car whose tail-light has gone out . . . an unexpected

Curve, or what not.

And that's where we meet up with momentum again. You see, stopping isn't the one simple action we always thought it was. The truth is, we are told, that there are really three things we have to do to stop. First we have to think of stopping. Next we have to move one foot over on to the brake pedal.

And then we have to push down on the brake pedal.

In fact, at only 20 miles an hour the average driver goes 22 feet before he can even start to use the brakes.

Now we might not believe it, but they tell us those first two steps take time. Less than a second, perhaps, but even in that instant momentum is carrying us on.

Now that term seems to be a common one with them, but it's new to most

What they mean is that the distance we can see clearly by headlights is, of course, limited, and that we are apt to let our car spects get beyond the point where we could easily stop within that limited distance. It's true that we naturally tend to go a little slower at night. But if we aren't careful we gradually get going faster than we realize, and that may get us into trouble. You see, momentum, the same force that tries to keep us from making turns safely; that cuts all kinds of capers on slippery roads . . . never sleeps! He works on the same old principles night and day. Darkness doesn't hinder him, but it hinders us.

Bald-Headed People There are bald-headed women. They are not, however, as common as bald-headed men. Men become bald more frequently than women because it is part of the sexual difference, such as the arrangement of hair on the body and face.

The Flag of France

The flag of France during the first and second empires was the tri-color (divided vertically into three parts of equal width-blue, white and red, the red forming the fly, the white the middle, and the blue the hoist of the flag) having in the center of the white stripe an eagle; and all three stripes were powdered with the golden bees of Napoleon.

Ohio's Miami Valley Long before any permanent settlement was made in the Ohio Miami valley its beauty and fertility were known to the inhabitants of Kentucky and the people beyond the Alleghanies. As a consequence, repeated efforts were made by the white man to get possession of it. These efforts of course led to retaliation on the part of the Indians, who resented the attempts to dispossess them of their native lands, and the continuous raids back and forth across the Ohio river to gain or keep control of this beautiful valley caused it to be called, until the close of the Eighteenth century, the "Miami Slaugh-

But What a Difference in VALUE!

All beef isn't blue-ribbon beef. And all coal can't be top-quality coal, by a long shot.

But take a coal that comes from the famous Elkhorn District in Eastern Kentucky, like Cavalier Coal does, and you've got just about the finest coal you'd ever want. Less than 3% ash . . . more than 95% pure heat.

Another thing! Cavalier banks easily for slow heat, and flames quickly into fast heat. Order this blue-ribbon coal now— at today's price—and you'll laugh at Old Man Winter.

HAMBURG, Great Seaport

View of the Port of Hamburg.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington. D. C.—WNU Service.

TAMBURG thinks in terms of ships, of fish, and trade with far-flung places. Overseas 6-year-old grade Jersey, owned by news, especially news that affects trade for better or worse, means more to it than all the politicosocial twaddle of Berlin or Munich.

Since the days of sail, its sons have scoured every nook of the world to barter, buy, and sell. Many now extensive German colonies in South America and the Orient bemarry foreign women, retire well-tohere to educate the children.

During the years when endless shiploads of immigrants left Germany for the New World, Hamburg was the port from which millions of them sailed, including those from middle and eastern Europe.

Many a Hamburg sitting room is cluttered with curios and quaint mementos brought back from distant voyages by father, uncle, or brother. Always, Hamburg shares its sens with the sea-many never North sea, working as far away as Iceland. The loss of life, ships, and nets in this trade is recorded in many a North sea ballad. Herrings they harvest in countless millions, herrings being to the North sea what bananas are to Central America. Special fish cars, gaudily painted like circus trains, run at high speed from North sea fish ports to fishhungry cities as far away as Vienna.

What the "Free Port" Means. That phrase, "the Free Port of Hamburg," means what? Only this: barossa (the Red Beard) gave Ham-

Here are mammoth warehouses piled high with China silk, frozen meats from Argentina, coffee from Brazil, farm machines from the United States, many waiting reshipment to strange-named Baltic ports, none to pay a cent of customs duty to Germany. Here many of the world's huge ships are built; here are foundries and machine shops. Here, too, flocks of factories profit by the free use of imported raw material and easy shipping facilities.

Hamburg, as a German state, has tariff protections, but this part of it enjoys free trade in all its enormous transit commerce. This benefit is shared by American firms who have warehouses here.

Like Manhattan island, crowded Hamburg uses tunnels. Between St. Pouli and the Steinwarder side of the Elbe, in the harbor sections, a double tube leads under the river. It is similar to the Hudson tunnels at New York, except for approaches. So crowded are the river banks that no space could be spared for inclines; hence, at each end, men and vehicles use elevators, which lift and lower them 77 feet below street level. Domed templelike structures house these eleva-

Pig-iron weights hold the tubes from shifting. The tunnels, their walls faced with glazed tiles and decorated with sculptured reliefs, are brilliantly illuminated. On bad days, when fog or ice slows down the Elbe ferries or crowds the bridges, pedestrians and cyclists all prefer the dry, warm tubes.

Many Languages There. Hamburg is a polyglot port. Shopping street window cards read, "English Spoken," "Se Habla Espanol," "()n Parle Francais," Syrian voice is the sound of steamers wh cafes display sidewalk dinner signs tling.

in "fishworm" writing. The hoariest newspaper joke tells of one store whose sign read, "German spoken here."

English words and phrases "five o'clock tea," "sport," "morning coat," "gentleman," even "boule dogue' for bulldog-are often sandwiched in German speech and news text. "Jazz" is pronounced "yotz." At the theater one sometimes hears the phrase "Echt Amerikanische Yotz Bandt." meaning "real American jazz band!"

Go out in Mecklenburg to shoot, and servants carry your coat, lunch, gun, shells, even a stool to sit on, while others drive the game past you in easy shooting range.

In a vast St. Pauli pleasure palace you see dinner dancers suddenly scurry from the floor when uniformed attendants rush in, as if raiding the place, dragging mats, rugs, poles, wires, and all the gear of aerial acrobats. In a jiffy this is set up, and girls in tights are flying through the smoke or swinging out over the tables by trapeze. Just as magically, all this spectacle vanishes; again the jazz band plays, and back to the floor the diners rush to dance again.

Alster Lake in the City.

Alster lake is set in Hamburg like a reflection pool in some ornate exposition grounds. Imagine Times Square, in New York city, as a tree-bordered lake, alive with toy ferryboats, rafts, pleasure craft, floats, and swans. Hamburg's Alster lake is like that, only larger A river, the Alster, on its way to the Elbe splays wide as its reaches Away back in 1189 Frederick Bar-the city. A dam divides the lake, in Hamburg's busiest quarters; so that hotel guests, department store and office building workers can look down on cafes and canoes and tame; they fly past and peck bread from your extended hand.

Neat white cafes, with glassed-in verandas, fragrant with potted plants and window flower boxes, stand along the promenade that runs about the lake. Crowds gather here to sit, and sup, and listen to the band or watch boat races, but are politely blind to open-air love-making in cozily cushioned canoes that drift by often with gramophone playing.

Riding to Hamburg in a thirdclass coach affords a quick flash of life among the masses. Through snatches of salty dialogue overheard run the themes about which working people think. Jobs, wages, the price of food and clothes, what the government ought to do, politics in its many variations—the same here as everywhere. Also, you hear many poor are leaving the city to save rents and try to live on the land. Some men in the coach, returning from visits with country kin, carry a goose, a sack of fruit or potatoes.

EZEKIEL TEACHES PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY

LESSON TEXT-Ezekiel 33:7-16. GOLDEN TEXT-So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God.—Romans 14:12.

Ezekiel prophesied in the land of the captivity. The purpose of his ministry was threefold: (1) To show the house of Israel that they were in captivity because of their sins (14: 23). (2) To show that God is righteous in his visitation of judgment upon them (7:8, 9). (3) To sustain their faith by assuring them of their national restoration, the punishment of their enemies and their final exaltation among the nations when Messiah shall reign. I. God's Sovereign Right to the Souls of Men (18:1-4). Every man is personally responsible to God. II. The Moral Obligation of Sons to Their Father (Ezek. 18:14-20). While the law of heredity gives the child a sinful nature and when the child arrives at the age of moral responsibility it inevitably begins to sin, God holds such responsible for their deeds.

III. Ezekiel's Responsibility (Ezek. 33:1-9).

As a prophet of God certain responsibilities were imposed upon him. There is a sense in which every disciple of Christ is a witness for him and therefore is responsible for the giving of his testimony to sinners. His responsibility is set forth under the figure of a watchman. Two things were required of a watchman.

1. To hear the words of God's mouth. (v. 7). The source of the message of every minister and Sunday school teacher is God's holy Word. Just as the prophet did not originate his message but received it of God's mouth, so it should be with every minister and Sunday school teacher.

2. To sound the warning (v. 7). After hearing God's message he was to speak it out and proclaim it to the people. A watchman today is both to hear and to speak. The people are to be warned of the impending danger. Failure to sound the alarm makes the watchman guilty of the blood of the sinner.

IV. God's Attitude Toward the Sinner (vv. 10, 11).

God has declared in his Word that unfaithfulness on the part of his people would cause them to "perish among the heathen," that they would "pine away in their iniquity" (Lev. 26:38, 39). In view of this pronouncement some are disposed to say that their case is hopeless. To meet this attitude of despair the prophet assured them that God had no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that his sincere desire was for the wicked to turn from their way and live. Regardless of what their past had been, they were given the assurance that the future was bright if they heeded God's command and plea. No one need to despair because of sin, for God's grace is greater than human sin.

V. The Sinner's Personal Responsibility (vv. 12-20).

God created the members of the race personal beings, giving them freedom of choice. They have moral discernment enabling them to distinguish between the right and the wrong. They choose, therefore, according to the quality of their being. Whatever may be one's present condition through sin, it can be changed by divine grace.

The following principles govern the sinner:

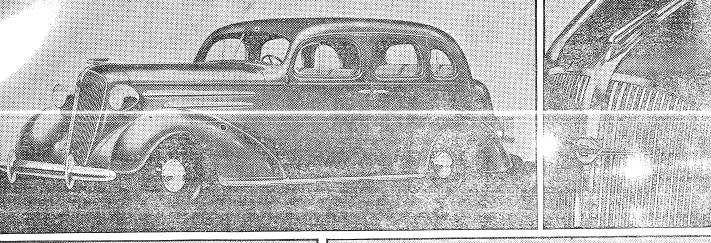

1. Past righteousness will not avail for present sins (v. 12). When a righteous man turns to iniquity, his past seeming righteousness will be of no avail. No one can do more than that which is required of him at any given time.

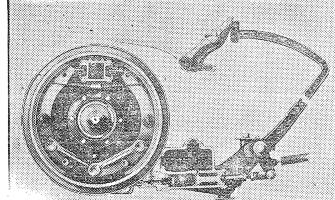

2. Past sins do not make impossible present acceptance with God (vv. 12-15). By virtue of the operation of the law of habit, every sinful act makes it harder for the sinner to repent, but God's grace is such that if the sinner repents God will forgive and restore.

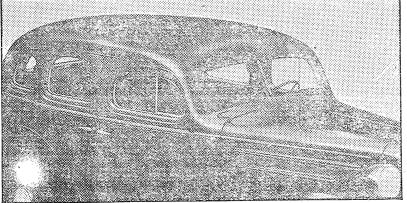

3. Restitution required (vv. 15, 16). The proof of penitence is that, so far as possible, the sinner makes amends for wrongs done. There is no merit in the act of restitution, but such action helps the individual to overcome his besetting sin.

4. God's ways are equal (vv. 17-20). God holds man responsible for his own deeds. The child is not condemned because of the deeds of his father, nor can it be said that the fathers have eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth are set on edge. This does not do away with the law of heredity. Regardless of what one's past life has been, God's grace in Jesus Christ blots out his record and he stands accepted in the Beloved.

1936 Master De Luxe and Standard Chevrolets are Replete with New Features

Master De Luxe and Standard Chevrolets for 1936 show marked advances in appearance and in engineering. Perfected hydraulic brakes, high-compression engines with full-length water jackets, and balanced carburetion are among the mechanical improvements. The solid steel Turret Top Fisher body is now used on the Standard as well as the Master De Luxe models. Either Knee-Action or conventional springing may be had in the Master models. The illustrations show: Top left, the Master De Luxe sport sedan, with built-in trunk; top right, the re-styled, deeply moulded radiator grille, used on all models; lower left, the simple arrangement of Chevrolet's perfected hydraulic brakes, all models; and, lower right, a Standard sedan.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—The little town of Heron River is eagerly awaiting the arrival of Anna ("Silver") Grenoble, daughter of "Gentleman Jim," formerly of the community, but known as a gambler, news of whose recent murder in Chicago has reached the town. Sophronia Willard, Jim Grenoble's sister, with whom the girl is to live, is at the railroad depot to meet her. Sophronia's household consists of her husband, and stepsons, Roderick and Jason. On Silver's arrival Duke Melbank, a shiftless youth, makes himself obnoxious. Sophronia slaps him.

CHAPTER II.—Roderick is on the eve of marriage to Corinne Meader, daughter of a failed banker. The Willards own only half of the farm on which they live, the other half being Anna Grenoble's.

CHAPTER III .- Silver, to Sophrocharles III.—Silver, to Sophro-nia's delight, declares her eagerness to live with her aunt. She also says she has no intention of selling her half of the farm, which the Willards had feared she might do. She meets Roddy, by charles that night.

CHAPTER IV

NARD noon of the next day, Sophronia and Silver stood together on a crest of the gentle ridge which supported the new farmstead. The girl had her hands in the pockets of her white linen dress, and her eyes, which Phronie had ascertained were a very dark blue, were fixed upon the old house down below. Phronie followed her glance, and saw that old Roderick had placed a ladder against the north wall, and with an armful of shingles and tools had begun the ascent of the roof.

"Tell me, Phronie," Silver asked suddenly, "are you moving into the old house because Roddy is getting married, or because I am

"Because you are here?" Phronie was indignant. "I never heard the like! Roderick and I always said that as soon as either of the boys gets married, back we go to the old place. Young people have a right

And I don't think she'll be fool enough to listen to every Tom-Dick-and-Harry's yarns. And if she doeslet her! Jason'll stay with them in the new house, 'cause he fixed up his own room in the attic there just the way he likes it—with a skylight an' all for his funny oil paintin'. Jason's a queer one—but he won't bother Corinne, unless she can't Sophronia hesitated for a moment. "Well, there's no use tryin' to hide from you what you'll find out for yourself anyhow, sooner or later. You know what people are, just as well as I do. When they've got nothing to do, they'll talk. Did you see that Duke Melbank when he was in Chicago this summer?"

"Dad said he came into our place one night, but I don't remember seeing him. So many people used to come and go."

'Well, he ain't worth remember in'. But he has been talkin' since he came back." Silver laughed ruefully. "Was he talking about dad?" "Well-mostly about you." Color rushed into Silver's cheeks "About me? What does that creature know about me?" Sophronia smiled reassuringly. "Some people talk most when they know least. As far as I can make out-the boys have been tellin' me -Duke don't say so much, but he hints plenty. There was a friend of Jim's, wasn't there? A fellow by the name of Lucas, I think."

"Gerald Lucas," Silver said, with her eyes from upon the downward Sophronia nodded sagely. guess I understand. Them outcasts appeal to women. I'm glad you got away from him without anything worse happenin'."

Silver's eyes darted to her aunt's face. Her heart sank. Sophronia was of another world, a good woman, placidly taking it for granted that her niece was still virtuous. Over the bleak loneliness that welled up within her, Silver resolved that it was better not to disillusion Phronie. After all, she need never know. "Yes," Silver said breathlessly, looking away, "I might have married him. That would have been worse. But I told dad how I felt about him-and I knew as soon as I had told him that I'd rather die than marry Gerald. I can't explain it to you, Phronie. When I was away from him, I almost hated him. But as soon as he came back I was -well, I just can't explain it. I-I was sort of hypnotized."

"So that was why Jim decided to leave it all, eh?" Phronie asked with surprising shrewdness. "Duke Melbank has been tellin' it around that he seen you with him that night in Chicago, and you seemed kind o' stuck on him. I thought maybe Jim would have the sense to get you out of a mess like that."

"Yes," Silver said in a dull voice. "He wanted to get away because of me-partly. You see-he never seemed to realize that I was growing up.'

"That would be like Jim!" Phronie explained and wiped her eyes. "Land sakes-let's not talk about it any more. You're heresafe with me, you poor child! Everything's all right from now on."

She brought her tremendous long arm down about Silver's shoulders, drew her awkwardly toward her for an instant, then got mightily to "Well," she blurted out, "you watched the tall. woman stride away toward the house, then she walked to the eastern slope of the hillside and seated herself. In the field below the great black horses were being unhitched from the binder and led toward the barn. She saw Roddy run his hand down one shining black shoulder, and observed that in the act there was compassion, affection. In his attitude toward herself, last night, she thought unhappily, there had been little more than chilly formality. He had been polite enough, it was true, but far from cordial.

Well, she would not bother him. This was her place, in a deeper sense that it could ever be his. It was too soon for her to make any plan, any pattern, for her life from But for the time being now on. she would remain here, let Roddy Willard bring home a hundred wives who disapproved of her. Whatever had been beautiful and unmarred in the spirit of Jim Grenoble was still here—the pure and inviolable ghost of the boy who had known this earth. She needed this land that held the very roots of her being-she needed it to obliterate forever the dread and insecurity and violence of that other life, and the memory of Gerald Lu-

Roddy had brought the horses to the watering tank, and as he glanced up at her on the slope, she looked quickly away. Presently he came up the slope toward her with long, swinging strides.

In the suddenness of their encounter last night, she had not really seen Roddy, she thought. Now she observed him with a cool sense of detachment and indifference. His face was blunt-hewn, his cheekbones and brows prominent; although his gray eyes were deep-set and unsmiling, they were widely spaced so that the upper part of his face had a surprised, boyish look; his nose was high-bridged, and seemed almost square with its well-defined nostrils; his mouth above the obstinate jaw was unexpectedly mobile. He was darkly burned, and beads of perspiration margined his forehead. He gave

He flushed a little, and Silver looked at him wonderingly.

"Thank you," she said simply, His mouth drew to a straight line. 'You are very polite," he remarked. "I didn't feel exactly polite toward you-last night I-well, I had other things on my mind."

"Of course," she said. "Phronie told me about it this morning. I hope you will be happy."

"Thanks." He looked away for a moment. "That was part of it, I admit. The rest can wait.' "You mean-shout the land?"

"I don't want to trouble you with that business right away," he replied heavily. "But you'll probably want to sell and get your money out of it as soon as you can. Beds and bedding had been moved The rent we've been paying isn't much. Phronie told me you said you want to stay here with her, but I don't believe you will for long. I don't think this sort of life will appeal to you."

She regarded him with darkly brooding eyes.

"You may as well be honest with me, Roddy," she said slowly, "even if you don't know me very well. You don't want me here, do you? I know you mean to be kind-andand you feel sorry for me, and that sort of thing. But deep downyou resent my owning half this You resent my right to be here. And you are afraid of what your wife will think of me."

to a child who was in error. "I'll confess to your first charge," he said gravely, "up to a point. I've worked your father's land since I was a kid. I've always looked forward to the day when it would be my own property. I was afraid last night that I was going to lose it. But as for resenting your right to be here—I'm not quite as mean as that, Silver." He paused and looked away with misgiving as he sought for the right words in defense of Corinne. All morning the question of how she would accept Silver Grenoble had plagued him, to his shame. His doubts implied a lack of trust in Corinne's generosity that was mortifying.

"And as for the girl I am going to marry," he resumed resolutely, "you wait until you meet her before you jump at any unfair conclusions. You are probably over-sensitive-" He halted, hating to put into words what was in his mind.

But Silver leaned back on her palms, threw back her head and uttered a dry little laugh.

"I know what I'm talking about, Roddy, never fear," she said softly. "I had one friend after another in boarding schools, until their mothers looked up my background. But for all that—" Her eyes widened brilliantly, and her full, sweet lips parted in a serene smile. wouldn't have given up one single day with my father." "Everybody who knew him round here thought highly of him," Roddy said. "I'm sorry I never met him. Of course, I was only a boy then, and our farm was miles away from here."

Silver turned abruptly toward him. A change had come over her face, a guarded, secret look.

"I'm sorry," she said. "I didn't mean to speak of-of my life before I came here. I don't want you -any of you-to think that I've haven't. dark and silent, who drove Silver and Sophronia two days later on that last quiet errand for Gentleman Jim Grenoble. Without ritual or dirge, Jim's ashes were scattered into the open soil above Anna Grenoble's grave, and when the dark earth wound was closed again a single yellow poplar leaf drifted down upon it and lay as though sealing what was done. Jason said, "Trees know."

On the day before Roddy was to leave for Ballantyne to marry Corinne Meader, Sophronia and Silver put up the last crisp curtain in the old house. The pine floors and moldings had been scrubbed white, the rag rugs washed, the horsehair sofa and settee in the sitting room treated with gasoline.

When Silver appeared, Sophronia glanced out the back door. "There's Roddy," she remarked, "goin' into that old shop of his. Wonder if he don't know it's supper time. He's been actin' awful funny today."

Silver was standing beside her at the open door. "I'd like to see the inside of Roddy's workshop," she said. "Do you suppose he'd mind if I went up now and called him to supper?"

"Like as not," Phronie replied with a tolerant smile. "He probably thought you weren't interested in it. He's got everything in saucers and little bags and glass jars-with tags and labels and figgers-till it would make you dizzy to look at 'em."

"His corn has won a number of prizes, though, hasn't it?"

"They're all in there, too. That corn he grew last year was two weeks earlier than anything else in the district. Now he's crossin' it with a good yielder to bring it up to where it'll grow as much to the acre as the other stuff. Oh, I don't pretend to know half of what he's talkin' about, let alone what he's doin'."

Jason came down the slope from the barn, and Silver slipped out to fetch Roddy.

She stood hesitantly for a moment in the open doorway of his workshop, and watched him where he bent over a long plank table. On each of a half dozen white pasteboard cards on the table there was a sprinkling of what seemed to be corn kernels, and so intent was Roddy on the specimens before him that he was unaware of her until she spoke.

"I'm sorry to disturb you, Roddy, Silver said, "but supper's ready." "Oh!" He glanced up absently. Then his gaze seemed to become arrested upon her; but she knew that it was the concentrated stare of a person whose thoughts are hard on something else. "That ought to work!" he exclaimed under his breath, and she saw him go to a filing cabinet in a corner, remove a memorandum. Silver was about to turn away when he called her.

"Why don't you come in and look this place over?" he inquired. "Girls are usually bored with itbut since you have an interest in had a hard time of it. I-I really it-" He laughed in an odd way

"I'd love to know all about it," she said as she glanced around the room. "But Phronie is waiting for us. Couldn't we come in later?" "Well," he replied apologetically,

PREVENT ACCIDENTS

Program Inaugurated in Local Chapters to Cut Down Farm and Home Accidents

The American Red Cross has launched a nation-wide campaign to eliminate hazards in the home and Mr. and Mrs. Ben Guinther and on the farm that now take an ancording to a recent statement by James L. Fieser, vice chairman in "Every Red Cross chapter is being asked to play a part in this campaign," Mr. Fieser said. "Hazards in the various communities will be schools throughout the country will be given a list of the home hazards and asked to enroll parents or relatives in the fight against them."

Nearly five million men, women, and children were temporarily disabled in the homes of America last year by accidents, officials of the National Safety Council have revealed. Most of the accidents in which persons were killed and injured could have been prevented, according to this safety agency, this fact alone largely motivating the Red Cross drive for accident elim-

Active cooperation of social, civic, educational, veterans', and other groups has been secured. Red Cross inspection forms or home check lists will be distributed to homes where there are no children with the help of these organizations.

Due to inaccessibility and lack of compensation coverage, little or no pioneering has been done in the field of farm safety, the Red Cross states. However, more people were accidentally killed in agricultural pursuits last year than in any other occupation, making the need for safety education and farm home inspection apparent.

Other agencies now active in the accident-prevention field point to the fact that, because of its nearly 13, 000 chapters and branches, the Red Cross has a unique opportunity to successfully promote a project of this nature. Home accidents injure many more than do automobile accidents; they kill nearly as many, claiming an average of about 80 lives daily. In terms of dollars and cents, for the practical minded, home accidents cost more than $1,000 per minute. Accidents of all types are Public Enemy No. 4. Only three diseases cause as many deaths each year, heart disease, cancer, and cerebral hemorrhage.

"The home is not the place of safety it is commonly supposed to be," said Mr. Fieser in commenting on the new Red Cross service to the community. "The Red Cross, as a part of its chartered obligation to prevent death and alleviate suffering, is conducting this humanitarian program to cut down the mounting toll of avoidable personal injury and death in the homes of the country."

The annual Red Cross roll call, running from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day, is one of the means of backing such a campaign. All citizens of the United States are offered the opportunity to join and assist in the work of the organiza-

Named for Its Good Air

Buenos Aires is named literally for its good air. It stands on a plain which has scarcely any rise in ground for hundreds of miles. Its main thoroughfare, the Avenida de Mayo, is declared to be one of the finest streets in the world. It is the largest city south of the equator and the largest Spanishspeaking city in either hemisphere. One-fifth of the nation's people live in the capital city. An unusual feature of the city is that the men outnumber the women at the ratio of five to one, the scarcity making every woman a princess fair.
