CASS CITY CLAIMS STATE CHAMPIONSHIP

Football Players Here Have Been Undefeated in Two Years.

The Cass City High School football team, acknowledged as the Upper Thumb champions for the past two seasons, lay claim to being the state champions of Class C schools this season.

The local team has been undefeated the past two years in Class C encounters and in the one game with a Class A school the result was a tie. Last year, Cass City won a total of 226 points to 12 for their opponents, in eight games. This season, in nine games, one with a Class A school, the Maroon and Grey group had a total of 228 points to 57 for other school teams.

In 1933, Russell Quick and Ephraim Knight were selected as members of the all-state team. This is an unusual honor for Class C football players. This year Clare Ballaugh and Fred Ward will undoubtedly be slated for that honor from the Cass City group of players.

CORN-HOG CONTRACTS FOR 1935 ANNOUNCED

New Contracts Will Continue Benefit Payments for Reductions Next Year.

If producers participate in the 1935 adjustment program for corn and hogs in the same numbers as for 1934, the total adjustment payments are expected to run between 150 million and 165 million dollars. Some of these in other states as well as here, have indicated intention of holding city jobs while developing their newly purchased farms. Total sales for October in Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Dakota was 137 and the total for the year to date in those four states makes 880 farms sold.

BETHEL M. E. CHURCH PLANS JUBILEE

Fiftieth Anniversary Service Next Sunday Afternoon,

December 2.

Bethel church, four miles north of Cass City, is planning to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of its organization as a Methodist society next Sunday afternoon, Dec. 2, at 2:30. The service is open to the public and includes among its features a period of reminiscence and testimony by those who remember the early days in this neighborhood. Rev. Norman C. Karr of Lapeer will deliver a gospel mes-sage. He was one of Bethel's young men 50 years ago.

Greetings will be brought from the Cass City Methodist church by Dr. I. A. Fritz. Rev. Frank M. Field, "presiding elder," will bring greetings from the denomination at large. Others now living at a distance have been invited to attend. The committee on arrangements announces that although this is a Methodist gathering "there will be no collection taken," expenses being met within the organization. A capacity crowd is expected and preparations are being made to take care of all who attend.

Special music will be provided by the Bethel choir in charge of Mrs. Audley Rawson. Congregational hymns used during the entire afternoon are "request numbers" by any who are sufficiently interested to register their selections with Mr. and Mrs. John Profit. Other members of the general committee are Mr. and Mrs. John Marshall, Mrs. James Day, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Maharg, and George Charter.

The regular morning schedule at Bethel has been cancelled for next Sunday. Sunday School convenes promptly at 1:30. Guests are asked to time their arrival for the anniversary service for 2:15 and afterwards, on account of the Sunday School session.

75 Attend Father and Son Banquet

Ladies of the Evangelical church served a complimentary dinner to 75 of the men and boys of that congregation Friday night the occasion being a Father and Son banquet.

Rev. G. A. Spitler presided as toastmaster and E. W. Kercher served as song leader. The "Toast to the Sons" was given by Edward Helwig and the "Toast to the Fathers" was prepared by Edward Schwegler, and being unable to attend, was read by Roy Anthes. Gerald Kercher, in a peppy reading, told of his father's anxious moments "When the Paper Didn't Come."

The guest speaker was C. M. Cook of Bay City who, in an excellent address, said that a father has

A plan to provide practical assistance to thousands of Michigan out-of-school, unemployed youths is being considered by the State North with Trophies Emergency Relief Administration.

The plan under consideration contemplates the establishment of which would serve both as clearing houses for work opportunities and as clinics to assist young men and women in making economic adjustments and putting latent ability to

One of the first projects to be undertaken will be a survey to obtain more complete information concerning the needs of unemployed youth. The creation of a State Youth Council is proposed with local directors for each participating community. There would also be in each community a local advisory committee on which youth would have representation.

GOLDEN TEXT—But ye shall re-ence. 1. "Work of Faith." This relates to their belief of the gospel which brought them into living relationship with the Lord Jesus Christ, said in answer to the question for the Gideons. Notice later. "What must we do that we may work the works of God?" "This is the work of God that ye believe on him whom he hath sent" (John 6:28, 29).

(Acts 17:7). III. The Reasons for Paul's

Thanksgiving (vv. 4-7). 1. Their election of God (vv. 4, their divine selection. The gospel came in power and in the Holy Spirit. They did not receive the gospel in mere theory, but in the power of the Holy Ghost. Where it is received, the consequent life will manifest itself.

2. They received Paul as a messenger of God (v. 6). The reception of the gospel is largely determined by the kind of preacher. Its reality will be detected in the life of the messenger.

3. The changed life of the Thessalonians (v. 7). They "became followers"—that is, their lives were changed by the power of the gos pel. The order in Christian experience is the reception of the gospel, the changed life, and then the example. The Thessalonians became examples to all in Macedonia. IV. The Missionary Activity of the Thessalonians (v. 8). Their experience of the life of Jesus Christ was so real to them that they at once became missionaries. The word of the Lord was so widely and effectively sounded forth that when the apostles returned they needed "not to speak anything." This is as it should be when the gospel is received in the power of the Holy Ghost. The gospel is good news. Good news cannot be kept to oneself; it must be given out.

V. The Results of Paul's Preaching (vv. 9, 10). 1. They turned from idols (v. 9). Thessalonica was a city largely given up to idolatry. Statues were to and Mrs. Earn Parrott. be seen almost everywhere. The fruits of Paul's preaching were the changed lives of the people. They turned away from idols and gathered together around Jesus Christ in the church. The idol temples were deserted and the churches filled. 2. Awaiting the coming of Jesus Christ (v. 10). Their faith was so real that they looked for the personal return of the Lord Jesus Christ to the earth. The second coming of Christ was a real tenet of faith of the early church. It is so now wherever the gospel is really preached. "And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." (I John 3:3).

Eskimo Sled Teams

Eskimo sled dogs have an intense social life. The usual team consists of a female leader, chosen because more intelligent and tractable, with five or six males to do the drudgery. The team first fights it out among themselves to determine which is top dog, second dog, third dog, and so on. The top dog is entitled to squire the female and to steal for her dried codfish, seal's flippers, deerskin pants and whatever else is edible.

RUSSIA CONSTRUCTS

Hopes to Open Ship Routes Through Arctic Sea.

Washington.—Along the bleak Arctic coast of Siberia, at the mouth of the River Lena, the Soviet government is constructing the most northerly port in the world. "Though one of the six longest miles in length, the River Lena plays a minor role in the life of the December 1. continent. The sparse population of its basin and its ice-jammed mouth on the dangerous, little-known Arctic ocean has prevented the Lena from taking part in world trade and limited it to internal commerce," says the National Geographic society.

"As Russian population spreads toward the Orient, however, this new port and the opening of navimay mean that Lena will become a busy trade artery, through | mer. which will pulse the wealth of minerals, timber, and valuable furs of Central Siberia

"Rising as a clear mountain torrent in the Baikal mountains, the Lena rushes northward between steep, forest-clad cliffs of red sandstone from 200 to 300 feet high and then between lower chalk cliffs, gutted with innumerable grottoes. At the town of Vitim, 876 miles from its source, it is joined by the Vitim river, noted for its gold mines.

Cliff Resembles Castle.

"Its volume doubled, the Lena flows for miles through the dense taiga, a primeval coniferous forest from pine to pine above prowling as trophies of the hunting trip. brown bears, sables and ermines.

tent settlements surrounding posthouses, and limestone or sandstone cliffs. One series of cliffs, the famous 'Colonnades of Lena,' resembles a castle, whose battlements of red and green limestone strata stretch for miles along the river. Shortly beyond the junction with the rapid Olekma smoke from burning coal fields is seen rising from the banks of the Lena. These banks were long ago ignited by forest fires, giving rise to legends of volcanoes in central Siberia.

"The Lena valley has a wealth of minerals. Because its tributaries, the Vitim, Olekma, and Vilyui, flow through a region rich in gold, the Lena carries more of the precious vellow metal in its sands than perhaps any other river. Coal is found in several places along the Lena valley. In the region of the upper Lena are petroleum fields and whole mountains of salt. Near Yakutsk are silver mines, iron and zinc. Sulphur springs bubble on the banks of the middle Lena. Jasper is found at Zhigansk. Platinum is so abundant in the Aldan valley that natives are reputed to make bullets out of it.

Yakutsk Is Chief City.

"Yakutsk, the chief trading post of eastern Siberia, and an important fur market, is built on alluvial soil about two miles back from the Lena and about half way between its source and mouth. When ice breaks in June, floods sweep the town. For this reason, many houses are built on high platforms. Yakutsk boasts a wooden blockhouse fort boatman who turned pirate. "Yakutsk has a few brick office Miss Nora Moshier of Cass City buildings, schools and churches, but pitched in spaces between snowswept log houses. The few muddy streets become quagmires when the ground thaws. Many of the inhabitants are exiles, reindeer-riding Tungas, who breed cattle, and the more advanced Yakuts, who occupy the entire length of the Lena valley, farming on the fertile elevated banks almost to the Arctic circle.

"One hundred miles below Yakutsk, the confluence of the River Aldan from the right swells the River Lena, temporarily, to a width of twelve miles, almost an inland sea. Not far below, the Vilyui enters the Lena on the left. Beyond are only insignificant tributaries and the Lena flows northward for 1,200 miles, a majestic stream, four to twenty miles wide.

"Steamers carry about 15,000 tons of freight a year on the Lena. To Yakutsk come barges bringing trade from the Sea of Okhotsk via the Aldan, and smaller craft with foxskins from Bulun, with sables, ermine, and fossil ivory from the tundra of the Arctic. Skin-boats full of fish pass great rafts of timber, white steamers and leisurely ferries.

"The vast area of the Lena covers an area of 8,800 square miles. It is formed partly by alluvial deposit, and partly by a group of ancient marine islands connected by silting or upheaval."

LEARN COAL-you will buy it more wisely

FUNERAL HOME

PHONE 188F-3

Amhulance Service

Coal is more than something just "black and dirty" that will burn. It is a much more extensive subject. To describe the particular quality of the different coals in the U.S. alone would require more than a thousand pages of a book the size of a large mail order catalogue. More than 3000 different valuable articles are made from coal or its by-products. A whole division of the science of chemistry is required to cover the subject. So while our advice to you, "Learn Coal-You will buy it more wisely," doesn't mean that you should know everything about coal, we do believe that an explanation of a few of the more important points about home heating will make your coal dollar go farther.

In selecting domestic coal for your home or heating plant there are four basic qualities to

1. Volatile matter or gas.

2. Fixed carbon. 4. Ash content. The first two are the heat giving qualities, so, therefore, the higher the percentage of these two, the more heat given off.

The last two qualities-moisture and ash content-are detrimental to the first two and are of no value. The lower the percentage of these last two, therefore, the more heat value. Simple, isn't it. But very important. In exactly the same proportion that these four basic qualities are present in the coal you buy, just in that proportion do you buy heat or waste. Remember this: "Cheap Coal" is really expensive if you have to heap in more shovelfuls to obtain less heat. The Farm Produce Company

The public, too, is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that a properly prepared liquid laxative brings a more natural movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two leter. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The wrong cathartic may often do

Dear Mr. Wvnn:

I read in the paper that a man fell from the roof of a ten-story building, into a wagon filled with soda water bottles. The newspaper claimed the man was not hurt. If this is true how do you account Truly yours, I. DOUTIT.

Answer: That could happen, especially so if the soda water bottles were filled. In this particular case the man wasn't hurt because he fell into a wagon full of soft drinks.

I am sure I met the meanest man in the world. This man, as soon as the cold weather comes around, goes down to the railroad tracks and calls out all sorts of vile names at the engineers as they pass in their engines. It seems the engineers get angry, but they can't stop their engines, so they throw pieces of coal at him, trying, of course, to hit him. That's just what this man wants. SCIENCE SAYS HOME SPATS ARE NATURAL Love Thy Neighbor, but Beware of Relatives.

Berlin.-You can't help hating members of your family! Such is the scientific conclusion of Prof. A. F. Hoche of the University of Berlin, who bases his findings on years of study of case histories of enmities between relatives. The study embraced various races and nation-

Such enmities, he finds, are disposed to be more bitter and persistent than difficulties between nonrelatives.

Brotherly Hatred.

Most typical of family hatred. Professor Hoche finds, is ill feeling between brothers. He says:

"It began with Cain and Abel and continues to this day in peasants' cottages and in noblemen's castles. The bloody trail of brother hatred, the worst kind of hatred existing in the world, leads from generation to generation.

"Even Solomon's proverbial wisdom observing this existing condition concerned itself with the problem: 'A brother offended is harder to be won than a strong city; and their contentions are like the bars of a castle.

"And the hatreds of sisters are not less tragic. An enemy's sword may be deadly or not, but a sister's pin prick will spoil a life. A hostile word from another member of one's family is longer remembered than the offenses of an enemy.

"The hatred for the father by the son has been popularized by the famous 'Oedipus Complex.' knew long before Freud that father and son are representatives of two generations fatally doomed to be in contrast with each other, and that in the resulting conflict the mother frequently sides with the Fights Over Wills.

"Nowhere is competition coupled with envy and jealousy so fierce and lasting as in the family. Nowhere are we so conscious of the other fellow's disturbing traits as in the family, whose members are compelled to remain together a long time and finally become so irritable that a smile or a cough is sufficient to release fits of rage. The hatreds bred by disputes and quarrels over wills and legacies are proverbial. Such hatreds outlive generations."

The psychological reasons for family hatreds, Professor Hoche explains, are both economic and social, and date from primitive times. as the tendencies to family hatreds have been inherited by modern store here, does a national business in the blood suckers as well as catering particularly to Cleveland Hungarians.

L. H. Fisher, manager of the drug store's mail-order department, said he mails thousands of leeches each spring to all parts of the country and to Canada.

"We import them all. Our people believe the American leeches are not good. They are too large and their bellies are black, in contrast with the green color of European kinds.

"We transport them here in plain earth and they live on nothing but fresh water and air. They are caught in Europeon marshes by women and children, who wade into the water barefooted and wait until enough leeches attaches themselves to their legs."

Fisher said some persons treat themselves with as many as twelve of the tiny creatures at once. The smaller they are the more they can suck. When they are full they fall off; otherwise, he explained, they cannot be removed without great

Early Lincoln Picture.

Called Ambrotype, Found Hoopestown, Ill.-C. M. Bruff of this city and Madison, Wis., has acquired an unusual photograph of Abraham Lincoln, made when he was a young man. The picture is classed as an ambrotype and is produced on glass, with the light represented in silver and the shades by a dark background.

That method of making photographs was used between the time of the daguerreotype, which was produced on silver, and the time of the ferrotype, or tintype, which was a photograph taken on a thin iron plate. The ambrotype is much rarer than the other early kinds of photographs. Bruff came across the ambrotype while calling on a innk dealer in the vicinity of Vincennes, Ind.

Oregon Judge Defines 5 Stages of Drunkenness

Bend, Ore.—There are five stages of drunkenness, Circuit Judge T. E. J. Duffy instructed a Circuit court jury, trying a case appealed from Justice court. They are, he said. jocose, lacrimose, morose, bellicose, and comotose. The jury brought in an unadorned verdict of guilty.

Lights of New York By L. L. STEVENSON

Talked with a young man whose profession is denoted by a green carnation. He's a gigolo. Makes his living by dancing. Not a bad living at that. His earnings run about $50 a week. Tips are his bread and butter. Has no troubles with New Yorkers. They are accustomed to tipping. But not all New Yorkers are accustomed to tipping gigolos. So they don't know how much to pay. That often results to the advantage of the gigolo. Being in doubt, the New Yorker tips twice as much as he thinks is right. Out of towners are different. They are really bashful about tipping a good-looking, well-dressed, polite, light-footed young man. They offer to buy drinks instead. Gigolos don't drink. It interferes with business. So they turn down even champagne. That makes it tough. And they don't get the tip. That makes it more tough. On the other hand, many out of towners fold up a bill and hand it to the gigolo Gigolos are investigated carefully before they are employed. Their records have to be clean. Also they have to have personality, tact, poise and intelligence—all this of course being quoted from the conversation with the young man with the green carnation. In addition, they have to have endurance. Not all of the dear sex who like to dance are good at it. In case of trodden toes, the gigolo smiles and apologizes-and hopes that the tip will be large enough to justify his stoicism. Gigolos dance only with ladies when their escorts make the request. The reason is that some escorts forget that gigolos are merely paid dancing men. Many men are timid about making the request. But their wives or the wives they happen to be with are good at making suggestions. So the gigolos keep busy.

It doesn't do anyone any good to ask a gigolo his name. He will give one. But it is merely one he has adopted. He is even less frank about himself. The rules make him just a gigolo, and he's content, Sometimes it takes a lot of finesse to retain information and not give offense. Women are the most persistent questioners. But the gigolo tries merely to impress his number on his partner-if she is a good dancer or if her escort is a good

Getting back to tips. They run from a half dollar up. The biggest tip my informant ever got was $10. That was for dancing almost all evening with the young wife of an elderly man. He had heard of another gigolo who was paid $25 every night by a husband. The husband likes to dance. But he has foot trouble.

Leaving gigolos and taking up newspaper men. The wife of an as-The Red Cross pharmacy, a drug sistant city editor continually impressed on her two daughters that they were never to marry newspaper men. The husband arrived home one evening to find his wife all smiles. One of the daughters had been notified that she was to edit the school paper next term. The husband didn't share her enthusiasm. Taking the child aside, he told her that she was to learn to stop grounders and catch flies. "This family doesn't need any more newspaper workers," he continued. "What it needs is a good second baseman." And his wife lit on him for not considering the welfare of for not conhis children!

Which reminds me of Chet Shafer, head of the former pipe organ pumpers' guild, who after some time among the Seven Million, has returned to Three Rivers, Mich., to write and prepare for the fall sausage season. Finding himself with a surplus of $10.50, he went out and bought one of those old-fashioned nickle-plated fire engines-something he had wanted all his life. @. Bell Syndicate.-WNU Service.

CASS CITY CHRONICLE—

MANGELS ARE GOOD WINTER HEN FEED

Beet Family Crop That Will Be Great Help.

By Lee A. Somers, Horticultural Specialist, University of Illinois.

WNU Service.

Green succulent feed, which would be greatly relished by chickens during the winter months, can be easily and cheaply produced by devoting a small portion of the farm garden to mangel-wurzels.

Although succulent feed may not be classed as an essential in poultry production, many farmers have found that such a winter supplement adds variety to the ration, and by whetting the birds' appetites, indirectly encourages greater egg production. Mangels will supply this winter succulence quite satisfactorily. They are easily grown, yield tremendously and may be stored with little inconvenience.

Mangels belong to the beet family and should be raised in the same manner as the fall beet crop. The seed may be sown late, dropping the seeds at the rate of six to eight to the foot. Later the plants should be thinned out to from eight to twelve inches apart. Generally, there are neither insect nor disease enemies serious enough to demand consideration.

The roots of mangels do not make much growth until the cool weather of late September and October, when they begin to expand and increase to surprising length. An individual root often weighs from five to eight pounds, while yields of 12 to 20 tons to the acre are common. A 100-foot row will usually supply enough mangels for a flock of 50 chickens during an entire winter.

Growing Mash to Turkeys, Poultry Experts' Advice

The Michigan State College poultry department advises feeding a good growing mash to turkeys. One which can be mixed at home is made up of twenty pounds coarse yellow corn, seventeen ground pounds fine ground oats, ten pounds bran, ten pounds flour middlings, five pounds alfalfa meal, fourteen pounds meat scraps, ten pounds dried milk, ten pounds soybean meal, two pounds calcium carbonate, one pound salt and one pound cod-liver oil. Scratch grain, equal parts cracked corn and wheat, is fed in addition to the mash after the birds are six weeks old.

The feed should be kept in hoppers where the birds can get it at all times. The hoppers should be moved often enough to keep them on clean ground.

The Michigan State college brings up a further important consideration for the man raising a few turkeys but interested in making them pay out the best possible. Why consider Thanksgiving and Christmas product ready for the market when others are not there in competition. Restaurants, hotels, summer resorts, and others might be easily infor your turkeys finished "out of

Thin Shelled Eggs

In the summer time eggs often become thin-shelled. When the birds are going out of production there is a tendency for a lack of calcification of the shell. There is nothing to be done in this case except to collect the eggs several times a day, which will save them from heing broken in the nest. There is a possibility, however, that the birds are not receiving sufficient calcium. This should be supplied by having oyster shell or ground limestone available at all times. A careful check of the flock will indicate whether the birds are going out of production or whether there is a deficiency of calcium.

Varieties of R. I. Reds

Formerly, there were three varieties of Rhode Island Red fowlsthe rose-comb, the single-comb, and the pea-comb varieties. Those who developed the rose-comb variety clung tenaciously to breed and developed a fowl of true type having the color described for the breed and a comb like that of the Wyandotte. The quality attained in the rose-comb variety attracted the attention of those partial to low-set combs; the result was that the peacomb variety gained no further recognition. Fanciers adopted either the single-comb or the rose-comb va riety.

Rhode Island Reds

The Rhode Island Red fowls originated in the farming districts of Rhode Island, near New Bedford, Little Compton, and Westport, says the Montreal Herald. Fowls of many kinds were brought to that locality by captains of sailing ships and were freely distributed among the farms and mingled with the do mestic poultry. Many of these were Asiatic fowls strong in black-red plumage color; among them were Shanghais, which had almost red

THE KENNEL MURDER CASE

S. S. Van Dine

Copyright by W. H. Wright WNU Service

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Philo Vance, pert in solving crime mysteries, is called in to investigate the supposed suicide of Archer Coe, wealthy collector of Chinese ceramics. District Attorney Markham has learned the Attorney Markham has learned the circumstances over the telephone from Gamble, Coe's butler. Getting no response when he had knocked on his employer's bedroom door, Gamble said he had looked through the keyhole and had seen Coe seated, a revolver in his right hand and a bullet hole in his temple. The door was bolted from the inside. Markham and Vance go to Coe's house in New York's 70s. They find Wrede, a friend of Coe's, there; also a Signor Grassi, a guest. Sergeant Heath and Detective Hennessey burst in the door, revealing the death chamber. Coe is clothed in a dressing gown, but wears street shoes. Heath says it is a plain case of suicide. Vance says it is murder.

CHAPTER II.—Hilda Lake, Coe's niece, says Coe deserved death—that collected ceramics through un-r means and incurred the enmity of Chinese; also that as her guar-dian he controlled her fortune and was parsimonious. Medical Exammas parsimonious. Medical Examiner Doremus arrives and says suicide; then on being asked about certain mysterious features by Vance, he changes his mind. He declares Coe had been dead for hours when the bullet entered his head. It is found that Coe had been struck on the head and one of his ribs broken. Finally a small wound is found. The wound had bled internally, Vance, from a closet, brings out a coat and waistcoat, with holes coinciding with Coe's wound, showing Coe was fully dressed when he was stabbed. Gamble announces that there is something queer in the front hall.

CHAPTER III.—They find a wounded Scotch terrier, Vance takes the dog to a veterinarian. Wrede, who has become engaged to Miss Lake against Coe's wishes, and Grassi, who has been Coe's guest, are briefly questioned. Van says the Scottie should prove an important connecting link. Gamble says Brisbane Coe, Archer's brother, who lived in the house, left for Chicago the previous afternoon. Vance declares Brisbane could not have gone to Chicago, as his favorite stick is hanging in the hall.

CHAPTER IV.—Miss Lake declares there was no love lost between Archer and Brisbane. Brisbane's suitcase is found at the railroad station. In a coat closet in the lower hall of the Coe home his dead body is discovered. Vance interrogates the Chinese cook, Liang, who says he did not return to the house until midnight. Vance insists the cook was in the house early in the evening. Vance finds a bit of porcelain from a Chinese vase. A cheap imitation has been substituted for a work of art. The bit of porcelain from the vase that has disappeared has blood on it.

"Needles and Pins." IANG was dismissed with instructions to remain in the house until further notice. While we were waiting for the medical examiner, there ensued a brief discussion concerning the blood on the piece of porcelain and Liang's possible relationship to the events preceding the double mur der. But Vance was evidently as much in the dark as the rest of us;

Heath looked sour, and shot Vance an angry look. Gamble entered the hall from the dining room at this moment, and Vance addressed him. "What is Liang doing upstairs?"

Vance's tone, and replied with apologetic obsequiousness: "I told him to fetch Miss Lake's tray, and tidy up her quarters. . . Shouldn't I have done it, sir? You told me to proceed with my duties.

Vance scrutinized the man closely. "When he returns keep him downstairs," he said. "And you'd better stay here yourself." Gamble bowed and returned to the dining room; and a moment later Doctor Doremus arrived. Heath went briskly out of the room and down the corridor to the closet. We were close behind him when he opened the door. Doremus, straightway assuming a professional air, knelt down and touched Brisbane Coe's body.

"Dead," he announced. "Take hold of his shoulders," And he and the sergeant carried the body into the library and placed it on the daven-

"Could you tell us, Doctor," Vance asked, "which of the two victims died first?"

Doremus, who had been testing the movability of the dead man's head and limbs, glanced at his watch.

"That's easy," he said. "The one upstairs. The advance of rigor mortis in the two bodies is practically the same. This one might be slightly further along: but it's been nearly four hours since I went over the other fellow. Therefore, I'd say that this one died anywhere from two to three hours later. Say, eight o'clock for the one upstairs and about ten o'clock for this one."

He proceeded with his examination. After a while he straightened up and frowned at Markham.

"You know what killed this guy? A stab in the back! . . . Same like the fellow upstairs. And almost in the same place." "And the weapon?" "The same. A sharp, narrow, fourcornered instrument. Only, in this case, the hemorrhage was external. A lot of blood lost." "Died instantly, I take it," remarked Vance.

"Yep." The doctor nodded. "Must have fallen in his tracks."

Vance picked up the bloodstained coat and waistcoat of the dead man, and inspected them.

"And this time the stab was through the clothes he was wearing," he commented. "A minor point. but worth verifying. . . . I say, Doctor, any indications of a struggle?" "Nope. Not a sign. He got it in the back when he wasn't expecting it. Startled him for a split second probably-look at that expression! -and then he curled up and passed out. Doubt if he even saw the fellow that did him in. Quick, smooth business."

business," amended "Devilish Markham.

"Oh, well, I'm no moralist," Dore mus confessed. "I'm a doctor, They're too many people in the world anyway." He began filling in a printed blank. "Here's your removal order, Sergeant." And in another moment he had slammed the front door behind him. Heath went at once to the telephone and ordered the wagon from the department of public welfare.

Then he returned to the library. "Now where do we stand?" he asked, spreading his hands hopelessly. "It's my opinion the Chink cook did it. If Mr. Markham would give me the word, I'd arrest him

"Why such haste, Sergeant?" sighed Vance. "You haven't a particle of evidence against him-and he knows it. That's why he will not admit that he was here earlier last

"See here, Vance," Markham said. 'How do you know Liang was here early last night?"

"By the fact that Gamble heard him come in at midnight. I imagine he always comes in silently-it's a Chinese characteristic. On general principles, the Chinese never want their movements, however innocent to be known to foreigners. But last night Liang was heard returningand Gamble had already retired to the fourth floor. A bit significanteh. what? Liang probably saw Gamble's boudoir light ablaze and let it be known, in a subtle way, that he was arriving from his afternoon and evening off."

"I see what you mean." Markham nodded dubiously. "But, after all, your reasoning is purely specula-

"No," Vance told him. "I've never seen it . . . but I think I've had fragment of it in my hand." Grassi stared.

"A fragment!" "Yes; a small triangular piece," Vance nodded. Then he added: "I have grave fears, Mr. Grassi, that the Ting yao vase has been broken." The Italian stiffened and his eyes clouded with suspicious anger. "It's impossible! I was inspecting the vase only yesterday afternoon. It was on the circular table in the library."

"There's only a Tao Kuang vase there now," Vance informed him. "And where, may I be permitted to ask, did you find this fragment of Ting yao?"

"On the same table," Vance replied carelessly. "Beneath the Tao "Indeed?" There was a sneer in somber eyes flashing. "I resent that question, sir! Even if I had met Miss Lake, I would not tell you."

"Really, Mr. Grassi," Vance smiled, "I would not have expected you to. Your conduct is quite cor-. I take it for granted you were aware that Miss Lake is engaged to Mr. Wrede." Grassi calmed down quickly and resumed his seat.

"Yes; I knew there was some understanding. Mr. Archer Coe informed me of the fact. But he also stated—"

"Yes, yes. He also stated that he was opposed to the alliance. He enjoyed Mr. Wrede intellectually, but did not regard him favorably What is your opinion of the situation, Mr. Grassi?" The Italian seemed surprised at Vance's question.

"You must forgive me, sir," he said, after a pause, "if I plead my inability to express an opinion on the subject. I may say, however, that Mr. Brisbane Coe disagreed emain at the library door and see with his brother. He was very stated his views most emphatically

Grassi's eyelids drooped, and he turned his head slightly. "Both," he repeated in a low voice. keep Wrede till later-he's teeming

"Mr. Brisbane was stabbed in the back shortly after Mr. Archer was killed," Vance informed him. "Most unfortunate," the Italian murmured.

"Have you," asked Vance, "any suggestion as to who might desire to have these two gentlemen out of the way?"

Grassi suddenly became austere and aloof.

"I have no suggestion," he replied in a flat, diplomatic voice. "Mr. Archer Coe was the type of man who might inspire enmities; but Mr. Brisbane Coe was quite the opposite-genial, shrewd, kindly-"

"An excellent characterization," Vance complimented him. "And what are your impressions of Mr. Wrede? . . . I assure you any opinion you express will go no further."

Grassi appeared ill at ease. He did not answer at once, but contemplated the wall before him for some time. Finally he spoke in the slow, precise manner of a man carefully choosing his words.

"I have not been particularly impressed by Mr. Wrede. On the surface he is most charming, but I have a feeling he is inclined toward superficiality. He is capable, I should say, of unexpected things. I have a feeling he would stop at nothing to gain his own ends."

"Thank you!" Vance spoke with unwonted harshness. " I perfectly understand your feelings." He looked down at Grassi contemptu-"And now, sir, we should ously. like to know exactly what you did yesterday between four o'clock in the afternoon and one o'clock in the morning." His tone was almost menacing.

The Italian made a valiant effort to meet Vance's stern gaze. "I have said all I intend to say," he announced. Vance faced the man threateningly. "In that case," he said, "I shall have to order your arrest on suspicion of having murdered Archer and Brisbane Coe!" A look of abject fear came over Grassi's pallid face. "No-you can't-do that," stammered. "I didn't do it-I assure you I didn't do it!" His voice rose. "I'll tell you anything you want to know. I went to Doctor Montrose's for tea. We discussed ceramics; and I stayed to dinner. At eight o'clock I excused myself and went to the railway station to take the train for Mount Vernon-

"Yes, very." Vance studied the other icily. "Did the lady forgive your tardiness?" "Yes! Miss Lake accepted my explanation," the man returned, with a show of heat. "The fact is, she did not arrive until several minutes after I did. She had motored to the Arrowhead inn with friends for dinner, and had an accident of some kind on her return to the club."

"Very distressin"," murmured Vance. "Were her friends with her at the time of the accident?" "I do not believe they were."

Grassi answered, "Miss Lake told me she had motored back alone." At this point Detective Burke stepped into the room. That Chink downstairs wants to speak to Mr. Vance," he said. "He's all hot and bothered." Vance nodded to Heath.

"Send him up, Burke," the sergeant ordered.

Liang appeared at the door and waited till Vance came to him. He said something in a low voice which the rest of the room could not distinguish, and held out \boldsymbol{a} crudely twisted paper parcel. "Thank you, Mr. Liang,"

Vance; and the Chinaman, with a low bow, returned downstairs.

Vance took the parcel to the desk and began opening it. "The cook," he said, speaking directly to the Italian, "has just found this package tucked away in the garbage pail on the rear porch. It may interest you, Mr. Grassi." As he spoke he smoothed out the corners of the paper; and there were revealed to all of us many fragments of beautiful, delicate porcelain with a pure white luster. "Here," he went on, still addressing the Italian, "are the remains of Mr. Coe's Ting yao vase. . . And, if you will notice, several of these pieces of fragile Sung porcelain are stained with blood.' There was a long silence. Finally Grassi looked up.

"It's an outrage!" he exclaimed. "I don't understand it in the least. . . . And the blood! Do you think, sir, that this vase had anvthing to do with the death of Mr.

Coe? "Without doubt." Vance was watching the Italian with a puzzled look. "But pray sit down or two more questions I should like to ask you."

The other resumed his seat reluc tantly. "If you were with Miss Lake at the Country club late last night," Vance proceeded, "how did it happen that you and she returned to the house at different hours? I presume, of course, that you accompanied her back to the city."

Grassi anneared embarrassed "It was Miss Lake's suggestion, he said, "that we should not be heard entering the house at the same time. So I waited in Central park for a quarter of an hour after she had gone.'

Vance nodded. "I thought as much. It was the proximity of your two returns that made me conclude that possibly you had been together last night. But what reason did Miss Lake give for the deception?" "No particular reason, Miss Lake merely said she thought it would be better if Mr. Brisbane Coe did not hear us coming in together." "She specifically mentioned Mr.

Brisbane Coe?" "Yes." "And she did not mention Mr. Archer Coe?"

"Not that I remember." "That is quite understandable," Vance remarked, "Uncle Brisbane was her ally in her engagement to Mr. Wrede: and she may have feared that he would not have approved of her being out so late with another man. Grassi moved uneasily, and I could have sworn the pallor of his face increased.

"I did not care to make a noise opening and shutting the closet door," he explained. Vance made no comment.

"That will be all for the present," he said pleasantly. "And thank you for your help. . . Would you mind waiting in your room? shall probably want to question you again before the afternoon is

The man bowed and went down the passageway of the hall toward the front of the house.

Markham was immediately on his "What about that broken vase?" he demanded, pointing to the parcel of porcelain fragments on the desk. "Was that the thing with which Archer Coe was struck on the head?"

"Oh, no. This delicate Ting yao china would crack under the least pressure. If a man were struck with such a vase he would hardly feel it. The vase simply would break into pieces."

"But the blood. . . . "There was no blood on Archer's head." Vance selected one of the fragments and held it up. "Moreover, please note that the blood is not on the outer glaze, but on the inside of the vase. The same is true of the little piece I found on the table downstairs. But I ean't possibly connect this broken vase with Brisbane's death or with the Scottie."

"And how do you connect it with Archer's death?"

Vance became evasive. "Suppose we talk to Wrede," he suggested. "We may know more when he has unburdened his heart

Markham gave an order to Heath, but at that moment Burke announced the arrival of the wagon from the department of public welfare. The sergeant went into the hall and was half-way down the stairs when Vance hastened after

"Just a moment, Sergeant! I could bear to snoop in the pockets of Brisbane's suit before it's taken away.

Would you mind?" "Certainly not, Mr. Vance. Come along."

We all went to the library. sergeant closed the door "I had the same idea," he said. "I've been figuring right along that maybe that slick butler was lying to us about the ticket to Chicago." It took but a short time to empty the pockets of Brisbane Coe's suit to the library table. But there was nothing of interest among the contents, only the usual items to be found in a man's pockets—a wallet, handkerchiefs, keys, a fountainpen, a watch, and the like. There were, however, the ticket and berth reservations to Chicago, and also the parcel room check for the suit-

Heath was crestfallen, and expressed himself in violent terms. "The ticket's here all right," he added; "so I guess he intended to go, after all."

Vance, too, was disappointed. "Oh, yes, Sergeant, he intended to was worrying me. I was hoping to find something else."

"What?" asked Markham. Vance gave him a vague look. "Really, don't y' know, I haven't the slightest idea." He would say no more. Heath summoned the two men waiting in the hall with their basket, and the body of Brisbane Coe was taken away to join that of his brother at the mortuary. As the men went out to the car, Snitkin came in with the dead man's suitcase. The contents consisted merely of the items which would ordinarily be taken by a man making a short trip.

Vance nodded to Heath, and the sergeant ordered Camble to put the bag away. "And you, Smitkin," he added, wait upstairs."

Both men disappeared, and the sergeant went to the drawing room doors and pulled them apart.

"Mr. Wrede," he called, wanted.' Wrede came into the library with a haggard, questioning look in his

"Have you learned anything, Mr. Markham?" His voice seemed to quaver slightly, and as he spoke, his eyes roved over the room: "Where's Mr. Grassi?"

"Mr. Grassi's upstairs." Markham motioned to a chair: "And I'm sorry to say that thus far we have learned very little. . . We are hoping that you may be able to help us out of our quandary,"

"Good Lord! I wish I could." Wrede was like a man on the verge of collapse, "It's horrible!" Vance had been watching him from under half-closed evelids. "It's more horrible than you per haps realize," he said, "Brisbane Coe has also been murdered."

Wrede sank heavily into the nearest chair. "Brisbane?" His voice seemed to come from afar. "But why-why "Why, indeed?" Vance spoke harshly. "Nevertheless, he's dead, too, was stabbed in the back with a curiously shaped instrument."

Wrede stared straight ahead. His lips moved, but no sound came from them.

"Tell us what you know about this double murder. Mr. Wrede," Vance went on with grim relentlessness. A shiver ran over Wrede's body "I know nothing about it," he replied after a painful pause, "Gamble told me this morning that Brisbane was in Chicago." "He started for the station yesterday afternoon, but returned here last night-to meet his death." "Why-should he return?" stammered Wrede.

'Have you any ideas on the subject?" "I?" The man's eyes opened wide. "Not the slightest idea." "What do you know of the conditions here at the Coe house yesterday? I would like as full a description as you can give." "I was here talking to Archer

Coe from ten to twelve yesterday morning-"About ceramics-or Miss Lake?"

Wrede caught his breath. "Both," he answered weakly. The fact is, Archer, and I had a somewhat bitter session regarding my coming marriage with Miss Lake. But it was nothing unusual. He was, as you may know, violently opposed to the marriage. Brisbane took part in the discussion, and called Archer some rather harsh names.

"I lunched in my apartment Then I went to an auction at the American art galleries. But I had a bad headache. So I came home ound three, and lay down. I did not leave my apartment again until this morning, when Gamble phoned said Vance. Wrede's eyes clouded, and he set his jaws.

"So she told me this morning." "When Gamble phoned you this morning," Vance asked, "what was your mental reaction to the news?" Wrede frowned. "That would be difficult to an-

It was not like Archer to take his own life; andfrankly-I had very grave doubts. That is why I advised Gamble to get in immediate touch with Mr. Markham."

"You acted wisely," Vance observed, with a tinge of sarcasm.

"But if you did not believe that Archer Coe had committed suicide, there must have been in your mind another possibility-to wit; that of murder. Who, Mr. Wrede, do you But it was not the ticket that | think would have had sufficient motive to commit the crime?"

Wrede did not answer at once. He appeared sorely troubled and ran his fingers several times through his hair.

"That is a question I have been trying to answer all morning," he replied without looking at Vance. "One may speculate, of course, but it would not be fair to voice those speculations without definite evidence of some kind. . . ."

"I-I really, Mr. Vance, I'm not well acquainted with the man. He was after Coe's collection of Chinese ceramics; but that would hardly constitute a motive for murder." "No-o." Vance smiled frigidly. "What about Miss Lake?" Wrede almost leaped from his seat. "That suggestion is outrageous!" he cried, glowering at Vance. "How dare you-?" "Spare me the drama," Vance cut in, with a contemptuous smile. "I'm deuced difficult to impress."

Wrede sat back, with a mumbled remark which we could not make

"What do you think of Liang, the cook?" Vance asked next. The man glanced up with a swift, shrewd look.

"Liang, eh? That's quite different. There's something secretive and underhand about that Chinaman. I've never wholly understood his being here. He's certainly not a cook by profession; and from my apartment window I've often seen him sitting on the rear porch writing for hours. My impression is he's a spy of some kind. And he knows Chinese art. I distrusted him from the first." Wrede nodded his head sagely. "If you knew more of what was back of his presence here, you might know more of Archer Coe's death. . At least," he hastened to add, "that is my impression."

Vance stifled a mild vawn. "The oriental temperament is full of mystic potentialities" he commented. "And my own impression is that Liang knows something about what happened here last night. But. as you suggest, a motive in that direction is still lacking. On the other hand, you yourself had abundant motive for doing away with Archer Coe. "Archer was admittedly opposed" to your marriage with his niece.' Vance went on, "And until he died Miss Lake was limited to a small allowance. She would have received her patrimony at Archer's decease. Thus, if you had successfully put Archer out of the way, you would have at once gained a fairly wealthy bride-with no obstacles.

Is it not so, Mr. Wrede?" The man gave a harsh laugh. "Yes, I suppose so. As you point out, I had ample motive for murdering Archer. But, on the other hand, I would have had no reasonwhatever for murdering Brisbane.

"Ah, yes-Brisbane, Quite-quite.

That second corpse complicates the whole matter." "Where was Brisbane's body found, may I ask?" "In the closet at the end of the morning?" "No!" Wrede shuddered. "But Icame very near it. Instead, I threw my hat on a chair in the drawing room."

"It is peculiar." Wrede turned his attention again to the table. "This vase might have been substituted for the other." "It was," said Vance laconically.

Wrede went out, and we could hear him mounting the stairs. Markham rose nervously.

"What do you make of the fellow?" he asked. "Peculiar character-far from appealin'. I wouldn't choose him for a boon companion."

"It occurred to me," said Markham, "that he might have opened the hall closet this morning, and, because of what he saw, told Gamble to phone me."

"It's possible," Vance nodded. "The same thought flitted through my mind. Anyway, it's safe to conclude he doesn't care a great deal for Grassi. It struck me he was jealous of the Italian. But Wrede's real passion of hatred is directed toward the cook. He has sized up Liang pretty accurately. . . . It's strange that Archer, with his Sinological knowledge, didn't suspect Liang's true status."

"Maybe he did," Markham suggested, without interest. Vance looked up quickly and took his cigarette from his lips.

"My aunt! Maybe he did! There came a pounding of heavy footsteps on the hall stairs, and the next moment Heath was standing in the door, beaming friumphantly. He held something in his hand and, crossing to the table, he threw the object down for our inspection.

It was one of the most beautiful and interesting Chinese daggers I have ever seen. The blade tapered from a thickness of about half an inch at the guard to a stiletto-like point, and was partly encrusted with dried blood. That this dagger was the murder weapon was obvious at one glance. "Good work, Sergeant," said

Vance. "Where did you find it?" "Under the cushion seat of the easy chair where we found the dead guy this morning.'

"Oh, I say! Really? In Archer Coe's bedroom?" Vance seemed astonished at Heath's announcement. "Most amazin'. Heath watched him a moment and then looked back at the dagger. "And not a chance to pick up fingerprint," he complained with "A silk handle." He chewed viciously on his burnt-out

"No-no fingerprints," murmured Vance without lifting his eyes from the floor. "But that isn't the chief difficulty, Sergeant. Brisbane Coe was stabbed hours after Archer Coe ment.

Vance began turning the pockets inside out. From the left-hand outside pocket he drew forth two pieces of fine, waxed linen string about four feet long. He was about to throw these to one side, when he suddenly bent forward and inspected them. One end of each piece of string was tied securely to a large bent pin. Heath was looking on with rapt fascination. "And what might that be, Mr

Vance?" he asked. Vance did not answer, but put his hand again into the left-hand pocket of the topcoat. When he withdrew it he was holding a long slender piece of steel. "Ah!" he exclaimed with satisfaction.

We all looked down at it wonder ingly. It was perhaps the last thing in the world we expected to see. The object which Vance had taken from the pocket of Brisbane Coe's coat was a darning needle!

CONCERNING THE YOUNG

DEAR Mrs. Post: Should young girl of fifteen pay a party though the hostess' daughter is a schoolmate of hers? And should she leave a visiting card? After such an invitation is there anything a girl of this age can possibly do to return the invitation?

Answer: It would be polite to go to see them, yes. Whether to leave a card or not depends upon the custom of your community. If all young girls have cards, then yes. Other wise, always best to do as others of your neighborhood do. Return this invitation by inviting your schoolmate to your house or to the movies or to whatever you can that you think would amuse her.

"OLD FAITHFUL" IS GIVEN BACK SEAT

'Beehive' Steals the Spotlight From Famous Geyser.

Yellowstone Park, Wyo.-For the first time in history, Old Faithful geyser was literally robbed of the spotlight recently when the Rechive geyser went into eruption just as the light beacon was to be played on the ten o'clock eruption of Old Faithful.

Carle Towle, bellhop at Old Faithful inn, was at his post beside the spotlight on the roof of the inn. focusing on the old reliable geyser, when he learned that the Beehive was in eruption. For a second he was in a quandary. Hundreds of persons all over the formation had their eyes glued on Old Faithful to see the first spurts of the eruption Would they understand if he suddenly pulled the beacon away?

Then he recalled that the Beehive had not played during the past four summers, and only a few persons had witnessed recent winter eruptions. He knew that the Beehive, with its 200-foot ribbon of steam and water shooting straight up in a narrow column, would provide a more spectacular show than Old Faithful. With his decision made, he swung the huge beacon around and across the Firehole river to the peculiarly shaped cone of the Beehive. All eyes followed the triangle of light, and although few knew which geyser they were watching, they stood in amazement at the remarkable display.

The spotlight then flashed between the Beehive and Old Faithful, which was now in full eruption. The contrasts between the two shafts of steam and boiling water was striking. Old Faithful, with its plumed fan, shoots skyward 150 feet. The Beehive, with a cone that readily explains its name, skyrockets like an arrow straight into the sky with a ball of steam flaring out like a sunburst at the very top.

Royal Mounted Police to Study Wild Birds

Quebec, Que.-Fabled in fiction and fact as friends of the Indian, protectors of frontiersmen and relentless foe of the criminal, Canada's Royal Mounted police again are laying saddle and bridle aside to serve their government as naturalists and scientific explorers.

A detail of the famous scarletcoated troopers have left Quebec city aboard a steamer carrying officers of the department of the interior on an ocean tour of several months which has for its objective an intensive study of the rare wild bird life on the north shore of the St. Lawrence river and gulf as far as Blanc Sablon, where Labrador adjoins eastern Quebec at the west end of the Strait of Belle Isle.

Frequent stops are to be made for inland journeys to the haunts of the feathered inhabitants of Quebec's rugged and picturesque coastal areas.

Year-round patrols of the "Mounties" have been established for some time in the provinces of Quebec to guard Quebec's many hunting pre-It is the duty of these patrols to prevent the slaughter of Quebec's bird life, which is now achieving international fame, especially in the Gaspe peninsula, where at Perce Rock and Bonaventure island more than 200,000 rare wild birds, including gannets, murres -relatives of the now extinct flightless great auks-and many others form what is said to be the most densely inhabited bird sanctuary in

Underground River Abounds With Fish

Harmony, Minn.-Fish which may never have seen the light of day are thriving in turbulent underground channel waters of the recently discovered scenic wonders cave near here.

The source of the underground river remains undiscovered. The stream rushes through a 300-foot rock-lined chamber and, piercing a stone abutment, crashes 60 feet down to lower cave regions not yet explored.

The fish species, though unverified, are held to be common

A LESSON IN POLITENESS

A FLOCK of modestly dressed yet rather distinguished looking feathered folks alighted in a cherry tree and began helping themselves to Farmer Brown's cherries. They were about the size of Winsome Bluebird, but did not look in the least like him, for they were dressed almost wholly in a beautiful rich, soft, grayish-brown. Across the end of each tail was a bright yellow band. On each, the forehead, chin, and a line through each eye was velvety black. Each wore a very stylish pointed cap, and on the wings of most of them were little spots of red which looked like sealing wax. From this they get the name of Waxwings. They were slim and trim and quite dandified, and in a quiet way were really beautiful.

"If they stay long, Farmer Brown won't have any cherries left," re-while those gadabouts haven't even begun thinking about housekeeping yet. They certainly do like those cherries, but I guess Farmer Brown can stand the loss of what they eat. He may have fewer cherries, but he'll have more apples because of

"How's that?" demanded Peter. "Oh," replied Jenny, "they were over here a while ago when those little green canker worms threatto eat up the whole orchard, and they stuffed themselves on those worms just the same as they are stuffing themselves on cherries now. They are very fond of small fruits, but most of those they eat are the wild kind which are of no use to Farmer Brown or to anybody else. They eat so many cedar berries that some folks call them Cedar Birds. Others call them Cherry Birds. Now just look at that performance, will you!"

There were five of the Waxwings. and they were seated side by side on a branch of the cherry tree. One of them had a plump cherry which he passed to the next one. This one passed it on to the next, and so it went to the end of the row and half way back before it was finally esten. Peter laughed right out. 'Never in my life have I seen such politeness," said he.

"Huh!" exclaimed Jenny Wren, 'I don't believe it was politeness I guess if you got at the truth of the matter you would find each one was stuffed so full that he thought he didn't have room for that cherry, and so passed it along."

"Well, I think that was politeness just the same," retorted Peter. The first one might have dropped the cherry instead of passing it along."

Just then the Waxwings flew away.

Cotton Stockings? Seemingly, this is an age regulated by codes. In order to keep pace with the fast moving industry, alphabetical signatures and slogans were adopted. Just as governing directions concerning labor and welfare are voiced, there also appear specific clothing orders. Within the past few weeks, definite strides have been taken by freshman college girls of this city to introduce cotton hosiery as the only accepted form for school wear. In a surprisingly short time new recruits were added to the charter instigators of this novel campaign. The plan was met with more than eager

Velocity of a River

Swift streams are not as easily turned aside from their course as slow ones and hence the former maintain straighter courses. The velocity of a river depends on the difference in altitude between the source and the mouth, also on the distance which separates them, as this determines the grade. The volume of water is also an important
