CASH AND BEANS ARE CONTRIBUTED FREELY

Liberal Response to the Call of the Red Cross for Funds for Flood Sufferers.

When the first request came from national headquarters soliciting aid for flood sufferers in eastern and southern states, the Tus-cola County Chapter of the American Red Cross was asked to raise a quota of $165. Later, Mrs. F. H. Schuckert, the county chairman, was asked to double it and send as much more as possible. To date the sum of $572.61 has been received from various communities in the county.

J. Ruppert of Wisner suggested sending a carload of Michigan County Chapter Officers Are beans from Tuscola county to the stricken area and under his supervision a ton of beans was collected in the Wisner community. Farmers in the Cass City community had contributed 1,929 pounds of beans for the same purpose and left them at local elevators previous to April 3 when they were taken to Caro areas was $140.00 and this figure by Earl Douglas for shipment. The Future Farmers organization times, the actual amount received has charge of bean collections in by the county chapter for this purother parts of Tuscola county and pose being $748.61. figures of their activities were not available on Wednesday.

Mrs. Schuckert is very much pleased with the work of the several local chairmen in the county and with the liberality of citizens of the county. "The response was marvelous," she told the Chronicle Wednesday afternoon.

The amounts contributed in the various communities follow:

Cass City	$107.50
Vassar	. 105.29
Caro	. 126.82
Millington	. 65.50
Gagetown	. 15.00
Kingston
Fairgrove	. 29.00
Mayville	. 42.50
Unionville	. 36.50
Fostoria	. 13.50

In a letter received Wednesday from the National Red Cross, Mrs. Schuckert was urged to continue the drive for funds as people in 18 states who suffered from flood and tornado are in need of food, shelter tributions are most needed according to the request from national headquarters. Money may be paid Turn to page 8, please.

The other group is the Junior band and includes all other band students.

We have the following instrumentation in the Senior band. Nine clarinets, nine cornets and trumpets, two alto saxophones, two C melody saxophones, four snare drums, one bass drum, one set of cymbals, one flute, two bass horns, three trombones, two baritones, and three mellophones. This makes a total of thirty-nine pieces. There are twenty-five pieces in the Junior band. Of course these numbers will keep changing, because some in the Junior band will be promoted to the Senior band, and perhaps some of the Senior band members will be changed to the Junior band. We believe this will prove to be very beneficial to all band students. It will give those in the Senior band a chance to go ahead with the music they are capable of playing. The students in the Junior band will have much closer supervision than heretofore, because the group is smaller. Their music will be of a grade that they are able to play.

The schedule for the Senior band is as follows: Monday, third period, trombones and baritones; Tuesday, third period, clarinets; Wednesday, saxophones (Mrs. Niergarth, director) and drums; Thursday, general rehearsal; Friday, cornets and mellophones. We expect to have a schedule for the Junior band, starting next week, so each member will meet in section and general rehearsal each week.

We have also started two brass ensembles, a clarinet quartet, and a clarinet duet.

Novice or expert—hatcheryman or commercial poultry folks of all kinds tell us this same story that we've set to music. Always it's unanimous—because all of them fed Farm Bureau Mermash. They tell us that even the cockerels, (knowing they are doomed to become broilers), are so happy getting Mermash, that they cheerfully, contentedly grow into the finest, full-feathered, weighty, red-combed, vigorous birds that top the

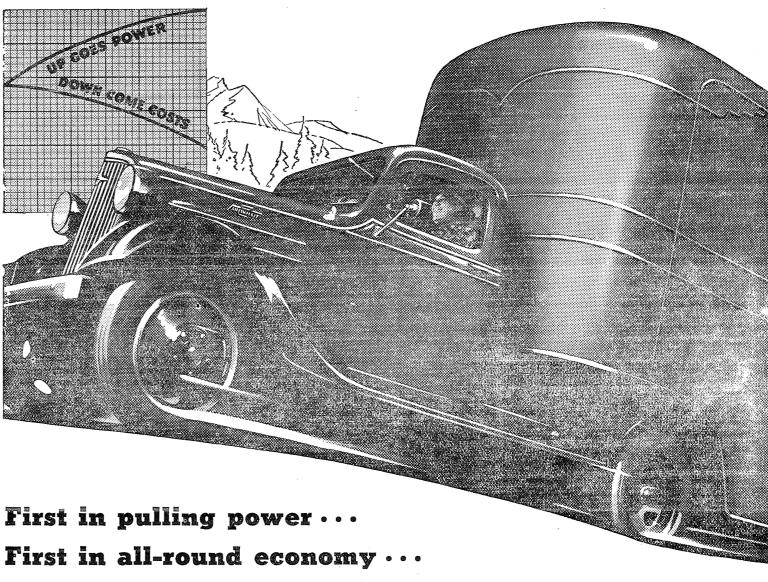

While the pullets-condemned to be mere wage slaves-always toiling to help produce the "daily dozen"; do so good-naturedly, with a song on their lips and ambition in their gizzards.

If you haven't used Mermash Chick Starter—go to the Farm Bureau distributor and price it! Then be prepared for a pleasant shock—because it's priced so low that it means real farm relief for YOU and your poultry problems. It's the unchallenged leader as a starter for chicks, turkeys or ducks.

> For every stage of poultry life: The Chant of the Chick, or The Poem of the Pullet, or The Lay of the Hen-Mermashes or Egg maker bring harmony and profit.

Small homes and large buildings have one thing in common . . . they're worth only as much as the quality of the material that goes into them. Everything, from the heaviest sill to the smallest nail, should be capable of passing the rigid inspection of a skyscraper inspector. But, as the average owner of a small home, whether you're building or repairing, you're hardly qualified to test and judge each piece of material. Thats why it's important to buy only from a reputable dealer . . . to know that you're getting the best! The Farm Produce Company offers an approved service. "We are trying to gain economically by creating conditions for game and fish preserves through planting proper trees, bushes, berry and other plants."

Among the factors affecting a conservation program that must be considered from the wild-life preservation angle, according to Professor Herbert are: Food supply during the seasons, shelter from climate and predatory animals; animal instincts and habits during the breeding season. Extension bulletin No. 147, "Forest Planting on Michigan Farms," has some valuable information and may be secured from the bulletin department, Michigan State College, East Lansing.

Money for Feeds

Dairy farmers in Michigan needlessly spend more than $500,000 in purchasing "shot gun" commercial mineral mixtures that are not needed, says Dr. C. F. Huffman, professor and research associate in dairy husbandry at Michigan State College, East Lansing.

"Under our conditions, with alfalfa so abundant, odorless steam bone meal is all that is needed in the vast majority of instances in dairy feed rations," Dr. Huffman points out. "Occasionally a small amount of iodine is necessary. For this purpose either sodium or potassium iodide can be used by mixing one ounce of either with 10 pounds of salt and then remixing this 10 pounds of salt with 90 pounds of salt to make up 100 pounds of iodized salt. #### CHAPTER VIII

THE more Barry thought of it, the more certain he became that the Judge's story, and the revelations in Harlem, removed the only reason for questioning Harwood's hypothesis. When the divorce action was filed, Kelly had promised not to see Betty Barclay again. That promise had induced the withdrawal of the petition. And then Betty Barclay had phoned, while Kelly was out, and just as Mrs. Kelly was going. In Harwood's own words, Mrs. Kelly "went wild." Failing to get legal counsel, she taxied to Harlem, and there she got "madder and madder." Just after midnight, she drove home, and found Kelly alone-drunk, and with the accumulated wrath engendered by two trying interviews. There were words, and a handy decanter.

The design began being almost too nearly perfect. He found Peggy doing some mending in her dingy room. She had lost flesh, and seemed to be always staring at nothing. "It's Jacky," she confided in Barry. "I'm worried about him."

The youngster looked pale and ill. "Look here, Peg; will you have lunch with me tomorrow at the Astor? I want you to meet some body.'

"Miss Hambidge?" "Yes."

"She'd turn up her nose at me like an elephant reaching for peanuts."

"I don't think so. Anyway, I want you to know each other." The appointment was made, at last-one o'clock-and Barry called

Pat. "Well, the trail's hot, all right." "Tell me about it."

"I don't dare over the wire. You know; operators. Come in and lunch with me?"

"When?" "Tomorrow at one."

Pat was eagerly anxious to hear his news, and there was no other way. But, if Pat's nose remained static when she learned she was to encounter Peggy, her mouth straightened. "Why? What have I in common with this girl?"

"Well," Barry answered, flatly, "you're keeping her husband in Pat flushed.

"You owe her something for that, don't you think? What're you being so high hat about? This girl's Mrs. John Clarke Ridder, Jr., you

"I'm not being high hat. Only, naturally, just now, I don't feel much like meeting strangers. Especially strangers with whom I have no community of interest."

Lunching together, however, it soon became evident that there was a "community of interest." Pat warmed to this painted chorus girl, fearful for her husband exactly as Pat was fearful for her father. Both heard Barry's account of his discoveries with regard to Mrs.

"It seems pretty conclusive," Pat said.

"I never thought of that dame-I mean, woman," Peg added. "Would that get Jack off quick?"

Barry explained his understanding that, if there were definite proof of another person's having committed a crime, anyone in custody was released immediately. "The district attorney moves for a dismissal of the indictment, I believe," he told

"Gee!" Peggy said, with the tears in her eyes.

Pat was no fool, and she found herself respecting and liking this "night club hoofer." She was Mrs. Ridder, after all. "Whoever the girl might have been, it was the tears beginning to dissolve the beads that stirred Pat. She had never seen anyone cry that way before-cry with her lips twisted into a smile.

"You've certainly stuck to your husband," Pat observed.

"Why not? When you really love anybody, you don't care what they do, or have done, or what they are. It's what they are to you that counts. You're not thinking what you're going to get, but what you're going to give. That is, the right kind of girl is.'

"Gosh, she's trying to help me with Pat," Barry thought.

on upshot was that Pat took oungster to Southampton the next morning. "Peter snggested it," she told Barry. "And, of course, you're right-I do owe them something.'

It wasn't the debt that did it, Barry realized. It was Jacky. Peg wanted Patricia to see him, and the house was so near. There really wasn't any good excuse for not going. So, for the first time in her life, Pat sniffed fried fish in an entrance hall, and tripped on worn stair carnets, and found herself stifling in a back room without air or sunshine. She'd known people lived like that, of course, but, somehow, she'd never thought much about it. She found herself thinking now. "If I had to spend one night in this place- That's what's the matter with the boy."

It was arranged that Evans was to drive them out, and come back for Barry on Thursday.

When Barry left Pat at her hotel, she said, "You seem to be everybody's friend, Mr. Gilbert. It's a little hard to understand, considering-"

"Considering that I'm an adventurer and an imposter?" "Yes."

"Yes," Barry repeated, "but that's how you learn what friendship means."

That night, Barry went to the Cocoanut Bar. "I mustn't overlook anything," he reflected. There wasn't much to overlook in the Cocoanut Bar. Not in the way of clothing, at all events. The lobby was full of men, more or less surreptitiously glancing at framed photographs of girls whose costumes might almost have been packed in a vanity case. Inside was a square dancing floor with tables about it, like the seats about a prize ring. Above, there was a balcony with more tables, except at one spot, occupied by offices. There were three shows a night, the amateur Hawkshaw discovered from his menu-at seven, eleven, and one.

It wasn't hard to get acquainted with any of the girls. One had only to look prosperous, and incline his head an inch or two in the direction of a vacant chair. "We're not supposed to do this," Violet Fane informed Barry, "but Luis's got a swell stand-in.'

Barry had his expense account and his ingratiating grin, and used both to the limit. It wasn't long before the blonde was telling the story of her life. "I bin with Luis ever since I was a kid," she bragged. "He's a swell guy. You oughta know him. I'll give you a tumble after the next show."

Luis was most affable. A sentimentalist, but a business man, with a keen eye to spenders, and a withering contempt for tightwads.

A flashy young fellow, Morano was, who wore sporty clothes, and much jewelry. Slim and dapper, his shining ebon hair was slicked back from his forehead. He had a long. thin nose, and straight, thin lips, and a slight but rather curious impediment in his speech. His voice could be very soft at times.

"Tender hearted, Luis is," Miss when somebody sang about mother or the kid or sumpin'. That loved - her - and - lost - her stuff, specially. He was married onct." "Didn't it take?"

"Sure, it took. That's why he cries. The Jane died, or sumpin'. Know what Luis did-when he got the coin, I mean? Bought the house they used to live in, and went on livin' there-alone, with a couple of servants.

"Ain't that romantic? I'll say so! He's still got the servants, too. They all moved to a farm, somewhere in Jersey, a couple'a years ago. Would you believe ithe drives out every morning, after the last show. Nuts about horses, Luis is. Not to bet on. Just likes "Learned about horses in Fauquier county," Luis said, returning at that instant. "I lived there 'til I was nineteen, and that's all they know. Go on, Vi; you'll be late."

"I never was late for a show yet," she retorted. "Nor out of one. Not in all the years I've worked for you.'

"That's straight," Morano admitted, as she was leaving. "Never bin out of a show in her life. She's a swell girl, Vi."

There wasn't much to be got at the Cocoanut Bar; not that Violet and Morano weren't willing to talk. Morano's romance had left him a gentle melancholy-or, perhaps, he was only worried about business. But, if he had anything to conceal, it certainly seemed to have no relation to Kelly. On that subject everything was open and above board.

"Just a gorilla," Morano said of the Big Boss, the next night, when Barry returned to the Cocoanut

"Oh, Mike was a' right," Miss Fane protested.

"Sure!" her employer agreed. "He wouldn't do nothing worse than steal pennies from a dead baby. Pal of Vi's though," Luis added, winking at Barry.

"Yeh," Violet declared, dryly; until that Barclay dame came

"He was in here that evening, wasn't he?" Barry asked. "Yeh. Just a few hours before they croaked him."

"He had a girl pinched, or some "Yeh," Morano repeated. "Nice station in them things." "I don't blame the Jane's husband for getting sore," Morano continued, "though bumping a guy off for that's going a little too far." "Kelly was soused," Miss Fane "Yeh. Plenty. And he thought the kid was pickin' his pocket. Nothin' to it.'

"Wasting my time." Barry told Harwood, the next morning, in the city editor's busy office at The Globe. "My time, and nearly a hundred dollars of the paper's money. Winslow had it straight. The Fane girl was strutting her stuff from one o'clock until long after the murder."

"Well, it's good to be sure." "Yes, and I'm mighty sure now. Every step I've taken since our last meeting leads right up to Mrs. Kelly."

Harwood looked at him quizzically. "Step No. 1?" he asked.

"My advertisement offering a reward for the number of the cab that killed that artist's wife." "You don't mean that you got it?"

note book. "There it is," he said. "O26017. The figures under it are the number of the driver who gave me the information." Ernie copied both numbers. "Swell work," he commented.

Triumphantly, Barry opened his

'Anything else?" "Lots. This fellow had a passenger who got out at Twenty-third street around midnight. When the woman was killed—two hours later -the driver bumped into him again in Sixteenth street, very much rattled, and looking as though he'd committed a murder."

"Any description?" "Rather a vague one. That doesn't matter. I'm sure, in my own mind, that this passenger was the caller Kelly expected, and that he wasn't the murderer. I'm equally sure that he knew murder had been committed."

"Lets call it a mere supposition. In that case, Kelly was killed Fane declared later. "I've seen him | around two o'clock. At two o'clock, Mrs. Kelly wasn't in Harlem." "How do you know that?"

Barry's answer was a full report of his adventures of Saturday. "Without Step No. 1, Step No. 2 means nothing. In other words, if Kelly'd been killed at midnightwhich is the theory every one's worked on—Mrs. Kelly's alibi would have been holeproof.'

Harwood joined his finger-tips in an almost prayerful gesture. "I wish we could find the guy who looked 'as though he'd committed a murder." Barry made no reply.

"That's always the trouble," the city editor went on. "What kind of a skate is this Luis Morano? Tough?"

"On the contrary. Cries over a mammy song." "There's a heap of 'em do," Harwood philosophized. "He's a Southerner, with a soft voice, and a funny impediment in his speech?" "That so?" Harwood inquired.

'Where is this Cocoanut Bar?" Barry told him, and promptly returned to Mrs. Kelly. "How the deuce are we going to prove what she did after she got home?"

"That's up to you," Ernie said. "I'm off on a new tack now." His eyes twinkled. "One that would go a long way toward establishing your theory of coincidence. Gosh, I'd give my new uppers to break this story within the next week or

Thursday evening, Barry spent in his room, mostly thinking. He had telephoned Pat twice since their luncheon together, and found her enthusiastic over her guests. "There's nothing wrong with the boy," she declared; "nothing that a few weeks out here won't cure. He's on the beach now, with his mother."

Judge Hambidge had taken to the little fellow at once. Almost like having a grandchild. It kept his mind off his worries. And no one could see Peggy, being brave, but always staring at nothing, always thinking of what might happen, without pity that warmed into affection. "She's really an awfully good sort," Pat said, from Southampton. "I like her a lot. When are you coming out?"

"Tomorrow, I hope." "Well, we'll expect you for din-

That breach was healed, all right. Pat had called him "the scum of the earth." In the same hour, he remembered again, he had told her he loved her. As to that, she still maintained silence. "That's the kindest thing she could do," Barry thought. "A Judge's daughter, and

Barry had learned not to think of the future. "Nor heed the rumble of a distant drum," as his own father had put it. Just for now, it was pleasant to be somebody who knew Pat—and he wanted to take that awful look out of the other girl's eyes. "That oughtn't to be hard now," Barry thought. "If I could get that Filipino to talk. He knows when Mrs. Kelly came home, and he's probably got a darned good idea what she did afterward. If we could get to that Oriental-"

At which point, Evans came, and he had been drinking.

"Sorry, sir," he apologized, taking the nearest chair. Evans had none of Willetts' compunctions. "Sorry, sir, but I've been having dinner with Kelly's chauffeur." "Liquid nourishment?"

"Yes, sir," Evans admitted, sheep-"But that was the only ishly. chance I had with that Irishman." "Well?"

"Well, I drove Miss Hambidge, and Mrs. Rogers, and the boy to Southampton, like you said. And I started back today. It was nearly eight when I made the garage, and

I was good and hungry. "There's a decent cafe a few yards away. Nolan—that's Kelly's chauffeur-was sitting at a table, with a load he ought to've gone twice for."

Evans smiled.

"Ed had a grouch on women in general. And he was chowed plenty. I hadn't been with him long when he opened up on Mrs. Kelly. There's something queer between her and this Filipino, he says." "Charlie?"

"That isn't his name, but let it go at that. And, when Ed said 'queer,' he didn't mean anything wrong. Just some kind of an understanding. Mrs. Kelly's been giving the Chink coin and jewelry, regular. Charlie showed him some of it, Ed

"Well, the night of the murder Noland drives Kelly to the Cocoanut Bar. And home-at nine o'clock. When he gets out at his house, Kelly says, 'Put the car in the garage. Mrs. Kelly's gone up to Harlem, and I won't need you 'til tomorrow morning,"

"Ed obeys orders. He goes back to Kelly's, and sits in the kitchen. This Chink is in the butler's pantry getting a tray ready. And, while the two of 'em are down there, the damnedest row starts up-

"Rogers and Kelly."

This was around nine o'clock. Mrs. Kelly. She was laying Mike out so you could have heard it a block. Well, this goes on for ten or fifteen minutes, and then the bell from the parlor rings. Charlie starts upstairs with the tray. He gets up two steps, when Kelly appears at the head of the flight. "Come up here, you lousy where you get off!'

"Charley sets down the tray, and goes. Nolan follows into the nantry, and has a stiff drink. Then he sits down again, and listens to Kelly laying out the Chink."

"Could he hear anything? Words, mean?" "No. Just Kelly's voice. Mrs. Kelly was out of it. She'd gone to her room, Nolan thinks. But Kelly made noise enough for two. And, after another ten minutes or so, Charlie comes back.

"'I'm fired,' Charlie says-in the Chink lingo. 'I got to get out. That blankety-blank told me to go quick, or he'd kill me.'

"'Are you going?' Nolan asks. "'Sure,' the Chink says. 'I got to get my money first. He chased me out of the room when I asked for it, but I'm going back,' the Chink says. "Nolan then took the cook to a movie, and when they got back, everything's quiet. It's after midnight, because these two walked home. Kelly's upstairs, talking to somebody, and the Chink's in his room, packing and muttering to himself something frightful. So Nolan says good night to the cook, who goes into her room, and then Nolan slips into the pantry, and takes another shot of that hootch." "What hootch?"

"The rye whiskey I was telling you about.'

Barry sprang from his chair. "The rye whiskey?" "Sure. And it was in a cut-glass decanter."

"Are you certain?" "Nolan is. And he's just as certain that it was still in the pantry when the guy upstairs left." "Why?" "Because he heard the front door close ten seconds before he went out the back way." "Gosh!" Barry exclaimed. "That puts it up to Mrs. Kelly, all right." Evans shook his head, drunkenly.

"Mrs. Kelly wasn't home," he said. "She went to her sister's after the high-jinks in Harlem, and Nolan got her there the next morning, before they called the police. There were only three people in that house after the guy went who was visiting Kelly-Kelly himself, cook, and a mighty mad Chinaman." "Filipino."

"Whatever he was, he was mad and the decanter that killed Kelly was downstairs with him until just about the time Kelly was killed."

"Thanks," Barry nodded. "I think we've got something."

"Oh, I forgot to give you this, It came—to Southampton—just as I was leaving," said Evans.

"This" was a cablegram. Alone, in the smoke-filled room, Barry opened it. Nine words. "Father and I sailing for home Sunday. Love.

For an instant, he stood, frozen, the wire in his hand.

Mother."

Directly before him, an evening ewspaper lay open on the table. "'Out-going passenger and mail ships," he read. "'Sailing tomorrow-Steamship Oranje Nassau. For Port-au-Prince, La Guayra, Curacoa, Maracaibo, Carupano, and Pampatar.' I'm on my way to one of 'em tomorrow!"

for Spring Work

"Soft shoulders" mean more to capable horsemen than feminine pulchritude or highway hazards. In a warning issued by Professor R. S. Hudson of the animal husbandry department of Michigan State College, the nationally known authority on horses, points out that many horses are going into spring work without proper hardening due to the fact that for three or four months they have been kept in barns. For thin horses, Professor Hudson advises attention to feeding more grain, allowing one pound for each hundred pounds of live weight of the animal and increasand son, Philip, spent Sunday at ing this feeding as the animal set-Saginaw, guests of Mr. and Mrs. tles into spring work. "Tender shoulders will cause considerable trouble unless the animals are equipped with well fitted collars and hames. For a horse that has not worked at all and is fat, the collars can be a bit snug,' Professor Hudson says. "A prop-Mr. and Mrs. G. A. "Grooming night and morning held at the home of Henry Cuer, helps to stimulate the skin and cause the old hair to shed more readily. If the weather is hot. wash the animal with lukewarm water at night after the harness is removed. Never throw cold water on the animal, but bathe with a sponge.'

JESUS TRIUMPHS OVER DEATH LESSON TEXT-Luke 24:1-35. GOLDEN TEXT—Because I live, e shall live also.—John 14:19.

PRIMARY TOPIC-The Glad Sur-JUNIOR TOPIC-Jesus the Conqueror. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC-Jesus Is Alive. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT POPIC--Our Living Lord.

The supreme test of Christianity is the fact of the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. It matters little what Jesus said and did while alive if his body remained in the grave. If he did not come forth in triumph from the tomb. then all his claims are false. On the other hand, if he did arise, all his claims are true. Fortunately, there is no better authenticated fact in all history than that of the resurrection of the body of Jesus

I. The Empty Sepulchre (vv. 1-3).

1. The coming of women (v. 1). As an expression of affectionate regard for the Master, they came with spices for his body. This was a beautiful expression of sentiment, but showed their lack of faith. If they had believed his words, they would have known that his body could not be found in the sepulchre.

2. What they found (vv. 2, 3). When they came to the sepulchre, they found the stone had been remowed. How the stone was to be removed greatly perplexed them on their way, but on their arrival they discovered that their difficulty had already been met. They found the stone rolled away, but they found not the body of Jesus. For them to have found his body in the sepulchre would have been the world's greatest tragedy. The empty tomb spoke most eloquently of the deity and power of the Son of God (Rom. 1:4).

II. The Message of the Men in Shining Garments (vv. 4-8).

1. "Why seek ye the living among the dead?" (v. 5). This question has been reverberated through the centuries since it was uttered by the angels.

2. "He is not here, but is risen." Jesus had made all these matters quite plain. He had told them that the Lord must be betrayed and crucified and that on the third day he would arise again. If they had given heed to his words, they would have been relieved of their perplex-

III. The Women Witnessing to the Eleven (vv. 9-11).

Their thrilling testimony concerning the empty tomb and the words of the angels appeared to the disciples as idle tales and, therefore, they refused to believe.

IV. Peter Investigating (v. 12). While the testimony of the women seemed as idle tales, Peter was not of the temperament to dismiss the matter from his mind. Therefore, he ran to the sepulchre. Upon close investigation he found the linen clothes lying in such a way as to prove the reality of the resurrection.

V. The Convinced Disciples (vv. 13-35).

1. The walk of two discouraged disciples (vv. 13-15). Emmaus was seven and a half miles northwest of Jerusalem. Just why the disciples were walking this way we conversation as they walked was the tragedy of the cross and the resurrection rumors. If they had believed what Jesus said about his coming forth from the grave, they would have been expecting to hear just such reports as were circulat-

a. Who he was (v. 16). While they reasoned together on the wonderful events of the past few days, Jesus joined them on the journey.

b. His question (v. 17). Perceive ing their sadness and perplexity, he sought to help them by calling forth a statement of their grief. This question surprised them and caused them to jump at the conclusion that he was a stranger in Jerusalem, for the condemnation and crucifixion of the great Prophet of Nazareth were so recent and notorious that no one who had lived in Jerusalem could be ignorant of them.

3. The Scriptures opened (vv. 25a. His rebuke (vv. 25-30). He rebuked them not for their unbelief of the strange stories that they had heard, but for ignorance and lack of confidence in the Old Testab. Jesus recognized (v. 31). While sitting at meat with the disciples their eyes were opened as they saw to them. 4. The effect upon the disciples (vv. 32-35). They were so filled with joy over this revelation of the Saviour that they hastened back to Jerusalem to tell the other discl
