HRISTMAS in the Rockies! I felt thrilled, excited, as our train wound its way in and out through the mountains, thundering through the crisp, pinescented air. Now, we were climbing an almost precipitous grade, now, slowing down for a dangerous curve, while every little while as a stretching plain was reached, the steady hand upon the throttle sent the long line of cars speeding like an arrow through the bright December sunshine.

We were on our way to spend Christmas with Uncle Jerry and Aunt Emma. They had sent a hearty invitation for us to come never even visualized anything so beautiful. A loud shriek from the big whistle, a slow crunching and grinding of brakes, and our train came to a stop. Uncle Jerry, rosy and smiling, stood waiting upon the platform, giving dad, mother, Helen and myself a true western welcome. "Aunt Emma is all excited about your coming," he beamed. A short drive through a wonderland of beauty, and the big sprawling ranch house came in sight. Aunt Emma stood in the doorway, and a cowboy, who was grooming a pony, looked curiously at us.

All was bustle and excitement, hurry and preparation. Even the horses and ponies in the corral seemed excited, as if they sensed something in the air. The afternoon and evening went by on wings.

Christmas morning dawned upon a world that looked even lovelier than it had yesterday. A million jewels hung on bush and tree, a sky of turquoise stretched itself across the snow-covered mountains

Surveys are being made in many counties to find if it is possible for farm homes to be serviced with electricity under the provisions of the new laws. #### No. 5—DRIVING ON HILLS

In some parts of the country hills are taken for granted . . . and good steep 4 ones, too. But for some of us who live in flatter country, hill driving is

As a matter of fact, there are several conditions peculiar to driving in very steep hills or mountains, especially if the altitude is high. For instance, a car that develops 100 horsepower at sea-level, has only 82 horsepower at an altitude of 5000 feet, and only 60 horsepower on top of Pike's Peak.

Another thing is that sometimes grades are deceptive and we don't realize how steep they are, if there is no level ground to judge by. So if we go on a road trip and happen to get into country where hills are hills, we often have no idea of what is in store for us. Like as not, we will come rolling up to a hill, taking it for granted that we'll make the grade. But before we've gone very far we find that our power seems to be giving out, and we're slowing down. Then we realize we must shift to second gear, but we're lucky if we haven't found out so late that there we are, stalled on a hill!

Now people who drive on hills all the time say one thing to remember is that there's nothing like a good start. Of course, this is true, because the minute we start up, gravity starts to work and work fast. Yard-by-yard it uses up our momentum till byand-by that momentum is just about gone. Then we have to shift to a lower gear to increase our power Experts tell us that by far the most common fault in hill-climbing is failure to shift to a lower gear soon enough. So just to be sure, some drivers set a definite point at which to change gears. The consensus of opinion seems to be that we should always go into second gear as soon as our speed gets down

There are times, however, when we want to stop on a hill. So it's important to know how to start again, with our car on an upgrade. And there seem to be two methods used by experienced drivers. Some use their foot brake to keep their cars from rolling backward, put their engine in low gear and accelerate slowly with the hand throttle, gradually engaging their clutch and releasing the brake at the same time. Other good drivers do exactly the same thing, only they use the hand brake and the foot accelerator. But both groups tell us it doesn't make much difference . . . whichever method we happen to like the

Now there aren't many hills that cars can't climb nowadays . . . and what goes up must come down. And that's where we have to look out for momentum. He may have been a friend in need when we were coming up hill, but going down he'll run away with us if we aren't careful. And if there are any sharp curves or any bad bumps or loose gravel, we have to be careful or he'll pitch us right off the road.

Many drivers say that we should go down a hill in the same gear we would use to get up. In other words, if it's steep enough so we would have to go up in second or even low gear, then we'd better get into that same gear before we start down. If our car is in second or low gear, our engine works as a very effective brake, and besides it saves a lot of wear on our real brakes.

Speaking of gears, experienced drivers say we should never, under any condition, disengage our clutch and coast down hill. That's just what momentum is waiting for. Just give momentum a free rein, without our engine to check it, and nobody can tell what's going to happen.

When we do get in country where people are used to driving on hills all the time, it may seem to us that they take those hills without the slightest concern. But if we were in their cars with them and could watch them closely, we would see that they take all these precautions we have mentioned, just as a matter of habit. And one thing is sure. They make it a rule never to pass other cars on hills, or get on the wrong side of the road, when they can't see far enough ahead to be sure whether Silver gathered her tweed jacket about her and seated herself beside a clump of Juneberry bushes on the hill. It was quite late, but she had been unable to go to bed on such a night as this.

There was a sound of some one moving out of the brush to the left. Silver glanced up and saw Roddy standing a few feet away, looking down at her.

"Why, Roddy!" she exclaimed, "I thought you and Corinne had gone to the party."

For a moment he hesitated. "Corinne went," he told her. "The Richters came for her." He sat down near by. "I took a night off and spent it bringing some of my records up to date."

"I wish," said Silver wistfully, "that I had studied plant pathology and those things instead of languages. Every time I go into your laboratory I feel so darned inferior!"

He laughed indulgently.

"Well, you're certainly young enough to learn," he remarked, "if you're still bent on being a farmer. And it's beginning to look as though you are." He got his pipe from his overall pocket, packed and lighted it. "Except that you ought to be in bed at this hour. You worked pretty hard today, Phronie told me."

"This is lots better than sleeping," Silver said, and waved her hand toward the clouds of mist that were drifting low under the waning moon.

"And not such a waste of time." he declared. "When I saw you walking up here I was leaving the shop—I thought I'd sneak along and get an eveful of it for myself."

They sat in silence watching the thin wraiths blending, parting, blending, in the hollows below.

"You were over to see the Healy boy today, weren't you?" Silver asked finally. "I was thinking about him today. Couldn't we give a barn dance or something and collect enough money to pay Doctor Woodward? The Micheners told me the Healys haven't a dollar to spare for anything like this."

"That's an idea, Silver," Roddy exclaimed with enthusiasm. "I've been wondering what we could do to help out. Old Doc Woodward won't be so hard to satisfy. I can probably fix that myself. But the family is up against it, and without the boy's wages, they'll be in a bad way. I'll speak to Corrie about it. I'm sure she'll take to the idea."

"It would be fun," Silver said. And perhaps wretched for herself, she thought with a pang. Except for the Flathes, a Norwegian family on the south, and the Micheners, frugal but free-spirited Germans up near the lake, she had so far made friends of none of the people in and around Heron River.

Roddy turned and looked at her suddenly. "You know—that's the kind of thing that makes you likeable. Silver.

"What kind of thing?"

"You're always thinking about somebody else. The other day in the field, when you tore off your blouse-" She was smiling at him. "I shall probably grow up to be a nice old maid-loved for my good deeds." Roddy laughed and put his arm about her shoulder.

"You're a great little kid!" he exclaimed. "After old lady Folds, and then—this bird Lucas cropping up -or I should say flying in-"

"Now, Roddy, please don't start applauding me, or I may cry. Besides-I'll be twenty in November. so I haven't much credit coming to

"You will? Well, well! And I suppose Phil Michener thinks you're just about the right age to settle down, eh?" "Oh, I don't know about that." Silver replied loftily. "I like his sister, and I like him. They are real people, Roddy. They more than make up for-women like Mrs.

"And men like Gerald Lucas?" There was a curious note in Roddy's voice, half gentle, half embarrassed, the banter gone out of it.

Folds."

Silver clasped her hands together before her. "Yes," she said. "Although Gerald isn't an evil as Mrs. Folds is, Roddy. He is an evil for me, that's all. Or he was, I should say. But you know by this time that I don't run away from-from that sort of thing-any more."

First Popular Aquarium The first popular aquarium was erected in London in 1852; but the Chinese are known to have cultivated goldfish long before this.

Advertise it in the Chronicle.

Roddy cleared his throat. "You were in love with him, weren't you?" he asked abruptly. For fully a half minute, Silver gazed down upon the wavering shelves of mist.

"I went and stayed at his apartment," she said tonelessly. "For a week or so-while dad was away. Perhaps I was in love with him. I don't know. But now that I am here I know that it wasn't the right kind of love. I must have known that even then, because I wouldn't marry him. Gerald wanted to marry me. He was more decent than I was. He still is, in a way. He fascinated me, but I knew, all the time, underneath, that his life could never be mine. That's all there is to it,

At first, Roddy continued to turn, the bowl of his pipe about in his hand. Then, slowly, his eyes moved toward the girl beside him.

"Does Phronie know this?" he asked quietly.

"No. I have never told anyone but you. I-I didn't even tell dad the-whole truth. I don't know why I've told you this," she went on broodingly. "But it seems to me the land has something to do with it. It has been like telling it to the land-starting over again, honestly. It's hard to explain-"

"I've hardly deserved your confidence," Roddy broke in with a short and ironic laugh. "My feelings toward you have been anything but generous, Silver."

"I think I've understood them, though," she replied thoughtfully. "When you've worked a piece of land until you have your roots in it-" He stopped suddenly, and bent toward her with his hand outstretched. "This is just my clumsy way of apologizing to you for being a fool. Silver."

She laid her hand on his and he drew her to her feet. Silver, meeting his eyes, experienced a frightening contraction of her throat. Roddy pressed his lips together and drew a deep breath, as though some profound unease had settled within

Together they walked down into the yard, and their simple good night was taken coolly into the si-

Harry Richter and his sister Evelyn, Corinne reflected with a secret fillip of contempt, were still-and perhaps always would be, in spite of their advantages of money and travel—just a pair of noisy and slightly vulgar cubs. But of course their father owned most of the town of Maynard, and the family mansion there was the pride of the district.

Corinne sat in a deep chair in the shadowed corner of the sprawling room, and as she gave a sidelong glance at the amused profile of Gerald Lucas, who stood beside her in an indolent, provocative attitude, smoking a cigarette, it seemed to her that Harry's friends were a little pathetic, even rustic. Corinne was coolly excited by the realization that never before in her life had she met anyone so polished, so cynically debonair as Gerald Lucas. She felt, with merely the least thrill of danger, their mutual understanding.

A rubicund young grain broker from the city came from across the room with an enormous silver cocktail shaker in his hands.

"One more little drink on the house-for the prettiest little girl in the party!" he announced. "Thanks, no," she demurred. "I'm much too warm already. I think I'll stroll out for a little air."

She had not turned, even a little way, toward Gerald as she spoke, but a few minutes afterward, when she sauntered slowly among the moonlit trees above the shore, she was not surprised that he met her there. She had known that he would follow her.

They stood together for a little while, in a piquant conspiracy of silence, and looked out upon the shining lake.

"I must be very stupid," Gerald said, in a puzzled voice. "Otherwise, I would be able to figure out just how you come to be living on a farm." Corinne laughed and felt her heart quicken. "It's very simple," she said. "I fell in love with a farmer -and married him." "Did you?" Gerald looked at her as though in surprise.

They laughed in unison. Everything seemed delightfully absurd. Gerald picked up her hand and bent her little finger inward toward the palm. But immediately, almost absently, he let it go.

"Have a cigarette?" he suggested, and offered her his onyx and gold case.

"Thanks." He held the match for her. Corinne, seeing his shapely, well-kept fingers, thought suddenly of Rodney's hands, large and powerful and bronzed. All at once she felt uncomfortable and vaguely ashamed.

"Shall we go back?" she suggested lightly.

"If you wish," Gerald agreed. "I think I shall ask Harry to drive me home," she said as they mounted the steps to the porch.

"My own opinion, if I were asked for it," Gerald said casually, "is that Harry has had too much to drink to drive anyone home safely."

It was long past midnight when Silver, preparing for bed, heard a car enter the driveway. She heard a voice that was sharply familiar to her, although it was low and pleasantly modulated. She glanced from her window. In the moonlight, the chromium trimmings of Gerald Lucas' car shone unmistakably. "This is downright spying!" Silver said to herself, and buried her face in her pillows. But a sudden fright took possession of her. Corinne-and Gerald car, were on their way to Maynard with two bushels of tomatoes and a basketful of yellow string beans they had gathered that day in the garden. The harvest dance was but a week away now, and there were things to be bought and cooking to be done and the old barn to be decorated for the event.

Lucas! Such a thing could never be. It simply could not! Silver and Sophronia, in Roddy's

"I suppose if we get a dollar for this truck we ought to be thankful," Sophronia said. "Upon my soul, it's enough to discourage anyone-if it wasn't for the satisfaction of seein' the things grow. And with Roddy talkin' of storin' his grain it doesn't look like an easy winter for any of us."

"It's hard to understand," Silver said, "with so many people going hungry-and farmers talking of using their grain for fuel."

"It's past me," Sophronia admitted, "I wouldn't be surprised if Roddy gave up the whole business, one of these days and moved to the city. Though there wouldn't be much sense in that, either. I thought he'd feel better the other day when he got first prize for his corn at the fair. But it didn't change him any so far as I could make out."

Silver had sat and listened, her hands clasped before her, gazing straight ahead at the winding highway. There was something she wanted to say, but the words seemed too clumsy, too unutterably crude. These people had become her people—the thought forming in her mind flowed on in a radiancethe gloamy and faraway radiance of the legend of Ruth.

All at once she felt a tide of warmth move up over her throat and face.

"I wanted to say something last night—when Roddy was talking to you and Jason about things," she said. "But-I didn't know just how to put it.'

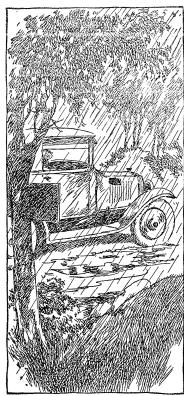

"What was that?" Sophronia asked.

"It's just that I feel I have a right to help-and I want to. 1 have a little money left-plenty to do me for a year or even moreand I don't need the rent Roddy is paying for that east section. 1 don't see why I-"

"Land sakes, child!" Sophronia interrupted. "Don't ever mention such a thing to Roddy. He'd take your head off. I'm glad you didn't say anything about it last night. No-he'll get along and pay his way -or he'll make a change of some kind. He already thinks you're doing far more than enough to pay your board, if it comes to that!"

Silver was silent for a long time. It was just as she had expected. Roddy's pride would never permit him to take any assistance she might have to offer him.

From Maynard, Sophronia and Silver, with the car windows up, drove home through dissolving distances of rain. "Think of gettin' only ninety cents for all our work yesterday," Phronie mused aloud, "not countin' the cost of seed and the bother of plantin'. Darn it! I could almost wish every city swell might starm to death

Lesson for December 8 NEHEMIAH REBUILDING THE

WALL OF JERUSALEM LESSON TEXT-Nehemiah 4:6-9, GOLDEN TEXT-The people had a mind to work. Nehemiah 4:6.

PRIMARY TOPIC—When Friends Work Together.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Team-Work. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Team-Work. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

TOPIC-Co-operation in Religious I. Nehemiah's Mission to Jerusalem (Neh. 2). While performing his official duty as cupbearer to the Persian king, Nehemiah learned of the distress of his brethren at Jerusalem. The walls of the city were broken down, its gates burnt, and the remnant of the captives were in great affliction and reproach. This news greatly moved him. He definitely asked God to give the king a favorable attitude toward his project. In answer to his prayer he was granted a leave of absence from the Persian court and credentials from the king. He journeyed to Jerusalem and made a survey of the city by night without disclosing his purpose to anyone. Having thus obtained first-hand information, he called the representatives of the Jews together and said, "Let us build the walls of Jerusalem." After he thus made known the hand of God in bringing him to Jerusalem, he revealed the authority vested in him to rebuild the walls.

II. Preparation for the Building

The division of labor in this project displayed Nehemiah's administrative ability. A wise distribution of labor makes difficult tasks easy. Observe some outstanding features of his administrative work.

1. He laid stress upon indifference. In administrative tasks it is proper that unfaithfulness should be pointed out. Such action serves as a warning to the unfaithful and encouragement to the faithful.

2. Help rendered by the women (v. 12). It is a fine thing for the women to take hold even in building a wall when there are no men to do it. 3. Stress laid upon earnestness of ity will spur one on to faithful performance of his task. 4. Every one built over against his own house (vv. 10, 23, 28). There is no incentive for exertion quite so strong as that which concerns a man's own family. 5. Certain guilds of men undertook certain work (vv. 8, 31, 32). Wise administration sometimes calls for such alignment of efforts. Men of the same class and occupation

2. Conspiracy for a sudden attack (4:7-9). When the enemy saw that the work was actually succeeding, they changed from ridicule to an attempt to throw the workmen into a panic. When the enemy cannot succeed by scoffing, he resorts to intimidation.

3. Conspiracy with the Jews (4: the Jews from the outside, to discourage those on the inside, saying that the task was hopeless and that at any time they were subject to a sudden and secret attack.

rich (5:1-13). profiteers of our day, took advanand even sold their daughters into life (6:1-14). When Sanballat and Tobiah failed in every other way, they craftily sought to get Nehemiah away that they might kill him. IV. The Wall Completed (6:15-

So energetically did they pursue their tasks that in fifty-two days the wall was completed. When their enemies saw that in spite of all their schemes the work was actually completed, they were cast down, for they perceived that the work was of God. Upon the completion of the work, Nehemiah gave instructions as to the opening and closing of the gates of the city. May we learn from this:

1. That though God's children are besought by enemies they should not fear.

2. When beset by enemies we should pray (4:9). a. They set a watch (4:9). b. Men were permitted to be with their families (4:13) and would thus fight better. c. Half worked and half watched, all armed for battle.

d. They worked with sword in one hand (4:17).

Millions of Meteors

It is estimated that millions of meteors enter the earth's atmosphere every 24 hours; most of them are very small. They travel. however, at a high rate of speed. and were it not for the protection afforded by the earth's atmosphere they might prove a serious menace. Because of the terrific speed at which they move, according to a writer in the Washington Star, meteors are heated to incandescence by the resistance and friction of the air and all but a few of exceptionally large size are completely dissipated. Very large meteors, or meteorites, as they are called if they fall to the earth's surface, occasionally cause death.

THE DOCTORS ARE RIGHT

Women should take only liquid laxatives

Many believe any laxative they might take only makes constipation worse. And that isn't true. Do what doctors do to relieve this condition. They use a liquid laxative, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all. Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why your laxative should be in liquid form. A liquid dose can be regulated to the drop.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara — both natural laxatives that form no habit even with children, Syrup Pepsin is the nicest tasting, wirest acting laxative you ever tried.
