Despite early indications the Senate, because of the verbal barrass him by approving the $25,- Jane Martin. 000,000 school-aid bill, a compromise figure is being worked on. The administration has insisted that $20,000,000 state participation is sufficient to make up the $68,-000,000 a year, claimed by the school lobby, to be necessary. Under the compromise agreement being considered a sum of $28,000,taxation with the legislature appropriating $40,000,000, minus the primary school fund, delinquent tax

Indian Medicines

In general, the tribes of Indians show many similarities in regard to medicine, but the actual agents employed by them differ with the tribes and localities, as well as with the individual healers, says a writer in the Washington Star. Magic, prayers, songs, exhortations, suggestions, ceremonies, fetishes and certain specific and mechanical processes are employed only by the medicine men or medicine women; other specific remedies or procedures are proprietary, generally among a few old women in the tribe, while many vegetal remedies and simple manipulations are of common knowledge in a given lo-

CRIMEAN COAST IS SOVIET PLAYGROUND

Former Watering Place of Imperial Russia.

Washington.-The Crimean coast, playground of royalty, has become the most popular vacation land in Soviet Russia. It is the Soviet Riviera. Along the southeast coast high mountains slope steeply to the shores of the Black sea. Rough children of Saginaw were callers peaks of the Yailadagh protect these shores from northern winds that spend the day with relatives in De- sweep over the inland steppes. "Yalta with its broad promenade, wide bathing beach, and gay cafes was the most fashionable watering place of imperial Russia. The sea baths, sun baths, and mud baths that attracted Petrograd nobility now are in even greater demand through the energetic Soviet campaign for public health. High mountains surround the resort on three sides, making it a favorite center onix combined.

Woman Angler Has Novel Alibi for Lack of Luck

Yellowstone Park, Wyo.-Here's a novel alibi for fisherman's lack of luck. A woman angler, returning from an afternoon on Yellowstone lake, complained about her luck to Jack Cronie, superintendent at the boat dock. "What was the matter, didn't they bite?" inquired Cronie. "Oh, yes, they bit all right, but I had to throw them back." "Were they too small?"

"No, but they were alive," answered the luckless feminine angler. The veteran guide explained that of course they'd be alive. "But I didn't have any place to keep live fish, so I had to throw them back," was the final plaint.

SEASONING AND FLAVORING

THE most delightful dish other-I wise, may be ruined by the addition of a bit too much or too little of just the right seasoning or flavor. Browning was not using it in this connection, but how well the couplet expresses just the idea of well-seasoned foods:

Oh, the little more and how much And the little less, and what worlds away!

Success in cookery depends upon the nice taste of the cook in the adding of seasoning, spice or flavoring, without which the food is zestless and flat. Here are a few hints gleaned from various sources which will be suggestive when serving these familiar dishes. A mere trace of nutmeg added to fresh lima beans improves them. A trifle more may be added to the dry ones. Add a small piece of mace to panned or creamed oysters. Remove it before serving. Add both ginger and mustard in Boston baked beans. Ginger for zest, mustard for flavor. The ginger takes the place of pep-

Drop a small piece of cinnamon in the oatmeal while cooking. Remove this so that no one will discover what makes it taste so good. Add a bit of grated lemon rind to the mush that is to be fried for makes a most delectable navor; add it to a spiced cake or currant or raisin loaf flavored with lemon ex-

A small bit of sugar, half a teaspoonful or less added to vegetables while cooking will improve the flavor, also it improves soups, roasts are given a more appetizing brown. A pinch of salt improves almost any food, custard, applesauce, and other stewed fruits. Add a few grains of salt to cocoa, coffee and chocolate for cake filling, to fudge and to icing as well as all forms of candy. When butter is not used more salt will be needed. Adding salt to cooked fruits will save on sugar, for salt brings out sweetness.

Ophir Ophir was a seaport or region from which the Hebrews in the time of Solomon obtained gold. The precise geographical situation has long been a subject of doubt and discussion. It was probably in India or perhaps southern Arabia; at any rate, it appears from scriptural mention of the place that it was on the Red sea.

Island of Monte Cristo The Island of Monte Cristo, scene of the hidden treasure found by Edmond Dantes, one of Alexander Dumas' outstanding heroes, lies midway between Corsica and Italy, to the south of the Island of Elba, home of Emperor Napoleon I during the period of his first banishment from France.

Ohio was settled soon after the Revolutionary war, which made "the West" a part of the new republic. The first permanent settlement was established at Marietta by a land company. This was called the Ohio company, and was formed in 1787 in New England by Revolutionary officers, with a view to opening up the West. The government sold the company 1,500,000 acres, and the company recruited settlers and resold to them. In the winter of 1787-88 the first party set out from the east and arrived April 7, 1788, at the spot chosen for a town, at the junction of the Muskingum and Ohio rivers.

Falling Objects

All objects falling through a complete vacuum fall at the same rate of speed regardless of weight or size. But in the atmosphere falling objects meet with air resistance which depends on size and shape of the object falling. If the two balls are of the same material the smaller one would fall accessible by water from the towns | slightly faster because there would be less surface to offer resistance. -Pathfinder Magazine.

When Mother Stays in Bed by Lawrence Hawthorne When Mother has a real bad cold Or isn't feelin' very well, An' Daddy makes 'er stay in bed, It certainly is hard t' tell What we're supposed t' wear t' school, Or when it's time for us t' go, Or if we've got our books an' things; Our Daddy doesn't seem t' know! An' when it comes t' breakfast-Gee There doesn't seem t' be a bite For us t' eat! But Daddy says That everything will be all right! He tells us that he learned t' cook When he was just a little kid, 'when his mother wasn't well That's only part o' what he did. But, if he learned, he soon forgot, 'Cause all the toast is hard an' black, An' every egg busts right in two When Daddy flops it on its back. But I feel kind o' sorry then, Because he does the best he can— And, anyhow, a cookin' job Don't look so easy for a man. No sir, it ain't a bit o' fun When Mother isn't well an' strong, An' everything we try t' do Gets all mixed-up an' turns out wrong; But when she comes downstairs again It doesn't take her long t' see What should be done, an' very soon She's got things like they oughter be!

Despite all precautions for safety provided by the recently created safety division of the State Highway department, the State Police, the Automobile club of Michigan, the Conserva-tion department and other agencies, our great network of highways will still be the scene of needless death and destruction, due to carelessness and heedlessness on the part of both drivers and pedestrians.

"That Michigan should have an average of three automobile deaths every day of the year, that in the United States there is one person killed by an automobile every 15 minutes of every day, calls for more than a casual observance of Safety Education Week. It calls for a general attitude of highway courtesy and consideration on the part of everyone to result in our mutual protection." "White crosses marking the

Village in a Crater

One of the queerest of all islands is the tiny island of Saba in the Dutch West Indies, the remains of an old volcano. The cliffs rise sheer to 800 feet, ascended by a staircase cut in the rocks. At the top one looks down into the crater of the old volcano, and in the crater, a tiny Dutch town where they build boats although there isn't a tree on the island.

Lesson for May 12 THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

LESSON-TEXT-Ephesians 4:1-7, 11-16; Acts 2:41-45.
GOLDEN TEXT—So we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another.

Romans 12:5.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Going to God's JUNIOR TOPIC-What a Church

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What the Church Is For.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC-The Nature and Work of the

I. What It Is (Eph. 33-6).

It is the body of redeemed men and women of Jews and Gentiles called out from the world, regenerated and united to Jesus Christ as head and to each other by the Holy Spirit (I Cor. 12:13). 1. It was unknown in Old Testament times (Eph. 3:5, 6).

2. It was predicted by Christ (Matt. 16:18). Shortly before Christ went to the cross he spoke of the Church as still in the future. He said "I will build my church."

3. It came into being at Pentecost (Acts 2).

II. Christ Is the Head of the Church (Eph. 1:22, 23). Jesus Christ is to the what the head is to the human body. He is so vitally its head as to direct all of its activities. III. The Unity of the Church

(Eph. 4:4-6). Having in verses 1-3 of this chapter set forth the virtues necessary for the realization and maintenance of unity in the Church, in verses 4-6 he sets down the fundamental unities which make unity of the

1. One body (v. 4). Since all believers have been united to Christ by faith, they are members of the one body of which he is the head.

2. One Spirit (v. 4). This is the Holy Spirit. He is the agent of regeneration and the baptizer into the one body and is the animating life uniting the believers to Christ and to one another.

3. One hope (v. 4). Completed redemption at the coming of the Lord is the Christian's hope.

4. One Lord (v. 5). The one ruler of the Church is the Lord Jesus Christ.

5. One faith (v. 5). This faith is the one doctrine which centers in Christ and the one instrument which unites the believer to Christ.

6. One baptism (v. 5). This means the baptism of the Holy Spirit-that sovereign act of the Spirit which unites believers to Jesus Christ as head and to each other as members of his body.

One God and Father of This is the almighty Creator and Sustainer of the universe. IV. How the Church Grows (Eph. 4:11-16). It is through the ministry of certain officials having the gift of the Spirit.

1. Gifts bestowed upon the Church (v. 11).

a. Apostles. These were appointed by Christ to superintend the preaching of the gospel in all the world and the creation of an authoritative body of teaching, the Scrip-

b. Prophets. These ministers were given for the expounding of the

c. Evangelists. These seem to have been traveling missionaries.

d. Pastors and teachers. The pastor was a shepherd-teacher, the two functions inherent in the one

2. The object of the ministry of the Church (v. 12).

a. "Perfecting of the saints." Perfecting means the mending of that which has been rent; the adjusting of something dislocated.

b. "For the work of the ministry. (v. 12). The perfecting of the saints has as its object the qualification to render efficient service.

c. "Edifying of the body of Christ." Edify means to build up. 3. The duration of the Church's ministry (v. 13). It is to continue

a. There is unity of faith.

b. We come into the knowledge of the Son of God. Unity of faith can only be realized when the members of the Church come to know Jesus Christ as the very Son of

c. A perfect man, which is the measure of the stature of Christ.

4. The blessed issue of the ministry of the Church (vv. 14-16).

a. Not tossed to and fro and carried about by every wind of doctrine (v. 14). Knowledge of Christ as the very Son of God is the sure defense against the efforts of cunning men.

b. Speaking the truth in love (vv. 15, 16). Holding the truth of Jesus Christ as the Son of God in the spirit of sincerity and love will issue in the symmetrical development of believers, causing them to grow up in him as head.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

WHEN a homemaker requires assistance with her work, she opportunity for preference about what that help shall be. Whatever will relieve her most is what she should choose. It may be that the homemaker is strong and well, but finds more work to do than can be accomplished by one pair of hands. Let us consider that she likes to clean her rooms and has sufficient strength.

What she may need, then, may be to have the washing and ironing done. These are time consuming jobs To be released from them allows the home maker two extra days a week, more or less, according to the amount of laundry work her family needs. Many a homemaker has to be relieved of the work of laundering flat work even when she can manage to do the rest of the washing and ironing, or at least the rest of the ironing when the clothes require only finishing, having been washed by some one else.

Sewing.

It may be that the homemaker finds sewing nervous work, and she would rather be relieved of this, even though it is not physically to be nervously tired as physically weary. When the homemaker is one who finds sewing a strain, she is wise to have help in this work. Those who find sewing a relief from more strenuous housework, can scarcely appreciate the need of help in this work. Help with the harder tasks would seem to be more suitable, but it is for the homemaker to decide what it is that she, herself, craves to be relieved of.

There are homemakers who want above everything else to be relieved of the daily routine of ordinary household tasks. Such women may find laundry work and cleaning they can get done without any difficulty. But the continual round of washing dishes, daily dusting, chamber work and those small tasks which most housewives find not at all hard, these homemakers find irritating. Then, if possible, help should be had for these tasks. There are women who can be had to come in each day and do just such work.

Help Most Needed.

It is what the homemaker wants Life." most that should determine the kind | Christian Church." of help she should get. But first know whether better planning would not save her the expense of a hired helper. Then she should realize her own strength and appreciate that if this is not great, to save herself she requires aid in physically wearying labor. It is when work is too much for one person that choice is widest in the type to get. Such a homemaker may be in perfect health, but pressed for time. Whatever help releases the most hours and minutes is her especial need.

It is a recognized fact that homemakers have different methods of accomplishing the same results. Nor is this confined to those who do housework. There are endless singing methods, accounting methods, bookkeeping methods, etc. Since there are so many different kinds of work in this business of homemaking and each kind has many good methods of accomplishment, it is a mistake to expect all members of a family to follow any one Willing Workers.

To relieve friction and continue to have willing and helpful hands in a family it is important that no one insists on a pet method being followed. Even the mother, who has carefully trained her daughters in certain methods, finds, when they are no longer little girls, that their individuality asserts itself in a desire and often a pronounced determination to follow their own methods. This may be because one has noticed other ways of doing things in the homes of her friends, and she feels that these are better than those she learned. Or it may be that she has thought out her own methods and wants to demonstrate their good points. Or it may be a reaction against home rules.

THIS WAY LIES DISASTER.

Excessive Federal restrictions, unregulated competition, the depression, have had their way with America's railroads.

Loday the public views the plight of the lines with awakening understanding and broadening concern, and there is growing alarm that close by may be stalking the ominous specter of government ownership.

Disastrous as would be federal usurpation of rail control, might it not be the signal for that final economic calamitythe socialization of all industries?

Under present policies and conditions could government have done better with the railroads than has private management? Could government, in the future, do as well?

Memories of America's War-Era rail management are too fresh, too painful; the strangely similar results of like policies in other countries are too current, too repugnant to blind the thinking to government ownership's deficiencies and undesirabilities.

Simple sanity in transportation policies will solve the railroads' problems, while their seizure will only breach the walls which guard private industrial initiative against all-engulfing socialization.

Michigan's delegation in Congress should so be advised.

CHAPTER X

SO CAME Clippersville to be proud of another Lucky Lawrence. A thousand pleasant little episodes, as the summer wore along, told Gail ithat she was famous and that her friends and neighbors were glad. The Challenge ran her picture with a flattering article. Patrons of the old library, coming and going in the hot afternoons, smiled at her over the broad desk top. "Tickled to death to hear we have an authoress!" the women whispered, nodding and smiling. Gail would flush brightly, joyfully, in return. If Lily telephoned her, and she had to stop in the market, she saw the market or the fruit store or the five-and-ten with new eyes. Their wilted wares, their wearied salesfolks, their anxious bargainers were newly dramatic. When some shabby woman from Thomas Street hill, with a fat, drooling baby on her arm, and another stumbling and whining at her knee, priced the pork chops, priced the chopped beef, looked worried from one to the other, Gail felt her heart go out on a rush of love and sympathy for all poverty-all motherhood. She did not know why.

She had letters from persons, far-away, unknown persons, praising her story when it was published. Gail answered them simply, unable to believe the words that flowed from her fountain pen. She could presently write:

"If you liked 'Simply Impossible," I hope you will like 'Post Office Closed Tomorrow.' It is coming out very soon in some magazine."

The great Barnes Rutherford, ill, idling in a palace on the Maine coast, wrote her. He, sixty-five, the dean of the greatest profession of all, could find time to write to a little Clippersville girl, and tell her he thought "Simply Impossible" was a good story!

Even more touching were the literary folk of Clippersville. It had so many! Wistful, discarded men and women, living in shabby little gas-lighted cottages smothered in dusty vines, suddenly appeared on all sides, and proudly claimed kinship with the writer. Gail accepted their condescensions graciously: she knew that she was not of their ilk.

Miss Libby Gatty had sold a story to the Black Cat twenty-five years ago; a story that one of the judges had thought deserved first prize. Miss Lou Bennett had known Edward Townsend, who wrote the Chimmie Fadden stories, when she had been in New York with her uncle in 1897, and had met Archibald Clavering Gunter.

"Oh, my uncle knew everybody!" said Miss Lou, tossing her withered head, growing splotchy in the face at the mere exciting memory. "He knew Frank Munsey; he knew everybody!"

Then there were the poets, most of them women. They tremblingly brought out for Gail's inspection their hoarded clippings, discolored strips of newspaper or magazine pages. Mrs. Jadwin, who ran a boarding house down by the flour mills, had once won a twenty-fivedollar prize for a poem called "Cloud Voices."

"Oh, my dear!" said Hatty Schenck, who wrote women's club news for the newspapers all over the state, and nature poems beginning "Hail!" and whose pen name was "Lillian Lynne." "Oh, my dear, is there any moment in the world like the one when you know you're getting it, you're in the mood? For, you know, I can't always write," Hatty rushed on. "Sometimes . . .'

There were times when she just felt dull and blank, as if she'd never written a line. And then, suddenly, perhaps when she was in the kitchen with Mamma . .

"Oh, I know!" Gail would sympathize, with dancing eyes.

And all the time, deep within her, she knew that she and Hatty were not alike. She knew that she could lean down to Hatty, but that Hatty could never reach up to her. It made her humble, and sometimes, when it came to her with a fresh pang of realization that only Edith could have shared all this truly that only Edith would have appreciated it-indeed, that she owed much of it to the poem-loving, bookloving, truth-loving little sistershe felt a deeper sorrow even than the younger sorrow had been.

"I can kinder tell by your eyes when you're thinking of your sister," Lily said once.

"Edith?"

"Well, I was thinking of Ariel, then."

Gail always spoke "Ariel . the name on a long sigh. "She—she couldn't wait," she would muse aloud sorrowfully. "Doesn't it seem funny, Lily, for a person to go away-just as if she had died and never to write-never to send any word?"

"She may have a houseful of kids by now," Lily, whose mind rather dwelt upon this subject, might sug-"Even if she had-!"

"Did you like Richard Stebbins, A quick twist at her heart. A quick memory of a man's ugly, fine face and slow smile. But Gail's voice would come quietly enough. "Oh, very much

"Even if I could account for Ariel, I couldn't account for him, she said once.

"Every family has some member in it that acts that way," Lily generalized shrewdly.

In September Lily's daughter was born. Gail carried the newcomer down through the big open house to the kitchen, where she tremblingly wiped and oiled the mottled, writhing, weeping little scrap of womanhood.

"God grant that I don't hurt you, baby!" said the Second Gail Law rence to the Third, aloud.

The baby did not die under her ministrations, anyway. She whimpered, as her waving saffron arms were introduced into the microscopic shirt, but when Phil and Lily's mother came down, hot and anxious, half an hour later, the little Gail was sound asleep in her namesake's arms.

"She's real pretty, Phil!" said the grandmother, proudly.

"Is she?" "Well, she's jest as cute's she can be. I don't know's Lily's ever had a better-lookin' baby. She's got the Lawrence look, all right."

"Look at the Lawrence eyebrows, Phil." "Gee, she's sleeping hard," Phil observed, in a half-amused, halfresentful tone. "Lily all right?"

"I suppose so!" he muttered discontentedly. 'My G-d!" he said, under his breath. He went to sit on the doorsill his chin in his hands, elbows resting on knees. There was the silence of a dreaming autumn Sunday afternoon in the house that had been ringing with agony for the last endless hour. Old Mrs. Crowley went through the room with an unsightly bundle of linen. She lingered on her way to the laundry tubs to smile at the youngest Lawrence.

"She looks kinder mad at the way she was treated-yes, she does! She says, 'Why did ye yank me round that way, and spank me good, when I ain't done nothing!" crooned the toothless old washwoman. "How do. Mis' Wibser, How's all your folks?"

"All real well, thanks, Mis' Crowley. How's Hazel?" "Hazel had a bad spell last Sunday-'twas a week ago.' "You'd oughter be glad you don't have to have 'em!" Mrs. Wibser said to Phil's still bowed and horrified back in the doorway. She chuckled. "Look at her sleep-the darling,"

Gail murmured.

"I always say that if the men had to have 'em every other time, there'd only be two babies, his and then hers, and then no more!" old Mrs. Crowley said with relish.

"Baby?" asked Riff-raff, at Gail's knee, with a solemn upward glance.

"Your baby sister." "Mrs. Lawrence," Betty Crooks, sailing into the room in all her formal nurse's regalia, said authoritatively, "Mrs. Lawrence wants some one to go over to the Williamses' for the other children, and she said to tell you, Mr. Lawrence, that she feels fine and wants some tea!"

"Tea!" Phil echoed, outraged. "Certainly. She feels fine, only she's sleepy. And she can have some tea before she goes off to sleep. Say," said Betty, who had been in school with Phil and Gail, "you aren't too tired to go up there and see her a minute?"

"Too tired, no!" Phil said dazedly. "But-but she doesn't want-you heard her—she feels as if I was to blame-"

"Oh, for goodness' sake, that was just at the finish!" Betty said, wholesomely. "You go up and see her, and tell her I'm bringing up some tea!"

Phil, with one wild glance about, fled to the accompaniment of women's laughter.

"You're going to be lucky," Gail murmured to the child. "The girl that is born on the Sabbath day is wise and lucky and good and

The little warm, pulpy hand held tightly, confidingly, to her finger. It seemed gripped already about her heart. There was a smell of household oils, of clean new flannels, of sweet baby dampness. The baby seemed to sag limply against her

"You look like you could sit there forever, holdin' that child, Gail!" "I feel as if I never wanted to let her go, Mrs. Wibser."

"They won't do that with every one," Mrs. Wibser said-"lay so quiet, and act so good! I'll bet you're goin' to think a sight of that

"I'll bet I am," Gail said seriously. "Well," said the old woman to her granddaughter, "you've started on a hard journey, young lady! Some day," she added to Gail, "some day she'll be tellin' folks, 'Why, yes, I was born in a place called Clippersville, California.' Ain't that funny?" "Maybe life is just a succession of births," Gail thought.

"If they take 'The Bells of Saint Giles," she mused, "I'll go to New York for a visit."

A little laugh broke over the new baby's head. Gail's novel was barely begun; she did not know that it would ever be a novel. But still she thought: "If they really do take 'The Bells of St. Giles,' I'll go to New York."

She loved to hold the baby at this time of the day, and when Lily was downstairs again and autumn was deenening, darkening into winter, five o'clock often found Gail, with her little namesake in her arms, rocking, gossiping in the old kitchen, while Lily bustled about the dinner-getting, and the little boys stuffed themselves on fresh-cut bread and peanut butter at the table.

The days grew shorer; it was dark now when Gail came home from the library at five o'clock. As she sat cuddling the baby she could see the oak branches tossing in the dusk of the yard and the leaves scurrying down. The snap of the wood in the old French range and the smell of toast and tea were very grateful now; there was a sense of coziness, of homeness about it.

At this hour she would often fall to dreaming. It was an hour in which to remember Edith, talking eagerly of poetry, of drama, of utopias and philanthropy, as she buttered pudding dishes and peeled apples-an hour that brought back Ariel, spoiled, petulant, beautiful, always to be excused and adored by her sisters. Ariel, willful and discontented, scolding, raging, threatening, and presently to be whisked, limping and pitiful, upstairs to be comforted and sponged and soothed to sleep.

Above all, in the winter twilights, with the soft lump of babyhood that was another Gail Lawrence in her arms Gail dreamed of Dick and of the brief moment of romance that had somehow seemed to give her true values in life. She had been playing, playing idly and superficially, with Van Murchison, and she had awakened to the full realization of what her heart needed. what her heart could give, just a moment too late.

It had been Ariel, all the time. for big, sober, quiet Dick. He had never seen Gail; she had never tried to help him find her.

But she knew in her heart, that she could have given him a thousand times what Ariel could give. Ariel must be changed indeed if she had become a helpful, tender mate for a struggling lawyer. Her restlessness, her haughty discontent, would not be cured by anything that Dick could provide for her. Ariel's ideal was not one of home making, of quiet and domesticity beside a Hollywood—supposing them still to be in that neighborhoodwould only inflame Ariel with a desire for luxury, fame, money. It was almost three years now since the memorable Christmas day before Ariel's eighteenth birthday, when she and Dick had run away from them all. Gail had had two communications from her since; the first was the scribbled note she had left in her deserted bedroom, the note they had all read with such amazement, and consternation; and the second had come a few months after Edith's death, and had been postmarked Phoenix, Arizona: "Gail, dear, I am so horribly sorry about darling Ede, but Gail she was happy. She was too good for this world and only would have had trouble and disappointment. I am well and so is Dick, and we are coming home soon to tell you all the news, so no more now except that I adore von."

It had been signed simply "Ariel," and had borne neither date nor address. One day Gail had driven Phil's car, full of small boys, out to the Stanislaus ranch. It was prosperous now, and the Lawrence's money troubles, preposterous and unexpected as the situation seemed, were over. Phil was doing well, Gail had had a raise, the oil station paid its hundred a month faithfully, and that money Phil handed over untouched to his sister.

The remains of the once magnificent Lawrence estate were divided: the old house was Phil's, the corner had been surveyed and measured and given to Gail, the Stanislaus property was wholly for Sam the bank in Ariel's maiden name.

Sam paid his board to Lilv. Gail looked at the old ranch wistfully. She had dreamed once a brief dream of coming there with Dick, of being mistress of these acres of orchard and pasture and wheat for the new novels. And on Sundays they would nave telephoned Phil and Lily to ask what the chances were of a picnic up at the old dam. It was going to be hot today, and the children would love to get near to the water. Gail had cold chicken and tomatoes. If Lily would stop for cake somewhere. "I might have had a boy and a girl by this time. But certainly I wouldn't have had time for any writing. There's that to think about! Dick, I'd give up the chance of writing another Iliad to have had you love me, to have been Mrs. Dick Stebbins these three years."

Gail was twenty-seven now, and the birthdays were coming faster and faster. Men had wanted her, some of them fine men, men who could have given her at least the position Dick's wife would have had. But Gail was barely conscious of their existence. She was only vaguely regretful when she had to hurt or disappoint them.

It just did not seem to mean anything, marrying anyone else than Dick, and until it did, Gail would not consider it.

But sometimes she did consider the strangeness of the situation should Dick and Ariel come back to Clippersville. They would never know that this brother-in-law was shrined deep in Gail's heart. They need never know. But it would be hard-it would be hard to see him, to have him kiss her in fraternal fashion, to hear Ariel complaining of his treatment of his new clothes and of the care of his children!

Once, after Edith's death, Gail had written a simple, friendly letter to Dick's mother, trusting the post office to forward it to her in Oregon, where she lived now with a widowed daughter. Did Mrs. Stebbins know just where Dick was now? Gail had asked. She, Gail, had a book that he had wantedand so on-and so on.

And Mrs. Stebbins had answered, in a painful hand, on ruled paper, that Dick was just about the worst letter writer that ever was; he had been some in L. A. and after that up to Las Vegas, and last she heard he was in Phoenix for three weeks, but he was coming home, according to what he wrote, and just as soon as he did Mrs. Stebbins would see he wrote Gail. Seemed like he had lost sight of his old friends.

There was no mention of Ariel or Dick's marriage in either letter. Gail had not dared risk the secret, and either Mrs. Stebbins had been equally cautious, or Dick had not taken his mother into his confidence. Gail suspected, as the months wore along, that there was but one adequate explanation of Dick's and Ariel's silence. They were not happy; the impulsive marriage that had found her so young had proved a mistake. They were quarreling, perhaps already separated. The secret would remain always a secret -no one would ever know. And perhaps Ariel would come home some day, bitter and disillusioned, and take her old unhappy place in Clippersville society.

"Poor Ariel, poor Dick, poor all of us!" Gail would think, "It's hard to clasp air and kiss the wind forever! I can be a writer, I suppose, I certainly mean to make myself one, if work and trying will do it. But it would have been wonderfulwonderful, to be a wife!"

A Code for Child Health

While the industrial codes we read about may come and go, be popular or unpopular, a code for child health will always be a requisite of successful parenthood. Let us review the elements out of which such a code should be made. I believe most parents would list and roll each ball until well covfirst: the quart of milk daily, taken in different forms; two or more vegetables, with at least one the green leafy variety daily; some fresh fruit; meat, fish and eggs; and bread and butter. The amount of sleep is important; restful, quiet sleep. The and Ariel. Rent went monthly into young child should have an aftermoon rest in addition. Fresh air and sunshine must be in the health budget in liberal allotments. And the diminished sunshine of winter calls for one of the fish liver oils as a regular item in the code.

Be sure that the child's right to playtime is honored. Let nothing interfere with this natural heri-

DISHES FAVORED IN SCANDINAVIA

Interesting Menus That Appeal to Hardy Norsemen.

By EDITH M. BARBER

A LL over our country we can find restaurants which offer little adventures to those of us who are interested in the food customs of various countries. Today, I shall take you for a visit to Scandinavia. There are restaurants where you may dine as well as you would in Norway, Sweden or Denmark, where the food customs are much the same.

Scandinavian food is particularly interesting. The outstanding note is the enormous table called the smorgasbord, where you will find dozens of appetizers arranged most attractively with regard to contrast in both appearance and flavor. You begin your meal by making a trip to the table and filling your plate to overflowing from the many cold and hot dishes which are designed to give you an appetite for the rest of the meal. Remember that there is a large meal to come and do not be tempted to indulge too heavily in the smoked and pickled herring the sardines, the anchovies, the cold meat, the cheese, the shrimps, the smoked eels, the salads, the pickles, the olives, the radishes, the celery the hot fish custard and the other hot meat dishes. On some of the more elaborate smorgasbords you may even find a cold pheasant in the center. At the table when you have finished the smorgasbord, you will be served with soup, with fish and with meat, for which I suggest Swedish meat balls with their sour cream sauce or beef Lindstrom. You will have potatoes with both the meat and fish courses. Stewed preisselbeeren, those tiny, cranberry-like berries, will be sure to appear with the meat course or as a sauce with the dessert. Soft, rye bread, the firmer black bread and the crisp rye cracker-like bread will be sure to appear throughout the meal. Of course, there will be coffee which all Scandinavians demand and make so well. The meal may end with Swedish punch, a sweet strong liqueur. In the Scandinavian countries schnapps will be served instead of cocktails before the meal. beer with the smorgasbord and wine with the main course. At home in the Scandinavian countries you will find the smorgasbord in a much less elaborate form appearing at breakfast as well as at the main meal. As you have probably gathered, food is an important item in Scandina-

As a result of his address over the radio early this week in which he branded his opponents in the legislature as "clown acrobats," open warfare now exists between Gov. Fitzgerald and the controlling factions in both houses. The gubernatorial blast has definitely alienated the so-called insurgent republicans and recrimination in the form of defeat of the remnants of the administration program is The governor's caustic remarks came on the heels of the Senate's director bill which, in its original form as substituted by the administration, would have placed the governor in absolute control of all state revenues. The executive charged the republican senators, under the proported guidance of Lieut.-Gov. Thomas Read, with having "sold out" their party for the promise of jobs from certain democratic-controlled departments. The address has been received with mingled reaction. Supporters of the governor heartily approve of his method of going direct to the people and explaining to them the underlying causes of these abortive thrusts at his program. On the other hand, the anti-group regards the radio talk as ill-advised and conductive to retaliative manipulations. There are also those who view the whole incident in the light of impartiality, finding justification and merit in the arguments of both camps.

Speaker of the House, George A Schroeder, Detroit democrat, has also taken to the air to defend the charges hurled at the legislature by the chief executive. Likewise Lieut.-Gov. Read is expected to tell
