Plan H. S. Band for Coming Year

J. Ivan Niergarth, in an address before the Rotary club Tuesday noon at the Gordon Hotel, briefly reviewed the history of education and said that educators of the state are considering seriously to increase the number of grades in many high schools to 14, thus keeping young people in educational ranks until they reach the approximate age of 20, for not until that age is industry ready to employ them.

Plans for the next school year at Cass City, the superintendent said, included the organization of a high school band under the direction of Delmar Youngs, who is the instructor in manual arts. Speech and drama are to be given particular attention the coming year.

Sebawaing Boy Critically Injured

Burnell Ballard, eight year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Ballard of Sebawaing, has been in a critical condition for several days as a result of injuries received when he stepped into the path of an automobile driven by Mrs. Norman Zimmer of Detroit. The lad suffered a fractured skull and internal chest injuries.

The accident occurred when the boy, trailing behind a threshing machine, stepped out suddenly onto the road in the path of the oncoming car.

Better Babies Contest Cancelled at Co. Fair

Acting on the advice of the State Health Department, Mrs. A. A. Ricker, in charge of the Better Babies contest at the Tuscola County Fair, cancelled this feature of the fair on Tuesday. This action was taken because of the number of cases of infantile paralysis in Michigan. There is said to be one case in Caro at present, that of a young son of Grant Turner, whose condition was reported as improving.

Considerable interest was manifested in the baby contest and 17 youngsters had been entered.

Rain Tuesday night kept farmers from threshing and helped swell the attendance at the county fair.

MACLACHLAN LEASES STANDARD STATION

Donald MacLachlan, for two years station manager of the Standard Oil Co. at Cass City, has leased the service station of that company at the corner of Main and Oak Streets, commencing business under the new arrangement yesterday. Edward Schwegler, who has been the assistant at the station, will continue in that capacity with Mr. MacLachlan.

Leasing stations to their managers is an arrangement which the Standard Oil Co. has made in recent weeks in several Michigan villages.

WANT SHOW CATTLE FROM SMALL HERDS

Special Classes at State Fair for Animals Owned by Actual Farmers.

Encouragement for the owner of small dairy herds to exhibit his cattle at the State Fair, Aug. 30 to Sept. 8, is provided by eight classes for individuals in which all cattle must belong to actual farmers, according to J. G. Hays, dairy specialist at Michigan State College, who is supervising the dairy cattle section of the fair.

Jerseys will be exhibited in the Jersey Parish Show, as was done last year. Competing cattle of this breed are selected from winners in local parish shows. Jersey owners have an agreement that cattle from the larger, noted herds will not be shown against those from small herds.

The value of herd improvement work is recognized by the provision of a class from groups of four cows, all from one test association and two of which must be entered in the Farmer's Special class. All four of these cows must have production records of 300 pounds fat as two-year olds, 335 as three-year olds, 370 as four-year olds, and 400 pounds as a mature cow.

Entries in the regular open classes are restricted to Michigan owned cattle. Cattle owned by public institutions cannot compete. All cattle exhibited must have passed a clean test for Bangs disease within 60 days preceding the show.

Holsteins will be judged Sept. 3, Guernseys, Sept. 4, and Jerseys, Ayrshires, and Brown Swiss, Sept. 5.

Pheasants Released in 23 Counties

More than 2,300 ring-necked pheasants have been released by the Department of Conservation in 23 lower Michigan counties so far this summer.

The releases were made in areas where cover and food conditions were believed favorable in the hope that the new stock would bolster up the local supply and improve hunting.

All told 2,315 pheasants, consisting of the excess supply of the breeding stock and some of the new 1935 hatch at the state game farm near Mason, were released.

"Plants" were made as follows: Isabella county, 50; Midland, 50; Gratiot, 50; Saginaw, 50; Sanilac, 105; Kent, 100; Clinton, 100; Shiawassee, 100; Genesee, 90; Lapeer, 105; St. Clair, 105; Eaton, 100; Livingston, 100; Oakland, 90; Macomb, 105; Kalamazoo, 50; Calhoun, 100; Jackson, 90; Washtenaw, 90; Wayne, 115; Branch, 90; Hillsdale, 90; Monroe, 90; Bay, 120; Tuscola, 90; Huron, 90.

VanWagoner, state highway commissioner; Horatio S. Earle, father of good roads and Michigan's first state highway commissioner; Eddie Guest, Michigan's favorite poet; Paul H. King of Detroit; and Mrs. A. J. Knapp of Cass City.

Detroit Man Died in Auto Crash; Man Drowned Near Bay Port.

Attempting to pass another car on a gravel road at the intersection of M-53 and M-46, north of Marlette, the car of John Luca of Detroit rolled over after skidding into a ditch. Mr. Luca was thrown from the automobile and he was crushed when the car fell on top of him. He died shortly after the accident on Saturday afternoon.

GROW MORE WHEAT UNDER NEW CONTRACT

Rust Damage to Grain in the West Makes Increased Planting Seem Advisable.

An estimated decrease in the domestic wheat crop for 1935, as reported August 9, has caused officials of the agricultural adjustment administration to change the requested reduction of wheat plantings for 1936 from 15 to 5 per cent, according to H. A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture.

A plan to continue the crop control program for wheat during the next four years was announced recently. Under this plan, growers would sign contracts to grow the percentage of their basic acreage that appeared to be needed for domestic consumption and for export. The reduction announced at that time was 15 per cent but the latest crop reports indicate that a larger proportion of the basic acreage possibly may be needed.

This change in the amount of wheat to be grown is in line with the federal policy of making ample provision for all possible needs but to avoid the production of unmarketable surpluses. The carryover of wheat on July first was the normal amount of 152,000,000 bushels. Severe rust damage to spring wheat in the West lowers the prospects of yields for the present harvest, according to George E. Farrell, director of the grains division, of the AAA.

Contracts between the secretary of agriculture and Michigan wheat growers for the next four years will be ready for signatures within a short time.

Youngs-Kiteley Wedding at Kingston

By Kingston Correspondent.

On Saturday evening, August 17, the marriage of Miss Ruby C. Kiteley and Mr. Chalmer D. Youngs was solemnized at an attractive wedding at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Green at Kingston. The house was festively decorated with numerous wild flowers, a corner of the living room having been converted into an improvised altar of flowers and ferns.

A three-tier white wedding cake, crowned with a miniature bride and groom set, formed the centerpiece of the dining room table which was flanked on each side with white tapers in crystal candelabra.

Mrs. Sarah Kiteley and Mr. Frank Kiteley, mother and brother of the bride, respectively, and Mr. Allison Green received.

At eight o'clock, as the opening of the ceremony, Mrs. Dewey Ehle of Ypsilanti, sang "At Dawning." To the strains of Lohengrin's "Wedding March," played by Mrs. Bertrand McLaughlin of Jackson, the members of the bridal party took their places at the altar in the following order: Rev. Shaw of Ypsilanti; the bridegroom and his twin brother, Mr. Delmar Youngs, of Cass City; Maynard Youngs, ring-bearer; Leola Kiteley and Dorothy

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS OF THE NATION

Happenings That Effect the Dinner Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills.

Seven major pieces of legislation have at this writing, passed both houses of Congress—yet none of them have gone to the White House for Executive veto or approval.

Reason: All the bills are in conference. These conferences are something that the general public hears little about—but they probably have more influence on the actual fate of disputed legislation than all the dramatic and fiery speeches made on the floors of House or Senate.

Necessity for conferences is obvious. One branch of Congress will pass a bill. It then goes to the other branch. If, as often happens when really important laws are involved, amendments or changes are made in bills by this second branch, some way must be found to reconcile the differences. Conference committees, each one customarily made up of five Senators and five Representatives, are appointed. These men then get together, fight, argue and sweat. They are not supposed to add any additional provisions not passed by either branch of Congress—they deal only with the points of difference.

One important bill in conference involves amendments to the TVA act. As passed by the Senate, this bill gave the TVA power to issue bonds to the extent of $100,000,000. The house version of the bill permitted only $50,000,000. Similar differences, mostly of minor importance, are keeping the AAA Amendment bill, the Social Security Act, the Rivers and Harbors Act and the $30,000,000 Deficiency Appropriation Act in conference.

In some cases, conferees must attempt to iron out basic differences. That is true, for example, of the Public Utilities Act of 1935 and the Banking Act of 1935.

In the Senate version of the Public Utilities Act, holding companies were given a "death sentence" under which all of them, with a few Turn to page 4, please.

Stunned by Lightning Friday

Jack Donahue, brother of Dr. H. T. Donahue, was rendered unconscious by a bolt of lightning Friday afternoon and continued in that state for ten minutes.

He was engaged in hauling in grain on the Donahue farm, two miles southwest of Colwood, when an electrical storm passed over that section Friday. Following a flash of lightning, Wm. Hicks, a friend of Mr. Donahue visiting him from Columbus, Wisconsin, missed him from the top of the load and went to investigate. He found Donahue lying on the load of oats just on the verge of falling from the load to the wagon tongue.

Mr. Donahue is none the worse for his experience.

Freshman College Will Depend on the Enrollment

Students who are interested in the continuance of the freshman college at Cass City for the coming year are requested to see Supt. J. Ivan Niergarth at Cass City next week.

Mr. Niergarth expects to return to Cass City next Sunday and will be ready to interview prospective freshman college students here next Monday, or later in the week. All interested should see him as early as possible as the establishment of a college here next month depends greatly on the number who will enroll.

Electric Line to Four Farms West of Cass City

Filling oil lamps and washing lamp chimneys will soon be discarded tasks in several farm houses in the mile west of Cass City. In the near future, the Michigan Electric Power Company will string wires for conveying electricity to at least four farms and probably others will be added. The four places where the electricity will be used are the farm residences of Luke Tuckey, G. A. Tindale, M. D. Hart and Mrs. John Beears.

Grain Coming Fast to the Elevators

"We have taken in twice the amount of grain at our elevators in the past two weeks than in any like period of time," said Frank Reid, manager of the Farm Produce Co., to the Chronicle Monday.

With barns full of hay, many farmers are either stacking the grain or hauling direct from the shocks in the field to the grain separators. More of them are following the latter method. Farmers are doing more work at night in the harvest fields than has been accomplished in years. Threshing machines are working late into the night in order to accommodate the agriculturalists in the big harvest of 1935.

Mr. Reid opined Monday that half the yield of this year's grain harvest was still in the fields.

The depression has done what the taxpayers organization has tried to do for years but has been unable to get done in the matter of tax reduction. Governor Davey of Ohio recently cut from eight to eight and half million dollars from the appropriation bill as passed by the Ohio legislature. Other states have done the same thing in varying degrees.

In an effort to relieve the unemployment conditions the United States has expended $7,000,000,000 in the past twenty-nine months. The prosperity pump is a hard one to prime.

Now that better prices for farm products have become a reality, a good deal of complaint is being heard from the consumer. How pray, is the farmer to receive more for his products unless the consumer pays more? It might be suggested that while a condition that would permit the farmer to receive the top price for wheat he raises, while the consumer buys it at the bottom price, would have its advantages, it is not altogether practicable.

Having a drunken driver side-swipe the family bus on a highway has changed many a man's opinion about the question of whether or not a man can drink intoxicating liquor and then crawl behind the steering wheel of an automobile and proceed to drive it on a crowded highway.

The new revenue bill now being considered by Congress started on its way through Congress with a provision to levy no additional taxes on incomes of $1500.00 and less. So far this level has been reduced to $50,000. It makes little difference at what figure it is left when it is finally passed. The history of the all tax schemes is that they start low and are gradually increased until they reach the limit the traffic will bear.

The trend of the younger set today is toward nudity. I look for prohibition to come back in a different form that will prove more effective than the Volstead Law.

WHAT WE THINK ::::

By Frank Nixon.

I note by my daily that recently the senate voted to the widow of Senator Cutting who met his death in an airplane accident, the sum of $10,000. A few days before the senate voted $5,000 each to five widows of G-men killed while in pursuit of gangsters, kidnapers, and public enemies.

Senator Cutting died leaving a fortune, much of which he distributed through his will in lavish fashion among his friends. The gift of $10,000 meant nothing to his widow and was but a friendly gesture on the part of the free handed senate.

On the other hand the G-men were all men of small and moderate means. Their work is always extremely hazardous. They are engaged in hunting down a type of criminal who invariably make a practice of shooting it out with the officers.

To each of these men and their families the senate gave $5,000. How the senate justifies such a practice I do not understand. Very obviously the gift to the Cuttings meant little to that family. Equally obviously the gift to the widows of the G-men was not enough.

There seems to be something about the atmosphere of the Capital that causes men to lose their sense of perspective and of value. Men who guard the personal expenditures very closely in private life think nothing of tossing off with a cheerio ten thousand or a hundred thousand of public money, all of which must be raised by taxes. This tax money is very often paid by many small tax payers at no small cost and sacrifice.

I know a small corporation whose entire earnings last year were slightly more than one hundred dollars yet this struggling concern paid in in taxes to the Federal government thirty-five dollars, almost half as much as its entire earnings. I happen to know what close economy it took, what skimping and saving to make even a small earning. It was a real struggle.

Yet the senate with scant consideration will vote ten thousand dollars, without even casual consideration, where it is not needed. I mean nothing personal against the Cutting family. I think as long as the senate yields to the practice they were entitled to. The thing I am opposed to is the obvious lack of wisdom and discernment this presumably deliberative body oftentimes exercises.

There is a man in my town whose common method for building himself up is tearing other people down. By doing this he doesn't need to say anything about himself in a bragging way. By such a practice he is able to fool the stranger and the unsuspecting but not those who know him. He would rather stick a knife in the back of another than say a good word for him.

The trend of the younger set today is toward nudity. I look for prohibition to come back in a different form that will prove more effective than the Volstead Law.

Ohio Grew Own Tobacco Nearly every pioneer farmer in Ohio raised tobacco on his farm, not for market but for his own pipe. One exception to this was Ashtabula county, where surplus tobacco was made into cigars by the women in their homes, and exchanged at the store for groceries. Later on when Buckeye tobacco was produced for market, it was packed into hogheads and hauled over the national road to eastern points, and some of it found its way to Europe.

Six Cylinder Sentences

By DR. JOHN W. HOLLAND

It is always sunrise in the hopeful heart. When one starts out to "go to the dogs" the dogs meet him half way. Let us give to our unhappy memories a large dose of absent treatment. The wise man enjoys what he has while the fool is envious for what he hasn't. Greatness does not reside within our strength, but merely in the control of it. They who stake their all upon a chance game stand little chance of winning in the greater game of life.

Baba, Turkish Word Baba, a Turkish word, signifying father, originated, like papa, in the first efforts of children to speak.

OUR CHILD AND THE SCHOOL

By Dr. ALLEN G. IRELAND

Preparing for School—II. May I assume that you heeded my advice of last week? If you did, then I know that your child is partly ready to be educated. His nose and throat are normal. His teeth are in good condition. His vision is good, and his ears are not plugged with wax.

In addition to parental neglect, which I mentioned last week, we have at least two faults. One of these is a tendency to think, "Oh, that won't happen to my child." It is nice to be optimistic, but it isn't always being practical. We realize this when disease strikes suddenly. Hopes, high though they may be, are not effective as preventative measures. Only wise action brings success.

Our second fault, altogether too common, is to believe that smallpox and diphtheria have disappeared before the march of science. True, science has shown us how we may conquer these diseases, but it remains for us to take the necessary steps. The future remains in the hands of parents. Join hands with other parents, and these terrible diseases can be wiped off the record forever. As long as you don't, your children are in danger.

I can give you no better advice than this, "Consult your family physician or town health officer, and do it before school opens."

How to Curb Soil Erosion.

The Mississippi River annually dumps a cubic mile of rich top soil into the Gulf of Mexico involving a national loss of more than $300,000,000. Floods sweep over her levee towns almost every year. Table lands, tapped by her tributaries suffer drought and consequent windstorms. Forests dry up. Animal life disappears.

But what is being done about it? The solution of the problem, according to Elmer T. Peterson, editor of Better Homes and Gardens writing in the Rotarian Magazine, depends largely upon man.

"Man with his engineering ability," says Mr. Peterson, "could clear up the waters of such muddy rivers as the Mississippi. He could do so if he would go to the very source of the river and hold the water in the millions of small gulches, draws, ravines; if he would terrace farm lands, restore old marshes, reforest slopes, and quit digging open drainage ditches and straightening rivers.

"Small settling basins could be created above these millions of small dams, these to be drained by tile. This would raise the water table in the vicinity because of the slow seepage and the restoration of primeval springs. A part of the water would flow through the tile and create small, clear streams filtered by the beds of the basins. Thus we would have innumerable creeks of crystal clear water running constantly and maintaining the flow of placid water in the larger streams and rivers. The fine, movable silt would be kept at or near its origin.

"The government," he continues, "has started its 'tree belt,' intended to check winds sweeping over mid-western prairies, and to migrate drouths. But the tree belt cannot succeed without water-conservation. The water table on the high prairies must be raised. Countless small ponds and lakes must be created on the uplands. We will have to retard the flow of river waters.

"The task, however, is more than the federal government can do alone. Since it must necessarily involve the time and thought of millions of persons in private projects on farms, waste lands, cut-over timberlands, as well as the cooperation of thousands of municipalities, it is high time that the basic essentials of the situation be studied and understood by leaders of community opinion. Without widespread individual action, the larger program cannot succeed."

Twenty Eighty-five. (An editorial from The Rotarian Magazine).

If you should be motoring in California this summer and should see an automobile with a windshield sticker labeled "2085" you may be pretty sure that that car will not contribute to the deathly toll of highway victims. Draw closer, and you will observe these words beneath that number: "In the interest of General Welfare; to protect and preserve life; to promote Good Citizenship—Earnest and Continuous Efforts are being made to operate this Automobile in strict compliance with Motor Traffic Laws and Regulations."

The 2085 grew out of some serious thinking done by Rotarians at Santa Ana. They were appalled by the fact that 36,000 human beings met untimely deaths in the United States in 1934, that 2,085 of them were Californians. Santa Ana Rotarians resolved to do something about it. Hence, the sticker. Not much, perhaps you will say, merely printing a few high-sounding words to be displayed on the windshields of automobiles. But don't form a hasty judgment. Consider that the seventy-one members of the Santa Ana Rotary Club have taken the "2085 pledge." Visualize how motorists and pedestrians, seeing the card, invariably will read it and, perchance, discuss it. Take into account the fact that several other communities are adopting the 2085 plan. Compute, if you can, what it would mean if it were to spread throughout California. And other states.

A New Jersey woman offers to sell friend husband for $1,500 so she can buy a ticket back to her old home in Ireland. Unless he's a little runt that's cheap considering present meat prices.

The four Detroit underworld characters who got life sentences for the brutal slaying of a New York playboy attorney expressed surprise at the verdict. What did they expect—freedom and a vaudeville contract?

Attorney General Toy says the crime commission is about to call another statewide conference. Probably going to have the boys in to tell how many slot machines are still being operated in their balliwicks.

The American Medical Association says that restoration to life after being frozen in a cake of ice is a hoax. We don't believe that—we've known bankers who lived all their lives within four degrees of that temperature and seemed to thrive on it. An eastern oil magnate is reported to have performed a successful sinus operation on himself. Before beginning to brag he should wait and hear how the big oil syndicates have been operating on the little oil companies out here in Michigan.

Aimee Semple McPherson says she drew a sixty thousand crowd while a nearby nudist camp was practically devoid of visitors. Maybe the folks came thinking she was going to tell about the time she walked back home from the desert.

Down in New Orleans the FERA is putting in government money to repair a building 110 years old. If the government keeps on borrowing for such schemes it is going to take that long before future generations of taxpayers succeed in getting it repaid.

CHEAP LIGHT bulbs look like the best ones but when they burn out quickly you lose more than the few cents you thought you "saved" in buying them.

It's the same in insurance for there too the cheapest policies prove far more expensive than policies written in reliable stock insurance companies which this agency represents.

Improved International SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for August 25 BARNABAS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 4:36, 37; 11:19-30. GOLDEN TEXT—He was a good man, and full of the Holy Spirit and of faith—Acts 11:24.

1. Barnabas the Man (Acts 4:36). His original name was Joseph. When he became a Christian he was by the apostles renamed Barnabas.

2. To Antioch (Acts 11:22-24). Violent persecutions of the Church sent many disciples to the regions about the Mediterranean sea.

3. Friends of Saul (9:26, 27). After Saul's conversion he came to Jerusalem and tried to join himself to the disciples.

4. Disciples called Christians first in Antioch (v. 26). After a year of teaching by Paul and Barnabas the name "Christian" was given to the disciples.

5. Barnabas the Dispenser of Alms (v. 27-30). Because of the oneness of Christians with Christ and with one another, the distress of the brethren at Jerusalem must be relieved by the gifts of believers at Antioch.

6. A Strong Will. If we have need of a strong will in order to do good, it is more necessary still for us in order not to do evil.

A PLEASANT VISIT

SITTING safe and comfortable in the hollow stump to which Whitefoot the Woodmouse had led him, Danny Meadow Mouse told Whitefoot all about his adventures from the time he had visited the Smiling Pool right up to the moment when Whitefoot had come to his rescue.

"What Was a Crazy Thing to Do?" Demanded Danny, Looking Puzzled.

Danny's story was ended. Then he gravely shook his head. "It was a crazy thing to do, Cousin Danny. It certainly was a crazy thing to do," said he.

"What was a crazy thing to do?" demanded Danny, looking puzzled. "Going so far away from home when there was no need of it," replied Whitefoot. "I thought you were too wise to take such foolish risks. At your age you should know better. It might be excusable in a youngster with no family to think of, but one of your age should have known better."

"I guess you are right, Cousin Whitefoot," replied Danny meekly. "I've learned a lesson I'll never forget."

CHAPTER X

The rifle bullet had passed so close above Ben's head that he had felt its breath even before he was aware of its whine.

A bullet . . . here . . . for him! A hunter? But what would a hunter be shooting at here? That bullet was designed for him and had missed by inches. And he was pitching forward, simulating a fall, letting himself go limp. It was the only protection he could conjure.

He saw nothing, no movement, even; heard nothing. He was a-tingle, scalp creeping with an odd sensation as he waited for another bullet from these heights to the eastward.

But no other came. Ben lay there until deep dusk had fallen. Then he rose to his hands and knees, watching, listening. After a moment he stood still. Then, resolutely, he left the road, walled through the deep snow, crossed the railroad track and toiled up the heights. He went on, through the snow to the first fringe of trees. Then he spoke, in a light hall: "Hi!"—and immediately dropped behind a stump.

After a moment he rose, went forward again and entered the shadows boldly. No one was there, for certain, but before he had gone more than a few paces he came on that which he sought: a snowshoe track, visible in the gloom because of the softness of the snow. Whoever had gone that way had sunk deeply.

He followed this out of the thick timber to a little clearing. The trail was not visible in the darkness so he struck a match and holding it cupped in one hand, bent low.

The flare showed the track of a long, narrow shoe plainly and as he moved the tiny torch along toward its tip he stopped all movement. The match burned out. He moved on to the next track and lighted another. He examined several of the imprints made by the shoe. Then he went as rapidly as possible back down the slope to the road and started on to camp.

After supper Ben called Bird-Eye Blaine to one side.

"I'd like to have you harness the supply team and spend an evening in town," he said.

The little barn boss cocked an inquisitive eye.

"Just in town, Misher Elliott? Or for somethin' special?"

"Somethin' special. . . . But no one else is to know. What I want to find out is this: Who is wearing a pair of Canadian snowshoes with the webbing in the toe torn so it makes a hole about this shape."

Quickly he sketched a rough outline on a leaf of his notebook. Bird-Eye scanned it and nodded.

It was after midnight when Ben Elliott roused from his sleepless bed to hear Bird-Eye speaking to his team outside. He crawled out of his blankets and opened the office door to let the other in, but before he asked any questions lighted a lamp.

"Well, how about it?"—as he replaced the chimney.

Bird-Eye looked at him narrowly. "I found th' shoes," he said with an emphatic nod. "Nd I found out who's they be! They're the property av' wan Red Bart Delaney, a celebrated killer from somewheres in Canada!"

From the second small bedroom separated from the office by a board partition, a bed creaked sharply. Elliott did not hear it.

"So that's it!" he said softly.

"Yis! That's ut! Th' priseness av' a rattlesnake lolke Red Bart in th' community don't forecast nawthin' but th' hottest kind av' trouble! Ye've heard av' him, ain't it?"

"Yes, I have. He was mixed up in that spruce war on the Zing-Wauk. A hired killer."

"Killer is roight! 'Nd what may he be a-doing in these parts?"

Elliott did not reply to that question.

"What else did you find out?" he asked.

"Well, he brought his stinkin' priseness into Tincup Wednesday night on its own two stinkin' feet! He's favorin' Joe Plette's hotel. Te' snowshoes was in th' office 'nd it come up so's I didn't have to seem curious to find out whose they was. He's here lookin' fer cedar, he says. But it gives a body a lot av' bother wonderin' what his rale reason moight be. Lysin' as natural as breathin' to th' lolkes."

"I can tell you," Ben said. "He's gunning for me, Bird-Eye."

"Saints! . . . I thought ut, I did! Ah, me b'y—"

"Yes, he started today. I was shot at with a rifle two miles up the road just at sundown. The man who shot at me wore a snowshoe with the web broken. He wouldn't be lending his snowshoes."

Bird-Eye stood motionless and silent for a moment before he spoke. "Thin th' sooner we give him both barrels av' somethin', th' safer ye'll be, Misher Elliott! He's a hard chunk, him. It's Nick Brandon's work, who's tried everything else 'nd ye'll not refuse to try murder to get ye down, Benny b'y!"

"Likely ye're roight," Ben said and rubbed his chin with a knuckle. "But we'd have to prove that, first. There's nothing to worry about, now we know the man's here to get me. Likely he thought he got me. Still there, was he? Um. . . . Well, that's somethin' to think over, Bird-Eye. You better hit for camp, and get some sleep. I may call you in the forenoon."

Bird-Eye sniffed and twisted his head gravely and after adding imprecations on Nicholas Brandon and warning Ben to stay close to the office, departed.

He could be heard unblinking his team and climbing into the sleigh; and when the frosty runners screamed in departure sounds came from that second bedroom behind the partition, the door opened and John Martin stood looking out. His dark eyes held on Ben Elliott, anxious and troubled.

"I couldn't help hearing," he said simply. "Do you mind?"

"Of course not, John. Looks like lively times!"—with a grin.

"It's none of my affairs Elliott, but I'm an older man than you. I've seen trouble . . . a-plenty." His voice dropped significantly, as though old wounds were being opened. "I've heard of Delaney. I can't help but think Bird-Eye's advice is good. Swear out a warrant for him the first thing. This is a time for caution. I'll do you no good to take risks."

"I'll not walk into any traps, but if Brandon thinks he can make me hunt my hole—"

"Oh, Brandon!" The cry was bitter and Martin threw his arms wide in a gesture of helplessness. "You've got to watch him as you've never watched a man in your life. Why, son, you don't know, you don't dream, of the ends he'll go to!"

"But I thought you didn't know him," Ben said, puzzled. "I thought you said you were a stranger to this country."

"Yes. But stories travel. And isn't your experience today enough to convince anyone of the man's ruthlessness?"

"Oh, sure," Ben agreed, but still wondering at Martin's mood. "You're roight. He'll stop at nothing, not even murder. And I agree with you that he's got to be watched. But if I ran into my burrow or didn't try to get at the bottom of this thing, he'd gain part of what he's after, you see. No, that can't be done."

He rose and began to pace the floor.

"And it's not only the Hoot Owl, now, that's at stake. He's mixed up in more important matters than just property. He caught me foul where it hurt . . . hurt!" Martin, following him with his eyes, winced. "He's used a woman to come between me and the finest girl that ever walked the earth!" Martin looked away as Ben confronted him, almost as one will avert his face from a painful sight. "Lastly he brings a hired killer to polish me off. Darned if I know what to expect next. But one thing he can bank on: I won't run. I'll drive him into the open if I can by hook or crook, but I won't run!"

"No, I know you won't. But I wish . . . Oh, how I wish you'd counsel with some one else, with Able or anyone. You're young, you're in danger. . . . And this matter you just mention: Can't you think of Dawn a little? If you love her can't you see that she has a right to believe that you will protect yourself?"

The man's voice had fallen to a broken whisper. He held out both hands in appeal and tears sprang into his eyes. This man, this mature, quiet gentleman, this stranger to the country, begging him with tears in eyes and voice to consider Dawn McManus struck Ben dumb-founded.

"Oh, it's only that you've shown yourself to be so decent," Martin said after a moment, emotions nerving better control. "I hate to see you putting yourself in danger."

"I won't stick my head into any noose," Ben replied. "Lord, it's late. We'll need clear heads to meet this situation. Better get into the old blankets."

But he did not sleep at once. He lay awake a long time, thinking of Red Bart Delaney and Brandon and wondering how he could prove their relationship. . . . And speculating on Martin's outbursts, the man's keen hatred of Brandon, whom he probably had never seen, his intense interest in Dawn McManus. . . . Something strange and unnatural was there, Elliott told himself. Still, he added, you could stake your last hope on a man like John Martin.

Early the next forenoon the merchants and traders and loafers in main thoroughfare saw something to nip their attention.

Ben Elliott came driving into town at a spanking trot, his team of alert drivers coated with frost. This was nothing unusual. But when he brought them to a crunching halt before the bank building, over which Nicholas Brandon worked and lived, jumped out, threw blankets over their backs and tied them to a post, a few necks were craned.

Throughout the evening before Brandon had gorged himself on a sense of relief. At eight he had passed Bart Delaney on the street. None had been about to notice that although Brandon appeared only to overtake and pass the man that, in reality, they spoke briefly and cautiously.

"Well?"

"In his tracks . . . Two mile above th' mill."

Inside, Brandon seethed with a savage exultation. He crossed the street, drunk with the feeling of relief, mounted to his office and drank to his own success. . . . And drank again. For hours he sat at his desk, whisky bottle at his elbow and when he went down the hallway to his bedroom at the rear he carried the bottle with him.

His first move for the day, once in his office next day, was to draw the cork of a fresh flask and drink deeply. A growing warmth ran through him. That was better. It was not comfortable to wake up, thinking of a man lying lifeless on the snow . . . at your orders.

Soon, now, word would be coming into town from Hoot Owl, tragic, final word. He must be in shape to meet the news dispassionately. No

... Not men left dead on the snow. . . . Men whose life you have had taken do not smile. . . . Men stiff on the snow cannot smile. . . . This combination of truths coupled in Brandon's swirling mind and struck him cold. This could be no man, then; this was an apparition, this was—

And then whatever it was spoke. "Good morning, Brandon!"

Elliott spoke naturally and easily, and closed the door behind him. Dead men do not speak; ghosts do not open and close doors—they pass through them.

And Nicholas Brandon, gathering his faculties, lurched to his feet, panting and clenching the edge of the desk.

"Good morning," he said in a hoarse gasp. "Good. . . ."

Ben Elliott laughed bitterly. "What's the difficulty, Brandon? Didn't you expect to see me this morning?"

"Why . . . I . . . That is, I thought—"

Ben stepped close and dropped his voice nearly to a whisper. "You thought I wouldn't be walking today? Was that it?"

"Not walking? I don't know what you're talking about." The older man's self-control was coming back rapidly, now that his fright had passed away.

"I just came in to get matters straight between us, Brandon. Several serious things have happened to the Hoot Owl but in spite of them the Hoot Owl is booming; now, I presume, I can look for things to happen to me. Before anything does—because I'm not rash enough to be cocksure that it won't—I want you to get me straight."

The last vestige of his smile was gone by then. He stood spread-legged, hands locked behind his back, eyes boring into Brandon's gaze.

"I'm not interested in—"

"But you'll listen! You'll listen or I'll choke you until you'll beg for the opportunity to listen, Brandon! You'll listen to me this morning and it'll be the first and last time."

"I know a great deal, I can prove but little. I know that you started in to run me out by sending Duval to clean up my camp. Next, you tried to cripple my operation by having a firebug touch off the mill."

"Don't go too far, young man!"

"I won't. The pits of hell are the inside limits for you, Brandon!"

"After that, you timed it nicely and blew up my trestle. You almost had us two or three times. But you flopped! The Hoot Owl is up on its knees, will be on its feet in a month if we keep going and it'll be sitting on the world by the time break-up hits us. All you've done to the job has only helped it."

"That's that! Next you try to get me, thinking, probably, that if you knock the skipper off the bridge the craft will founder for certain. You're wrong, there. You can't lick my men, because they're too many for you; you can't stop the Hoot Owl by getting me out of the picture. But if you want to keep on trying, it's your own funeral. I've only one thing to ask of you: try to play the white man, Brandon, and fight your own fights!"

His face was dark with rage, now, and he emphasized his last words by downward thrusts of clenched hands along his thighs.

Brandon smiled lightly.

"You're a queer young man," he remarked. "You dream in broad daylight and with your eyes open."

"A peculiarly detailed dream, Brandon! I've said all I have to say about the job and about myself but there is another matter left to be mentioned while I'm here. I won't even utter her name in your hearing, but any man who would pull a trick like you did and involve a girl . . . Brandon, a snake's belly is sky-high compared to you!"

And that touched the well-springs of rage that had been dammed back until the moment.

"You fool!" the man said heavily. The words came like the first break in a levee; slow, sluggish words. . . . And then, like the following toss of foam was the frothing rage in his scream. "You fool! I'll drive you out of this country! I'll hang your operation up for the crows to pick! I'll string the bones of this timber and your own bones across this country!"

He stopped, sobbing for breath, and his teeth clicked in an agony of passion.

"Dawn? Not mention her name? Well, I will. . . . She's mine, you fool, body and soul! She's been mine for years. . . . Because she smiled at you, because she played with you don't think she's interested, fool! She's—"

He swayed backward as Elliott lurched toward him, but their bodies did not lock.

White and trembling, Ben stayed his own rush.

"No! . . . Don't want to brawl over her," he choked. "But if you mention her name to me again I'm likely to lose my head and tear your hide off your carcass!"

His rage was so high, so holy, that the fear it inspired carried through Brandon's frenzy and the man stood silent, perhaps in awe.

Ben relaxed.

"Now," he said quietly, "I've just one thing to ask, Brandon. It's this: fight your own battles!"

He turned on his heel and slammed the door behind him.

The old Spanish doubloon varied in value. From 1780 to 1772 it was worth about $8.24; from 1772 to 1786, $8.68; 1786 to 1848, $7.87. The coinage of doubloons has ceased.

Honor "The Pied Piper"
Hamel, Germany, is certain some important event is responsible for its legend of "The Pied Piper," who supposedly freed the town of rats and, in revenge for not being paid, kidnaped 130 of its children on June 26, 1284. Not only are there numerous records from that year and several monuments and a building to commemorate the episode, writes T. W. Macdonald, Washington, in Collier's Weekly, but the town has held annual memorial celebrations for the past 650 years and still maintains mechanical figures on the city hall which enact the story every hour.

The Six Fundamentals

Attained when you use an Electric Range

- BETTER FLAVOR. Electric cooking seals in delicious natural flavor in foods. Meats and vegetables cook to melting tenderness in their own juices.
- HEALTHFULNESS. A half-cup of water is ample to cook vegetables. Precious minerals and important food values are retained, instead of being lost in steam or poured down the sink with excess water.
- CLEANLINESS. Electric heat is as clean as sunlight. There is no smoke or soot to blacken utensils, nor excess heat to WARP them, or soil kitchen walls and curtains.
- CONVENIENCE. Snap the switch and start to cook. No matches, no flame—only pure heat from a glowing wire.
- ACCURATE OVEN CONTROL. Exact oven heat control means better and more uniform baking results. Light, fine grained cakes and flaky pastries are easy to obtain, time after time.
- MODERN COOKING. Only an electric range is a modern range. Other stoves use exactly the same cooking methods in vogue 50 years ago.

Investigate these six fundamentals. They are vital to your cooking results, your practice of economy, your happiness.

Use electricity when cooking. It is clean, convenient, accurate, produces better flavored and healthful foods and is the true modern fuel.

ONE WAY OF CURING NERVOUS EXHAUSTION

"I WAS nervously exhausted," writes one of our reader friends. "So much so that I couldn't sleep all night. I tossed and tossed, actually in pain. All as a result of nervous excitement. And the next morning I was headachy and jumpy. I knew it would be a lost day—and I had a good deal of work to do.

"Under the circumstances it seemed I shouldn't be able to accomplish anything, so I might as well rest. And I tried to rest—and got more and more nervous and jumpy.

"Finally I thought I might as well try to get something done, so I started on the hardest job I had—a report to be gotten out for the next meeting of the club.

"The report required complete concentration, and before I knew it I was deep into it. I finished the job, looked at the clock and found the afternoon had passed. And, strange to say, I had lost my headache, and the jumpy, achy feeling that had made me so restless had left me. In other words, I felt quite myself again—cured by a job of work! This experience may help some other reader."

Cured of nervous exhaustion by a job of work! That seems strange only to those who have never had the experience. For it is a fact that there is nothing so good for that feeling that you just can't do anything—when it is nerves—than to start something that requires concentration. You're quite likely to finish the job feeling ready to do anything.

And the beneficent work to do is not limited to curing "nerves." It has been well known for some time—work within reason, of course—is a good thing to prevent nerves. Exhibit A: The truly busiest people in the world—those who do the most—are not often those with "nerves."

Question Box

By ED WYNN
The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

We are getting up a raffle for a poor man in our neighborhood, and I have been asked to write to you to ask if you won't buy some chances.

Truly yours,

BENNY FACTOR.

Answer: I don't want any chances, as I wouldn't know what to do with a poor man if I won one.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have read a great deal lately about bigamy and bigamists. Am I not right when I say "If a man has one wife too many he is a bigamist?"

Yours truly,

DELLA WARE.

Answer: You are not right. I know a man who has only one wife, and only the other day he told me that although he is married to one woman he has one wife too many; yet, you can see, he has not committed bigamy.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I hear so many jokes about matrimony that I often wonder if any of the things I heard have any truth behind them. For instance, are all married people unhappy?

Sincerely,

I. RISH.

Answer: No, only the men.

SHEEP TAKE PLACE OF CATTLE IN WEST

Famous Old Trails Now Have Federal Sanction.

Phoenix, Ariz.—The western trail herd have not passed, but today they are sheep and not cattle, with numbers driven regularly exceeding the count of the most famous old trails.

It's a faux pas, of course, to mention sheep and cattle in one breath (to a cattleman), but the former still are featured in big drives—in fact the business of sheep driving has grown, while cattle are moved by rail.

It's largely a matter of very simple business.

Cattle lose weight when driven cross-country. Cows are valued not by the hoof, but by the beefsteak, with thick steaks bringing more money. The money crop of sheep is their wool, which can't be walked away.

So today some 300,000 complaining "woolies" are taking the long trek from southern pastures in and about the Salt river valley to northern Arizona, where they will wait out the summer at high altitudes whose ranges are not withered by the desert sun.

The business of trail driving has become a big industry. The government sets aside regular strips for sheep to follow as they go north and as they return south. Some make a round trip of 400 miles.

Trails followed are as old as the industry. They are picked originally because of advantages of feed and water, and once set by custom, received governmental sanction. Homesteading or script purchase of land in the sheep "strips" is forbidden.

The oldest of them recently blossomed out with a shiny new suspension bridge, which sheep weekly cross to avoid wetness and possible quicksand of the Salt river below.

Following the drives demands alertness and sacrifice of herders. Mountain lions are not a myth, but are plentiful in parts of the sheep range. Wild dog packs are a menace in the Salt river valley, and may kill scores in a night's bloody orgy. Coyotes are present everywhere, vigilant to take stragglers.

Stove Designer Becomes a Cook to Learn Needs

Cleveland.—It takes more than a pencil and an artistic eye to design stoves, washing machines and pancake turners, young Henry Dreyfuss, New York industrial designer, made clear here.

Before he can turn out a pancake turner that women will cry for, he has to know first how to turn pancakes himself, Dreyfuss said. The same thing applies to machines that do the family wash, ironing and hold the refrigeration unit for the week's market.

When the young designer redesigned a washing machine, he spent nine months with his sleeves rolled up, washing everything a housewife does. He caught his fingers in the wringer, tore buttons off pajamas, tore lace into shreds.

Now he is going through a siege of baking, broiling and boiling everything from potatoes to cakes, in the interest of more beautiful and efficient stoves.

Only thirty now, Dreyfuss began his career as a scene designer. He was art consultant for a large theater chain and won recognition with his settings for several Broadway productions, including "Fine and Dandy," "Strike Me Pink," and "The Last Mile."

Nature Restores Sight of Woman Long Blind

San Francisco.—Nature has done what doctors could not do—restore Virginia Stranahan's sight.

Blinded nine years ago by the explosion of a dynamite cap, doctors decided not to operate because of the danger such an operation would mean of permanent loss of her sight.

At University of California hospital, where she was taken a few hours after the accident, it was found her right eye had been perforated by a copper fragment which formed a cataract. Other fragments were in her left eye. Through the years, the cataract gradually was absorbed and other foreign bodies were absorbed into her blood stream.

Plans Search for Log of Sir John Franklin

Montreal.—F. K. Pease of London and his dog Jill arrived in Montreal en route to the Arctic circle, where they expect to spend three or four years searching for the logbooks of Sir John Franklin. Pease, who brought with him 30 tons of equipment, is a young man in search of adventure. He will walk, ski and sled it from Churchill to Chesterfield Inlet, then on to the unnamed island where he believes the valuable logbooks are cached. He will depend for guidance on a map, given to him by the dead Danish explorer, Knud Rasmussen, which is believed to have been left by one of Franklin's party on the ill-fated quest for the northwest passage.

Caro Physician Active After 50 Years of Practice

Dean of all Tuscola county physicians, Dr. John E. Handy of Caro, is now rounding out a half century of active practice in this section of the state. Now in the evening of life, the Caro physician has administered to the thousands of Tuscola county families, some into the fourth generation, says the Tuscola Pioneer-Times.

Unusually active for a man of his years, he is now 76, Dr. Handy has the largest office practice in Tuscola county. He detests inactivity and at all times is busy taking care of his patients or studying the latest scientific discovery in the medical world.

The son of a schoolmaster, Dr. Handy was born in Mt. Bridges, Ont., Canada, September 23, 1859. He attended the schools in Canada and completed his education at the Detroit College of Medicine in the spring of 1887.

It was a question of making a living after completing his education and wandering around the state looking for a location he finally stopped at Watrousville where he became associated with Dr. Black. There was not a great deal of money in those days, according to Dr. Handy, who describes Dr. Black as "a kind old man." His associate took him in to help him take care of his practice as he was getting too old to brave the sleet and snowstorms with only a horse and buggy for transportation. Dr. Handy explains that this was before the medical profession had accepted the now established fact that diseases were caused by bacteria and organisms. Pasteur had been conducting experiments in France in that early day "but we had no idea that his discoveries would result in almost completely over-hauling the practice of medicine."

Watrousville was quite a flourishing town in that early period. Several hotels, a drug store, and other conveniences to offer the public made it a popular place for the early settlers. However, Caro soon outgrew Watrousville, and Dr. Handy moved there to open his office.

Slightly hard of hearing, which he attributes to facing many cold storms behind his team of horses years ago, Dr. Handy is known throughout the county for his kindly acts. A success financially as well as scientifically, he has always doctored the rich and poor alike and has the reputation of never forcing a collection.

Following an operation five years ago, he gave up surgery saying he did not wish to run the chance at his advanced age.

He was married to Margaret Lewis, November 25, 1891. His wife was the daughter of a Watrousville merchant and was then living in Detroit. She spent her vacation visiting Watrousville acquaintances, and it was there the romance started. They have no children.
