the darker substance is chocolate.

Credit for the manufacture of chocolate from the hidden seed of and Mr. and Mrs. W. Walden and an unprepossessing fruit belongs to the original inhabitants of Mexico. In 1519, when Hernando Cortez invaded that country, he discovered that the cacao tree was widely cultivated. The natives had concocted a drink called "chocolatl" or "cacahuatl," from which have come the names "chocolate" and "cocoa." Frothing pitchers of chocolate were served by Montezuma when he entertained Cortez.

Long in Use in Mexico. Students of American native customs have estimated that the drink was in use 1,000 years before the arrival of Europeans. According to Mexican mythology, the seed of the cacao tree was carried from a New world version of the Garden into Mexico chased for a few cents a pound, and is consumed in one form or another by millions of people the world over. Modern methods of cocoa and chocolate manufacture differ little from those used by primitive people centuries ago. In Mexico the natives roasted the beans and then ground them between two warm flat | Rye, bushel stones until a fine paste was obtained. This was sometimes mixed with maize (corn) and flavored with vanilla and spices. The paste was molded into forms desired and allowed to cool. Modern preparation of the commodity is more scientific and thorough, but the principal steps taken are much the same. Cocoa butter is an important byproduct of the cacao bean, which contains 50 per cent fats. The butter, removed by crushing the beans under hydraulic pressure, is extensively used in confectionery, and in pharmaceutical preparations. Al most every household has some commodity that contains this vegetable fat. Cocoa butter is an incosmetics.

The Gold coast colony in Africa is normally the world's largest producer of cacao. In one recent year the colony shipped 54,000 tons of cacao, valued at $10,000,000, to the United States.

While the Gold coast no longer puts its trust in gold, cacao has displaced the metal only within the last few years. For 400 years gold was the hope that glittered for white men on the Gold coast. Gold mines built the railroad to Seccondee for which Takoradi is the port. In 1924 gold shipments reached more than $4,000,000, but the mines seem to be nearing exhaustion. A Cacao was used as a means of barter and the payment of tribute by the Aztecs and Mayans. A man's wealth was often judged by the number of cacao beans he possessed. In Mexico a good slave could be purchased for 100 beans. Its highly concentrated food value, low cost of production, and numerous uses, have stimulated cacao cultivation to such an extent that now it is grown in practically all tropical countries. The wet tropical areas of the West African colonies of Great Britain and Portugal, and the South and Central Americas are especially well suited to the cultivation of the trees. The introduction of the cacao tree in Africa has resulted in a remarkable growth of the industry and economic development of the continent. The Gold coast has taken first place away from Brazil in the world's production of cacao. What were once trackless and useless African jungles, inhabited only by savage bushmen and wild animals, today are cacao plantations.

America Largest Consumer. As an international commodity, the cacao bean has grown in importance to such an extent that the United States alone, in 1933, imported 474,270,000 pounds, valued at $18,739,000. The United States is by far the largest consumer, cacao ranking sixteenth in value on our list of imports. Germany, Great Britain and the Netherlands follow in the order named.

For many years the Spaniards of South America and some of the West Indies monopolized the cacao industry. Chocolate was introduced into Spain by Cortez and his conquistadores about the beginning of the Sixteenth century, but the process of chocolate manufacture was kept a secret for almost 100 years. In 1606 an Italian discovered the method of preparation. Shortly afterwards, monks and travelers spread the news throughout Europe. The Seventeenth and Eighteenth centuries found the popularity of the drink steadily increasing. Cocoa houses were established in England, as well as on the continent. Chocolate, however, was a luxury | snakes.

about 80,000,000 cacao trees; this fruit has been grown here for about 150 years, and a tiny railway serves the heart of the great cacao region. It hauls more tons of freight per mile than any other railway line in South America.

Leaving the Coastal plain and entering the foothills, one sees the cacao plantations in long shaded groves. Among bigger, protecting trees the small cacao trees are planted, thus sheltered from sun and wind. Twist off a green fruit, break it open and taste the whitish seeds; the flavor is like watermelon. Barefoot men and women split the pods. empty the seeds on a wide platform, and tread them free of pulp and pith. They call this "Dancing the Cacao."

The seeds are dried by stirring them in a big flat bin. A wide roof, set on wheels, is at hand, to be hastily hauled over the bin if it rains. Turning a dark brown when dried, and tasting of unsweetened chocolate when ripe, the beans are packed in bags and sent to Europe and the United States. In 30 years Bahia's export has risen from 150,-000 to 1,200,000 bags a year. Brazil drinks very little chocolate, but much coffee.

Near a station named "Lava Pes," or "Wash Your Feet," the visitor may stop to watch a long file of umbrella ants. Each carries a leaf as if itwere an umbrella. Many ants are up in a tree, biting off bits of leaf and dropping them to other ants waiting on the ground. This line of marching ants is often a mile or more long. The ants carry the leaves to their underground home, and store them. On the leaves a fungus forms, and this the insects eat.

Further up the line one crosses a small stream running among cacaocovered hills. Long chutes made of boards run down the hillsides to the water's edge. Down these chutes natives slide fresh cacao beans, which empty into waiting dugout canoes. Although cacao has been grown here for so long; the methods of harvesting it are still primitive, for human labor is cheap.

White men find life here hard, because of so many insects and malaria. Bugs are a plague; horned tumble-bugs more than seven inches long-larger than many kinds of birds, snails weighing half a pound, and the fer de lance and other bad Page Six.

CHAPTER II

A Strange Discovery.

A T THIS moment the front door downstairs opened and shut with a bang, and we could hear a rather strident feminine voice addressing the butler.

"Morning, Gamble. Take my clubs and tell Liang to rustle me up some tea and muffins."

Then there came a sound of footsteps on the stairs, and Gamble's appealing voice said: "But Miss Lake, I beg of you-just a moment, please." "Tea and muffins," came Miss Lake's voice curtly; and the footsteps continued up the stairs. Markham and Heath and stepped toward the door just as the young woman reached the upper landing.

Miss Hilda Lake was a short, get my patrimony and be able to somewhat stockily built woman of about thirty, strong, resilient and athletic-looking. Her blue-gray eyes were steady and. I thought, a trifle hard; her nose was small and too broad for beauty; and her lips were full though unemotional. Her yellow-brown hair was cut short and combed straight back from a broad. low forehead.

As she reached the head of the stairs and saw Markham, she came forward with a swinging stride and held out her hand.

"Greetings," she said "What brings you here so early? Business with uncle, I suppose," She ran her eyes appraisingly over Heath and me as she spoke and frowned Then before Markham could answer she added: "Anything wrong?"

"Something seriously wrong, Miss Lake," Markham replied, trying to bar her way into the room. "If you will be so good as to wait-"

But the young woman, with an aggressive gesture, brushed past us and entered the room. The moment she caught sight of Archer Coe she went swiftly to him and knelt down, putting her arm about him.

"Hey! Don't touch that body!" Heath stepped quickly up to her and put his hand on her shoulder none too gently, pulling her to her feet.

She swung toward him angrily. her feet wide apart. Markham stepped diplomatically

He greeted us with a wave of the hand, and glanced about the room. Then he teetered back and forth on his toes, and pinned a baleful eye on Heath.

"More shenanigan," he complained. "I was in the midst of hot cakes and sausages when I got your message. You always pick on me at meal time, Sergeant. . . . Well, what have you got for me now?"

She moved her head slightly and lifted her eyebrows.

"Ah! Good morning, Mr. Vance. In the excitement of the moment I didn't see you. . . . You are quite right-it's not suicide." Her eyes narrowed.

"Why do you repudiate the suicide theory?" Vance asked with pronounced courtesy.

"Very simple," she replied. "Uncle was too great an egotist to deprive the world of his presence."

"But egotism," Vance submitted, "is often the cause of suicide. Boredom, don't y' know-the inability to find a responsive appreciation. Suicide gives the egotist his one supreme moment of triumph," Vance spoke with academic aloofness.

"Uncle Archer needed no supreme moments," Hilda Lake returned contemptuously. "He had such moments every time he acquired a Chinese knicknack. "I say, Doctor," drawled Vance, 'what's the state of rigor mortis in our victim?"

"It's well advanced. Dead eight to twelve hours. Lend me a hand. Sergeant, and we'll put him on the hed. . . .

"Just a moment, Doctor," Vance spoke peremptorily. "Take a look at the hand on the desk. Is it clutching the revolver tightly?" "He's clutching the gun tight, all right." With difficulty Doremus bent Coe's fingers and removed the revolver, taking great care not to make fingerprints on it.

Heath came forward and gingerly inspected the weapon. Then he dropped it in a large pocket handkerchief, and placed it on the blot-Clark. "And, Doctor," pursued Vance,

"was Coe's finger pressed directly against the trigger?" "Yep," was Doremus' curt answer.

"Then we may assume that the revolver was placed in Coe's hand before rigor mortis set in, what?" "Well, I'll tell you. He"-pointing to Coe's body-"may have had the gun in his hand when he died. 1 wasn't present, y' understand. And if the gun was already in his hand, then nobody put it there later."

"In that case how could it have been fired?"

"It couldn't. But how do you know it was fired? There's no way of telling until the post mortem whether the bullet in his head came from the gun he was holding." "Do the caliber of the revolver and the wound correspond?" "Yes, I'll say so. The gun's a .38, and the wound looks the same size.."

"And," put in Heath, "one chamber of the gun's been fired." Markham nodded, and looked at the medical examiner.

"Poultry men hold the belief," reads the publication, "that if pullets are fed a ration that is too high in protein they will begin laying before they attain a proper weight. As a result, eggs will be small and it will be difficult to maintain production without a fall molt. On the other hand, experiments have shown that if the protein content is limited too much, the pullets will be stunted.

"A very satisfactory method of feeding is to continue the birds on the mash on which they are started and supplement with hopper feeding of grain from the time they are six to eight weeks old until maturity. For this purpose it is more desirable to feed a grain mixture than to use corn alone."
