

CASS CITY GETS TO STATE FINALS

Lose to Holland Christian After Beating Pontiac and Lansing.

The basketball team of the Cass City high school fought its way into the Class C state finals Saturday night. They earned the distinction gained by having the right to play in the finals when they followed their 32-27 victory over St. Frederick's of Pontiac with a 15-10 win from the St. Mary's quintet of Lansing. Holland Christian again won the state crown when they beat the Maroon and Gray 49-18. The Holland team now boast 28 consecutive victories against Classes A, B and C opposition; not once in the entire tournament was this Dutch team seriously endangered.

Against St. Frederick's, Coach Kelly had his boys begin where they left off in the regional. They relied on their zone defense to prevent easy dog shots from under the basket, and using Vyse with his height and shooting eye as a pivot for the offense. The brilliant long range shooting of the Pontiac basketballers kept them in the running until the end. The locals reached the tip of their attack in the third period when they surged too far ahead for the final St. Frederick rally to match.

On Friday night, the style of the game was radically different. St. Mary's of Lansing possessed a troublesome defense set up and continually stopped Cass City's play at its beginning. Inability of either team to consistently make their shots left the score at 4 all at the half. A Maroon and Gray spurt gave the Hilltoppers a temporary advantage, but this was lost when the Lansing team came within one point with three minutes to play. The fast exciting action of the next couple minutes was relieved when two long passes by Graham and Vyse to the fast breaking Ward again left Cass City a comfortable victory.

In the state finals, Cass City came against an efficient and determined aggregation. Holland Christian are not only good but Saturday they were at their best. The Maroon men got only three

FOUR-DAY SPRING VACATION AT CASS CITY SCHOOLS

Pupils of the Cass City schools will have a four-day spring vacation commencing at 3:30 p. m. on Thursday, April 18, and continuing until 8:30 a. m. on Tuesday, April 23.

Today (Friday) there will be no school as teachers will attend the Tuscola county teachers' institute at Caro.

To the Voters of Tuscola County: Monday, April 1, the people of this county will go to the polls and elect a County School Commissioner. I will be a candidate for that position on the Democratic ticket.

Due to my duties as principal of the Akron High school I will not be able to make a thorough canvass of this county and I am taking this opportunity to inform the voters of my qualifications for the office which I am seeking.

I am 37 years of age and was born and raised on a farm, attending rural school. I decided upon my graduation from high school to enter the teaching profession and for five years taught rural schools. I worked continuously for promotion by increasing my education during this time. I became principal of the Akron school 10 years ago and have my degree from the Central State Teachers' college where I was awarded scholastic honors. With this background I believe you will agree with me that I am qualified for the position with my 15 years of teaching experience in both rural and high schools.

I assure you that I will be grateful for the support of Tuscola county voters at the election, April 1, and will endeavor to serve you if elected in the most economical and efficient manner possible.

GIVE BEET GROWERS INSURANCE ON CROPS

Contract Signers Partially Protected Against Loss from Weather.

Michigan sugar beet growers who sign crop contracts with the agricultural adjustment administration will have partial crop insurance because payments of one dollar per ton will be made on the estimated yields of acreage which has to be abandoned for reasons beyond the operator's control, according to John E. Dalton, chief of the sugar section.

Quite large areas of Michigan beet lands are sometimes flooded in seasons of high water and whole fields or parts of fields of beets are killed those years. Owners in previous years have lost the labor in preparing the seed bed, the price of the seed, and the use of the land. Contract holders will be saved from such losses, as the dollar a ton on estimated yields will

QUESTIONS PROGRAM OF NON-PRODUCTION

Com. of Agriculture Speaks to Audience of 300 Here Tuesday.

Calling the Agricultural Adjustment Act an "overdose of medicine," James F. Thompson, state commissioner of agriculture, questioned the advisability of paying a "dole" for non-production in the United States and allowing the large importations of grain and other farm products from foreign lands, produced under cheap labor conditions. He was the speaker at the Farmers' Union meeting at the Cass City high school auditorium Tuesday afternoon and was heard by an audience estimated at 300. He advised members of the union to take more interest in legislative affairs in state and nation and said the organized farmers of Michigan are working better and more harmoniously than ever before.

Mr. Thompson said that the state has in Frank Fitzgerald a governor more sympathetic with the farmer and his problems than any of his predecessors in that office. He also commended the community in their choice of representatives in both houses of the legislature.

Michigan is not only an industrial state, but is especially en-

The Week at Lansing

senate is getting to be a joke. A lot of the so-called insurgent opposition to the governor has been mythical. I should not be understood, however, that all this smoke was created without some fire. Much of the seriousness attached to it has been imaginary though. There has at no time been any concerted effort made to destroy the Fitzgerald program and in the end said program will not suffer by the desire of some senate members to obtain jobs for their constituents.

Your correspondent is not willing to accept the patronage rife in the serious light that many would place it. It is just one of those things that occurs during every legislative session when 132 divergent personalities get together, each laboring under the impression that he has been chosen to guide the destinies of state. A mistaken idea, of course, but a situation of this kind has always existed and has been at the root of much delay and expense.

The first test of the newly acquired republican strength in the House occurred this week and fell far short of its goal. Dissension in the republican ranks has made of the recent special elections but empty victories. An attempt to reorganize the rules and resolutions committee and place republican members in control was thwarted when Reps. Earl McNitt of Cadillac, William Green of Hillman, and Henry Douville of Alpena, all republicans, jumped the reservation and voted with the democrats to defeat the proposal. All three, it is understood, are working close to Murray D. VanWagoner, democratic highway commissioner, which fact also spells the doom of the governor's proposal to reorganize the highway department and make the commissionership an appointive rather than an elective office. The three bolting republicans are also piqued at their failure to secure jobs for members of the family circle and have taken this course to force through their demands.

Technically, the republicans have a majority in the House. Rep. William A. Ward (R) of Grand Traverse, who happens to be the 51st and deciding vote, has been brought to Lansing and is being held in readiness at one of the hotels for the day when it becomes necessary to have his vote. Rep. Ward, as stated last week, has been incapacitated since early last fall but has sufficiently recovered to be taken to his seat to meet important roll calls.

Gov. Fitzgerald disclosed to the writer, a few days ago, that he is not permitting these patronage squabbles to "get him" down. "My task is to serve the people of Michigan to the very best of my ability. If I allow this wrangling over jobs to transcend the welfare of our four million people, I shall have failed in my obligation to them," he said.

Of state-wide significance is a bill passed by the House which provides for the uniform system of text books in the public schools.

The Thatcher bill appropriating $25,000,000 in state aid for public schools has been favorably reported to the floor of the House ways and means committee. It continues an appropriation voted two years ago but now stipulates that no district shall receive aid unless it has levied a tax of at least two mills upon its local property for schools to supplement the state aid.

Regardless of the governor's opposition to the levying of any new taxes, the House taxation committee has reported out the Holbeck income tax bill which provides for a flat one and one-half percent levy. Single persons would be allowed an exemption of $1,000 and married persons, $2,000 with $300 for each dependent. The revenue to be derived from the tax would be used to finance old age pensions and augment state school aid.

Should this measure be successful in both houses it will be vetoed by the governor.

The bill to appropriate $200,000 for advertising the outdoor advantages of the state for the purpose of attracting tourists was passed by a comfortable margin in the senate and sent to the house. The measure specifies that each of the four state tourist agencies raise a sum equal to one-fourth the sum allocated to it for advertising by the state. One hundred thousand dollars would be appropriated for each of the two fiscal years ending June 30, 1935 and 1936. Eighty percent of the money would be divided equally among the four tourist bureaus and the balance expended under their joint supervision.

Early Life Insurance

Life insurance was introduced into England by the establishment of the Amicable society in 1696. It was introduced from Great Britain to America in Philadelphia, 1759, for the relief of Presbyterian ministers and their widows and children. This was followed by a similar corporation for the benefit of Episcopal clergymen and their widows. The first company to attempt a general business was the Insurance company of North America, organized in Philadelphia in 1766.

HOMEMAKER'S CORNER

By Home Economics Specialists
Michigan State College

An obedient child is the ideal of every parent but the discipline used is often a problem. A few guiding principles for parents in disciplining their children have been set up by home economics child care specialists at Michigan State College.

Disciplining has two functions, one to build up serviceable habits and the other the modifying and changing of unserviceable habits. The specialists advise that parents should not think how to break a bad habit but rather what to substitute for it.

The control of certain physical functions, eating and sleeping habits should be taught at an early age so as to alleviate any problems at a later age. The child should be taught early that there are times when he must obey implicitly, for example, a command to "stop" when crossing streets.

When addressing a child, one should avoid an autocratic manner, as children are quick to resent domination. A few well thought out commands worth carrying out are preferable to a number of them, and the parent should see that these are fulfilled.

Before giving directions, gain the child's attention, and then make the explanation clear and simple, and if possible, explain the reason for the request. The child who has learned to expect only reasonable requests will be prepared to act in an emergency.

Be interested in the child's accomplishment and gain his interest by showing him the value of the desired action. Positive requests should be given in preference to negative ones, by giving a suggestion that will draw the child away from the forbidden act.

Consider promises carefully before making them and be careful to keep them. Consistency is one of the fundamental means toward discipline. One set of rules should be used at all times, do not allow the child to do one thing at one time which is forbidden at another. Expect obedience when giving a command, the parent should not let the child feel that he is uncertain of his response.

Finally, parents should develop a sound philosophy in regard to their children. They should ask themselves what they wish to accomplish in the long run, not in the immediate future. They must realize that children are growing and that the functions of parents is to help to train children to eventually live their own lives.

Time Sales of Cars Shows Improvement

Percentage of time or contract sales of passenger automobiles throughout the state, is rapidly creeping up on cash sales, records of the Department of State show. Contrary to the general belief, when the percentage of time sales shows a gain, more cars are being sold, records show. This is because, in times of stress, most of the cars sold are to those able to pay cash; as men return to work, they buy cars, generally on a contract basis, automobile dealers' experience shows.

In some areas of the state, cash sales showing gains in percentage, are sometimes explained by the fact that some banks are beginning to handle automobile loans for preferred risks without taking chattel mortgages, which transactions are reflected as cash sales, auto dealers point out. Selection of 100 sales of new cars throughout the state for each of the past four months, indicates that time sales have composed from 44 to 56 percent of the total volume of this trade.

Automobile drivers of the state are continuing to be placed under the financial responsibility act, which requires mandatory revocation of a driver's license for three years, unless financial responsibility to meet damage claims up to $11,000, is proven by deposit of His address was similar to that given by him before the Farmers' Union that afternoon and reported in another column. President W. L. Mann appointed Frederick Pinney, M. B. Auten and H. F. Lenzner as members of a crippled children's committee, and Dr. P. A. Schenck, Dr. H. T. Donahue and H. F. Lenzner as members of the club's nominating committee.

Charles McCaslin and Andrew Champion of Cass City and Frank Champion of St. Louis, while at Sand Point Sunday afternoon, were surprised to sight an airplane with three men on a field of ice about five miles away, between Cassville and Charity Island. They watched the movements of the fliers through field glasses and could distinguish the men walking around the plane. It being impossible to go to the men because of a wide space of water filled with large ice cakes, Andrew Champion telephoned to Selfridge Field of the men's predicament and word came back that a plane would be dispatched at once. One hour later, the plane arrived, but a shore looker with the field glasses noticed the plane and men disappear 10 minutes before. Fishermen and others also saw the plane and its passengers on the ice.

Tuscola Plans a 100th Anniversary Celebration in July

Howard Slafter, Rev. U. G. Osterlander, James Rapley, Ed Newton and Geo. Dennis, all of Tuscola township, are members of a committee who are planning a celebration this summer in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the settlement of Tuscola township, the first settlement in Tuscola county. They have invited the cooperation of S. W. Morrison, county clerk, and tentative plans call for July 3, 4 and 5 as the dates for the event.

Michigan will hold centennial celebrations at various points in the state during 1935 and 1936. Henry A. Perry, program director, of the Michigan Centennial celebration, in a letter to County Clerk Morrison, says:

"While Tuscola might not have adequate facilities to care for a large crowd at this celebration would it not be practicable to have a celebration in this village and township as a part of a county-wide event? This would focus attention upon Tuscola and a pilgrimage could be promoted to this village as a 100 year old spot. A marker might be placed there as near as possible to the first settlement and a program arranged. This might be done on an afternoon and the major celebration consisting of pageantry and parades and any other features that might be desired could be carried out in Caro or some other place having better facilities. Perhaps a two or three-day event would be more desirable.

"It seems to me that a spectacular celebration might be held at Caro one day, a pilgrimage to Tuscola the next, and followed by other local celebrations in the county. This plan would please the people of Tuscola and Tuscola township would have thousands of visitors just for the day, and would serve the purpose of commemorating the local 100th anniversary in that township and village in a fitting manner and at the same time not impair a large celebration in other places. Our records show that Akron contemplates a celebration although no definite plans have been made.

"May I suggest that your committee immediately consider this plan and take it up with a representative organization in Caro, Akron and other places that might want to participate and work out a program that will avoid any controversy or dissatisfaction?"

Use Right Feeds to Start Chicks

It is much easier to start chicks well by giving them proper feed than to repair damage done by improper rations according to the poultry department at Michigan State College.

Chicks may be fed as soon as they are taken from the incubator or shipping box. Commercial mash- es are entirely satisfactory when made by a reliable manufacturer and most of those sold in Michigan are products of firms which have a high reputation acquired through years of good business practices.

A satisfactory mash can be made at home by anyone who will buy the feeds and mix them properly. The mixture recommended by the college is composed of 36 pounds coarse ground, yellow corn meal; 20 pounds bran; 20 pounds ground oat groats or ground oatmeal; 10 pounds dried milk; 5 pounds 50 per cent protein meat scraps; 5 pounds alfalfa leaf meal; 2 pounds steamed boneless, 1 pound salt; and 1 pound codliver oil.

Chicks can be started on this mash and kept on it until they are placed on the laying house or the mash can be changed after the chicks are eight weeks old by reducing the dried milk to five pounds and replacing it with five pounds more of corn meal. A scratch feed of equal parts cracked yellow corn and wheat should also be given.

Whole milk is an excellent feed for chicks and the dried milk in the mash can be reduced one-half if skim milk or buttermilk is fed. Water and milk dishes must be kept clean. Green feed must be given if chicks are confined. Grit and shell can be provided in convenient hoppers.

BANG'S DISEASE BLANKS AT THE COUNTY AGENT'S OFFICE

Farmers who are desirous of obtaining blanks to be used as "application for blood testing of cattle for Bang's disease" may now obtain them at the office of the county agent, E. L. Benton, in Caro. This test is commonly used to determine which animals are harboring the disease even though the farmer has lost no calves through this disease more commonly called abortion. Cattle which react to such test the farmer sells for beef and collects Federal indemnity as well, the maximum of which is $50 for registered animals, and $20 for grade animals.

Farmers who have cleaned their herd of this disease may then go through this same procedure and receive benefit payment wherever mastitis may be found.

He attended school at Chambers, Greenleaf and McHugh rural schools and at the time of his death was a sophomore in the Cass City high school.

On Sunday evening, after attending Rev. Devine's service in Cass City, he was fatally injured while riding with one of his closest friends. The accident occurred while trying to avoid hitting another car which cut in front of them. He was conscious through the night and begged that his friend be not blamed and told his mother of his love and appreciation of her sacrifice for him. He passed away about 1:00 p. m. on March 18, 1935.

At an early age he had sought the Lord, was baptized and united with the Mennonite church. For some time he lived the Christian life, but the temptations of youth led him from the path. However, the prayers of parents and friends prevailed in his behalf and he was not allowed to pass from this life until he had prayed for God's forgiveness and confessed his wandering. In his going, we see God's mercy and already fruits of the sacrifice in that at the side of his dead body some of his young companions have found the Savior.

He leaves to mourn his parents, one brother, David, two sisters, Emma and Donna, a grandfather and many other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held on Wednesday afternoon in the Mizpah church with Rev. G. D. Clink and Rev. D. L. Schultz officiating. Rev. Ira Wood and wife gave splendid service in singing.

Mennonite Church—The revival services at the Riverside church are proceeding with ever increasing interest. Evangelist D. L. Schultz of Pontiac is doing good work with his stirring evangelical messages. He will preach at both churches Sunday morning. At the Mizpah church at ten o'clock and at the Riverside church at eleven-thirty. The meetings at Riverside will continue all next week and very probably throughout the following week.
Rev. Schultz has many old friends in this vicinity who will no doubt be glad for this opportunity of renewing old friendships.
G. D. Clink, Pastor.

Town Hall Services—A marked increase in attendance and interest is evident in these services. Rev. Robert J. Devine, evangelist and Bible teacher, is instructing large congregations of Bible truth lovers in the fundamental facts of the Bible. The large chart, illustrating the two classes of people, the two roads they travel and the two destinies awaiting them, is a great help to a clearer understanding of the glorious truths contained in the Word of God. Every Bible Christian should know all there is to be known concerning the things which God has been pleased to reveal in His Word. Why not? The Bible is certainly God's written Word, just as Jesus Christ was the Living Word. The Bible is God's message to man, and man has every right to know, as well as the responsibility of knowing, what God wants him to know. For that purpose God gave to man this written record of information He desired to impart to man. Mr. Devine deals each night with the seemingly difficult Bible problems. The asking of questions is encouraged, and time allotted to the presentation of Scriptural answers. Sunday night's subject will be: "Is Christ Coming Again? What is involved in His coming? Will He come visibly and personally?" The answers to these questions may prove a surprise to many. All services commence at 7:45 with a rousing song service, and are non-denominational in character. Everyone invited. Bring a Bible, a pencil and a notebook each night.

Erskine United Presbyterian—Rev. Robert J. Devine will preach at 2:30 Sunday afternoon. Subject: "The Battlefields of the Bible, or the Conflict that Knows No Compromise." This is the second of a series of Sunday afternoon messages dealing with the age-old conflict between Christ and Satan—the seed of the woman and the seed of the serpent, prophesied in Gen. 3:15.

Lesson for March 24

PETER DESCRIBES THE CHRISTIAN LIFE

LESSON TEXT—1 Peter 3:8-18.
GOLDEN TEXT—But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear. 1 Peter 3:15.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Pleasing Jesus Every Day.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus' Way of Living.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Living Like a Christian.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Practicing Our Christian Profession.

Having given instructions to citizens (2:13, 14), servants (2:18), wives (3:1-6), and husbands (3:7), Peter now sets forth the attitude and motives which are required for the perfection of all the relations of human life.
1. Characteristics of the Christian Life (vv. 8-11).
These find expression in personal attitudes and manner of living.
a. Toward fellow believers (v. 8).
1. "All of one mind." This means unity of thought and feeling. Christians being united to the one Lord Jesus Christ, animated by the one Holy Spirit and governed by the one Book, the Holy Scriptures, will inevitably come into possession of like-mindedness.
b. "Having compassion one of another." This means more than sympathy in times of sorrow. It means the sharing of joys as well as sorrows.
c. "Love as brethren." Being of the one family, a common affection should dominate its members.
d. "Be pitiful." This means tenderhearted, expressing itself in sympathy toward the helpless and needy.
e. "Be courteous." This means friendliness, Christian politeness.
2. Toward the world (vv. 9, 11).
a. "Not rendering evil for evil." Positively expressed, this means doing good for evil. The natural man renders evil for evil. The believer has been called thus to manifest the spirit of Christ.
b. "Eschew evil and do good" (v. 11). This means to shun or turn away from one's course at the approach of evil and the positive doing of good.
c. "Seek peace, and ensue it." It is not enough for a believer to refrain from conflict. He must bend every energy in the direction of peace.
II. Incentives to Christian Living (vv. 12-14).
1. "The eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto their prayers" (v. 12). God not only takes account of their efforts to live righteously, but his ears are open to their cries for help.
2. "The face of the Lord is against them that do evil" (v. 12). God will surely visit in judgment those who depart from the way of right living.
3. God will protect and keep those who bend their energies to the doing of good (v. 13).
4. Happiness in suffering (v. 14). This means the suffering which results from the pursuing of the ways of righteousness.
III. How the Christian Life Can Be Lived (vv. 15, 16).
It cannot be lived in the power of human strength. A divine dynamic is provided.
1. "Sanctify the Lord God in your hearts" (v. 15). The Revised Version says, "Sanctify Christ as Lord," enthroning Jesus Christ as the Lord of life.
2. Be ready to give a reason for your hope (v. 15). A Christian should have an understanding of his faith, such as to give a reason to the inquirer. The Christian's faith rests upon the highest reason.
3. Live a conscientious life (v. 16). One's life should be so lived that the consciousness that actions are consistent before God and man is possible. Such a life will put to shame evil men who falsely accuse and spitefully use the believer.
IV. The Issue of the Christian Life (vv. 17, 18).
Christ said to the disciples that they would receive the same treatment that the world accorded him. Paul says, "All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution" (II Tim. 3:12). If God wills that we suffer for well doing, let us rejoice, looking to Christ as our supreme example.

Helps to Better Faith
Every noble act of devotion to truth, every pure life unstained with evil, every word of pity, every instance of forgiving goodness, helps us to a better faith in that divine and eternal goodness which has no variableness or shadow of turning.—Dr. J. F. Clarke.

Try It Yourself
Whatever may be said of the philosophy of Coleridge, his proof of the truth of Christianity was most simple and conclusive. It consisted in the words, "Try it for yourself."

Is Christ Coming Again?

What is involved in His Coming?
Will He Come Visibly and Personally?
Will His Coming precede or follow the Millenium?

WHAT SAITH THE SCRIPTURE?

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—The luck that had brought the Boston Lawrence to California just as the beginning of the gold rush seems to have deserted the present generation. From a 4,000-acre ranch, their holdings have shrunk to a small farm and the old family home in Clipperville. The death of their poetic father forced the three eldest children to work so that Sam and little Ariel might continue their education. Phil, now twenty-five, had gone from high school to the iron works. Gail works in the public library and Edith in the book department of Clipperville's largest store. Besides their financial worries, seventeen-year-old Ariel is becoming more and more of a problem, and Phil is fascinated by "that terrible" Lily Cass, whose husband has deserted her. She has three little children.

CHAPTER II.—Young Van Murchison, whose family owns a chain of four mills, returns from Yale. He and Gail had been very close friends before he went away to college and Gail now has visions of the turning of the Lawrence luck. Dick Stebbins, Phil's best friend, is the son of the house. Ariel justifies her sisters' fear by sneaking out of the house at night for joy rides. She is almost detected on her return from one of them, but she hoodwinks the family and they think they have suspected her unjustly.

CHAPTER III.—Van has supper with the Lawrence, dancing later with Gail at a roadhouse. She feels she is making no progress in gaining his affections, and regretfully concludes she is not his "type of girl." Phil suggests, to the girls' consternation, that they invite Lily Cass to supper. Gail and Edith feel she is not "respectable," and are in a quandary.

CHAPTER IV.—Van asks Gail to go with him for a week-end at Los Gatos with the Chippis, his uncle and aunt. Edith disapproves because the invitation did not come from Mrs. Chippis, but Gail indulges in a little deceit, which satisfies them, and goes. She is received coldly by Mrs. Chippis and her guests. The second night the house party drives in a motor car to Murchison's roadhouse, where they are much drinking. As Gail's party is about to leave, she glances from a window and sees a raccoon-costumed man helping Ariel into a roadster.

Edith told herself complacently that all this was very nice. Here was Phil home at a time when he might have been with Lily Cass, which proved that his affair with her was over. Gail was getting on splendidly with her new and wealthy friends, and would undoubtedly marry Van Murchison. Ariel had had a lovely little girl time with Dorothy. Everything was going beautifully.

"Ariel is smart about boys," Gail was thinking. Her cheek flushed as she remembered what Ariel had said. Gail herself had vaguely observed some lack—some essential thing missing in her friendship with Van. But it had been left for Ariel to put it into merciless words. Was it true? Well, no, not entirely. There was some truth in it, of course. But if Van Murchison happened to be a light-hearted, unthinking, fun-loving boy, young for his years, and if Gail Lawrence was developed beyond hers, matured by responsibility and experience, that did not mean that they could not fall in love with each other. How could she demand more of him than he naturally gave? What attitude on her part would create in him a soberer, a more dependable mood, on which a woman might base real hopes and plans?

Thinking these thoughts, she did not feel quite the usual thrill when he came into the library a day or two later and stood, as he often did, with an elbow on the high desk, watching her amusedly as she stamped and scribbled in the shabby old books.

"Have you a good reference book on the diseases of hawk parasites?" the ringing voice said joyfully when she was free. There was no change in Gail's manner as she touched his big brown hand, but deep underneath she was conscious of change in herself.

This man was far from thoughts of marriage. By what twist, she wondered, did a girl bring her man from such irresponsible gaiety as this to the definiteness of an engagement?

Van wanted Gail to lunch with him, and she reached for the telephone extension and told Edith that she would not come home as usual. It meant a pang to Edith, but it could not be helped.

But immediately after this Van suddenly turned scowling and gloomy and said that, no, hang it, he could not lunch with her after all.

"I'll tell you," he said, with his characteristic chuckle, "I promised a man at Beresford that I'd go and look at a puppy!"
Gail did not know quite what to say, feeling as she did a little dashed and perplexed by the sudden change of plan. She tried to feel fondly indulgent; he was only a boy, after all. But she had a sense of futility; there seemed no way of catching the slippery substance of him in her fingers.

"I'm sorry," he said.
"Oh, that's all right!"
"Say, let's go over and have lunch at Santa Cruz some Sunday, and swim? Can you swim?"
"I love it. Yes, we all swim."

Mention of Santa Cruz reminded her of Murchison's, and she wondered what Van would do if she told him her anxieties about Ariel. Would it develop anything new in him, responsibility, gravity? She could not do it now, but she liked to think about it.

He was gone. He was hunting amusement somewhere; that was all he wanted. Van was like a child looking for some one with whom to play.

Her thoughts were following him into the sunny June day. What fun to be Mrs. Murchison, white and cool and at leisure, there on the tilted leather seat beside him, and go and have lunch at the country club, and watch tennis, or perhaps play golf.

Anyway—anyway, she reflected, walking home to lunch, she was a good deal nearer to that envied position than any other girl in Clipperville! She had proved herself on that grilling week-end visit to Los Gatos quite the match of the women of Van's set; she had won them, in spite of themselves.

Edith was in the kitchen, ecstatic over Gail's unexpected appearance. "Did you make any date with him, Gail?"

"Nothing definite."
But nothing could be more satisfying outwardly than his pursuit of her, and Gail had to be content with that for awhile.

In a half-hearted, highly unsatisfactory sort of way Mrs. Chipp had asked Gail to Far Niente again, and this time everything had gone gloriously—breathlessly. There had been charades built on the Lawrence formula, there had been a hysterical game of Sardines that left even the grown-ups spent and agonized with laughter; some of these demigods had gone so far as to remember Van's little friend from the library in Clipperville, and had been gracious to her.

Best of all had been the morning after a dance, when, waking in the big hotel on the hilltop, Gail had breakfasted in pajamas—the silk pajamas Edith had won when she won the Hope Chest at the Catholic fair last year.

After breakfast the party had split and scattered, Gail going off with Van in the roadster.

They had gone to the Cliff house and apostrophized the seals that were barking harshly on the rocks behind the drifts of fog; they had had tinctures taken on the board walk, and had tried all the swings and chutes. They had bought ginger and li-chee rats, had lingered long at the theater doorway, studying the cheap little photographs, bursting into fresh laughter as they pretended to translate the hieroglyphics to one another.

An idiot—yes, but Van was a most lovable idiot, the ideal idiot with whom to spend a silly day like this, when one's senses were still dreamy and dulled with the excitement of a gala night, and when one had him to oneself—not showing off, not given any chance to be drawn away. Innocently to hurt one's feelings. This day in Chinatown was one to be marked with a white stone for Gail.

At four they had known they must start for home. It would take almost two hours to drive to Clipperville; Gail had not dared prolong the fun too far. Van had landed her safely at her own gate at six o'clock, and she had gone into the dim old brooding house, that was close and dark tonight, with a sudden realization of the limitations of the place—the stupidity of home.

"I've had the best time I ever had in my life!" she could tell them over and over again, exhausted by sheer felicity. Edith had listened eagerly, sympathetically; Phil was not at home. Ariel had listened, too, but with a difference. "Ariel had an experience last night. She went out for a casual drive with the Camps after the movie," Edith had said, "and they broke a spring, and it was nearly midnight when she got in! Phil and I were terribly frightened."

Gail's eyes and Ariel's had flashed together. But even when they were alone Ariel had not been communicative.

"You run your affairs and let me run mine!" she had said, not rudely, very simply.

"But it wasn't a broken spring, Ariel?"
"I say it was."

Gail had been too anxious to get back to her own dreams and memories to worry, even about Ariel.

The day had had its marvelous moment. It had come at four o'clock, when she and Van, laughing over the purchase of dragons, bowls, candlesticks, and charms in the sandal-scented, opium-scented interior of a dark little Chinatown shop, had been reluctantly forced to a consideration of the flying time.

"Yep, that's so, we can't stay in town—we ain't married yet!" Van had said, with his wild laugh.

It wasn't much. But it was enough for her to remember happily now; it showed that he did think of it, that it was in his mind.

"We ain't married yet!" It would have been a little better if he had not put it in the vernacular. Still . . . it was sweet.

She went to sleep dreaming of the newspapers of a few years hence. Her heart was very tender toward Van tonight. He had been a charming companion today, this big tweed-clad man with the well-filled wallet and the shining open car. Gail liked the memory of his smiling lean face grinning at her. She liked his clothes, his speech; she liked his references to places and things that belonged to a world of leisure and luxury that she did not know.

Almost every week-end was spent at the ranch in Los Gatos now, and between the Mondays and Fridays Gail lived in but a dreamy half-consciousness of what went on at home. The women of Van's set had taken her up, and when the Chippis were back at home, as they frequently were in mid-week, Mary Spence or Lucia would come to Clipperville to stay with Lenore, and they would all straggle into the library during the dull forenoons to report their shopping expeditions, or to try to coax Gail to come off with them to a country club luncheon.

Life, at this accelerated pace, fairly burned her up. The new pleasures enchanted her, but never satisfied, leaving her always straining for more; which indeed was the position of them all—Lenore, Mary, Van, Fred, to say nothing of their elders. They went everywhere, anywhere, they did anything and everything that might promise fun. Breakfast on the MacCleish's yacht, for example; life on the MacCleish's yacht had nothing to do with sailing or the water. The yacht might as well have been moored ten feet underground in a coal mine, for all its gay party ever saw of the sea. Yet there was something distinguished about being asked to spend a week-end on a real yacht!

The glory spread far ahead of it, and far behind it. Gail saw her name in the Clipperville Challenge more than once during this amazing summer, listed among the guests at affairs whose distinction a few months back was beyond her wildest dreams.

She had a feverish feeling sometimes of having lost Edith, lost Phil and Sam and Ariel, lost touch with her work at the library and her duties at home—one could not live two lives, after all, and Van's very exactions were a delight, an answer to her wild young ardent prayers of last spring. Nothing mattered but that she should please him, should keep close to him.

One night in late August she and Van walked home from a movie in Clipperville. The night was insufferably hot, and the audience was glad enough to straggle out into the black darkness of the Calle, where the air was some degrees cooler.

"Whew! That was frightful," Gail breathed.

"This is a snorter!" Van commented. "Los Gatos tomorrow, hey? And into the pool!"

The moon had not yet risen, but there was an odd light in the world at nine o'clock; whitewashed surfaces and the adobe walls of the oldest buildings wore an odd pale glimmer of white.

"Maybe we'll go over to the beach Sunday," Van said.

"I wish we were there now!"

"Take you in a minute!" he offered eagerly. The girl laughed.

"A hundred miles," she said drily. "And we'd get so hot going over, and be so tired coming back, that we wouldn't gain much."

"Ice cream at Dobbins?" he suggested.

"Kind of mussy." But she turned toward the drug store none the less; the opportunity to be seen by all the town, having soda at Dobbins' with Van Murchison, must not be overlooked.

All Clipperville came in and out of Dobbins' on a hot summer evening, and she kept wheeling about on her high stool to greet library acquaintances and neighbors and friends.

They all saw that she was with Van Murchison.

Ariel came in and put her slim arms about Gail from behind and kissed the bright wave of tawny hair over Gail's ear.

"Take our places," Gail said, getting down. "We're done!"

She walked along beside Van silently in the street. The man kept up his regular stream of chatter for a minute; somehow it jarred tonight. Gail broke across it suddenly.

"The reason I wanted to come away was—my brother Phil was in Dobbins' there."

"Your brother Phil was?"

"Yes. 'Way over in the corner, in one of the twosomes."

"Why didn't we yell at him?" Van asked simply.

She had to have sympathy: she had to test him. With a sudden letting down of the bars she said, "Because his girl was with him." "And don't you like her?" Van demanded, with his delighted air of discovering something amusing.

"I despise her!" Gail answered somberly.

"Not really!" he exclaimed ecstatically. "What? Phil's girl?" "She's not a girl, really, and it's very serious," Gail said, determined to sober him. "She's a divorced woman, and she has three little boys about three and two and one—"

"Oh, I love it!" Van said with relish. "Phil! Old sober-sides! I adore it! I'm crazy about it!"

"Van, how can you say so!" Gail reproached him, hurt. "She's a terrible girl; she comes from Thomas Street Hill; she was one of the Wibbers."

"Oh, I think it's perfectly grand!" Van said, with his raw, joyous laugh. "Think of the trouble and expense saved—his family all ready-made!"

But suddenly perceiving that she was not amused, and that a genuine mood of anger and disappointment was keeping her silent, he changed his tone and said rallying, lightly:

"Why, what do you care who your brother marries! You don't have to marry her! It's his funeral."

"I suppose so," Gail conceded after a moment wearily.

"Want to jump into the car and rush off somewhere and get cool?"

"It would take too long, and I'm too tired, and I promised Edith to be home early. She gets nervous."

The car was parked a hundred feet from the Lawrence gate. Gail went to the fence that had once been their meadow fence, and leaned on the bars and stared into the night that was now lighted by the moon.

"Phil's marrying would simply wreck our home," she said, reverting to the topic deliberately, desperately.

"Oh, forget it! He won't marry her," Van assured her easily.

"I think," she began a little thickly—"I think what worries me is Ariel. She's proud, she's so sensitive—"

"Shucks! She isn't any prouder or more sensitive than you are!" Van said unsympathetically.

He hated to be serious, Gail knew. He was hating it now.

"The thing about Ariel is," Gail pursued resolutely, "that she is running around with that Buddy Ralsch crowd—of course they may be a perfectly decent crowd underneath—"

"Why, she's nothing but a school child!" Van said in distaste and displeasure.

"Well, she's not such a school child but what she lets Buddy Ralsch take her out in his roadster—"

"Oh, I love it! I think it's priceless!" Van exclaimed, laughing, as Gail's troubled voice fell still.

"I don't know what to do about it," Gail began again. "I was wondering," she added timidly, "what you would think I ought to do, Van?"

He was interested now, but in an annoyed, reluctant sort of way. He said quickly:

"For heaven's sake, what should I know about it? It seems to me if she's such a fool she likes to run 'round with a boulder like that, why, let her do it!"

"But you don't understand, Van," Gail said patiently. "She's only seventeen—she won't be eighteen until next Christmas."

"That wasn't no hindrance to the late Miss Juliet 'Capulet'" Van reminded her joyously.

Gail laughed faintly, and was silent.

"I'll come for you early tomorrow," Van presently said. "How's nine o'clock? That gets us to the ranch at noon, easy."

The girl felt cold, unresponsive, heavy.

They were standing close together at the old fence rail; he might easily have put his arm about her. But he never attempted that sort of thing; Gail wondered sometimes if it were some queer lack in her that prevented him, or some missing quality in him.

He Might Easily Have Put His Arm About Her.

Going into the house she determined that she would not go down to Los Gatos at all tomorrow, and felt a great relief in the thought.

If they wanted her they could make a special overture next week.

She wandered away to her own room, returned in pajamas, brushing her thick mop of tawny-gold hair.

"Phil was at Dobbins' tonight," she said suddenly, "with Lily."

Edith opened her lips to speak, made no sound. They stared at each other.

"He wasn't!" Edith whispered after awhile. "At Dobbins!"

"In one of the twosomes—the alcoves."

"He's crazy," the younger sister said darkly. They brooded upon it in silence.

Gail felt tired and blue; discouraged about Phil, about Ariel, about her own hopes and plans concerning Van.

"I may be engaged to be married this time tomorrow night," she thought, when she was in bed, reading. "There's a moment when one isn't, and then suddenly—one is. That's all there is to it. Girls do get engaged; almost every girl gets engaged."

She thought of the Fosters and the Delahantys. Three, busy, homey unmarried sisters in each family. Two in the post office, two teaching school, one in the library, one a stenographer. Gail's heart failed her.

It was not fair that some girls should travel, go places, do fascinating things, and that other girls should drudge away at the library, year after year, while hope died and youth faded and enthusiasm was spent—like the Fosters' and the Delahantys' enthusiasms—upon church fairs and preserving fruit.

"It's not right," Gail said solemnly to the shabby old silent room, through whose windows the hot smell of pear trees and burned grass was penetrating from the dark night outside. "There's nothing in character, if it only gets you what the Fosters and the Delahantys have got!"

"I'm not sure," she decided darkly, "but what Ariel's in the right! I'll bet she gets to London before I do!"

Concluded from first page.

dowed with agricultural wealth, said Mr. Thompson, and ranks high as such. Of 22 major agricultural commodities, Michigan ranks 10th in 17 of them. This state produces 60% of the pea bean crop of the nation, is ahead of all others in the growing of cherries, and Michigan and New York produce 50% of the nation's onion crop. Berrien county alone raises 1% of the world's apple crop. Nature has also endowed Michigan with large mineral and oil deposits.

Detroit is within 750 miles of seven of the 15 large cities of the nation and the state has easy market facilities. Widely diversified products has made it hard to standardize in Michigan to the detriment of the farmer. They have been victims of proximity to their markets in that it has not been hard to market inferior products. When Michigan potatoes sell at 60 cents a hundred in Detroit, those of Maine sell at $1.10 and those of Idaho at $1.75. The aim of Mr. Thompson's department will be to set a standard of quality for Michigan farm and dairy products that they will bring as high a price as those of other states.

Mr. Thompson said that his department of agriculture had more contacts with Michigan people than any other department of the state. The veterinary division had for its object the eradication and control of hog cholera, tuberculosis and other diseases in animals, and in cooperation with the federal government, has reduced tuberculosis in cattle from 4.7% to seventeen-hundredths of one per cent. This has made Michigan a wonderful market for buyers of breeding stock with the result that 1,100 cattle are shipped monthly to out of state buyers. In his address, the commissioner of agriculture explained the functions of the Bureau of Dairy Industry, Agricultural Industry, Animal Industry, Weights and Standards and other divisions in his department and their relation to the farmers.

The afternoon's program at the auditorium opened with four selections by the Cass City Ladies' Band. This was followed with a pillow fight between Phil McComb and William Profit. Two couples of high school boys then engaged in pillow bouts, all of these contests being laugh provokers to the audience. Guy W. Landon sang "Friend o' Mine" as a bass solo, Mrs. J. I. Niergarth serving as accompanist. J. E. Kemp of Unionville, county president of the union, spoke briefly and called the attention of union members that their presence was desired at Lansing, March 20, when the legislature was scheduled to consider a milk control bill.

The Week at Lansing

(By FRANK D. BROWN, Special Correspondent.)

Senator Leon D. Case of Water-vliet, democratic floor leader of the upper house, headed an unsuccessful attempt this week to block passage of an administration bill which is designed to consolidate all welfare and relief agencies in the state. The threat that Washington authorities might not approve of the new relief set-up was made by the senator who intimated that as a consequence of the enactment of the bill, the federal emergency relief administrator, Harry Hopkins, might find it necessary to create his own organization entirely independent of state influence.

On the other hand, Senator Case, speaking with authority, told the senate that if the present relief organization should be maintained without alteration and Gov. Fitzgerald should decide to appoint Grover C. Dillman, former state highway commissioner and now state welfare director, as the third member of the three-man commission such an arrangement would be most acceptable to Mr. Hopkins.

In this measure the democrats see a serious threat to the welfare machinery as constructed under Gov. Comstock's guidance. In the House, this bill will likely come in for considerable sharpshooting but Speaker George Schroeder (D) informs your correspondent that he has received no word from Washington that the bill should be defeated. This discounts somewhat Senator Case's suggestion that the federal administration is liable to look with displeasure upon such a reorganization.

The legislature has at least shown some inclination to get down to business. The week has seen both houses working overtime (if such a thing could be true) and bills of more or less importance have begun to flow out of committees as a means of bringing the session to a close in as brief a time as possible. Many important administration bills and budget bills yet remain to be introduced.

Gov. Fitzgerald's insistence that the solons get out of Lansing by the end of the month has weakened. A resolution setting the date of adjournment at March 31 has gone "by the boards" for the simple reason that such a thing would be impossible. Both houses are pretty well agreed upon that if the governor gets rid of them by the middle or the end of April he should be well satisfied.

The patronage squabble in the Turn to page 2, please.

LAPEER SMILE AT MENTION OF TRUNK MURDER

Any mention of a trunk murder in Lapeer always arouses a snicker among the older inhabitants.

The story goes back 50 years when, as now, Lapeer was a junction point of the Michigan Central and Grand Trunk Railways. A trunk with a fearful odor was shipped in, to be transferred at Lapeer for Bay City. The train baggage man became suspicious of the trunk's contents and confided his fears to station attendants.

Others grouped about the trunk until the conviction became general that the trunk contained a body. Coroner Shannon was aroused from his bed at 2:45 a. m. to make an investigation.

He opened the trunk to find a layer of clothing on top. With a group of curious hanging over his shoulders he removed the clothing, the odor becoming more and more unbearable.

Finally the last piece was removed. There lay 125 pounds of ripe cheese—limburger. — Detroit Free Press.

Local committees will make a check of acreage upon which abandonment claims are made before payment is given. No payments will be made upon lands unsuitable for beets or upon which the beets were lost because proper care was not given them.

The crop adjustment plan for sugar beets is based upon the idea of giving farmers every chance to grow the amount of beets allotted to them. The contract signer is supposed to plant beets only on land upon which a crop can be expected to mature, and he must perform all cultural operations until such time as it becomes apparent that the planted crop will be a failure. No payments on abandoned acreage will be made unless the crop on that land was under contract to a sugar company.
