AUSTIN KEILITZ MET WITH AUTO CRASH

Elley, Driver, Very seriously Hurt in Accident Sunday.

Austin Keilitz, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Keilitz, of Ellington township, was fatally injured and Everett Elley of the Deford community was very seriously hurt in an auto crash east of Caro, near the Detroit and Huron railroad tracks about 2:00 a. m. Sunday. Keilitz's death occurred in the Caro Community hospital 20 minutes after the accident. Elvin Keilitz, 20, escaped with injuries.

The Keilitz brothers and Everett Elley were driving from Caro to Wilmot, and while rounding a curve near the Cass' river bridge just east of Caro, the car crashed through a guard rail and into a tree after a 16-foot drop down a road embankment. Mr. Elley was driving and it is thought that the lights from an approaching automobile blinded him.

The funeral of Austin Keilitz was held at the Ellington Nazarene church on Wednesday afternoon. A short service preceded it at the Keilitz home, 1 mile north and 3 1/2 miles west of Deford. Burial was in the Ellington cemetery.

Mr. Keilitz is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Keilitz; five brothers, Fred, Elvin, Milton, Carlton and Calvin Keilitz, all of Ellington township; and one sister, Mrs. Verne McConnell, also of Ellington.

The Week at Lansing

By Frank D. Brown Special Correspondent.

Events at the capitol this week recalled to the minds of many state attaches those stirring days back in 1894 when "General" Coxey and his famous "army" set out from eastern Ohio to take Washington by storm. Perhaps less spectacular, but somewhat more gratifying in results was the march on Lansing participated in by approximately 500 coal miners from the Saginaw valley district who presented in person their demand that the legislature pass the bill making it mandatory for state institutions to burn Michigan-mined coal.

The pilgrimage was not without its comical features. Neither was it without its more serious aspects. Arriving in town Tuesday afternoon, the housing problem soon became acute as the shadows of night bore down and the major portion of the huge delegation proceeded to convert the House and Senate into large scale "flop houses."

Sergeants-at-arms were hard pressed to clear the speaker's rostrum, the lieutenant governor's desk and the various committee rooms of their human bulks in order to permit the nightly renovation of the two chambers.

The miners finally left Lansing in an orderly fashion Wednesday afternoon when the House, after affixing a myriad of bewildering amendments, passed the bill. For them it was a complete victory—for the legislators it was another laugh. As sent to the governor, the measure means practically nothing as far as aiding the coal mining industry of this state. There are so many "ifs and and's" written into it that the miners' Turn to page 2, please.

4-H Club Event Changed to Vassar

The 4-H Club winter achievement scheduled for Mayville on Wednesday, April 24, is changed to Vassar high school for the same date because of the fact that the scarlet fever epidemic at Mayville makes it seem unwise to ask 4-H club people to attend in that town. The program will proceed as previously announced excepting for the change in place.

Winners selected from the exhibit in Akron on Tuesday, April 23, will then exhibit at Vassar in competition with exhibits from clubs which had intended to exhibit at Mayville.

The judging will be completed in the afternoon by Nevels Pearson and Miss Lola Belle Green, both of the Boys' and Girls' Department, Michigan State College. At the evening program, they will both appear after presentation of five minutes each by various clubs exhibiting.

WIND UNROOFS BARN.

EDWARDS AGAIN HEADS MICH. ELECTRIC POWER CO.

Fire Levels House on A. Fort's Farm

Fire destroyed the 10-room residence on the Alfred Fort farm, 4 1/2 miles north of Cass City, on Friday evening. The loss is estimated at $3,000 and is partially covered by insurance.

The building was covered by an asbestos shingle roof and the outside walls were of lumber, the house having been built with the intention of veneering it with brick. The origin of the fire is not definitely known, but it is thought that the strong wind whipped sparks from the chimney to the side of the building and they set fire to boards under the eaves. The fire had gained good headway when it was discovered. Robt. Hunt, who occupied the residence with his family, was able to save furniture from the first floor.

A large barn on the same farm was destroyed by fire on Oct. 21, 1933. It was replaced by another fine structure with modern conveniences a few months after the conflagration.

Discuss Best Ways to Feed Livestock

Higher prices for livestock do not always mean a profit for the feeder. This was proved by trials conducted at Michigan State College where a margin of two dollars on lambs did not permit a profit unless the rations were properly chosen, as will be explained Feeders' Day, Saturday, April 20, at the college.

Feeders' Day has come to be one of the most important meetings for livestock men in Michigan. Continuous experimental work is carried on by the animal husbandry department at the college and the new discoveries are discussed by department members at this annual meeting.

Sometimes unusual conditions lead feeders to doubt the truth of experimental results, and trials are then run again to furnish additional evidence. Scarcity of good roughages induced many Michigan farmers to buy mills last winter and grind poor roughages to increase their feeding value. This had been proved an impractical venture in the past but new trials were conducted. The latest report on grinding roughages will be presented on April 20.

Corn is the most important feed crop in Michigan, and although past tests have proved its value as compared with other grains new experiments were made to find the most economical way of marketing the corn crop through beef cattle. Feeders will hear the report on this work when they visit the college.

—It always is a temptation to feed limited rations during times of high priced feed. The results of such practices will be explained to the livestock men, using the figures secured from the trials conducted this feeding season.

NEW ROOF FOR CHURCH.

The Baptist church is to have a new roof soon. The roofing has been purchased and the job let. Much credit is due to the ladies of the church in the undertaking.

FUTURE LOOKS GOOD FOR SEED GROWERS

Crops of Grass and Legume Seeds Appear to Be Good Venture.

Production of grass and legume seeds by Michigan farmers is pointed out by the farm crops department at Michigan State College as one of the most uniformly profitable farm practices.

This phase of the farm business is especially important now because there appears to be a definite trend toward replacing some field crops with grasses or legumes which will furnish pasture or hay and prevent soil erosion. Michigan seeds have an enviable reputation in the markets of the country and will find a good sale while this reputation is maintained.

Alfalfa seed production in Michigan is a comparatively new venture but some state farmers have a record of several years of successive good crops. Yields have been quite good and the quality has been excellent. Hardy strains should be planted to insure success with the crop and to obtain the kind of seed for which there is the greatest demand.

Red and alsike clovers are old favorites which have been displaced somewhat by alfalfa but they still have a place in the crop rotation and there is always a demand for good seed of these clover varieties. Sweet clover is another crop which does well in Michigan and produces good seed crops. It has declined somewhat in popularity but seed is in demand now.

It is possible to reduce the amount of seed needed per acre if high class seed is bought and the soil is thoroughly prepared before seeding. High prices for seed now make it worthwhile to insure getting a crop. Soils should be tested for acidity and fertility before planting legumes. All county agricultural agents have soil testing outfits and know how to use them. Any farmer can get an outfit for testing soil acidity either from the agent or the soils department at the college.

CHRIST is risen, Christ the first-fruits
Of the holy harvest field,
Which will all its full abundance
At His second coming yield:
Then the golden ears of harvest
Will their heads before Him wave,

Ripen'd by His glorious sunshine,
From the furrows of the grave,
Christ is risen, we are risen:
Shed upon us heavenly grace,
Rain, and dew, and gleams of glory

From the brightness of Thy Face;
That we, with our hearts in Heaven,
Here on earth may fruitful be,
And the Angel-Hosts be glorified:
And be ever, Lord, with Thee.

The Week at Lansing

only consolation seems to be the act that they compelled the lawmakers to take speedy action for once.

Coupled with this influx of militant citizens is the feud between Gov. Fitzgerald and the one-time all powerful Wayne county figure, John C. Gillespie. Even this incident is not without its amusing ramifications: all of which have added zest to the developments of the week.

Gillespie is reported amongst the missing while state and federal authorities extend their search for him. The seriousness with which his reported threats are regarded by the executive office can only be verified by the presence of the state troopers who loiter about the innermost sanctum as a precautionary step against the Detroit gentleman's appearance, with gun in hand, to wreck vengeance on the governor. The ruction grows out of the liquor control commission; it should be regarded as personal and political, and of no great concern to the taxpayers of Michigan. Gov. Fitzgerald is simply trying to rid his administration of a certain undesirable element that has attached itself to previous administrations. Apparently he is going to "carry through."

Senate and House calendars—those daily bulletins which set forth the work of the hour to be disposed of—are growing by leaps and bounds. The daily agenda in both houses is reaching the proportions of no less than 50 items to be considered, debated, and voted on. The increasing volume of work gives those of us who want the session to terminate real encouragement that the end cannot be many weeks in the offing. Night sessions of the legislature are now the vogue.

The supreme court has entered the picture of specific exemptions from the three-cent sales taxes. An opinion handed down by the tribunal during the past few days denies manufacturers exemptions for processing goods. The ruling is regarded as having a very definite bearing on the bill now in the senate committee which would place a dozen or so items of foodstuff on the free list. Without a constitutional amendment relative to the rule of uniform taxation, it is feared that the entire sales tax law might become inoperative should the legislature deem it advisable to pass the exemption measure now pending.

Senator Andrew L. Moore (R), of Pontiac, chairman of the taxation committee of the upper house and one of the real leaders of this session, has proposed that the powers of the state sales tax division be enlarged so as to permit discretionary action on the part of the division in allowing certain worthy exemptions. This proposal, however, is meeting with some opposition on the grounds that the sales tax administrations might abuse their powers should their authority be expanded to such an extent.

Action of both houses was slowed up somewhat toward the end of the week by the absence of four senators and four representatives who were sent Thursday morning to Berrien county to conduct a recount in the second judicial circuit. A friendly suit, taking the form of a petition asking the legislature to decide which of the two candidates is entitled to the judgeship, resulted in a bi-partisan delegation of lawmakers being sent to St. Joseph to open ballot boxes and conduct a recount. The results of the official canvass in that county revealed that the democratic candidate for the office had defeated his republican opponent by only two votes. Neither candidate, according to the petition filed with the legislature, wishes to take over the office under any cloud or doubt.

The procedure in this case is quite in contrast with that earlier this year when the democrats under the leadership of Senator A. J. Wilkowski of Detroit attempted by "shady" methods to count Major Wilson into the office of secretary of state. By the way, Senator Wilkowski is still holding forth in Lansing and is making every effort to reinstate himself in the good graces of his many associates, who, naturally, are skeptical regarding his ideas of representing the people of the state. Personally, Wilkowski is quite affable, but he appears woefully lacking in many of the essential qualities that might gain for him general regard as a reliable public servant.

With visions of perhaps losing lucrative possibilities, senate lawyers banded together early in the week to defeat the Palmer "heart balm" measure which would have prevented unjustified suits of a marital nature. The bill may be revived later. The measure was patterned after those laws recently enacted by the Indiana and New York assemblies. An interesting sidelight on the history of this bill is the fact that the introducer, Senator William Palmer (D), of Flint, happens to be the senate's only bachelor.

The Senate education committee has been weighing a plan to turn over to the school districts of the state the $3,500,000 saving from the abrogation of the state property tax which was written into law last week. The proposal would be accompanied by a $5,000,000 reduction in the $25,000,000 school appropriation which bill now rests in the senate committee.

Proceeding along the line that the newly elected superintendent of public instruction, M. L. Keyworth is favoring the maximum appropriation, the Michigan Education Association of School Board Members are conducting a formidable lobby at the capitol in an effort to bring about passage of the appropriation measure which the governor already has frowned upon. Unless Gov. Fitzgerald "abouts face", the school people are going to be plenty disappointed even though they are successful in talking the senate into passing this bill as is. The governor, as stated previously, has assured your correspondent that he will not accept anything more than $20,000,000 in this bill. With the governor, it is purely a matter of trying to balance the state's budget as against certain unreasonable demands from "paid representatives" of the school lobby who have been operating in Lansing ever since the writer first became interested in state goings-on.

These final few weeks of the "Lansing merry-go-round" are bound to be weeks of much bewilderment to the average layman. With budget bills, other appropriation measures, and what-not "popping" out of committees at the rate of a dozen or more every day, it is little wonder that few of us know what has really taken place until the "statesmen" have retired and there is ample opportunity for sound evaluation.

Private interests and personal aggrandizement characterize this session like every other session since time immemorial. The big criticism that I have to offer is nothing more or less than: Michigan (like every other state, with Washington, (D. C.), included) has too many public servants "playing to the galleries" with little or no regard for what the consequences may be for the people "back home" who perpetuate such a condition by paying out their hard-earned money in taxes.

Freshman College.

Friday evening, April 12, the Cass City Freshman college presented the three-act comedy, "Skidding." A large crowd assembled and the play proved to be a great success. Everyone felt that his money had been more than well spent. It turned out to be a profitable enterprise for the college itself. The students have not yet decided just what they are going to do with the proceeds. The college wishes to thank everyone who helped in any way to make the play a success.

Sand Valley School.
Mrs. Irma Wells, teacher.

We surprised Mrs. Wells on her birthday this week by having a pot-luck dinner. The beautiful birthday cake was presented by Violet Nowland, who led the group of children into the room, singing "Happy Birthday." Mrs. Wells received some beautiful gifts. Our visitors were Mrs. Windy, Eleanor and Raymond Windy, Julia Sanders, Violet and Donna Nowland, and Mrs. Phillips. We spent the noon hour playing games. We all had a very happy day, and we wished Mrs. Wells many more happy birthdays.

For art this week we colored tulips and bluebirds.

The eighth grade have completed a study of Michigan government and the seventh grade have finished their history book.

Joe Windy received a prize for good lessons this week.

Rev. Robt. J. Devine has received a letter from his brother-in-law, Rev. Wm. Crook, in which he states that while in Austin, Texas, recently, he saw residents of that city wearing gas masks to protect themselves from the severe dust storms. State Senator J. W. H. H. Beck of DeKalb, a practicing physician, supplied many senators with surgical masks which were promptly donned as dust drifted through the Texas legislative halls.

Miss Marion Helwig, 20, and Miss Ina Weston, 18, both of Bad Axe, received painful injuries Friday, Apr. 12, in an automobile accident west of Bad Axe, when a car driven by Miss Weston was struck by an automobile driven by Clinton Ware of Fillion. Ware was not injured. Both cars were badly damaged. Miss Helwig is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Helwig and makes her home with her grandmother, Mrs. Henry Helwig, in Bad Axe.

The A. B. C. Sales and Service received a Ford pick-up on a trade-in Saturday, and having their garage filled, they left the pick-up standing back of the building. Sunday night, three boys appropriated the car and drove it to Gageton. On the return trip, the car was ditched and badly smashed and the youngsters were fortunate to escape without injuries. Deputy Sheriff Caldwell rounded up the trio and took them to Caro, where they are awaiting the decision of their cases in the juvenile court.

THROUGH a WOMAN'S EYES • By JEAN NEWTON

WHAT PRICE ROMANCE?

"DEAR Jean Newton: "Did you read about the man after twenty-three years in prison going back to Italy to marry his childhood sweetheart who faithfully waited for him all that time? "Who said that today romance is dead?"

I wish I could, like our reader, react only with a romantic thrill to the story of the miner who on the eve of sending for his sweetheart in the Old Country inadvertently killed a man and had to postpone his wedding twenty-three years—who now, at the age of forty-seven, is to go back to marry that faithful sweetheart.

My slant is more of the shock that may be in store for both of them when their dream of meeting comes, true.

You can see the picture in the mind of the girl who has been waiting—the picture of the brave, hopeful young emigrant going forth to battle the world and establish for her a haven of peace and security in the promised land? Let us hope that the interval has not too much altered the subject of her devotion to make possible a happy ending of the story.

The man twenty-three years in prison has had little in his mind, naturally, but the dream of the girl he left behind him. With the years that dream has remained, doubtless, of the sweet young thing, clinging to him, full of hope and faith in the goodness of life and the strength of her lover. Let us hope that he is somewhat prepared for revision of at least outward aspect of the middle-aged woman who will meet him on his return; and more important—that the things within which count most may not have changed too much with the years.

Lifelong devotion is beautiful—particularly on the part of this woman out in the world who made the sacrifice. But when it comes to romance, I'll take my chance on the couple growing old together against the reunion of sweethearts after twenty-three years.

Pre-Fabricated House of Concrete Panels

AMONG the newest developments in the attempt to transform residential construction into a mass-production industry is a pre-fabricated house of concrete panels, the first example of which has just been completed on Colesville Pike, in the outskirts of Washington, D. C. With 32 panels of concrete, each 2 inches thick, 9 feet high and from 4 to 10 feet wide, John J. Earley has assembled the walls of a five-room bungalow, for which many advantages are claimed in the way of low initial cost, low upkeep cost and permanence. The window casements are cast solidly into the panels in the course of their pre-fabrication in the factory, so that when the walls are assembled and the roof is on the workers may proceed with the interior finish regardless of exterior weather conditions. After the foundation is made, a skeleton of studding, either of wood or steel, is set on it to furnish a frame against which the panels are placed. Light reinforced concrete columns are then cast behind the joints between the panels, which are attached firmly to the columns. The panels of the average house, it is said, can be put in place in one day.

An Original Constitution Of the thirteen original states, Massachusetts alone still retains its original constitution, although amended many times. Woman Needs Less Food A woman requires only 83 per cent of the food necessary for a man, according to recent findings of the British ministry of health. Make-Up Halted Fleas Egyptian women used make-up, not to beautify themselves, but as a protection against fleas, declares a European scientist.

THE thoughts of the Christian world at the approach of Easter inevitably turn to the Holy City and the scenes of the last hours of the Savior.

Jerusalem is built on a rocky hill rising 2,500 feet above the Mediterranean. It is fourteen miles distant from the Dead sea, the waters of which in clear weather are visible from it, with behind them the somber mountains of Moab. Its name, observes a writer in the Montreal Herald, occurs first in history one of the tablets found at Tel-el-Amarna, in Egypt, the date of which is about 1400 B. C., containing a letter written by a prince ruling Jerusalem under Egyptian suzerainty. On the tablet the name is spelled Urusalem, which is believed to mean "city of security" or "peace."

The Biblical history of the city is familiar to all. Melchizedek, who blessed Abraham, appears in Genesis as "King of Salem." The second verse of the Seventy-second psalm identifies Salem and Jerusalem or Sion, but the story of Melchizedek is so obscure that no one can say when the Holy City had its beginning. Egypt held it for a time, but about 1400 B. C., the Jebusites, a tribe of Canaan, captured and held it for many years. David captured it from the Jebusites about 1000 B. C. and made it the capital of his kingdom, and there Solomon built the temple where now stands the exquisite Mosque of the Rock. Since David's time the city has changed hands 24 times, being destroyed and rebuilt almost as often. But it seems indestructible. Nebuchadnezzar may deport its people; Titus may plow its site and sow it with salt; Hadrian may efface its name by planting on its foundations the Roman colony of Aelia Capitolina; but its memory is restored, its ancient sanctuaries are adorned by new temples and still it stands.

The ancient city is a little more than a square in area. It is surrounded by a low wall, inside which things are much as they have been for hundreds of years. All around it is the new city, modern and lively, dotted here and there by the big religious and charitable foundations built during the half-century before the war by the various Christian churches. They provide some of the most conspicuous features of the landscape, such as the Russian cathedral, with its onion-shaped dome, the convent of the Mount of Olives and the barrack-like hospice of Notre Dame de France.

The Church of the Holy Sepulchre in Jerusalem.

The great interest in Jerusalem, at this holy season, is not, however, in its modern aspect, striking as it is. Unique among all cities of the world, Jerusalem is a holy city to three great faiths, Judaism, Christianity and Mohammedanism. Monuments to the great beginnings of all three are there, and now after many centuries of bitterness, all three may worship unhindered at its shrines.

To Christians, the most poignant of the many tragedies of Jerusalem is the Crucifixion of Jesus, which many believe took place nineteen hundred years ago. Reverent research has ascertained with fair certainty the scenes of the last fateful days.

In the wall of Jerusalem there is still to be seen the famous Golden Gate, through which Jesus is said to have entered on Palm Sunday, where the people shouted "Hosanna!" and flung palms in his path. It is also thought to have been the Gate Beautiful, mentioned in The Acts. The masonry is Byzantine, but it is believed to hide older work. It is kept walled up, perhaps by reason of tradition that on a certain Friday a Christian conqueror would enter by it, ending Turkish rule forever.

The first Church of the Holy Sepulchre was built, after a careful search for the true site, by Empress Helena, mother of Constantine, the first Christian emperor, and dedicated in 336. It was later destroyed by fire, as were several successors, the present building dating from 1810. The dome was completed in 1868. The present building is not large and is constructed of a red and yellow stone, something like marble. Inside, opposite the entrance, is a small door, through which one, by stooping, may enter the Holy Sepulchre. It is a small room, six feet by seven and seven and a half feet high. It is brilliantly lighted by forty-three lamps kept burning by the Roman, Greek, Armenian and Copt churches. Floors, walls and ceilings are covered with marble to protect the rock from pilgrims who might chip it.

The Garden of Gethsemane was a beautiful spot on the side of the Mount of Olives, across the Brook Kedron, to which Jesus and his disciples frequently repaired for rest and refreshment. Formerly, no doubt, much larger, it is now a plot about one hundred and ninety-five feet square. There are in it seven olive trees, the largest being about twenty-six feet in circumference. If they are not the original trees that witnessed the Agony of Jesus in the Garden, they are certainly off-shoots of them.

The chief Moslem sanctuary of Jerusalem, the Haram-es-Sherif, built on the site of the temple, can only be visited by Christians with special permission, and on certain days they are not permitted to enter it.

Sealed Golden Gate Where Christ Entered Jerusalem.

Under the Mosque of the Rock, which stands in the Haram enclosure, is shown the sacred rock where Abraham is said to have made Isaac ready for sacrifice, and there, too, is the cavern in which David is said to have prayed. There is also a round hole in the rock which is traditionally reported to have been made by Mohammed's head as he ascended to heaven.

The temple, which was begun by Herod the Great, father of the Herod who beheaded John the Baptist, was still in process of building during the life of Jesus. Its beauty and the splendor of history and religious idealism it symbolized and enshrined affected the heart of Jesus as it did every other Jew. No other city in the history of the world has gained the passionate affection of a people as has Jerusalem. Brooding over it in the last days Jesus uttered that most moving apostrophe, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets and stonest them that are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens, under her wings, and ye would not!"

Lonely John, dreaming on rocky Patmos, of a "new heaven and a new earth," instinctively thought of "the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven. . . . And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day: for there shall be no night there. And they shall bring the glory and honor of the nations into it."

Here again the Scripture speaks clearly of Jesus Christ as the "first fruits"; afterward they that are Christ's at His coming, and later the resurrection of "the rest of the dead, who lived not again for one thousand years."

The Town Hall services present an opportunity and privilege to the great body of believers who are hungry for Bible truths of a practical, prophetic and dispensational nature. All who care to take advantage of this opportunity are cordially invited to attend any evening except Saturdays at 7:45.

Erskine United Presbyterian Church—Many readers of this paper attended the service of last Sunday afternoon when a gathering that well filled this church listened attentively and with much interest to the three young men from Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill. Everyone present voiced appreciation of the messages given. Fred Morris spoke first from the text: "How Shall We Escape if We Neglect so Great a Salvation?" He was followed by Homer Emerson of Connecticut, whose text was: "Present Your Bodies, Living Sacrifices, Holy, Acceptable Unto God." John Morris brought the concluding message with a direct appeal for Christians to live the victorious life of service. It was an inspiration to see young men giving themselves so wholeheartedly to the service of the Lord, and they are only three of hundreds which this splendid college is sending out yearly with the Word of Life. Fred and Frank Morris brought a musical number and Homer Emerson a message in song.

LESSON TEXT—Luke 24:1-12; John 11:1-6.
GOLDEN TEXT—I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live.—John 11:25.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Living Again.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Living Again.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Life Here and Hereafter.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Life in the Light of Eternity.

I. God, the God of the Living (Mark 12:26, 27).

"If a man die, shall he live again?" Is an age-long question. It is affirmatively answered by both the universal human conviction and the holy Scriptures. Death does not end all. It is not a leap into the dark. It is rather the open door through which human personality enters into the light of glorious freedom. Life itself is but a training school, a preparation for the larger and higher life after death. It is in this light that Christ declares that God is the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, because he is the God of the living. Those who in their lifetime are in vital relation to Jesus Christ, the eternal Life, shall never die.

II. The Resurrection of Jesus Christ (Luke 24:1-12).

The supreme test of Christianity is the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. It matters little what Jesus said and did while alive, if his body remained in the grave. If he did not come forth in triumph from the tomb, then all his claims are false. On the other hand, if he did arise, all his claims are true.

1. The empty sepulchre (vv. 1-3).
a. The coming of the women (v. 1). As an expression of affectionate regard for the Master, they come with spices for his body.

b. What they found (vv. 2, 3). When they came to the sepulchre they found the stone had been removed, but they found not the body of Jesus. For they to have found his body in the sepulchre would have been the world's greatest tragedy. The empty tomb spoke most eloquently of the deity and power of the Son of God (Rom. 1:4).

2. The message of the men in shining garments (vv. 4-8).

a. "Why seek ye the living among the dead?" (v. 5). The angels' question has continued to reverberate through the centuries.

b. "He is not here, but is risen" (v. 6). Jesus, before he was crucified, told them that the Lord must be betrayed and crucified and that on the third day he would rise again.

3. The women witnessing to the eleven (vv. 9-11). Their thrilling testimony concerning the empty tomb and the words of the angels appeared to the apostles as idle tales.

4. Peter investigating (v. 12). While the testimony of the women seemed as idle tales, Peter was not of the temperament to lightly dismiss the matter. Therefore, he ran to the sepulchre. Upon close investigation he found the linen clothes lying in such a way as to prove the reality of the resurrection.

III. Jesus Preparing a Place in Heaven for His Own (John 14:1-3). The hopes of the disciples were utterly shattered when Jesus told them about the cross. He consoled them by pointing to the reunion in the Father's house. This he did by

1. Asking them to trust in him even as God (v. 1). Faith in the God-man, Christ, will steady the heart no matter how intense the grief nor how great the sorrow.

2. By informing them that he was going to the Father's house to prepare a home for them (v. 2). He declared that in that house there were many abiding places. Heaven is an eternal dwelling place for God's children.

3. By assuring them that he would come again and escort them to heaven (v. 3). He will come and call forth from the grave those who have died and transform living believers and take them all together to be with him forever in the heavenly home (1 Thess. 4:16, 17).

IV. Jesus Christ is the Way to the Heavenly Father (John 14:6).

In answer to Thomas' interposed doubt Jesus asserted:

1. That he is the way (v. 6). Jesus Christ is more than a mere guide to God or a teacher. He is the way itself, the very door of the sheepfold, the gateway to the tree of life.

2. The truth (v. 6). He is not merely a teacher, but the truth incarnate. In his incarnation the spiritual and material worlds were united. Therefore, every line of truth, whether spiritual or material, converges in him.

3. The life (v. 6). Christ is not merely the giver of life, but the very essence of life. Only those who receive Christ have life in the true sense.

THE LUCKY LAWRENCES

Illustrations by Irwin Myers

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—The luck that had brought the Boston Lawrences to California just as the beginning of the gold rush seems to have deserted the present generation. From a 4,000-acre ranch, their holdings have shrunk to a small farm and the old family home in Clippersville. The death of their poetic father forced the three eldest children to work so that Sam and little Ariel might continue their education. Edith, now twenty-five, had gone from high school to the iron works. Gail works in the book department of Clippersville's largest store. Besides their financial worries, seventeen-year-old Ariel is becoming more and more of a problem, and Phil is fascinated by "that terrible" Lily Cass, whose husband has deserted her. She has three little children.

CHAPTER II.—Young Van Murchison, whose family owns a chain of flour mills, returns from Yale. He and Gail had been very close friends before he went away to college and Gail now has visions of the turning of the Lawrence luck. Dick Stebbins, Phil's best friend, has the run of the house. Ariel justifies her sisters' fear by sneaking out of the house at night for joy rides. She is most detected on her return from one of them, but she hoodwinks the family and they think they have suspected her unjustly.

CHAPTER III.—Van has supper with the Lawrences, dancing later with Gail at a roadhouse. She feels she is making no progress in gaining his affections, and regretfully concludes she is not his "type of girl." Phil suggests to the girls' consternation, that they invite Lily Cass to supper. Gail and Edith feel she is not "respectable," and are in a quandary.

CHAPTER IV.—Van asks Gail to go with him for a week-end at Los Gatos with the Chipps, his uncle and aunt. Edith and Ariel disapprove because the invitation did not come from Mrs. Chipps, but Gail indulges in little deceptions, which satisfies them, and goes. She is received coldly by Mrs. Chipps and her guests. The second night the house party guests drive to a roadhouse, where there is much drinking. As Gail's party is about to leave, she glances from a window and sees reconnoitered man helping Ariel into a roadster.

CHAPTER V.—Gail hurries home the next day and asks Ariel if she knows of Mocherson's. Ariel tells her she was at the place, at night, and displays no remorse. Gail tries to have a serious talk with her next day, but Ariel is defiant. Gail is gloomy as she considers the family's outlook.

CHAPTER VI.—Gail again accompanies Van to Los Gatos for a week-end visit. She meets his mother, who is very stern. Gail overhears her referring to Van's going around "with a Clippersville girl." Angry and mortified, Gail finds an excuse to hurry back home. While the family is at dinner a policeman brings Ariel home, announcing that she has been involved in an automobile accident and that Ariel and the driver of another car in a triple smash-up are booked for manslaughter. Ariel, who was with two boy companions, both admittedly under the influence of liquor, was driving the car at the time of the accident, although she had no license.

And then Christmas was coming. Always exciting, it seemed doubly so this year. Dick was boarding with them now, for his mother had gone to Oregon to stay with a daughter newly widowed, and there were only men on the Stanislaus ranch.

"Oh, nonsense!" Gail said. She and Edith made short work of the clearing up. The short day ended with them both stretched luxuriously on Gail's bed, reading at intervals, talking desultorily, waiting for night to bring the other members of the family home.

"How long will Dick be in Los Angeles, Gail?" "Only about two weeks. It's a ship case. A great chance for him." "I think he's such a dear. I've grown awfully fond of him this fall," said Edith. "He's a darling." Ariel put her head in the door. "I've been asleep," she said, blinking. "We looked in and saw you when we came in."

"I'm going to Miss Vail's now," said Ariel, who was hatted and coated and gloved. "I'll be back early." "Dick will be gone when you come back!" "I know it. I said good-by to him." Ariel looked very pretty in her dark blue coat and snug blue hat. She came in, kissed Gail, kissed Edith. "I don't want to go!" she said, with a weary sigh. "I hate to have you," Gail said affectionately.

"Think of being eighteen tomorrow, baby. Mother's poet, eighteen." "Mother's nothing!" Ariel said bitterly. "Gail," Edith asked, when Ariel had gone, "did she get anything from Van?" "Not that she told me." "It might be delayed in the mail." "A telegram wouldn't be." "I know." There was a silence in the big, shabby, pretentiously furnished room. Gail roused herself, stiff and drowsily. "I told Dick I'd start packing his bag for the trip," she said, with an exultant rise at her heart. "We'll miss him!" Edith yawned agonizingly. Gail crossed the hall to Dick's cold big barrack of a room to find him done with his packing and ready for good-bys. He looked almost handsome—or at all events, Gail found the lean, big-featured face handsome—as he belted his coat and pulled on the new gloves that Edith had not been too self-conscious to give him, if Gail had.

"You're worrying about this case!" Edith accused him. For he seemed unusually grave. "No, yes, I'm kind of worried," Dick said. "Ariel's gone to the Vails', Dick, and Phil isn't back. Sam" Gail called. "Come out and say good-by to Dick." "I think we ought to kiss him good-by on Christmas night!" Edith said giddily, in a rare mood of daring. For answer his big-coated arm went about her, and he kissed her so heartily that she emerged breathless and protesting. Then it was Gail's turn.

The clean-shaven hard cheek was against her own, his tremendous grip lifted her, held her shoulders tight; she felt weak, helpless, she slipped in and gone to bed! She can't be at the Vails' this late." Edith came downstairs with a letter in her hand, and a whitened face. "It was on her pillow, Gail." "What?" Gail whispered. Without moving her eyes from Edith's, she tore open the sealed envelope. "She's gone!" Phil said. "Eloped with Van!" Sam suggested.

"Read it," Gail whispered, handing the written sheet to Phil. Phil read it slowly, aloud: "Gail dearest, and all of you: Forgive us. We had to do this way for reasons we'll write you. "It's always been Dick, Gail. I think Edie knew, months ago. Knew how I felt, anyway. But I never knew how he felt, until lately. "We're going to Los Angeles, and we'll be married there. I couldn't stand the gossip at home, and having no money for clothes or anything. "I've told every one that I have an aunt down South—it's true—and that I'm going to try to get into the movies. "Please tell every one that. At least, until we're married, Gail. If there is any hitch, I never can come back. But there won't be. Dick says there won't be. We'll write you everything, and where we are, and everything. "Don't tell anyone—don't tell anyone, Gail. Just tell them I'm trying to get a job in the movies, and let it go at that. If I don't make good, Dick'll bring me home. "Expect a telegram tomorrow. I do love you, Gail, and I'm sorry." It was signed "Ariel."

"My G—d! Dick Stebbins!" Phil said, in a long silence. "Gail, don't look so!" Edith said trembling, crying. "She's safe with Dick. Maybe—maybe it's the best thing that could have happened!" Gail moved her lips as if she were about to speak, swallowed, shook her head. She got up and went to the sink and took a glass of water, her back turned toward the room. When she turned about her face seemed oddly changed. It was white, it was older, somehow, and infinitely weary. Her hand wet with the cold water, she brushed her hair feverishly from her forehead; her lips were wet with water, too, as she spoke. "Well," she said quietly, in a conversational tone, her heavy brows knitted in a frown. "Well, that's that. Isn't it? That's that."

Edith and Gail had the Wilcox cottage at Carmel for two dreary August weeks. These were peaceful days—definitely happy days. "I feel as if I had gotten my soul back again," Gail said. "I never thought, somehow—I never saw myself, somehow, at twenty-six, contented to be a Clippersville old maid," she mused, as if to herself, as if thinking aloud. Edith was silent. "You don't have to be a Clippersville old maid, Gail," she said then, lightly, but with a touch of pain in her voice. "I suppose not," Gail paused in her turn. "You mean Ollie Chase?" "No, no; not that!" Gail laughed a little wearily, without much mirth. "No," she said thoughtfully. "He wasn't the sort of boy for whom one cared. But I rather went crazy that summer, Edie, and it's that that I hate to remember. "I was sick of Clippersville and poverty and dish washing, and when Van came along I sort of lost my bearings. I thought you could force your—well, your fate. Grasp what you wanted. I did everything he wanted me to do, went about with those rich people although I knew all the time I didn't belong there, and they didn't want me. And in the end, I had nothing to show for it." "As if that wasn't all natural enough, Gail, for a girl your age!" "Oh, it was natural enough. But if I didn't have much sense at twenty-three, Ariel was only a baby at seventeen. She saw me discontented and reckless. "It was half a joke for me. But it was deadly serious earnest with her. She wasn't going to be caught in the trap you and I were in—perfectly respectable, and not having any fun!" Her words carried Gail over that wearisome road her thoughts had beaten flat in the last thirty-odd months, and she could not go on. Jealousy and pain mingled together like suffocating fumes in her heart. Ariel, Dick's wife, Ariel for more than two wonderful years Dick's wife—sharing his breakfasts, meeting him at the door at night, close in his arms when fires were lighted on winter evenings, and happy on the front seat of Dick's car when summer expeditions were afoot. It wasn't fair—it wasn't fair. These agonies were routine now. She knew how long the spasm of sheer physical wretchedness would last, how long it would take her to return sane and weary to the routine of library and kitchen, Clippersville streets and the company of old books again. From Dick there had come but one brief letter, received on the New Year's day just one week after he and Ariel had gone away. Ariel was well, the letter had said, and they were to be married tomorrow. There had been delays because of residence, and other legalities; they would write full particulars in a day or so. Meanwhile the family was please not to say anything about it. And he was as ever their affectionately, Dick.

And after that the long months had spun themselves to a year, to two years, to more, and there had come no other word. Clippersville was perfectly satisfied to hear that Ariel Lawrence was staying with an aunt, down Pasadena way, and working hard to get into the movies. There was nothing to bring Dick back to the home town, with his father dead, his mother living with a widowed sister 'way up North, and the Stanislaus place rented to strangers. When Phil, only a few weeks before these happy holidays at Carmel, had told his sisters that some time this summer he was to be married to Lily Cass, widowed now, it was the usually quiet Edith who broke into tears, protest, and pleading, and the usually impetuous and proud Gail who said gently: "If you love her, Phil, Edie and I wouldn't want anyone who—who loved anyone—really truly loved her—to be unhappy."

"Gail, you're so sweet!" Phil, taken unawares, and completely disarmed, had said gratefully. "So that's the next thing we have to face!" Edith had said when the sisters were alone. "I suppose so." "I'd like to know how he thinks we're going to manage financially!" "Oh . . . Perhaps renting the corner to the gas-station people." "Which we'll never do!" Edith had said hotly. She had hesitated, surprised at the expression on Gail's face, and had added, quickly, "You wouldn't, would you, Gail?" "Well, we're getting more and more into the downtown streets, Edie. We're going to be forced out, some day. And a hundred a month is big money for that empty corner. "If Phil marries Lily," she went on, after a thoughtful interval, "I mean to act—well, with all the character—I mean with all the—well, philosophy I can scrape together. I'm going to act as if she wasn't Lily Wibser of Thomas Street hill, but Phil's wife. Not the one we would have chosen, maybe—"

"Gail, you're so wonderful!" Edith said passionately, as she paused. "I think you're the most wonderful woman alive!" "I used to think I was unusual, Edie," Gail had said in a sudden humility. "I couldn't help it—the way things went at school, the literature prizes, the grades I skipped. But if I am, what has it gotten me?" "Oh, Gail, you can't tell what's ahead! We don't know what's coming!" "I know I'm twenty-six," Gail had said seriously. To be continued.

OUR CHILD AND THE SCHOOL By Dr. ALLEN G. IRELAND Director, Physical and Health Education New Jersey State Department of Public Instruction Study Time Though the home work required by many schools is questionable, the fact remains it exists and parents should make the best of it by providing the best conditions for studying. Quiet is one essential. Shut off the radio during the study hour. If possible give the child a room to himself, and keep other children away. As the workman needs good tools, so the child needs a comfortable chair and a table of the right height. Good light is important, but this does not mean an excessively bright light. By all means avoid glare, thus the table top should not be polished and the light should be placed so that it does not shine directly into the child's eyes. The best location for the light is to the left and slightly to the rear of the child, or the right in the case of left handed children. It is desirable to have a regular time for study, and insist that the schedule be kept. But don't let it come in the child's after-school playtime. Let that be his own time. An hour or so after the evening meal is usually satisfactory. Insist upon concentration and application during study time. Discourage "fooling" and interruptions.

THE return of the vogue of mirrors is a welcome one in decoration. The reflecting of beautiful things, the opportunity to extend vistas in a home, and the chance to make dark corners become sufficiently luminous through the fortunate positioning of looking glasses, are some of the advantages that following this fashion permits. The choice of a good reflecting surface in a mirror becomes a matter of importance if we are to make the most of this decorative opportunity.

Three points should be remembered especially in selecting a mirror. First, is its correct color reflection; second, is its flawless condition; and third, is the thickness of the glass.

Color Considerations.

Color in mirrors is of prime importance since without its being neutral it cannot give back the true reflections except in form and size. The glass must be so treated that it reproduces color correctly. A poor mirror is apt to gray color down. Old mirrors may lose none of their value by this grayish or slightly blue tint, because this is one of their characteristics. But, with improvements in the making of mirrors this feature has been overcome. Today we need not have this trait. We can get things reflected as they are. Or we can have them given a slightly rosy hue. For instance the mirrors in dressing rooms of hotels, and especially those in beauty parlors are apt to have this bluish rose tone. It is flattering to the complexion. Mirrors in some dressers and bureaus in chamber sets have this flattering tone. It certainly is preferable to see oneself appear with a suggestion of pink rather than with a bluish pallor. But best of all is it to see oneself as one is really.

For the reflected truth of a mirror the quality of the glass is responsible as well as the mercurial chemical treatment of the back. A heavy plate glass free from flaws and blemishes and pure as crystal makes for perfection. Flaws are not difficult to discern if the glass is carefully scrutinized.

Testing a Mirror.

The way to test a mirror for quality of thickness of glass and color tones is to press a finger against the glass. If the color of the finger and the color of the reflection are identical, the mirror is A-1 in that particular. If the reflection is bluish, the mirror would prove unsatisfactory. If, on the other hand the reflection has a suggestion of rose, the fault is in the right direction, although not perfect.

The distance between the finger tip and its reflection gives the thickness of the glass. If fingers seem to meet, the glass is very thin. If there is considerable space between finger tips the glass qualifies in this point of excellence.

SELECTING FOOD NO SIMPLE TASK

Choose Intelligently to Get Vitamin Supply.

By EDITH M. BARBER

NATURE offers man every essential for growth, development and maintenance throughout life. As man cannot live without air he is automatically supplied with the oxygen he needs. For the other essentials, however, he may exercise his prerogative of choice. His instinct of hunger makes him demand food enough to fill his stomach and thus obtain almost automatically some of the food essentials.

To make the most out of his life, however, he must choose his food with intelligence; otherwise, he may lack essential minerals and vitamins which, although minute in quantity, are most important. He must even go outside the natural food realm for an adequate amount of Vitamin D, which is to be found only in butter, full cream cheese, whole milk and eggs. Even in these foods it may vary enormously, because its presence depends upon the amount of sunshine which the animals producing these materials have encountered.

In a natural state primitive man was supplied with vitamin D, because he spent most of his life in the open. Today man must add vitamin D in the form of cod liver oil or halibut liver oil, which although technically foods are usually taken for medicinal reasons.

Instead of using cod liver oil or halibut liver oil, he may now get the vitamin D he needs from a number of irradiated foods. The list of foods which have been irradiated each year has been increasing. There is now one bread, several cereals, some milk, some dehydrated vegetables and pureed vegetables, an infant food, a chocolate malt drink and two yeasts, besides several cod liver, haliver oil and malt products. Cod liver oil and haliver oil although containing a large amount of both vitamins A and D are irradiated in order to give a concentrate of vitamin D which sometimes is needed, for the children.

EASTER, PAGAN HOLIDAY

PROPERLY, Easter is a pagan holiday. It antedates Christianity itself, writes G. R. Turner, in the Kansas City Times. Its name is derived from "Eastre," the ancient Anglo-Saxon goddess of spring, in whose honor the ancients observed a festival in the month of April. Christians however were early in detecting a parallel between the beautiful awakening of the earth after the winter's slumber and the story of the Resurrection of Christ. With the exception of religious services, Christianity has originated none of the atmosphere associated with Easter. Eggs, rabbits and fashion parade were highlights of the pagan Easter.

IF CHRISTMAS is the greatest day in the year for children, Easter holds a similar position for the adult members of the race.

The oldest records of history tell that Easter was always a religious festival, though far more ancient than Christianity. Bonfires were kindled in Rome and the sacred fire in the temple of Vesta was renewed on the 1st of March each year. Similar customs prevailed in Germany and England. These customs lingered in certain parts of the British Isles into the Nineteenth century. In Scotland they were called the Need Fires, which were produced by the friction of two pieces of wood, which created the flame. This was quite a religious ceremony, and was accompanied by singing, dancing and the Beltane games. The Beltane cakes were precursors of Easter cakes, a survival of which is still with us in hot cross buns.

The music of Easter is generally of a more advanced character than that of Christmas. Carols predominate at the Christmas festival, but there are few carols at Easter, where the music is more in keeping with the Resurrection and Ascension of Christ.

Easter has probably had greater influence in the development of music than any other period of the year. The Council of Trent assembled at this season in 1562, when the great reformation in church music took place. Composers of this time had introduced profane melodies as the principal theme in the masses, and all kinds of ornamentation of an unsuitable character. The council swept the whole system from the church, and commissioned Palestrina to write suitable music for service. He did this, and has since often been referred to as the saviour of church music.

It was the story of the Resurrection of Christ that inspired Schultze to write the first oratorio on that subject. He wrote "The Passion," according to the four Evangelists, and "The Seven Last Words," and history accords to him the title of "The Father of Oratorio."

What would Handel have done without Easter? "The Messiah" stands out as his greatest effort, and there is no composition, even today, which has as great an influence on the people as this oratorio.

The Resurrection of Christ has inspired more lofty thoughts and aspirations in poets, painters and composers than any other subject, and has produced greater works. After the long, cold winter days we are waiting to welcome the Easter sun, so we may join in greeting as we sing,

"Christ the Lord is risen today, Alleluia."
