EARLY training is not retained by infants. Impressions of babyhood, pleasurable and painful memory, nor do they influence later That is the latest discovery of psychologists who are making experiments at the child development clinic at Columbia university. And it is good news. To my mind nothing would be more tragic than for the average baby to remember many of his impressions. Think of the things he would remember! Think of the child with faith in

The little child frightened with tales of the "bogy man"-the senseless resource of some parents otherwise in their right minds of locking children in the dark or threatening dark closets! The hurt to baby sensibilities by disparaging names and insulting comparisons Certainly a child of two and a half is hurt by being called "a bad. wicked boy," "nothing but a trouble to mother." Or, take the child of that apparently civilized mother who was overheard in her locker at a public bathing beach berating the toddler who could not move as fast as she for "Keeping me here freezing. Almost unbelievable, dear Readers, but true.

How fortunate then, that habies do not remember!

Seneca, Great Indian

Seneca, who made his home along Lake Erie near the present site of Painesville, Ohio, stands out in history as one of the really great Indians in dignity and statesmanship. He was given this name by the white men possibly because he was of the Seneca tribe, but some authorities say he was so called because he looked and acted the part of Seneca, the notable Latin stoic philosopher.

LEARN COAL--you will buy it more wisely

Coal is more than something just "black and dirty" that will burn. It is a much more extensive subject. To describe the particular quality of the different coals in the U.S. alone would require more than a thousand pages of a book the size of a large mail order catalogue. More than 3000 different valuable articles are made from coal or its by-products. A whole division of the science of chemistry is required to cover the subject. So while our advice to you, "Learn Coal-You will buy it more wisely," doesn't mean that you should know everything about coal, we do believe that an explanation of a few of the more important points about home heating will make your coal

In selecting domestic coal for your home or heating plant there are four basic qualities to consider:

1. Volatile matter or gas.

3. Moisture.

4. Ash content.

2. Fixed carbon. The first two are the heat giving qualities, so, therefore, the higher the percentage of these two, the more heat given off.

The last two qualities-moisture and ash content-are detrimental to the first two and are value. The lower the percentage of these last two, therefore, the more heat value. Simple, isn't it. But very important. In exactly the same proportion that these four basic qualities are present in the coal you buy, just in that proportion do you buy heat or waste. Remember this: "Cheap Coal" is really expensive if you have to heap in more shovelfuls to obtain less heat. The Farm Produce Company

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Philo Vance, expert in solving crime mysteries, is called in to investigate the supposed suicide of Archer Coe, wealthy collector of Chinese ceramics. District Attorney Markham has learned the circumstances over the telephone from Gamble, Coe's butler. Getting no response when he had knocked on his employer's bedroom door, Gamble said he had looked through the keyhole and had seen Coe seated, a revolver in his right hand and a bullet hole in his temple. The door was bolted from the inside. Markham and Vance go to Coe's house in New York's 70s. They find Wrede, a friend of Coe's, there; also a Signor Grassi, a guest, Sergeant Heath and Detective Hennessey burst in the door, revealing the death chamber. Coe is clothed in a dressing gown, but wears street shoes. Heath says it is a plain case of suicide. CHAPTER II.—Hilda Lake, Coe's

CHAPTER II.—Hilda Lake, Coe's niece, says Coe deserved death—that he collected ceramics through unfair means and incurred the enmity of Chinese; also that as her guardian he controlled her fortune and was parsimonious. Medical Examiner Doremus arrives and says suicide; then on being asked about certain mysterious features by Vance, he changes his mind. He declares Coe had been dead for hours when the bullet entered his head. It is found that Coe had been struck on the head and one of his ribs broken. Finally a small wound is found. The wound had bled internally. Vance, from a closet, brings out a coat and waistcoat, with holes coinciding with Coe's wound, showing Coe was fully dressed when he was stabbed. Gamble announces that there is something queer in the front hall.

CHAPTER III.—They find a wounded Scotch terrier. Vance takes the dog to a veterinarian. Wrede, who has become engaged to Miss Lake against Coe's wishes, and Grassi, who has been Coe's guest, are briefly questioned. Van says the Scottie should prove an important connecting link. Gamble says Brisbane Coe, Archer's brother, who lived in the house, left for Chicago the previous afternoon, Vance declares Brisbane could not have gone to Chicago, as his favorite stick is hanging in the hall.

CHAPTER IV.—Miss Lake declares there was no love lost between Archer and Brisbane. Brisbane's suitcase is found at the railroad station. In a coat closet in the lower hall of the Coe home his dead body is discovered. Vance interrogates the Chinese cook, Liang, who says he did not return to the house until midnight. Vance insists the cook was in the house early in the evening. Vance finds a bit of porcelain from a Chinese vase. A cheap imitation has been substituted for a work of art. The bit of porcelain from the vase that has disappeared has blood on it.

CHAPTER V.—Brisbane died from a stab in the back, as in Archer's case. Grassi is called for questioning, without effect. Wrede, questioned, paints Liang in black colors. Vance points out that Wrede had a motive for killing Archer Coe, because of the latter's control of Miss Lake's estate. Heath brings in the dagger which killed both men. Vance, searching Brisbane Coe's coat, finds some waxed thread attached to a bent pin. Then he finds a darning needle.

CHAPTER VI.—Searching the library, Vance finds a complete vase with traces of blood in it. Wrede announces that his engagement to Miss Lake has been broken by the girl. Vance learns that Wrede once had a dog—a Doberman Pinscher.

CHAPTER VII

The Scented Lipstick. VANCE'S declaration left us both perturbed and mystified. Markham was the first to speak. "Are you certain, Vance? Maybe you overlooked-" "Oh, no." Vance made a gesture of finality. "It wasn't there-oh, quite. Some one put it there after I'd examined the chest." "But who, in heaven's name?" "Come, come, Markham," Vance smiled grimly. "One doesn't know. y' know. But I'd say it was the same person who tucked the dagger under the cushion of the chair in which Archer passed away." "The dagger?"

"Yes, yes-the dagger. That mystery is at least cleared up-the poker explained that incongruity. The dagger didn't belong in Archer's boudoir. Quite the contr'ry. Its presence there confused me abominably. Both the poker and the dagger belonged in the library here. And they weren't here, d' ye seethey were where they shouldn't have been, where they couldn't possibly have been. . . . A gap—a mishap—a bit of superficial thinkin' on some one's part. Panic? Yes, that's what it was. Movin' things from one place to another. Silly idea. People always think that by movin' things they can confuse an issue. More often they merely clarify it."

The sergeant projected himself irascibly into the discussion.

"If some one did cache the dagger and the poker upstairs, who'd have had the opportunity? That's what I'd like to figure out."

"Almost anyone might have done it, Sergeant," returned Vance lazily. "Both Wrede and Grassi have passed back and forth before the room while we were downstairs." Heath thought a moment.

"That's right. And then do you remember how that Miss Lake rushed to the chair when she first came in the room and put her arm back of the corpse? She coulda stuck the dagger under the seat with all of us looking at her. And that cagy butler, he coulda done it."

"And don't overlook the Chinaman. Gamble sent him to fetch Miss Lake's breakfast tray while we were all downstairs"

Heath grasped at this remark.

"That's the guy!" he declared. "Just a minute, sergeant!" Markham suppressed him with a gesture. and turned to Vance. "If, as you believe, the dagger and poker were taken from this room and hidden in Coe's bedroom this morning, the inevitable conclusion is that the murderer is one of the persons who have been in the house this morning."

"Not necessarily." Vance shook his head mildly. "There are several persons here who know more than they've admitted. . . . No, no, it was a stupid act. The murderer couldn't have done it. It was some one else-some one who didn't know all the facts. The murderer was too clever to do a foolish thing like that-to hide weapons where they never could have been. . . . The murderer wanted the weapons found in this library. That's why he tried to hide the dagger twice—once in the egg-shell Ting vao vase, and the second time in that Yung Cheng Ting yao. And he wanted the poker to be found on the hearth-with the bloodstains on it. He wanted the weapons in this room where Archer Coe was sitting when Gamble left the house last night. He figured on this library being the murder room. And then something went wrong-the murder room shifted. Something strange and diabolical happened. The corpse, with a bullet wound in his head and a revolver in his hand, decided on the bedroom upstairs. And when the mur-

Brisbane was killed hours after Archer. And the reason he was too late to transfer the scene of the crime was that Archer's door was bolted on the inside. The scene of this murder had shifted- Then You, Too, Have 'Dabbled' in and he, the murderer, was locked out. He knew last night that neither the dagger nor the poker could be found in the bedroom. Therefore it was not the murderer who placed them there this morning. . . . "

At this moment Gamble appeared at the door. He was worried and apologetic.

"I'm very sorry, sir, to interrupt," he began, "but an item-if you know what I mean-has just occurred to me. Ordinarily I would have thought little or nothing of it, but in view-" "What's the item?" Markham snapped. "It-it's this little gadget, sir," Gamble stuttered, laying a small cylindrical metal lipstick holder on the table. "I found this in the wastepaper basket in this room this morning before I discovered the master's body upstairs, and I threw it out. But a few minutes ago I began thinking about this terrible af-

Vance picked up the holder and removed the top.

"Practically empty," he mused. 'Not a gold case—therefore thrown away." He smeared a little of the rouge on his finger and smelled it. "Duplaix's Carmine. Made for blondes. . . . Most interestin'." He looked at Gamble.

"You left the house last night, when?"

"Between half-past five and six, sir. I couldn't say exactly." "And you are quite sure Mr. Archer Coe had no visitor at the time?" "Oh, quite, sir." Gamble was again becoming worried. "As I told

"Yes, yes. So you told me." Vance was watching the man from under lazy eyelids. "But a lady seems to have been here. . . . Do you know of any appointment Mr. Coe may have had with the possible owner of that lipstick?" "An appointment with a lady?" The butler, for some reason, seemed shocked. "Oh, no, sir. I'm sure Mr. Coe had no such appointment. He was-if you understand me, sir-a most abstemious man." Vance dismissed him bruskly.

"That will be all, Gamble." When the man had gone, Vanco coked waggishly at Markham.

tain a lady yesterday afternoon between, let us say, six o'clock and eight—which is probably about the time he was killed."

Heath was growing impatient. "I can't see that it makes any difference anyway. Suppose the old boy did have a dame in for a visitthat's not explaining the cockeved things that happened here last night. What about that bolted door upstairs? You had something in mind, Mr. Vance, when you asked me to get that bolt fixed, didn't you?"

"My notion was a bit vague, Sergeant." Vance crushed out his cigarette. "Of course, people don't get murdered in bolted rooms except in detective novels; and something Miss Lake said to me suggested that I might find a solution to that peculiar and illogical circumstance." "What was that?" Markham curtly demanded. "When she was talkin' about Brisbane, don't y' know. You remember she mentioned he was interested in criminology and was sufficiently clever to cover his tracks if he'd decided to go in for murder. A significant remark, Markham."

"But I don't see the connection." Markham was puzzled. "Brisbane was the victim-not the murderer. Suppose you elucidate—if possible.'

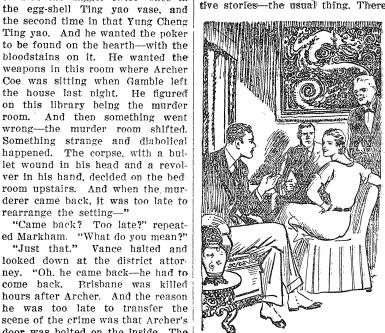

"I live in 'opes," Vance grinned. 'Let me question Miss Lake a bit further. I could bear a bit of amplification as to Brisbane's delvings into criminological lore." He sobered and went toward the door. "What do you say to using Archer's bedroom as the scene of the interrogation?"

Markham gave a resigned sigh, and we went unstairs. Heath sent Gamble to ask Miss Lake to join us there; and a few minutes later she came in swaggering but chilly and, I thought, suspicious, Vance pushed a chair forward for

"We wanted to ask you, Miss Lake," he began gravely, "just what you meant when you spoke of your Uncle Brisbane's having 'dabbled in criminology'-I believe that was your phrase. What form did his interest in criminology take?"

She shot Vance a quick look and gave a forced laugh.

"You might call it that." "Ah! Then perhaps you can help us." Vance's air became jocular. "We crave to know how this door could have been bolted on the in-Obviously Archer couldn't have done it with a bullet in his

of muscular contraction." Vance nodded, without changing his expression or shifting his gaze. "Quite true. There was the famous case in Prague of the suicide who later shot the police inspector. And there was a more recent case in Pennsylvania. . . . But I hardly think that condition applies here. Archer, d' ye see, died of a stab in the back. And the position of his hand holding the revolver was not such as would indicate that he himself pulled the trigger.' "Perhaps you're right." I was surprised at her ready acceptance of Vance's dismissal of her suggestion. "Some one else must have bolted the door." She spoke with cynical lightness. "It's quite a problem, isn't it?"

"Are you sure you can't help us?"

Vance gazed at her steadily. She became thoughtful; a curious change came over her, and she looked at Vance with a questioning steady stare.

"I've been thinking about that door for several hours," she said tensely; "and I can't find an answer to it. Uncle Brisbane and Mr. Wrede and I often talked about these tricky criminal devices. We worked out various ways and means of doing seemingly impossible things; but bolting this door from the outside was something we could mouth with slow deliberation. "You mean to tell me that you and Brisbane and Mr. Wrede actually discussed the possibilities of bolting this door from the outside?"

"Oh, yes." She appeared quite frank. "Many times. But we decided it couldn't be successfully done." Vance hesitated, and a strange kind of chill ran over me. I felt as if we were approaching something particularly pertinent and, at the same time, sinister. "Did anyone else"-Vance's cool voice brought me back to reality—

our speculations."

"The cook? Oh, I suppose he heard our idle chatter. I believe we talked over our dire plots at dinner occasionally."

"And now the problem that troubled all of you has been solved." Vance rose and strolled meditative ly toward the door. "Very sad. . ." He opened the door and held it ajar. "Thank you, Miss Lake. I say; you won't mind remaining in your room till dinner time, will you?"

"If I did mind, it wouldn't do me any good, I suppose." She spoke with obvious resentment as she airholes. Then he closed the door walked toward Vance. "May I be permitted to get a book from Uncle Brisbane's room to while away my hours of detention?"

Vance's calm gaze did not alter. "I'm dashed sorry, and all that sort of thing," he said politely, "but | slack of the cotton through the air-I'll send you up any book you'd like hole. Presently the key came in -later. I've a bit of browsing to do

The woman turned on her heel and walked away without a word. Vance waited until he heard her door close with a bang; then he turned and came back into the

"Not a sweet, Victorian clinging vine," he lamented; "but a lady of parts, none the less. . . . Curious, her telling us of her discussions with Brisbane about the possibilities of bolting this door from the outside. There was something back of that, Markham. The young woman had ideas. Now, why should she have tried to be so helpful? And that suggestion about rigor mortis and the revolver. . . Amazin'." Markham was patently puzzled.

"Any suggestion?" he asked. 'What's our next move?" "Oh, that's indicated." Vance sighed deeply. "Painful as it may prove, I simply must run my eye over Brisbane's books." Markham also sighed deeply, and

We went into Brisbane Coe's room, which was at the front of the house on the west side on the north wall beside the window was a series of simple built-in bookshelves extending to the ceiling. There were, I estimated, between three and four hundred volumes on them, all neatly and meticulously arranged.

Vance went to the window and threw up the shades, and began running his eye systematically over the volumes. For so inological volumes, Erisbane Coe's collection was unusually complete. In surveying the titles one got the impression that, had he gone in for crime, he would have been highly practical rather than subtle. Vance glanced over the books rapidly but exrefully. "It should be here, y' know," he murmured, as if to himself, "unless it's been taken away. He got up and began to check the volume numbers of the various sets of books. When he came to a redand-gold set of the "Aussenseiter der Gesellschaft" he gave a nod and stepped down to the floor.

"A volume missing," he announced. He scanned the upperbook shelves carefully, "I wonder: Then he dropped on his knees and began going more thoroughly over the section of fiction. When he had come to the lowest shelf he reached forward and took; out a thin red-and-gold volume. Heglanced at it and leaned forward; again to inspect the books on eitherside of the space from which he had extracted the missing volume of the "Aussenseiter der Gesellschaft" se-

"Oh, I say!" he exclaimed, "That's deuced interestin'. Markham, it's significant that the missing volume of the 'Aussenseiter der Gesellschaft' should be found cheek by jowl with a book dealing with a Markham took his cigar from his mouth, stood up, and faced Vance with a serious face.

"I see what you mean," he said. "You think that Brisbane, by the help of these books on criminology, worked out some way of bolting Archer's door from the outside, by the use of those pins and string." Vance gave an affirmative nod.

"Either Brisbane or some one else. It was quite a technical operation." He picked up the "Aussenseiter der Gesellschaft" volume. "I think I'll do a bit of pryin'-if you could bear to wait for me a short while."

Markham made a gesture of acquiescence.

"The sergeant and I will wait downstairs-I've some telephoning to do."

The three of us left Vance alone in Brisbane's room, and as I closed the door, I saw Vance stretch himself out on the davenport with the two books.

An hour later he came to the head of the stairs and called down to us. We joined him in Archer's bedroom.

"I think I've found a solution to one phase of our problem," he announced seriously, when we were seated. "But it may take a bit of working out." He opened the book. "The tale, as I gather at a hasty reading, relates of a dead man found locked in a vault with a key to the door on the table before him. The vault door was locked from the outside, of course, . . . Here's the explanat'ry passage: 'No other word he spoke, but took something from his pocket: it was a reel of stout cotton. Then from his waistcoat he produced a new pin, and with great care and solemnity tied the thread to the end of the pin. Tab watching him intently. And all the time he was working. Rex Lander was humming a little tune, as though he were engaged in the most innocent occupation. Presently he stuck the point of the pin in the center of the table, and pulled at it by the thread he had fastened. Apparently he was satisfied. He unwound a further length of cotton, and when he had sufficient he threaded the key upon it, carrying it well outside the door. The end he brought back into the vault, and then pushed it out again from the inside through one of the carefully. He had left plenty of slack for his purpose and Tab heard the click of the lock as it was fastened, and his heart sank. He watched the door fascinated, and saw that Lander was pulling the sight under the door. Higher and higher came the sagging line of cotton and the key rose until it was at the table's level, slid down the taut cotton, and came to rest on the table. Tighter drew the strain of the thread and presently the pin came out; passed through the hole in the key, leaving it in the exact center of the table. Tab watched the bright pin as it was pulled across the floor and through the ventilator.' . . . That's the way the author worked his locked door."

"But," objected Markham, "There was an open ventilator in the door, and space beneath the door. These conditions are not true here."

"Yes-of course," Vance returned. 'But don't overlook the fact that there was a string and a bent pin. At least they are common integers in the two problems. . . . Now, let's see if we can combine those integers with certain common integers of another case," He opened the other book, "Konrad," Vance explained, "was a truck driver in Berlin nearly fifty years ago. His wife and five children were found dead in their cellar room and the door -a ponderous affair without even a keyhole or space around the moldingwas securely bolted on the inside The case was at once pronounced one of murder and suicide on the part of the mother; and Konrad would have been free to marry his inamorata (whom he had in the offing) had it not been for an evamining magistrate of the criminal court, named Höllmann. Hollmann for no tangible reason, did not beieve in the suicide theory, and set to work to figure out how Kenrad could have bolted the door from without. . . . Here's the revelat'ry passage-if you'll for eive my rather sketchy sight translation of the German: 'Hollmann determined, as a last resort, to give the entire door. both inside and outside, a microscopic examination. It required hours of labor, but in the end he was rewarded. Just above the bolt he found on the inside, close to the edge of the door, as very small hole which was barely discernible. Opening the door he inspected the outside surface directly opposite to the hole on the inside. But there was no corresponding hole visible Hollmann, did find on the outside of the door, however, a small spot on which the paint seemed fresher than that on the rest of the door He borrowed a hatpin from one of the tenants of the building and heat ing it, ran it through the hole or the inside: With but little pressure the heated hatpin penetrated the door, coming out on the outside exactly in the center of the newly painted spot. Moreover, when Hollmann withdrew the hatpin a piece of tough horsehair adhered to the pin; and on the pin was also discernible a slight film of wax. . .

It was obvious then how Konrad had bolted the door from without. He had first bored a tiny hole through the door above the bolt, looped a piece of horsehair over the bolt's knob, and slipped the two ends through the hole. He had then pulled the bolt-knob upward until the horsehair loop was disengaged withdrawing the horsehair through the hole. A piece of the horse hair had, however, caught in the hole and remained there. Konrad had then filled up the hole with wax and painted it on the outside thereby eliminating practically every trace of his criminal device He was later convicted of the murder of his family, sentenced to death, and hanged. Heath, as Vance finished reading, leaped to his feet.

"That's a new one on me." He stood scowling at the door. "The cases in those two books are easy enough to understand but neither of 'em will work here."

"Maybe the two together will work," suggested Vance. "Look at the wall just to the right on the jamb and opposite to the bolt. Do you see anything?"

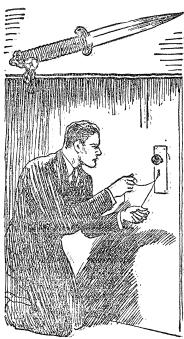

"I don't see much," he grumbled. "Right in the crack of the jamb and wall there's what might be a pinhole." "That's it, Sergeant!" Vance rose and went to the door, and Markham and I followed him. "I think I'll try the experiment I have in mind." We all watched him with fascinated interest. First he reached in his pocket and drew forth the two pieces of string and bent pins and the darning needle he had found in the pocket of Brisbane Coe's overcoat. By means of his pocket knife he straightened one of the pins and inserted it in the hole Heath had found in the wall at the edge of the jamb, giving it several taps with the handle of his knife to drive it in rather securely. He then threaded the other end of the string in the darning needle and passed it through the keyhole into the hall, removing the needle and letting the string fall to the hall floor. After this operation he bent the other pin securely round the upright knob of the bolt, passed the string over the pin he had driven into the wall, and, threading this second string into the darning needle, passed it also through the keyhole to the hall. He then opened the door about 18 inches, drawing the two strings partly back through the keyhole in a loop to permit the door to swing inward without disturbing his mechanism.

"Let us see if the device works," he said, with an undercurrent of suppressed excitement. "You stay in the room while I go outside and manipulate the strings." He bent down and passed under the two strings into the hall. Then he closed the door gently. Presently we saw the string which was attached to the bolt knob go taut, as Vance drew it slowly through the keyhole. Passing over the pin in the wall, which acted as a pulley, the string described a sharp angle, with the pin in the wall as the

The sergeant, after a moment's stupefaction, threw back the bolt and opened the door. "It worked?" asked Vance, coming into the room. "It worked," mumbled Heath la conically, lighting the cigar he had been chewing on viciously for the past half hour.

An Up-to-Date Santa Claus

By Florence Harris Wells

HERE'S snow stretching as far as we can see in all directions. We've had no possible chance to get out the old | America. She is supposed to resist car and rattle into town as we planned, and Christmas tomorrow." Tom Lambert looked questioningly across their breakfast table at his wife, Lucy: "Do you think we can make the children understand that even Santa Claus couldn't urge his tiny reindeer through such an expanse of snow?"

"I've talked to them about it but their faith is boundless." Lucy's usually cheerful voice had a break in it. "Yet how could we tell that it would snow so long and steadily. But you are better, Tom. We have that to be thankful for."

"Yes. I'm better. Anything is better than being shut up in a stuffy office all day for a man that is used to God's great outdoors. But forget me. It's those three kids I'm worrying about."

It was nearing noon when they heard the whir-r-r of the mail plane over their heads. Mary, Robert and little Tom rushed out to wave greetings.

"Look! Look!" little Tom shouted. "Something's fallen out." Sure enough, a parachute had been released. Slowly but surely it that sheet of cellophane you peeled so carefully from off that box of mine the other day? Haul that out, get me that snapshot you had printed to send to my sister, and by that time-well, who knows!"

Bob was always thinking up ways and means to cover up for her lack of planning and foresight, and she blessed him as she ransacked happily for the desired items. But when she again joined Bob at the kitchen table, she gave a startled shriek.

"Bob, dear, that was the only gift in sight and now you've ruined it," but he smiled on, his pen knife cutting away that messy looking burn from the book lid. Then with an old wood burning set, he stippled the whittled edge of that hole in the leather binding. Then he backed that hole with a double piece of cellophane and bound the three edges to the inner side of the book lid with a tiny band of purple leather which matched the book. In between the cellophane pieces Bob slipped the lovely tinted snapshot of Mary. With a squeal of delight, Mary accepted the new deal in Christmas gifts. "The newest thing in fads, Bob, darling," she assured him delightedly. Such a tiny bit of work had turned a perfectly impossible gift into something rare that might have come straight from the gift shop. And after the women had raved over Mary's gift to the grab bag, Bob was given the surprise of his life. "What will you charge, Bob, to make over two or three books for me that very same way? One or two for the youngsters, too?" they exclaimed. Bob made every moment of his spare time count, doing over book-lids for a long time after that. "Bless your bad memory, darling." he teases every time he makes another entry in the cash book of this

"Sometimes it is extremely good coal for the power house at 18 for you to forget that there is anycents a ton was accepted by the thing in the world that needs to be done, and to do some particular thing that you want to do," she remarked. "Every human being needs a certain amount of time in which he can be peaceful. Peace may take the form of exercise, or reading, or any congenial occupation, but one thing which must not be connected with it is a sense of obligation to do some particular thing at some particular time."

That is a message which should be reprinted and sent to every woman, particularly every wife and mother in the country. The man or woman with a job and office hours may work very hard, they may be under great stress and strain, but usually, when they shut the door of the office behind them they know that time of peace which is indeed necessary to every human being-that time when there is nothing in particular that they have to do. When a man comes home, his time of relaxation begins. And so with the working girl who comes home to her mother, or the bachelor woman who returns to her flat. Usually, the time there has "no strings tied to it."

But the wife and mother! How aptly some one said hers is the clock that has no hands. Take a rainy Sunday. There may be no cards or games, the papers may be read. Then the family will be just "sitting around." But mother? Oh, no; that's a chance to catch up on the darning or to start that sweater she wants to knit for little Jane. She doesn't have to fold her hands to rest!

But, doesn't she! If it were not for that darning or knitting on her mind, would she not enjoy occasionally just folding her hands and "siting around"? I say she may not even know it, but she would. I say that every woman who keeps house should keep some time free for that darning or knitting on her house should keep some time free for what Mrs. Roosevelt calls a time for being peaceful—a time when she will do nothing that could possibly be called useful!

THE CHRISTIAN AND LORD'S SUPPER

LESSON TEXT-I Corinthians

GOLDEN TEXT-For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come.—I Corinthians 11:26. PRIMARY TOPIC—The Supper Jesus Gave His Friends.

JUNIOR TOPIC-How the Lord's Supper Began. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC-Why Observe the Lord's Supper?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC-Realizing Christ's Presence in the Supper.

By the Lord's Supper here is meant the bread and the wine used as emblems of the broken body and shed blood of the Lord Jesus Christ. Some Christians think of the Lord's Supper as a meal of fellowship eaten before the institution of the bread and the cup. To them it means the agape or love-feast which was practiced in the early church. Such would prefer to call this the Communion instead of the Lord's Supper. With this understanding, we can enter into the real understanding and blessing of the

I. The Institution of (v. 23). 1. The time. It was on the night of the betrayal of the Lord Jesus, after the betrayer had been announced.

2. Circumstances of (Matt. 26: 26). It was in connection with the eating of the Passover. At the command of Jesus the disciples made were eating Jesus took bread, blessed it, and gave it to them.

3. The elements used. Breaddoubtless common bread of the Passover feast. The Cup-the fruit of the vine.

II. The Significance of (vv. 24 26. Cf. Matt. 26:26-28).

Jesus took natural and literal elements and made them to be symbols of his own body and blood.

1. It is a memorial of the Lord (Lk. 22:19). When Jesus Christ left the world, he left the bread and the cup for the disciples, by which to remember him.

death (v. 26). He did not die as a hero, or as an example of unselfish devotion, but as a substitutionary ransom on the cross to be made satisfaction for our sins.

2. To show the Lord's sacrificial the signet of the Son of God attached to redemption."

4. It symbolizes the believer's reception of Christ (1 Cor. 10:16). He ber of his body. 5. It has a forward look to a takes place at the coming of Christ program. (I Thess. 4:16, 17). The bread and the cup constitute the keepsake of the Lord until he returns. III. Qualifications for Participation in the Lord's Supper (vv. 27-

1. A proper apprehension of its meaning (v. 27). Eating and drinking unworthily primarily refers not to the demerit of the communicant, but to his failure to grasp the meaning and importance of the ordinance. Only regenerated persons can discern the Lord's body. Faith in the integrity of Christ's person and work is essential. Anyone who does not believe in the absolute deity of Christ and his vicarious atonement is an unworthy commu-nicant. 2. Church's membership (1 Cor. 11:18-22). The Lord's body is the church, which is composed of regenerated men and women united to Jesus Christ as head, and to each others as members of that body, by the Holy Spirit.

3. An orderly walk. Conduct which disqualifies for participation in the Lord's Supper:

a. Immorality (1 Cor. 5:1-13). It is most perilous for one who is guilty of immorality to approach the Lord's table (v. 30). Sickness and death are often visited upon

b. Heresy (Titus 3:10; 1 John 4:2, 3). This means that one who holds false doctrine is disqualified for participation in the commu-

c. A Schismatic (Rom. 16:17). The one who stirs up party strife, who causes division in the church, should be excluded from the Lord's

IV. Penalty for Failure to Discern the Lord's Body (vv. 30-34). Approaching the Lord's table unworthily issues in the visitation of sickness and death upon the individual. This seems to be plainly the meaning of "weak and sickly among you, and many sleep." This explains the illness of many Christians. The way to escape the judgment is to judge ourselves.

Headed Right

By being true to the moral conscience your face is set in the right direction; it is turned toward Zion.

List of Dead Now Stands at 24 in Big Tragedy of Tuesday.

Smoldering ruins of the $350,000 four-story Kerns Hotel at Lansing, swept by an early morning fire in zero weather Tuesday, formed a funeral pyre for an untold number of guests. The number was early estimated at from 50 to 100, several of whom are well known to Thumb of Michigan residents.

Police issued a list of 24 "known dead" late Wednesday. Counting victims who died in hospitals, 18 bodies have been accounted for, but only 14 of these have been identified. Several of the persons not included in the list of dead are missing still and officials assert that the full toll has by no means been ascertained. About 40 persons are listed as injured in the tragedy.

With the legislators meeting in a special session called by Governor Comstock, a number of representatives and senators were among the dead or missing. Among them was Rep. John Goodwine of Marlette, prominent member of the legislature and well known to farmers of his district whose battles he fought in many a legislative argument. Goodwine's body was found in the Grand River into which he had jumped from the hotel. The river runs past the back of the structure. D. Knox Hanna, representative from Tuscola county, endeavored to leave his hotel room by means of a rope hanging from a firemen's ladder. When about 12 feet from the ground, he fell to the sidewalk in front of the hotel breaking both

RED CROSS AGENCIES SAFEGUARD HEALTH

First Aid, Life Saving, Nursing Care, Promote Health and Safety

Five outstanding services make up the health-conservation program of the American Red Cross, according to the annual report just issued in Washington. These services are first aid and life saving, which together have trained more than a million persons; nursing, with an active enrollment of 36,133 registered nurses; Public Health Nursing, conducted by 7500 nurses in 424 chapters last year; and Home Hygiene, which has taught more than 700,000 men and women simple ways of caring for the sick at home.

"The achievements of the Red Cross in public health nursing place it among the leaders in this field," said James L. Fieser, vice chairman in charge of domestic operations. "This service was organized in 1919 to meet needs developed by the World War and the ravages of the flu epidemic which in 1918-1919 took so great a toll of life.

"Since that time Red Cross nursing services have been pioneers in more than one half of the counties in the United States. Many services we established were taken over later by civic, state and federal agencies, and the Red Cross continues to establish services in other new fields. Red Cross nurses made more than a million visits to patients last year, and 629,025 children in schools were inspected.

"Red Cross courses in home hygiene and care of the sick are especially important in times of depression, because they teach families to maintain hygienic conditions in their homes and to recognize symptoms of illness early enough to prevent serious consequences.

"Our courses in first aid have been instrumental in saving lives of the injured; in safeguarding the accident victim until the physician arrives, and in reducing time lost by workers in factories, mines and other industries. We are also giving the course extensively to police and fire departments throughout the country, and to state highway patrols." Everyone is invited to join the Red Cross during the annual membership roll call which continues from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving, to have a part in the health program and the other humanitarian services of the Red Cross.

Expression "Stand By" The expression, stand by, used by radio operators, is a nautical term and has long been used in the navy. It means to prepare for orders, to be at attention.

"Tabloid" Is Copyright The word "tabloid" is a copyright trade mark. It was coined 50 years ago as the name of compressed chemical products.

Inspecting Christmas Toys

Dear Old Santa Claus

By Earle Hooker Eaton

HERE'S lots of folks I'd like to know

Who live in summer rain and snow; Who dwell as well, in cold and heat, And on earth's good old Easy Street, But here's the chap for loud applause. Our good old friend, dear Santa Claus.

Though men may come and men may

Though kings speed fast and then go slow,

There's one who gets here every year, On time with his old jingle deer, So hail this chap for loud applause, Our good old friend, dear Santa Claus.

The world is full of heroes great, On deck today, then out of date But where's the child who does not cheer

For one famed Saint to mem'ry dear, Who does not give her loud applause For her good friend, old Santa Claus? @. Western Newspaper Union.

Grandpa Late to Christmas Feast

Charles Frederick Wadsworth

T WAS past two when consternation seized the Christmas party at John Henry's. The telegram read:

Have had an accident. Do not wait dinner for me.

JAMES S. ESTON. "Goodness gracious." This from Grandma Eston, who had come on in advance to help Millie. "What do you s'pose has happened?" John Henry grabbed the telephone and called Balltown. He got Doc Wilkins and asked if he had treated Jim Eston. No, Doc said, he "seen him in the mornin' drivin' around in his car." Other sources of possible information were tried without success. The gay gathering of kinfolks setlted down to apprehensiive waiting. Finally, John Henry said he would drive to Balltown and see what he could learn.

As he was about to leave the driveway for the road, Grandpa's car was seen coming at a dangerous clip. The old man was all smiles as he stopped before the house and alighted.

Grandma, Millie, Jack, Samuel, Mary, Madeline, John Henry and numerous children all asked for an explanation at once. "This morning," said Grandpa, " sampled some candy your Grandma had made, and it was so tough I got my upper and lower plates stuck together. I pried, and danged if I didn't pry two jaw teeth out of the plate, on the side I eat on. I simply had to have 'em for that turkey. The dentist said it would take about five hours, as it would have to be vulcanized. But I'm here and

"And you just did get here by the skin of your teeth, didn't you, Grandpa?" This was from John Henry, Jr.

The party, joyous, entered ne house and soon all were settle the delayed dinner.

The Coon Oyster

A coon oyster is one growing wild near shore, where it can easily be obtained by a raccoon. The name originated in the South, where these oysters are often called strap oysters because their clustered manner of growth makes them long, narrow and thin.

Largest Elk Antlers The largest pair of elk antlers recorded by the government was purchased in Colorado Springs in 1897 for the emperor of Germany. Their length of beam was 671/2

Davis Warn Japan Against Scrapping Naval Treaty— Peace al Agreement for Saar Plebiscite—

Mo ey and Richberg to Industrialists.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD © by Western Newspaper Union.

NORMAN H. DAVIS, American All this was in effect a victory ambassador-at-large and our chief representative in the naval olain warning to Japan that if that nation insists on treaty, security will be endangered, susthe world forced into a costly naval construction race.

Mr. Davis was addressing the American Correspondwords were meant for all the world to hear, and as his speech was the first comprehensive statement of the American position since the opening of the conversations, it was regarded as of the greatest importance. He also announced, for the first time, that President Roosevelt around reduction in naval arma-

Mr. Davis said that, since no agreement for armament reduction has been reached, the United States advocates the continuance of the Washington and London treaties with their assurance of "equality of security." Asserting that the Washington pact put an end to a ruinous naval race and established "a sound basis for peace in the Pacific and the Far East," he contin-

"Only by maintenance of the system of equality of security, with proportionate reductions downward of naval strength if possible, can there be maintained the substantial foundation for security and peace which has thus been laid.

"Abandonment now of the principles involved would lead to conditions of insecurity, of international suspicion, and of costly competition, with no real advantage to any na-

Unofficially, it is said that when Japan gives formal notice that she is denouncing the Washington treaty, probably on December 20, the United States will immediately withdraw from the discussions in London. Officials in Washington consider that to continue the conversations would be tantamount to acquiscence to Japan's demand for modification of the ratios on which the treaty is based.

No more than any other nation does the United States wish to see the revival of the race in naval construction, but the government will not tolerate the decline of our navy to a subordinate place. Recent utterances of cabinet members and of congressmen who especially have to do with naval affairs make this plain.

In his annual report to the President, Secretary of the Navy Swanson says that although the United States may reduce its naval strength proportionately with other powers. it is imperative that a navy second to none be maintained. He warns also of the dangerous shortage of personnel in the navy, saying that "ships are valueless unless manned by adequate crews of trained and experienced officers and men."

THE government of Jugoslavia has decided to expel all the 27,-000 Hungarians now living in that country. The process will be gradual but relentless. Already more than 2,000 have been deported and more are being sent away daily. Hungary called the action of Jugoslavia to the attention of the League of Nations.

PEACEFUL solution of the Saar plebiscite problem seemed assured when the council of the League of Nations unanimously and gladly adopted the report of the Saar committee embodying the Franco-German agreement for payment for the mines in case the region votes to return to the reich. Leading up to this settlement were two announcements of utmost importance. First, Foreign Minister Pierre Laval of France promised that French troops would make no attempt to enter the Saar territory before or during the vote on January 13. "I desire to announce," said he, "that France will not participate in any international force which it may be found necessary to send into the Saar. We cannot participate in such a force because Germany cannot participate."

Then Capt. Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal, told the council that Great Britain would contribute troops to the proposed international force, provided Chancellor Hitler of Germany were willing that such an army should be sent into the territory. When Berlin was informed of this, a foreign office spokesman announced that Hitler's government would raise no objections to the PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT returned from Warm Springs to his reconditioned executive offices in Washington with the greater part of his winter program completed. has proposed "a substantial all- It will be presented to congress in his annual message on January 3. The major items have to do with expansion of the public works administration to provide work relief, revision of the NRA and the AAA, extension of power developments, social security insurance and low cost housing, and the paring down of the budget.

> INTERESTING statements were made to the American Congress of Industry in New York by two of the President's closest advisers, Raymond Moley and Donald Richberg, director of the national emergency council. Professor Moley declared. there is no workable substitute for the present capitalistic economic system. "Basically," he said, "the New Deal was an effort to save capitalism and,

Richberg by spreading the range of opportunity under it, to enable the average man to regain a measure of control over the conditions under which he lived. It seemed to me in 1933, as it seems to me now, that this effort to save capitalism was eminently wise and

"By no stretch of the imagination could the vote of November, 1932, have been interpreted as a mandate for the abandonment of the capitalistic system. Finally, even had there been such a mandate, there was and is no workable substitute for our present system."

Moley expressed much optimism regarding business. He told the industrialists, in effect, that they need have no fear of any radical change in the present economic and social order, that industry was needed to stimulate trade, bring about recovery, and that in the last analysis it would be the business men who would distribute the wealth of the nation.

Mr. Richberg admitted the NRA had not achieved, all its aims in its effort to bring about industrial selfgovernment, but insisted that its fundamental principles must be preserved in permanent legislation for codes of fair competition.

He warned the manufacturers that the permanent law must be written in co-operation with labor and consumers, as well as private business and government, so that there should be neither work-consumer regimentation by business nor business regimentation by government.

He hinted that if employers consented to legal restriction in return for increased power under the codes. organized labor would be called upon to do likewise in submitting to legislative control. Organized labor was soundly berated by C. L. Bardo, president of the National Association of Manufacturers. He said its contribution to national recovery had been "the most widespread inauguration of strikes, coercion, intimidation, and Violence that the United States has ever seen, as evidenced by strikes in Minneapolis, Cleveland, textile industries, and the general strike at San Francisco." Bardo pledged the united opposition of the National Association of Manufacturers to the efforts of the American Federation of Labor to obtain through congress legislation imposing a 30-hour week on industry, or any other effort to "fix a rigid and arbitrary work week for all industry." Industry's platform for recovery, which was proposed at a meeting of the national industrial council, urging return to the gold standard, a balanced budget, and other orthodox economic measures, was submitted by W. B. Bell, president of the American Cyanamid company, and was discussed at closed sessions.

L ORD RIDDELL, who during the World war was Lloyd George's chief liaison officer with the press of the world, is dead in London. He gained fame and great wealth as a newspaper publisher. As a reward for his war work Riddell was made a peer in 1918. His voice over the telephone carried the first news to England of the signing of the Versailles treaty. For some time after the war he continued to be a friend and confidant of Lloyd George. Later there were political differences, but while the close liaison ceased the two men never ceased to be friends. Lord Riddell leaves no heir and the title expires with him.

CENTRAL, western and northern sections of Honduras were devastated by a series of earthquake shocks continuing through two days. The extent of the disaster is unknown at this writing for all communication systems were crippled, but it was reported that at least three towns of considerable size, Copas, Cabanas and Santa Rita, were nearly destroyed. Most of the inhabitants escaped with their lives and were roaming the mountains without shelter or food. An entire mountain, Cerroazul, near Paraiso, crumbled and disappeared without any volcanic eruption.

DRESIDENT MUSTAPHA KEM-AL of Turkey has become the idol of all the women of his nation, for, after giving them such social rights as emancipation from the harem, he has given them political rights. At his instance the national assembly unanimously decided that any Turkish woman more than thirty years old is eligible to election to the chamber of deputies, and that all women over twenty-two years of age can vote in the national elections. Thousands of women telegraphed their "deepest gratitude" to Kemal.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S aviation commission, having concluded its hearings on national defense began drafting its report, and it was authoritatively said in Washington that, if congress approves of its recommendations, government airships will surely be operating in a new transoceanic service. Details were being worked out, and it seemed likely the commission would adopt the $17,000,000 plan approved by Ewing Y. Mitchell, assistant secretary of commerce, and the national advisory committee for aeronautics. That plan calls for two huge Zeppelin type airships and one smaller metal clad craft along with necessary modern landing equipment.

The commission also will ask congress in its February report to create a permanent federal agency with supervisory control over all civil aviation. This would comprise five to seven members and take over present Commerce department aviation activities.

 $S^{\,\rm ERGEl}$ KIROV, one of the most prominent members of the Rusassassinated in Leninreau, was grad, and as he was a close associate of Stalin his death was the occasion of public mourning. The government announced that the assassin was Leonid Nicolieff and that he "was sent by the enemies of the working class." But

Sergei Kirov it appears there is something more to the event than a mere murder. A dispatch from Warsaw said ten Red army officers had been executed as the result of a plot to assassinate all Soviet leaders at the same time

The Moscow government denied this story, but at the same time it was putting under arrest scores of White Guards, enemies of the Soviet regime, accusing them of "terroristic action." They were tried by a military collegium of the Supreme court and sixty-six of them, including one woman, were found guilty and immediately executed.

The names of those executed were officially announced. Among them apparently were none of the leaders who had figured prominently with the White armies during the civil warfare following the Bolshevist revolution. Nor were there any names of men who have had national prominence subsequently in Russia.

The executions were carried out while Kirov's body was being cremated. He was given a state funeral and his ashes were placed in the Communists' Valhalla beside the wall of the Kremlin where rest the remains of Lenin, John Reed and other miltary and civil heroes of the Red revolution.

The plan, which was developed by A. B. Hulit of Chicago, involves the construction of canals and dams over an area extending from northern North Dakota through Texas to control flood waters originating on the eastern slopes of the Rocky mountains.

Edison's Bug Killer

When Thomas Edison was a boy he invented an electrical apparatus for killing bugs. He was employed in the Western Union office in Boston, where he went in 1868. This office had formerly been occupied by a restaurant and it was infested with swarms of cockroaches. They became such a nuisance that Edison finally placed on the wall beside his table two strips of tinfoil. He connected one strip with the positive pole of the battery that furnished the current to the telegraph wires and the other strip to the negative pole. Thus a cockroach coming in contact with both strips was immediately annihilated.

Carrene as Refrigerant

The national bureau of standards says, "It is very improbable, in a single unit demestic installation, than conditions will be produced that would make the use of carrene dangerous." Carrene has been tasted, smelled and handled by thousands of people throughout the country without any ill effects being noticeable.
