SKULL AND BONES FOUND NEAR MAYVILLE

Discovery Solves in Part the Disappearance of Francis Blasius.

The discovery Sunday morning of a skull and scattered bones partially buried and covered by undergrowth in a swamp near Mayville is believed to partly solve the mile from Blasius' home. The swamp in which the body lay is on the property of W. S. Rundell, a Vassar attorney. Until last winter, it has remained virtually untouched, but during the winter a crew of men were engaged in lumbering operations there. It was found Sunday that the workers had lunched regularly within 25 feet of the spot where the skeleton lay and had cut down three trees within 10 feet of it. The finders were Angus

Campbell and Archie Lobdell. Blasius walked from his home near Mayville the morning of May 16, 1926, was seen by his house keeper to stroll toward his barn and so far as ever has been learned his sixties, Blasius was known to hundreds of Tuscola county resi-

In the years that have intervened, acquaintances of Blasius have been divided on whether he was alive or dead. Late last summer, however, he was declared legally dead and his estate settled. Blasius' body was found about 9:00 a.m., the same hour of the same day of the week that he dropped from sight. Coroner Race Tuesday checked with two Vassar watchmakers their records of work done for Blasius. One repaired his watch in 1914 and the other in 1919, and the watch number on their records is the same as that of the watch found with the skeleton. Suicide is generally accepted as the theory of the man's death, but the fact that he carried a large sum of money the day before he was missed is given as a motive for murder. Turn to page 8, please.

There is no serious doubt about the schools needing as much money as they ask for. No one seems to have come forward with a definite or worthwhile argument justifying such a sum. The governor has pledged sufficient state aid to make up the $68,000,000 school budget which the educational group claims is needed. In view of this pledge, the school people have capitulated and admitted in so many words that they have been trying to get all that is possible but are willing to accept whatever they can get.

It is estimated that about $20,-000,000 of state aid will be required to supplement the primary school fund and local taxes to fulfill the $68,000,000 which the school lobby is seeking.

Without an opposing vote, the House passed the bill creating a corporation and securities commission as recommended by the governor. Rats Eat Heartily Farmers Pay Bills

It is easy to reduce or eliminate the losses caused by rats and woodchucks on Michigan farms if the For morning exercise, Miss Mc-Lachlan is reading "Kazan" by James Oliver Curwood. It is very trol, according to G. C. Oderkirk, trol, according to G. C. Oderkirk, U. S. Biological Survey.

Rats are particularly troublesome in the spring months when they are tempted to vary their diet We received our report cards on Friday. Those having a "B" aver-Rats have been known to kill as many as 500 chicks in one night; this, of course, is merely wanton slaughter and not a search for food. Expensive poultry foods are favorite rat diets.

Woodchucks prefer to place their burrows on side hills where they may start gullies and always cause trouble with harvesting machinery. They also have hearty appetites for clover and alfalfa.

Rats can be killed with poison baits in which red squill is used as the killing agent. Red squill will not kill other animals unless large amounts of it are eaten. One part of red squill to 16 parts of either a cheap grade of salmon, hamburger, or a mixture of equal parts moistened rolled oats and corn meal makes an attractive and deadly bait for rats. Two or more kinds of bait will accelerate the destruction of the rats.

Woodchucks can be killed by placing calcium cyanide fumigant in the burrows. Place a heaping tablespoonful of the poison in the hole as far as can be reached and close the entrance with a sod or dirt. If the hole remains closed, the animals inside will cause no more trouble. Carbon bisulphide placed on pieces of cloth which are pushed into the holes also will kill rodents. The burrow entrances should be closed when this fumigant is used. Calcium cyanide forced under concrete floors with a foot pump duster will kill rats hiding there.

The gas from either fumigant should not be breathed. There is no danger if the work is done in the open air where there is good ventilation. Red squill is not a dangerous poison for any animals except rats but it should not be placed in large quantities where dogs, cats, or chickens can reach it.

FORD V.8

In A Class By Itself

THERE is no way to compare the Ford V-8 with any other car because there is no other car like it.

The Ford enables you to step up into the fine-car class in performance, beauty, comfort and safety. But there is no stepping up in price. That is kept down by Ford low-profit policies and unique manufacturing methods. These are as different as the car itself.

It takes eight cylinders to give the modern performance you need these days. The Ford is powered by a V-8 — the finest type of eight-cylinder engine. You have to pay more than $2000 for that in any other car.

KIDNEYSI

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly fil-tering impurities from the blood stream. But kidneys get function-ally disturbed—lag in their work fail to remove the poisonous body wastes.

Then you may suffer nagging backache, attacks of dizziness, burning, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains; feel "all worn out."

Don't delay! For the quicker you get rid of these poisons, the better your chances of good health.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They tend to promote normal functioning of the kidneys; should help them pass off the irritating poisons. Doan's are recommended by users the country over. Get them from any druggist.

... it ENDS bowel worries for many people

This is a test that tells you whether the system needs a cathartic change. If you have constant sluggish spells or bilious attacks, and laxatives seem to make things worse, it would be wise to try this:

Stop all use of any laxative that does not encourage variation from a "fixed dose" (which may be entirely too large a dose for your individual need). Use instead, a liquid laxative that you can measure and regulate as to dose. As necessary to repeat, take smaller doses, less and less often. until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

Doctors use liquid laxatives, and a properly prepared liquid laxative, containing natural laxative agents like senna and cascara is a joy and a comfort; a real help in establishing regularity. Ask your doctor about this! (Doctors use liquid laxatives.) You can get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a most dependable liquid laxative, at any drug store.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—The luck that had brought the Boston Lawrences to California just as the beginning of the gold rush seems to have deserted the present generation. From a 4,000-acre ranch, their holdings have shrunk to a small farm and the old family home in Clippersville. The death of their poetic father forced the three cidest children to work so that Sam and little Ariel might continue their education. Phil, now twenty-five, had gone from high school to the iron works. Gail works in the public library and Edith in the book department of Clippersville's largest store. Besides their financial worries, seventeen-year-old Ariel is becoming more and more of a problem, and Phil is fascinated by "that terrible" Lily Cass, whose husband has deserted her. She has three little children. Cass, whose husband has deserted her. She has three little children.

CHAPTER II. Young Van Mur-CHAPTER II.—Young Van Murchison, whose family owns a chain of flour mills, returns from Yale. He and Gail had been very close friends before he went away to college and Gail now has visions of the turning of the Lawrence luck. Dick Stebbins, Phil's best friend, has the run of the house. Ariel justifies her sisters' fear by sneaking out of the house at night for joy rides. She is almost detected on her return from one of them, but she hoodwinks the family and they think they have suspected her unjustly.

CHAPTER III .-- Van has supper CHAPTER III.—Van has supper with the Lawrences, dancing later with Gail at a roadhouse. She feels she is making no progress in gaining his affections, and regretfully concludes she is not his "type of girl." Phil suggests, to the girls consternation, that they invite Lily Cass to supper. Gail and Edith feel she is not "respectable," and are in a quandary.

CHAPTER IV.—Van asks Gail to go with him for a week-end at Los Gatos with him for a week-end at Los Gatos with the Chipps, his uncle and aunt. Phil and Edith disapprove because the invitation did not come from Mrs. Chipps, but Gail indulges in a little deceit, which satisfies them, and goes. She is received coldly by Mrs. Chipps and her guests. The second night the house party guests drive sixty miles to Mockerson's roadhouse, where there is much drinking. As Gail's party is about to leave, she glances from a window and sees a raccoon-coated man helping Ariel into a roadster.

CHAPTER V.—Gail hurries home

CHAPTER V.—Gail hurries home the next day and asks Ariel if she knew of Mockerson's. Ariel admits she was at the place, at night, and displays no remorse. Gail tries to have a 'serious talk with her next day, but Ariel is deflant. Gail is gloomy as she considers the family's outlook.

CHAPTER VI

THE next day she rose unre-freshed and dissatisfied, and dragged heavily through her preparations to go to Los Gatos, as if the prospect were anything but in-

It would have filled her with ecstasy a year ago; she felt dull and doubtful about it now.

Ariel, all helpful sympathy, came out to the gate when Van parked there, honking wildly, at ten o'clock. "Here," he said, leaping out, "I'll take that." He stowed Gail's suitcase in the rumble. The three stood smiling and gossiping in the soft foggy morning. "I wish I were going with you!"

Ariel said frankly. "Well, why don't you come?" Van exclaimed, suddenly fired.

"Oh, no, I couldn't. I've got a date with the crowd tonight," Ariel protested, "and I couldn't anyway, I'm not dressed! And I couldn't anyway."

For an instant the matter hung fire, and Gail did not know whether or not in that instant Ariel sent her a glance of wild hope. Immediately the younger girl settled the matter, and was running back into the house shouting, "Have a good

Despite her sister's protests, Gail felt like a murderer as Van's car shot away across the long bare road, away from dusty, dull Clippersville into the beauty and shade and coolness of Far Niente. The thought of that quick, hopeful glance of Ariel's-that glance that might not ever even have been sent or been thought of-haunted her.

Not that Ariel could have come, no. Obviously that would have been

But Gail kept wishing that she, Gail, had urged it, had impulsively, ridiculously, pressed it. It would have made no difference in the outcome, for even little Ariel knew that she mustn't expect to go places just because Gail did. She wouldn't have come. She would know that they might snub her.

And yet the memory of the little flying pink figure and the shorted "Have a good time!" in Ariel's oddly deep voice would not let her be at peace. She was gnawed by hunger for Ariel, incessant and deep.

Van's mother proved to be a thin, dark, smart woman in a beautiful transparent gown of orange and black. She greeted her son with a fretful "Van, I suppose you know your father's furious at you, and making life simply wretched for me?" and gave to Gail only an abstracted frown. "I think you were in school with my mother, Editha Petrie, in San Francisco?" Gail said, trying to

"I was in school with nobody's mother, and I won't be incriminated, and I am praying the Lord to grant me a long and prosperous thirtyone!" Mrs. Murchison said, to the company at large rather than to Gail.

"She'll never forgive you that as long as you live, Gail!" Van exclaimed in the laughter that followed. Gail laughed, too, but she felt hot and uncomfortable.

In all it was an uncomfortable visit; the least happy she had ever had at Far Niente, even including the first, with its nervousness and shyness. Three men Gail had never seen before were absorbed in the topic of the golf tournament at Del Monte, and for a lititle while on Saturday a 'ternoon Gail was excited by the possibility of their all going down to Monterey to try a day's preliminary playing.

But in the end it was decided that the three men and Van should leave before breakfast and go there

"That is, I would," Van said, "if didn't feel it would leave Gail in the lurch!"

"We'll take care of Gail," Mrs. Chipp said. "We'll just leave her here to amuse herself, and the boys will be back for dinner, and we'll all go home Monday afternoon." Gail had to protest; her library with a Clippersville girl!" The tone, the emphasis of the voice, interpreted the whole to her perfectly. Van's father would be furious with him for going with a Clippersville girl. It served him perfectly right, wasting his time with a Clippersville girl. It did not matter whose feelings were hurt or were not hurt; it was only a Clippersville girl!

Her face blazed, her throat was thick and dry. Her heart seethed like a boiling pot, and her thoughts went round and round dizzily. Her hands felt cold, and she was shak-

What did it matter what that vulgar, smart, rouged, thin, dark woman said or thought! It did not affect Gail Lawrence; it did not affect Van Murchison.

It did affect Van, of course. Wandering about the room in a thin cotton kimono, she addressed herself aloud.

"You poor fool! You thought you might be engaged tonight! "Well-you may be.

"I'd like to be, just to get even with her! I'd like to be so stunning, so smart, so popular that she was wiped out of sight .

"I hate her. . . . No, I don't suppose I hate her. . . Yes, I do.

"I despise her! I'd like her to break her leg. I would. I wouldn't want her to get a cancer exactly. But I'd like something to happen to

The childishness of her own monologue made her begin suddenly to laugh, and she found tears in her eyes.

This wouldn't do. There was nothing to do but go through with the evening's program with what dignity she could muster. It appeared that the four boys were going over to Del Monte that night, so as to play the Pebble Beach course early in the morning. Gail was careful not to let anyone suspect that it made any difference to her. But she felt hurt and sore. At halfpast nine o'clock the roadster with the shouting boys in it departed on its seventy-mile run, and Gail found herself quietly in bed, reading

"A Clippersville girl!" she said to herself in the night stillness. "Well, that's what I am. I don't why that should make me know

Shamed, courageous thoughts possessed her; she plunged into them as into a river. Despite responsibility and precocious cares, she had done little philosophical thinking in her twenty-three years; she deliberately faced the situation now, faced her own soul. The next morning she slipped away from Far Niente before any member of the family was astir. And with every mile of the home trip her heart grew lighter and her mind steadier and her quiet determination greater.

At two o'clock, cool and trim and sympathetic, she was back at her post in the library. She felt wearied, subdued, yet oddly content. This was duller than death but it was peace. No one would hurt her, humiliate her here; she belonged. She was not only in her proper place, but she was doing a fellow creature a service. No animal creeping back into the safety of its lair ever felt a deeper sense of gratitude.

And then-as always on Library Sundays-Edith was there, slipping about the alcoves, coming up to the desk to beam, to whisper to her big sister. "Ariel home?"

"No," Edith explained too cheerfully, too naturally; "Dot Camp telephoned to the Greeley's to say that they might not be back until after dinner! "But why didn't Dot or Ariel telephone us?" "Lou said she said she thought our line was out of order-it never answered."

The sisters exchanged a level, expressionless look. "That's a new one," Gail presently murmured drily. "Well, that's what I thought," Edith agreed reluctantly. "Where do you suppose they

"Oh, just on one of those Sunday 'runs, when they eat fried chicken off dirty board tables, and think they're having a wonderful time!" Edith said impatiently. At six Dora Foster came in, and Edith and Gail could walk home through the broiling late afternoon. "Let's not have supper until seven. And let's get everything ready and then take baths and be beautiful!" Gail suggested.

They set the table out under the big oak in the side yard, close to the house so that the smaller furnishings could be passed through the wide-open kitchen window.

Dick and Phil arrived. They all sat about the table, while the last of the hot twilight died into a hot dusk, talking, murmuring, passing back and forth the old Brazilian silver salad bowl that Grandfather Lawrence had brought to Yerba Buena on that long-ago wedding journey.

The moon had risen and the strengthening silver light was beginning to drip down through the branches of the great trees that roofed the dooryard.

"Where is that naughty Ariel?" Edith had asked drowsily, affectionately, and Gail, listening to the strokes of the cuckoo clock in the hall, had answered more reassuringly than she felt, "Only nine, that's not late!" when suddenly there was a stranger in the gar-

A stranger. At the first glimpse of him Gail's heart stood still, and her mouth filled with water. Horror. Horror. They were all lost. The moonlight touched the star on his breast. Dick was the first to speak, in a quick, authoritative "What is it, Officer?" "There's been a bad accident up near the cement works. A little girl has been killed—" the man Gail was beside him, fingers gripping his arm. "My sister!"

"What happened, Officer?" Dick's voice asked. The others were stricken dumb.

"She was driving a car, sir, and another automobile hit her. She didn't have a license, and she's booked for that, and also on a charge of manslaughter. In the mixup, a little girl in a third car was thrown out on her head and

"She's here now? My sister, I mean?" Phil asked, in a dead, awful silence.

"Yes-she just now run in the house to find you."

"After her, Phil! She may kill herself!" Gail said sharply, in a whisper. Edith put her hands over her face for a moment, praying before they all ran together toward the kitchen door.

Ariel opened the door of the inner passage as the others rushed in from the porch, and stood at bay, facing them. She spoke impatiently, a note of reproach and complaint in her voice.

"Where were you, Gail? I've been hunting-I've been all over everywhere!" "You're hurt!" Gail whispered, fuss!" Ariel said quickly. "Oh, it's you, Fargo?" Dick said to the policeman. "I didn't recognize you out there. Been an accident, eh?"

"Hello, Mr. Stebbins," the policeman said with a sort of deliberate solemnity. "Yes, sir. There's been a bad smash. There was a little girl killed, Mr. Lawrence. They took her to the hospital, but later we heard she-" The officer coughed respectfully. "She passed out on the way," he finished simply. time." the officer, departing, said in a faintly protesting note.

"Manslaughter," Phil said slowly, manded, sitting down heavily in the old kitchen rocker, his eyes never leaving Ariel's.

"Why, just this," Ariel began, in a voice she tried to make sound easy and natural. "A drunken idiot drove his car out into the middle of the traffic and forced our car over against the other side of the road, and we hit the car this little girl was in. That's all.

"I had no more to do with it than -well, Sam, here! This man-he was drunk-cut in from behind a bus, and came straight at us. He

Dick, who had followed the po-

Ancient Glass Making The early attempts to manufacture glass in America were by no means the beginning of the glass industry. For hundreds of years prior to this the people of the Old world had been manufacturing glass, both in volume and variety. On the banks of the Belus, a little river that winds lazily below towering Mount Carmel in Syria, glass was first made, and here quite a Egypt, many hundreds of years before Christ, glass was manufactured. In the British museum there now rests a piece of greenish glass that bears the name of Sargon, king of Assyria, 772 B. C.

THINKS 1944 HENS WILL BE IMPROVED

Expert Predicts Bigger and Better Birds.

By Prof. W. C. Sanctuary, Poultry Dept., Massachusetts State College. WNU Service.

The average hen will live longer in 1944 than the hen of today, and she will probably lay more eggs and be better looking. Progress which has been made in the past ten years warrants predicting still more improvement during the coming decade. Since 1924, the average egg production has been increased, egg size has been improved and general appearance of the birds has been improved, as a result of careful breeding methods. But while these progressive steps have been made, the death rate of laying birds has increased, until that is the principal problem facing the poultryman today.

In order to develop birds which will "wear" longer, and stand the strain of heavy egg production, a program of breeding for longevity is being offered to Massachusetts poultrymen. This is the third in a series of poultry management projects presented to poultrymen by the state college poultry department. The first of these was centered around producing healthy pullets; the second was designed to keep the pullets healthy in the layinghouse. And now the third campaign is being launched, to focus the attention of poultry breeders on the importance of selecting birds for their vigor, stamina, and longevity.

Like the other two, this project is co-operative in nature, with the college offering all the available upto-date information on the subject, with the poultrymen keeping certain records which will provide valuable data for further study of the problem.

Scalding Is Replaced by

Wax in Poultry Dressing How that attractive appearance is given roasters by the modern poultry dressing establishment is explained by Prof. E. L. Dakan, chairman of the poultry department of Ohio State university.

Recently, he explains, a new sysstem has been installed by many of the modern plants. The chickens are no longer scalded to loosen their feathers. They are dipped in a specially prepared wax.

The chickens are suspended on a carrier and bled. The carrier dips them into warm water to loosen their feathers without injuring the flesh. Leaving the water bath, the wing, tail and other larger feathers, are pulled as the birds are drawn along. They pass on through a drying tunnel into the wax bath, leaving that to pass through cool sir to speed hardening of the wax. Girls standing by the carrier strip wax, feathers and all, as the chickens pass before them.

Buying Breeder Toms Vigor in turkey toms is detected by a bright eye, an alert appearance, a grand or proud carriage, quick and graceful movements, and by fertility of eggs and livability of poults. Along with vigor should go size in keeping with age, a long breast free from curvature, legs not too long, a masculine head, and a general blocky appearance. If possible, one should see the birds before buying and if there happens to be a good breeder of turkeys within driving distance from home, there is the best place to buy the breeding tom.-Missouri Farmers.

Feather Pulling

Feather-pulling pullets should be separated from the rest of the flock for a few days until they forget the habit. Keep the pullets in separate pens and feed them meat scrap to the extent of 10 per cent of their feed for a week, then reduce to 5 per cent. See that the meat scrap is absolutely free of taint of any kind. The habit is common where birds are housed too closely and have insufficient exercise to keep them busy. This is a vice belonging to idle birds.

Poultry Notes

At least eight feet of space at the feeder should be provided for every

Increase activity of birds by feeding scratch grain in deep litter, changing litter often.

Whole eggs, egg yolks, and even egg whites are being dried for sale, a recent development in the United States.

If the eggs are always kept cool until marketed to the consumer, they will not deteriorate much in quality.

When England recently boasted that its people ate an average of 152 eggs a year it was brought out that Canadians consume just twice as many.

The "Ceiling"

"The 'ceiling' at any given time," | 75 STUDENTS ON THE says the United States weather bureau, "is generally defined as being the highest point at which a pilot may operate his plane and still distinguish the earth. However, the practical ceiling is usually somewhat lower than this, as most pilots prefer to be able to see horizontally beneath the ceiling to some extent. While it will readily be seen that in most cases the ceiling will coincide with the base of any clouds present, this is not always true. During heavy rain or snow, or when thick haze or smoke is present, the flying ceiling may be much lower than the cloud base."

Auto-Suggestion

Auto-suggestion is suggestion conveyed to the individual without external intervention. Auto-suggestion may be voluntary or involuntary. The subject may, by concentrating his thoughts upon a certain line of action, induce that action, or he may unconsciously act upon suggestions started in his consciousness by others; that is, he may start in himself a train of thought which originated from some other mind. The latter is closely related to hypnotism.
